It has survived long enough for the copyright to expire and the book to enter the public domain. A public domain book is one that was never subject to copyright or whose legal copyright term has expired. Whether a book is in the public domain may vary country to country. Public domain books are our gateways to the past, representing a wealth of history, culture and knowledge that's often difficult to discover.

HAMLET.—The European correspondent of the Springfield Republican, writing from Elsinour, Denmark, says:

Here is shown Hamlet's grave, evidently of rather modern date. Of this a German writer says: "A more striking homage has probably never been paid to the genius of a poet than when particular burial places are assigned even to the creations of his imagination," while an English writer, who regards the matter in a more historical point of view, says: "Any heap of stones with Runic inscriptions upon them, and said to denote Hamlet's grave, will be in vain searched for here, even if they ever existed. In fact, Hamlet's identification with this enchanting spot, is, at best, but a Shakspercan fiction. Hamlet's country was not Zealand, but Jutland. Here the name was pronounced Amlet, signifying madman.—According to the Danish history of old Saxo-Grammaticus, (he wrote about the commencement of the 13th century,) Hamlet was not the son of a Danish king, but of a famous pirate chief, who was Governor of Jutland in conjunction with his brother.—Hamlet's father married the daughter of the Danish king, and the issue of that marriage was Hamlet.

Hamlet's father was subsequently murdered by his brother, who married the widow and succeeded to the government of the whole of Jutland. As a Pagan, it was Hamlet's first duty to avenge his father. The better to conceal his purpose he feigned madness. His uncle suspecting it, to be feigned, sent him to England, with a request to the king that he would put Hamlet to death. He was accompanied by two creatures of his uncle, whose letter to the English King was carved upon wood, according to the custom of that period. This, Hamlet, during the voyage, contrived to get possession of, and so altered the characters as to make it a request that his two companions should be slain, which was accordingly done on their arrival in England.

He afterwards married the daughter of the English king, but subsequently returned to Jutland, and still feigning madness, contrived to surprise and slay his uncle, after upbraiding him with his various crimes. Hamlet then became Governor of Jutland, was married a second time to a Queen of Scotland, and was eventually killed in battle. The whole history of Hamlet is carefully and minutely detailed: but these are the leading historical features upon which Shakspeare founded his beautiful tragedy; and rude and disgusting as many of the incidents of Hamlet's life were, the mode in which Shakspeare has treated them is one of the greatest proofs of his splendid genius. According to Saxo, Hamlet lived about four centuries before Christ."

SHAKSPEARE.—A document has been recently discovered at Stratford-on-Avon, relative to John Shakspeare, the father of the poet. In rummaging a file of old declarations of the court of record, a parchment came to light, which proved to be a writ concerning the sale of some property by John Shakspeare in 1579. In this document William Shakspeare, the son, is mentioned as the purchaser of a prayer-book. The fact as to the poverty of Shakspeare's father is confirmed by this discovery.

PREFACE.

THE present collection of SHAKSPEARE'S PLAYS differs in arrangement from any that has hitherto been published. The Tragedies, Comedies, and Historical Plays, are divided; and in each division, the consecutive order of the pieces has reference to the country in which the action is laid, or to the epoch at which it is supposed to have taken place. Such as are founded on Grecian or Roman occurrences, are distinctly separated from those which commemorate the events of British history; and in each class a proper chronological priority is as much as possible maintained. Thus the merry knights of Christendom are not associated with the sober demagogues of Rome; nor the belles and beaux of Venice confounded with the "worn and withered" phantoms of a Scottish heath.

The text has been critically and laboriously collated with the standard edition of 1808, and an uniform and judicious method of punctuation, so necessary to the intelligibility of the old English writers, has been adopted throughout.

Large or numerous notes being inconsistent with the design of the work, such only are subjoined, as were necessary for explaining obsolete words, unusual passages, old customs, and obscure allusions.

A literary and historical Notice is prefixed to each Play, containing a succinct criticism upon its merits or defects, tracing the origin of its plot, investigating the fidelity of its characters, and assigning as nearly as possible the date of its production.

In the preparation of these, and of the biographical portraiture of Shakspeare, the remarks of Rowe, Pope, Theobald, Warburton, Hanmer, Johnson, Steevens, Malone, Reed, Percy, Tollett, Warton, Hazlett, and others, have been carefully examined, and contrasted with each other.

The Editor feels that little praise can accompany the termination of his undertaking, if necessity of matter be the only criterion of merit; but he thought it more becoming to condense and re-mould the accumulated comments of so many distinguished writers, than to revive speculations which have become too stale to be interesting, or to search for new proofs of that which has long been an article of belief.

It was formerly urged, as a recommendation of polite studies, that they were always companionable, and never cumbersome. "Delectant domi, non impediunt foris," says Tully. "At home they are delightful, and abroad they are not troublesome." In the same manner, this edition may conveniently accompany the traveller by a stage-coach, the tourist in his chaise or gig, and the pedestrian in his solitary ramble.

To comprise the multiplied and diffusive materials of many large, laboured, and costly publications, in one commodious volume, has not been unattended with difficulty; but the type is sufficiently large for the common purposes of study, whilst the beautiful "meadow of margin" by which it is surrounded, secures its handsome appearance when clothed in a proper binding, and placed upon the shelves of a library.

ESSAY ON THE LIFE AND WRITINGS
SHAKSPEARE.

WILLIAM SHAKSPEARE was born at Stratford-upon-Avon, in Warwickshire, April 23, 1564. His ancestors are mentioned as "gentlemen of good figure and fashion." His father was a considerable dealer in wool, and had been the high-bailiff or mayor of the body corporate of Stratford. He held also the office of justice of the peace, and at one time, it is said, possessed lands and tenements to the amount of £500; but he must have been greatly reduced in the latter part of his life, as he was excused the trifling weekly tax of fourpence, levied on all aldermen, and subsequently resigned the office to another individual. His wife was the daughter and heiress of Robert Arden, of Wellingcote, in Warwickshire, "a gentleman of worship." This lady brought him ten children; of whom William, our poet, was the eldest. At a proper age he was sent to the free-school in Stratford, to which he was indebted for whatever learning he may have possessed; though his father had apparently no design to make him "a scholar," as he took him, at an early period, into his own business. Mr. Malone, on the contrary, conjectures, that he was placed in the office of some country attorney, after leaving school, or with the seneschal of some manor court, where he picked up those technical law phrases that so frequently occur in his plays, and could not have been in common use unless among professional men. However this may be, he resolved to write "man" earlier than usual, and before he was eighteen, married Anne Hathaway, eight years older than himself, the daughter of John Hathaway, who is said to have been a substantial yeoman in the neighbourhood of Stratford. Before the expiration of his minority he became the father of three children, a son and two daughters, his wife producing him twins. Nothing is known of his domestic economy or professional occupation at this time; though Mr. Capell supposes that this early marriage prevented his being sent to some university. Shortly after the birth of his youngest child, he left Stratford for the metropolis: his motive for doing so, as well as his connexion and prospects in London, are involved in considerable obscurity. It is said that he became acquainted with a gang of deer-stealers, and being detected with them in robbing the park of Sir Thomas Lucy, of Charlecote, was prosecuted with so much rigour as to be obliged to take shelter in London; having first revenged himself upon the knight by writing a satirical ballad. This was affixed to Sir Thomas's park-gates, and being liberally circulated in the neighbourhood, excited considerable attention, though it does no honour to our poet's genius, and was manifestly unjust. Some writers have asserted, that Shakspeare escaped with impunity after his first offence; but that, repeating it audaciously, he was prosecuted by Sir Thomas, whom he grossly lampooned—that to escape a prison, he fled to London, where, as might be expected from a man of wit and humour in similar circumstances, he threw himself among the players, and made his first appearance on the stage in a very subordinate character. This account (according to a modern publication) is not entitled to full credence; for though he may have associated with some idle youths, either for the sake of catching deer, or for some less difficult and hazardous enterprise, yet the story seems improbable, and comes in such a questionable shape, that it ought to be strongly corroborated before it be believed. Without depending on this circumstance, or supposing that "he held horses at the door of a theatre for his livelihood," a rational motive for his visiting London may be found in the circumstance, that he had a relative and townsman already established there; Thomas Green, "a celebrated comedian." The statement of John Aubrey, a student in the university of Oxford only twenty-six years after our poet's death, strongly substantiates this view of the case, though it differs in some particulars from the commonly accepted opinions respecting his parentage and occupation. "His father (says Aubrey) was a butcher, and I have been told heretofore, by some of the neighbours, that when he was a boy he exercised his father's trade, but when he killed a calf, he would doe it in a high style, and make a speeche. This William, (meaning Shakspeare,) being naturally inclined to poetry and acting, came to London, I guesse about eighteen, and was an actor at one of the play-houses, and did not exceedingly well. He began early to make essayes at dramaticque poetry, which at that time was very lowe, and his playes tooke well." This is good to a certain extent; but the truth probably is, that some freak, or it might be, felony, determined Shakspeare promptly to embrace that profession to which his habits and inclinations had for a long time previously inclined him. The playful enthusiasm of his disposition, when directed not to the useful purposes of life, but to "poetry and acting," was calculated to encourage habits of idleness or improvidence, with a taste for those wild and irregular associations, which commence by despising order, and generally terminate in a defiance of law. When he made Falstaff a deer-stealer, and played the battery of his wit so keenly upon Justice Shallow, the recollection of his own adventure was probably uppermost in his mind; and if there were any doubt on the subject, the circumstance of his having given to Shallow the identical quarterings of Sir Thomas Lucy, (his Warwickshire prosecutor,) would effectually set it at rest. The balance of evidence, therefore, preponderating greatly against "this amiable man and supereminent author," his admirers may be content to have him charged with an act of poaching, since it was the apparent cause of his producing those immortal dramas, which have rendered him the delight of successive ages. It is not agreed in what situation he was first employed at the theatre, and Mr. Rowe has not been able to discover any character in which he appeared to more advantage than that of the ghost in Hamlet. The instructions given to the player, and other passages of his works, evince an intimate acquaintance with the science of acting, and shew that he studied nature in it, as much as in writing; but all this might be mere theory. The situation of an actor neither deserved nor engaged his attention, and was far from adequate to the prodigious powers of his mind; he turned it to a higher and nobler use; and having, by practice and observation, acquainted himself with the mechanical part of a theatre, his native genius inspired all the other essentially superior qualities of a play-wright. The date at which his first play appeared is unknown, and the greatest uncertainty prevails with respect to the chronological order in which the whole series was written, exhibited, or published. As no certain authority could be adduced upon this point, recourse has been had to internal evidence; and by searching for those marks of progressive excellence, which are supposed to result from exercise and improvement, the dates of each play have been pretty positively fixed.

Though Shakspeare continued to write till the year 1614, he had probably declined appearing as an actor long before that period; as no mention of his name can be found among the list of players subsequent to the production of Ben Jonson's Sejanus in 1603. He now succeeded in obtaining a license from king James to exhibit comedies, tragedies, histories, &c. at the Globe Theatre or elsewhere, and was enabled to acquire, during his dramatic career, property to a considerable amount. Gildon (in his "Letters and Essays," 1694) estimated the amount at £300 per annum, a sum at least equal to £1000 in our days; but Mr. Malone thinks it could not exceed £200, which yet was a considerable fortune in those times. It is supposed that he might have derived £200 per annum from the theatre, while he continued on the stage. Besides his thirty-five plays, Shakspeare wrote some poetical pieces, which were published separately, viz. Venus and Adonis, The Rape of Lucrece, The Passionate Pilgrim, A Lover's Complaint, and a volume of Sonnets. The Earl of Southampton, with whom he was a great favourite, is said to have presented him with a sum of £1000, to enable him to complete a purchase—an act of munificent patronage, which has never been exceeded. He enjoyed in a great degree the personal favour of Queen Elizabeth; and King James the First "was pleased with his own hand to write an amicable letter to Mr. Shakspeare," in return (as Dr. Farmer supposes) for the compliment paid to him in Macbeth; where allusion is made to the kingdoms of England and Scotland being united under one monarch, and James's having begun to touch for the king's evil. Having acquired such a fortune as suited his views and wishes, he quitted the stage and all other business, and passed the remainder of his life in an honourable ease, at his native town of Stratford. Of the exact time when this took place, nothing certain is known; but Mr. Theobald supposes he did not resign the theatre before 1610, since, in his Tempest, he mentions the Bermuda islands, which were unknown to the English till 1609, when Sir John Sumners discovered them on his voyage to North America. He lived in a very handsome house of his own purchasing, to which, having repaired and modelled it to his own mind, he gave the name of New Place; and he had the good fortune to save it from the flames in the dreadful fire which shortly afterwards laid waste the town. During Shakspeare's abode in this house, his wit and good-humour engaged him the acquaintance and entitled him to the friendship of all the surrounding gentry. He was (says Aubrey) a handsome, well-shaped man, verie good companie, and of a verie ready, pleasant, and smooth wit. It is not difficult, indeed, to suppose that Shakspeare was a man of humour and a social companion, and that he excelled in that species of minor wit not ill adapted to conversation, of which it is to be wished he had been more sparing in his writings. In the beginning of the year 1616 he made his will, wherein he testified his respect to his quondam theatrical partners, appointing his youngest daughter, jointly with her husband, his executors, and bequeathing them the bulk of his estate, which came into their possession not long afterwards. It is inferred from this document, that our poet's lady did not enjoy much of his affection, as his "second-best bed, with the furniture," constituted the only bequest to her. It is not known what particular malady terminated, at no very advanced age, the life and labours of this incomparable genius; but he died on the 23d of April, 1616, being the anniversary of his birth-day, when he exactly completed his fifty-second year. He was interred among his ancestors, on the north side of the chancel, in the great church of Stratford, and a handsome monument, bearing the following Latin distich, was erected to his memory:

Judicio Pylium, genio Socratem, arte Maronem,
Terra tegit, populus mœret, Olympus habet.

On the grave-stone in the pavement are the following singular lines:

Good friend, for Jesus' sake, forbear
To dig the dust enclosed here:
Blest be the man that spares these stones,
And curst be he that moves my bones.

In the year 1741, another very noble and beautiful monument was raised to his memory, at the public expense, in Westminster Abbey, under the direction of the Earl of Burlington, Dr. Mead, Mr. Pope, and Mr. Martyn. It stands near the south door of the Abbey, in what is called Poets' Corner, and was the work of Scheemaker, after a design of Kent's. The performers of each of the London theatres gave a benefit to defray the expenses, and the Dean and Chapter took nothing for the ground.

Mrs. Shakspeare survived her husband eight years, dying in 1623, at the age of sixty-seven. Of Shakspeare's family, the son died in 1596; the eldest daughter, Susanna, married Dr. John Hall, a physician of Stratford, who is said to have obtained much reputation and practice. She brought her husband an only child, Elizabeth, who was married, first to Thomas Nash, Esq. and afterwards to Sir John Barnard, of Abingdon, in Northamptonshire, but had no issue by either of them. The second daughter, Judith, married Thomas Quiney, a gentleman of good family, by whom she had three children; but as none of them reached their twentieth year, they left no posterity. Hence our poet's last descendant was Lady Barnard, who was buried at Abingdon, Feb. 17, 1669-70. Dr. Hall, her father, died Nov. 25, 1635, and her mother, July 11, 1649, and were both interred in Stratford church. Our poet's house and lands continued in the possession of his descendants to the time of the Restoration, when they were re-purchased by the Clopton family, the original proprietors. Sir Hugh Clopton, who was knighted by King George the First, died in 1751, and his executor sold the estate to a clergyman of large fortune, who resided in it but a few years, and in consequence of a disagreement with his neighbours respecting a parochial assessment, peevishly pulled down the house, sold the materials, and left the town. To defeat the curiosity of the numerous strangers who were led to visit this classic ground, he had some time before cut down the mulberry-tree, which Shakspeare is known to have planted, and had piled it as a stack of firewood, to the great vexation, loss, and disappointment, of the inhabitants of Stratford. But an honest silversmith bought the whole stack, and converted it into a number of toys and implements, which were eagerly purchased by the curious. The purpose to which one of these trifles was applied gave rise to an occurrence, harmless, and perhaps laudable in itself, though by many considered as verging on the mock-heroic. The corporation of Stratford having presented Garrick with the freedom of the town in a box made from the wood of the tree, this incident suggested to him the idea of a festival in commemoration of Shakspeare, upon the very spot where he was born; and the plan was carried into execution in the autumn of 1769. Temporary buildings were raised—entertainments suited to every taste were provided—and company of all ranks, from the most distant parts of the kingdom, assembled to celebrate the memory of the poet. The jubilee lasted three days; but the weather was exceedingly unfavourable, and the pleasure enjoyed was by no means equal to that which the enthusiastic admirers of Shakspeare had anticipated, though Garrick exerted all his talents to gratify both the eye and the understanding. He composed several songs for music, with an ode of considerable length to the honour of his hero; and having expended a large sum of money upon various parts of the entertainment, took a method of reimbursing himself, which gives a laughable finale to this overflow of enthusiasm:—the jubilee was converted into a dramatic representation, during the following winter, in London, and became so popular, that it was repeated night after night to the most crowded audiences.

The nature and extent of Shakspeare's biblical learning will form a necessary introduction to the review of his dramatic writings; especially as there is no question connected with his history, upon which more ingenious speculation has been hazarded. There has always prevailed a tradition that Shakspeare wanted learning, and Ben Jonson, who wrote at a time when the character and acquisitions of our poet were known to multitudes, affirms that he had small Latin, and less Greek. Dr. Farmer, in a curious essay upon this subject, has proved that his imaginary imitations from numerous old writers were derived from English books, to which he had easy access. It is surprising how much angry argument has been employed by such as are opposed to this opinion. Mr. Upton calls it the pride and pertness of dunces, whilst he very amusingly points out the skill with which Shakspeare has given "the trochaic-dimeter-brachy-catalectic, commonly called the ithyphallic measure," to the witches in Macbeth; and says that now and then a halting verse affords "a most beautiful instance of the pes proceleusmaticus!" Dr. Grey declares that Shakspeare's knowledge of Greek and Latin cannot reasonably be doubted; and another writer doubts whether Truspenney might not be derived from Τρυσπεννιον; quoting, at the same time, with much parade, an old scholiast on Aristophanes. Indeed, plagiarisms have been discovered in every natural description and every moral sentiment; a business which may be effected with very little time or sagacity, as Addison has shewn in his dissertation on Chevy Chase, and Wagstaff in his comment on Tom Thumb. To cite even a portion of the passages which Dr. Farmer has proved to be suggested by old chronicles, translations, or books of poetry, instead of being taken directly from writers in the dead languages, would be impossible; but one result of his inquiries may be adduced as a specimen of the whole. "Dr. Grey and Mr. Whalley assure us, that for the play of Hamlet, Shakspeare must have read Saxo Grammaticus in Latin, no translation having been made into any modern language. But the truth is, that he did not take it from Saxo at all; a novel, called the Historie of Hamblet, was his original; a fragment of which in black letter is now in my possession." Upon the same principle, Shakspeare's allusion to the darts of Cupid in A Midsummer Night's Dream, where he says that some are tipped with gold and others with lead, does not prove his acquaintance with Ovid, any more than his allusions to Dido establish his knowledge of Virgil. Gower, Chaucer, and Lydgate, had already sung the fate of the love-sick queen, and Marlowe had even introduced her on the stage; whilst Surrey, Sidney, and Spenser, had defined in their amatory sonnets every characteristic distinction in Cupid's arrows. The Comedy of Errors is taken from the only play of Plautus which was then in English; and unless those which were not translated were inaccessible to him, there is no single reason why, if he copied one, he should not have copied more. He probably had learnt sufficient Latin to make him acquainted with construction, though he never advanced to an easy perusal of the Roman authors. Concerning his skill in modern languages, as no imitations of French or Italian authors have been discovered, though Italian poetry was then in high esteem, it would seem that he read English only, and chose for his fables merely such tales as he found translated. Some Italian words and phrases appear, it is true, in his works, but they are not of his own importation. With these opinions, the reader will form his own decision upon the acquired learning of our poet; and with Drayton, the countryman and acquaintance of Shakspeare, will probably attribute his excellence to "the naturall braine only."

As a first impression, it naturally excites surprise, that the dramatic writings of Shakspeare, productions so agreeable to the age that witnessed their birth, and distinguished by such unequivocal marks of popular approbation, were not more diffusely circulated from time to time through the medium of the press; or at all events secured, by the author himself, from the direct ravages of piracy or ignorance, the common accompaniments of successful genius. It is certain that Shakspeare did not himself print any one of his plays; nor was a collection of them published until 1623, seven years after his death, by Heninge and Condale, his former fellow-managers. From that period to 1664, an interval of forty-one years, only two editions were disposed of; the numerical amount of which did not probably exceed one thousand copies! Different commentators have assigned different reasons for this apparent retrocession of the national taste; but Mr. Chalmers has offered the most simple, and consequently the most satisfactory, solution of the circumstance, in a series of statements which it may be useful to lay before the reader, though necessarily in a condensed form. Shakspeare was the promoter of an amusement just emerging from barbarism, and one, moreover, which has ever had such a strong tendency to deviate from moral propriety, that the force of law has been in all ages necessary to preserve it within the bounds of common decency. The church, in particular, has at all times been unfriendly to the stage; and at this particular period, it required all the policy and circumspection of the court, to establish the reformed faith firmly in the affections of the people. To this important end the controversial efforts of the Puritans were greatly conducive, and nothing was more obnoxious to their tenets, than the toleration of dramatic amusements. Thus Elizabeth, and her successor, James, though privately disposed to patronize and foster the stage, as a pleasing addition to their courtly recreations, were yet under the necessity of loading it with some onerous restrictions, whilst the bishops themselves publicly committed to the flames all the poetry and novels which fell within their notice. Severe injunctions were issued against the printing of plays; nor were any allowed to be published, till revised and approved by persons in authority. In the temper and feeling of the times, this may be considered a virtual prohibition; and the publication of Shakspeare's works was therefore justly accounted a very doubtful speculation. For several years after his death, the public taste, ever dependent upon novelty, was strongly directed to the plays of Fletcher, and during the remainder of the seventeenth century, the noble productions of our poet gave place to a species of dramatic composition, equally conspicuous for its wit and its obscenity, and which the more chastened judgment of modern audiences has driven with abhorrence from the stage. The works of his rival and contemporary Jonson, appear indeed to have passed through several editions, and to have been read with uncommon avidity, while those of our poet were doomed to comparative neglect; but this is chiefly attributable to the passion for classical literature and collegiate learning, which were then regarded the chief criteria of merit. Only fifty years after his death, Dryden affirms that he was become "a little obsolete; and Tate, in his dedication to the altered play of King Lear, speaks of the original as an obscure piece, recommended to his notice by a friend. In the beginning of the last century, Lord Shaftesbury complained of "his rude unpolished style, and his antiquated phrase and wit;" and it is certain, that for nearly a hundred years after his death,—partly owing to the rebellion, when the stage was totally abolished—partly from the licentious taste encouraged in the time of Charles II., which we have already alluded to—and partly from the incorrect state of his works, he was almost entirely neglected. When, moreover, in addition to these facts, it is recollected that his works were published in a very unwieldy size—that the opportunities of attracting notice by advertisements were then very few—that the women had not applied to literature, nor was every house furnished with a closet of books—the limited sale of his works will cease to be a matter of surprise, and may fairly be attributed to the character and predominant occupations of the times which immediately followed his decease. Further examination will equally explain another apparent singularity, and also refute the supposition that Shakspeare was himself insensible of the value of his works, or careless of any reward beyond present popularity and present profit. He wrote them for a particular theatre, sold them to the managers when only an actor, reserved them in manuscript when himself a manager, and on disposing of his property in the theatre, they were still preserved in manuscript, to prevent their being acted by the rival houses. Copies of some of them appear to have been surreptitiously obtained, and published in a very incorrect state; but the managers were wise enough to overlook this fraud, rather than publish a correct edition, and so destroy the exclusive property they enjoyed. It is clear, therefore, on the one hand, that any publication of his plays by himself, would have interfered at first with his own interest, and afterwards with that of his fellow-managers, to whom he had made over his share in them; and on the other, that though the fame which he enjoyed was probably the highest which dramatic genius could bestow, yet that dramatic genius was novel and unappreciated, or perhaps, not heard of beyond the limits of the metropolis. It is, indeed, very doubtful whether he would have gained much by publication, whilst the refinements of criticism were so little understood, and the sympathies of taste so inadequately felt.

In 1709 an edition was undertaken by Mr. Nicholas Rowe, which had nothing to recommend it but some biographical particulars of Shakspeare, communicated by Betterton, the celebrated comedian, who had been at the trouble of a journey into Warwickshire purposely to obtain them. Nearly all the faults of the first edition were perpetuated in this; and according to Dr. Warburton, Mr. Rowe, though a wit, was so utterly unacquainted with the whole business of criticism, that he did not examine or consult the early copies of the work which he ventured to re-publish. But it is now very generally allowed, that he made a number of emendations which succeeding editors have received without acknowledgment. In 1725 Mr. Pope published his edition in 6 vols. 4to, and gave the first example of critical and emendatory notes. He collected the old copies, and restored many lines to their integrity; his preface is equally celebrated for elegance of composition, and justness of remark; but, by a very compendious criticism, he rejected whatever he disliked, thinking more of amputation than of cure, and proving himself a better poet than dramatic critic. Every anomaly of language, and every expression at variance with the accepted phraseology of that day, was considered an error or corruption, and the text was altered, or amended, as it was called, at pleasure. By these fanciful deviations, the poet was so completely modernized, that had he "revisited the glimpses of the moon," he would scarcely have understood his own works. In 1733 Mr. Theobald ventured upon a similar task, giving to his work the imposing title of Shakspeare Restored. Dr. Johnson describes him as a man of narrow comprehension and small acquirements—restoring a stray comma, and then panegyricizing himself for the achievement—as mean, petulant, and ostentatious, and indebted for a little reputation to the circumstance of his having Pope for an opponent. Sir Thomas Hanmer was the next who undertook to illustrate Shakspeare: his work was published in 1744, in 6 vols. 4to. He is generally termed the “Oxford editor;” and, though eminently qualified by nature for such pursuits, is said to have adopted all the innovations of Pope, in addition to the capricious suggestions of his own taste. In 1747, Dr. Warburton, Bishop of Gloucester, published his edition in 8 vols. 8vo., and by an unbounded license in substituting his own chimerical conceits for the plain text of his author, subjected himself to the imputation of wishing rather to display his own learning, than to illustrate the obscurities of the poet. It has been said, indeed, of this celebrated critic, that he erected his throne on a heap of stones, that he might have them at hand to throw at the heads of all who passed by; but though his interpretations are sometimes perverse, and his conjectures improbable—though he occasionally discovers absurdities where the sense is plain, or dwells upon profundity of meaning which the author never contemplated, yet his emendations are frequently happy, and his commentaries learned and ingenious. In 1765, that distinguished moralist, scholar, and critic, Dr. Samuel Johnson, published these plays with additional criticisms, accompanying them with a preface, which is considered a perfect specimen of his own extraordinary genius, and in which, also, the respective merits of all the above-named editors are characterized with great candour, and with singular fertility of expression. It is said, that he has commented on the writings of Shakspeare with a severity far removed from accuracy and justice, and that he did not fully understand the varied merits of his author. But Mr. Malone, in the very intelligent and amusing preface to his edition of our poet, published in 1790, vindicates the Doctor’s happy and just refutation of Mr. Theobald and Warburton’s false glosses, and asserts that his vigorous and comprehensive understanding threw more light on the involved and difficult passages of many plays, than the united labour of all his predecessors had been able to do. In the edition of 1803, published by Mr. Steevens, (in 21 vols. 8vo. commonly called Johnson and Steevens’s Shakspeare, and justly esteemed the best,) all Mr. Malone’s original notes and improvements are incorporated. From 1716 to 1790, a period of seventy-four years, thirty thousand copies of Shakspeare were circulated in England; and since that time, the number has at least been doubled. Some of them issued under the auspices of able and accomplished scholars, particularly the edition of 1805, 10 vols. 8vo. by Alexander Chalmers, F.S.A.; which is distinguished by a sketch of the life of Shakspeare, founded upon the statements of Rowe, with the additional and corrective remarks of Malone and Steevens. The generality, however, are mere reprints, with various degrees of typographical embellishments, and in almost every size and shape; but the magnificent copy published some time since by the Messrs. Boydell, in large folio, enriched with the most sumptuous engravings, is justly considered as one of the finest specimens of art ever produced in this, or in any other country.

Nothing is more difficult, in estimating the real merits of a popular writer, than to “season the admiration” by judicious rules. These can only be learnt from the opinions of such as have made it their particular business to investigate the pretensions of authors, and to define the boundaries of taste by the best examples which learning and experience supply. Some useful information, applicable to this purpose, may be gained from the following analysis, exhibiting the most formidable objections that have been urged against Shakspeare’s dramas, in conjunction with the principal merits by which they are said to be distinguished.

Voltaire, after allowing that Shakspeare, besides possessing a strong fruitful genius, was natural and sublime, decides that he had not one spark of good taste, nor a single dramatic rule, and that his great merit has been the ruin of the English stage. “There are (says he) such noble, such beautiful, such dreadful scenes in this writer’s monstrous verses, to which the name of tragedy is given, that they have always been exhibited with great success. Time, which only gives reputation to writers, at last makes their very faults venerable. Most of the whimsical gigantic images of this poet, have, through length of time, acquired a right of passing for sublime. In Othello, a most tender piece, a man strangles his wife upon the stage, and though the poor woman is strangling, she cries out aloud that she dies very unjustly. In Hamlet, the two grave-diggers are drunk, singing ballads, and making humorous reflections on the skulls which they throw up. The players have not even struck out the buffoonery of the shoemakers and cobblers, who are introduced (in Julius Cæsar) in the same scene with Brutus and Cassius.”

These, says Dr. Johnson, are the petty cavils of petty minds. Shakspeare’s plays are not, in the rigorous and critical sense, either tragedies or comedies, but compositions of a distinct kind, exhibiting the mingled good and evil, joy and sorrow, inseparable from this sublunary state. That this is a practice contrary to ancient dramatic rules, will be readily allowed; but there is always an appeal open from criticism to nature. The end of writing is to instruct ; the end of poetry, to instruct by pleasing ; and there is no reason why the mingled drama should not convey all the pleasure and instruction of which tragedy or comedy, in their simple form, are capable of doing. The English nation, in the time of Shakspeare, was yet struggling to emerge from barbarity. The philology of Italy had been transplanted hither in the reign of Henry VIII., and the learned languages had been successfully cultivated by Lily, Linacre, and More ; by Pole, Choke, and Gardiner ; and afterwards by Smith, Clerk, Haddon, and Ascham. Greek was taught in the public schools, and many of the Italian and Spanish poets were read with great diligence. But these advantages were confined to distinguished rank, whilst the public at large was still gross and dark. Plebeian learning was confined to giants, dragons, and enchantments ; and the sober representations of common life would not have been tolerated by a nation which delighted in the wonders of fiction, in the exploits of Palmerin, and the feats of Gay of Warwick. Writing for such audiences as these, Shakspeare was compelled to look around for strange events and fabulous transactions ; and that incredibility by which maturer knowledge is offended, was the chief recommendation of his writings to unskilful curiosity. Such, indeed, is the power of the marvellous, even over those who despise it, that every man finds his mind more strongly seized by the tragedies of Shakspeare than of any other writer ; and he has, perhaps, excelled all but Homer, in the leading qualifications of a writer, by the power of exciting a restless and unquenchable curiosity. The necessity of observing the unities of time and place, arises from the supposed necessity of making the drama credible ; but it will be found that the slavish adherence to these principles, which Voltaire and others so rigidly enforce, gives much more trouble to the poet, than pleasure to the audience. It is false that any representation is mistaken for reality ; for if a spectator can once be persuaded that his old acquaintance are Alexander and Cæsar, that a room illuminated with candles is the plain of Pharsalia, he is in a state of elevation beyond the reach of truth, and there is no reason why, in such a state of ecstasy, he should count the clock, or consider minutes and hours, as any other than days and years. Whether, therefore, Shakspeare knew the unities, and rejected them by design, or deviated from them by happy ignorance, it is impossible to decide, and useless to inquire ; since they are not essential to a just drama, and though sometimes conducive to pleasure, may always be sacrificed to the nobler beauties of variety and instruction.

Mr. Rowe's was the first editorial commentary on the plays of Shakspeare, and notwithstanding his alleged incapacity for criticism, the prominent beauties of our poet are judiciously and not inelegantly pointed out. Like other critics, he praises the fertility of his invention—the historical fidelity of his characters—the stateliness of his diction—the power of his muse in creating terror, or exciting mirth—and the perfection of his writings at a time of almost universal licence and ignorance, where there was not one play in existence of sufficient merit to be acted at the present day.

With an ardour, an eloquence, and a discrimination, suited to his highly-gifted mind, and becoming the liberality of his poetical character, Mr. Pope enlarges on the characteristic excellences of our immortal bard. He considers him more original even than Homer ; since the art of the latter proceeded through Egyptian strainers, and came to him not without some tincture of the learning of those that preceded him. In the power of the passions, he declares him to be no less admirable, than in the coolness of reflection and reasoning ; and (as though he had been acquainted with the world by intuition) that his sentiments are the most pertinent and judicious, even on those great and public scenes, of which he could have had no experience. One cause of Shakspeare's peculiarities was the profession to which he belonged. Players are just judges of what is right, as tailors are of what is graceful. Living by the majority, they know no rule but that of pleasing the present humour, and complying with the wit in fashion. Our author first formed himself upon the opinions of this class of men ; and consequently his faults are less to be ascribed to his wrong judgment as a poet, than to his right judgment as a player.

Mr. Theobald, in the midst of many compliments to his own acuteness, and much irreverent abuse of Pope, whose wit (he says) is as thick as Tewkesbury mustard, thus panegyricizes Shakspeare : " Whether we respect the force and greatness of his genius, the extent of his knowledge and reading, the power and address with which he throws out and applies either nature or learning, there is ample scope both for our wonder and pleasure."

Sir Thomas Hanmer commends the rich vein of sense which runs through the entire works of Shakspeare ; and declares him unequalled in the two great branches of dramatic poetry, by the best writers of any age or country.

Dr. Warburton, in a paper replete with brilliant wit and energetic argument, thus speaks of the productions of Shakspeare : " Of all the literary exertions of speculative men, whether designed for the use or entertainment of the world, there are none of so much importance as those which let us into the knowledge of our nature. Others may exercise the reason, or amuse the imagination, but these only can improve the heart, and form the mind to wisdom. Now in this science Shakspeare confessedly occupies the foremost place; whether we consider the amazing sagacity with which he investigates every hidden spring and wheel of human action; or his happy manner of communicating this knowledge, in the just and living paintings which he has given us of all our passions, appetites, and pursuits."

To the recorded testimony of these eminent writers, it is scarcely necessary that any other should be added; but the inquisitive reader will find the merits of Shakspeare still further developed in the essays of Mrs. Montague, Dr. Richardson, Dr. Grey, and Mr. Britton. Dryden, whose own accomplished genius was sullied and debased by the dramatic impurities in which he indulged, says that Shakspeare had the largest and most comprehensive soul of all modern, and perhaps ancient, poets, and that, in dramatic composition, he has left no praise for any who come after him. In a similar feeling, and with that stately sentiment which pervades all he has written, Dr. Young thus exalts the qualifications of our poet: "Whatever other learning he wanted, he was master of two books unknown to many of the profoundly read, though books which the last conflagration alone can destroy: the book of nature, and that of man." Mr. Malone calls him the great refiner and polisher of our language; and ranks his compound epithets, his bold metaphors, his energetic expressions, and harmonious numbers, amongst the chief beauties of his works. Dr. Johnson, whose opinions have already been recited in opposition to those of Voltaire, declares that a valuable system of civil and economical prudence may be collected from the plays of Shakspeare—that they are filled with practical axioms and domestic wisdom—that almost every verse (as was formerly said of the writings of Euripides) is a precept; but that, at the same time, his real power is shewn in the progress of the fable, and the tenor of the dialogue—and that he who tries to recommend him by select quotations, will succeed like the pedant in Hierocles, who, when he offered his house to sale, carried a brick in his pocket as a specimen.

Though the excellence of Shakspeare's productions has become an article of literary faith in England, and though such of his defects as are too palpable to be overlooked, have been gratuitously attributed to the age in which he lived, it is only a necessary supplement to the foregoing remarks, and essential to a right appreciation of his character, briefly to point out what those defects are. In many of his plays, the latter part is evidently neglected; when he found himself near the end of his work, and in view of his reward, he shortened the labour to snatch the profit. The plots are often so loosely formed, that a very slight consideration may improve them, and so carelessly pursued, that he seems not always fully to comprehend his own design. In his comic scenes, the jests are frequently gross, and the pleasantries licentious; nor are his ladies and gentlemen sufficiently distinguished from clowns, by any appearance of refined manners. He is not long soft and pathetic, without some idle conceit, or contemptible equivocation. What he does best, he soon ceases to do. Let but a quibble spring up before him, and he leaves his work unfinished: he follows it at all adventures, however dignified or profound, however tender or pathetic, the subject which engages his attention. Lastly, he is accused of sacrificing virtue to convenience, and of being much more careful to please than to instruct. He that thinks reasonably, must think morally; but our poet's precepts drop casually from him; he makes no just distribution of good or evil; and after carrying his persons indifferently through right and wrong, he dismisses them at the close without further care, leaving their examples to operate by chance.

With these imperfect particulars, derived from the united labours of various admirers and commentators, our brief sketch of the life of Shakspeare must necessarily conclude. On all the topics which usually constitute the personal history of an individual, his contemporaries and immediate successors have been equally silent. The meagre facts which were first embodied in a memoir by Mr. Rowe, and have been moulded into so many forms by the caprice or taste of successive writers, remain to the present day, unaided by any accession of novelty, and unimpeached by the utmost acuteness of criticism. His early studies—the progress of his pen—his moral and social qualities—his friendships and his errors, are completely buried in oblivion, as if the homage which is paid to his splendid poetical genius, should be unmingled with any recollection of his faults and failings as a man. Nor, after an interval of two centuries, is it probable that any undiscovered clue is in existence, by which the memoria. of his actions can be redeemed from its present obscurity.

CORIOLANUS.

LITERARY AND HISTORICAL NOTICE.

THIS play, supposed to have been written in 1608, comprehends a period of five or six years. The plebeian citizens of Rome, unable to pay their debts from poverty, consequent upon the long war against Tarquin and the Latins, and incensed by the supposed indifference of the senators and patricians, retired with the undisciplined troops of Valerius, to a mountain about three miles from Rome, afterwards called Mount Sacer. The city was thrown into great alarm by this defection, and Menenius, who is described as "a very discreet person, and a great orator," was sent with other commissioners, to bring about a reconciliation. Here he related to them the fable of the belly and its members; the application of which had such an effect, that they were about to follow him home, when Sicinius and Junius Brutus (two factious fellows) cunningly demanding a guarantee for the people, were in the end appointed their tribunes, with very extraordinary power. In the year following, there was a severe famine; and Coriolanus (so called for his exploits at Corioli) with other young patricians, making excursions into the enemy's country, returned, laden with corn. Provisions also arriving from Sicily, the senate determined upon selling them at a cheap rate to the poor; but Coriolanus proposed the abolition of the tribuneship, and the retention of the corn, because the people had obstinately refused to join in the expedition sent out to obtain it. The exasperated populace would instantly have thrown him from the Tarpeian rock, but were repulsed by his friends. Being arraigned at the proper tribunal, he defended himself with so much grace and energy, that the people called out for his acquittal; whereupon one of the tribunes artfully and falsely accusing him of illegally appropriating the spoils of war, he was as suddenly sentenced to banishment. In a spirit of revenge, he offered his services to the Volscians, and carried destruction to the very gates of Rome. The city was on the point of being assaulted, when his mother, accompanied by his wife and children, threw herself at his feet, and worked so much upon the feelings of nature, that he granted a peace, and withdrew his troops. On returning to Antium, by the perfidious management of Tullus, he was cut in pieces ere he had time to defend his conduct; but the Volsci disapproved the assassination, buried him honourably, adorned his tomb with trophies, and the Roman women mourned for him twelve months. The poet has adhered very closely to historical facts. Mr. Pope remarks, that Shakspeare is found "to be very knowing in the customs, rites, and manners of antiquity. In Coriolanus and Julius Cæsar, not only the spirit, but the manners of the Romans are exactly drawn; and a still sicer distinction is shown between Roman manners in the time of the former and of the latter." Many of the principal speeches are copied from Plutarch's Life of Coriolanus, as translated by Sir Thomas North. There are some glaring anachronisms in this play, such as introducing our nicknames of Hob, Dick, &c. church-yards, knells, and particularly, theatres for the exhibition of plays, which did not exist until 250 years after the death of Coriolanus. Volumentia, also, was the name of his wife, not of his mother; and the good Menenius died three or four years before his revengeful expedition against Rome.—Dr. Johnson says: The tragedy of Coriolanus is one of the most amusing of our author's performances. The old man's merriment in Menenius; the lofty lady's dignity in Volumentia; the bridal modesty in Virgilia; the patrician and military haughtiness in Coriolanus; the plebeian malignity and tribunitian insolence in Brutus and Sicinius make a very pleasing and interesting variety; and the various revolutions of the hero's fortune fill the mind with anxious curiosity. There is, perhaps, too much bustle in the first act, and too little in the last.

ACT I.

SCENE I.—Rome.—A Street.

Enter a company of mutinous CITIZENS, with Staves, Clubs, and other Weapons.

1 Cit. Before we proceed any further, hear me speak.

Cit. Speak, speak. [Several speaking at once.]

1 Cit. You are all resolved rather to die, than to finish?

Cit. Resolved, resolved!

1 Cit. First you know, Caius Marcius is chief enemy to the people.

Cit. We know't, we know't.

1 Cit. Let us kill him, and we'll have corn at our own price. Is't a verdict?

Cit. No more talking on't; let it be done; away, away.

2 Cit. One word, good citizens.

1 Cit. We are accounted poor citizens; the patricians, good: What authority surfeits on, would relieve us; if they would yield us but the superfluity, while it were wholesome, we might guess they relieved us humanely; but they think we are too dear:† the leanness that afflicts us, the object of our misery, is as an inventory to particularize their abundance ; our sufferance is a gain to them.—Let us revenge this with our pikes, ere we become rakes :^a for the gods know, I speak this in hunger for bread, not in thirst for revenge.

1 Cit. Would you proceed especially against Cains Marcius ?

Cit. Against him first : he's a very dog to the commonalty.

2 Cit. Consider you what services he has done for his country ?

1 Cit. Very well ; and could be content to give him good report for't, but that he pays himself with being proud.

2 Cit. Nay, but speak not maliciously.

1 Cit. I say unto you, what he hath done famously, he did it to that end ; though soft-conscienc'd men can be content to say it was for his country, he did it to please his mother, and to be partly proud ; which he is, even to the altitude of his virtue.

2 Cit. What he cannot help in his nature, you account a vice in him : You must in no way say he is covetous.

1 Cit. If I must not, I need not be barren of accusations ; he hath faults, with surplus, to tire in repetition. [Shouts within.] What shouts are these ? The other side o'the city is risen : Why stay we prating here ? to the Capitol !

Cit. Come, come.

1 Cit. Soft ; who comes here ?

Enter MENENIUS AGRIPPA.

2 Cit. Worthy Menenius Agrippa : one that hath always loved the people.

1 Cit. He's one honest enough ; 'Would, all the rest were so !

Men. What work's, my countrymen, in hand ?

Where go you

With bats and clubs ? The matter ? Speak, I pray you.

1 Cit. Our business is not unknown to the senate ; they have had inkling,† this fortnight what we intend to do, which now we'll show 'em in deeds. They say, poor suitors have strong breaths ; they shall know we have strong arms too.

Men. Why, masters, my good friends, mine honest neighbours, Will you undo yourselves ?

1 Cit. We cannot, Sir, we are undone already.

Men. I tell you, friends, most charitable care Have the patricians of you. For your wants, Your suffering in this dearth, you may as well Strike at the heaven with your staves, as lift them

Against the Roman state ; whose course will on The way it takes, cracking ten thousand curbs Of more strong link asunder, that can ever Appear in your impediment : For the dearth, The gods, not the patricians, make it ; and Your knees to them, not arms, must help.

You are transported by calamity Thither where more attends you ; and you slander The helms o'the state, who care for you like When you curse them as enemies. [fathers,

1 Cit. Care for us ! True, indeed ! They ne'er cared for us yet. Suffer us to famish, and their store-houses crammed with grain ; make edicts for usury, to support usurers ; repeal daily any wholesome act established against the rich ; and provide more piercing statutes daily, to chain up and restrain the poor. If the wars eat us not up, they will ; and there's all the love they bear us.

Men. Either you must Confess yourselves wondrous malicious, Or be accus'd of folly. I shall tell you A pretty tale ; it may be, you have heard it : But, since it serves my purpose, I will venture To scale't ‡ a little more.

Men. Sir, I shall tell you.—With a kind of smile,

Which ne'er came from the lungs, but even thus, (For, look you, I may make the belly smile As well as speak,) it tauntingly replied To the discontented members, the mutinous parts That envied his receipt ; even so most fitly, As you malign our senators, for that They are not such as you—

1 Cit. The former agents, if they did complain, What could the belly answer ?

Men. I will tell you ;

If you'll bestow a small (of what you have little,) Patience, a while, you'll hear the belly's answer.

1 Cit. You are long about it.

Men. Note me this, good friend ; Your most grave belly was deliberate, Not rash like his accusers, and thus answer'd. Men. Though all at once cannot See what I do deliver out to each ; Yet I can make my audit up, that all From me do back receive the flour of all, And leave me but the bran. What say you to't ?

1 Cit. It was an answer : How apply you this ?

Men. The senators of Rome are this good belly,

And you the mutinous members : For examine Their counsels and their cares ; digest things rightly,

Touching the weal o'the common ; you shall find No public benefit which you receive, But it proceeds, or comes, from them to you, And no way from yourselves.—What do you think ?

The one side must have bail.* Hail, noble
Marcius !

Enter Caius Marcus.

Mar. Thanks.—What's the matter, you dissentious rogues,
That rubbing the poor itch of your opinion,
Make yourselves scabs ?

1 Cit. We have ever your good word,

Mar. He that will give good words to thee, will flatter
Beneath abhorring. What would you have, you curs,

That like nor peace, nor war ? the one affrights
The other makes you proud. He that trusts you,
Where he should find you lions, finds you hares ;
Where foxes, geese : You are no surer, no,
Than is the coal of fire upon the ice,
Or hailstone in the sun. Your virtue is,
To make him worthy whose offence subdues him,
And curse that justice did it. Who deserves greatness,

Deserves your hate : and your affections are
A sick man's appetite, who desires most that
Which would increase his evil. He that depends Upon your favours, swims with fins of lead,
And hews down oaks with rushes. Hang ye !
Trust ye ?

With every minute you do change a mind ;
And call him noble, that was now your hate,
Him vile, that was your garland. What's the matter,

That in these several places of the city
You cry against the noble senate, who,
Under the gods, keep you in awe, which else
Would feed on one another ?—What's their seeking ?

Men. For corn at their own rates ; whereof,
they say,
The city is well stor'd.

Mar. Hang 'em ! They say ?
They'll sit by the fire, and presume to know
What's done i'the Capitol : who's like to rise,
Who thrives, and who declines : side factions,
and give out

Conjectural marriages ; making parties strong,
And feebling such as stand not in their liking, Below their cobbled shoes. They say, there's grain enough ?

Would the nobility lay aside their ruth,†
And let me use my sword, I'd make a quarry †
With thousands of these quarter'd slaves, as high
As I could pick ‡ my lance.

Men. Nay, these are almost thoroughly persuaded :

For though abundantly they lack discre lion,
Yet are they passing cowardly. But, I beseech
What says the other troop ? [you,

Mar. They are dissolved : Hang 'em !
They said they were an hungry : sigh'd forth
proverbs— [eat ;

That hunger broke stone walls ; that dogs must
That meat was made for mouths ; that the gods sent not

Corn for the rich men only :—With these shreds
They vented their complainings ; which, being answer'd,

And a petition granted them, a strange one,
(To break the heart of generosity,
And make bold power look pale) they threw their caps

As they would hang them on the horns o'the
Shouting their emulation.‡ [moon

Men. What is granted them ?

Mar. Five tribunes to defend their vulgar wisdoms,

Of their own choice : One's Junius Brutus,
Sicinius Velutus, and I know not—'Sdeath !

* Damage. † Compassion. ‡ Heap of dead. § Pitch.
‡ Faction.

The rabble should have first unroof'd the city,
Ere so prevail'd with me : it will in time
Win upon power, and throw forth greater themes
For insurrection's arguing.*

Men. This is strange.

Mar. Go, get you home, you fragments !

Enter a Messenger.

Mes. Where's Caius Marcus ?

Mar. Here : What's the matter ?

Mes. The news, is, Sir, the Volscies are in arms.

Mar. I am glad on't ; then we shall have means to vent

Our musty superfluity :—See, our best elders.

Enter Cominius, Titus Lartius, and other SENATORS ; Junius Brutus and Sicinius Velutus.

1 Sen. Marcus, 'tis true that you have lately told us :

The Volscies are in arms.

Mar. They have a leader,
Tullus Aufidius, that will put you to't.
I sin in envying his nobility :

And were I any thing but what I am,
I would wish me only he.

Com. You have fought together.

Mar. Were half to half the world by the ears, and he

Upon my party, I'd revolt, to make
Only my wars with him : he is a lion
That I am proud to hunt.

1 Sen. Then, worthy Marcus,
Attend upon Cominius to these wars.

Com. It is your former promise.

Mar. Sir, it is ;
And I am constant.—Titus Lartius, thou
Shalt see me once more strike at Tullus' face
What, art thou stiff ? stand'st out ?

Tit. No, Caius Marcus ; [other,
I'll lean upon one crutch, and fight with the Ere stay behind this business.

Men. Oh ! true bred !

1 Sen. Your company to the Capitol ; where I know,

Our greatest friends attend us.

Tit. Lead you on :

Follow, Cominius ; we must follow you ;
Right worthy you priority.

Com. Noble Lartius !

1 Sen. Hence ! To your homes, be gone.

[To the Citizens.

Mar. Nay, let then follow :
The Volscies have much corn ; take these rats
thither,

To gnaw their garners : Worshipful mutineers,
Your valour puts † well forth : pray follow.

[Exeunt SENATORS, COM. MAR. TIT. and MEN. CITIZENS steal away.

Sic. Was ever man so proud as is this Marcius ?

Bru. He has no equal.

Sic. When we were chosen tribunes for the people,—

Bru. Mark'd you his lip, and eyes ?

Sic. Nay, but his taunts.

Bru. Being mov'd, he will not spare to gird †
the gods.

Sic. Be-mock the modest moon.

Bru. The present wars devour him : he is Too proud to be so valiant. [grows

Sic. Such a nature

Tickled with good success, disdains the shadow
Which he treads on at noon : But I do wonder,
His insolence can brook to be commanded
Under Cominius.

Bru. Fame, at the which he aims,—

In whom already he is well grac'd—cannot Better be held, nor more attain'd, than by
A place below the first : for what miscarries
Shall be the general's fault, though he perform
To the utmost of a man ; and giddy censure

* For insurgents to debate upon. † Shows itself ‡ Gibe.

Will then cry out of Marcius, Oh! if he Had borne the business!

Sic. Besides, if things go well, Opinion, that so sticks on Marcius, shall Of his demerits* rob Cominius.

Bru. Come:
Half all Cominius' honours are to Marcins,
Though Marcius earn'd them not; and all his faults

To Marcius shall be honours, though, indeed,
In aught he merit not.

Sic. Let's hence, and hear
How the dispatch is made; and in what fashion,
More than in singularity,† he goes
Upon his present action.

Bru. Let's along.

[Exeunt.]

SCENE II.—Corioli.—The Senate-House.

Enter TULLUS AUFIDIUS, and certain SENATORS.

1 Sen. So, your opinion is, Aufidius,
That they of Rome are enter'd in our counsels,
And know how we proceed.

Auf. Is it not yours?
What ever hath been thought on in this state,
That could be brought to bodily act ere Rome
Had circumvention!‡ 'Tis not four days gone,
Since I heard thence—these are the words: I think

I have the letter here; yes, here it is—[Reads.
They have press'd a power, but it is not known

*Whether for east or west: The dearth is great;
The people mutinous: and it is rumour'd,
Cominius, Marcius your old enemy,
(Who is of Rome worse hated than of you,)
And Titus Lartius, a most valiant Roman,
These three lead on this preparation
Whither 'tis bent: most likely, 'tis for you:
Consider of it.*

1 Sen. Our army's in the field:
We never yet made doubt but Rome was ready
To answer us.

Auf. Nor did you think it folly,
To keep your great pretences veil'd, till when
They needs must shew themselves; which in the hatching,

It seem'd, appear'd to Rome. By the discovery,
We shall be shorten'd in our aim, which was,
To take in § many towns, ere, almost, Rome
Should know we were afoot.

2 Sen. Noble Aufidius,
Take your commission; hie you to your hands:
Let us alone to guard Corioli:
If they set down before us, for the remove Bring up your army; but, I think, you'll find
They have not prepar'd for us.

Auf. Oh! doubt not that:
I speak from certainties. Nay, more—
Some parcels of their powers are forth already,
And only hitherward. I leave your honours.
If we and Caius Marcius chance to meet,
'Tis sworn between us, we shall never strike
Till one can do no more.

All. The gods assist you!

Auf. And keep your honours safe!

1 Sen. Farewell.

2 Sen. Farewell.

All. Farewell.

[Exeunt.]

SCENE III.—Rome.—An Apartment in MARCIUS' House

Enter VOLUMNIA and VIRGILIA: They sit down on two low stools, and sew.

Vol. I pray you, daughter, sing; or express yourself in a more comfortable sort: If my son were my husband, I should freelier rejoice in that absence wherein he won honour, than in the embracements of his bed, where he would show most love. When yet he was but tender-bodied, and the only son of my womb: when youth with comeliness pluck'd all gaze his way;°

When, for a day of kings' entreaties, a mother should not sell him an hour from her beholding;
I,—considering how honour would become such a person; that it was no better than picture-like to hang by the wall, if renown made it not stir,— was pleased to let him seek danger where he was like to find fame. To a cruel war I sent him; from whence he returned, his brows bound with oak.† I tell thee, daughter, I sprang not more in joy at first hearing he was a man-child, than now in first seeing he had proved himself a man.

Vir. But had he died in the business, madam, how then?

Vol. Then his good report should have been my son: I therein would have found issue.
Hear me profess sincerely: Had I a dozen sons, each in my love alike, and none less dear than thine and my good Marcius, I had rather had eleven die nobly for their country, than one voluptuously surfeit out of action.

Enter a GENTLEWOMAN.

Gent. Madam, the lady Valeria is come to visit you.

Vir. 'Beseech you, give me leave to retire myself.

Vol. Indeed, you shall not.

Methinks, I hear hither your husband's drum;
See him pluck Aufidius down by the hair;
As children from a bear the Volscies shunning
him;

Methinks, I see him stamp thus, and call thus,—
*Come on, you cowards, you were got in fear,
Though you were born in Rome:* His bloody brow

With his mail'd hand then wiping, forth he goes,
Like to a harvest-man, that's task'd to mow
Or all, or lose his hire.

Vir. His bloody brow! O Jupiter, no blood!

Vol. Away, you fool! it more becomes a man,
Than gilt his trophy: The breasts of Hecuba,
When she did suckle Hector, look'd not lovelier
Than Hector's forehead, when it spit forth blood
At Grecian swords' contending.—Tell Valeria
We are fit to bid her welcome. [Exit Gent.]

Vir. Heavens bless my lord from fell Aufidius!
Vol. He'll beat Aufidius' head below his knee,
And tread upon his neck.

Re-enter GENTLEWOMAN, with VALERIA and her USHER.

Val. My ladies both, good day to you.

Vol. Sweet madam,—

Vir. I am glad to see your ladyship.

Val. How do you both? you are manifest house-keepers. What, are you sewing here?
A fine spot, in good faith.—How does your little son?

Vir. I thank your ladyship; well, good madam.

Vol. He had rather see the swords, and hear a drum, than look upon his school-master.

Val. O' my word, the father's son: I'll swear,
'tis a very pretty boy. O' my troth, I looked upon him o' Wednesday half an hour together:
he has such a confirmed countenance. I saw him run after a gilded butterfly; and when he caught it, he let it go again; and after it again;
and over and over he comes, and up again;
caught it again: or whether his fall enraged him, or how 'twas, he did so set his teeth, and tear it: Oh! I warrant how he mammoched†
it!

Vol. One of his father's moods.

Val. Indeed so, 'tis a noble child.

Vir. A crack,§ madam.

Val. Come, lay aside your stichery; I must have you play the idle huswife with me this afternoon.

Vir. No, good madam; I will not out of doors.

* Demerits and merits had anciently the same meaning. † Let us also learn what are his powers, &c.
‡ Information of it. § To subdue.

° Attracted universal attention. † The most honourable crown of all—given to him who saved the life of a citizen. § Tore it. § Boy.

Vol. Not out of doors!

Vol. She shall, she shall.

Vir. Indeed, no, by your patience: I will not over the threshold, till my lord return from the wars.

Vol. Pte, you confine yourself most unreasonably: Come, you must go visit the good lady that lies in.

Vir. I will wish her speedy strength, and visit her with my prayers; but I cannot go thither.

Vol. Why, I pray you?

Vir. 'Tis not to save labour, nor that I want love.

Vol. You would be another Penelope: yet, they say, all the yarn she spun in Ulysses' absence did but fill Ithaca full of moths. Come; I would your cambric were sensible as your finger, that you might leave pricking it for pity. Come, you shall go with us.

Vir. No, good madam, pardon me; indeed, I will not forth.

Vol. In truth, la, go with me; and I'll tell you excellent news of your husband.

Vir. O good madam, there can be none yet.

Vol. Verily, I do not jest with you; there came news from him last night.

Vir. Indeed, madam?

Vol. In earnest, it's true; I heard a senator speak it. Thus it is:—The Volscies have an army forth; against whom Cominius the general is gone, with one part of our Roman power: your lord, and Titus Lartius, are set down before their city Corioli; they nothing doubt prevailing, and to make it brief wars. This is true, on mine honour; and so, I pray, go with us.

Vir. Give me excuse, good madam; I will obey you in every thing hereafter.

Vol. Let her alone, lady; as she is now, she will but disease our better mirth.

Vol. In troth, I think she would:—Fare you well then.—Come, good sweet lady.—Pr'ythee, Virgilia, turn thy solemnness out o'door, and go along with us.

Vir. No, at a word, madam: indeed, I must not. I wish you much mirth.

Vol. Well, then, farewell.

[Exeunt.]

SCENE IV.—Before Corioli.

Enter with Drums, and Colours, MARCIUS, TITUS LARTIUS, Officers and Soldiers. To them a MESSENGER.

Mar. Yonder comes news:—A wager, they have met.

Lart. My horse to yours, no.

Mar. 'Tis done.

Lart. Agreed.

Mar. Say, has our general met the enemy?

Mess. They lie in view; but have not spoke as yet.

Lart. So, the good horse is mine.

Mar. I'll buy him of you.

Lart. No, I'll nor sell, nor give him: lend you him, I will,

For half a hundred years.—Summon the town.

Mar. How far off lie these armies?

Mess. within this mile and half.

Mar. Then shall we hear their larum, and they ours.

Now, Mars, I pr'ythee make us quick in work: That we, with smoking swords, may march from hence,

To help our fielded friends!—Come, blow thy

They sound a parley.—Enter on the walls, some SENATORS, and others.

Tullus Aufidius, is he within your walls?

1 Sen. No, nor a man that fears you less than he, That's lesser than a little. Hark, our drums

Are bringing forth our youth: We'll break our

Rather than they shall pound us up: our gates, Which yet seem shut, we have but pinn'd with rushes;

They'll open of themselves. Hark you, far off;

[Other Alarums.]

There is Aufidius; list, what work he makes

Amongst your cloven army,

Mar. Oh! they are at it!

Lart. Their noise be our instruction.—Ladders ho!

The VOLSCIES enter and pass over the Stage.

Mar. They fear us not, but issue forth their city.

Now put your shields before your hearts, and With hearts more proof than shields.—Advance, brave Titus:

They do disdain us much beyond our thoughts, Which makes me sweat with wrath.—Come on, my fellows;

He that retires, I'll take him for a Volscie, And he shall feel mine edge.

Alarum, and exeunt ROMANS and VOLSCIES, fighting. The ROMANS are beaten back to their trenches. Re-enter MARCIUS.

Mar. All the contagion of the south light on you!

You shames of Rome! you herd of—Bolls and Plaster you o'er; that you may be abhor'd Further than seen, and one infect another

Against the wind a mile! You souls of geese, That bear the shapes of men, how have you

From slaves that apes would beat? Pluto and All hurt behind; backs red, and faces pale With flight and agued fear! Mend, and charge

Or, by the fires of heaven, I'll leave the foe, And make my wars on you: look to't: Come

If you'll stand fast, we'll beat them to their As they us to our trenches followed.

Another Alarum. The VOLSCIES and ROMANS re-enter, and the fight is renewed. The VOLSCIES retire into Corioli, and MARCIUS follows them to the gates.

So, now the gates are ope:—Now prove good

'Tis for the followers fortune widens them, Not for the fliers: make me, and do the like.

[He enters the gates, and is shut in.]

1 Sol. Fool-hardiness! not I.

2 Sol. Nor I.

3 Sol. See, they

Have shut him in. [Alarum continues.]

All. To the pot, I warrant him.

Enter TITUS LARTIUS.

Lart. What is become of Marcius?

All. Shain, Sir, doubtless.

1 Sol. Following the fliers at the very heels, With them he enters: who, upon the sudden, Clapp'd to their gates: he is himself alone,

To answer all the city.

Lart. O noble fellow!

Who, sensible, outdares his senseless sword, And, when it bows,* stands up! Thou art left,

Marcius:

A carbuncle entire, as big as thou art, Were not so rich a jewel. Thou wast a soldier Even to Cato's wish, not fierce and terrible Only in strokes; but, with thy grim looks, and The thunder-like percussion of thy sounds, Thou mad'st thine enemies shake, as if the world Were feverous and did tremble.

Re-enter MARCIUS bleeding, assaulted by the enemy.

1 Sol. Look, Sir.

Lart. 'Tis Marcius:

Let's fetch him off, or make remain alike.

[They fight, and all enter the city.]

* When it is bent.

SCENE V.—Within the town.—A Street.

Enter certain ROMANS, with spoils.

1 Rom. This I will carry to Rome.

2 Rom. And I this.

3 Rom. A murrain on't! I took this for silver.
[Alarum continues still afar off.]

Enter MARCIUS, and TITUS LARTIUS, with a trumpet.

Mar. See here these movers, that do prize their hours

At a crack'd drachm! Cushions, leaden spoons, Irons of dolt, doublets that hangmen would
Bury with those that wore them, these base slaves,
Bre yet the fight be done, pack up:—Down with them.

And hark, what noise the general makes! To him:—

There is the man of my soul's hate, Aufidius, Piercing our Romans: Then, valiant Titus, take Convenient numbers to make good the city;
Whilst I, with those that have the spirit, will
To help Cominius. [haste]

Lart. Worthy Sir, thou bleed'st;
Thy exercise hath been too violent for
A second course of fight.

Mar. Sir, praise me not: [well.]
My work hath yet not warn'd me: Fare you
The blood I drop is rather physical Than dangerous to me: To Aufidius thus
I will appear, and fight.

Lart. Now the fair goddess, Fortune,
Fall deep in love with thee: and her great charms

Misguide thy opposers' swords! Bold gentleman, Prosperity be thy page!

Mar. Thy friend no less Than those she placeth highest! So farewell.

Lart. Thou worthiest Marcius!—

[Exit MARCIUS.]

Go, sound thy trumpet in the market-place;
Call thither all the officers of the town,
Where they shall know our mind. Away.

[Exeunt.]

SCENE VI.—Near the Camp of COMINIUS.

Enter COMINIUS and forces, retreating.

Com. Breathe you, my friends; well fought,
we are come off

Like Romans, neither foolish in our stands,
Nor cowardly in retire; believe me, Sirs,
We shall be charg'd again. Whiles we have struck, [heard]

By interims, and conveying gusts, we have
The charges of our friends:—The Roman gods
Lead their successes as we wish our own;
That both our powers, with smiling fronts encountering.

Enter a MESSENGER.

May give you thankful sacrifice!—Thy news?

Mess. The citizens of Corioli have issued,
And given to Lartius and to Marcius battle:
saw our party to their trenches driven,
And then I came away.

Com. Though thou speak'st truth,
Methinks, thou speak'st not well. How long is't since?

Mess. Above an hour, my lord.

Com. 'Tis not a mile; briefly we heard their drums:
How could'st thou in a mile confound* an hour,
And bring thy news so late?

Mess. Spies of the Volsces
Held me in chase, that I was forc'd to wheel
Three or four miles about; else had I, Sir,
Half an hour since brought my report.

Enter MARCIUS.

Com. Who's yonder,
That does appear as he were slay'd? O gods!

* Expend.

He has the stamp of Marcius; and I have Beforetime seen him thus.

Mar. Come I too late?

Com. The shepherd knows, not thunder from a labor,

More than I know the sound of Marcius' tongue
From every meaner man's.

Mar. Come I too late?

Com. Ay, if you come not in the blood of
But mantled in your own. [others,

Mar. Oh! let me clip you

In arms as sound, as when I woo'd; in heart
As merry as when our nuptial day was done,
And tapers burn'd to bedward.

Com. Flower of warriors,
How is't with Titus Lartius?

Mar. As with a man busied about decrees:
Condemning some to death, and some to exile;
Ransoming him, or pitying, threat'ning the other;
Holding Corioli in the name of Rome,
Even like a fawning greyhound in the leash,
To let him slip at will.

Com. Where is that slave,
Which told me they had beat you to your trenches?
Where is he? Call him hither.

Mar. Let him alone,
He did inform the truth: But for our gentlemen,
The common file, (a plague!—tribunes for them!)
The mouse ne'er shunn'd the cat, as they did budge

From rascals worse than they.

Com. But how prevail'd you?

Mar. Will the time serve to tell? I do not think—

Where is the enemy? Are you lords o'the field?
If not, why cease you till you are so?

Com. Marcius,
We have at disadvantage fought, and did
Retire, to win our purpose.

Mar. How lies their battle? Know you on which side

They have plac'd their men of trust?

Com. As I guess, Marcius,
Their bands in the vaward* are the Antiates,†
Of their best trust: o'er them Aufidius,
Their very heart of hope.

Mar. I do beseech you,
By all the battles wherein we have fought,
By the blood we have shed together, by the vows
We have made to endure friends, that you directly

Set me against Aufidius and his Antiates:
And that you not delay the present; but,
Filling the air with swords advanc'd, and darts,
We prove this very hour.

Com. Though I could wish
You were conducted to a gentle bath,
And balms applied to you, yet dare I never Deny your asking: take your choice of those
That best can aid your action.

Mar. Those are they
That most are willing:—If any such be here,
(As it were sin to doubt,) that love this painting
Wherein you see me smear'd; if any fear
Lesser his person than an ill report;
If any think brave death outweighs bad life,
And that his country's dearer than himself;
Let him, alone, or so many, so minded,
Wave thus [waving his hand] to express his disposition,
And follow Marcius,

[They all shout and wave their swords; take him up in their arms, and cast up their caps.]

O me, alone! Make you a sword of me?
If these shows be not outward, which of you
But is four Volsces? None of you but is Able to bear against the great Aufidius
A shield as hard as his. A certain number,
Though thanks to all, must I select: the rest
Shall bear the business in some other fight,
As cause will be obey'd. Please you to march,

* Front. † Soldiers of Antium.

And four shall quickly draw out my command,
Which men are best inclin'd.

Com. March on, my fellows :
Make good this ostentation, and you shall Divide in all with us. [Exeunt.]

SCENE VII.—The Gates of Corioli.

TITUS LARTIUS, having set a guard upon Corioli, going with a drum and trumpet toward COMINIUS and CAIUS MARCIUS, enters with a LIEUTENANT, a party of soldiers, and a scout.

Lart. So, let the ports * be guarded : keep your duties,
As I have set them down. If I do send, despatch
Those centuries † to our aid : the rest will serve
For a short holding : If we lose the field,
We cannot keep the town.

Lieu. Fear not our care, Sir.

Lart. Hence, and shut your gates upon us.—
Our guider, come ; to the Roman camp conduct us. [Exeunt.]

SCENE VIII.—A field of battle between the Roman and the Volscian Camps.

Alarm. Enter MARCIUS and AURIDIUS.

Mar. I'll fight with none but thee ; for I do hate thee

Worse than a promise-breaker

Auf. We hate alike :

Not Afric owns a serpent, I abhor
More than thy fame and envy : Fix thy foot.

Mar. Let the first budger ‡ die the other's slave,
And the gods doom him after !

Auf. If I fly, Marcius,
Hailoo me like a hare.

Mar. Within these three hours, Tullus,
Alone I fought in your Corioli walls,
And made what work I pleas'd : 'Tis not my
blood,

Wherein thou seest me mask'd for thy revenge,
Wrench up thy power to the highest.

Auf. Wert thou the Hector,
That was the whip of your bragg'd progeny, §
Thou should'st not 'scape me here.—

[They fight and certain Volscies come to the aid of AURIDIUS.]

Officious, and not valliant—you have sham'd me
In your condemned seconds. ||

[Exeunt fighting, driven in by MARCIUS.]

SCENE IX.—The Roman Camp.

Alarm. A retreat is sounded. Flourish.
Enter at one side, COMINIUS and Romans ;
at the other side, MARCIUS, with his arm in a scarf, and other Romans.

Com. If I should tell thee o'er this thy day's work,

Thou'lt not believe thy deeds : but I'll report it,
Where senators shall mingle tears with smiles ;
Where great patricians shall attend, and shrug,
I'the end, admire ; where ladies shall be frighted,
And gladly quak'd, ¶ hear more ; where the dull
Tribunes,

That, with the fusty plebeians, hate thine honours, [gods,

shall say, against their hearts—We thank the our Rome hath such a soldier !—

Yet can'st thou to a morsel of this feast,
Having fully dined before.

Enter TITUS LARTIUS, with his power,  from the pursuit.

Lart. O general,
Here is the steed, we the caparison :
Hadst thou beheld—

Mar. Pray now, no more : my mother,
Who has a charter †† to extol her blood,

* Gates. † Companies of a hundred men. ‡ Stirrer.
§ The Romans sprang from Eneas. || In sending such help. ¶ Thrown into grateful stupor.  Forces.
† Privilege.

When she does praise me, grieves me. I have
done,

As you have done, that's what I can ; induc'd
As you have been, that's for my country ;
He, that has but effected his good will,
Hath overta'en mine act.

Com. You shall not be
The grave of your deserving : Rome must know
The value of her own : 'twere a concealment
Worse than a theft, no less than a traducement,
To hide your doings ; and to silence that,
Which to the spire and top of praises vouch'd
Would seem but modest : Therefore, I beseech
(In sign of what you are, not to reward *[you
What you have done]* before our army hear me.

Mar. I have some wounds upon me, and they smart

To hear themselves remember'd.

Com. Should they not,
Well might they fester 'gainst ingratitude,
And tent themselves with death. Of all the horses,
(Whereof we have ta'en good, and good store,) of all

The treasure, in this field achiev'd, and city,
We render you the tenth ; to be ta'en forth,
Before the common distribution, at
Your only choice.

Mar. I thank you, general ;
But cannot make my heart consent to take
A bribe to pay my sword : I do refuse it ;
And stand upon my common part with those
That have beheld the doing.

*[A long flourish. They all cry, Marcius !
Marcius ! cast up their caps and lances :
COMINIUS and LARTIUS stand bare.]*

Mar. May these same instruments, which you profane, *[shall Never sound more ! When drums and trumpets I'the field prove flatterers, let courts and cities be *[grow]

Made all of false-fac'd soothing : When steel
Soft as the parasite's silk, let him be made
An overture for the wars ! No more, I say ;
For that I have not wash'd my nose that bled,
Or sold'd some debile * wretch, (which, without note,

Here's many else have done,) you shout me forth
In acclamations hyperbolical ;
As if I loved my little should be dieted
In praises sanc'd with lies.

Com. Too modest are you ;
More cruel to your good report, than grateful
To us that give you truly : by your patience,
If 'gainst yourself you be lucens'd, we'll put you (Like one that means his proper † harm,) in manacles, [known,

Then reason safely with you.—Therefore, be it
As to us, to all the world, that Caius Marcius Wears this war's garland : In token of the which
My noble steed, known to the camp, I give him,
With all his trim belonging ; and, from this
time,

For what he did before Corioli, call him,
With all the applause and clamour of the host,
CAIUS MARCIUS CORIOLANUS.—
Bear the addition nobly ever !

*[Flourish. Trumpets sound, and Drums.
All. Caius Marcius Coriolanus !]*

Cor. I will go wash ;
And when my face is fair, you shall perceive Whether I blush, or no : Howbeit, I thank
you :—

I mean to stride your steed ; and, at all times,
To undercrest ‡ your good addition,
To the fairness of my power.

Com. So, to our tent :
Where, ere we do repose us, we will write
To Rome of our success.—You, Titus Lartius, Must to Corioli back : send us to Rome
The best, § with whom we may articulate,
For their own good, and ours.

* Feeble. † Own. ‡ Add more by doing my best.
§ Chief men. || Enter into articles.

Lart. I shall, my lord.

Cor. The gods begin to mock me. I that now
Refus'd most princely gifts, am bound to beg
Of my lord general.

Com. Take it: 'tis yours.—What is't?

Cor. I sometime lay, here in Corioli,
At a poor man's house; he us'd me kindly;
He cried to me; I saw him prisoner;
But then Aufidius was within my view,
And wrath o'erwhelm'd my pity: I request you
To give my poor host freedom.

Com. Oh! well begg'd!

Were he the butcher of my son, he should Be free, as is the wind. Deliver him, Titus.

Lart. Marcius, his name?

Cor. By Jupiter, forgot:—

I am weary; yea, my memory is tir'd.—
Have we no wine here?

Com. Go we to our tent:
The blood upon your visage dries: 'tis time
It should be look'd to: come. [Exeunt.]

SCENE X.—The Camp of the Volsces.

A Flourish. Cornets. Enter TULLUS AUFIDIUS, bloody with two or three SOLDIERS.

Auf. The town is ta'en!

I Sol. 'Twill be delivered back on good condition.

Auf. Condition!—

I would I were a Roman; for I cannot,
Being a Volscie, be that I am.—Condition!
What good condition can a treaty find
I'the part that is at mercy? Five times, Marcius,
I have fought with thee; so often hast thou beat me; [counter]

And, would'st do so, I think, should we en-
As often as we eat.—By the elements,
If e'er again I meet him beard to beard,
He is mine, or I am his: Mine emulation
Hath not that honour in't, it had; for where *
I thought to crush him in an equal force, (True sword to sword,) I'll potch † at him some Or wrath, or craft, may get him. [way;]

I Sol. He's the devil.

Auf. Bolder, though not so subtle: My valour's poison'd,
With only suffering stain by him; for him
Shall fly out of itself: nor sleep, nor sanctuary,
Being naked, sick, nor fane, nor Capitol,
The prayers of priests, nor times of sacrifice,
Embarquements all of fury, shall lift up
Their rotten privilege and custom 'gainst
My hate to Marcius: where I find him, were it
At home, upon my brother's guard, ‡ even there Against the hospitable canon, would I Wash my fierce hand in his heart. Go you to the city;

Learn how 'tis held; and what they are, that
Be hostages for Rome. [must]

I Sol. Will not you go?

Auf. I am attended § at the cypress grove:
I pray you
('Tis south the city mills,) bring me word thither
How the world goes; that to the pace of it
I may spur on my journey.

I Sol. I shall, Sir.

[Exeunt.]

ACT II.

SCENE I.—Rome.—A Public Place.

Enter MENENIUS, SICINIUS, and BRUTUS.

Men. The augurer tells me we shall have news to-night.

Brut. Good, or bad?

Men. Not according to the prayer of the people, for they love not Marcius.

Sic. Nature teaches beasts to know their friends.

Men. Pray you, who does the wolf love?

Sic. The lamb.

Men. Ay, to devour him; as the hungry plebelans would the noble Marcius.

Brut. He's a lamb indeed, that bays like a bear.

Men. He's a bear indeed, that lives like a lamb. You two are old men; tell me one thing that I shall ask you.

Both Trib. Well, Sir.

Men. In what enormity is Marcius poor, that you two have not in abundance?

Brut. He's poor in no one fault, but stored with all.

Sic. Especially, in pride.

Brut. And topping all others in boasting.

Men. This is strange now: Do you two know how you are censured here in the city, I mean of us o'the right hand file? Do you?

Both Trib. Why, how are we censured?

Men. Because you talk of pride now,—Will you not be angry?

Both trib. Well, well, Sir, well.

Men. Why 'tis no great matter; for a very little thief of occasion will rob you of a great deal of patience: give your disposition the reins, and be angry at your pleasures; at the least,
if you take it as a pleasure to you, in being so.
You blame Marcius for being proud?

Brut. We do it not alone, Sir.

Men. I know you can do very little alone;
for your helps are many; or else your actions would grow wondrous single: your abilities are too infant-like, for doing much alone. You talk of pride: Oh! that you could turn your eyes towards the napes of your necks, and make but an interior survey of your good selves! Oh! that you could!

Brut. What then, Sir?

Men. Why, then you should discover a brace of unmeriting, proud, violent, testy magistrates, (alias, fools) as any in Rome.

Sic. Menenius, you are known well enough too.

Men. I am known to be a humorous patrician, and one that loves a cup of hot wine with not a drop of allaying Tyber * in't; said to be something imperfect, in favouring the first complaint: hasty, and tinder-like, upon too trivial motion: one that converses more with the buttock of the night, than with the forehead of the morning. What I think, I utter; and spend my malice in my breath: Meeting two such weals-men as you are, (I cannot call you Lycargues)
if the drink you gave me, touch my palate adversely, I make a crooked face at it. I cannot say, your worships have delivered the matter well, when I find the ass in compound with the major part of your syllables: and though I must be content to bear with those that say you are reverend grave men, yet they lie deadly that tell you have good faces. If you see this in the map of my mycrocosm, follows it, that I am known well enough too? What harm can your bisson † conspicuities glean out of this character, if I be known well enough too.

Brut. Come, Sir, come, we know you well enough.

Men. You know neither me, yourselves, nor any thing. You are ambitious for poor knaves' caps and legs; § you wear out a good wholesome forenoon, in hearing a cause between an orange-wife and a fosset-seller; and then rejoin the controversy of three-pence to a second day of audience.—When you are hearing a matter between party and party, if you chance to be pinched with the cholic, you make faces like mummers;
set up the bloody flag against all patience; and,
roaring for a chamber-pot, dismiss the controversy bleeding, the more entangled by your hearing: all the peace you make in their cause is, calling both the parties knaves: You are a pair of strange ones.

Brut. Come, come, you are well understood to be a perfecter giber for the table, than a necessary bencher in the Capitol.

* Whereas. † Strike. ‡ Under my brother's protection. § Waited for

* Water of the Tiber. † States. ‡ Blind views.
§ Obedience.

Men. Our very priests must become mockers, if they shall encounter such ridiculous subjects as you are. When you speak best unto the purpose, it is not worth the wagging of your beards; and your beards deserve not so honourable a grave, as to stuff a butcher's cushion, or to be entombed in an ass's pack-saddle. Yet you must be saying, Marcius is proud; who, in a cheap estimation, is worth all your predecessors, since Decalloon; though, peradventure, some of the best of them were hereditary hangmen. Good e'en to your worship; more of your conversation would infect my brain, being the herdsmen of the beastly plebeians: I will be bold to take my leave of you.

[BRU. and SIC. retire to the back of the Scene.]

Enter VOLUMNIA, VIRGILIA, and VALERIA, &c.

How now, my as fair as noble ladies, (and the moon, were she earthly, no nobler) whither do you follow your eyes so fast?

Vol. Honourable Menenius, my boy Marcius approaches; for the love of Juno, let's go.

Men. Ha! Marcius coming home?

Vol. Ay, worthy Menenius; and with most prosperous approbation.

Men. Take my cap, Jupiter, and I thank thee:—Hoo! Marcius coming home?

Two Ladies. Nay, 'tis true.

Vol. Look, here's a letter from him; the state hath another; his wife another; and I think, there's one at home for you.

Men. I will make my very house reel to-night:—A letter for me?

Fir. Yes, certain, there's a letter for you; I saw it.

Men. A letter for me? It gives me an estate of seven years' health; in which time I will make a lip at the physician: the most sovereign prescription of Galen is but empiricitic, and, to this preservative, of no better report than a horse-drench. Is he not wounded? he was wont to come home wounded.

Fir. Oh! no, no, no.

Vol. Oh! he is wounded, I thank the gods for't.

Men. So do I to, if it be not too much:—Brings 'a victory in his pocket?—The wounds become him.

Vol. On's brows, Menenius: he comes the third time home with the oaken garland.

Men. Has he disciplined Aufidius soundly?

Vol. Thus Lartius writes, they fought together, but Aufidius got off.

Men. And 'twas time for him too, I'll warrant him that: an he had staid by him, I would not have been so fidiused for all the chests in Corioli, and the gold that's in them. Is the senate possessed * of this?

Vol. Good ladies, let's go:—Yes, yes, yes: the senate has letters from the general, wherein he gives my son the whole name of the war: he hath in this action outdone his former deeds doubly.

Vol. In troth, there's wondrous things spoke of him.

Men. Wondrous? ay, I warrant you, and not without his true purchasing,

Fir. The gods grant them true!

Vol. True? pow, wow.

Men. True? I'll be sworn they are true:—Where is he wounded?—God save your good worship! [To the Tribunes, who come forward.] Marcius is coming home: he has more cause to be proud.—Where is he wounded?

Vol. I'the shoulder, and I'the left arm: There will be large cicatrices to show the people, when he shall stand for his place. He received in the repulse of Tarquin, seven hurts I'the body.

Men. One in the neck, and two in the thigh,—there's nine that I know.

Vol. He had, before this last expedition, twenty-five wounds upon him.

* Informed.

Men. Now its twenty-seven: every gash was an enemy's grave: [A Shout and Flourish Hark! the trumpets.]

Vol. These are the ushers of Marcius: before him [tears; He carries noise, and behind him he leaves Death, that dark spirit, in's nervy arm doth lie; Which being advanc'd, declines, and then men die.]

A Sennet. Trumpets sound. Enter COMINIUS and TITUS LARTIUS; between them CORIO LANUS, crowned with an oaken Garland; with Captains, Soldiers, and a Herald.

Her. Know, Rome, that all alone Marcius did fight

Within Corioli's gates: where he hath won, With fame, a name to Caius Marcius; these in honour follows, Coriolanus: Welcome to Rome, renowned Coriolanus!

[Flourish.

All. Welcome to Rome, renowned Coriolanus!

Cor. No more of this, it does offend my heart; Pray now, no more.

Com. Look, Sir, your mother,—

Cor. Oh!

You have I know, petition'd all the gods For my prosperity.

[Kneels.

Vol. Nay, my good soldier, up;

My gentle Marcius, worthy Caius, and By deed-achieving honour newly nam'd, What is it? Coriolanus, must I call thee? But oh! thy wife.—

Cor. My gracious * silence, hail!

Would'st thou have laugh'd, had I come coffin'd home,

That weep'st to see me triumph? Ah, my dear, Such eyes the widows in Corioli wear, And mothers that lack sons.

Men. Now the gods crown thee!

Cor. And live you yet?—O my sweet lady, pardon.

[To VALERIA.

Vol. I know not where to turn:—O welcome home;

And welcome, general;—And you are welcome all.

Men. A hundred thousand welcomes: I could weep, [come;

And I could laugh: I am light and heavy: Well—A curse begin at very root of his heart,

That is not glad to see thee!—You are three, That Rome should dote on: yet, by the faith of men;

We have some old crab-trees here at home, that will not

Be grafted to your relish. Yet welcome war. We call a nettle, but a nettle; and [riors: The faults of fools, but folly.]

Com. Ever right.

Cor. Menenius, ever, ever.

Her. Give way there, and go on.

Cor. Your hand, and yours:

[To his Wife and Mother

Ere in our own house I do shade my head, The good patricians must be visited; From whom I have received not only greetings, But with them change of honours.

Vol. I have lived

To see inherited my very wishes, And the buildings of my fancy: only there is one thing wanting, which I doubt not but Our Rome will cast upon thee.

Cor. Know, good mother, I had rather be their servant in my way, Than sway with them in theirs.

Com. On to the Capitol.

[Flourish. Coronets. Exeunt in state, as before. The Tribunes remain.

Br. All tongues speak of him, and the bleared sights

Are spectacl'd to see him: Your prattling nurse Into a rapture † lets her baby cry, windows,

Are smother'd up, leads fill'd, and ridges hors'd
With variable complexions ; all agreeing
In earnestness to see him : seld'shown fla-mens §

Do press among the popular throngs, and puff
To win a vulgar station : ¶ our veil'd dames Commit the war of white and damask, in Their nicely-gawded  checks, to the wanton spoil

Of Phœbus' burning kisses : such a pother,
As if that whatsoever god who leads him,
Were slyly crept into his human powers,
And gave him graceful posture.

Sic. On the sudden,
I warrant him consl.

Brn. Then our office may,
During his power, go sleep.

Sic. He cannot temperately transport his honours

From where he should begin, and end ; but will Lose those that he hath won.

Brn. In that there's comfort.

Sic. Doubt not the commoners, for whom we stand,

But they, upon their ancient malice, will Forget with the least cause these his new honours ;

Which that he'll give them, make as little ques-
As he is proud to do't.

Brn. I heard him swear,
Were he to stand for consul, never would he Appear i' the market-place, nor on him put
The napless †† vesture of humility ;
Nor, showing (as the manner is) his wounds
To the people, beg their stinking breaths.

Sic. 'Tis right.

Brn. It was his word : Oh ! he would miss it,
 rather

Than carry it, but by the suit o' the gentry to
And the desire of the nobles.

Sic. I wish no better,
Than have him hold that purpose, and to put it
In execution.

Brn. 'Tis most like he will.

Sic. It shall be to him then, as our good
A sure destruction.

Brn. So it must fall out
To him, or our authorities. For an end,
We must suggest the people, in what hatred
He still hath held them ; that, to his power, he would

Have made them mules, silenced their pleaders,
Dispropertied their freedoms : holding them,
In human action and capacity,
Of no more soul, nor fitness for the world,
Than camels in their war ; who have their provand §§

Only for bearing burdens, and sore blows
For sinking under them.

Sic. This, as you say, suggested
At some time when his soaring insolence Shall teach the people, (which time shall not want,

If he be put upon't and that's as easy,
As to set dogs on sheep,) will be his fire
To kindle their dry stubble ; and their blaze
Shall darken him for ever.

Enter a MESSENGER.

Brn. What's the matter ?

Mess. You are sent for to the Capitol. 'Tis thought,
That Marcius shall be consul : I have seen
The dumb men throng to see him, and the blind

To hear him speak : The matrons flung their Ladies and maids their scarfs and handkerchiefs,

* Maid. † A kind of cheap linen. ‡ Soiled with sweat and smoke. § Seldom. ¶ Priests. ¶ Common standing-place.  Adorned. †† Thread-bare

Upon him as he pass'd : the nobles bended,
As to Jove's statue ; and the commons made
A shower, and thunder, with their caps and I never saw the like.

[shouts :

Brn. Let's to the Capitol ;
And carry with us ears and eyes for the time,
But hearts for the event.

Sic. Have with you.

[Exeunt.

SCENE II.—The same.—The Capitol.

Enter two OFFICERS, to lay Cushions.

1 Off. Come, come, they are almost here :
How many stand for consulships ?

2 Off. Three, they say : but 'tis thought of every one Coriolanus will carry it.

1 Off. That's a brave fellow ; but he's vengeance proud, and loves not the common people.

2 Off. 'Faith, there have been many great men that have flatter'd the people, who ne'er loved them ; and there be many that they have loved, they know not wherefore : so that if they love they know not why, they hate upon no better a ground : Therefore, for Coriolanus neither to care whether they love or hate him, manifests
the true knowledge he has in their disposition ;
and, out of his noble carelessness, lets them plainly see't.

1 Off. If he did not care whether he had their love, or no, he wou'd indifferently 'twixt doing them neither good nor harm ; but he seeks their hate with greater devotion than they can render it him ; and leaves nothing undone, that may fully discover him their opposite.* Now, to seem to affect the malice and displeasure of the people, is as bad as that which he dislikes, to flatter them for their love.

2 Off. He hath deserved worthily of his country :
And his ascent is not by such easy degrees as those, who, having been supple and courteous to the people, bonnetted, † without any further deed to heave them at all into their estimation and report : but he hath so planted his honours in their eyes, and his actions in their hearts, that for their tongues to be silent, and not confess so much, were a kind of ingrateful injury : to report otherwise were a malice, that, giving itself the lie, would pluck reproof and rebuke from every ear that heard it.

1 Off. No more of him ; he is a worthy man :
Make way, they are coming.

*A Sennet. Enter, with LICTORS, before them,
COMINIUS the Consul, MENENIUS, CORIO-LANUS, many other SENATORS, SICINIUS, and BRUTUS. The SENATORS take their places ; the TRIBUNES take theirs also by themselves.*

Men. Having determin'd of the Volscs, and
To send for Titus Lartius, it remains,
As the main point of this our after-meeting,
To gratify his noble service, that Hath thus stood for his country : Therefore, please
 you,

Most reverend and grave elders, to desire
The present consul, and last general
In our well-sound successes, to report
A little of that worthy work perform'd
By Caius Marcius Coriolanus ; whom
We meet here, both to thank, and to remember
With honours like himself.

1 Sen. Speak, good Cominius :
Leave nothing out for length, and make us think,
Rather our state's defective for requital,
Than we to stretch it out. Masters o' the people
We do request your kindest ears : and, after,
Your loving motion toward the common body,
To yield what passes here.

Sic. We are contented
Upon a pleasing treaty ; and have hearts
Inclinable to honour and advance
The theme of our assembly.

Brn. Which the rather

* Adversary.

† Took off their caps.

We shall be bless'd to do, if he remember
A kinder value of the people, than
He hath hereto priz'd them at.

Men. That's off, that's off,*
I would you rather had been silent: Please you
To hear Cominius speak?

Bru. Most willingly:
But yet my cation was more pertinent,
Than the rebuke you give it.

Men. He loves your people;
But tie him not to be their bedfellow.—
Worthy Cominius, speak.—Nay, keep your place.
[CORIOLANUS rises, and offers to go away.]

1 Sen. Sit, Coriolanus: never shame to hear
What you have nobly done.

Cor. Your honours' pardon;
I had rather have my wounds to heal again,
Than hear say how I got them.

Bru. Sir, I hope
My words disbench'd you not.

Cor. No, Sir: yet oft,
When blows have made me stay, I fled from words.
You sooth'd not, therefore hurt not: But, your
I love them as they weigh. people,

Men. Pray now, sit down.

Cor. I had rather have one scratch my head
i'the sun,
When the alarm were struck,† than idly sit
To hear my nothings monster'd.

[Exit CORIOLANUS.]

Men. Masters o'the people,
Your multiplying spawn how can he flatter,
(That's thousand to one good one,) when you now
see
He had rather venture all his limbs for honour,
Than one of his ears to hear it?—Proceed, Cominius.

Com. I shall lack voice: the deeds of Coriolanus
Should not be utter'd feebly.—It is held,
That valour is the chiefest virtue, and
Most dignifies the haver:‡ if it be,
The man I speak of cannot in the world
Be singly counterpois'd. At sixteen years,
When Tarquin made a head for Rome, he fought
Beyond the mark of others; our then dictator,
Whom with all praise I point at, saw him fight,
When with his Amazonian chin he drove
The bristled lips before him: he bestred
An o'er press'd Roman, and i'the consul's view
Slew three opposers: Tarquin's self he met
And struck him on his knee: ¶ in that day's feats,
When he might act the woman in the scene,
He prov'd best man i'the field, and for his meed
Was brow-bound with the oak. His pupil age
Man-entered thus, he waxed like a sea;
And, in the brunt of seventeen battles since,
He lurch'd †† all swords o'the garland. For this Before and in Corioli, let me say, [lust
I cannot speak him home: He stopp'd the fliers;
And, by his rare example, made the coward
Turn terror into sport: as waves before
A vessel under sail, so men obey'd, (stamp,)
And fell below his stem: his sword (death's
Where it did mark, it took; from face to foot
He was a thing of blood, whose every motion ††
Was timed §§ with dying cries! alone he enter'd
The mortal gate o'the city, which he painted
With shameless destiny, aidless came off,
And with a sudden re-enforcement struck
Corioli, like a planet: now all's his:
When by and by the din of war 'gan pierce
His ready sense: then straight his doubled spirit
Re-quicken'd what in flesh was fatigate, |||
And to the battle came he; where he did Run recking o'er the lives of men, as if
'Twere a perpetual spoil; and, till we call'd
Both field and city ours, he never stood
To ease his breast with panting.

Men. Worthy man!

* Nothing to the purpose. † Summons to battle.
† Pannier. ‡ Without a beard. § Bearded.
¶ Made him fall on his knee.  Smooth-faced

1 Sen. He cannot but with measure fit the
Which we devise him. [honours

Com. Our spoils he kick'd at;
And look'd upon things precious, as they were
The common muck o'the world: he covets less
Than misery * itself would give; rewards
His deeds with doing them; and is content
To spend the time, to end it.

Men. He's right noble;
Let him be call'd for.

1 Sen. Call for Coriolanus.

Off. He doth appear.

Re-enter CORIOLANUS.

Men. The senate, Coriolanus, are well pleas'd
To make thee consul.

Cor. I do owe them still
My life and services.

Men. It then remains,
That you do speak to the people.

Cor. I do beseech you,
Let me o'erleap that custom; for I cannot
Put on the gown, stand naked, and entreat them,
For my wounds' sake, to give their suffrage:
please you,

That I may pass this doing.

Sic. Sir, the people
Must have their voices; neither will they bate
One jot of ceremony.

Men. Put them not to't:—
Pray you, go fit you to the custom: and Take to you, as your predecessors have,
Your honour with your form.

Cor. It is a part
That I shall blush in acting, and might well
Be taken from the people.

Bru. Mark you that!

Cor. To brag unto them,—Thus I did, and thus;—

Show them the unaching scars which I should hide,
As if I had received them for the hire
Of their breath only:—

Men. Do not stand upon't.—
We recommend to you, tribunes of the people,
Our purpose to them;—and to our noble consul
Wish we all joy and honour.

Sen. To Coriolanus come all joy and honour!

[Flourish. Then exeunt SENATORS.]

Bru. You see how he intends to use the people

Sic. May they perceive his intent! He that will require them,
As if he did contemn what he requested
Should be in them to give.

Bru. Come, we'll inform them
Of our proceedings here: on the market-place,
I know they do attend us. [Exeunt.]

SCENE III.—The same.—The Forum.

Enter several CITIZENS.

1 Cit. Once, if he do require our voices, we ought not to deny him.

2 Cit. We may, Sir, if we will.

3 Cit. We have power in ourselves to do it, but it is a power that we have no power to do:
for if he show us his wounds, and tell us his deeds, we are to put our tongues into those wounds, and speak for them; so, if he tell us his noble deeds, we must also tell him our noble acceptance of them. Ingratitude is monstrous: and for the multitude to be ingrateful were to make a monster of the multitude; of the which, we, being members, should bring ourselves to be monstrous members.

1 Cit. And to make us no better thought of, a little help will serve: for once, when we stood up about the corn, he himself stuck not to call us the many-headed multitude.

3 Cit. We have been called so of many; not that our heads are some brown, some black, some auburn, some bald, but that our wits are so diversly coloured: and truly I think, if all our wits were to issue out of one scull, they would fly east, west, north, south; and their consent of one direct way should be at once to all the points o'the compass.

2 Cit. Think you so? Which way, do you judge my wit would fly?

3 Cit. Nay, your wit will not so soon out as another man's will; 'tis strongly wedged up in a block-head: but if it were at liberty, 'twould, sure south ward.

2 Cit. Why that way?

3 Cit. To lose itself in a fog; where, being three parts melted away with rotten dews, the fourth would return for conscience' sake, to help to get thee a wife.

2 Cit. You are never without your tricks:—You may, you may.

3 Cit. Are you all resolved to give your voices? But that's no matter, the greater part carries it. I say, if he would incline to the people, there was never a worthier man.

Enter CORIOLANUS and MENENIUS.

Here he comes, and in the gown of humility; mark his behaviour. We are not to stay altogether, but to come by him where he stands, by ones, by twos, and by threes. He's to make his requests by particulars: wherein every one of us has a single honour, in giving him our own voices with our own tongues: therefore follow me, and I'll direct you how you shall go by him.

All. Content, content.

[Exeunt.]

Men. O Sir, you are not right: have you not known

The worthiest men have done it?

Cor. What must I say?

I pray, Sir,—Plague upon't! I cannot bring My tongue to such a pace:—Look, Sir;—my wounds;—

I got them in my country's service, when Some certain of your brethren roar'd, and ran From the noise of our own drums.

Men. O me, the gods!

You must not speak of that: you must desire them To think upon you.

Cor. Think upon me? Hang 'em!

I would they would forget me, like the virtues Which our divines lose by them.

Men. You'll mar all;

I'll leave you: Pray you, speak to them, I pray you,

In wholesome manner.

Exit.

Enter two CITIZENS.

Cor. Bid them wash their faces, And keep their teeth clean.—So, here comes a brace:

You know the cause, Sir, of my standing here.

Cit. We do, Sir; tell us what hath brought you to't.

Cor. Mine own desert.

2 Cit. Your own desert!

Cor. Ay, not Mine own desire.

1 Cit. How! not your own desire?

Cor. No, Sir:

'Twas never my desire yet, To trouble the poor with begging.

1 Cit. You must think, if we give you any We hope to gain by you. [thing,

Cor. Well then, I pray, your price o'the consulship?

1 Cit. The price is, Sir, to ask it kindly.

Cor. Kindly?

Sir, I pray let me ha't: I have wounds to show you,

Which shall be yours in private.—Your good voice, Sir;

What say you?

2 Cit. You shall have it, worthy Sir.

Cor. A match, Sir:—

There is in all two worthy voices begg'd—I have your alms; adieu.

1 Cit. But this is something odd.

2 Cit. An 'twere to give again,—But 'tis no matter. [Exeunt two CITIZENS.]

Enter two other CITIZENS.

Cor. Pray you now, if it may stand with the tune of your voices, that I may be consul, I have here the customary gown.

3 Cit. You have deserved nobly of your country, and you have not deserved nobly.

Cor. Your enigma?

3 Cit. You have been a scourge to her enemies, you have been a rod to her friends; you have not, indeed, loved the common people.

Cor. You should account me the more virtuous, that I have not been common in my love. I will, Sir, flatter my sworn brother the people, to earn a dearer estimation of them; 'tis a condition they account gentle: and since the wisdom of their choice is rather to have my hat than my heart, I will practise the insinuating nod, and be off to them most counterfeitedly: that is, Sir, I will counterfeit the bewitchment of some popular man, and give it bountifully to the dealers. Therefore, beseech you, I may be consul.

4 Cit. We hope to find you our friend; and therefore give you our voices heartily.

3 Cit. You have received many wounds for your country.

Cor. I will not seal your knowledge with showing them. I will make much of your voices, and so trouble you no further.

Both Cit. The gods give you joy, Sir, heartily! [Exeunt.]

Cor. Most sweet voices!—

Better it is to die, better to starve, Than crave the hire which first we do deserve. Why in this wolvish gown should I stand here, To beg of Hob and Dick, that do appear, Their needless vouches: Custom calls me to't;—What custom wills, in all things should we do't; The dust on antique time would lie unswept, And mountainous error be too highly heap'd For truth to over-peer.—Rather than fool it so, Let the high office and the honour go. To one that would do thus.—I am half through; The one part suffer'd, the other will I do.

Enter three other CITIZENS.

Here come more voices.— Your voices; for your voices I have fought; Watch'd for your voices; for your voices, bear Of wounds two dozen odd; battles thrice six, I have seen and heard of; for your voices, have Done many things, some less, some more: your voices:

Indeed, I would be consul.

5 Cit. He has done nobly, and cannot go without any honest man's voice,

6 Cit. Therefore let him be consul: The gods give him joy, and make him good friend to the people!

All. Amen, Amen,—

God save thee, noble consul!

[Exeunt CITIZENS.]

Cor. Worthy voices!

Re-enter MENENIUS, with BRUTUS and SICINIUS.

Men. You have stood your limitation; and the tribunes

Endue you with the people's voice: Remains, That, in the official marks invested, you Anon do meet the senate.

Cor. Is this done?

Sic. The custom of request you have discharged:

The people do admit you; and are summon'd To meet anon, upon your approbation.

Cor. Where? at the senate-house?

Sic. There, Coriolanus.

Cor. May I then change these garments?

Sic. You may, Sir.

Cor. That I'll straight do; and, knowing my self again, Repair to the senate-house.

Men. I'll keep you company.—Will you along?

Bru. We stay here for the people.

Sic. Fare you well.

[Exeunt CORIOL. and MENEN.]

He has it now; and by his looks, methinks,
'Tis warm at his heart.

Bru. With a proud heart he wore
His humble weeds: Will you dismiss the people?

Re-enter CITIZENS.

Sic. How now, my masters? have you chose this man?

1 Cit. He has our voices, Sir.

Bru. We pray the gods, he may deserve your loves.

2 Cit. Amen, Sir: To my poor unworthy no—
He mock'd us, when he begg'd our voices. [tice,

3 Cit. Certainly,
He scouted us downright.

1 Cit. No, 'tis his kind of speech, he did not mock us.

2 Cit. Not one amongst us save yourself, but says

He us'd us scornfully: he should have show'd us
His marks of merit, wounds receiv'd for his country.

Sic. Why, so he did, I am sure.

Cit. No; no man saw 'em. [Several speak.]

3 Cit. He said he had wounds, which he could show in private;

And with his hat, thus waving it in scorn,
I would be consul, says he: aged custom,
But by your voices, will not so permit me;
Your voices therefore: When we granted that,
Here was,—I thank you for your voices,—thank you,— [your voices,

Your most sweet voices:—now you have left
I have no further with you:—Was not this mockery?

Sic. Why, either you were ignorant to see't?
Or, seeing it, of such childish friendliness
To yield your voices?

Bru. Could you not have told him,
As you were lesson'd,—When he had no power,
But was a petty servant to the state,
He was your enemy; ever spake against
Your liberties, and the charters that you bear
The body of the weal: and now, arriving
A place of potency, and sway o'the state,
If he should still malignantly remain
Fast foe to the plebeii,* your voices might
Be curses to yourselves? You should have said,
That, as his worthy deeds did claim no less
Than what he stood for, so his gracious nature
Would think upon you for your voices, and Translate his malice towards you into love,
Standing your friendly lord.

Sic. Thus to have said,
As you were fore-advis'd, had touch'd his spirit,
And tried his inclination; from him pluck'd
Either his gracious promise, which you might,
As cause had call'd you up, have held him to;
Or else it would have gall'd his surly nature,
Which easily endures not article
Tying him to aught: so, putting him to rage,
You should have ta'en the advantage of his choler,
And pass'd him unelected.

Bru. Did you perceive,
He did solicit you in free contempt,
When he did need your loves; and do you think,
That his contempt shall not be bruising to you,
When he hath power to crush? Why, had your bodies

No heart among you? Or had you tongues to cry
Against the rectorship of judgement?

Sic. Have you,
Ere now, denied the asker? and, now again,
On him, that did not ask, but mock, bestow
Your su'd-for tongues?

3 Cit. He's not confirm'd, we may deny him yet.

2 Cit. And will deny him:
I'll have five hundred voices of that sound.

* Plebeians.

1 Cit. I twice five hundred and their friends to piece 'em.

Bru. Get you hence instantly; and tell those
friends,—

They have chose a consul, that will from them take
Their liberties; make them of no more voice
Than dogs, that are as often beat for barking,
As therefore kept to do so.

Sic. Let them assemble;

And, on a safer judgment, all revoke
Your ignorant election: Enforce* his pride,
And his old hate unto you: besides, forget not
With what contempt he wore the humble weed;
How in his suit he scorn'd you: but your loves,
Thinking upon his services, took from you
The apprehension of his present portance,†
Which, gibingly, ungravely he did fashion
After the inveterate hate he bears you.

Bru. Lay

A fault on us, your tribunes; that we labour'd
(No impediment between) but that you must Cast your election on him.

Sic. Say, you chose him

More after our commandment, than as guided
By your own true affections: and that, your minds
Pre-occupied with what you rather must do Than what you should, made you against the grain

To voice him consul: Lay the fault on us.

Bru. Ay, spare us not. Say, we read lectures
to you,

How youngly he began to serve his country,
How long continued: and what stock he springs of, [came
The noble house o'the Marcians; from whence
That Ancus Marcius, Numa's daughter's son,
Who, after great Hostilius, here was king:
Of the same house Publius and Quintus were,
That our best water brought by conduits hither;
And Censorinus, darling of the people,
And nobly nam'd so, being Censor twice,
Was his great ancestor.

Sic. One thus descended,
That hath beside well in his person wrought
To be set high in place; we did commend
To your remembrances: but you have found,
Scaling‡ his present bearing with his past,
That he's your fixed enemy, and revoke
Your sudden approbation.

Bru. Say, you ne'er had don't,
(Harp on that still,) but by our putting on: §
And presently, when you have drawn your num-
Repair to the Capitol. [ber,

Cit. We will so: almost all [Several speak.
Repent in their election. [Exeunt CITIZENS.]

Bru. Let them go on:
This mutiny were better put in hazard,
Than stay, past doubt, for greater:
If, as his nature is, he fall in rage
With their refusal, both observe and answer
The vantage|| of his anger.

Sic. To the Capitol: [ple;
Come; we'll be there before the stream o'the peo-
And this shall seem, as partly 'tis, their own
Which we have goaded¶ onward. [Exeunt.]

ACT III.

SCENE I.—The same.—A Street.

Cornets. Enter CORIOLANUS, MENENIUS, CO-
MINIUS, TITUS LARTIUS, SENATORS, and PA-TRICIANS.

Cor. Tullus Aufidius then had made new head?

Lart. He had, my lord; and that it was, which caus'd

Our swifter composition.

Cor. So then the Volscies stand but as at first;
Ready, when time shall prompt them, to make Upon us again. [road

* Object. † Carriage. ‡ Weighing. § Incitation.
|| Advantage. ¶ Driven.

Com. They are worn, lord consul, so,
That we shall hardly in our ages see
Their banners wave again.

Cor. Saw you Aufidius?

Lart. On safe-guard* he came to me; and did curse
Against the Volscas, for they had so vilely
Yielded the town: he is retir'd to Antium.

Cor. Spoke he of me?

Lart. He did, my lord.

Cor. How? what?

Lart. How often he had met you, sword to sword:
That, of all things upon the earth, he hated
Your person most: that he would pawn his fortunes
To hopeless restitution, so he might
Be call'd your vanquisher.

Mar. At Antium lives he?

Lart. At Antium.

Cor. I wish I had a cause to seek him there,
To oppose his hatred fully.—Welcome home.

[To LARTIUS.]

Enter SICINIUS and BRUTUS.

Behold! these are the tribunes of the people,
The tongues o'the common mouth. I do despise
them:

For they do prank† them in authority,
Against all noble sufferance.

Sic. Pass no further.

Cor. Ha! what is that?

Bru. It will be dangerous to Go on: no further.

Cor. What makes this change?

Men. The matter?

Com. Hath he not pass'd the nobles, and the commons?

Bru. Cominius, no.

Cor. Have I had children's voices?

1 Sen. Tribunes, give way; he shall to the market-place.

Bru. The people are incens'd against him.

Sic. Stop,
Or all will fall in broil.

Cor. Are these your herd?—
Must these have voices, that can yield them
now,
And straight disclaim their tongues?—What are your offices?
You being their mouths, why rule you not their teeth?

Have you not set them on?

Men. Be calm, be calm.

Cor. It is a purpos'd thing, and grows by plot,
To curb the will of the nobility:—
Suffer it, and live with such as cannot rule,
Nor ever will be rul'd.

Bru. Call't not a plot:

The people cry, you mock'd them; and, of late,
When corn was given them gratis, you repin'd;
Scandal'd the suppliants for the people; call'd
them

Time-pleasers, flatterers, foes to nobleness.

Cor. Why, this was known before.

Bru. Not to them all.

Cor. Have you inform'd them since?

Bru. How! I inform them!

Cor. You are like to do such business.

Bru. Not unlike,
Each way to better yours.

Cor. Why then should I be consul? By you
clouds,
Let me deserve so ill as you, and make me
Your fellow-tribune.

Sic. You show too much of that,
For which the people stir: If you will pass
To where you are bound, you must inquire your way,

Which you are out of, with a gentler spirit;
Or never be so noble as a consul,
Nor yoke with him for tribune.

Men. Let's be calm.

* With a guard.

† Plume, deck.

Com. The people are abus'd:—Set on.—This palt'ring*

Becomes not Rome; nor has Coriolanus
Deserv'd this so dishonour'd rub, laid falsely†
I'the plain way of his merit.

Cor. Tell me of corn!

This was my speech, and I will speak't again;—

Men. Not now, not now.

1 Sen. Not in this heat, Sir, now.

Cor. Now, as I live, I will.—My noble friends,
I crave their pardons:—

For the mutable, rank-scented many,‡ let them
Regard me as I do not flatter, and Therein behold themselves: I say again,
In soothing them, we nourish 'gainst our senate
The cockle§ of rebellion, insolence, sedition,
Which we ourselves have plough'd for, sow'd and scatter'd,

By mingling them with us, the honour'd number;
Who lack not virtue, no, nor power, but that
Which they have given to beggars.

Men. Well, no more.

1 Sen. No more words, we beseech you.

Cor. How! no more?

As for my country I have shed my blood
Not fearing outward force, so shall my lungs Coin words till their decay, against those mea-zels,||

Which we disdain should tetter¶ us, yet sought
The very way to catch them.

Bru. You speak o'the people,
As if you were a god to punish, not
A man of their infirmity.

Sic. 'Twere well,
We let the people know't.

Men. What, what? his choler?

Cor. Choler!

Were I as patient as the midnight sleep,
By Jove, 'twould be my mind.

Sic. It is a mind,
That shall remain a poison where it is,
Not poison any further.

Cor. Shall remain!—

Hear you this Triton of the minnows?  mark
His absolute shall? [you

Com. 'Twas from the canon. ††

Cor. Shall!

O good but most unwise patricians, why,
You grave, but reckless †† senators, have you thus Given Hydra here to choose an officer,
That with his peremptory shall, being but
The horn and noise o'the monsters, wants not spirit

To say, he'll turn your current in a ditch,
And make your channel his? If he have power,
Then veil your ignorance: if none, awake
Your dangerous lenity. If you are learned,
Be not as common fools; if you are not,
Let them have cushions by you. You are plebeians,

If they be senators: and they are no less,
When both your voices blended, the greatest taste [trate;

Most palates theirs. They choose their magis-
And such a one as he, who puts his shall,
His popular shall, against a graver beuch
Than ever frown'd in Greece! By Jove himself,
It makes the consuls base: and my soul akes
To know, when two authorities are up,
Neither supreme, how soon confusion
May enter 'twixt the gap of both, and take
The one by the other.

Com. Well—on to the market-place.

Cor. Whoever gave that counsel, to give forth
The corn o'the storehouse gratis, as 'twas us'd
Sometime in Greece,—

Men. Well, well, no more of that.

Cor. (Though there the people had more absolute power,)

I say, they nourish'd disobedience, fed
The ruin of the state.

* Shuffling.

† Treacherously.

‡ Populace.

§ Cockle is a weed which grows up with corn.

|| Lapers.

¶ Scab.

 The smallest fish.

†† According to law.

‡‡ Thoughtless.

Brw. Why, shall the people give
One, that speaks thus, their voice?

Cor. I'll give my reasons,
More worthier than their voices. They know,
the corn

Was not our recompence; resting well assur'd
They ne'er did service for't: Being press'd to the war,

Even when the navel of the state was touch'd,
They would not thread * the gates: this kind of service

Did not deserve corn gratis: being i'the war,
Their mutinies and revolts, wherein they show'd
Most valour, spoke not for them: The accusation

Which they have often made against the senate,
All cause unborn, could never be the native +
Of our so frank donation. Well, what then?
How shall this bosom multiplied digest
The senate's courtesy? Let deeds express What's like to be their words:—We did request
it;

*We are the greater poll, † and in true fear
They gave us our demands:—*Thus we debase
The nature of our seats, and make the rabble
Call our cares, fears: which will in time break ope

The locks o'the senate, and bring in the crows
To peck the eagles.—

Men. Come, enough.

Brw. Enough, with over-measure.

Cor. No, take more:

What may be sworn by, both divine and human,
Seal what I end withal!—This double worship—
Where one part does disdain with cause, the other [wisdom

Insult without all reason; where gentry, title,
Cannot conclude, but by the yea and no
Of general ignorance,—It must omit
Real necessities, and give way the while
To unstable slightness: purpose so barr'd, it follows,

Nothing is done to purpose: Therefore, beseech
you,—

You that will be less fearful than discreet;
That love the fundamental part of state,
More than you doubt ‡ the change o'f't; that prefer

A noble life before a long, and wish
To jump § a body with a dangerous physic
That's sure of death without it,—at once pluck
out

The multitudinous tongue, let them not lick
The sweet which is their poison: your dishonour
Mangles true judgment, and bereaves the state
Of that integrity which should become it;
Not having the power to do the good it would,
For the ill which doth control it.

Brw. He has said enough.

Sic. He has spoken like a traitor, and shall answer
As traitors do.

Cor. Thou wretch! despite o'erwhelm thee!—
What should the people do with these bald tribunes?

On whom depending, their obedience fails
To the greater bench: In a rebellion,
When what's not meet, but what must be, was
law,

Then were they chosen: in a better hour,
Let what is meet, be said it must be meet,
And throw their power i'the dust.

Brw. Manifest treason.

Sic. This a consul? no.

Brw. The Ædiles, ho!—Let him be apprehended.

Sic. Go, call the people; [Exit BRUTUS.] In whose name, myself

Attach thee, as a traitorous innovator,
A foe to the public weal: Obey, I charge thee,
And follow to thine answer.

Cor. Hence, old goat!

Sen. & Pat. We'll surety him.

Com. Aged Sir, hands off.

Cor. Hence, rotten thing, or I shall shake thy bones
Out of thy garments.

Sic. Help, ye citizens.

Re-enter BRUTUS, with the ÆDILES, and a Rabble of CITIZENS.

Men. On both sides more respect.

Sic. Here's he, that would Take from you all your power.

Brw. Seize him, Ædiles.

Cit. Down with him, down with him!

[Several speak.

2 Sen. Weapons, weapons, weapons!

[They all bustle about CORIOLANUS.

*Tribunes, patricians, citizens!—*what ho!

Sicinius, Brutus, Coriolanus, citizens!

Cit. Peace, peace, peace; stay, hold, peace!

Men. What is about to be?—I am out of breath: [bunes

Confusion's near: I cannot speak:—You, tri-
To the people,—Coriolanus, patience:—
Speak, good Sicinius.

Sic. Hear me, people;—Peace.

Cit. Let's hear our tribune:—Peace. Speak, speak, speak.

Sic. You are at point to lose your liberties:
Marcus would have all from you; Marcus,
Whom late you have nam'd for consul.

Men. Fie, fie, fie!

This is the way to kindle, not to quench.

1 Sen. To unbuild the city, and to lay all flat.

Sic. What is the city, but the people?

Cit. True,

The people are the city.

Brw. By the consent of all, we were establish'd
The people's magistrates.

Cit. You so remain.

Men. And so are like to do.

Cor. That is the way to lay the city flat;
To bring the roof to the foundation;
And bury all, which yet distinctly ranges,
In heaps and piles of ruins.

Sic. This deserves death.

Brw. Or let us stand to our authority,
Or let us lose it:—We do here pronounce,
Upon the part o'the people, in whose power
We were elected theirs, Marcus is worthy
Of present death.

Sic. Therefore, lay hold of him;
Bear him to the rock Tarpeian,* and from thence
Into destruction cast him.

Brw. Ædiles, seize him.

Cit. Yield, Marcus, yield.

Men. Hear me one word.

'Beseech you, tribunes, hear me but a word.

Ædi. Peace, peace.

Men. Be that you seem, truly your country's friend,

And temperately proceed to what you would Thus violently redress.

Brw. Sir, those cold ways,
That seem like prudent helps, are very poisonous
Where the disease is violent:—Lay hands upon
And bear him to the rock. [him,

Cor. No: I'll die here. [Drawing his Sword.
There's some among you have beheld me fighting; [me.

Come, try upon yourselves what you have seen Men. Down with that sword,—Tribunes, withdraw a while.

Brw. Lay hands upon him.

Men. Help, Marcus! help,

You that be noble; help him, young and old!

Cit. Down with him, down with him!

[In this Mutiny, the TRIBUNES, the ÆDILES, and the People are all beat in.

Men. Go, get you to your house; be gone,
All will be naught else. [away,

2 Sen. Get you gone.

* Path through.

† Number.

‡ The natural parent, or, the cause.

§ Fear.

¶ To violently agitate.

* From whence criminals were thrown, and dashed to pieces.

Cor. Stand fast ;
We have as many friends as enemies.

Men. Shall it be put to that ?

1 Sen. The gods forbid !
I pr'ythee, noble friend, home to thy house :
Leave us to cure this canse.

Men. For 'tis a sore upon us, [you.
You cannot tent yourself : Be gone, 'beseech

Com. Come, Sir, along with us.

Cor. I would they were barbarians, (as they are,
Though in Rome litter'd,) not Romans, (as they are not,

Though call'd l'the porch o'the Capitol,)—

Men. Be gone ;

Put not your worthy rage into your tongue :
One time will owe another.

Cor. On fair ground,
I could beat forty of them.

Men. I could myself
Take up a brace of the best of them ; yea, the two tribunes.

Com. But now 'tis odds beyond arithmetic ;
And manhood is call'd foolery, when it stands
Against a falling fabric.—Will you hence,
Before the tag * return ? whose rage doth rend
Like interrupted waters, and o'erbear
What they are used to bear.

Men. Pray you, be gone :
I'll try whether my old wit be in request
With those that have but little : this must be
With cloth of any colour. [patch'd

Com. Nay, come away.

[Exeunt Cor. Com. and others.

1 Pat. This man has marr'd his fortune.

Men. His nature is too noble for the world :
He would not flatter Neptune for his trident,
Or Jove for his power to thunder. His heart's his mouth : [vent ;

What his breast forges, that his tongue must
And being angry, does forget that ever
He heard the name of death. [A noise within.
Here's goodly work !

2 Pat. I would they were a-bed !

Men. I would they were in Tyber !—What, the vengeance,
Could he not speak them fair ?

Re-enter BRUTUS and SICINIUS, with the Rabble.

Sic. Where's this viper,
That would depopulate the city, and
Be every man himself ?

Men. You worthy tribunes,—

Sic. He shall be thrown down the Tarpeian rock
With rigorous hands ; he hath resisted law,
And therefore law shall scorn him further trial
Than the severity of the public power,
Which he so sets at nought.

1 Cit. He shall well know,
The noble tribunes are the people's mouths,
And we their hands.

Cit. He shall sure on't. †

[Several speak together.

Men. Sir,—

Sic. Peace.

Men. Do not cry, havoc, ‡ where you should but hunt
With modest warrant.

Sic. Sir, how comes it, that you
Have help to make this rescue ?

Men. Hear me speak :—
As I do know the consul's worthiness,
So can I name his faults :—

Sic. Consul !—what consul ?

Men. The consul Coriolanus.

Brw. He a consul !

Cit. No, no, no, no, no.

Men. If, by the tribunes' leave, and yours,
good people,
I may be heard, I'd crave a word or two ;

The which shall turn you to no further harm,
Than so much loss of time.

Sic. Speak briefly then ;

For we are peremptory to despatch
This viperous traitor : to eject him hence,
Were but one danger ; and, to keep him here,
Our certain death ; therefore it is decreed,
He dies to-night.

Men. Now the good gods forbid
That our renowned Rome, whose gratitude
Towards her deserved * children is enroll'd
In Jove's own book, like an unnatural dam
Should now eat up her own !

Sic. He's a disease, that must be cut away.

Men. Oh ! he's a limb, that has but a disease ;
Mortal, to cut it off ; to cure it, easy.
What has he done to Rome, that's worthy death ?
Killing our enemies ? The blood he hath lost,
(Which, I dare vouch, is more than that he hath,
By many an ounce,) he dropp'd it for his coun-
And, what is left, to lose it by his country, [try :
Were to us all, that do't, and suffer it,
A brand to the end o'the world.

Sic. This is clean kam. †

Brw. Merely ‡ awry : when he did love his country,
It honour'd him.

Men. The service of the foot,
Being once gangren'd, is not then respected
For what before it was ?

Brw. We'll hear no more :—
Pursue him to his house, and pluck him thence ;
Lest his infection, being of catching nature,
Spread farther.

Men. One word more, one word.
This tiger-footed rage, when it shall find
The harm of uncan'd § swiftness, will, too late,
Tie leaden pounds to his heels. Proceed by process ;

Lest parties (as he is belov'd) break out,
And sack great Rome with Romans.

Brw. If it were so,—

Sic. What do ye talk ?
Have we not had a taste of his obedience ?
Our Ædiles smote ? ourselves resisted ?—Come :—

Men. Consider this :—He has been bred l'the wars

Since he could draw a sword, and is ill school'd
In boulded || language ; meal and bran together
He throws without distinction. Give me leave,
I'll go to him, and undertake to bring him
Where he shall answer, by a lawful form,
(In peace) to his utmost peril.

1 Sen. Noble tribunes,
It is the humane way : the other course
Will prove too bloody ; and the end of it
Unknown to the beginning.

Sic. Noble Menenius,
Be you then as the people's officer :
Masters, lay down your weapons.

Brw. Go not home.

Sic. Meet on the market-place :—We'll attend
you there :

Where, if you bring not Marcius, we'll proceed in our first way.

Men. I'll bring him to you :—
Let me desire your company. [To the SENATORS.
He must come,
Or what is worst will follow.

1 Sen. Pray you, let's to him. [Exeunt.

SCENE II.—A Room in CORIOLANUS'S
House.

Enter CORIOLANUS and PATRICIANS.

Cor. Let them pull all about mine ears ; present me
Death on the wheel, or at wild horses' heels ;
Or pile ten hills on the Tarpeian rock,
That the precipitation might down stretch,
Below the beam of sight, yet will I still
Be thus to them.

* The lowest of the populace, tag, rag, and bobtail.
† Be sure on't. ‡ The signal for slaughter.

§ Deserving. † Quits awry. ‡ Absolutely.
§ Inconsiderate haste. † Finely suited.

Enter VOLUMNIA.I Pat. You do the nobler.

Cor. I muse,* my mother
Does not approve me further, who was wont
To call them woollen vassals, things created
To buy and sell with groats; to show bare heads
In congregations, to yawn, be still, and wonder,
When one but of my ordinance † stood up
To speak of peace or war. I talk of you:

[To VOLUMNIA.]

Why did you wish me milder? Would you have
me

False to my nature? Rather say, I play
The man I am.

Vol. O Sir, Sir, Sir,
I would have had you put your power well on.
Before you had worn it out.

Cor. Let go.

Vol. You might have been enough the man you are,
With striving less to be so: Lesser had been
The thwartings of your dispositions, if
You had not show'd them how you were dispos'd
Ere they lack'd power to cross you.

Cor. Let them hang.Vol. Ay, and burn too.Enter MENENIUS and SENATORS.

Men. Come, come, you have been too rough,
something too rough;
You must return, and mend it.

I Sen. There's no remedy;
Unless, by not so doing, our good city
Cleave in the midst, and perish.

Vol. Pray be counsel'd:
I have a heart as little apt as yours,
But yet a brain, that lends my use of anger
To better vantage.

Men. Well said, noble woman:
Before he should thus stoop to the herd, but that
The violent fit o'the time craves it as physic
For the whole state, I would put mine armour on Which I can scarcely bear.

Cor. What must I do?Men. Return to the tribunes.

Cor. Well,
What then? what then?

Men. Repent what you have spoke.

Cor. For them?—I cannot do it to the gods;
Must I then do't to them?

Vol. You are too absolute;
Though therein you can never be too noble,
But when extremities speak. I have heard you say,

Honour and policy, like unsever'd friends
I'the war do grow together: Grant that, and tell
me,

In peace, what each of them by th'other lose,
That they combine not there.

Cor. Tush, tush!Men. A good demand.

Vol. If it be honour, in your wars, to seem
The same you are not, (which, for your best ends,
You adopt your policy,) how is it less, or worse,
That it shall hold companionship in peace
With honour, as in war; since that to both
It stands in like request?

Cor. Why force ‡ you this?

Vol. Because that now it lies you on to speak
To the people; not by our own instruction,
Nor by the matter which your heart prompts you to,

But with such words that are but rotes in
Your tongue, though but bastards, and syllables
Of no allowance, to your bosom's truth.
Now, this no more dishonours you at all,
Than to take in § a town with gentle words,
Which else would put you to your fortune, and
The hazard of much blood.—

I would dissemble with my nature, where
My fortunes, and my friends, at stake, requir'd
I should do so in honour: I am, in this,
Your wife, your son, these senators, the nobles;

And you will rather show our general lowts*
How you can frown, than spend a fawn upon
them,

For the inheritance of their loves, and safeguard
Of what that want might ruin.

Men. Noble lady!—

Come, go with us; speak fair: you may salve so,
Not what is dangerous present, but the loss
Of what is past.

Vol. I prythee now, my son,
Go to them, with this bonnet in thy hand;
And thus far having stretch'd it (here be with
them,)

Thy knee bussing the stones, for in such business

Action is eloquence, and the eyes of the [rant
More learned than the ears,] waving thy head,

Which often, thus, correcting thy stout heart,

That humble, as the ripest mulberry,

Now will not hold the handling: Or, say to them,

Thou art their soldier, and, being bred in broils,

Hast not the soft way which, thou dost confess,

Were fit for thee to use, as they to claim,

In asking their good loves; but thou wilt frame

Thyself, forsooth, hereafter theirs, so far

As thou hast power and person.

Men. This but done,
Even as she speaks, why, all their hearts were yours:

For they have pardons, being ask'd, as free
As words to little purpose.

Vol. Prythee now,
Go, and be rul'd: although, I know, thou hadst
rather

Follow thine enemy in a fiery gulf,
Than flatter him in a bower. Here is Cominius.

Enter COMINIUS.

Com. I have been i'the market-place: and,
Sir, tis fit

You make strong party, or defend yourself
By calmness, or by absence: all's in anger.

Men. Only fair speech.

Com. I think 'twill serve, if he
Can thereto frame his spirit.

Vol. He must, and will:—

Prythee, now, say you will, and go about it.
Cor. Must I go show them my unbarb'd sconce? † Must I,

With my base tongue, give to my noble heart

A lie that it must bear? Well, I will do't:
Yet were there but this single plot to lose,

This mould of Marcius, they to dust should grind it, [place:—

And throw it against the wind.—To the market-
You have put me now to such a part, which never

I shall discharge to the life.
Com. Come, come, we'll prompt you.

Vol. I prythee now, sweet son, as thou hast said,

My praises made thee first a soldier, so
To have my praise for this, perform a part

Thou hast not done before.
Cor. Well, I must do't:

Away, my disposition, and possess me
Some harlot's spirit! My throat of war be turn'd,

Which quired with my drum, into a pipe
Small as an eunuch, or the virgin voice

That babies lulls asleep! The smiles of knaves Tent ‡ in my cheeks; and school-boy's tears take

The glasses of my sight! A beggar's tongue [up Make motion through my lips; and my arm'd

knees,
Which bow'd but in my stirrup, bend like his

That hath receiv'd an alms!—I will not do't:
Lest I surcease to honour mine own truth,

And, by my body's action, teach my mind
A most inherent baseness.

Vol. At thy choice then:
To beg of thee, it is my more dishonour,

Than thou of them. Come all to ruin: let Thy mother rather feel thy pride, than fear

Thy dangerous stoutness; for I mock at death

* Wonder. † Rank. ‡ Urge. § Subdue.

* Common clown. † Unshaven head. ‡ Dwell
D

With as big heart as thou. Do as thou list.
Thy valiantness was mine, thou suck'dst it from
But owe^e thy pride thyself. [me ;

Cor. Pray, be content :

Mother, I am going to the market-place ;
Chide me no more. I'll mountebank their loves, Cog their hearts from them, and come home be-lov'd

Of all the trades in Rome. Look, I am going :
Commend me to my wife. I'll return consul ;
Or never trust to what my tongue can do
I'the way of flattery, further.

Vol. Do your will. [Exit.

Com. Away, the tribunes do attend you : arm yourself

To answer mildly ; for they are prepar'd
With accusations, as I hear, more strong
Than are upon you yet.

Cor. The word is mildly :—Pray you, let us
Let them accuse me by invention, I [go :
Will answer in mine honour.

Men. Ay, but mildly.

Cor. Well, mildly be it then : mildly.

[Exeunt.

SCENE III.—The same.—The Forum.

Enter SICINIUS and BRUTUS.

Bru. In this point charge him home—that he affects

Tyrannical power : if he evade us there,
Enforce him with his envy † to the people ;
And that the spoil, got on the Antistates,
Was ne'er distributed.—

Enter an ÆDILE.

What, will he come !

Æd. He's coming.

Bru. How accompanied ?

Æd. With old Menenius, and those senators
That always favour'd him.

Sic. Have you a catalogue
Of all the voices that we have procur'd
Set down by the poll ?

Æd. I have : 'tis ready, here.

Sic. Have you collected them by tribes ?

Æd. I have.

Sic. Assemble presently the people hither :
And when they hear me say, It shall be so
I'the right and strength o'the commons, be it either

For death, for fine, or banishment, then let them,
If I say fine, cry fine ; if death, cry death ;
Insisting on the old prerogative
And power i'the truth o'the cause.

Æd. I shall inform them.

Bru. And when such time they have begun to cry,

Let them not cease, but with a din confus'd
Enforce the present execution
Of what we chance to sentence.

Æd. Very well.

Sic. Make them be strong, and ready for this hint,

When we shall hap to give't them.

Bru. Go about it.— [Exit ÆDILE.

Put him to choler straight : He hath been us'd
Ever to conquer, and to have his worth
Of contradiction : Being once chaf'd, he cannot Be rein'd again to temperance ; then he speaks
What's in his heart ; and that is there, which looks
With us to break his neck.

Enter CORIOLANUS, MENENIUS, COMINIUS,
SENATORS, and PATRICIANS.

Sic. Well, here he comes.

Men. Calmly, I do beseech you.

Cor. Ay, as an ostler, that for the poorest piece

Will bear the knave ‡ by the volume.—The honour'd gods

Keep Rome in safety, and the chairs of justice

* Own. † Accuse him of his hatred.
‡ Will bear being called a knave.

Supplied with worthy men ! plant love among us !
Throng our large temples with the shows of peace,
And not our streets with war !

I Sen. Amen, amen !

Men. A noble wish.

Re-enter ÆDILE, with CITIZENS.

Sic. Draw near, ye people.

Æd. List to your tribunes : audience : Peace,
I say.

Cor. First, hear me speak.

Both Tri. Well, say.—Peace, ho.

Cor. Shall I be charg'd no further than this present ?

Must all determine ?

Sic. I do demand here,

If you submit you to the people's voices,
Allow their officers, and are content
To suffer lawful censure for such faults
As shall be prov'd upon you ?

Cor. I am content.

Men. Lo, citizens, he says, he is content :
The warlike service he has done, consider ;
Think on the wounds his body bears, which show
Like graves i'the holy churchyard.

Cor. Scratches with briers.

Scars to move laughter only.

Men. Consider further,

That when he speaks not like a citizen,
You find him like a soldier : Do not take
His rougher accents for malicious sounds,
But, as I say, such as become a soldier,
Rather than envy^e you.

Com. Well, well, no more.

Cor. What is the matter,
That being pass'd for consul with full voice,
I am so dishonour'd, that the very hour
You take it off again ?

Sic. Answer to us.

Cor. Say then : 'tis true, I ought so.

Sic. We charge you, that you have contriv'd to take

From Rome all season'd † office, and to wind
Yourself into a power tyrannical ;

For which, you are a traitor to the people.

Cor. How ! Traitor ?

Men. Nay, temperately : Your promise.

Cor. The fires i'the lowest hell fold in the people !

Call me their traitor.—Thou injurious tribune !
Within thine eyes sat twenty thousand deaths,
In thy hands clutch'd ‡ as many millions, in Thy lying tongue both numbers, I would say,
Thou liest, unto thee, with voice as free
As I do pray the gods.

Sic. Mark you this, people ?

Cit. To the rock with him ! to the rock with
him !

Sic. Peace.

We need not put new matter to his charge :
What you have seen him do, and heard him speak,
Beating your officers, cursing yourselves,
Opposing laws with strokes, and here defying
Those whose great power must try him ; even
So criminal, and in such capital kind, [this,
Deserves the extremest death.

Bru. But since he hath Serv'd well for Rome,—

Cor. What ! do you prate of service ?

Bru. I talk of that, that know it.

Cor. You ?

Men. Is this

The promise that you made your mother ?

Com. Know,

I pray you,—

Cor. I'll know no further :

Let them pronounce the steep Tarpeian death -
Vagabond exile, flaying ; pent to linger
But with a grain a day ; I would not buy
Their mercy at the price of one fair word,
Nor check my courage for what they can give.
To hav't with saying, Good morrow.

Sic. For that he has

* Injure. † Of long standing. ‡ Grasp'd.

(As much as in him lies) from time to time
 Envied against the people, seeking means
 To pluck away their power : as now at last Given hostile strokes, and that not in the presence
 Of dreaded justice, but on the ministers
 That do distribute it—in the name o' the people,
 And in the power of us the tribunes, we,
 Even from this instant, banish him our city ;
 In peril of precipitation
 From off the rock Tarpeian, never more
 To enter our Rome gates : I' the people's name,
 I say it shall be so.

Cit. It shall be so,
 It shall be so ; let him away : he's banish'd ;
 And so it shall be.

Com. Hear me, my masters, and my common
 friends—

Sic. He's sentenc'd : no more hearing

Com. Let me speak :

I have been consul, and can show from * Rome,
 Her enemies' marks upon me. I do love
 My country's good, with a respect more tender,
 More holy, and profound, than mine own life,
 My dear wife's estimate, † her womb's increase,
 And treasure of my loins ; then if I would Speak that—

Sic. We know your drift : Speak what !

Bru. There's no more to be said, but he is banish'd,

As enemy to the people and his country :
 It shall be so.

Cit. It shall be so, it shall be so.

Cor. You common cry ; of curs ! whose breath
 I hate

As reek ‡ o' the rotten fens, whose love I prize
 As the dead carcasses of unburied men
 That do corrupt my air, I banish you ;
 And here remain with your uncertainty !
 Let every feeble rumour shake your hearts !
 Your enemies, with nodding of their plumes,
 Fan you into despair ! Have the power still
 To banish your defenders ; till, at length,
 Your ignorance (which finds not till it feels,)
 Making not reservation of yourselves,
 (Still your own foes,) deliver you, as most Abused § captives, to some nation
 That won you without blows ! Despising,
 For you, the city, thus I turn my back :
 There is a world elsewhere.

[Exeunt CORIOLANUS, COMINIUS, MENENIUS,
 SENATORS, and PATRICIANS,

Ed. The people's enemy is gone, is gone !

Cit. Our enemy's banish'd ! he is gone ! Hoo !
 hoo !

[The people shout and throw up their Caps.

Sic. Go, see him out at gates, and follow him !
 As he hath follow'd you, with all despite :
 Give him deserv'd vexation. Let a guard
 Attend us through the city.

Cit. Come, come, let us see him out at gates ;
 come :—

The gods preserve our noble tribunes !—Come.
 [Exeunt.

ACT IV.

SCENE I.—The same.—Before a Gate of the City.

Enter CORIOLANUS, VOLUMNIA, VIRGILIA,
 MENENIUS, COMINIUS, and several young PATRICIANS.

Cor. Come, leave your tears ; a brief farewell :
 —the best ¶

With many heads butts me away.—Nay, mother,
 Where is your ancient courage ? you were us'd
 To say, extremity was the trier of spirits ;
 That common chances common men could bear ;
 That, when the sea was calm, all boats alike
 Show'd mastership in floating : fortune's blows,
 When most struck home, being gentle wounded,
 craves

A noble cunning : you were us'd to lead me
 With precepts, that would make invincible
 The heart that cou'd them.

Vir. O heavens ! O heavens !

Cor. Nay, I pr'ythee, woman,—

Vol. Now the red pestilence strike all trades in Rome,

And occupations perish !

Cor. What, what, what !

I shall be lov'd when I am lack'd. Nay, mother,
 Resume that spirit, when you were wont to say,
 If you had been the wife of Hercules,
 Six of his labours you'd have done, and sav'd
 Your husband so much sweat.—Cominius, Droop not ; adieu :—Farewell, my wife ! my mother !

I'll do well yet.—Thou old and true Menenius,
 Thy tears are saltier than a younger man's,
 And venomous to thine eyes.—My sometime
 general,

I have seen thee stern, and thou hast oft beheld
 Heart-hard'ning spectacles : tell these sad women,
 'Tis fond * to wall inevitable strokes, [well,
 As 'tis to laugh at them.—My mother, you wot
 My hazards still have been your solace : and Believe't not lightly, (though I go alone,
 Like to a lonely dragon, that his den Makes fear'd) and talk'd of more than seen your
 son

Will, or exceed the common, or be caught
 With cautelous † baits and practice.

Vol. My first ‡ son,

Whither wilt thou go ? Take good Cominius
 With thee a while : Determine on some course,
 More than a wild exposure § to each chance,
 That starts I' the way before thee.

Cor. O the gods !

Com. I'll follow thee a month, devise with thee Where thou shalt rest, that thou may'st hear of
 us,

And we of thee ; so, if the time thrust forth
 A cause for thy repeal, we shall not schd
 O'er the vast world, to seek a single man ;
 And lose advantage, which doth ever cool
 I' the absence of the needer.

Cor. Fare ye well :—

[Full
 Thou hast years upon thee ; and thou art too
 Of the wars' surfeit, to go rove with one
 That's yet unbruil'd : bring me but out at gate.—
 Come, my sweet wife, my dearest mother, and
 My friends of noble touch, ¶ when I am forth,
 Bid me farewell, and smile. I pray you, come.
 While I remain above the ground, you shall Hear from me still ; and never of me aught
 But what is like me formerly.

Men. That's worthily

As any ear can hear.—Come, let's not weep.—
 If I could shake off but one seven years
 From these old arms and legs, by the good gods,
 I'd with thee every foot.

Cor. Give me thy hand :—

Come.

[Exeunt.

SCENE II.—The same.—A Street near the Gate.

Enter SICINIUS, BRUTUS, and an EDILE.

Sic. Bid them all home : he's gone, and we'll no farther.—

The nobility are vex'd, who, we see, have sided
 in his behalf.

Bru. Now we have shown our power,
 Let us seem humbler after it is done,
 Than when it was a doing.

Sic. Bid them home :

Say their great enemy is gone, and they Stand in their ancient strength.

Bru. Dismiss them home. [Exit EDILE.

Enter VOLUMNIA, VIRGILIA, and MENENIUS.
 Here comes his mother.

Sic. Let's not meet her.

* For. † Value. ‡ Pack. § Vapour.
 ¶ Subind. ¶ The government of the people.

* Foolish. † Insidious. ‡ Noblest.
 ¶ Exposure. ¶ True metal.

Brw. Why?

Sic. They say, she's mad.

Brw. They have ta'en note of us :
Keep on your way.

Vol. Oh ! you're well met : The boarded plague o'the gods
Requite your love !

Men. Peace, peace : be not so loud.

Vol. If that I could for weeping, you should hear,—

Nay, and you shall hear some.—Will you be gone ?
[To BRUTUS.]

Vir. You shall stay too ; [To SICIN.] I would
I had the power
To say so to my husband.

Sic. Are you mankind ?

Vol. Ay, fool ; is that a shame ?—Note but this fool.—

Was not a man my father ? Hadst thou foxship *
To banish him that struck more blows for Rome,
Than thou hast spoken words ?

Sic. O blessed heavens !

Vol. More noble blows, than ever thou wise words ;

And for Rome's good.—I'll tell thee what ;—
Yet go :—

Nay but thou shalt stay too :—I would my son
Were in Arabia, and thy tribe before him,
His good sword in his hand.

Sic. What then ?

Vir. What then ?

He'd make an end of thy posterity.

Vol. Bastards, and all.—

Good man, the wounds that he does bear for Rome !

Men. Come, come, peace.

Sic. I would he had continu'd to his country
As he began ; and not unknit himself
The noble knot he made.

Brw. I would he had.

Vol. I would he had ! 'Twas you incens'd the
rabble :

Oats, that can judge as fitly of his worth,
As I can of those mysteries which heaven will not have earth to know.

Brw. Pray, let us go.

Vol. Now pray, Sir, get you gone :

You have done a brave deed. Ere you go, hear
this :

As far as doth the Capitol exceed
The meanest house in Rome, so far my son,
(This lady's husband here, this, do you see,) Whom you have banish'd, does exceed you all.

Brw. Well, well, we'll leave you.

Sic. Why stay we to be baited
With one that wants her wits ?

Vol. Take my prayers with you.—

I would the gods had nothing else to do,
[Exeunt TRIBUNES.]

But to confirm my curses ! Could I meet them
But once a day, it would unclog my heart
Of what lies heavy to't.

Men. You have told them home,
And by my troth, you have caus'd. You'll sup
with me ?

Vol. Anger's my meat : I sup upon myself,
And so shall starve with feeding.—Come let's go :
Leave this faint pining, and lament as I do,
In anger, Juno-like. Come, come, come.

Men. Fie, fie, fie ! [Exeunt.]

SCENE III.—A highway between Rome and Antium.

Enter a ROMAN and a VOLSC, meeting.

Rom. I know you well, Sir, and you know me :
your name, I think, is Adrian.

Vol. It is so, Sir : truly, I have forgot you.

Rom. I am a Roman ; and my services are,
as you are, against them : Know you me yet ?

Vol. Nicanor ? No.

Rom. The same, Sir.

Vol. You had more beard, when I last saw you ; but your favour * is well appeared by your tongue. What's the news in Rome ? I have a note from the Volscian state, to find you out there :

You have well saved me a day's journey.

Rom. There hath been in Rome strange insurrection : the people against the senators, patricians, and nobles.

Vol. Hath been ! Is it ended then ? Our state thinks not so ; they are in a most warlike preparation, and hope to come upon them in the heat of their division.

Rom. The main blaze of it is past, but a small thing would make it flame again. For the nobles receive so to heart the banishment of that worthy Coriolanus, that they are in a ripe aptness to take all power from the people, and to pluck from them their tribunes for ever. This lies glowing I can tell you, and is almost mature for the violent breaking out.

Vol. Coriolanus banished ?

Rom. Banished, Sir.

Vol. You will be welcome with this intelligence, Nicanor.

Rom. The day serves well for them now. I have heard it said, the fittest time to corrupt a man's wife, is when she's fallen out with her husband. Your noble Tullus Aufidius will appear well in these wars, his great opposer, Coriolanus, being now in no request of his country.

Vol. He cannot choose. I am most fortunate thus accidentally to encounter you : You have ended my business, and I will merrily accompany you home.

Rom. I shall, between this and supper, tell you most strange things from Rome ; all tending to the good of their adversaries. Have you an army ready, say you ?

Vol. A most royal one : the centurions and their charges distinctly billeted, already in the entertainment, † and to be on foot at an hour's warning.

Rom. I am joyful to hear of their readiness, and am the man, I think, that shall set them in present action. So, Sir, heartily well met, and most glad of your company.

Vol. You take my part from me, Sir ; I have the most cause to be glad of yours.

Rom. Well, let us go together. [Exeunt.]

SCENE IV.—Antium.—Before AUFIDIUS'S
House.

Enter CORIOLANUS, in mean apparel, disguised and muffled.

Cor. A goodly city is this Antium : City,
'Tis I that made thy widows : many an heir
Of these fair edifices 'fore my wars
Have I heard groan, and drop : then know me not Lest that thy wives with spits, and boys with stones,

Enter a CITIZEN.

In puny battle slay me.—Save you, Sir.

Cit. And you.

Cor. Direct me, if it be your will,
Where great Aufidius lies : Is he in Antium ?

Cit. He is, and feasts the nobles of the state
At his house this night.

Cor. Which is his house, 'beseech you ?

Cit. This, here, before you.

Cor. Thank you, Sir : farewell.

[Exit CITIZEN.]

O world, thy slippery turns ! Friends now fast sworn,
Whose double bosoms seem to wear one heart,
Whose hours, whose bed, whose meal, and exercise,

Are still together, who twin, as 'twere, in love
Unseparable, shall within this hour,
On a dissension of a doit, * break out
To bitterest enmity : So, fellest foes, Whose passions and whose plots have broke their sleep

* Mean cunning

* Countenance.

† In pay.

‡ A small coin.

To take the one the other, by some chance,
Some trick not worth an egg, shall grow dear
friends,
And interjoin their issues. So with me :
My birth-place hate I, and my love's upon
This enemy town. I'll enter : if he slay me,
He does fair justice, if he give me way,
I'll do his country service. [Exit.]

SCENE V.—The same.—A hall in AUFIDIUS'S
House.

Music within. Enter a SERVANT.

1 Serv. Wine, wine, wine ! What service is here ! I think our fellows are asleep. [Exit.]

Enter another SERVANT.

2 Serv. Where's Cotus ! my master calls for him. Cotus !

Enter CORIOLANUS.

Cor. A goodly house : The feast smells well :
but I
Appear not like a guest.

Re-enter the first SERVANT.

1 Serv. What would you have, friend ! Whence are you ! Here's no place for you : Pray, go to the door.

Cor. I have deserv'd no better entertainment in being Coriolanus.*

Re-enter second SERVANT.

2 Serv. Whence are you, Sir ! Has the porter his eyes in his head, that he gives entrance to such companions ! † Pray, get you out.

Cor. Away !

2 Serv. Away ! Get you away.

Cor. Now thou art troublesome.

2 Serv. Are you so brave ! I'll have you talked with anon.

Enter a third SERVANT. The first meets him.

3 Serv. What fellow's this !

1 Serv. A strange one as ever I looked on : I cannot get him out o'the house : Pr'ythee, call my master to him.

3 Serv. What have you to do here, fellow !
Pray you, avoid the house

Cor. Let me but stand : I will not hurt your hearth.

3 Serv. What are you !

Cor. A gentleman.

3 Serv. A marvellous poor one.

Cor. True, so I am.

3 Serv. Pray you, poor gentleman, take up some other station ; here's no place for you ; pray you, avoid : come.

Cor. Follow your function, go !
And batten ‡ on cold bits. [Pushes him away.]

3 Serv. What, will you not ! Pr'ythee tell my master what a strange guest he has here.

[Exit.]

2 Serv. And I shall.

3 Serv. Where dwellest thou !

Cor. Under the canopy.

2 Serv. Under the canopy !

Cor. Ay.

3 Serv. Where's that !

Cor. I' the city of kites and crows.

3 Serv. I' the city of kites and crows !—What an ass it is !—Then thou dwellest with daws too !

Cor. No, I serve not thy master.

3 Serv. How, Sir ! do you meddle with my master !

Cor. Ay ; 'tis an honest service than to meddle with thy mistress :

Thou prat'st, and prat'st ; serve with thy trencher,
hence ! [Beats him away.]

Enter AUFIDIUS and the second SERVANT.

Auf. Where is this fellow !

2 Serv. Here, Sir : I'd have beaten him like a dog, but for disturbing the lords within.

Auf. Whence comest thou ! what wouldst thou ! Thy name !

Why speak'st not ! Speak, man : What's thy name !

Cor. If, Tullus,

[Unmusical.]

Not yet thou know'st me, and seeing me, dost not Think me for the man I am, necessity

Commands me name myself.

Auf. What is thy name !

[SERVANTS retire.]

Cor. A name unmusical to the Volscians' ears,
And harsh in sound to thine.

Auf. Say, what's thy name !

Thou hast a grim appearance, and thy face
Bears a command in't : though thy tackle's torn,
Thou show'st a noble vessel. What's thy name !

Cor. Prepare thy brow to frown : Know'st thou me yet !

Auf. I know thee not :—Thy name !

Cor. My name is Caius Marcius, who hath
done

To thee particularly, and to all the Volscies,
Great hurt and mischief ; thereto witness may
My surname, Coriolanus : The painful service,
The extreme dangers, and the drops of blood
Shed for my thankless country, are requited
But with that surname ; a good memory,*
And witness of the malice and displeasure
Which thou should'st bear me : only that name remains :

The cruelty and envy of the people,
Permitted by our dastard nobles, who
Have all forsook me, hath devour'd the rest ;
And suffer'd me by the voice of slaves to be Whoop'd out of Rome. Now, this extremity
Hath brought me to thy hearth ; not out of hope, Mistake me not, to save my life ; for if
I had fear'd death, of all the men i'the world
I would have voided thee : but in mere spite,
To be full quit of those my banishers,
Stand I before thee here. Then if thou hast
A heart of wreak † in thee, that will revenge Thine own particular wrongs, and stop those mains ‡

Of shame seen through thy country, speed thee
straight,

And make my misery serve thy turn : so use it,
That my revengesul services may prove
As benefits to thee ; for I will fight Against my canker'd country with the spleen
Of all the under † fiends. But if so be Thou dar'st not this, and that to prove more fortunes

Thou art tir'd, then, in a word, I also am
Longer to live most weary, and present
My throat to thee, and to thy ancient malice,
Which, not to cut, would show thee but a fool ;
Since I have ever follow'd thee with hate,
Drawn tuns of blood out of thy country's breast ;
And cannot live but to thy shame, unless
It be to do thee service.

Auf. O Marcius, Marcius,

Each word thou hast spoke hath weeded from
my heart

A root of ancient envy. If Jupiter [say,
Should from yon cloud speak divine things, and
'Tis true, I'd not believe them more than thee,
All noble Marcius.—Oh ! let me twine
Mine arms about that body, where against
My grained ash an hundred times hath broke,
And scar'd the moon with splinters ! Here I clip ‡

The anvil of my sword ; and do contest,
As hotly and as nobly with thy love,
As ever in ambitious strength I did
Contend against thy valour. Know thou first,
I lov'd the maid I married ; never man
Sigh'd truer breath ; but that I see thee here,
Thou noble thing ! more dances my rapt heart,
Than when I first my wedded mistress saw

* Having derived that name from Corioli.
† Fellows. ‡ Food.

* Memorial. † Resentment. ‡ Wounds.
‡ Infernal. ‡ Embrace.

Bestride my threshold. Why, thou Mars! I tell thee

We have a power on foot; and I had purpose
Once more to hew thy target from thy brawn,*
Or lose mine arm for't: Thou hast beat me out †
Twelve several times, and I have nightly since Dreamt of encounters 'twixt thyself and me;
We have been down together in my sleep
Unbuckling helms, flitting each other's throat,
And wak'd half dead with nothing. Worthy

Marcius,

Had we no quarrel else to Rome, but that Thou art thence banish'd, we would muster all
From twelve to seventy; ‡ and, pouring war
Into the bowels of ungrateful Rome,
Like a bold flood o'er-beat. O come, go in,
And take our friendly senators by the hands;
Who now are here, taking their leaves of me,
Who am prepar'd against your territories,
Though not for Rome itself.

Cor. You bless me, gods!

Ans. Therefore, most absolute Sir, if thou wilt have

The leading of thine own revenges, take
The one half of my commission; and set down—
As best thou art experienc'd, since thou know'st
Thy country's strength and weakness,—thine own ways:

Whether to knock against the gates of Rome,
Or rudely visit them in parts remote,
To fright them, ere destroy. But come in:
Let me commend thee first to those, that shall Say yea to thy desires. A thousand welcomes!
And more a friend than e'er an enemy;
Yet, Marcius, that was much. Your hand! Most welcome!

[Exeunt CORIOLANUS and AUFIDIUS.]

1 Serv. [Advancing.] Here's a strange alteration!

2 Serv. By my hand, I had thought to have struck him with a cudgel; and yet my mind gave me, his clothes made a false report of him.

1 Serv. What an arm he has! He turned me about with his finger and his thumb, as one would set up a top.

2 Serv. Nay, I knew by his face that there was something in him: He had, Sir, a kind of face, methought,—I cannot tell how to term it.

1 Serv. He had so: looking as it were,— 'Would I were hanged, but I thought there was more in him than I could think.

2 Serv. So did I, I'll be sworn: He is simply the rarest man i'the world.

1 Serv. I think he is: but a greater soldier than he, you wot † one.

2 Serv. Who † my master?

Serv. Nay, it's no matter for that.

Serv. Worth six of him.

1 Serv. Nay, not so neither; but I take him to be the greater soldier.

2 Serv. 'Faith, look you, one cannot tell how to say that: for the defence of a town, our general is excellent.

1 Serv. Ay, and for an assault too.

Re-enter third SERVANT.

3 Serv. O slaves, I can tell you news: news, you rascals.

1. 2. Serv. What, what, what? let's partake.

3 Serv. I would not be a Roman, of all nations: I had as lieve be a condemned man.

1. 2. Serv. Wherefore? wherefore?

3 Serv. Why, here's he that was wont to thwack our general,—Calus Marcius.

1 Serv. Why do you say thwack our general?

3 Serv. I do not say, thwack our general; but he was always good enough for him.

2 Serv. Come, we are fellows and friends:
he was ever too hard for him; I have heard him say so himself.

1 Serv. He was too hard for him directly, to say the truth on't: before Corioli, he scotched him and notched him like a carbonado.‡

* Arm. † Pull. ‡ Years of age. § Know.
‡ Ment cut across to be broiled.

2 Serv. An he had been cannibally given, he might have broiled and eaten him too.

1 Serv. But more of thy news?

3 Serv. Why, he is so made on here within, as if he were son and heir to Mars: set at upper end o'the table: no question asked him by any of the senators, but they stand hold before him: Our general himself makes a mistress of him; sanctifies himself with's hand, and turns up the white o'the eye to his discourse. But the bottom of the news is, our general is cut i'the middle, and but one half of what he was yesterday; for the other was half, by the entreaty, and grant of the whole table. He'll go, he says, and sowle* the porter of Rome gates by the ears:
He will mow down all before him, and leave his passage polled.†

2 Serv. And he's as like to do't as any man
I can imagine.

3 Serv. Do't? he will do't: For, look you, Sir, he has as many friends as enemies: which friends, Sir, (as it were,) durst not (look you, Sir,) show themselves (as we term it,) his friends,
whilst he's in directitude.

1 Serv. Directitude? what's that?

3 Serv. But when they shall see, Sir, his crest up again, and the man in blood,‡ they will out of their burrows, like conies after rain, and revel all with him.

1 Serv. But when goes this forward?

3 Serv. To-morrow; to-day; presently. You shall have the drum struck up this afternoon:
'tis, as it were, a parcel § of their feast, and to be executed ere they wipe their lips.

2 Serv. Why then we shall have a stirring world again. This peace is nothing, but to rust iron, increase tailors, and breed ballad-makers.

1 Serv. Let me have war, say I: it exceeds peace, as far as day does night; it's spritely, waking, audible, and full of vent.¶ Peace is a very apoplexy, lethargy: muffled, ¶ deaf, sleepy, insensible: a getter of more bastard children,
than war's a destroyer of men.

2 Serv. 'Tis so: and as wars, in some sort, may be said to be a ravisher, so it cannot be denied but peace is a great maker of cuckolds.

1 Serv. Ay, and it makes men hate one another.

3 Serv. Reason; because they then less need one another. The wars for my money. I hope to see Romans as cheap as Volscians. They are rising, they are rising.

All. In, in, in, in.

[Exeunt.]

SCENE VI.—Rome.—A Public place.

Enter SICINIUS and BRUTUS.

Sic. We hear not of him, neither need we fear
him:

His remedies are tame i'the present peace
And quietness o'the people, which before
Were in wild hurry. Here do we make his friends Blush, that the world goes well; who rather had,
Though they themselves did suffer by't, behold
Dissentions numbers pestering streets, than see
Our tradesmen singing in their shops, and going
About their functions friendly.

Enter MENENIUS.

Br. We stood to't in good time. Is this Menenius?

Sic. 'Tis he, 'tis he: Oh! he is grown most Of late.—Hail, Sir!

[kind]

Men. Hail to you both!

Sic. Your Coriolanus, Sir, is not much miss'd,
But with his friends; the common-wealth doth
stand;

And so would do, were he more angry at it.

Men. All's well; and might have been much better, if

He could have temporiz'd.

* Pull. † Cut clear. ‡ Vigour. § Past ‡ Rumour. ¶ Softened.

Sic. Where is he, near you?

Men. Nay, I hear nothing; his mother and his wife
Hear nothing from him.

Enter Three or Four CITIZENS.

Cit. The gods preserve you both!

Sic. Good-e'en, our neighbours.

Brn. Good-e'en to you all, good-e'en to you all.

1 Cit. Ourselves, our wives, and children, on our knees, are bound to pray for you both

Sic. Live, and thrive!

Brn. Farewell, kind neighbours: we wish'd Coriolanus

Had lov'd you as we did.

Cit. Now the gods keep you!

Both Tri. Farewell, farewell,

[Exeunt CITIZENS.]

Sic. This is a happier and more comely time, Than when these fellows ran about the streets, Crying Confusion.

Brn. Caius Marcius was A worthy officer i'the war; but insolent, O'ercome with pride, ambitious past all thinking, Self-loving.—

Sic. And affecting one sole throne, Without assistance.*

Men. I think not so.

Sic. We should by this, to all our lamentation, If he had gone forth consul, found it so.

Brn. The gods have well prevented it, and Sits safe and still without him. [Rome]

Enter EDILES.

Ed. Worthy tribunes, There is a slave whom we have put in prison, Reports,—the Volscas with two several powers Are entered in the Roman territories; And with the deepest malice of the war Destroy what lies before them.

Men. 'Tis Aufidius, Who, hearing of our Marcius' banishment, Thrusts forth his horns again into the world: Which were insbell'd, when Marcius stood † for Rome,

And durst not once peep out.

Sic. Come, what talk you Of Marcius?

Brn. Go see this rouser whipp'd. It cannot be,

The Volscas dare break with us.

Men. Cannot be! We have record, that very well it can; And three examples of the like have been Within my age. But reason ‡ with the fellow, Before y^e punish him, where he heard this: Lest you should chance to whip your information, And beat the messenger who bids beware Of what is to be dreaded.

Sic. Tell not me:

I know this cannot be.

Brn. Not possible.

Enter a MESSENGER.

Mess. The nobles, in great earnestness, are going

All to the senate house: some news is come, That turns § their countenances

Sic. 'Tis this slave;— Go whip him 'fore the people's eyes:—his rais- Nothing but his report! [ing!]

Mess. Yes, worthy Sir, The slave's report is seconded; and more, More fearful is deliver'd.

Sic. What more fearful?

Mess. It is spoke freely out of many mouths, (How probable, I do not know) that Marcius, Join'd with Aufidius, leads a power 'gainst Rome; And vows revenge as spacious, as between The young'st and oldest thing.

Sic. This is most likely!

Brn. Rais'd only, that the weaker sort may Good Marcius home again. [wish]

Sic. The very trick on't.

Men. This is unlikely:

He and Aufidius can no more alone,* Than violentest contrariety.

Enter another MESSENGER.

Mess. You are sent for to the senate: A fearful army, led by Caius Marcius, Associated with Aufidius, rages Upon our territories; and have already, O'erborne their way, consum'd with fire, and What lay before them. [took]

Enter COMINIUS.

Com. Oh! you have made good work!

Men. What news? what news?

Com. You have help to ravish your own daughters, and

To melt the city leads upon your pates; To see your wives dishonour'd to your noses—

Men. What's the news? what's the news?

Com. Your temples burn'd in their cement; and

Your franchises, whereon you stood confin'd Into an augre's bore. †

Men. Pray now, your news?

You have made fair work, I fear me:—Pray, your news?

If Marcius should be join'd with Volscians,—

Com. If!

He is their god; he leads them like a thing Made by some other deity than nature, That shapes man better; and they follow him, Against us brats, with no less confidence Than boys pursuing summer butterflies, Or butchers killing flies.

Men. You have made good work, You and your apron men; you that stood so much Upon the voice of occupation, ‡ and The breath of garlic-eaters?

Com. He will shake Your Rome about your ears.

Men. As Hercules Did shake down mellow fruit: You have made fair work!

Brn. But is this true, Sir?

Com. Ay; and you'll look pale Before you find it other. All the regions Do smilingly revolt; § and, who resist, Are only mock'd for valiant ignorance, And perish constant fools. Who is't can blame him?

Your enemies, and his, find something in him.

Men. We are all undone, unless The noble man have mercy.

Com. Who shall ask it? The tribunes cannot do't for shame: the people Deserve such pity of him, as the wolf Does of the shepherds: for his best friends, if they [even] Should say, Be good to Rome, they charg'd him As those should do that had deserv'd his hate, And therein show'd like enemies.

Men. 'Tis true: If he were putting to my house the brand That should consume it, I have not the face To say, 'Beseech you, cease.—You have made fair hands,

You and your crafts! you have crafted fair!

Com. You have brought A trembling upon Rome, such as was never So incapable of help.

Tri. Say not, we brought it.

Men. How! Was it we? We lov'd him; but like beasts, And cowardly nobles, gave way to your clusters Who did hoot him out o' the city.

Com. But, I fear

* Suffrag. † Stood up in its defence. ‡ Talk ‡ Change.

* Unite. † A small round hole: an augre is a carpenter's tool. ‡ Mechanics. § Revolt with pleasure.

They'll roar him in again. Tullus Aufidius,
The second name of men, obeys his points
As if he were his officer :—Desperation
Is all the policy, strength, and defence,
That Rome can make against them.

Enter a troop of CITIZENS.

Men. Here comes the clusters.—
And is Aufidius with him?—You are they
That made the air unwholesome, when you cast
Your stinking, greasy caps, in hooting at Coriolanus' exile. Now he's coming;
And not a hair upon a soldier's head,
Which will not prove a whip; as many cockcombs
As you threw caps up, will he tumble down,
And pay you for your voices. 'Tis no matter:
If he could burn us all into one coal,
We have deserv'd it.

Cit. 'Faith, we hear fearful news.

1 Cit. For mine own part.

When I said, banish him, I said, 'twas pity.

2 Cit. And so did I.

3 Cit. And so did I; and, to say the truth, so did very many of us: That we did, we did for the best: and though we willingly consented to his banishment, yet it was against our will.

Com. You are goodly things, you voices!

Men. You have made

Good work, you and your cry!—Shall us to the Capitol?

Com. Oh! ay; what else?

[Exeunt COM. and MEN.]

Sic. Go, masters, get you home, be not dis-may'd:

These are a side that would be glad to have
This true, which they so seem to fear. Go home,
And show no sign of fear.

1 Cit. The gods be good to us! Come, masters, let's home. I ever said we were i'the wrong, when we banished him.

2 Cit. So did we all. But come, let's home.

[Exeunt CITIZENS.]

Brut. I do not like this news.

Sic. Nor I.

Brut. Let's to the Capitol:—Would half my wealth

Would buy this for a lie!

Sic. Pray, let us go.

[Exeunt.]

SCENE VII.—A Camp, at a small distance from Rome.

Enter AUFIDIUS and his LIEUTENANT.

Auf. Do they still fly to the Roman?

Lien. I do not know what witchcraft's in him;
but

Your soldiers use him as the grace 'fore meat,
Their talk at table, and their thanks at end;
And you are darken'd in this action, Sir,
Even by your own.

Auf. I cannot help it now;
Unless, by using means, I lame the foot
Of our design. He bears himself more proudlier
Even to my person, than I thought he would,
When first I did embrace him: Yet his nature
In that's no changeling; and I must excuse
What cannot be amended.

Lien. Yet I wish, Sir,
(I mean for your particular,) you had not
Join'd in commission with him; but either
Had borne the action of yourself, or else
To him had left it solely.

Auf. I understand thee well; and be thou sure,
When he shall come to his account, he knows
not

What I can urge against him. Although it seems,
And so he thinks, and is no less apparent
To the vulgar eye, that he bears all things fairly,
And shews good husbandry for the Volscian state;
Fights dragon-like, and does achieve as soon
As draw his sword; yet he hath left undone
That which shall break his neck, or hazard mine,
Whene'er we come to our account.

* Pack, alluding to a pack of hounds.

Lien. Sir, I beseech you, think you he'll carry
Rome?

Auf. All places yield to him ere he sits down;
And the nobility of Rome are his:
The senators and patricians love him too:
The tribunes are no soldiers; and their people
Will be as rash in the repeal, as hasty
To expel him thence. I think he'll be to Rome,
As is the osprey* to the fish, who takes it
By sovereignty of nature. First he was
A noble servant to them; but he could not Carry his honours even: whether 'twas pride,
Which out of daily fortune ever taints
The happy man; whether defect of judgement,
To fail in the disposing of those chances
Which he was lord of; or whether nature,
Not to be other than one thing, not moving
From the casque† to the cushion,‡ but comman-ling peace

Even with the same austerity and garb
As he controll'd the war; but, one of these
(As he hath spices of them all, not all, §
For I dare so far free him,) made him fear'd,
So hated, and so banish'd: But he has a merit,
To choke it in the utterance. So our virtues
Lie in the interpretation of the time:
And power, unto itself most commendable,
Hath not a tomb so evident as a chair
To extol what it hath done.
One fire drives out one fire; one nail, one nail;
Rights by rights fouler, strengths by strengths do fail.

Come, let's away. When, Caius, Rome is thine,
Thou art poor'st of all; then shortly art thou mine.
[Exeunt.]

ACT V.

SCENE I.—Rome.—A Public Place.

Enter MENENIUS, COMINIUS, SICINIUS, BRU-TUS and others.

Men. No, I'll not go: you hear what he hath
said,

Which was sometime his general; who lov'd him
In a most dear particular. He call'd me, father:
But what o'that? Go, you that banish'd him,
A mile before his tent fall down, and kneel
The way into his mercy: Nay, if he coy'd §
To hear Cominius speak, I'll keep at home.

Com. He will not seem to know me.

Men. Do you hear?

Com. Yet one time he did call me by my
name:

I urg'd our old acquaintance, and the drops
That we have bled together. Coriolanus
He would not answer to: forbad all names:
He was a kind of nothing, titleless,
Till he had forg'd himself a name i'the fire
Of burning Rome.

Men. Why, so; you have made good work:
A pair of tribunes that have rack'd ¶ for Rome,
To make coals cheap: A noble memory! **

Com. I minded him how royal 'twas to pardon
When it was less expected: He replied,
It was a bare petition of a state
To one whom they had punish'd.

Men. Very well:

Could he say less?

Com. I offer'd to awaken his regard
For his private friends: His answer to me was,
He could not stay to pick them in a pile
Of noisome, musty chaff: He said 'twas folly,
For one poor grain or two, to leave unburnt,
And still to noise the offence.

Men. For one poor grain
Or two? I am one of those; his mother, wife,
His child, and this brave fellow too, we are the grains:

* An eagle that preys on fish.

† The chair of civil authority.

‡ Not all in their full extent.

§ Harassed by exactions.

¶ Helmet.

 Not all in
their full extent.

‡ Not all in their full extent.

§ Harassed by exactions.

You are the musty chaff; and you are smelt
Above the moon: We must be burnt for you.

Sic. Nay, pray, be patient: If you refuse your aid

In this so never-heeded help, yet do not Upbraid us with our distress. But sure, if you Would be your country's pleader, your good tongue,

More than the instant army we can make,
Might stop our countryman.

Men. No; I'll not meddle.

Sic. I pray you, go to him.

Men. What should I do?

Brn. Only make trial what your love can do
For Rome towards Marcius.

Men. Well, and say that Marcius
Return me, as Cominius is return'd,
Unheard; what then?—

But as a discontented friend, grief-shot
With his unkindness? Say't be so!

Sic. Yet your good will

Must have that thanks from Rome, after the measure,

As you intended well.

Men. I'll undertake it:

I think he'll hear me. Yet to bite his lip,
And hum at good Cominius, much unhearts me.
He was not taken well; he had not din'd:
The veins unfill'd, the blood is cold, and then
We post upon the morning, are unapt
To give or to forgive; but when we have stuff'd
These pipes and these conveyances of our blood
With wine and feeding, we have suppler souls
Than in our priest-like fasts: therefore I'll watch
him

Till he be dicted to my request,
And then I'll set upon him.

Brn. You know the very road into his kindness,
And cannot lose your way.

Men. Good faith, I'll prove him,
Speed how it will. I shall ere long have knowledge

Of my success.

Exit.

Com. He'll never hear him.

Sic. Not?

Com. I tell you; he does sit in gold his eye
Red as 'twould burn Rome; and his injury
The jailer to his pity. I kneel'd before him;
'Twas very faintly he said, Rise; dismiss'd me
Thus, with his speechless hand: What he would do,
He sent in writing after me; what he could not,
Bound with an oath, to yield to his conditions:
So that all hope is vain,
Unless his noble mother, and his wife,
Who, as I hear, mean to solicit him
For mercy to his country—Therefore, let's hence,
And with our fair entreaties haste them on.

[Exeunt.]

SCENE II.—An advanced Post of the Volscian Camp, before Rome. The GUARD at their Stations.

Enter to them, MENENIUS.

1 G. Stay: Whence are you?

2 G. Stand, and go back.

Men. You guard like men; 'tis well: But, by your leave,

I am an officer of state, and come
To speak with Coriolanus.

1 G. From whence?

Men. From Rome.

1 G. You may not pass, you must return: our general

Will no more hear from thence.

2 G. You'll see your Rome embrac'd with fire, before

You'll speak with Coriolanus.

Men. Good my friends,
If you have heard your general talk of Rome,
And of his friends there, it is lots* to blanks,
My name hath touch'd your ears: it is Menenius.

* Prizes.

1 G. Be it so; go back: the virtue of your name
Is not here passable.

Men. I tell thee, fellow,

Thy general is my lover: I have been
The book of his good acts, whence men have read
His fame unparallel'd, haply, amplified;
For I have ever verified† my friends,
(Of whom he's chief,) with all the size that verity‡

Would without lapsing suffer: nay, sometimes,
Like to a bowl upon a subtle§ ground,
I have tumbled past the throw; and, in his praise,

Have almost stamp'd the leasing:¶ Therefore,
fellow,

I must have leave to pass.

1 G. Faith, Sir, if you had told as many lies in his behalf, as you have uttered words in your own, you should not pass here: no, though it were as virtuous to lie, as to live chastely. Therefore, go back.

Men. Pr'ythee, fellow, remember my name is Menenius, always factionary on the party of your general.

2 G. Howsoever you have been his liar, (as you say you have) I am one that, telling true under him, must say, you cannot pass. Therefore, go back.

Men. Has he dined, can'st thou tell? for I would not speak with him till after dinner.

1 G. You are a Roman, are you?

Men. I am as thy general is.

1 G. Then you should hate Rome, as he does.
Can you, when you have pushed out your gates the very defender of them, and, in a violent popular ignorance, given your enemy your shield, think to front his revenges with the easy groans of old women, the virginal palms of your daughters, or with the palsied intercession of such a decayed dotant¶ as you seem to be? Can you think to blow out the intended fire your city is ready to flame in, with such weak breath as this?
No, you are deceived; therefore back to Rome,
and prepare for your execution: you are condemned, our general has sworn you out of reprieve and pardon.

Men. Sirrah, if thy captain knew I were here,
he would use me with estimation.

2 G. Come, my captain knows you not.

Men. I mean, thy general.

1 G. My general cares not for you. Back, I say, go, lest I let forth your half pint of blood; —back,—that's the utmost of your having:— back.

Men. Nay, but fellow, fellow,—

Enter CORIOLANUS and AUFIDIUS.

Cor. What's the matter?

Men. Now you companion, I'll say an errand for you; you shall know now that I am in estimation; you shall perceive that a Jack†† guardant cannot office me from my son Coriolanus: guess, but by my entertainment with him, if thou stand'st not i'the state of hanging, or of some death more long in spectatorship, and crueller in suffering: behold now presently, and swoon for what's to come upon thee.—The glorious gods sit in hourly synod about thy particular prosperity, and love thee no worse than thy old father Menenius does! O my son! my son!
thou art preparing fire for us; look thee, here's water to quench it. I was hardly moved to come to thee; but being assured none but myself could move thee, I have been blown out of your gates with sighs: and conjure thee to pardon Rome, and thy petitionary countrymen. The good gods assuage thy wrath, and turn the dregs of it upon this varlet here; this, who, like a block, hath denied my access to thee.

Cor. Away!

Men. How! Away?

* Friend. † Proved to. ‡ Truth.
§ Decisful. Lie. ¶ Dotard.
 Fellow. †† Jack in office.

E

Cor. Wife, mother, child, I know not. My affairs

Are servanted to others : Though I owe
My revenge properly, my remission lies
In Volscian breasts. That we have been familiar,

Ingrate forgetfulness shall poison, rather
Than pity note how much.—Therefore, be gone.
Mine ears against your suits are stronger, than Your gates against my force. Yet, for * I lov'd
thee,

Take this along : I writ it for thy sake,

[Gives a Letter.]

And would have sent it. Another word, Menenius,

I will not hear thee speak.—This man, Aufidius,
Was my beloved in Rome : yet thou behold'st—

Auf. You keep a constant temper.

[Exeunt CORIOLANUS and AUFID.]

1 G. Now, Sir, is your name Menenius ?

2 G. 'Tis a spell, you see, of much power :
You know the way home again.

1 G. Do you hear how we are shent † for keeping your greatness back ?

2 G. What cause, do you think, I have to swoon ?

Men. I neither care for the world, nor your general : for such things as you, I can scarce think there's any, you are so slight. He that hath a will to die by himself, fears it not from another. Let your general do his worst. For you, be that you are long ; and your misery increase with your age ! I say to you, as I was said to, Away !

[Exit.]

1 G. A noble fellow, I warrant him.

2 G. The worthy fellow is our general : He is the rock, the oak not to be wind-shaken.

[Exeunt.]

SCENE III.—The Tent of CORIOLANUS.

Enter CORIOLANUS, AUFIDIUS, and others.

Cor. We will before the walls of Rome tomorrow

Set down our host.—My partner in this action,
You must report to the Volscian lords, how
I have borne this business.

[plainly ‡]

Auf. Only their ends

You have respected ; stopp'd your ears against
The general suit of Rome ; never admitted
A private whisper, no, not with such friends
That thought them sure of you.

Cor. This last old man,
Whom with a crack'd heart I have sent to Rome,
Lov'd me above the measure of a father :
Nay, godded me, indeed. Their latest refuge
Was to send him : for whose old love I have (Though I show'd sourly to him,) once more offer'd

The first conditions, which they did refuse,
And cannot now accept, to grace him only,
That thought he could do more ; a very little
I have yielded too : Fresh embassies, and suits,
Nor from the state, nor private friends, hereafter
Will I lend ear to.—Ha ! what shout is this ?

[Shout within.]

Shall I be tempted to infringe my vow
In the same time 'tis made ? I will not.—

Enter in mourning habits, VIRGILIA, VO-LUMNIA, leading young MARCIUS, VALERIA, and ATTENDANTS.

My wife comes foremost ; then the honour'd
mould

Wherein this trunk was fram'd, and in her hand
The grand-child to her blood. But, out, affection !
All bond and privilege of nature, break !

Let it be virtuous to be obstinate.—

What is that curt'sy worth ? or those doves' eyes,
Which can make gods forsworn ?—I melt, and am not

Of stronger earth than others.—My mother bows ;
As if Olympus to a molehill should

In supplication nod : and my young boy
Hath an aspect of intercession, which
Great nature cries, Deny not.—Let the Volscian Plough Rome and harrow Italy ; I'll never
Be such a goaling to obey instinct ; but stand
As if a man were author of himself,
And knew no other kin.

Vir. My lord and husband !

Cor. These eyes are not the same I wore in Rome.

Vir. The sorrow, that delivers us thus chang'd
Makes you think so.

Cor. Like a dull actor now,
I have forgot my part, and I am out,
Even to a full disgrace. Best of my flesh,
Forgive my tyranny ; but do not say,
For that, Forgive our Romans.—Oh, a kiss
Long as my exile, sweet as my revenge !
Now by the jealous queen * of heaven, that kiss
I carried from thee, dear ; and my true lip
Hath virgin'd it e'er since.—You gods ! I prate,
And the most noble mother of the world
Leave unsaluted : Sink, my knee, i'the earth ;

[Kneels.]

Of thy deep duty more impression show
Than that of common sons.

Vol. Oh ! stand up bless'd !

Whilst, with no softer cushion than the flint
I kneel before thee ; and unproperly Show duty, as mistaken all the while
Between the child and parent.

[Kneels]

Cor. What is this ?

Your knees to me ? to your corrected son
Then let the pebbles on the hungry beach
Fillip the stars ; then let the mutinous winds
Strike the proud cedars 'gainst the fiery sun ;
Murd'ring impossibility, to make
What cannot be, slight work.

Vol. Thou art my warrior :

I help to frame thee. Do you know this lady ?

Cor. The noble sister of Publicola,
The moon of Rome ; chaste as the icicle
That's curd'd by the frost from purest snow,
And hangs on Dian's temple : Dear Valeria !

Vol. This is a poor epitome of yours,
Which, by the interpretation of full time,
May show like all yourself.

Cor. The god of soldiers,
With the consent of supreme Jove, inform Thy thoughts with nobleness ; that thou may'st prove

To shame invulnerable, and stick i'the wars
Like a great sea-mark, standing every flaw, †
And saving those that eye thee !

Vol. Your knee, Sirrah.

Cor. That's my brave boy.

Vol. Even he, your wife, this lady, and myself,
Are suitors to you.

Cor. I beseech you, peace :

Or, if you'd ask, remember this before :
The things I have forsworn to grant, may never
Be held by you denials. Do not bid me
Dismiss my soldiers, or capitulate
Again with Rome's mechanics : Tell me not Wherein I seem unnatural : Desire not
To allay my rages and revenges, with Your colder reasons.

Vol. Oh ! no more, no more !

You have said, you will not grant us any thing ;
For we have nothing else to ask, but that
Which you deny already : Yet we will ask,
That, if you fall in our request, the blame
May hang upon your hardness : therefore hear us.

Cor. Aufidius, and you Volscians, mark ; for
we'll

[quest ‡]

Hear nought from Rome in private.—Your re-

Vol. Should we be silent and not speak, our railment

And state of bodies would bewray † what life
We have led since thy exile. Think with thyself,
How more unfortunate than all living women
Are we come hither ; since that thy sight, which should

* Because. † Reprimanded. ‡ Openly.

* June.

† Storm.

‡ Betray.

Make your eyes flow with joy, hearts dance with comfort,
Constrains them weep, and shake with fear and sorrow;
Making the mother, wife, and child, to see
The son, the husband, and the father, tearing
His country's bowels out. And to poor we,
Thine enmity's most capital: thou barr'st us
Our prayers to the gods, which is a comfort
That all but we enjoy; for how can we,
Alas! how can we for our country pray,
Whereto we are bound; together with thy victory,
Whereto we are bound? Alack! or we must lose
The country, our dear nurse; or else thy person,
Our comfort in the country. We must find
An evident calamity, though we had
Our wish, which side should win: for either thou Must, as a foreign miscreant, be led
With manacles through our streets, or else
Triumphantly tread on thy country's ruin;
And bear the palm for having bravely shed
Thy wife and children's blood. For myself, son,
I purpose not to wait on fortune, till
These wars determine; * if I cannot persuade thee
Rather to show a noble grace to both parts,
Than seek the end of one, thou shalt no sooner
March to assault thy country, than to tread
(Trust to't, thou shalt not,) on thy mother's womb,
That brought thee to this world.

Vtr. Ay, and on mine,
That brought you forth this boy, to keep your Living to time. [name]

Boy. He shall not tread on me;
I'll run away, till I am bigger, but then I'll fight.

Cor. Not of a woman's tenderness to be,
Requires nor child nor woman's face to see.
I have sat too long. [Rising.]

Vol. Nay, go not from us thus.
If it were so, that our request did tend
To save the Romans, thereby to destroy
The Volscies whom you serve, you might condemn us,

As poisonous of your honour: No; our suit
Is, that you reconcile them: while the Volscies
May say, This mercy we have show'd; the Romans,

This we receiv'd; and each in either side
Give the all-hail to thee, and cry, Be bless'd
For making up this peace! Thou know'st, great son,

The end of war's uncertain; but this certain,
That, if thou conquer Rome, the benefit
Which thou shalt thereby reap, is such a name,
Whose repetition will be dogg'd with curses:
Whose chronicle thus writ,—The man was noble,
But with his last attempt he wip'd it out;
Destroyed his country: and his name remains
To the ensuing age, abhorr'd. Speak to me,
son:

Thou hast affected the fine strains † of honour,
To imitate the graces of the gods;
To tear with thunder the wide cheeks o'the air,
And yet to charge thy sulphur with a bolt
That should but rive an oak. Why dost not speak?

Think'st thou it honourable for a noble man
Still to remember wrongs?—Daughter, speak you;
He cares not for your weeping.—Speak thou, boy:
Perhaps thy childishness will move him more Than can our reasons.—There is no man in the world [prate]

More bound to his mother; yet here he lets me
Like one i'the stocks. Thou hast never in thy life
Show'd thy dear mother any courtesy;
When she (poor hen!) fond of no second brood,
Has cluck'd thee too the wars, and safely home,
Loaden with honour. Say, my request's unjust,
And spurn me back: But, if it be not so,
Thou art not honest; and the gods will plague
thee,

That thou restrain'st from me the duty, which
To a mother's part belongs.—He turns away:
Down, ladies; let us shame him with our knees.

* Conclude.

† The niceties.

To his surname Coriolanus 'longs more pride,
Than pity to our prayers. Down; an end:
This is the last;—So we will home to Rome,
And die among our neighbours.—Nay, behold us:
This boy, that cannot tell what he would have,
But kneels, and holds up hands, for fellowship,
Does reason our petition with more strength
Than thou hast to deny't.—Come, let us go:
This fellow had a Volscian to his mother;
His wife is in Corioli, and his child
Like him by chance:—Yet give us our despatch:
I am hush'd until our city be afire,
And then I'll speak a little.

Cor. O mother, mother!

[Holding VOLUMNIA by the Hands, silent.
What have you done? Behold, the heavens do ope,

The gods look down, and this unnatural scene
They laugh at. O my mother, mother! O!
You have won a happy victory to Rome:
But, for your son,—believe it, oh! believe it,
Most dangerously you have with him prevail'd,
If not most mortal to him. But, let it come:
Aufidius, though I cannot make true wars,
I'll frame convenient peace. Now, good Au-fidius,

Were you in my stead, say, would you have heard
A mother less? or granted less, Aufidius?

Auf. I was mov'd withal.

Cor. I dare be sworn you were:
And, Sir, it is no little thing, to make
Mine eyes to sweat compassion. But, good Sir,
What peace you'll make, advise me: For my part,
I'll not to Rome, I'll back with you; and pray
you,

Stand to me in this cause. O mother! wife!
Auf. I am glad thou hast set thy mercy and thy honour

At difference in thee: out of that I'll work
Myself a former fortune. [Aside.]

[The ladies make signs to CORIOLANUS.]

Cor. Ay, by and by:

[To VOLUMNIA, VIRGILIA, &c.
But we will drink together; and you shall bear
A better witness back than words, which we,
On like conditions, will have counter-seal'd.
Come, enter with us. Ladies, you deserve
To have a temple built you: all the swords
In Italy, and her confederate arms,
Could not have made this peace. [Exeunt.]

SCENE IV.—Rome.—A public Place.

Enter MENENIUS and SICINIUS.

Men. See you yond' coign * o'the Capitol:
yond' corner stone?

Sic. Why, what of that?

Men. If it be possible for you to displace it with your little finger, there is some hope the ladies of Rome, especially his mother, may prevail with him. But I say, there is no hope in't; our throats are sentenced, and stay † upon execution.

Sic. Is't possible that so short a time can alter the condition of a man?

Men. There is differency between a grub and a butterfly; yet your butterfly was a grub. This Marcus is grown from man to dragon: he has wings! he's more than a creeping thing.

Sic. He loved his mother dearly.

Men. So did he me: and he no more remembers his mother now, than an eight year old horse. The tartness of his face soars ripe grapes.
When he walks, he moves like an engine, and the ground shrinks before his treading. He is able to pierce a corslet with his eye; talks like a knell and his hum is a battery. He sits in his state, ‡ as a thing made § for Alexander. What he bids be done, is finished with his bidding. He wants nothing of a god but eternity, and a heaven to throne in.

Sic. Yes, mercy, if you report him truly.

* A gle.

† Stay but for it.

‡ Chair of state.

§ To resemble.

Men. I paint him in the character. Mark what mercy his mother shall bring from him: There is no more mercy in him, than there is milk in a male tiger; that shall our poor city find: and all that is 'long of you.

Sic. The gods be good unto us!

Men. No, in such a case the gods will not be good unto us. When we banished him, we respected not them: and, he returning to break our necks, they respect not us.

Enter a MESSENGER.

Mess. Sir, if you'd save your life, fly to your house:

The plebeians have got your fellow-tribune,
And hale him up and down; all swearing, if
The Roman ladies bring not comfort home,
They'll give him death by inches.

Enter another MESSENGER.

Sic. What's the news?

Mess. Good news, good news:—The ladies have prevail'd,
The Volaces are dislodg'd, and Marcius gone:
A merrier day did never yet greet Rome,
No, not the expulsion of the Tarquins.

Sic. Friend,

Art thou certain this is true? is it most certain?

Mess. As certain as I know the sun is fire:
Where have you lurk'd, that you make doubt of it?
Ne'er through an arch so hurried the blown tide,
As the recomfited through the gates. Why hark you;

[Trumpets and Hautboys sounded, and Drums beaten, all together. Shouting also within.
The trumpets, sackbuts, psalteries, and fifes,
Tabors, and cymbals, and the shouting Romans,
Make the sun dance. Hark you!

[Shouting again.

Men. This is good news:
I will go meet the ladies. This Volumnia
Is worth of consuls, senators, patricians,
A city full: of tribunes such as you,
A sea and land full: You have pray'd well to-day;
This morning, for ten thousand of your throats
I'd not have given a doit. Hark, how they joy!

[Shouting and Music.

Sic. First, the gods bless you for their tidings:
Accept my thankfulness. [next,

Mess. Sir, we have all

Great cause to give great thanks,

Sic. They are near the city?

Mess. Almost at point to enter.

Sic. We will meet them,
And help the joy.

[Going.

Enter the Ladies, accompanied by SENATORS, PATRICIANS, and People. They pass over the Stage.

1 Sen. Behold our patroness, the life of Rome:
Call all your tribes together, praise the gods,
And make triumphant fires; strew flowers before them:

Unshout the noise that banish'd Marcius,
Repeal^{*} him with the welcome of his mother;
Cry,—Welcome, ladies, Welcome!

All. Welcome, ladies!
Welcome!

[A flourish with Drums and Trumpets.
[Exeunt.

SCENE V.—Antium.—A Public Place.

Enter TULLUS AUFIDIUS, with Attendants.

Auf. Go tell the lords of the city, I am here:
Deliver them this paper: having read it,
Bid them repair to the market-place; where I,
Even in theirs and in the commons' ears,
Will vouch the truth of it. Him I accuse,
The city ports[†] by this hath enter'd, and Intends to appear before the people, hoping
To purge himself with words: Despatch.

[Exeunt Attendants.

* Recall.

† Gates.

Enter Three or Four CONSPIRATORS of AUFIDIUS's Faction.

Most welcome!

1 Con. How is it with our general?

Auf. Even so,

As with a man by his own aims empoison'd,
And with his charity slain.

2 Con. Most noble Sir,
If you do hold the same intent wherein
You wish'd us parties, we'll deliver you
Of your great danger.

Auf. Sir, I cannot tell:
We must proceed, as we do find the people.

3 Con. The people will remain uncertain, whilst
'Twixt you there's difference; but the fall of either
Makes the survivor heir of all.

Auf. I know it;
And my pretext to strike at him admits
A good construction. I rais'd him, and I pawn'd Mine honour for his truth: Who being so heighten'd,

He water'd his new plants with dews of flattery,
Seducing so my friends; and, to this end,
He bow'd his nature, never known before
But to be rough, unswayable, and free,

3 Con. Sir, his stoutness,
When he did stand for consul, which he lost
By lack of stooping,—

Auf. That I would have spoke of:
Being banish'd for't, he came unto my hearth;
Presented to my knife his throat; I took him;
Made him joint-servant with me; gave him way
In all his own desires; nay, let him choose
Out of my files, his project to accomplish,
My best and freshest men; serv'd his designmen's
In mine own person; help^{*} to reap the fame,
Which he did end all his; and took some pride
To do myself this wrong; till, at the last,
I seem'd his follower, not partner; and
He wag'd me with his countenance,† as if I had been mercenary.

1 Con. So he did, my lord:
The army marvell'd at it. And, in the last,
When he had carried Rome, and that we look'd
For no less spoil than glory,—

Auf. There was it;—
For which my sinews shall be stretch'd upon him.
At a few drops of women's rheum,‡ which are
As cheap as lies, he sold the blood and labour
Of our great action: Therefore shall he die
And I'll renew me in his fall. But, hark!

[Drums and Trumpets sound, with great shouts of the People.

1 Con. Your native town you enter'd like a post,
And had no welcomes home; but he returns,
Splitting the air with noise.

2 Con. And patient fools,
Whose children he hath slain, their base throats
tear,
With giving him glory.

3 Con. Therefore, at your vantage,
Ere he express himself, or move the people
With what he would say, let him feel your sword,
Which we will second. When he lies along,
After your way his tale pronounc'd shall bury
His reasons with his body.

Auf. Say no more:
Here come the lords.

Enter the LORDS of the City.

Lords. You are most welcome home.

Auf. I have not deserv'd it:
But, worthy lords, have you with heed perus'd
What I have written to you?

Lords. We have.

1 Lord. And grieve to hear it.
What faults he made before the last, I think,
Might have found easy fines: but there to end,
Where he was to begin, and give away
The benefit of our levies, answering us
With our own charge;‡ making a treaty, where
There was a yielding; This admits no excuse.

* Helped
† Tears.

† Thought me rewarded with good looks
‡ Rewarding us with our own expenses.

Auf. He approaches, you shall hear him.

*Enter CORIOLANUS, with Drums and Colours ;
a Crowd of CITIZENS with him.*

Cor. Hail, lords ! I am returned your soldier ;
No more infected with my country's love,
Than when I parted hence, but still subsisting
Under your great command. You are to know,
That prosperously I have attempted, and,
With bloody passage led your wars, even to The gates of Rome. Our spoils we have brought home,

Do more than counterpoise, a full third part,
The charges of the action. We have made peace,
With no less honour to the Antiates,
Than shame to the Romans ; and we here deliver,
Subscrib'd by the consuls and patricians,
Together with the seal o'the senate, what
We have compounded on.

Auf. Read it not, noble lords ;
But tell the traitor in the highest degree
He hath abus'd your powers.

Cor. Traitor !—How now ?

Auf. Ay, traitor, Marcius.

Cor. Marcius !

Auf. Ay, Marcius, Caius Marcius : Dost thou
think

I'll grace thee with that robbery, thy stol'n name
Coriolanus in Corioli ?—

You lords and heads of the state, perfidiously
He has betray'd your business, and given up
For certain drops of salt * your city Rome
(I say, your city) to his wife and mother :
Breaking his oath and resolution, like
A twist of rotten silk : never admitting
Council o'the war ; but at his nurse's tears
He whin'd and roar'd away your victory ;
That pages blush'd at him, and men of heart
Look'd wondering each at other.

Cor. Hear'st thou, Mars ?

Auf. Name not the god, thou boy of tears,—

Cor. Ha !

Auf. No more. †

Cor. Measureless liar, thou hast made my heart
Too great for what contains it. Boy ! O slave !—
Pardon me, lords, 'tis the first time that ever
I was forc'd to scold. Your judgments, my grave lords,

Must give this cur the lie : and his own notion (Who wears my stripes impress'd on him that must bear

My beating to his grave,) shall join to thrust
The lie unto him.

1 Lord. Peace, both, and hear me speak.

Cor. Cut me to pieces, Volscres : men and lads, Stain all your edges on me.—Boy ! False hound !
If you have writ your annals true, 'tis there,

* Drops of tears.

† No more than a boy of tears.

That like an eagle in a dove-cote, I
Flutter'd your voices in Corioli :
Alone I did it.—Boy !

Auf. why, noble lords,
Will you be put in mind of his blind fortune,
Which was your shame, by this unholy braggart,
'Fore your own eyes and ears ?

Con. Let him die for't. [Several speak at once.

Cit. [Speaking promiscuously.] Tear him to pieces, do it presently. He killed my son :—my daughter ;—He killed my cousin Marcius ;—He killed my father.—

2 Lord. Peace, ho ;—no outrage ;—peace.
The man is noble, and his fame folds in
This orb o'the earth. * His last offence to us
Shall have judicious † hearing.—Stand, Aufidius,
And trouble not the peace.

Cor. Oh ! that I had him,
With six Aufidiuses, or more, his tribe,
To use my lawful sword !

Auf. Insolent villain !

Con. Kill, kill, kill, kill, kill him !

[AUFIDIUS and the CONSPIRATORS draw, and kill CORIOLANUS, who falls, and AUFIDIUS stands on him.

Lords. Hold, hold, hold, hold !

Auf. My noble masters, hear me speak.

1 Lord. O Tullus !—

2 Lord. Thou hast done a deed whereat valour will weep.

3 Lord. Tread not upon him.—Masters, all, be Put up your swords. [quiet :

Auf. My lords, when you shall know (as in this rage,
Provok'd by him, you cannot,) the great danger
Which this man's life did owe you, you'll rejoice
That he is thus cut off. Please it your honours
To call me to your senate, I'll deliver
Myself your loyal servant, or endure
Your heaviest censure.

1 Lord. Bear from hence his body,
And mourn you for him : let him be regarded
As the most noble corse that ever herald
Did follow to his urn.

2 Lord. His own impatience
Takes from Aufidius a great part of blame.
Let's make the best of it.

Auf. My rage is gone,
And I am struck with sorrow.—Take him up :
Help, three o'the chiefest soldiers ; I'll be one.—
Beat thou the drum, that it speak mournfully :
Trail your steel pikes.—Though in this city he Hath widow'd and unchilded many a one,
Which to this hour bewail the injury,
Yet he shall have a noble memory.

Assist. [Exeunt, bearing the body of CORIOLA-NUS. A dead March sounded.

* His fame overspreads the world.

JULIUS CESAR.

LITERARY AND HISTORICAL NOTICE.

ABOUT the middle of February, A.U.C. 709, a riotous festival sacred to Pan, and called Lupercalia, was held in honour of Cesar, when the regal crown was offered him by Antony. In the middle of the following March he was assassinated. November 27, 710, the Triumvirs, Antony, Lepidus, and Octavius, met at a small island formed by the river Rhenus, near Bouonia, and there agreed upon the cruel proscription introduced in Act IV.—In 711, Brutus and Cassius were totally defeated at Philippi.—Shakspeare appears to have produced this play about the year 1607: one, upon the same subject, had been written by a young Scotch Nobleman, the Earl of Sterling; and in many passages of each, a strong similarity may be traced:—this was probably occasioned by both authors drawing their materials from the same source.—A Latin play on this subject, by Dr. Eedes, of Oxford, who is enumerated amongst the best tragic authors of that era, was published in 1582.—Dr. Johnson says of this tragedy:—“Many particular passages deserve regard, and the contention and reconciliation of Brutus and Cassius are universally celebrated; but I have never been strongly agitated in perusing it, and think it somewhat cold and unaffecting, compared with some other of Shakspeare’s plays: his adherence to the real story, and to Roman manners, seems to have impeded the natural vigour of his genius.”

SCENE: the first three acts at Rome; afterwards at an Island near Mutina, at Sardis; and near Philippi.

ACT I.

SCENE I.—Rome.—A Street.

Enter FLAVIUS, MARULLUS, and a Rabble of CITIZENS.

Flav. Hence! home, you idle creatures, get you home;

Is this a holiday? What! know you not, Being mechanical, you ought not walk Upon a labouring day, without the sign Of your profession?—Speak, what trade art thou?

1 Cit. Why, Sir, a carpenter.

Mar. Where is thy leather apron, and thy rule? What dost thou with thy best apparel on?—You, Sir; what trade are you?

2 Cit. Truly, Sir, in respect of a fine workman I am but, as you would say, a cobbler.

Mar. But what trade art thou? Answer me directly.

2 Cit. A trade, Sir, that I hope I may use with a safe conscience; which is, indeed, Sir, a mender of bad soles.

Mar. What trade, thou knave! thou naughty knave, what trade?

2 Cit. Nay, I beseech you, Sir, be not out with me: yet, if you be out, Sir, I can mend you.

Mar. What meanest thou by that? Mend me, thou saucy fellow?

2 Cit. Why, Sir, cobble you.

Flav. Thou art a cobbler, art thou?

3 Cit. Truly, Sir, all that I live by is, with the awl: I meddle with no tradesman’s matters, nor woman’s matters, but with awl. I am, indeed, Sir, a surgeon to old shoes; when they are in great danger, I recover them. As proper men as ever trod upon neat-leather, have gone upon my handy-work.

Flav. But wherefore art not in thy shop to-day? Why dost thou lead these men about the streets?

2 Cit. Truly, Sir, to wear out their shoes, to get myself into more work. But, indeed, Sir, we make holiday to see Cesar, and to rejoice in his triumph.

Mar. Wherefore rejoice? What conquest brings he home?

What tributaries follow him to Rome, To grace in captive bonds his chariot wheels? You blocks, you stones, you worse than senseless things!

O you hard hearts, you cruel men of Rome, Knew you not Pompey? Many a time and oft Have you climb’d up to walls and battlements, To towers and windows, yea, to chimney-tops, Your infants in your arms, and there have sat The live-long day, with patient expectation, To see great Pompey pass the streets of Rome: And when you saw his chariot but appear, Have you not made an universal shout, That Tyber trembled underneath her banks To hear the replication of your sounds, Made in her concave shores?

Julius Caesar.

Act I. Scene II.

Ant. O mighty Caesar! dost thou lie so low?
Thy all thy conquests, glories, triumphs, spoils,
Crush'd to this little measure?

Cas. Why, man, he doth bestride the narrow world,
Like a Colossus; and we petty men
Walk under his huge legs, and peep about
To find ourselves dishonourable graves.

Act I. Scene II.

Por. I prithee, boy, run to the senate house;
Say not to Caesar, but get thee gone:
Why dost thou stay?

Luc. To know my errand, madam.

Act II. Scene IV.

Ant. Thou art the ruin of the noblest man,
That ever lived in the tide of times.

Act III. Scene I

Ant. He shall not live: look, with a spot I damn
him.

Act IV. Scene I.

Pin. ———— And, hark!
They shout for joy.

Cas. Come down, behold no more,—
O, coward that I am, to live so long,
To see my best friend ta'en before my face.

Act V. Scene II.

ASTOR LENOX
TILDEN FOUNDATIONS

And do you now put on your best attire ?
And do you now cull out a holiday ?
And do you now strew flowers in his way,
That comes in triumph over Pompey's blood ?
Be gone !

Run to your houses, fall upon your knees,
Pray to the gods to intermit the plague
That needs must light on this ingratitude.

Flav. Go, go, good countrymen, and, for this Assemble all the poor men of your sort ; [fault,
Draw them to Tyber banks, and weep your tears
Into the channel, till the lowest stream
Do kiss the most exalted shores of all.

[Exeunt CITIZENS.
See, whe'r their basest metal be not mov'd ;
They vanish tongue-tied in their guiltiness.
Go you down that way towards the Capitol ;
This way will I : Disrobe the images,
If you do find them deck'd with ceremonies. *

Mar. May we do so ?
You know it is the feast of Lupercal.

Flav. It is no matter ; let no images
Be hung with Cesar's trophies. † I'll about,
And drive away the vulgar from the streets :
So do you too where you perceive them thick.
These growing feathers pluck'd from Cesar's wing,
Will make him fly an ordinary pitch :
Who else would soar above the view of men,
And keep us all in servile fearfulness.

[Exeunt.

SCENE II.—The same.—A public Place.

Enter, in Procession, with Music, CESAR ; ANTONY, for the course ; CALPHURNIA, PORTIA, DECIUS, CICCRO, BRUTUS, CASSIUS, and CASCA, a great Crowd following, among them a SOOTHSAYER.

Ces. Calphurnia,—

Casca. Peace, ho ! Cesar speaks.

[Music ceases.

Ces. Calphurnia,—

Cal. Here, my lord.

Ces. Stand you directly in Antonius' way,
When he doth run his course. ‡—Antonius.

Ant. Cesar, my lord.

Ces. Forget not, in your speed, Antonius,
To touch Calphurnia : for our elders say,
The barren touched in this holy chase,
Shake off their steril curse.

Ant. I shall remember :
When Cesar says, Do this, it is perform'd.

Ces. Set on ; and leave no ceremony out.

[Music.

Sooth. Cesar !

Ces. Ha ! who calls ?

Casca. Bid every noise be still :—Peace yet again.

[Music ceases.

Ces. Who is it in the press that calls on me ?
I hear a tongue, shriller than all the music,
Cry, Cesar !—Speak ; Cesar is turned to hear.

Sooth. Beware the Ides of March.

Ces. What man is that ?

Brus. A soothsayer bids you beware the Ides of March.

Ces. Set him before me, let me see his face.

Cas. Fellow, come from the throng : Look upon Cesar.

Ces. What say'st thou to me now ? Speak once again.

Sooth. Beware the Ides of March.

Ces. He is a dreamer : let us leave him ;—pass.

[Sennet. } Exeunt all but BRU. and CAS.

Cas. Will you go see the order of the course ?

Brus. Not I.

Cas. I pray you, do.

Brus. I am not gamesome : I do lack some part
Of that quick spirit that is in Antony.
Let me not hinder, Cassius, your desires ;
I'll leave you.

Cas. Brutus, I do observe you now of late :
I have not from your eyes that gentleness,
And show of love—as I was wont to have :
You bear too stubborn and too strange a hand
Over your friend that loves you.

Brus. Cassius,
Be not deceiv'd : If I have veil'd my look,
I turn the trouble of my countenance
Merely upon myself. Vexed I am,
Of late, with passions of some difference ; *
Conceptions only proper to myself,
Which give some soil, perhaps, to my behaviours :

But let not therefore my good friends be griev'd :
(Among which number, Cassius, be you one)
Nor construe any further my neglect,
Than that poor Brutus, with himself at war,
Forgets the shows of love to other men.

Cas. Then, Brutus, I have much mistook your passion, †
By means whereof, this breast of mine hath buried

Thoughts of great value, worthy cogitations.
Tell me, good Brutus, can you see your face ?

Brus. No, Cassius : for the eye sees not itself,
But by reflection, by some other things.

Cas. 'Tis just :
And it is very much lamented, Brutus,
That you have no such mirrors as will turn
Your hidden worthiness into your eye,
That you might see your shadow. I have heard,
Where many of the best respect in Rome,
(Except immortal Cesar) speaking of Brutus,
And groaning underneath this age's yoke,
Have wish'd that noble Brutus had his eyes.

Brus. Into what dangers would you lead me,
Cassius,

That you would have me seek into myself
For that which is not in me ?

Cas. Therefore, good Brutus, be prepar'd to
hear :

And, since you know you cannot see yourself
So well as by reflection, I, your glass,
Will modestly discover to yourself
That of yourself which you yet know not of.
And be not jealous of me, gentle Brutus :
Were I a common laughter, or did use
To stale ‡ with ordinary oaths my love
To every new protester ; if you know
That I do fawn on men, and hug them hard,
And after scandal them ; or, if you know
That I profess myself in banqueting
To all the rout, then hold me dangerous.

[Flourish and shout.

Brus. What means this shouting ? I do fear, the people

Choose Cesar for their king.

Cas. Ay, do you fear it ?

Then must I think you would not have it so.

Brus. I would not, Cassius ; yet I love him
well :—

But wherefore do you hold me here so long ?
What is it that you would impart to me ?
If it be aught toward the general good,
Set honour in one eye, and death i'the other,
And I will look on both indifferently :
For, let the gods so speed me, as I love
The name of honour more than I fear death.

Cas. I know that virtue to be in you, Brutus,
As well as I do know your outward favour.
Well, honour is the subject of my story.—
I cannot tell, what you and other men
Think of this life ; but, for my single self,
I had as lief not be, as live to be
In awe of such a thing as I myself.

I was born free as Cesar ; so were you :
We both have fed as well ; and we can both Endure the winter's cold, as well as he.
For once, upon a raw and gusty day,
The troubled Tyber chafing with her shores,
Cesar said to me, *Dar'st thou, Cassius, now
Leap in with me into this angry flood,*

And swim to yonder point ? Upon the word, Accouter'd as I was, I plunged in, And bade him follow : so, indeed, he did, The torrent roar'd ; and we did buffet it With lusty sinews ; throwing it aside And stemming it with hearts of controversy. But, ere we could arrive the point propos'd, Cesar cried, Help me, Cassius, or I sink. I, as Æneas, our great ancestor, Did from the flames of Troy upon his shoulder The old Anchises bear, so, from the waves of Tyber

Did I the tired Cesar : And this man Is now become a god ; and Cassius is A wretched creature, and must bend his body, If Cesar carelessly but nod on him. He had a fever when he was in Spain, And, when the fit was on him, I did mark How he did shake : 'tis true, this god did shake : His coward lips did from their colour fly ; And that same eye, whose bend doth awe the world,

Did lose its lustre : I did hear him groan : Ay, and that tongue of his, that bade the Romans

*Mark him, and write his speeches in their books, Alas ! it cried, Give me some drink, Titinius, As a sick girl. Ye gods, it doth amaze me, A man of such a feeble temper * should So get the start of the majestic world, And bear the palm alone. [Shout. Flourish.*

Bru. Another general shout ! I do believe that these applauses are For some new honours that are heap'd on Cesar.

Cas. Why, man, he doth bestride the narrow world

Like a Colossus ; and we petty men Walk under his huge legs, and peep about To find ourselves dishonourable graves. Men at some time are masters of their fates : The fault, dear Brutus, is not in our stars, But in ourselves, that we are underlings. Brutus and Cesar : What should be in that Cesar ?

Why should that name be sounded more than yours ?

Write them together, yours is as fair a name ; Sound them, it doth become the mouth as well ; Weigh them, it is as heavy ; conjure them, Brutus will start a spirit as soon as Cesar. [Shout.

Now in the names of all the gods at once, Upon what meat doth this our Cesar feed, That he is grown so great ? Age, thou art sham'd ! Rome, thou hast lost the breed of noble bloods ! When went there by an age, since the great flood, But it was fam'd with more than with one man ? When could they say, till now, that talk'd of Rome,

That her wide walks encompass'd but one man ? Now is it Rome indeed, and room enough, When there is in it but one only man.

Oh ! you and I have heard our fathers say, There was a Brutus † once, that would have brook'd

The eternal devil to keep his state in Rome, As easily as a king.

Bru. That you do love me, I am nothing jealous :

What you would work me to, I have some aim : How I have thought of this, and of these times, I shall recount hereafter ; for this present, I would not, so with love I might entreat you, Be any further mov'd. What you have said, I will consider ; what you have to say, I will with patience hear : and find a time Both meet to hear, and answer, such high things. Till then, my noble friend, chew upon this : Brutus had rather be a villager, ‡ Than to repute himself a son of Rome Under such hard conditions as this time Is like to lay upon us.

Cas. I am glad, that my weak words Have struck but thus much show of fire from Brutus.

Re-enter CESAR, and his train.

Bru. The games are done, and Cesar is returning.

Cas. As they pass by, pluck Casca by the sleeve ;

And he will, after his sour fashion, tell you What hath proceeded, worthy note, to-day.

*Bru. I will do so :—But, look you, Cassius, The angry spot doth glow on Cesar's brow, And all the rest look like a chidden train : Calphurnia's cheek is pale ; and Cicero Looks with such ferret * and such fiery eyes, As we have seen him in the Capitol, Being cross'd in conference by some senators.*

Cas. Casca will tell us what the matter is.

Ces. Antonius.

Ant. Cesar.

Ces. Let me have men about me that are fat ; Sleek-headed men, and such as sleep o' nights : Yond' Cassius has a lean and hungry look ; He thinks too much : such men are dangerous.

Ant. Fear him not, Cesar, he's not dangerous ; He is a noble Roman, and well given.

Ces. 'Would he were fatter :—But I fear him not :

Yet if my name were liable to fear, I do not know the man I should avoid So soon as that spare Cassius. He reads much ; He is a great observer, and he looks Quite through the deeds of men : he loves no plays,

As thou dost, Antony ; he hears no music : Seldom he smiles ; and smiles in such a sort, As if he mock'd himself, and scorn'd his spirit That could be mov'd to smile at any thing. Such men as he, be never at heart's ease, Whiles they behold a greater than themselves ; And therefore are they very dangerous.

I rather tell thee what is to be fear'd, Than what I fear, for always I am Cesar. Come on my right hand, for this ear is deaf, And tell me truly what thou think'st of him.

[Exeunt CESAR and his Train. CASCA stays behind.

Casca. You pull'd me by the cloak ; Would you speak with me ?

Bru. Ay, Casca ; tell us what hath chanc'd to-day, That Cesar looks so sad.

Casca. Why you were with him, were you not ?

Bru. I should not then ask Casca what had chanc'd.

Casca. Why, there was a crown offer'd him : and, being offer'd him, he put it by with the back of his hand, thus ; and then the people fell a shouting.

Bru. What was the second noise for ?

Casca. Why, for that too.

Cas. They shouted thrice ; What was the last cry for ?

Casca. Why, for that too.

Bru. Was the crown offer'd him thrice ?

Casca. Ay' marry, was't ; and he put it by thrice : every time gentler than other ; and at every putting by, mine honest neighbours shouted.

Cas. Who offer'd him the crown ?

Casca. Why, Antony.

Bru. Tell us the manner of it, gentle Casca.

Casca. I can as well be hanged, as tell the manner of it : 't was mere foolery. I did not mark it. I saw Mark Antony offer him a crown ;—yet 'twas not a crown neither, 'twas one of these coronets ;—and, as I told you, he put it by once : but, for all that, to my thinking, he would fain have had it. Then he offer'd it to him again ; then he put it by again : but, to my thinking, he was very loath to lay his fingers off it. And then he offer'd it the third time ; he put it the third time by : and still, as he refused it,

* Temperament, constitution. † Lucius Junius Brutus. ‡ Not a citizen of Rome.

the rabblement hooted, and clapped their chap-ped hands, and threw up their sweaty night-caps, and uttered such a deal of stinking breath because Cesar refused the crown, that it had almost choked Cesar; for he swooned, and fell down at it: And for mine own part I durst not laugh, for fear of opening my lips, and receiving the bad air.

Cas. But soft, I pray you: What! did Cesar swoon?

Casca. He fell down in the market-place, and foamed at mouth, and was speechless.

Brus. 'Tis very like: he hath the falling-sickness.

Cas. No, Cesar hath it not; but you, and I, And honest Casca, we have the falling-sickness.

Casca. I know not what you mean by that; but, I am sure, Cesar fell down. If the tag-rag people did not clap him, and hiss him, according as he pleased, and displeased them, as they use to do the players in the theatre, I am no true man.

Brus. What said he, when he came unto himself?

Casca. Marry, before he fell down, when he perceiv'd the common herd was glad he refused the crown, he plucked me ope his doublet, and offered them his throat to cut.—An I had been a man of any occupation,* if I would not have taken him at a word, I would I might go to hell among the rogues:—and so he fell. When he came to himself again, he said, If he had done, or said, any thing amiss, he desired their worship to think it was his infirmity. Three or four wenches, where I stood, cried, Alas, good soul!—and forgave him with all their hearts: But there's no heed to be taken of them; if Cesar had stabbed their mothers, they would have done no less.

Brus. And after that, he came, thus sad, away?

Casca. Ay.

Cas. Did Cicero say any thing?

Casca. Ay, he spoke Greek.

Cas. To what effect?

Casca. Nay, an I tell you that, I'll ne'er look you i'the face again: But those that understood him smiled at one another, and shook their heads; but, for mine own part, it was Greek to me. I could tell you more news too: Marullus and Flavius, for pulling scarfs off Cesar's images, are put to silence. Fare you well. There was more foolery yet, if I could remember it.

Cas. Will you sup with me to-night, Casca?

Casca. No, I am promised forth.

Cas. Will you dine with me to-morrow?

Casca. Ay, if I be alive, and your mind hold, and your dinner worth eating.

Cas. Good: I will expect you.

Casca. Do so: Farewell, both.

[Exit CASCA.]

Brus. What a blunt fellow is this grown to be? He was quick mettle, when he went to school.

Cas. So is he now in execution Of any bold or noble enterprise, However he puts on this tardy form. This rudeness is a sauce to his good wit, Which gives men stomach to digest his words With better appetite.

Brus. And so it is. For this time I will leave you:

To-morrow if you please to speak with me, I will come home to you; or, if you will, Come home with me, and I will wait for you.

Cas. I will do so:—till then, think of the world.

[Exit BRUTUS.]

Well, Brutus, thou art noble; yet, I see Thy honourable metal may be wrought From that it is dispos'd: Therefore 'tis meet That noble minds keep ever with their likes: For who so firm, that cannot be seduc'd? Cesar doth bear me hard;† but he loves Brutus: If I were Brutus now, and he were Cassius,

He should not humour* me. I will this night, In several hands,† in at the windows throw, As if they came from several citizens, Writings all tending to the great opinion That Rome holds of his name; wherein ob-

scurely

Cesar's ambition shall be glanced at:

And, after this, let Cesar seat him sure;

For we will shake him, or worse days endure.

[Exit.]

SCENE III.—The same.—A Street.

Thunder and Lightning. Enter, from opposite sides, CASCA, with his sword drawn, and CICCERO.

C.c. Good even, Casca: Brought you Cesar home?

Why are you breathless? and why stare you so?

Casca. Are you not mov'd, when all the sway of earth

Shakes, like a thing unfirm? O Cicero, I have seen tempests, when the scolding winds Have riv'd the knotty oaks; and I have seen The ambitious ocean swell, and rage, and foam, To be exalted with the threat'ning clouds: But never till to-night, never till now, Did I go through a tempest-dropping fire. Either there is a civil strife in heaven, Or else the world, too saucy with the gods, Incenses them to send destruction.

Cic. Why, saw you any thing more wonderful?

Casca. A common slave (you know him well by sight)

Held up his left hand, which did flame, and burn Like twenty torches join'd; and yet his hand, Not sensible of fire, remain'd unscorch'd.

Besides, (I have not since put up my sword) Against the Capitol I met a lion,

Who glar'd upon me, and went surly by, Without annoying me: And there were drawn

Upon a heap a hundred ghastly women, Transformed with their fear; who swore they saw

Men, all in fire, walk up and down the streets. And yesterday, the bird of night did sit,

Even at noon-day, upon the market-place, Hooting, and shrieking. When these prodigies

Do so conjointly meet, let not men say These are their reasons,—They are natural;

For, I believe, they are portentous things Unto the climate that they point upon.

Cic. Indeed, it is a strange-disposed time: But men may construe things after their fashion, Clean from the purpose of the things themselves. Comes Cesar to the Capitol to-morrow?

Casca. He doth; for he did bid Antonius Send word to you he would be there to-morrow.

Cic. Good night then, Casca: this disturbed sky Is not to walk in.

Casca. Farewell, Cicero. [Exit CICCERO.]

Enter CASSIUS.

Cas. Who's there?

Casca. A Roman.

Cas. Casca, by your voice.

Casca. Your ear is good. Cassius, what night is this?

Cas. A very pleasing night to honest men.

Casca. Who ever knew the heavens menace so

Cas. Those, that have known the earth so full of faults.

For my part, I have walk'd about the streets, Submitting me unto the perilous night;

And thus unbraced, Casca, as you, see, Have bar'd my bosom to the thunder-stone:‡

And, when the cross blue lightning seem'd to open The breast of heaven, I did present myself

Even in the aim and very flash of it.

Casca. But wherefore did you so much tempt the heavens?

It is the part of men to fear and tremble,

* A mechanic. † Has an unfavourable opinion of me.

* Cajole. † Hand-writings. ‡ Whole momentum of the globe. § Altogether. ¶ Bolt.

When the most mighty gods, by tokens, send
Such dreadful heralds to astonish us.

Cas. You are dull, Casca; and those sparks of
That should be in a Roman, you do want, [life
Or else you use not: You look pale, and gaze,
And put on fear, and cast yourself in wonder,
To see the strange impatience of the heavens:
But if you would consider the true cause,
Why all these fires, why all these gliding ghosts,
Why birds, and beasts, from quality and kind;*
Why old men fools, and children calculate;†
Why all these things change, from their ordinance,
Their natures and pre-formed faculties,
To monstrous quality—why, you shall find,
That heaven hath infus'd them with these spirits,
To make them instruments of fear and warning,
Unto some monstrous state. Now could I, Casca, Name to thee a man most like this dreadful

night;
That thunders, lightens, opens graves, and roars
As doth the lion in the Capitol:
A man no mightier than thyself, or me,
In personal action; yet prodigious grown,
And fearful, as these strange eruptions are,

Casca. 'Tis Cesar that you mean: Is it not,
Cassius?

Cas. Let it be who it is: for Romans now
Have thews‡ and limbs like to their ancestors;
But, woe the while! our fathers' minds are dead,
And we are govern'd with our mothers' spirits;
Our yoke and sufferance show us womanish.

Casca. Indeed, they say, the senators to-mor-
Mean to establish Cesar as a king: [row
And he shall wear his crown, by sea and land,
In every place, save here in Italy.

Cas. I know where I will wear this dagger
then;
Cassius from bondage will deliver Cassius:
Therein, ye gods, you make the weak most strong;
Therein, ye gods, you tyrants do defeat:
Nor stony tower, nor walls of beaten brass,
Nor airless dungeon, nor strong links of iron,
Can be retentive to the strength of spirit;
But life, being weary of these worldly bars,
Never lacks power to dismiss itself.
If I know this, know all the world besides,
That part of tyranny that I do bear,
I can shake off at pleasure.

Casca. So can I;
So every bondman in his own hand bears
The power to cancel his captivity.

Cas. And why should Cesar be a tyrant then?
Poor man! I know he would not be a wolf,
But that he sees the Romans are but sheep:
He were no lion, were not Romans hinds.§
Those that with haste will make a mighty fire,
Begin it with weak straws: What trash is Rome,
What rubbish, and what offal, when it serves
For the base matter to illuminate
So vile a thing as Cesar! But, O grief!
Where hast thou led me! I, perhaps, speak this Before a willing bondman; then I know
My answer must be made: But I am arm'd,
And dangers are to me indifferent.

Casca. You speak to Casca; and to such a man,
That is no fltering tell-tale. Hold‖ my hand:
Be factious¶ for redress of all these griefs;
And I will set this foot of mine as far,
As who goes farthest.

Cas. There's a bargain made.
Now know you, Casca, I have mov'd already
Some certain of the noblest-minded Romans,
To undergo with me an enterprise
Of honourable dangerous consequence;
And I do know, by this, they stay for me
In Pompey's porch: for now, this fearful night
There is no stir or walking in the streets;
And the complexion of the element,
Is favour'd like the work we have in hand,
Most bloody, fiery, and most terrible.

* Why they deviate from nature. † Prophecy.

Enter CINNA.

Casca. Stand close awhile, for here comes one in haste.

Cas. 'Tis Cinna, I do know him by his gait;
He is a friend.—Cinna, where haste you so?

Cin. To find out you: Who's that? Metellus Cimber?

Cas. No, it is Casca; one incorporate*
To our attempts. Am I not staid for, Cinna?

Cin. I am glad on't. What a fearful night is this? [sighs.

There's two or three of us have seen strange
Cas. Am I not staid for, Cinna? Tell me.

Cin. Yes,
You are. O Cassius, if you could but win
The noble Brutus to our party—

Cas. Be you content: Good Cinna, take this paper,

And look you lay it in the prætor's chair,
Where Brutus may but find it; and throw this
In at his window: set this up with wax
Upon old Brutus' statue: all this done,
Repair to Pompey's porch, where you shall find
us.

Are Decius Brutus and Trebonius there?

Cin. All but Metellus Cimber; and he's gone
To seek you at your house. Well, I will hie,
And so bestow these papers as you bade me.

Cas. That done, repair to Pompey's theatre.

[Exit CINNA.

Come, Casca, you and I will, yet, ere day,
See Brutus at his house: three parts of him
Is ours already; and the man entire,
Upon the next encounter, yields him ours.

Casca. Oh! he sits high in all the people's hearts:

And that, which would appear offence in us,
His countenance, like richest alchymy,
Will change to virtue and to worthiness.

Cas. Him, and his worth, and our great need of him,

You have right well concel'd.† Let us go,
For it is after midnight; and, ere day,
We will awake him, and be sure of him.

[Exeunt.

ACT II.

SCENE I.—The same.—BRUTUS' Orchard.

Enter BRUTUS.

Brn. What, Lucius! ho!—
I cannot, by the progress of the stars,
Give guess how near to day.—Lucius, I say!—
I would it were my fault to sleep so soundly.—
When, Lucius, when?‡ awake, I say: What,
Lucius!

Enter LUCIUS.

Luc. Call'd you, my lord?

Brn. Get me a taper in my study, Lucius:
When it is lighted, come and call me here.

Luc. I will, my lord. [Exit.

Brn. It must be by his death: and, for my part,

I know no personal cause to spurn at him,
But for the general. He would be crown'd:—
How that might change his nature, there's the question

It is the bright day, that brings forth the adder;
And that craves wary walking. Crown him?—

That;—
And then, I grant, we put a sting in him,
That at his will he may do danger with.
The abuse of greatness is, when it disjoins
Remorse§ from power: And, to speak truth of Cesar,

I have not known when his affections away'd
More than his reason. But 'tis a common proof,‖
That lowliness is young ambition's ladder,
Whereto the climber upward turns his face:

* Engaged in. † Conceiv'd. ‡ An exclamation of impatience. § Mercy. ¶ Truth.

But when he once attains the utmost round,
He then unto the ladder turns his back,
Looks in the clouds, scorning the base degrees
By which he did ascend: So Cesar may;
Then, lest he may, prevent. And, since the quarrel
Will bear no colour for the thing he is,
Fashion it thus; that what he is, augmented,
Would run to these and these extremities:
And therefore, think him as a serpent's egg,
Which, hatch'd, would, as his kind, grow mis-
And kill him in the shell. [chlevious;

Re-enter LUCIUS.

Luc. The taper burneth in your closet, Sir.
Searching the window for a flint, I found
This paper, thus seal'd up; and, I am sure,
It did not lie there when I went to bed.

Bru. Get you to bed again, it is not day.
Is not to-morrow, boy, the ides of March?

Luc. I know not, Sir.

Bru. Look in the calendar, and bring me word.

Luc. I will, Sir. [Exit.

Bru. The exhalations, whizzing in the air,
Give so much light, that I may read by them.
[Opens the Letter, and reads.

*Brutus, thou sleep'st; awake, and see thyself.
Shall Rome, &c. Speak—strike—redress!*

Brutus, thou sleep'st; awake.—
Such instigations have been often dropp'd
Where I have took them up.

Shall Rome, &c. Thus, must I piece it out;
Shall Rome stand under one man's awe? What!
Rome?

My ancestors did from the streets of Rome
The Tarquin drive, when he was call'd a king.
Speak—strike—redress!—Am I entreated then
To speak, and strike? O Rome! I make thee promise,

If the redress will follow, thou receivest
Thy full petition at the hand of Brutus!

Re-enter LUCIUS.

Luc. Sir, March is wasted fourteen days.

[Knock within.

Bru. 'Tis good. Go to the gate; somebody knocks. [Exit LUCIUS.

Since Cassius first did whet me against Cesar,
I have not slept.

Between the acting of a dreadful thing
And the first motion, all the interim is Like a phantasma, or a hideous dream:
The genius, and the mortal instruments,
Are then in council; and the state of man,
Like to a little kingdom, suffers then
The nature of an insurrection.

Re-enter LUCIUS.

Luc. Sir, 'tis your brother Cassius at the door,
Who doth desire to see you.

Bru. Is he alone?

Luc. No, Sir, there are more with him.

Bru. Do you know them?

Luc. No, Sir; their hats are pluck'd about their
And half their faces buried in their cloaks, [ears,
That by no means I may discover them
By any mark of favour.*

Bru. Let them enter. [Exit LUCIUS.

They are the faction. O conspiracy!
Sham'st thou to show thy dangerous brow by night,
When evils are most free! Oh! then, by day,
Where wilt thou find a cavern dark enough
To mask thy monstrous visage? Seek none,
Hide in it smiles and affability: [spiracy;
For if thou path † thy native semblance on, con-
Not Erebus ‡ himself were dim enough
To hide thee from prevention. §

Enter CASSIUS, CASCA, DECIUS, CINNA, ME-TELLUS CIMBER, and TREBONIUS.

Cas. I think we are too bold upon your rest:
Good morrow, Brutus; Do we trouble you?

Bru. I have been up this hour; awake, all
night.

Know I these men, that come along with you?

Cas. Yes, every man of them; and no man
here,

But honours you: and every one doth wish
You had but that opinion of yourself,
Which every noble Roman bears of you.

This is Trebonius.

Bru. He is welcome hither.

Cas. This Decius Brutus.

Bru. He is welcome too.

Cas. This, Casca; this, Cinna;
And this, Metellus Cimber.

Bru. They are all welcome.

What watchful cares do interpose themselves
Betwixt your eyes and night?

Cas. Shall I entreat a word? [They whisper.

Dec. Here lies the east: Doth not the day break here?

Casca. No.

Cin. Oh! pardon, Sir, it doth; and you grey lines,

That fret the clouds, are messengers of day.

Casca. You shall confess, that you are both deceiv'd.

Here, as I point my sword, the sun arises;
Which is a great way growing on the south,
Weighing the youthful season of the year.
Some two months hence, up higher toward the north

He first presents his fire; and the high east
Stands, as the Capitol, directly here.

Bru. Give me your hands all over, one by one.

Cas. And let us swear our resolution.

Bru. No, not an oath: If not the face of men,
The sufferance of our souls, the time's abuse,—
If these be motives weak, break off betimes,
And every man hence to his idle bed;
So let high-sighted tyranny range on,
Till each man drop by lottery. But if these,
As I am sure they do, bear fire enough
To kindle cowards, and to steel with valour
The melting spirits of women; then, countrymen,
What need we any spur, but our own cause,
To prick us to redress? what other bond,
Than secret Romans, that have spoke the word,
And will not palter? And what other oath,
Than honesty to honesty engag'd
That this shall be, or we will fall for it?
Swear priests, and cowards, and men cautelous,*
Old feeble carrions, and such suffering souls,
That welcome wrongs; unto bad causes swear
Such creatures as men doubt: but do not stain
The even virtue of our enterprise,
Nor the insuppressible mettle of our spirits,
To think that or our cause, or our performance,
Did need an oath; when every drop of blood
That every Roman bears, and nobly bears,
Is guilty of a several bastardy,
If he do break the smallest particle
Of any promise that hath pass'd from him.

Cas. But what of Cicero? Shall we sound him?
I think he will stand very strong with us.

Casca. Let us not leave him out.

Cin. No, by no means.

Met. Oh! let us have him; for his silver hairs
Will purchase us a good opinion,
And buy men's voices to commend our deeds:
It shall be said, his judgment rul'd our hands;
Our youths, and wildness, shall no whit appear,
But all be buried in his gravity.

Bru. Oh! name him not; let us not break with him: †

For he will never follow any thing
That other men begin.

Cas. Then leave him out.

Casca. Indeed, he is not fit.

Dec. Shall no man else be touch'd, but only
Cesar?

Cas. Decius, well urg'd:—I think it is not meet
Mark Antony so well belov'd of Cesar,

* Constancy.
‡ Hell.

† Walk in thy true form.
‡ Detention

* Wary, circumspect. † Break the matter to him

Should outlive Cesar: We shall find of him
A shrewd contriver; and, you know, his means,
If he improves them, may well stretch so far,
As to annoy us all: which, to prevent,
Let Antony and Cesar fall together.

Bru. Our course will seem too bloody, Caius
Cassius,

To cut the head off, and then hack the limbs;
Like wrath in death, and envy afterwards:
For Antony is but a limb of Cesar.
Let us be sacrificers, but no butchers, Caius.
We all stand up against the spirit of Cesar;
And in the spirit of men there is no blood:
Oh! that we then could come by Cesar's spirit,
And not dismember Cesar! But, alas,
Cesar must bleed for it! And, gentle friends,
Let's kill him boldly, but not wrathfully;
Let's carve him as a dish fit for the gods,
Not hew him as a carcass fit for hounds:
And let our hearts, as subtle masters do,
Stir up their servants to an act of rage,
And after seem to chide them. This shall make
Our purpose necessary, and not envious:
Which so appearing to the common eyes,
We shall be call'd purgers, not murderers.
And for Mark Antony, think not of him;
For he can do no more than Cesar's arm,
When Cesar's head is off.

Cas. Yet I do fear him:

For in the ingrafted love he bears to Cesar,—

Bru. Alas, good Cassius, do not think of him:
If he love Cesar, all that he can do
Is to himself; take thought, and die for Cesar:
And that were much he should; for he is given
To sports, to wildness, and much company.

Treb. There is no fear in him: let him not die;
For he will live, and laugh at this hereafter.

[Clock strikes.

Bru. Peace, count the clock.

Cas. The clock hath stricken three.

Treb. 'Tis time to part.

Cas. But it is doubtful yet,
Whether Cesar will come forth to-day, or no:
For he is superstitious grown of late;
Quite from the main opinion he held once
Of fantasy, of dreams, and ceremonies;*
It may be, these apparent prodigies,
The unaccustom'd terror of this night,
And the persuasion of his augurers,
May hold him from the Capitol to-day.

Dec. Never fear that: if he be so resolv'd,
I can o'ersway him: for he loves to hear
That unicorns may be betray'd with trees,
And bears with glasses, elephants with holes,
Lions with lolls, and men with flatterers:
But, when I tell him he hates flatterers,
He says, he does; being then most flattered.
Let me work:

For I can give this humour the true bent;
And I will bring him to the Capitol.

Cas. Nay, we will all of us be there to fetch
him.

Bru. By the eighth hour: Is that the utter-most?

Cin. Be that the uttermost, and fail not then.

Met. Caius Ligarius doth bear Cesar hard,
Who rated him for speaking well of Pompey;
I wonder none of you have thought of him.

Bru. Now, good Metellus, go along by him:†
He loves me well, and I have given him reasons;
Send him but hither, and I'll fashion him.

Cas. The morning comes upon us: We'll leave you, Brutus:— [member
And, friends, disperse yourselves: but all re-
What you have said, and show yourselves true
Romans.

Bru. Good gentlemen, look fresh and merrily;
Let not our looks put on† our purposes:
But bear it as our Roman actors do,
With untir'd spirits, and formal constancy:
And so good morrow to you every one.

[Exeunt all but BRUTUS.

* Omens at sacrifices. † By his house.
‡ Show our designs.

Boy! Lucius!—Fast asleep! It is no matter;
Enjoy the honey-heavy dew of slumber:
Thou hast no figures,* nor no fantasies,
Which busy care draws in the brains of men;
Therefore thou sleep'st so sound.

Enter PORTIA.

Por. Brutus, my lord!

Bru. Portia, what mean you? Wherefore rise
you now?

It is not for your health, thus to commit
Your weak condition to the raw-cold morning.

Por. Nor for your's neither. You have un-gently, Brutus,
Stole from my bed: And yesternight, at supper,
You suddenly arose, and walk'd about,
Musing, and sighing, with your arms across:
And when I ask'd you what the matter was,
You star'd upon me with ungentle looks:
I urg'd you further: then you scratch'd your
head,

And too impatiently stamp'd with your foot:
Yet I insisted. yet you answer'd not;
But, with an angry westure of your hand,
Gave sign for me to leave you: So I did;
Fearing to strengthen that impatience,
Which seem'd too much enkindled; and, withal
Hoping it was but an effect of humour,
Which sometime hath his hour with every man,
It will not let you eat, nor talk, nor sleep;
And, could it work so much upon your shape,
As it hath much prevail'd on your condition,†
I should not know you, Brutus. Dear my lord,
Make me acquainted with your cause of grief.

Bru. I am not well in health, and that is all.

Por. Brutus is wise, and were he not in health,
He would embrace the means to come by it.

Bru. Why, so I do:—Good Portia, go to bed.

Por. Is Brutus sick? and is it physical
To walk unbraced, and suck up the humours
Of the dank morning? What, is Brutus sick;
And will he steal out of his wholesome bed
To dare the vile contagion of the night?
And tempt the rheumy and unpurged air
To add unto his sickness? No, my Brutus;
You have some sick offence within your mind,
Which, by the right and virtue of my place,
I ought to know of: And upon my knees,
I charm† you, by my once commended beauty,
By all your vows of love, and that great vow
Which did incorporate and make us one,
That you unfold to me, yourself, your half,
Why you are heavy; and what men to-night
Have had resort to you: for here have been
Some six or seven, who did hide their faces
Even from darkness.

Bru. Kneel not, gentle Portia.

Por. I should not need, if you were gentle
Brutus.

Within the bond of marriage, tell me, Brutus,
Is it excepted, I should know no secrets
That appertain to you? Am I yourself,
But, as it were, in sort, or limitation;
To keep with you at meals, comfort your bed,
And talk to you sometimes? Dwell I but in the suburbs

Of your good pleasure? If it be no more,
Portia is Brutus' harlot, not his wife.

Bru. You are my true and honourable wife;
As dear to me, as are the ruddy drops
That visit my sad heart.

Por. If this were true, then should I know this secret.

I grant, I am a woman; but, withal,
A woman that lord Brutus took to wife:
I grant, I am a woman; but, withal,
A woman well-reputed; Cato's daughter.
Think you, I am no stronger than my sex,
Being so father'd, and so husbanded?
Tell me your counsels, I will not disclose them:
I have made strong proof of my constancy,
Giving myself a voluntary wound

* Ideal shapes. † Temper. ‡ Charge

Here, in the thigh : Can I bear that with patience,
And not my husband's secrets ?

Brw. O ye gods,
Render me worthy of this noble wife !

[Knocking within.
Hark, hark ! one knocks : Portia, go in a while ;
And by and by thy bosom shall partake
The secrets of my heart.
All my engagements I will construe to thee,
All the charactery* of my sad brows :—
Leave me with haste. [Exit PORTIA.

Enter LUCIUS and LIGARIUS.

Lucius, who is that, knocks ?

Luc. Here is a sick man, that would speak with you.

Brw. Caius Ligarius, that Metellus spake of.— Boy, stand aside.—Caius Ligarius ! how ?

Lig. Vouchsafe good morrow from a feeble
tongue.

Brw. Oh ! what a time have you chose out,
brave Caius,
To wear a kerchief ? 'Would you were not sick !

Lig. I am not sick, if Brutus have in hand
Any exploit worthy the name of honour.

Brw. Such an exploit have I in hand, Ligarius,
Had you a healthful ear to hear of it.

Lig. By all the gods that Romans bow before,
I here discard my sickness. Soul of Rome !
Brave son, deriv'd from honourable loins !
Thou, like an exorcist, hast conjur'd up
My mortified spirit. Now bid me run,
And I will strive with things impossible ;
Yes, get the better of them. What's to do ?

Brw. A piece of work that will make sick men whole.

Lig. But are not some whole that we must make sick ?

Brw. That must we also. What it is my Caius,
I shall unfold to thee, as we are going,
To whom it must be done.

Lig. Set on your foot ;
And, with a heart new fir'd, I follow you,
To do I know not what : but it sufficeth,
That Brutus leads me on.

Brw. Follow me then. [Exeunt.

SCENE II.—The same.—A Room in CESAR'S
Palace.

Thunder and Lightning. Enter CESAR, in his Night-gown.

Ces. Nor heaven, nor earth, have been at peace
to-night :
Thrice hath Calphurnia in her sleep cried out,
Help, ho ! they murder Cesar !—Who's within ?

Enter a SERVANT.

Serv. My lord ?

Ces. Go bid the priests do present sacrifice,
And bring me their opinions of success.

Serv. I will, my lord. [Exit.

Enter CALPHURNIA.

Cal. What mean you, Cesar ? Think you to walk forth ?

You shall not stir out of your house to-day.

Ces. Cesar shall forth : The things that threaten'd me,
Ne'er look'd but on my back ; when they shall see
The face of Cesar, they are vanished.

Cal. Cesar, I never stood on ceremonies,† Yet now they fright me. There is one within,
Besides the things that we have heard and seen,
Recounts most horrid sights seen by the watch.
A lioness hath whelped in the streets ;
And graves have yawn'd, and yielded up their
dead :

Fierce fiery warriors fight upon the clouds,
In ranks and squadrons, and right form of war,
Which drizzled blood upon the Capitol :

The noise of battle hartled* in the air,
Horses did neigh, and dying men did groan ;
And ghosts did shriek, and squeal† about the streets,

O Cesar ! these things are beyond all use,
And I do fear them.

Ces. What can be avoided,
Whose end is purpos'd by the mighty gods ?
Yet Cesar shall go forth : for these predictions
Are to the world in general, as to Cesar.

Cal. When beggars die, there are no comets seen :
The heavens themselves blaze forth the death of princes.

Ces. Cowards die many times before their deaths ;

The valiant never taste of death but once.
Of all the wonders that I yet have heard,
It seems to me most strange that men should
fear ;

Seeing that death, a necessary end,
Will come, when it will come.

Re-enter a SERVANT.

What say the augurers ?

Serv. They would not have you to stir forth to-day.

Plucking the entrails of an offering forth,
They could not find a heart within the beast.

Ces. The gods do this in shame of cowardice :
Cesar should be a beast without a heart,
If he should stay at home to-day for fear.
No, Cesar shall not : Danger knows full well,
That Cesar is more dangerous than he.
We were two lions litter'd in one day,
And I the elder and more terrible ;
And Cesar shall go forth.

Cal. Alas, my lord,
Your wisdom is consum'd in confidence.
Do not go forth to-day : Call it my fear
That keeps you in the house, and not your own.
We'll send Mark Antony to the senate-house ;
And he shall say you are not well to-day :
Let me, upon my knee, prevail in this.

Ces. Mark Antony shall say, I am not well ;
And, for thy humour, I will stay at home.

Enter DECIVS.

Here's Decius Brutus, he shall tell them so.

Dec. Cesar, all hail ! Good morrow, worthy
Cesar :

I come to fetch you to the senate-house.

Ces. And you are come in very happy time,
To bear my greeting to the senators,
And tell them that I will not come to-day :
Cannot, is false ; and that I dare not, falser ;
I will not come to-day : Tell them so, Decius.

Cal. Say, he is sick.

Ces. Shall Cesar send a lie ?
Have I in conquest stretch'd mine arm so far,
To be afraid to tell grey-beards the truth ?
Decius, go tell them, Cesar will not come.

Dec. Most mighty Cesar, let me know some cause,
Lest I be laugh'd at, when I tell them so.

Ces. The cause is in my will, I will not come ;
That is enough to satisfy the senate.

But, for your private satisfaction,
Because I love you, I will let you know.
Calphurnia here, my wife, stays me at home :
She dreamt to-night she saw my statue,
Which like a fountain, with a hundred spouts,
Did run pure blood ; and many lusty Romans
Came smiling, and did bathe their hands in it.
And these does she apply for warnings, portents,
And evils imminent ; and on her knee
Hath begg'd, that I will stay at home to-day.

Dec. This dream is all amiss interpreted ;
It was a vision, fair and fortunate :
Your statue spouting blood in many pipes,
In which so many smiling Romans bath'd,
Signifies that from you great Rome shall suck
Reviving blood ; and that great men shall press

* All that is characterized on.
† On prodigies or omens.

* Encountered.

† Cry with pain.

For tinctures, stains, relics,* and cognizance.
This by Calphurnia's dream is signified.

Ces. And this way have you well expounded it.

Dec. I have, when you have heard what I can say ;

And know it now : The senate have concluded
To give, this day, a crown to mighty Cesar.
If you shall send them word you will not come,
Their minds may change. Besides, it were a mock

Apt to be render'd, for some one to say,
*Break up the senate till another time,
When Cesar's wife shall meet with better dreams.*

If Cesar hide himself, shall they not whisper,
Lo, Cesar is afraid?

Pardon me, Cesar ; for my dear, dear love
To your proceeding bids me tell you this ;
And reason to my love is liable. †

Ces. How foolish do your fears seem now, Calphurnia !

I am ashamed I did yield to them.—
Give me my robe, for I will go :—

Enter PUBLIUS, BRUTUS, LIGARIUS, METELLUS,
CASCA, TREBONIUS, and CINNA.

And look where Publius is come to fetch me.

Pub. Good morrow, Cesar.

Ces. Welcome, Publius.

What, Brutus, are you stirr'd so early too ?
Good morrow, Casca. Caius Ligarius,
Cesar was ne'er so much your enemy,
As that same ague which hath made you lean.—
What is't o'clock ?

Brut. Cesar, 'tis stricken eight.

Ces. I thank you for your pains and courtesy.

Enter ANTONY.

See ! Antony, that revels long o' nights,
Is notwithstanding up :—

Good morrow, Antony.

Ant. So to most noble Cesar.

Ces. Bid them prepare within :—

I am to blame to be thus waited for.—
Now, Cinna :—Now, Metellus :—What, Trebonius !
I have an hour's talk in store for you ;
Remember that you call on me to-day :
Be near me, that I may remember you.

Treb. Cesar, I will :—and so near will I be,
That your best friends shall wish I had been farther. [Aside.

Ces. Good friends, go in, and taste some wine
with me ;
And we, like friends, will straightway go together.

Brut. That every like is not the same, O Cesar,
The heart of Brutus yearns ‡ to think upon !
[Exeunt.

SCENE III.—The same.—A street near the Capitol.

Enter ARTEMIDORUS, reading a Paper.

Art. Cesar, beware of Brutus ; take heed of Cassius ; come not near Casca ; have an eye on Cinna ; trust not Trebonius ; mark well Metellus Cimber ; Decius Brutus loves thee not ; thou hast wronged Caius Ligarius. There is but one mind in all these men, and it is bent against Cesar. If thou be'st not immortal, look about you : Security gives way to conspiracy. The mighty gods defend thee ! Thy lover, §

ARTEMIDORUS.

Here will I stand, till Cesar pass along,
And as a suitor will I give him this.
My heart laments, that virtue cannot live
Out of the teeth of emulation. ¶
If thou read this, O Cesar, thou may'st live ;
If not, the fates with traitors do contrive.
[Exit.

* As to a saint, for reliques ‡ Grieves.

† Subordinate.
‡ Friend
§ Envy.

SCENE IV.—The same.—Another part of the same Street before the House of BRUTUS.

Enter PORTIA and LUCIUS.

Por. I prythee, boy, run to the senate-house ;
Stay not to answer me, but get thee gone :
Why dost thou stay ?

Luc. To know my errand, madam.

Por. I would have had thee there, and here
again,
Ere I can tell thee what thou should'st do there.—
O constancy, be strong upon my side !
Set a huge mountain 'tween my heart and
tongue !

I have a man's mind, but a woman's might.
How hard it is for women to keep counsel !—
Art thou here yet ?

Luc. Madam, what should I do ?
Run to the Capitol, and nothing else ?
And so return to you, and nothing else ?

Por. Yes, bring me word, boy, if thy lord
look well,

For he went sickly forth : And take good note,
What Cesar doth, what suitors press to him.
Hark, boy ! what noise is that ?

Luc. I hear none, madam.

Por. Prythee, listen well ;
I heard a bustling rumour like a fray,
And the wind brings it from the Capitol.

Luc. Sooth, madam, I hear nothing.

Enter SOOTHSAYER.

Por. Come hither, fellow :
Which way hast thou been ?

Sooth. At mine own house, good lady.

Por. What is't o'clock ?

Sooth. About the ninth hour, lady.

Por. Is Cesar yet gone to the Capitol ?

Sooth. Madam, not yet ; I go to take my stand,
To see him pass on to the Capitol.

Por. Thou hast some suit to Cesar, hast thou
not ?

Sooth. That I have, lady : if it will please
Cesar

To be so good to Cesar, as to hear me,
I shall beseech him to befriend himself.

Por. Why, knowest thou any harm's intended towards him ?

Sooth. None that I know will be, much that I fear may chance.

Good-morrow to you. Here the street is narrow :
The throng that follows Cesar at the heels,
Of senators, of praetors, common suitors,
Will crowd a feeble man almost to death :
I'll get me to a place more void, and there
Speak to great Cesar as he comes along. [Exit.

Por. I must go in.—Ah me ! how weak a thing
The heart of woman is ! O Brutus !
The heavens speed thee in thine enterprise !
Sure, the boy heard me :—Brutus hath a suit,
That Cesar will not grant.—Oh ! I grow faint :—
Run, Lucius, and commend me to my lord ;
Say, I am merry : come to me again,
And bring me word what he doth say to thee
[Exeunt.

ACT III.

SCENE I.—The same.—The Capitol ; the Senate sitting.

A Crowd of People in the Street leading to the Capitol ; among them ARTEMIDORUS, and the SOOTHSAYER. Flourish. Enter
CESAR, BRUTUS, CASSIUS, CASCA, DECIVS, METELLUS, TREBONIUS, CINNA, ANTONY,
LEPIDUS, POPILIUS, PUBLIUS, and others.

Ces. The ides of March are come.

Sooth. Ay, Cesar ; but not gone.

Art. Hail, Cesar ! Read this schedule.

Dec. Trebonius doth desire you to o'er-read,
At your best leisure, this his humble suit.

Art. O Cesar, read mine first; for mine's a suit
That touches Cesar nearer: Read it, great Cesar.
Ces. What touches us ourself, shall be last serv'd.
Art. Delay not, Cesar; read it instantly.
Ces. What, is the fellow mad?
Pub. Sirrah, give place.
Ces. What, urge you your petitions in the street?
Come to the Capitol.

CESAR enters the Capitol, the rest following.
All the SENATORS rise.

Pop. I wish your enterprise to-day may thrive.
Cas. What enterprise, Popilius?
Pop. Fare you well. [Advances to CESAR.]
Brn. What said Popilius Lena?
Cas. He wish'd, to-day our enterprise might
I fear our purpose is discovered. [thrive.]
Brn. Look, how he makes to Cesar: Mark
him.
Cas. Casca, be sudden, for we fear prevention.—
Brutus, what shall be done? If this be known,
Cassius or Cesar never shall turn back,
For I will slay myself.
Brn. Cassius, be constant:
Popilius Lena speaks not of our purposes;
For, look, he smiles, and Cesar doth not change.
Cas. Trebonius knows his time: for, look you,
Brutus,
He draws Mark Antony out of the way.

[Exit ANTONY and TREBONIUS. CESAR and the SENATORS take their Seats.]
Dec. Where is Metellus Cimber? Let him go,
And presently prefer his suit to Cesar.

Brn. He is address'd: press near and second
him.
Cin. Casca, you are the first that rears your
hand.

Ces. Are we all ready? what is now amiss,
That Cesar and his senate must redress?
Met. Most high, most mighty, and most puissant Cesar,
Metellus Cimber throws before thy seat
An humble heart:— [Kneeling.]

Ces. I must prevent thee, Cimber.
These couchings, and these lowly courtesies,
Might fire the blood of ordinary men;
And turn pre-ordnance, and first decree,
Into the law of children. Be not fond
To think that Cesar bears such rebel blood,
That will be thaw'd from the true quality
With that which melteth fools; I mean, sweet
words,
Low-crook'd curtsies, and base spaniel fawning.
Thy brother by decree is banished;
If thou dost bend, and pray, and fawn for him,
I spurn thee like a cur out of my way.
Know, Cesar doth not wrong; nor, without cause,
Will he be satisfied.

Met. Is there no voice more worthy than my own,
To sound more sweetly in great Cesar's ear,
For the repealing of my banish'd brother?

Brn. I kiss thy hand, but not in flattery,
Cesar;
Desiring thee, that Publius Cimber may
Have an immediate freedom of repeal.

Ces. What, Brutus?
Cas. Pardon, Cesar; Cesar, pardon:
As low as to thy foot doth Cassius fall,
To beg enfranchisement for Publius Cimber.

Ces. I could be well mov'd, if I were as you;
If I could pray to move, prayers would move me:
But I am constant as the northern star,
Of whose true-fix'd and resting quality
There is no fellow in the firmament.
The skies are painted with unnumber'd sparks,
They are all fire, and every one doth shine;
But there's but one in all doth hold his place:
So, in the world; 'Tis furnish'd well with men,

• Ready.

And men are flesh and blood, and apprehensive;*

Yet, in the number, I do know but one
That unassailable holds on his rank,
Unshak'd of motion:† and, that I am he,
Let me a little show it, even in this;
That I was constant Cimber should be banish'd,
And constant do remain to keep him so.

Cin. O Cesar—
Ces. Hence! Wilt thou lift Olympus?
Dec. Great Cesar,—
Ces. Doth not Brutus bootless kneel?
Casca. Speak, hands, for me.

[CASCA stabs CESAR in the neck. CESAR catches hold of his arm. He is then stabbed by several other Conspirators, and at last by MARCUS BRUTUS.]

Ces. Et tu, Brute?—Then, fall, Cesar.
[Dies. The Senators and People retire in confusion.]

Cin. Liberty! Freedom! Tyranny is dead!—
Run hence, proclaim, cry it about the streets.

Cas. Some to the common pulpits, and cry out,
Liberty, freedom, and enfranchisement!

Brn. People, and senators! be not affrighted;
Fly not; stand still:—ambition's debt is paid.

Casca. Go to the pulpit, § Brutus.
Dec. And Cassius too.

Brn. Where's Publius?
Cin. Here, quite confounded with this mutiny.

Met. Stand fast together, lest some friend of Cesar's
Should chance—

Brn. Talk not of standing—Publius, good cheer;

There is no harm intended to your person,
Nor to no Roman else: so tell them, Publius.

Cas. And leave us, Publius; lest that the people, [chief.]

Rushing on us, should do your age some mis-
Brn. Do so;—and let no man abide this deed,
But we the doers.

Re-enter TREBONIUS.

Cas. Where's Antony?
Tre. Fled to his house amaz'd:
Men, wives, and children, stare, cry out, and run,
As it were doomsday.

Brn. Fates! we will know your pleasures:—
That we shall die, we know; 'tis but the time,
And drawing days out, that men stand upon.

Cas. Why, he that cuts off twenty years of life
Cuts off so many years of fearing death.

Brn. Grant that, and then is death a benefit:
So are we Cesar's friends, that have abridg'd
His time of fearing death.—Stoop, Romans, stoop,
And let us bathe our hands in Cesar's blood
Up to the elbows, and besmear our swords:
Then walk we forth, e'en to the market-place;
And, waving our red weapons o'er our heads,
Let's all cry, Peace! Freedom! and Liberty!

Cas. Stoop then, and wash. || How many ages
hence,

Shall this our lofty scene be acted o'er,
In states unborn, and accents yet unknown!

Brn. How many times shall Cesar bleed in sport,

That now on Pompey's basis lies along,
No worthier than the dust!

Cas. So oft as that shall be,
So often shall the knot of us be call'd
The men that gave our country liberty.

Dec. What, shall we forth?
Cas. Ay, every man away:

Brutus shall lead; and we will grace his heels
With the most boldest and best hearts of Rome.

Enter a SERVANT.

Brn. Soft, who comes here? A friend of Antony's.

* Capable of apprehending. † By entreaty.
‡ And thou, Brutus? § In the forum, the place of harangue. || Stoop: as washed with gold.

Serv. Thus, Brutus, did my master bid me kneel;

Thus did Mark Antony bid me fall down;
And, being prostrate, thus he bade me say:
‘Brutus is noble, wise, valiant, and honest;
‘Cesar was mighty, bold, royal, and loving;
‘Say, I love Brutus, and I honour him;
‘Say, I fear’d Cesar, honour’d him, and lov’d
‘If Brutus will vouchsafe, that Antony [him.
‘May safely come to him, and be resolv’d
‘How Cesar hath deserv’d to lie in death,
‘Mark Antony shall not love Cesar dead
‘So well as Brutus living; but will follow
‘The fortunes and affairs of noble Brutus,
‘Thorough the hazards of this untrod state,
‘With all true faith.’ So says my master Antony.

Bru. Thy master is a wise and valiant Roman;
I never thought him worse.
Tell him, so please him come unto this place,
He shall be satisfied; and, by my honour,
Depart untouch’d.

Serv. I’ll fetch him presently. [Exit SERV.]

Bru. I know, that we shall have him well to friend.

Cas. I wish we may: but yet have I a mind,
That fears him much; and my misgiving still
Falls shrewdly to the purpose.

Re-enter ANTONY.

Bru. But here comes Antony.—Welcome, Mark Antony.

Ant. O mighty Cesar! Dost thou lie so low?
Are all thy conquests, glories, triumphs, spoils,
Shrunk to this little measure? Fare thee well.—
I know not, gentlemen, what you intend,
Who else must be let blood, who else is rank: *
If I myself, there is no hour so fit
As Cesar’s death hour; nor no instrument
Of half that worth, as those your swords, made rich
With the most noble blood of all this world.
I do beseech ye, if you hear me hard,
Now, whilst your purpled hands do reek and smoke,
Fulfil your pleasure. Live a thousand years,
I shall not find myself so apt to die:
No place will please me so, no mean of death,
As here by Cesar, and by you cut off,
The choice and master spirits of this age.

Bru. O Antony! beg not your death of us.
Though now we must appear bloody and cruel,
As, by our hands, and this our present act,
You see we do; yet see you but our hands,
And this the bleeding business they have done:
Our hearts you see not, they are pitiful;
And pity to the general wrong of Rome
(As fire drives out fire, so pity, pity,)
Hath done this deed on Cesar. For your part,
To you our swords have leaden points, Mark
Antony:

Our arms, in strength of malice, † and our hearts,
Of brothers’ temper, do receive you in
With all kind love, good thoughts, and reverence.

Cas. Your voice shall be as strong as any man’s,
In the disposing of new dignities.

Bru. Only be patient, till we have appeas’d
The multitude, beside themselves with fear,
And then we will deliver you the cause,
Why I, that did love Cesar when I struck him,
Have thus proceeded.

Ant. I doubt not of your wisdom.
Let each man render me his bloody hand:
First, Marcus Brutus, will I shake with you:—
Next, Caius Cassius, do I take your hand;—
Now, Decius Brutus, yours;—now yours, Metellus:
Yours, Cinna;—and, my valiant Casca, yours;—
Though last, not least in love, yours, good Trebonius.

Gentlemen all,—alas! what shall I say?
My credit now stands on such slippery ground,

* Grown too powerful for the public safety.
† Though strong in the deed just performed.

That one of two bad ways you must conceit* me,
Either a coward or a flatterer.—

That I did love thee, Cesar, oh! ’tis true:
If then thy spirit look upon us now,
Shall it not grieve thee, dearer than thy death,
To see thy Antony making his peace,
Shaking the bloody fingers of thy foes,
Most noble! in the presence of thy corse?
Had I as many eyes as thou hast wounds,
Weeping as fast as they stream forth thy blood,
It would become me better, than to close
In terms of friendship with thine enemies.
Pardon me, Julius!—Here wast thou bay’d, brave hart:

Here didst thou fall; and here thy hunters stand
Sign’d in thy spoil, and crimson’d in thy lethe. †
O world! thou wast the forest to this heart;
And this, indeed, O world, the heart of thee.
How like a deer, stricken by many princes,
Dost thou here lie?

Cas. Mark Antony,—

Ant. Pardon me, Caius Cassius:
The enemies of Cesar shall say this;
Then, in a friend, it is cold modesty.

Cas. I blame you not for praising Cesar so;
But what compact mean you to have with us?
Will you be prick’d in number of our friends;
Or shall we on, and not depend on you?

Ant. Therefore I took your hands; but was indeed,

Sway’d from the point, by looking down on Cesar.
Friends am I with you all, and love you all;
Upon this hope, that you shall give me reasons,
Why, and wherein, Cesar was dangerous.

Bru. Or else were this a savage spectacle:
Our reasons are so full of good regard,
That were you, Antony, the son of Cesar,
You should be satisfied.

Ant. That’s all I seek:
And am moreover suitor, that I may
Produce his body to the market-place;
And in the pulpit, as becomes a friend,
Speak in the order of his funeral.

Bru. You shall, Mark Antony.

Cas. Brutus, a word with you.
You know not what you do; Do not consent,
That Antony speak in his funeral:
Know you how much the people may be mov’d
By that which he will utter! Aside.

Bru. By your pardon;—
I will myself into the pulpit first,
And show the reason of our Cesar’s death:
What Antony shall speak, I will protest
He speaks by leave and by permission:
And that we are contented Cesar shall
Have all true rites, and lawful ceremonies.
It shall advantage more, than do us wrong.

Cas. I know not what may fall; I like it not.

Bru. Mark Antony, here, take you Cesar’s body.
You shall not in your funeral speech blame us,
But speak all good you can devise of Cesar;
And say, you do’t by our permission;
Else shall you not have any hand at all
About his funeral: And you shall speak
In the same pulpit whereto I am going,
After my speech is ended.

Ant. Be it so;
I do desire no more.

Bru. Prepare the body then, and follow us.

[Exit all but ANTONY]

Ant. O, pardon me, thou piece of bleeding
earth,
That I am meek and gentle with these butchers!
Thou art the ruins of the noblest man
That ever lived in the tide of times.
Woe to the hand that shed this costly blood:
Over thy wounds now do I prophesy,
(Which, like dumb mouths, do ope their ruby lips)
To beg the voice and utterance of my tongue—
A curse shall light upon the limbs of men;
Domestic fury, and fierce civil strife,
Shall cumber all the parts of Italy;
Blood and destruction shall be so in use,

* Suppose me.

† Used by old writers for death.

And dreadful objects so familiar,
That mothers shall but smile, when they behold
Their infants quarter'd with the hands of war;
All pity chok'd with custom of fell deeds:
And Cesar's spirit, ranging for revenge,
With Atë by his side, come hot from hell,
Shall in these confines, with a monarch's voice,
Cry Hæc,* and let slip the dogs of war;†
That this foul deed shall smell above the earth
With carrion men, groaning for burial.

Enter a SERVANT.

You serve Octavius Cesar, do you not?

Serv. I do, Mark Antony.

Ant. Cesar did write for him to come to Rome.

Serv. He did receive his letters, and is coming:

And bid me say to you by word of mouth.—

O Cesar!— [Seeing the Body.]

Ant. Thy heart is big, get thee apart and weep.
Passion, I see, is catching; for mine eyes,
Seeing those beads of sorrow stand in thine,
Began to water. Is thy master coming?

Serv. He lies to-night within seven leagues of Rome.

Ant. Post back with speed, and tell him what hath chanc'd:

Here is a mourning Rome, a dangerous Rome,
No Rome of safety for Octavius yet;
Hie hence, and tell him so. Yet, stay a while;
Thou shalt not back, till I have borne this corse
Into the market-place: there shall I try,
In my oration, how the people take
The cruel issue of these bloody men;
According to the which, thou shalt discourse
To young Octavius of the state of things.
Lend me your hand.

[Exeunt with CESAR'S Body.]

SCENE II.—The same.—The Forum.

Enter BRUTUS and CASSIUS, and a throng of CITIZENS.

Cit. We will be satisfied; let us be satisfied.

Brn. Then follow me, and give me audience, friends.—

Cassius, go you into the other street,
And part the numbers.— [here;]
Those that will hear me speak, let them stay
Those that will follow Cassius, go with him;
And public reasons shall be rendered
Of Cesar's death.

1 Cit. I will hear Brutus speak.

2 Cit. I will hear Cassius; and compare their reasons,

When severally we hear them rendered.

[Exit CASSIUS, with some of the CITIZENS. BRUTUS goes into the Rostrum.]

3 Cit. The noble Brutus is ascended: Silence!

Brn. Be patient till the last.
Romans, countrymen, and lovers! hear me for my cause, and be silent, that you may hear: believe me for mine honour, and have respect to mine honour, that you may believe: censure me in your wisdom, and awake your senses, that you may the better judge. If there be any in this assembly, any dear friend of Cesar's, to him I say, That Brutus' love to Cesar was no less than his. If then that friend demand, why Brutus rose against Cesar, this is my answer:—Not that I loved Cesar less, but that I loved Rome more. Had you rather Cesar were living, and die all slaves, than that Cesar were dead, to live all freemen? As Cesar loved me, I weep for him; As he was fortunate, I rejoice at it; as he was valiant, I honour him; but, as he was ambitious, I slew him: There are tears for his love; joy for his fortune; honour for his valour; and death for his ambition. Who is here so base, that would be a bondman? If any, speak; for him have I offended. Who is here so rude, that would not be a Roman? If any, speak; for him have I offended. Who is here so vile that would not love his country? If any, speak; for him have I offended. I pause for a reply.

Cit. None, Brutus, none.

[Several speaking at once.]

Brn. Then none have I offended. I have done no more to Cesar, than you should do to Brutus. The question of his death is enrolled in the Capitol: his glory not extenuated wherein he was worthy; nor his offences enforced, for which he suffered death.

Enter ANTONY and others with CESAR'S Body.

Here comes his body, mourned by Mark Antony: who, though he had no hand in his death, shall receive the benefit of his dying, a place in the commonwealth; as which of you shall not? With this I depart; That, as I slew my best lover* for the good of Rome, I have the same dagger for myself, when it shall please my country to need my death.

Cit. Live, Brutus, live! live!

1 Cit. Bring him with triumph home unto his house.

2 Cit. Give him a statue with his ancestors.

3 Cit. Let him be Cesar.

4 Cit. Cesar's better parts
Shall now be crown'd in Brutus.

1 Cit. We'll bring him to his house with shouts and clamours.

Brn. My countrymen,—

2 Cit. Peace! silence! Brutus speaks.

1 Cit. Peace, ho!

Brn. Good countrymen, let me depart alone,
And, for my sake, stay here with Antony:
Do grace to Cesar's corse, and grace his speech
Tending to Cesar's glories; which Mark Antony,
By our permission, is allow'd to make.

I do entreat you, not a man depart,
Save I alone, till Antony have spoke. [Exit.]

1 Cit. Stay, ho! and let us hear Mark Antony.

3 Cit. Let him go up into the public chair;
We'll hear him:—Noble Antony, go up.

Ant. For Brutus' sake, I am beholden to you.

4 Cit. What does he say of Brutus?

3 Cit. He says, for Brutus' sake,
He finds himself beholden to us all.

4 Cit. 'Twere best he speak no harm of Brutus here.

1 Cit. This Cesar was a tyrant.

3 Cit. Nay, that's certain:

We are bless'd, that Rome is rid of him.

2 Cit. Peace; let us hear what Antony can say.

Ant. You gentle Romans,—

Cit. Peace, ho! let us hear him.

Ant. Friends, Romans, countrymen, lend me your ears;

I come to bury Cesar, not to praise him.

The evil that men do lives after them;

The good is oft interred with their bones.

So let it be with Cesar. The noble Brutus

Hath told you Cesar was ambitious;

If it were so, it was a grievous fault,

And grievously hath Cesar answer'd it.

Here, under leave of Brutus and the rest,

[For Brutus is an honourable man;

So are they all, all honourable men;]

Come I to speak in Cesar's funeral.

He was my friend, faithful and just to me:

But Brutus says he was ambitious;

And Brutus is an honourable man.

He hath brought many captives home to Rome,

Whose ransoms did the general coffers fill:

Did this in Cesar seem ambitious?

When that the poor have cried, Cesar hath wept:

Ambition should be made of sterner stuff:

Yet Brutus says he was ambitious;

And Brutus is an honourable man.

You all did see that, on the Lupercal,

I thrice presented him a kingly crown,

Which he did thrice refuse: Was this ambition?

Yet Brutus says he was ambitious;

* The signal for giving no quarter.
† Fire, sword, and famine.

* Friend

And sure he is an honourable man.
I speak not to disprove what Brutus spoke,
But here I am to speak what I do know.
You all did love him once, not without cause ;
What cause withholds you then to mourn for him ?
O judgment, thou art fled to brutish beasts,
And men have lost their reason !—Bear with me ;
My heart is in the coffin there with Cesar,
And I must pause till it come back to me.

Cit. Methinks, there is much reason in his sayings.

Cit. If thou consider rightly of the matter, Cesar has had great wrong.

3 Cit. Has he, masters ?

I fear there will a worse come in his place.

4 Cit. Mark'd ye his words ? He would not take the crown ;

Therefore, 'tis certain he was not ambitious.

1 Cit. If it be found so, some will dear abide it.

2 Cit. Poor soul ! his eyes are red as fire with weeping.

3 Cit. There's not a nobler man in Rome, than Antony.

4 Cit. Now mark him, he begins again to speak.

Ant. But yesterday, the word of Cesar might have stood against the world : now lies he there, And none so poor * to do him reverence.

O masters ! if I were dispos'd to stir Your hearts and minds to mutiny and rage, I should do Brutus wrong, and Cassius wrong, Who, you all know, are honourable men : I will not do them wrong ; I rather choose To wrong the dead, to wrong myself, and you, Than I will wrong such honourable men.

But here's a parchment, with the seal of Cesar ; I found it in his closet ; 'tis his will :

Let but the commons hear this testament, (Which, pardon me, I do not mean to read,) And they would go and kiss dead Cesar's wounds.

And dip their napkins in his sacred blood, Yea, beg a hair of him for memory,

And, dying, mention it within their wills, Bequeathing it as a rich legacy

Unto their issue.

4 Cit. We'll hear the will : Read it, Mark Antony.

Cit. The will ! the will ! we will hear Cesar's will.

Ant. Have patience, gentle friends, I must not read it ;

It is not meet you know how Cesar lov'd you. You are not wood, you are not stones, but men ;

And, being men, hearing the will of Cesar, It will inflame you, it will make you mad :

'Tis good you know not that you are his heirs ; For, if you should, oh ! what would come of it ?

4 Cit. Read the will : we will hear it, Antony ; You shall read us the will ; Cesar's will.

Ant. Will you be patient ? Will you stay a I have o'ershot † myself to tell you of it. [while ?

I fear I wrong the honourable men, Whose daggers have stabb'd Cesar : I do fear it.

4 Cit. They were traitors : Honourable men !

Cit. The will ! the testament !

2 Cit. They were villains, murderers : The will ! read the will !

Ant. You will compel me then to read the will ?

Then make a ring about the corse of Cesar, And let me show you him that made the will.

Shall I descend ? And will you give me leave ?

Cit. Come down.

2 Cit. Descend.

[He comes down from the Pulpit.

3 Cit. You shall have leave.

4 Cit. A ring ; stand round.

1 Cit. Stand from the herse, stand from the body.

2 Cit. Room for Antony ;—most noble Antony.

Ant. Nay, press not so upon me ; stand far off.

Cit. Stand back ! room ! bear back !

* All are too proud to show him any respect.

† Said more than I intended.

Ant. If you have tears, prepare to shed them now.

You all do know this mantle : I remember The first time ever Cesar put it on :

'Twas on a summer's evening, in his tent, That day he overcame the Nervii :—

Look, in this place ran Cassius' dagger through : See, what a rent the envious Casca made :

Through this, the well-beloved Brutus stabb'd, And, as he pluck'd his cursed steel away,

Mark how the blood of Cesar follow'd it ; As rushing out of doors, to be resolv'd

If Brutus so unkindly knock'd or no ; (For Brutus, as you know, was Cesar's angel)

Judge, O you gods, how dearly Cesar lov'd him ! This was the most unkindest cut of all :

For, when the noble Cesar saw him stab, Ingratitude, more strong than traitor's arms,

Quite vanquish'd him : then burst his mighty heart ;

And, in his mantle muffling up his face, Even at the base of Pompey's statue *

Which all the while ran blood, † great Cesar fell. Oh ! what a fall was there, my countrymen !

Then I, and you, and all of us fell down, Whilst bloody treason flourish'd over us.

Oh ! now you weep : and I perceive you feel The dint of pity : these are gracious drops.

Kind souls, what, weep you, when you but behold Our Cesar's vesture wounded ? Look you here,

Here is himself, marr'd as you see, with traitors.

1 Cit. O piteous spectacle !

2 Cit. O noble Cesar !

3 Cit. O woeful day !

4 Cit. O traitors, villains !

1 Cit. O most bloody sight !

2 Cit. We will be revenged : revenge ; about, —seek,—burn,—fire,—kill,—slay !—let not a traitor live.

Ant. Stay, countrymen.

1 Cit. Peace there :—Hear the noble Antony.

2 Cit. We'll hear him, we'll follow him, we'll die with him.

Ant. Good friends, sweet friends, let me not stir you up

To such a sudden flood of mutiny. They that have done this deed are honourable ;

What private griefs ‡ they have, alas, I know not, That made them do it : they are wise and honourable, And will no doubt, with reasons answer you, I come not, friends, to steal away your hearts ;

I am no orator, as Brutus is : But, as you know me all, a plain blunt man,

That love my friend : and that they know full well

That gave me public leave to speak of him. For I have neither wit, nor words, nor worth,

Action, nor utterance, nor the power of speech, To stir men's blood : I only speak right on ;

I tell you that, which you yourselves do know ; Show you sweet Cesar's wounds, poor, poor dumb mouths, And bid them speak for me : But were I Brutus,

And Brutus Antony, there were an Antony Would ruffle up your spirits, and put a tongue

In every wound of Cesar, that should move The stones of Rome to rise and mutiny.

Cit. We'll mutiny.

1 Cit. We'll burn the house of Brutus.

3 Cit. Away then, come, seek the conspirators.

Ant. Yet hear me, countrymen ; yet hear me speak.

Cit. Peace, ho ! Hear Antony, most noble Antony.

Ant. Why, friends, you go to do you know not what :

Wherein hath Cesar thus deserv'd your loves ? Alas, you know not :—I must tell you then :—

You have forgot the will I told you of.

* Statue for statue, is common among the old writers.

† Cesar's blood fell upon the statue, and trickled from it.

‡ Wronged.

Cit. Most true ;—the will ;—let's stay, and hear the will.

Ant. Here is the will, and under Cesar's seal. To every Roman citizen he gives,
To every several man, seventy-five drachmas.*

2 Cit. Most noble Cesar!—we'll revenge his death.

3 Cit. O royal Cesar!

Ant. Hear me with patience.

Cit. Peace, ho!

Ant. Moreover, he hath left you all his walks, His private harbours, and new-planted orchards, On this side Tyber; he hath left them you, And to your heirs for ever; common pleasures,† To walk abroad, and recreate yourselves.

Here was a Cesar: When comes such another?

1 Cit. Never, never:—Come, away, away: We'll burn his body in the holy place, And with the brands fire the traitor's houses. Take up the body.

2 Cit. Go, fetch fire.

3 Cit. Pluck down benches.

4 Cit. Pluck down forms, windows, any thing.

[Exeunt CITIZENS, with the Body.]

Ant. Now let it work: Mischief, thou art afoot, Take thou what course thou wilt!—How now, fellow?

Enter a SERVANT.

Serv. Sir, Octavius is already come to Rome.

Ant. Where is he?

Serv. He and Lepidus are at Cesar's house.

Ant. And thither will I straight to visit him: He comes upon a wish.‡ Fortune is merry, And in this mood will give us any thing.

Serv. I heard him say, Brutus and Cassius Are rid like madmen through the gates of Rome.

Ant. Belike, they had some notice of the people,

How I had mov'd them. Bring me to Octavius. [Exeunt.]

SCENE III.—The same.—A street.

Enter CINNA, the Poet.

Cin. I dreamt to night, that I did feast with Cesar,
And things unluckily charge my fantasy: § I have no will to wander forth of doors,
Yet something leads me forth.

Enter CITIZENS.

1 Cit. What is your name?

2 Cit. Whither are you going?

3 Cit. Where do you dwell?

4 Cit. Are you a married man, or a bachelor?

2 Cit. Answer every man directly.

1 Cit. Ay, and briefly.

4 Cit. Ay, and wisely.

3 Cit. Ay, and truly, you were best.

Cin. What is my name? Whither am I going? Where do I dwell? Am I a married man, or a bachelor? Then to answer every man directly, and briefly, wisely, and truly. Wisely I say, I am a bachelor.

2 Cit. That's as much as to say, they are fools that marry:—You'll bear me a bang for that, I fear. Proceed; directly.

Cin. Directly, I am going to Cesar's funeral.

1 Cit. As a friend, or an enemy?

Cin. As a friend.

2 Cit. That matter is answered directly.

4 Cit. For your dwelling,—briefly.

Cin. Briefly, I dwell by the Capitol.

3 Cit. Your name, Sir, truly.

Cin. Truly, my name is Cinna.

1 Cit. Tear him to pieces, he's a conspirator.

Cin. I am Cinna the poet, I am Cinna the poet.

4 Cit. Tear him for his bad verses, tear him for his bad verses.

2 Cit. It is no matter, his name's Cinna;

* A drachma is 7d. sterling.—2s. 3d. † Pleasure-grounds. ‡ His coming is the very thing I wished for. § My mind is oppressed with ill-omens.

pluck but his name out of his heart, and turn him going.

3 Cit. Tear him, tear him. Come, brands, ho! fire-brands. To Brutus', to Cassius'; burn all. Some to Decius' house, and some to Casca's; some to Ligarius': away; go. [Exeunt.]

ACT IV.

SCENE I.—The same.—A room in ANTONY'S House.

ANTONY, OCTAVIUS, and LEPIDUS, seated at a Table.

Ant. These many then shall die; their names are prick'd.

Oct. Your brother too must die; Consent you, Lepidus?

Lep. I do consent.

Oct. Prick* him down, Antony.

Lep. Upon condition Publius shall not live, Who is your sister's son, Mark Antony.

Ant. He shall not live; look, with a spot I damn† him.

But, Lepidus, go you to Cesar's house; Fetch the will hither, and we will determine How to cut off some charge in legacies.

Lep. What, shall I find you here?

Oct. Or here, or at

The Capitol. [Exit LEPIDUS.]

Ant. This is a slight unmeritable man, Meet to be sent on errands: Is it fit, The three-fold world divided, he should stand One of the three to share it?

Oct. So you thought him; And took his voice who should be prick'd to die, In our black sentence and proscription.

Ant. Octavius, I have seen more days than you; And though we lay these honours on this man; To ease ourselves of divers slanderous loads, He shall but bear them as the ass bears gold; To groan and sweat under the business, Either led or driven, as we point the way; And, having brought our treasure where we will, Then take we down his load, and turn him off, Like to the empty ass, to shake his ears, And graze in commons.

Oct. You may do your will; But he's a tried and valiant soldier.

Ant. So is my horse, Octavius; and, for that, I do appoint him store of provender. It is a creature that I teach to fight, To wind, to stop, to run directly on; His corporal motion govern'd by my spirit.

And, in some taste, is Lepidus but so; He must be taught, and train'd, and bid go forth; A barren-spirited fellow; one that feeds

On objects, arts, and imitations; Which, out of use, and stal'd by other men, Begin his fashion: Do not talk of him, But as a property.‡ And now, Octavius, Listen great things.—Brutus and Cassius, Are levying powers: we must straight make head: Therefore, let our alliance be combin'd, Our best friends made, and our best means stretch'd out;

And let us presently go sit in council, How covert matters may be best disclos'd, And open perils surest answered.

Oct. Let us do so: for we are at the stake, And bay'd§ about with many enemies; And some, that smile, have in their hearts, I fear Millions of mischief. [Exeunt.]

SCENE II.—Before BRUTUS' Tent, in the Camp near Sardis.

Drum.—Enter BRUTUS, LUCILIUS, LUCIUS, and Soldiers: TITINIUS and PINDARUS meeting them.

Bru. Stand here.

* Note. † Condemn. ‡ As a thing at our disposal. § Surrounded.

Luc. Give the word, ho ! and stand.

Bru. What now, Lucilius ? is Cassius near ?

Luc. He is at hand ; and Pindarus is come
To do you salutation from his master.

[PINDARUS gives a letter to BRUTUS.]

Bru. He greets me well.—Your master, Pin-
In his own change, or by ill officers, Pindarus,
Hath given me some worthy cause to wish
Things done, undone : but, if he be at hand,
I shall be satisfied.

Pin. I do not doubt

But that my noble master will appear
Such as he is, full of regard, and honour.

Bru. He is not doubted.—A word, Lucilius :
How he received you, let me be resolv'd.*

Luc. With courtesy, and with respect enough ;
But not with such familiar instances,
Nor with such free and friendly conference
As he hath used of old.

Bru. Thou hast describ'd

A hot friend cooling : Ever note, Lucilius,
When love begins to sicken and decay,
It useth an enforced ceremony.

There are no tricks in plain and simple faith :
But hollow men, like horses hot at hand,
Make gallant show and promise of their mettle :
But when they should endure the bloody spur,
They fall their crests, and like deceitful jades
Sink in the trial. Comes his army on ?

Luc. They mean this night in Sardis to be quarter'd ;

The greater part, the horse in general,
Are come with Cassius. [March within.]

Bru. Hark, he is arriv'd :—
March gently on to meet him.

Enter CASSIUS and Soldiers.

Cas. Stand, ho !

Bru. Stand, ho ! Speak the word along.

Within. Stand.

Within. Stand.

Within. Stand.

Cas. Most noble brother, you have done me wrong.

Bru. Judge me, you gods ! Wrong I mine enemies ?

And, if not so, how should I wrong a brother ?

Cas. Brutus, this sober form of yours hides
And when you do them—— [wrongs ;

Bru. Cassius, be content,
Speak your griefs* softly,—I do know you well :—
Before the eyes of both our armies here,
Which should perceive nothing but love from us,
Let us not wrangle : Bid them move away ;
Then in my tent, Cassius, enlarge your griefs,
And I will give you audience.

Cas. Pindarus,

Bid our commanders lead their charges off
A little from this ground.

Bru. Lucilius, do the like ; and let no man Come to our tent till we have done our conference.

Let Lucius and Titinius guard our door.

[Exit.]

SCENE III.—Within the tent of BRUTUS.— LUCIUS and TITINIUS at some distance from
it.

Enter BRUTUS and CASSIUS.

Cas. That you have wrong'd me, doth appear in this :

You have condemn'd and noted † Lucius Pella,
For taking bribes here of the Sardians ;
Wherein, my letters, praying on his side,
Because I knew the man, were slighted off.

Bru. You wrong'd yourself, to write in such a case.

Cas. In such a time as this, it is not meet
That every nice ‡ offence should bear his comment.

Bru. Let me tell you, Cassius, you yourself

Are much condemn'd to have an itching palm
To sell and mart your offices for gold,
To undeservers.

Cas. I an itching palm ?

You know that you are Brutus that speak this,
Or, by the gods, this speech were else your last.

Bru. The name of Cassius honours this corruption,

And chastisement doth therefore hide his head.

Cas. Chastisement !

Bru. Remember March, the ides of March remember !

Did not great Julius bleed for justice' sake ?
What villain touch'd his body, that did stab,
And not for justice ? What, shall one of us,
That struck the foremost man of all this world,
But for supporting robbers—shall we now
Contaminate our fingers with base bribes,
And sell the mighty space of our large honours,
For so much trash as may be grasped thus ?—
I'd rather be a dog, and bay* the moon,
Than such a Roman.

Cas. Brutus, bay not me,
I'll not endure it : you forget yourself,
To hedge me in ; I am a soldier, I
Older in practice, abler than yourself
To make conditions. †

Bru. Go to ; you're not, Cassius.

Cas. I am.

Bru. I say, you are not.

Cas. Urge me no more, I shall forget myself ;
Have mind upon your health, tempt me no further.

Bru. Away, slight man !

Cas. Is't possible ?

Bru. Hear me, for I will speak.

Must I give way and room to your rash choler ?
Shall I be frightened, when a madman stares ?

Cas. O gods ! ye gods ! Must I endure all
this ?

Bru. All this ! ay, more : Fret till your proud heart break ;

Go, show your slaves how choleric you are,
And make your bondmen tremble. Must I budge ?
Must I observe you ? Must I stand and crouch
Under your testy humour ? By the gods,
You shall digest the venom of your spleen,
Though it do split you : for from this day forth,
I'll use you for my mirth, yea, for my laughter
When you are waspish.

Cas. Is it come to this ?

Bru. You say, you are a better soldier :
Let it appear so ; make your vaunting true,
And it shall please me well : For mine own part
I shall be glad to learn of nobler men.

Cas. You wrong me every way, you wrong me,
Brutus ;

I said an elder soldier not a better :
Did I say, better ?

Bru. If you did, I care not.

Cas. When Cesar liv'd he durst not thus have mov'd me.

Bru. Peace, peace ; you durst not so have tempted him.

Cas. I durst not ?

Bru. No.

Cas. What ? durst not tempt him ?

Bru. For your life you durst not.

Cas. Do not presume too much upon my love,
I may do that I shall be sorry for.

Bru. You have done that you should be sorry for.

There is no terror, Cassius, in your threats :
For I am arm'd so strong in honesty,
That they pass by me as the idle win*,
Which I respect not. I did send to you
For certain sums of gold, which you denied me ;—
For I can raise no money by vile means ;
By heaven I had rather coin my heart,
And drop my blood for drachmas, than to wring
From the hard hands of peasants their vile trash
By any indirection. I did send
To you for gold to pay my legions,

* Inform'd † Enjoin'd.

‡ Complaints.
† Small

* Back at. † To confer the offices at my disposal.

Which you denied me :—Was that done like Cassius ?

Should I have answer'd Cains Cassius so ?
When Marcus Brutus grows so covetous,
To lock such rascal counters from his friends,
Be ready, gods, with all your thunderbolts,
Dash him to pieces !

Cas. I denied you not.

Bru. You did.

Cas. I did not :—he was but a fool,
That brought my answer back.—Brutus hath riv'd * my heart :

A friend should bear his friend's infirmities,
But Brutus makes mine greater than they are.

Bru. I do not, till you practise them on me.

Cas. You love me not.

Bru. I do not like your faults.

Cas. A friendly eye could never see such faults,

Bru. A flatterer's would not though they do appear

As huge as high Olympus.

Cas. Come, Antony, and young Octavius, come,
Revenge yourselves alone on Cassius !

For Cassius is weary of the world :

Hated by one he loves ; brav'd by his brother ;
Check'd like a bondman ; all his faults observ'd,
Set in a note-book, learn'd, and conn'd by rote,
To cast into my teeth. Oh ! I could weep
My spirit from mine eyes !—There is my dagger,
And here my naked breast ; within, a heart
Dearer than Plutus' mine, richer than gold :
If that thou be'st a Roman, take it forth ;
I, that denied thee gold, will give my heart :
Strike, as thou didst at Cesar ; for I know,
When thou didst hate him worse, thou lov'd'st him better.

Than ever thou lov'st Cassius.

Bru. Sheath your dagger :

Be angry when you will, it shall have scope ;
Do what you will, dishonour shall be humour.
O Cassius, you are yoked with a lamb
That carries anger, as the flint bears fire ;
Which, much enforced, shows a hasty spark,
And straight is cold again.

Cas. Hath Cassius liv'd

To be but mirth and laughter to his Brutus,
When grief, and blood ill-temper'd, vexeth
him ?

Bru. When I spoke that, I was ill-temper'd
too.

Cas. Do you confess so much ? Give me your
hand.

Bru. And my heart too.

Cas. O Brutus !—

Bru. What's the matter ?

Cas. Have you not love enough to bear with me, [me,
When that rash humour which my mother gave
Makes me forgetful ?

Bru. Yes, Cassius ! and, henceforth,
When you are over-earnest with your Brutus,
He'll think your mother chides, and leave you so.

[Noise within.]

Post. Within.] Let me go in to see the generals ;
There is some grudge between them, 'tis not meet
They be alone.

Luc. [Within.] You shall not come to them.

Post. [Within.] Nothing but death shall stay me.

Enter Post.

Cas. How now ! What's the matter ?

Post. For shame, you generals : What do you mean ?

Love, and be friends, as two such men should be ;
For I have seen more years, I'm sure, than ye.

Cas. Ha, ha ; how vilely doth this cynic rhyme !

Bru. Get you hence, Sirrah : saucy fellow,
hence.

Cas. Bear with him, Brutus ; 'tis his fashion.

* Reut.

Bru. I'll know his humour, when he knows his time :

What should the wars do with the jigg'ng * fools ?
Companion, † hence.

Cas. Away, away, be gone.

[Exit Post.]

Enter LUCILIUS and TITINIUS.

Bru. Lucilius and Titinius, bid the commanders

Prepare to lodge their companies to-night.

Cas. And come yourselves, and bring Mes-sala with you

Immediately to us.

[Exit LUCILIUS and TITINIUS.]

Bru. Lucius, a bowl of wine.

Cas. I did not think, you could have been so angry.

Bru. O Cassius, I am sick of many griefs.

Cas. Of your philosophy you make no use,
If you give place to accidental evils.

Bru. No man bears sorrow better :—Portia is dead.

Cas. Ha ! Portia ?

Bru. She is dead.

Cas. How 'scap'd I killing, when I cross'd you so ?—

O insupportable and touching loss !—
Upon what sickness ?

Bru. Impatient of my absence ;
And grief, that young Octavius with Mark Antony
Have made themselves so strong ;—for with her death

That tidings came ;—With this she fell distract,
And, her attendants absent, swallow'd fire.

Cas. And died so ?

Bru. Even so.

Cas. O ye immortal gods !

Enter LUCIUS, with Wine and Tapers.

Bru. Speak no more of her.—Give me a bowl of wine :—

In this I bury all unkindness, Cassius.

[Drinks.]

Cas. My heart is thirsty for that noble pledge :—

Fill, Lucius, till the wine o'erswell the cup ;
I cannot drink too much of Brutus' love.

[Drinks.]

Re-enter TITINIUS, with MESSALA.

Bru. Come in, Titinius—Welcome, good
Messala.

Now sit we close about this taper here,
And call in question our necessities.

Cas. Portia, art thou gone ?

Bru. No more, I pray you.—

Messala, I have here received letters,
That young Octavius, and Mark Antony
Come down upon us with a mighty power,
Bending their expedition toward Philippi.

Mess. Myself have letters of the self-same tenour.

Bru. With what addition ?

Mess. That by proscription, and bills of out-
Octavius, Antony, and Lepidus, [lawry,
Have put to death a hundred senators.

Bru. Therein our letters do not well agree ;
Mine speak of seventy senators, that died
By their proscriptions, Cicero being one.

Cas. Cicero one ?

Mess. Ay, Cicero is dead,
And by that order of proscription,—
Had you your letters from your wife, my lord ?

Bru. No, Messala.

Mess. Nor nothing in your letters writ of her ?

Bru. Nothing, Messala.

Mess. That, methinks, is strange.

Bru. Why ask you ? Hear you aught of her in yours ?

Mess. No, my lord.

* Jig, signified a metrical composition.
† A term of reproach.

Brut. Now, as you are a Roman, tell me true.
Mess. Then like a Roman bear the truth I tell:
 For certain she is dead, and by strange manner.

Brut. Why, farewell, Portia.—We must die,
 Messala:
 With meditating that she must die once,*
 I have the patience to endure it now.

Mess. Even so great men great losses should endure.

Cass. I have as much of this in art† as you,
 But yet my nature could not bear it so.

Brut. Well, to our work alive. What do you think

Of marching to Philippi presently?

Cass. I do not think it good.

Brut. Your reason?

Cass. This it is:

'Tis better that the enemy seek us:
 So shall he waste his means, weary his soldiers,
 Doing himself offence; whilst we, lying still,
 Are full of rest, defence, and nimbleness.

Brut. Good reasons must, of force, give place to better.

The people, 'twixt Philippi and this ground,
 Do stand but in a forc'd affection;
 For they have grudg'd us contribution;
 The enemy, marching along by them,
 By them shall make a fuller number up,
 Come on refresh'd, new-added, and encourag'd:
 From which advantage shall we cut him off,
 If at Philippi we do face him there,
 These people at our back.

Cass. Hear me, good brother.

Brut. Under your pardon—You must note beside,
 That we have tried the utmost of our friends,
 Our legions are brim-full, our cause is ripe:
 The enemy increaseth every day,
 We, at the height, are ready to decline.
 There is a tide in the affairs of men,
 Which, taken at the flood, leads on to fortune;
 Omitted, all the voyage of their life
 Is bound in shallows, and in miseries.
 On such a full sea are we now afloat;
 And we must take the current when it serves,
 Or lose our ventures.

Cass. Then, with your will, go on;
 We'll along ourselves, and meet them at Philippi.

Brut. The deep of night is crept upon our talk,
 And nature must obey necessity;
 Which we will nigard with a little rest.
 There is no more to say!

Cass. No more. Good night;
 Early to-morrow will we rise, and hence.

Brut. Lucius, my gown. [Exit LUCIUS.] Farewell, good Messala;
 Good night, Titinius:—Noble, noble Cassius,
 Good night, and good repose.

Cass. O my dear brother!
 This was an ill beginning of the night:
 Never come such division 'tween our souls!
 Let it not, Brutus.

Brut. Every thing is well.

Cass. Good night, my lord.

Brut. Good night, good brother.

Tit. Mess. Good night, lord Brutus.

Brut. Farewell, every one.

[Exeunt CASS. TIT. and MESS.]

Re-enter LUCIUS with the Gown.

Give me the gown. Where is thy instrument?

Luc. Here in the tent.

Brut. What, thou speak'st drowsily?
 Poor knave, I blame thee not; thou art o'erwatch'd.

Call Claudius, and some other of my men;
 I'll have them sleep on cushions in my tent.

Luc. Varro, and Claudius!

Enter VARRO and CLAUDIUS.

Var. Calls my lord?

Brut. I pray you, Sirs, lie in my tent, and sleep;

It may be I shall raise you by and by
 On business to my brother Cassius.

Var. So please you, we will stand, and watch your pleasure.

Brut. I will not have it so; lie down, good Sirs;

It may be, I shall otherwise bethink me.
 Look, Lucius, here's the book I sought for so:
 I put it in the pocket of my gown.

[SERVANTS lie down.]

Luc. I was sure your lordship did not give it me.

Brut. Bear with me, good boy, I am much forgetful.

Canst thou hold up thy heavy eyes awhile,
 And touch thy instrument a strain or two?

Luc. Ay, my lord, an it please you.

Brut. It does, my boy:

I trouble thee too much, but thou art willing

Luc. It is my duty, Sir.

Brut. I should not urge thy duty past thy might;

I know, young bloods look for a time of rest.

Luc. I have slept, my lord, already.

Brut. It is well done; and thou shalt sleep again;

I will not hold thee long: if I do live,
 I will be good to thee.

[Music, and a Song.]

This is a sleepy tune:—O murd'rous slumber!
 Lay'st thou thy leaden mace* upon my boy,
 That plays thee music?—Gentle knave, good night;

I will not do thee so much wrong to wake thee.
 If thou dost nod, thou break'st thy instrument;
 I'll take it from thee; and, good boy, good night.

Let me see, let me see;—Is not the leaf turn'd down,

Where I left reading? Here it is, I think.

[He sits down.]

Enter the GHOST of CESAR.

How ill this taper burns!—Ha! who comes here?

I think, it is the weakness of mine eyes
 That shapes this monstrous apparition,
 It comes upon me:—Art thou any thing?
 Art thou some god, some angel, or some devil,
 That mak'st my blood cold, and my hair to stare?
 Speak to me, what thou art.

Ghost. Thy evil spirit, Brutus.

Brut. Why com'st thou?

Ghost. To tell thee, thou shalt see me at Philippi.

Brut. Well;

Then I shall see thee again?

Ghost. Ay, at Philippi.

[Ghost vanishes.]

Brut. Why, I will see thee at Philippi then.—

Now I have taken heart thou vanishest:

Ill spirit, I would hold more talk with thee.—

Boy! Lucius!—Varro! Claudius! Sirs, awake!— Claudius!

Luc. The strings, my lord, are false.

Brut. He thinks he still is at his instrument.—
 Lucius, awake.

Luc. My lord!

Brut. Didst thou dream, Lucius, that thou so cry'dst out?

Luc. My lord, I do not know that I did cry.

Brut. Yes, that thou didst: Didst thou see any thing?

Luc. Nothing, my lord.

Brut. Sleep again, Lucius.—Sirrah, Claudius!
 Fellow thou! awake.

Var. My lord.

Claus. My lord.

Brut. Why did you so cry out, Sirs, in your sleep?

* At some time or other.

† In theory.

* Scriptura.

Var. Clau. Did we, my lord?

Br. Ay: Saw you any thing?

Var. No, my lord, I saw nothing.

Clau. Nor I, my lord.

Br. Go, and commend me to my brother Cassius;

And him set on his powers betimes before,
And we will follow.

Var. Clau. It shall be done, my lord.

[Exeunt.]

ACT V.

SCENE I.—The Plains of Philippi.

Enter OCTAVIUS ANTONY, and their Army.

Oct. Now, Antony, our hopes are answered:
You said, the enemy would not come down,
But keep the hills and upper regions;
It proves not so; their battles are at hand;
They mean to warn^a us at Philippi here,
Answering before we do demand of them.

Ant. Tut, I am in their bosoms, and I know
Wherefore they do it: they could be content
To visit other places; and come down
With fearful bravery, thinking, by this face,
To fasten in our thoughts that they have courage;
But 'tis not so.

Enter a MESSENGER.

Mess. Prepare you, generals:
The enemy comes on in gallant show;
Their bloody sign of battle is hung out,
And something to be done immediately.

Ant. Octavius, lead your battle softly on.
Upon the left hand of the even field.

Oct. Upon the right hand I, keep thou the left.

Ant. Why do you cross me in this exigent?

Oct. I do not cross you; but I will do so.

[March.]

Drum. Enter BRUTUS, CASSIUS, and their army; LUCILIUS, TITINIUS, MESSALA, and others.

Br. They stand, and would have parley.

Cas. Stand fast, Titinius: We must out and talk.

Oct. Mark Antony, shall we give sign of battle?

Ant. No, Cesar, we will answer on their charge.

Make forth, the generals would have some words.

Oct. Stir not until the signal.

Br. Words before blows: Is it so, countrymen?

Oct. Not that we love words better, as you do.

Br. Good words are better than bad strokes, Octavius.

Ant. In your bad strokes, Brutus, you give good words:

Witness the hole you made in Cesar's heart,
Crying, Long live! hail, Cesar!

Cas. Antony,
The posture of your blows are yet unknown;
But for your words, they rob the Hybla bees,
And leave them honeyless.

Ant. Not stingless too.

Br. Oh! yes, and soundless too;
For you have stol'n their buzzing, Antony,
And very wisely, threat before you sting.

Ant. Villains, you did not so, when your vile daggers

Hack'd one another in the sides of Cesar:
You show'd your teeth like apes, and fawn'd like hounds,

And bow'd like bondmen, kissing Cesar's feet;
Whilst dapp'd Casca, like a cur, behind,
Struck Cesar on the neck. O flatterers!

Cas. Flatterers!—Now, Brutus, thank yourself:

This tongue had not offended so to-day,
If Cassius might have rul'd.

Oct. Come, come, the cause: If arguing make us sweat,

The proof of it will turn to redder drops.

Look;

I draw a sword against conspirators;
When think you that the sword goes up again?—

Never, till Cesar's three and twenty wounds

Be well aveng'd; or till another Cesar

Have added slaughter to the sword of traitors,

Br. Cesar, thou can'st not die by traitors,

Unless thou bring'st them with thee.

Oct. So I hope;

I was not born to die on Brutus' sword.

Br. Oh! if thou wert the noblest of thy strain,

Young man, thou could'st not die more honourable.

Cas. A peevish school-boy, worthless of such honour,

Join'd with a masker and a reveller.

Ant. Old Cassius still!

Oct. Come, Antony; away.—

Defiance, traitors, hurl we in your teeth:

If you dare fight to-day, come to the field;

If not, when you have stomachs.

[Exeunt OCTAVIUS, ANTONY and their Army.]

Cas. Why now, blow, wind; swell, billow;
and swim, bark!

The storm is up, and all is on the hazard.

Br. Ho!

Lucilius; bark, a word with you.

Luc. My lord.

[BRUTUS and LUCILIUS converse apart.]

Cas. Messala,—

Mes. What says my general?

Cas. Messala,

This is my birth-day; as this very day
Was Cassius born. Give me thy hand, Messala:

Be thou my witness, that, against my will,

As Pompey was, am I compell'd to set

Upon one battle all our liberties.

You know, that I held Epicurus strong,

And his opinion: now I change my mind,

And partly credit things that do presage.

Coming from Sardis, on our former ensign^a

Two mighty eagles fell; and there they perch'd,

Gorging and feeding from our soldiers' hands,

Who to Philippi here consorted† us,

This morning are they fled away and gone;

And, in their steads, do ravens, crows, and kites,

Fly o'er our heads, and downward look on us,

As we were sickly prey; their shadows seem

A canopy most fatal, under which

Our army lies, ready to give up the ghost.

Mes. Believe not so.

Cas. I but believe it partly;

For I am fresh of spirit, and resolv'd

To meet all perils very constantly.

Br. Even so, Lucilius.

Cas. Now, most noble Brutus,

The gods to-day stand friendly; that we may,

Lovers in peace, lead on our days to age!

But, since the affairs of men rest still uncertain,

Let's reason with the worst that may befall.

If we do lose this battle, then is this

The very last time we shall speak together;

What are you then determined to do?

Br. Even by the rule of that philosophy,

By which I did blame Cato for the death

Which he did give himself—(I know not how,

But I do find it cowardly and vile,

For fear of what might fall, so to prevent

The time of life)—arming myself with patience,

To stay the providence of some high powers,

That govern us below.

Cas. Then, if we lose this battle,

You are contented to be led in triumph

Thorough the streets of Rome?

Br. No, Cassius, no: think not, thou noble

Roman,

^a Summon.

^a First standard.

† Accompanied.

That ever Brutus will go bound to Rome :
He bears too great a mind. But this same day
Must end that work the ides of March begun ;
And whether we shall meet again, I know not.
Therefore our everlasting farewell take :—
For ever, and for ever, farewell, Cassius !
If we do meet again, why we shall smile ;
If not, why then this parting was well made.

Cas. For ever, and for ever, farewell, Brutus !
If we do meet again, we'll smile indeed !
If not, 'tis true this parting was well made.

Bru. Why then, lead on.—Oh ! that a man might know
The end of this day's business ere it come !
But it sufficeth, that the day will end,
And then the end is known.—Come, ho ! away !
[Exeunt.]

SCENE II.—The same.—The Field of Battle.

Alarum.—Enter BRUTUS and MESSALA.

Bru. Ride, ride, Messala, ride, and give these bills •

Unto the legions on the other side :

[Loud Alarum.]
Let them set on at once ; for I perceive
But cold demeanour in Octavius' wing,
And sudden push gives them the overthrow.
Ride, ride, Messala : let them all come down.
[Exeunt.]

SCENE III.—The same.—Another part of the Field.

Alarum.—Enter CASSIUS and TITINIUS.

Cas. O, look, Titinius, look, the villains fly !
Myself have to mine own turn'd enemy :
This ensign here of mine was turning back ;
I slew the coward, and did take it from him.

Tit. O Cassius, Brutus gave the word too
early ;
Who having some advantage on Octavius,
Took it too eagerly ; his soldiers fell to spoil,
Whilst we by Antony are all enclos'd.

Enter PINDARUS.

Pin. Fly further off, my lord, fly further off ;
Mark Antony is in your tents, my lord !
Fly therefore, noble Cassius, fly far off.

Cas. This hill is far enough. Look, look, Ti-tinus ;

Are those my tents, where I perceive the fire ?

Tit. They are, my lord.

Cas. Titinius, if thou lov'st me,
Mount thou my horse, and hide thy spurs in
him,

Till he have brought thee up to yonder troops,
And here again ; that I may rest assur'd,
Whether yond' troops are friend or enemy.

Tit. I will be here again, even with a thought.
[Exit.]

Cas. Go, Pindarus, get higher on that hill ;
My sight was ever thick ; regard Titinius,
And tell me what thou not'st about the field.—
[Exit PINDARUS.]

This day I breathed first : time is come round,
And where I did begin, there I shall end ;
My life has run his compass.—Sirrah, what news ?

Pin. [Above.] O my lord !

Cas. What news

Pin. Titinius is ?

Enclosed round about with horsemen, that Make to him on the spur ;—yet he spurs on.—
Now they are almost on him ; now, Titinius !—
Now some 'light :—Oh ! he 'lights too :—he's ta'en ;—and, hark !

[Shout.]

They shout for joy.

Cas. Come down, behold no more.—
O coward that I am, to live so long,
To see my best friend ta'en before my face !

• Billets containing directions.

Enter PINDARUS.

Come hither, Sirrah :
In Parthia did I take thee prisoner ;
And then I swore thee, saving of thy life,
That whatsoever I did bid thee do, Thou should'st attempt it. Come now, keep thine oath !

Now be a freeman : and, with this good sword,
That ran through Cesar's bowels, search this bosom.

Stand not to answer ; Here, take thou the hilts ;
And, when my face is cover'd as 'tis now,
Guide thou the sword. Cesar, thou art reveng'd,
Even with the sword that kill'd thee.

[Dies.]

Pin. So, I am free ; yet would not so have been,
Durst I have done my will. O Cassius !
Far from this country Pindarus shall run,
Where never Roman shall take note of him.

[Exit.]

Re-enter TITINIUS, with MESSALA.

Mes. It is but change, Titinius ; for Octavius
Is overthrown by noble Brutus' power,
As Cassius' legions are by Antony.

Tit. These tidings will well comfort Cassius.

Mes. Where did you leave him ?

Tit. All disconsolate,
With Pindarus his bondman, on this hill.

Mes. Is not that he, that lies upon the ground ?

Tit. He lies not like the living. O my heart !

Mes. Is not that he ?

Tit. No, this was he, Messala,
But Cassius is no more.—O setting sun !
As in thy red rays thou dost sink to night,
So in his red blood Cassius' day is set ;
The sun of Rome is set ! Our day is gone ;
Clouds, dews, and dangers come ; our deeds are
done !

Mistrust of my success hath done this deed.

Mes. Mistrust of good success hath done this deed.

O hateful error, melancholy's child !
Why didst thou show to the apt thoughts of men
The things that are not ? O error, soon conceiv'd,

Thou never com'st unto a happy birth,
But kill'st the mother that engender'd thee.

Tit. What, Pindarus ! Where art thou, Pin-
darus ?

Mes. Seek him, Titinius : whilst I go to meet
The noble Brutus, thrusting this report
Into his ears : I may say, thrusting it :
For piercing steel, and darts envenomed,
Shall be as welcome to the ears of Brutus,
As tidings of this sight.

Tit. Hie you, Messala,
And I will seek for Pindarus the while.

[Exit MESSALA.]

Why didst thou send me forth, brave Cassius ?
Did I not meet thy friends ? and did not they Put on my brows this wreath of victory,
And bid me give't thee ? Didst thou not hear their shouts ?

Alas ! thou hast misconstrued every thing.
But hold thee, take this garland on thy brow ;
Thy Brutus bid me give it thee, and I
Will do his bidding.—Brutus, come apace,
And see how I regarded Calus Cassius.—
By your leave, gods :—This is a Roman's part :
Come, Cassius' sword, and find Titinius' heart.

[Dies.]

Alarum. Re-enter MESSALA, with BRUTUS, young CATO, STRATO, VOLUMNIVS, and LU-CILIUS.

Bru. Where, where, Messala, doth his body lie ?

Mes. Lo, yonder ; and Titinius mourning 't.

Bru. Titinius' face is upward.

Cato. He is slain.

Bru. O Julius Cesar, thou art mighty yet !

Thy spirit walks abroad, and turns our swords
In our own proper* entrails.

[Low Alarums.]

Cato. Brave Titinius!

Look, wher he have not crown'd dead Cassius!

Brut. Are yet two Romans living such as these?—

The last of all the Romans, fare thee well!

It is impossible that ever Rome

Should breed thy fellow.—Friends, I owe more
tears

To this dead man, than you shall see me pay.—

I shall find time, Cassius, I shall find time.—

Come, therefore, and to Thassos send his body;

His funeral shall not be in our camp,

Lest it discomfort us.—Lucilius, come;—

And come, young Cato; let us to the field.—

Labeo, and Flavius, set our battles on:—

'Tis three o'clock; and, Romans, yet e'er night

We shall try fortune in a second fight.

[Exeunt.]

SCENE IV.—Another part of the field.

Alarum.—Enter, fighting, Soldiers of both Armies; then BRUTUS, CATO, LUCILIUS, and others.

Brut. Yet, countrymen, oh! yet hold up your heads!

Cato. What bastard doth not? Who will go
with me?

I will proclaim my name about the field:—

I am the son of Marcus Cato, ho!

A foe to tyrants, and my country's friend:

I am the son of Marcus Cato, ho!

[Charges the Enemy.]

Brut. And I am Brutus, Marcus Brutus, I;

Brutus, my country's friend; know me for Brutus.

[Exit, charging the Enemy. CATO is overpowered and falls.]

Luc. O young and noble Cato, art thou down?

Why, now thou diest as bravely as Titinius;

And may'st be honour'd being Cato's son.

1 Sold. Yield, or thou diest.

Luc. Only I yield to die:

There is so much that thou wilt kill me straight;

[Offering Money.]

Kill Brutus, and be honour'd in his death.

1 Sold. We must not.—A noble prisoner!

2 Sold. Room, ho! Tell Antony, Brutus is ta'en.

1 Sold. I'll tell the news.—Here comes the general:—

Enter ANTONY.

Brutus is ta'en, Brutus is ta'en, my lord.

Ant. Where is he?

Luc. Safe, Antony; Brutus is safe enough:

I dare assure thee, that no enemy

Shall ever take alive the noble Brutus:

The gods defend him from so great a shame!

When you do find him, or alive, or dead,

He will be found like Brutus, like himself.

Ant. This is not Brutus, friend; but, I assure you,

A prize no less in worth: keep this man safe,

Give him all kindness: I had rather have Such men my friends than enemies. Go on,

And see wher Brutus be alive or dead:

And bring us word unto Octavius' tent,

How every thing is chanc'd.

[Exeunt.]

SCENE V.—Another part of the Field.

Enter BRUTUS, DARDANIUS, CLITUS, STRATO, and VOLUMNIUS.

Brut. Come, poor remains of friends, rest on this rock.

* Into our own bodies.

Clit. Statillius show'd the torch-light; but, my
lord,

He came not back; he is or ta'en, or slain.

Brut. Sit thee down, Clitus: Slaying is the word;

It is a deed in fashion. Hark thee, Clitus.—

[Whispering.]

Clit. What, I, my lord? No, not for all the world.

Brut. Peace then, no words.

Clit. I'll rather kill myself

Brut. Hark thee, Dardanius!

[Whispers him.]

Dard. I do such a deed?

Clit. O Dardanius!

Dard. O Clitus!

Clit. What ill request did Brutus make to
thee?

Dard. To kill him, Clitus: Look, he meditates.

Clit. Now is that noble vessel full of grief,
That it runs over even at his eyes.

Brut. Come hither, good Volumnius; list a word.

Vol. What says my lord?

Brut. Why, this, Volumnius:

The ghost of Cesar hath appear'd to me

Two several times by night: at Sardis, once;

And this last night, here in Philippi' fields.

I know my hour is come.

Vol. Not so, my lord.

Brut. Nay, I am sure it is, Volumnius.

Thou see'st the world, Volumnius, how it goes;

Our enemies have beat us to the pit:

It is more worthy to leap in ourselves,

Than tarry till they push us. Good Volum-
nius,

Thou know'st that we two went to school together;

Even for that our love of old, I pray thee,

Hold thou my sword-hilts, whilst I run on it.

Vol. That's not an office for a friend, my lord.

[Alarum still.]

Clit. Fly, fly, my lord; there is no tarrying
here.

Brut. Farewell to you;—and you;—and you
Volumnius.—

Strato, thou hast been all this while asleep:

Farewell to thee too, Strato.—Countrymen,

My heart doth joy, that yet, in all my life,

I found no man, but he was true to me.

I shall have glory by this losing day

More than Octavius and Mark Antony,

By this vile conquest, shall attain unto.

So, fare you well at once: for Brutus' tongue

Hath almost ended his life's history:

Night hangs upon mine eyes; my bones would rest;

That have but labour'd to attain this hour.

[Alarum. Cry within; Fly, fly, fly.]

Clit. Fly, my lord, fly.

Brut. Hence; I will follow thee.

[*Exeunt CLITUS, DARDANIUS, and VOLUM-
NIUS.*]

I prythee, Strato, stay thou by thy lord:

Thou art a fellow of a good respect;

Thy life hath had some smatch of honour in it:

Hold then my sword, and turn away thy face,

While I do run upon it. Wilt thou, Strato?

Strat. Give me your hand first: Fare you well,
my lord.

Brut. Farewell, good Strato.—Cesar, now be still:

I kill'd not thee with half so good a will.

[He runs on his Sword and dies.]

Alarum. Retreat. Enter OCTAVIUS, ANTONY, MESSALA, LUCILIUS, and their Army.

Oct. What man is that?

Mes. My master's man.—Strato, where is thy
master?

Strat. Free from the bondage you are in,
Messala;

The conquerors can but make a fire of him;

For Brutus only overcame himself,
And no man else hath honour by his death.

Luc. So Brutus should be found.—I thank thee, Brutus,
That thou hast prov'd Lucilius' saying true.

Oct. All that serv'd Brutus, I will entertain
them.*

Fellow, wilt thou bestow thy time with me?

Str. Ay, if Messala will prefer† me to you.

Oct. Do so, Messala.

Mes. How died my master, Strato?

Str. I held the sword, and he did run on
it.

Mes. Octavius, then take him to follow thee,
That did the latest service to my master.

* Take them into my service.

† Recommend.

Ant. This was the noblest Roman of them all;
All the conspirators, save only he,
Did that they did in envy of great Cesar:
He, only, in a general honest thought,
And common good to all made one of them.
His life was gentle; and the elements
So mix'd in him, that Nature might stand up,
And say to all the world, This was a man!

Oct. According to his virtue let us use
him,

With all respect and rites of burial.
Within my tent his bones to-night shall lie,
Most like a soldier, order'd honourably.
So, call the field to rest: and let's away,
To part the glories of this happy day.

Exeunt.

Antony and Cleopatra.

Antony. Egypt! thou knew'st, too well,
My heart was to thy rudder tied by the strings,
And thou should'st tow me after! O'er my spirit,
Thy full supremacy thou knew'st.

Cleo. Thou teachest like a fool, the way to lose

Act I. Scene

Were I the wearer of Antonius' beard,
I would not shave to-day.

Lep. Your speech is passion;
But pray you, stir no sedition up.

Her head's inclin'd, and death will seize her; but

ANTONY AND CLEOPATRA.

LITERARY AND HISTORICAL NOTICE.

THIS play is supposed to have been written in the year 1608; and some of its incidents may have been borrowed from a production of Daniel's, called "The Tragedie of Cleopatra," which was entered on the books of the Stationers' Company in the year 1593. It rapidly condenses the events of a considerable period, commencing with the triple partition of the empire at the death of Brutus, B. C. 41, and terminating with the final overthrow of the Ptolemean dynasty, B. C. 31. Its historical features are, upon the whole, accurately drawn; and the sentiments of many of the characters are literally copied from Plutarch and other biographers.—Antony's illicit connection with Cleopatra, his brutal treatment of the amiable Octavia, and his absurd assumption of despotic power in bequeathing the Roman provinces to a degraded progeny, were the ostensible grounds of the rupture which ended in his death, and united the whole extent of Roman conquest under one imperial sceptre. The character of Cleopatra, the fascinating, dexterous, and incontinent Egyptian, abounds in poetical beauty; and the rough soldier's description of her passage down the Cydnus, has ever been considered a luxuriant specimen of glowing oriental description. But it is in the portrait of Antony that the discriminating reader will chiefly discover the pencil of a master. It is a choice finish to the outline of his character, as given in the play of Julius Cesar. He was then "a masker and a reveller," of comely person, lively wit, and insinuating address:—but the fire of youth, and the dictates of ambition, restrained his licentious cravings within tolerable bounds. In the decline of life, and in the lap of voluptuousness, with wealth at his command, and monarchs at his footstool, we find him alternately playing the fool, the hero, or the barbarian, trifling away the treasures of the East in sensuality and indolence, and destroying a noble army by cowardice and obstinacy. Still, the rays of inherent greatness occasionally gleam through a cloud of ignoble propensities, and glimmerings of Roman greatness partially reclaim a career of the most doting effeminacy. The philosophy of his mind, and the cool superiority of maturer years, are admirably portrayed in the first re-criminatory scene with Octavius Cesar, who, notwithstanding the flattery of historians, "was deceitful, mean-spirited, proud, and revengeful."—Dr. Johnson says: "This play keeps curiosity always busy, and the passions always interested. The continual hurry of the action, the variety of incidents, and the quick succession of one passage to another, call the mind forwards without intermission from the first act to the last. But the power of delighting is derived principally from the frequent changes of the scene; for, except the feminine arts (some of which are too low) which distinguish Cleopatra, no character is very strongly discriminated. Upton, who did not easily miss what he desired to find, has discovered that the language of Antony is, with great skill and learning, made pompous and superb, according to his real practice. But I think his diction not distinguishable from that of others: the most tumid speech in the play is that which Cesar makes to Antony."

ACT I.

SCENE I.—Alexandria.—A Room in CLEOPATRA'S Palace.

Enter DEMETRIUS and PHILO.

PHIL. Nay, but this dotage of our general's O'erflows the measure; those his goodly eyes, That e'er the files and musters of the war Have glow'd like plated Mars, now bend, now turn, The office and devotion of their view

Upon a tawny front: his captain's heart, Which in the scuffles of great fights hath burst The buckles on his breast, reneges* all temper; And is become the bellows and the fan To cool a gypsy's lust. Look where they come!

Flourish. Enter ANTONY and CLEOPATRA with their Trains: EUNUCHS fanning her.

Take but good note and you shall see in him

* Renounces.

The triple * pillar of the world transform'd
Into a strumpet's fool : behold and see.

Cleo. If it be love indeed, tell me how much †

Ant. There's beggary in the love that can be reckon'd.

Cleo. I'll set a bonnet ‡ how far to be belov'd.

Ant. Thou must thou needs find out new heaven, new earth.

Enter an ATTENDANT.

Att. News, my good lord, from Rome—

Ant. Grates me :—The sum †—

Cleo. Nay, hear them, ‡ Antony :
Fulvia, perchance is angry ; or, who knows
If the scarce-bearded Cesar have not sent
His powerful mandate to you, Do this, or this :
Take in that kingdom, and enfranchise that :
Perform't, or else we damn thee.

Ant. How, my love !

Cleo. Perchance,—nay, and most like,
You must not stay here longer, your dismissal
Is come from Cesar ; therefore hear it, Antony.— Where's Fulvia's process ! ‡ Cesar's, I would say †—Both †—

Call in the messengers.—As I am Egypt's queen,
Thou blushest, Antony ; and that blood of thine
Is Cesar's homager ; else so thy cheek pays shame,
When shrill-tongu'd Fulvia scolds—The messengers.

Ant. Let Rome in Tyber melt ! and the wide arch

Of the rang'd empire fall ! Here is my space :
Kingdoms are clay : our dungy earth alike
Feeds beast as man : the nobleness of life
Is, to do thus ; when such a mutual pair,

[Embracing.]

And such a twain can do't, in which, I bind
On pain of punishment, the world to weet, †
We stand up peerless.

Cleo. Excellent falsehood !

Why did he marry Fulvia, and not love her ?—
I'll seem the fool I am not : Antony
Will be himself.

Ant. But stirr'd by Cleopatra.—

Now, for the love of Love,  and her soft hours,
Let's not confound the time with conference
harsh :

There's not a minute of our lives should stretch Without some pleasure now : What sport tonight ?

Cleo. Hear the ambassadors.

Ant. Fie, wrangling queen !

Whom every thing becomes, to chide, to laugh,
To weep ; whose every passion fully strives
To make itself, in thee, fair and admir'd !
No messenger ; but thine, and all alone,
To-night we'll wander through the streets, and note
The qualities of people. Come, my queen ;
Last night you did desire it :—Speak not to us.

[Exeunt. ANT. and CLEO. with their Train.]

Dem. Is Cesar with Antonius priz'd so slight ?

Phi. Sir, sometimes, when he is not Antony,
He comes too short of that great property
Which still should go with Antony.

Dem. I'm full sorry,

That he approves the common liar, †† who
Thus speaks of him at Rome : But I will hope
Of better deeds to-morrow. Rest you happy !

[Exeunt.]

SCENE II.—The Same.—Another Room.

Enter CHARMIAN, IRAS, ALEXAS, and a SOOTHSAYER.

Char. Lord Alexas, sweet Alexas, most any thing Alexas, almost most absolute Alexas, where's the soothsayer that you praised so to the queen ? Oh ! that I knew this husband, which, you say, must charge his horns with gar-lands !

Alex. Soothsayer.

Sooth. Your will †

Char. Is this the man ?—Is't you, Sir, that know things ?

Sooth. In nature's infinite book of secrecy,

A little I can read.

Alex. Show him your hand.

Enter ENOBARBUS.

Eno. Bring in the banquet quickly ; wine

Char. Good Sir, give me good fortune.

Sooth. I make not, but foresee.

Char. Pray then, foresee me one.

Sooth. You shall be yet far fairer than you are.

Char. He means, in flesh.

Irás. No, you shall paint when you are old.

Char. Wrinkles forbid !

Alex. Vex not his prescience : be attentive.

Char. Hush !

Sooth. You shall be more loving than beloved.

Char. I had rather heat my liver with drinking.

Alex. Nay, hear him.

Char. Good now, some excellent fortune !
Let me be married to three kings in a forenoon, and widow them all : let me have a child at fifty,
to whom Herod of Jewry * may do homage : and me to marry me with Octavius Cesar, and companion me with my mistress.

Sooth. You shall outlive the lady whom you serve.

Char. O excellent ! I love long life better than figs. †

Sooth. You have seen and proved a fairer former fortune

Than that which is to approach.

Char. Then, belike, my children shall have no names : ‡ Pr'ythee, how many boys and wenches must I have ?

Sooth. If every of your wishes had a womb,
And fertile every wish, a million.

Char. Out fool ! I forgive thee for a witch.

Alex. You think none but your sheets are privy to your wishes.

Char. Nay, come, tell Irás her's.

Alex. We'll know all our fortunes.

Eno. Mine, and most of our fortunes, to-night, shall be—drunk to bed.

Irás. There's a palm presages chastity, if nothing else.

Char. Even as the overflowing Nilus presageth famine.

Irás. Go, you wild bedfellow, you cannot soothsay.

Char. Nay, if an oily palm be not a fruitful prognostication, I cannot scratch mine ear.—
Pr'ythee, tell her but a worky-day fortune.

Sooth. Your fortunes are alike.

Irás. But how, but how ? give me particulars.

Sooth. I have said.

Irás. Am I not an inch of fortune better than she ?

Char. Well, if you were but an inch of fortune better than I, where would you choose it ?

Irás. Not in my husband's nose.

Char. Our worser thoughts heavens mend !
Alexas,—come, his fortune, his fortune.—Oh !
let him marry a woman that cannot go, sweet Isis, ‡ I beseech thee ! And let her die too, and give him a worse ; and let worse follow worse, till the worst of all follow him laughing to his grave, fifty-fold a cuckold ! Good Isis, hear me this prayer, though thou deny me a matter of more weight : good Isis, I beseech thee !

Irás. Amen. Dear goddess, hear that prayer of the people ! for, as it is a heart-breaking to see a handsome man loose-wived, so it is a deadly sorrow to behold a foul knave uncuckolded.
Therefore, dear Isis, keep decorum, and fortune him accordingly !

Alex. Lo, now, if it lay in their hands to make me a cuckold, they would make themselves whores but they'd do't.

Eno. Hush ! here comes Antony.

Char. Not he, the queen.

Enter CLEOPATRA.

Cleo. Saw you my lord ?

Eno. No, lady.

Cleo. Was he not here ?

Char. No, madam,

Cleo. He was dispos'd to mirth ; but on the sudden

A Roman thought hath struck him.—Enobarbus,—

Eno. Madam.

Cleo. Seek him, and bring him hither. Where's Alexas ?

Alex. Here, madam, at your service.—My lord approaches.

Enter ANTONY, with a MESSENGER, and Attendants.

Cleo. We will not look upon him : Go with us.

[Exit CLEOPATRA, ENOBARBUS, ALEXAS, IRAS, CHARMIAN, SOOTHSAYER, and Attendants,

Mess. Fulvia thy wife first came into the field.

Ant. Against my brother Lucius ?

Mess. Ay :

But soon that war had end, and the time's state Made friends of them, joining their force 'gainst Cesar ;

Whose better issue in the war, from Italy, Upon the first encounter, drave them.

Ant. Well,

What worse ?

Mess. The nature of bad news infects the teller.

Ant. When it concerns the fool or coward.—

Ant. Antony, thou would'st say,—

Enter another MESSENGER.

Or lose myself in dotage.—What are you ?

Ant. Where died she ?

There's a great spirit gone ! Thus did I desire it ; What our contempts do often hurl from us, We wish it our's again ; the present pleasure, By revolution lowering, does become The opposite of itself : she's good, being gone ; The hand could pluck her back, that shov'd her on.

I must from this enchanting queen break off ; Ten thousand harms, more than the ills I know, My idleness doth hatch.—How now ! Enobarbus !

Enter ENOBARBUS.

Eno. What's your pleasure, Sir ?

Ant. I must with haste from hence.

Eno. Why, then, we kiss all our women : We see how mortal an unkindness is to them ; if they suffer our departure, death's the word.

Ant. I must be gone.

Eno. Under a compelling occasion, let women die : It were pity to cast them away for nothing : though, between them and a great cause, they should be esteemed nothing. Cleopatra, catching but the least noise of this, dies instantly : I have seen her die twenty times upon far poorer moment : * I do think there is mettle in death, which commits some loving act upon her, she hath such a celerity in dying.

Ant. She is cunning past man's thought.

Eno. Alack, Sir, no : her passions are made of nothing but the finest part of pure love : we cannot call her winds and waters, sighs and tears ; they are greater storms and tempests than almanacks can report : this cannot be cunning in her ; if it be, she makes a shower of rain as well as Jove.

Ant. 'Would I had never seen her !

Eno. O Sir, you had then left unseen a wonderful piece of work ; which not to have been blessed withal, would have discredited your travel.

Ant. Fulvia is dead.

Eno. Sir ?

Ant. Fulvia is dead.

Eno. Fulvia ?

Ant. Dead.

Eno. Why, Sir, give the gods a thankful sacrifice. When it pleaseth their deities to take the wife of a man from him, it shows to man the tailors of the earth ; comforting therein, that when old robes are worn out, there are members to make new. If there were no more women but Fulvia, then had you indeed a cut, and the case to be lamented : this grief is crowned with consolation—your old smock brings forth a new petticoat :—and indeed the tears live in an onion, that should water this sorrow.

Ant. The business she hath broached in the Cannot endure my absence. [state

Eno. And the business you have broached here cannot be without you ; especially that of Cleopatra's, which wholly depends on your abode.

Ant. No more light answers. Let our officers Have notice what we purpose. I shall break The cause of our expedience † to the queen, And get her love ‡ to part. For not alone The death of Fulvia, with more urgent touches, Do strongly speak to us ; but the letters too Of many our contriving friends in Rome Petition us at home : Sextus Pompeius Hath given the dare to Cesar, and commands The empire of the sea : our slippery people (Whose love is never link'd to the deserver, Till his deserts are past,) begin to throw Pompey the great, and all his dignities, Upon his son ; who, high in name and power, Higher than both in blood and life, stands up For the main soldier : whose quality, going on, The sides o'the world may danger : Much is breeding,

Which, like the courser's § hair, hath yet but life,

* Upon far less reason. * Expedition. ; Leave.

§ Horse's hair, swept into putrid water, was supposed to turn into an animal.

And not a serpent's poison. Say, our pleasure,
To such whose place is under us, requires
Our quick remove from hence.

Eno. I shall do't.

[Exeunt.]

SCENE III.

Enter CLEOPATRA, CHARMIAN IRAS, and ALEXAS.

Cleo. Where is he?

Char. I did not see him since.

Cleo. See where he is, who's with him, what he does:—

I did not send you; *—If you find him sad,
Say, I am dancing; if in mirth, report
That I am sudden sick: Quick, and return.

[Exit ALEXAS.]

Char. Madam, methinks, if you did love him dearly,
You do not hold the method to enforce
The like from him.

Cleo. What should I do, I do not?

Char. In each thing give him way, cross him in nothing.

Cleo. Thou teachest like a fool: the way to lose him.

Char. Tempt him not so too far: I wish for-
bear:

In time we hate that which we often fear.

Enter ANTONY.

But here comes Antony.

Cleo. I am sick, and sullen.

Ant. I am sorry to give breathing to my purpose,—

Cleo. Help me away, dear Charmian, I shall fall;
It cannot be thus long; the sides of nature
Will not sustain it.

Ant. Now, my dearest queen,—

Cleo. Pray you, stand further from me.

Ant. What's the matter?

Cleo. I know, by that same eye, there's some good news.

What says the married woman?—You may go;
'Would, she had never given you leave to come!
Let her not say 'tis I that keep you here,
I have no power upon you: her's you are.

Ant. The gods best know,

Cleo. Oh! never was there queen
So mightily betray'd! Yet, at the first,
I saw the treasons planted.

Ant. Cleopatra,—

Cleo. Why should I think you can be mine, and true,

Though you in swearing shake the thronged gods,
Who have been false to Fulvia? Riotous mad-
ness,

To be entangled with those mouth-made vows,
Which break themselves in swearing!

Ant. Most sweet queen,—

Cleo. Nay, pray you, seek no colour for your going,
But bid farewell, and go: when you sned stay-
Then was the time for words: No going then;—
Eternity was in our lips, and eyes;
Bliss in our brows' bent; † none our parts so poor,
But was a race ‡ of heaven:—They are so still,
Or thou the greatest soldier of the world,
Art turn'd the greatest liar.

Ant. How now, lady!

Cleo. I would, I had thy inches thou shouldst
know,
There were a heart in Egypt.

Ant. Hear me, queen:

The strong necessity of time commands
Our services a while; but my full heart
Remains in use with you, Our Italy
Shines o'er with civil swords; Sextus Pompeius
Makes his approaches to the port § of Rome:
Equality of two domestic powers

* Look as if I did not send you.
‡ A taste.

† O'reye-brows.
‡ Gait

Breeds scrupulous faction: The hated, grown to strength,

Are newly grown to love: the condemn'd
[Pompey,]

Rich in his father's honour, creeps apace

Into the hearts of such as have not thriv'd

Upon the present state, whose numbers threaten;

And quietness, grown sick of rest, would purge

By any desperate change: My more particular,

And that which most with you should sale * my

going,

Is Fulvia's death.

Cleo. Though age from folly could not give me freedom,

It does from childishness:—Can Fulvia die? †

Ant. She's dead, my queen:

Look here, and, at thy sovereign leisure, read

The garbolls she awak'd; ‡ at the last, best:

See, when and where she died.

Cleo. O most false love!

Where be the sacred vials thou should'st fill

With sorrowful water? Now I see, I see,

In Fulvia's death, how mine receiv'd shall be.

Ant. Quarrel no more, but be prepar'd to know

The purposes I bear; which are, or cease,

As you shall give the advice: Now, by the fire

That quickens Nilus' slime, I go from hence,

Thy soldier, servant; making peace, or war,

As thou affect'st.

Cleo. Cut my lace, Charmian, come;—

But let it be.—I am quickly ill and well;

So Antony loves.

Ant. My precious queen, forbear;

And give true evidence to his love, which stands

An honourable trial.

Cleo. So Fulvia told me.

I pr'ythee turn aside, and weep for her;

Then bid adieu to me, and say the tears

Belong to Egypt: Good now, play one scene

Of excellent dissembling; and let it look

Like perfect honour.

Ant. You'll heat my blood; no more.

Cleo. You can do better yet; but this is meetly.

Ant. Now, by my sword,—

Cleo. And target,—Still he mends;

But this is not the best: Look, pr'ythee, Char-
mian,

How this Herculean Roman does become

The carriage of his chafe.

Ant. I'll leave you, lady.

Cleo. Courteous lord, one word.

Sir, you and I must part,—but that's not it:

Sir, you and I have lov'd,—but there's not it;

That you know well: Something it is I would,—

Oh! my oblivion § is a very Antony,

And I am all forgotten.

Ant. But that your royalty

Holds idleness your subject, I should take you

For idleness itself.

Cleo. 'Tis sweating labour,

To bear such idleness so near the heart

As Cleopatra this. But, Sir, forgive me;

Since my becoming kill me, when they do not

Eye well to you: Your honour calls you hence;

Therefore be deaf to my unpitied folly,

And all the gods go with you! upon your sword

Sit laurel'd victory! and smooth success

Be stréw'd before your feet!

Ant. Let us go. Come:

Our separation so abides, and flies,

That thou, residing here, go'st yet with me,

And I, hence fleeting, here remain with thee.

Away. [Exeunt.]

SCENE IV.—Rome.—An apartment in
CESAR'S House.

Enter OCTAVIUS CESAR, LEPIDUS, and Attendants.

Ces. You may see, Lepidus, and henceforth
know,

It is not Cesar's natural vice to hate

One great competitor: ¶ from Alexandria

* Render my going agreeable. † Can Fulvia be dead?

‡ The commotion she occasioned. § Oblivious memory.

¶ Associate or partner.

This is the news—He fishes, drinks, and wastes
The lamps of night in revel: is not more man-like

Than Cleopatra; nor the queen Ptolemy
More womanly than he: hardly gave audience, or Vouchsaf'd to think he had partners: You shall find there

A man, who is the abstract of all faults
That all men follow.

Lep. I must not think there are
Evils enough to darken all his goodness:
His faults, in him, seem as the spots of heaven,
More fiery by night's blackness; hereditary,
Rather than purchas'd * what he cannot change,
Than what he chooses.

Ces. You are too indulgent: let us grant, it is
not

Amias to tumble on the bed of Ptolemy;
To give a kingdom for a mirth; to sit
And keep the turn of tippling with a slave;
To reel the streets at noon; and stand the buffet
With knaves that smell of sweat: say, this becomes him,

(As his composure must be rare indeed, Whom these things cannot blemish,) yet must
Antony

No way excuse his soils, when we do bear
So great weight in his lightness.† If he fill'd
His vacancy with his voluptuousness,
Full surfeits, and the dryness of his bones
Call on him ‡ for't: but, to confound § such time,
That drums him from his sport, and speaks as loud

As his own state, and ours,—'tis to be chid
As we rate boys, who, being mature in knowledge,

Pawn their experience to their present pleasure,
And so rebel to judgment.

Enter a MESSENGER.

Lep. Here's more news.

Mess. Thy biddings have been done; and every hour,

Most noble Cesar, shalt thou have report
How 'tis abroad. Pompey is strong at sea;
And, it appears, he is belov'd of those
That only have fear'd Cesar: to the ports
The discontents ¶ repair, and men's reports
Give him much wrong'd.

Ces. I should have known no less:—
It hath been taught us from the primal state,
That he, which is, was wish'd, until he were;
And the ebb'd man, ne'er lov'd, till ne'er worth
love

Comes dear'd, by being lack'd.¶ This common
Like a vagabond flag upon the stream,
Goes to, and back, lackeying the varying tide,
To rot itself with motion.

Mess. Cesar, I bring thee word,
Menecrates and Menas, famous pirates,
Make the sea serve them: which they ear  and wound

With keels of every kind: Many hot inroads
They make in Italy; the borders maritime Lack blood †† to think on't, and flush ‡‡ youth revolt:

No vessel can peep forth, but 'tis as soon
Taken as seen; for Pompey's name strikes more Than could his war resisted.

Ces. Antony,
Leave thy lascivious wassals. §§ When thou once
Wast beaten from Modena, where thou slew'st
Hirtius and Pansa, consuls, at thy heel
Did famine follow; whom thou fought'st against,
Though daintily brought up, with patience more
Than savages could suffer: Thou didst drink
The stale of horses, and the gilded puddle
Which beasts would cough at: thy palate then did deign
The roughest berry on the rudest hedge;

* Procured by his own fault.

† Would punish him for it.

‡ Malcontents.

• Plough.

†† Turn pale.

‡‡ Fastings.

† Levity.

‡ Consume.

§ Endear'd by being missed.

‡‡ Ruddy.

Yea, like the stag, when snow the pasture sheets,
The barks of trees thou brow'd'st; on the Alps
It is reported, thou did'st eat strange flesh,
Which some did die to look on: And all this,
(It wounds thine honour, that I speak it now,)
Was borne so like a soldier, that thy cheek
So much as lack'd not.

Lep. It is pity of him.

Ces. Let his shames quickly
Drive him to Rome: 'Tis time we twain
Did show ourselves i'the field; and, to that end, Assemble we immediate council: Pompey
Thrives in our idleness.

Lep. To-morrow, Cesar,
I shall be furnish'd to inform you rightly
Both what by sea and land I can be able,
To 'front this present time.

Ces. Till which encounter,
It is my business too. Farewell.

Lep. Farewell, my lord: What you shall know mean time

Of stirs abroad, I shall beseech you, Sir,
To let me be partaker.

Ces. Doubt not, Sir;

I knew it for my bond.*

[Exeunt.]

SCENE V.—Alexandria.—A Room in the Palace.

Enter CLEOPATRA, CHARMIAN, IRAS, and MARDIAN.

Cleo. Charmian,—

Char. Madam.

Cleo. Ha, ha!—

Give me to drink mandragora.†

Char. Why, madam;

Cleo. That I might sleep out this great gap of My Antony is away. [time,

Char. You think of him

Too much.

Cleo. O treason!

Char. Madam, I trust, not so,

Cleo. Thou cunuch! Mardian!

Mar. What's your highness' pleasure?

Cleo. Not now to hear thee sing; I take no pleasure

In aught a cunuch has: 'Tis well for thee,
That, being unseminar'd, ‡ thy freer thoughts
May not fly forth of Egypt. Hast thou affections?

Mar. Yes, gracious madam.

Cleo. Indeed?

Mar. Not in deed, madam; for I can do nothing

But what in deed is honest to be done.

Yet have I fierce affections, and think
What Venus did with Mars.

Cleo. O Charmian,
Where think'st thou he is now? Stands he, or sits he?

Or does he walk? or is he on his horse?

O happy horse, to bear the weight of Antony
Do bravely, horse! for wot'st thou whom thou mov'st?

The demi-Atlas of this earth, the arm
And burgonet § of men.—He's speaking now,
Or murmuring, Where's my serpent of old Nile?

For so he calls me: Now I feed myself
With most delicious poison:—Think on me,
That am with Phœbus' amorous pinches black,
And wrinkled deep in time! Broad-fronted
Cesar,

When thou wast here above the ground, I was
A morsel for a monarch: and great Pompey
Would stand, and make his eyes grow in my brow;

There would he anchor his aspect, and die
With looking on his life.

Enter ALEXAS.

Alex. Sovereign of Egypt, hail!

* My bounden duty.

† Unmanned

‡ A sleepy potion.

§ A helmet.

Cleo. How much unlike art thou Mark Antony !
Yet, coming from him, that great medicine bath
With his tinct gilded thee.—

How goes it with my brave Mark Antony ?

Alex. Last thing he did, dear queen,
He kiss'd,—the last of many doubled kisses,—
This orient pearl.—His speech sticks in my heart.

Cleo. Mine ear must pluck it thence.

Alex. Good friend, quoth he,
Say, the firm Roman to great Egypt sends
This treasure of an oyster ; at whose foot
To mend the petty present, I will piece
Her opulent throne with kingdoms ; All the east,

Say thou, shall call her mistress. So he nodded,
And soberly did mount a termagant * steed,
Who neigh'd so high, that what I would have spoke
Was beastly dumb'd by him.

Cleo. What, was he sad, or merry ?

Alex. Like to the time o'the year between the extremes
Of hot and cold ; he was nor sad, nor merry.

Cleo. O well-divided disposition !—Note him,
Note him, good Charmian, 'tis the man ; but note him :

He was not sad ; for he would shine on those
That make their looks by his : he was not merry ;
Which seem'd to tell them, his remembrance lay
In Egypt with his joy : but between both :
O heavenly mingle ; Be'st thou sad, or merry,
The violence of either thee becomes ;
So does it no man else.—Met'st thou my posts ?

Alex. Ay, madam, twenty several messengers :
Why do you send so thick ?

Cleo. Who's born that day
When I forget to send to Antony,
Shall die a beggar.—Ink and paper, Charmian.—
Welcome, my good Alexas.—Did I, Charmian,
Ever love Cesar so ?

Char. O that brave Cesar !

Cleo. Be chok'd with such another emphasis !
Say, the brave Antony.

Char. The valiant Cesar !

Cleo. By Isis, I will give thee bloody teeth,
If thou with Cesar paragon again
My man of men.

Char. By your most gracious pardon,
I sing but after you.

Cleo. My sallad days,
When I was green in judgment :—cold in blood,
To say as I said then !—But, come, away :
Get me ink and paper : he shall have every day
A several greeting, or I'll unpeople Egypt.
[Exeunt.]

ACT II.

SCENE I.—Messina.—A Room in POMPEY'S house.

Enter POMPEY, MENEGRATES, and MENAS.

Pom. If the great gods be just, they shall assist
The deeds of justest men.

Mene. Know, worthy Pompey,
That what they do delay, they not deny.

Pom. Whiles we are suitors to their throne,
Th' thing we sue for. [decays]

Mene. We, ignorant of ourselves,
Beg often our own harms, which the wise powers
Deny us for our good ; so find we profit,
By losing of our prayers.

Pom. I shall do well :
The people love me, and the sea is mine :
My power's a crescent, and my auguring hope
Says, it will come to the full. Mark Antony
In Egypt sits at dinner, and will make
No wars without doors : Cesar gets money, where He loses hearts : Lepidus flatters both,
Of both is flatter'd ; but he neither loves,
Nor either cares for him.

Men. Cesar and Lepidus
Are in the field ; a mighty strength they carry
Pom. Where have you this ? 'tis false.

Men. From Silvius, Sir.

Pom. He dreams : I know they are in Rome
together,
Looking for Antony : But all charms of love,
Salt Cleopatra, soften thy wan'd * lip !
Let witchcraft join with beauty, lust with both ,
Tie up the libertine in a field of feasts,
Keep his brain fuming ; Epicurean cooks,
Sharpen with cloyless sauce his appetite ;
That sleep and feeding may prorogue his honour,
Even till † a Lethe'd dullness !—How now, Varrius ?

Enter VARRIUS.

Var. This is most certain that I shall deliver :
Mark Antony is every hour in Rome
Expected ; since he went from Egypt, 'tis
A space for further travel.

Pom. I could have given less matter
A better ear.—Menas, I did not think
This amorous surfeiter would have don'd ‡ his
For such a petty war : his soldiery [helm §
Is twice the other twain : But let us rear
The higher our opinion, that our stirring
Can from the lap of Egypt's widow pluck
The ne'er lust-wearied Antony.

Men. I cannot hope,
Cesar and Antony shall well greet together :
His wife, that's dead, did trespasses to Cesar ;
His brother warr'd upon him ; although, I think,
Not mov'd by Antony.

Pom. I know not, Menas,
How lesser enmities may give way to greater.
Were't not that we stand up against them all,
'Twere pregnant they should square ¶ between
themselves ;

For they have entertained cause enough
To draw their swords ; but how the fear of us
May cement their divisions, and bind up
The petty difference, we yet not know.
Be it as our gods will have it ! It only stands
Our lives upon, to use our strongest hands.
Come, Menas. [Exeunt.]

SCENE II.—Rome.—A Room in the house of LEPIDUS.

Enter ENOBARBUS and LEPIDUS.

Lep. Good Enobarbus, 'tis a worthy deed,
And shall become you well, to entreat your cap-
To soft and gentle speech. [tain]

Eno. I shall entreat him
To answer like himself : if Cesar move him,
Let Antony look over Cesar's head,
And speak as loud as Mars. By Jupiter,
Were I the wearer of Antonius' beard,
I would not shave to-day.

Lep. 'Tis not a time
For private stomaching.

Eno. Every time
Serves for the matter that is then born in it.

Lep. But small to greater matters must give way.

Eno. Not if the small come first,

Lep. Your speech is passion :
But, pray you, stir no embers up. Here comes
The noble Antony.

Enter ANTONY and VENTIDIUS.

Eno. And yonder, Cesar.

Enter CESAR, MECENAS, and AGRIPPA.

Ant. If we compose ¶ well here, to Parthia :
Hark you, Ventidius.

Ces. I do not know,
Mecenas ; ask Agrippa.

Lep. Noble friends,
That which combin'd us was most great, and let
not

* Feded. † To. ‡ Put on. § Helmet.
¶ Quarrel. ¶ Agree.

A leaner action rend us. What's amiss,
May it be gently heard : When we debate
Our trivial difference loud, we do commit
Murder in healing wounds : Then, noble partners,
(The rather, for I earnestly beseech,)
Touch you the sourest points with sweetest terms,
Nor curstness * grow to the matter.

Ant. 'Tis spoken well :
Were we before our armies, and to fight,
I should do thus.

Ces. Welcome to Rome.

Ant. Thank you.

Ces. Sit.

Ant. Sit, Sir !

Ces. Nay,

Then—

Ant. I learn, you take things ill, which are not so ;

Or, being, concern you not.

Ces. I must be laugh'd at,
If, or for nothing, or a little, I Should say myself offended ; and with you Chiefly i'the world : more laugh'd at, that I should

Once name you derogately, when to sound your
name

It not concern'd me.

Ant. My being in Egypt, Cesar,
What was't to you ?

Ces. No more than my residing here at Rome
Might be to you in Egypt : Yet, if you there
Did practise † on my state, your being in Egypt
Might be my question. ‡

Ant. How intend you, practis'd ?

Ces. You may be pleas'd to catch at mine intent, [ther,
By what did here befall me. Your wife, and bro-
Made wars upon me ; and their contestation
Was theme for you, you were the word of war.

Ant. You do mistake your business ; my brother never
Did urge me in his act : I did enquire it ;
And have my learning from some true reports, §
That drew their swords with you. Did he not rather

Discredit my authority with yours ;
And make the wars alike against my stomach,
Having alike your cause ? Of this, my letters
Before did satisfy you. If you'll patch a quarrel,
As matter whole you have not to make it with,
It must not be with this.

Ces. You praise yourself
By laying defects of judgment to me ; but
You patch'd up your excuses.

Ant. Not so, not so ;
I know you could not lack, I am certain on't
Very necessity of this thought, that I,
Your partner in the cause 'gainst which he fought,

Could not with grateful eyes attend those wars Which 'fronted ¶ mine own peace. As for my wife,

I would you had her spirit in such another !
The third o'the world is yours ; which, with a snaffle ¶

You may pace easy, but not such a wife.

Eno. 'Would we had all such wives, that the men might go to wars with the women !

Ant. So much incurable, her garboils, Cesar,
Made out of her impatience, (which not wanted Shrewdness of policy too,) I grieving grant,
Did you too much disquiet : for that, you must
But say, I could not help it.

Ces. I wrote to you,
When rioting in Alexandria : you
Did pocket up my letters, and with taunts
Did gibe my missive  out of audience.

Ant. Sir,
He fell upon me, ere admitted ; then
Three kings I had newly feasted, and did want

Of what I was i'the morning ; but, next day,
I told him of myself ; which was as much
As to have ask'd him pardon : Let this fellow
Be nothing of our strife ; if we contend,
Out of our question * wipe him.

Ces. You have broken
The article of your oath ; which you shall never Have tongue to charge me with.

Lep. Soft, Cesar.

Ant. No, Lepidus, let him speak :
The honour's sacred which he talks on now,
Supposing that I lack'd it : But on, Cesar ;
The article of my oath,—

Ces. To lend me arms and aid, when I requir'd them ;
The which you both denied.

Ant. Neglected, rather ;
And then, when poison'd hours had bound me up
From mine own knowledge. As nearly as I may,
I'll play the penitent to you : but mine honesty
Shall not make poor my greatness, nor my power
Work without it : Truth is, that Fulvia,
To have me out of Egypt, made wars here ;
For which myself, the ignorant motive, do
So far ask pardon, as befits mine honour
To stoop in such a case.

Lep. 'Tis nobly spoken.

Mec. If it might please you to enforce no further

The griefs † between ye, to forget them quite,
Were to remember that the present need
Speaks to alone ‡ you.

Lep. Worthily spoke, Mæcenas.

Eno. Or, if you borrow one another's love for the instant, you may, when you hear no more words of Pompey, return it again : you shall have time to wrangle in, when you have nothing else to do.

Ant. Thou art a soldier only ; speak no more.

Eno. That truth should be silent, I had almost forgot.

Ant. You wrong this presence, therefore speak
no more.

Eno. Go to then ; your considerate stone.

Ces. I do not much dislike the matter, but
The manner of his speech : for it cannot be,
We shall remain in friendship, our conditions
So differing in their acts. Yet, if I knew What hoop should hold us staunch, from edge to edge

O'the world I would pursue it.

Ag. Give me leave, Cesar,—

Ces. Speak, Agrippa.

Ag. Thou hast a sister by the mother's side,
Admir'd Octavia : great Mark Antony
Is now a widower.

Ces. Say not so, Agrippa ;
If Cleopatra heard you, your reproof
Were well deserv'd of rashness.

Ant. I am not married, Cesar : let me hear
Agrippa further speak.

Ag. To hold you in perpetual amity,
To make you brothers, and to knit your hearts
With an unslipping knot, take Antony
Octavia to his wife : whose beauty claims
No worse a husband than the best of men !
Whose virtue, and whose general graces, speak
That which none else can utter. By this marriage,

All little jealousies, which now seem great,
And all great fears, which now import their dangers,

Would then be nothing : truths would be but tales,
Where now half tales be truths : her love to both
Would, each to other, and all loves to both,
Draw after her. Pardon what I have spoke :
For 'tis a studied, not a present thought,
By duty ruminated.

Ant. Will Cesar speak ?

Ces. Not till he hears how Antony is touch'd
With what is spoke already.

Ant. What power is in Agrippa,

* Let not ill-humour be added.

† Grievances.

‡ Reconcile.

§ Reporters

 Messenger.

† Use unwar-ratable arts.

‡ Subject of conversation.

§ Opposed.

¶ Bridle.

If I would say, Agrippa, be it so,
To make this good?

Ces. The power of Cesar, and
His power unto Octavia.

Ant. May I never
To this good purpose, that so fairly shows,
Dream of impediment!—Let me have thy hand:
Further this act of grace; and, from this hour,
The heart of brothers govern in our loves,
And sway our great designs!

Ces. There is my hand.
A sister I bequeath you, whom no brother
Did ever love so dearly: Let her live
To join our kingdoms and our hearts; and never Fly off our loves again!

Lep. Happily, amen!

Ant. I did not think to draw my sword 'gainst
Pompey,
For he hath laid strange courtesies, and great,
Of late upon me: I must thank him only,
Lest my remembrance suffer ill report:
At heel of that, defy him.

Lep. Time calls upon us:
Of us must Pompey presently be sought,
Or else he seeks out us.

Ant. And where lies he?

Ces. About the mount Misenum.

Ant. What's his strength
By land?

Ces. Great, and increasing: but by sea
He is an absolute master.

Ant. So is the fame.

'Would we had spoke together! Haste we for it:
Yet, ere we put ourselves in arms, despatch we
The business we have talk'd of.

Ces. With most gladness;
And do invite you to my sister's view,
Whither straight I will lead you.

Ant. Let us, Lepidus,
Not lack your company.

Lep. Noble Antony,
Not sickness should detain me.

[Flourish. Exeunt CESAR, ANTONY, and LEPIDUS.

Mec. Welcome from Egypt, Sir.

Eno. Half the heart of Cesar, worthy Mecenas!
—my honourable friend, Agrippa!—

Ag. Good Enobarbus!

Mec. We have cause to be glad that matters are so well digested. You staid well by it in Egypt.

Eno. Ay, Sir; we did sleep day out of countenance, and made the night light with drinking.

Mec. Eight wild boars roasted whole at a breakfast, and but twelve persons there. Is this true?

Eno. This was but as a fly by an eagle: we had much more monstrous matter of feast, which worthily deserved noting.

Mec. She's a most triumphant lady, if report be square to her.

Eno. When she first met Mark Antony, she purged up his heart upon the river of Cydnus.

Ag. There she appear'd indeed; or my reporter devised well for her.

Eno. I will tell you:
The barge she sat in, like a burnish'd throne,
Burn'd on the water: the poop was beaten gold;
Purple the sails, and so perfumed, that
The winds were love-sick with them: the oars were silver:

Which to the tune of flutes kept stroke, and made
The water, which they beat, to follow faster,
As amorous of their strokes. For her own person,

It beggar'd all description: she did lie
In her pavilion, (cloth of gold, of tissue,)
O'erplotting that Venus, where we see,
The fancy out-work nature: on each side her,
Stood pretty dimpled boys, like smiling Cupids,
With diverse-colour'd fans, whose wind did seem
To glow the delicate cheeks which they did cool,

Suits with her merits.

And what they undid, did,*

Ag. Oh, rare for Antony!

Eno. Her gentlewomen, like the Nereides,
So many mermaids, tended her i'the eyes,
And made their bends adornings:† at the helm
A seeming Mermaid steers; the silken tackle
Swell with the touches of those flower-soft hands
That yarely frame‡ the office. From the barge
A strange invisible perfume hits the sense
Of the adjacent wharfs. The city cast
Her people out upon her; and Antony,
Enthron'd in the market-place, did sit alone,
Whistling to the air; which, but for vacancy,
Had gone to gaze on Cleopatra too,
And made a gap in nature.

Ag. Rare Egyptian!

Eno. Upon her landing, Antony sent to her,
Invited her to supper: she replied,
It should be better he became her guest;
Which she entreated: Our courteous Antony,
Whom ne'er the word of No woman heard speak,
Being barber'd ten times o'er, goes to the feast;
And, for his ordinary, pays his heart,
For what his eyes eat only.

Ag. Royal wench!

She made great Cesar lay his sword to bed
He plough'd her, and she cropp'd.

Eno. I saw her once

Hop forty paces through the public street:
And having lost her breath, she spoke, and panted,
That she did make defect, perfection,
And, breathless, power breathe forth.

Mec. Now Antony must leave her utterly.

Eno. Never; he will not;

Age cannot wither her, nor custom stale
Her infinite variety: Other women
Cloy th' appetites they feed: but she makes hungry

Where most she satisfies. For vilest things
Become themselves in her; that the holy priests
Bless her, when she's riggish.¶

Mec. If beauty, wisdom, modesty, can settle
The heart of Antony, Octavia is
A blessed lottery to him,

Ag. Let us go.—

Good Enobarbus, make yourself my guest,
Whilst you abide here.

Eno. Humbly, Sir, I thank you, [Exeunt.

SCENE III.—The same.—A Room in CESAR'S
House.

Enter CESAR, ANTONY, OCTAVIA between them;
ATTENDANTS, and a SOOTHSAYER.

Ant. The world, and my great office, will sometimes
Divide me from your bosom.

Octa. All which time,
Before the gods my knee shall bow my prayers
To them for you.

Ant. Good night, Sir.—My Octavia,
Read not my blemishes in the world's report:
I have not kept my square; but that to come Shall all be done by the rule. Good night, dear lady.—

Octa. Good night, Sir.

Ces. Good night.

[Exeunt CESAR and OCTAVIA.

Ant. Now, Sirrah! you do wish yourself in Egypt?

Sooth. Would I had never come from thence,
nor you
Thither!

Ant. If you can, your reason?

Sooth. I see't in
My motion,¶ have it not in my tongue: But yet
Hie you again to Egypt.

Ant. Say to me,
Whose fortunes shall rise higher; Cesar's, or
mine?

* Increased the glow they were intended to diminish.

† Made even humiliation become them

‡ Readily perform.

§ Wanton.

¶ I. e. the divinitory agitation.

Sooth. Cesar's.

Therefore, O Antony, stay not by his side :
Thy demon, that's thy spirit which keeps thee, is Noble, courageous, high, unmatchable,
Where Cesar's is not ; but, near him, thy angel Becomes a fear, as being o'erpower'd : therefore Make space enough between you.

Ant. Speak this no more.

Sooth. To none but thee ; no more, but when to thee.

If thou dost play with him at any game,
Thou art sure to lose ; and, of that natural luck,
He beats thee 'gainst the odds ; thy lustre thickens,
When he shines by : I say again, thy spirit
Is all afraid to govern thee near him ;
But, he away, 'tis noble.

Ant. Get thee gone :

Say to Ventidius, I would speak with him :

[Exit SOOTH-SAYER.]

He shall to Parthia.—Be it art, or hap,
He hath spoken true : The very dice obey him ;
And, in our sports, my better cunning faints
Under his chance : if we draw lots, he speeds :
His cocks do win the battle still of mine.
When it is all to nought ; and his quails * ever
Beat mine, inhoop'd,† at odds. I will to Egypt :
And though I make this marriage for my peace,

Enter VENTIDIUS.

P' the east my pleasure lies :—O come, Ventidius,
You must to Parthia ; your commission's ready :
Follow me, and receive it. [Exeunt.]

SCENE IV.—The same.—A Street.

Enter LEPIDUS, MECENAS, and AGRIPPA.

Lep. Trouble yourselves no further : pray you, hasten

Your generals after.

Agr. Sir, Mark Antony
Will e'en but kiss Octavia, and we'll follow.

Lep. Till I shall see you in your soldier's dress,
Which will become you both, farewell.

Mec. We shall,
As I conceive the journey, be at mount ‡
Before you, Lepidus.

Lep. Your way is shorter,
My purposes do draw me much about :
You'll win two days upon me.

Mec. Agr. Sir, good success !

Lep. Farewell.

SCENE V.—Alexandria.—A Room in the Palace.

Enter CLEOPATRA, CHARMIAN, IRAS, and ALEXAS.

Cleo. Give me some music ; music, moody §
Of us that trade in love. [food]

Attend. The music, ho !

Enter MARDIAN.

Cleo. Let it alone ; let us to billiards : ||
Come, Charmian.

Char. My arm is sore, best play with Mardian.

Cleo. As well a woman with an eunuch play'd,
As with a woman ;—Come, you'll play with me,
Sir ?

Mar. As well as I can, madam.

Cleo. And when good will is show'd, though it come too short,
The actor may plead pardon. I'll none now :
Give me mine angle ; we'll to the river : there,
My music playing far off, I will betray
Tawny-finn'd fishes ; my bended hook shall pierce
Their slimy jaws ; and, as I draw them up,
I'll think them every one an Antony,
And say, Ah, ha ! you're caught.

Char. 'Twas merry, when
You wager'd on your angling ; when your diver

Did hang a salt-fish on his hook, which he
With fervency drew up.

Cleo. That time !—O times !—

I laugh'd him out of patience ; and that night
I laugh'd him into patience ; and next morn,
Ere the ninth hour, I drunk him to his bed ;
Then put my tires and mantles on him, whilst
I wore his sword Philippan. Oh ! from Italy ;

Enter a MESSENGER.

Ram thou thy fruitful tidings in mine ears,
That long time have been barren.

Mess. Madam, madam,—

Cleo. Antony's dead ?—

If thou say so, villain, thou kill'st thy mistress :
But well and free

If thou so yield him, there is gold, and here
My bluest veins to kiss : a hand, that kings
Have lipp'd, and trembled kissing.

Mess. First, madam, he's well.

Cleo. Why, there's more gold. But, Sirrah, mark : We use

To say the dead are well ; bring it to that,
The gold I give thee will I melt, and pour
Down thy ill-uttering throat.

Mess. Good madam, hear me.

Cleo. Well, go to, I will ;
But there's no goodness in thy face : If Antony
Be free, and healthful, why so tart a favour *
To trumpet such good tidings ? If not well,
Thou should'st come like a fury crown'd with
Not like a formal man. [snakes,]

Mess. Will't please you hear me ?

Cleo. I have a mind to strike thee, ere thou
speak'st :

Yet, if thou say, Antony lives, is well,
Or friends with Cesar, or not captive to him,
I'll set thee in a shower of gold, and hail
Rich pearls upon thee.

Mess. Madam, he's well.

Cleo. Well said.

Mess. And friends with Cesar.

Cleo. Thou'rt an honest man.

Mess. Cesar and he are greater friends than ever.

Cleo. Make thee a fortune from me.

Mess. But yet, madam,—

Cleo. I do not like but yet ; it does allay
The good precedence ; † he upon but yet :
But yet is as jaller to bring forth
Some monstrous malefactor. Pr'ythee, friend,
Pour out the pack of matter to mine ear,
The good and bad together : He's friend with Cesar ; [free.]

In state of health, thou say'st : and, thou say'st,
Mess. Free, madam ! no ; I made no such re-
He's bound unto Octavia. [port :]

Cleo. For what good turn ?

Mess. For the best turn i'the bed.

Cleo. I am pale, Charmian.

Mess. Madam, he's married to Octavia.

Cleo. The most infectious pestilence upon thee ! [Strikes him down.]

Mess. Good madam, patience.

Cleo. What say you ?—Hence,

[Strikes him again.]

Horrible villain ! or I'll spurn thine eyes
Like balls before me ; I'll unhair thy head ;

[She hales him up and down.]

Thou shalt be whipp'd with wire, and stew'd in Smarting in ling'ring pickle. [brine,]

Mess. Gracious madam,

I, that do bring the news, made not the match.

Cleo. Say 'tis not so, a province I will give thee, [hadst]

And make thy fortunes proud ; the blow thou
Shall make thy peace, for moving me to rage ;
And I will boot ‡ thee with what gift beside Thy modesty can beg.

Mess. He's married, madam.

Cleo. Rogue, thou hast liv'd too long.

[Draws a Dagger.]

* The ancients used to match quails as we match cocks.
† Inclined. ‡ Mount Misenum. § Melancholy.
|| Billiards were unknown then.

* So sour a countenance.
† The good news you have told me. ‡ Recompense.

Mess. Nay, then I'll run :—
What mean you, madam ? I have made no fault.

[Erit.

Char. Good madam, keep yourself within
The man is innocent. [yourself ;

Cleo. Some innocents 'scape not the thunderbolt.—

Melt Egypt into Nile ! and kindly creatures
Turn all to serpents !—Call the slave again :
Though I am mad, I will not bite him :—Call.

Char. He is afeard to come.

Cleo. I will not hurt him :—

These hands do lack nobility, that they strike
A meaner than myself ; since I myself
Have given myself the cause.—Come hither, Sir.

Re-enter MESSENGER.

Though it be honest, it is never good
To bring bad news : Give to a gracious message
A host of tongues ; but let ill tidings tell Themselves, when they be felt.

Mess. I have done my duty.

Cleo. Is he married ?

I cannot hate thee worser than I do,
If thou again say, Yes.

Mess. He is married, madam.

Cleo. The gods confound thee ! dost thou hold there still ?

Mess. Should I lie, madam ?

Cleo. Oh ! I would thou didst ;

So half my Egypt were submerg'd and made
A cistern for scald'd snakes ! Go, get thee hence ;
Hadst thou Narcissus in thy face, to me
Thou would'st appear most ugly. He is married ?

Mess. I crave your highness' pardon.

Cleo. He is married ?

Mess. Take no offence, that I would not offend
you :

To punish me for what you make me do,
Seems much unequal : He is married to Octavia.

Cleo. Oh ! that his fault should make a knave
of thee,

That art not !—What ? thou'rt sure of't ?—Get thee hence :

The merchandise which thou hast brought from
Rome,

Are all too dear for me ; Lie they upon thy hand,
And be undone by 'em ! [Erit MESSENGER.

Char. Good your highness, patience.

Cleo. In praising Antony, I have disprais'd
Cesar.

Char. Many times, madam.

Cleo. I am paid for't now.

Lead me from hence,
I salute ; O Iras, Charmian,—'Tis no matter :—

Go to the fellow, good Alexas ; bid him
Report the feature* of Octavia, her years,
Her inclination, let him not leave out
The colour of her hair :—bring me word quickly.— [Erit ALEXAS.

Let him for ever go :—Let him not—Charmian,
Though he be painted one way like a Gorgon,
T'other way he's a Mars :—Bid you Alexas

[To MARDIAN.

Bring me word how tall she is.—Pity me, Char-
mian,

But do not speak to me.—Lead me to my chamber. [Exeunt.

SCENE VI.—Near Misenum.

Enter POMPEY and MENAS, at one side ; with Drum and Trumpet : at another, CESAR, LEPIDUS, ANTONY, ENOBARBUS, MEGERNAS, with Soldiers marching.

Pom. Your hostages I have, so have you mine ;
And we shall talk before we fight.

Ces. Most meet,

That first we come to words ; and therefore have
Our written purposes before us sent ; [we
Which, if thou hast consider'd, let us know
If 'twill tie up thy discontented sword,

And carry back to Sicily much tall* youth
That else must perish here.

Pom. To you all three,

The senators alone of this great world,
Chief factors for the gods,—I do not know,
Wherefore my father should revengers want,
Having a son and friends ; since Julius Cesar,
Who at Philippi the good Brutus ghosted,†
There saw you labouring for him. What was it,
That mov'd pale Cassius to conspire ? And what
Made the all-honour'd, honest Roman, Brutus,
With the arm'd rest, courtiers of beauteous
freedom,

To drench the Capitol ; but that they would
Have one man but a man ? And that is it,
Hath made me rig my navy ; at whose burden
The anger'd ocean foams ; with which I meant
To scourge the ingratitude that despitesful Rome
Cast on my noble father.

Ces. Take your time.

Ant. Thou canst not fear‡ us, Pompey, with thy sails,

We'll speak with thee at sea : at land thou know'st
How much we do o'er-count thee.

Pom. At land, indeed,

Thou dost o'er-count me of my father's house :
But, since the cuckoo builds not for himself,
Remain in't as thou may'st.

Lep. Be pleas'd to tell us,
(For this is from the present,§) how you take
The offers we have sent you.

Ces. There's the point.

Ant. Which do not be entreated to, but weigh
What it is worth embrac'd.

Ces. And what may follow,
To try a larger fortune.

Pom. You have made me offer
Of Sicily, Sardinia ; and I must Rid all the sea of pirates ; then, to send Measures of wheat to Rome : This 'greed upon,
To part with unhack'd edges, and bear back
Our targe undiuted.

Ces. Ant. Lep. That's our offer.

Pom. Know then,
I came before you here, a man prepar'd
To take this offer : But Mark Antony
Put me to some impatience : Though I lose
The praise of it by telling, you must know,
When Cesar and your brothers were at blows,
Your mother came to Sicily, and did find
Her welcome friendly.

Ant. I have heard it, Pompey ;
And am well studied for a liberal thanks,
Which I do owe you.

Pom. Let me have your hand :

I did not think, Sir, to have met you here.

Ant. The beds i'the east are soft ; and thanks
to you,
That call'd me, timelier than my purpose, hither ;
For I have gain'd by it.

Ces. Since I saw you last,
There is a change upon you.

Pom. Well, I know not
What counts|| harsh fortune casts upon my face :
But in my bosom shall she never come,
To make my heart her vassal.

Lep. Well met here.

Pom. I hope so, Lepidus.—Thus we are agreed :

I crave our composition may be written,
And seal'd between us.

Ces. That's the next to do.

Pom. We'll feast each other, ere we part ; and let us

Draw lots who shall begin.

Ant. That will I, Pompey.

Pom. No, Antony, take the lot : but, first
Or last, your fine Egyptian cookery
Shall have the fame. I have heard, that Julius Grew fat with feasting there. [Cesar

Ant. You have heard much.

Pom. I have fair meanings, Sir.

* Likeness.

† Haunted.
‡ Foreign to the point.

§ Affright.
|| Marks.

Ant. And fair words to them.
Pom. Then so much have I heard :
 And I have heard, Apollodorus carried—
Eno. No more of that :—He did so.
Pom. What, I pray you ?
Eno. A certain queen to Cesar in a mattress.
Pom. I know thee now :—How far'st thou, soldier ?
Eno. Well ;
 And well am like to do : for, I perceive,
 Four feasts are toward.
Pom. Let me shake thy hand ;
 I never hated thee : I have seen thee fight,
 When I have envied thy behaviour.
Eno. Sir,
 I never lov'd you much : but I have prais'd you,
 When you have well deserv'd ten times as much
 As I have said you did.
Pom. Enjoy thy plainness,
 It nothing ill becomes thee.—
 Aboard my galley I invite you all :
 Will you lead, lords ?
Ces. Ant. Lep. Shew us the way, Sir.
Pom. Come.
 [Exeunt POMPEY, CESAR, ANTONY, LE-
 PIDUS, Soldiers, and Attendants.
Men. Thy father, Pompey, would ne'er have made this treaty.—[Aside.]—You and I have known,* Sir.
Eno. At sea, I think.
Men. We have, Sir.
Eno. You have done well by water.
Men. And you by land.
Eno. I will praise any man that will praise me : though it cannot be denied what I have done
 by land.
Men. Nor what I have done by water.
Eno. Yes, something you can deny for your own safety : you have been a great thief by sea.
Men. And you by land.
Eno. There I deny my land service. But give me your hand, Menas : if our eyes had authority, here they might take two thieves kissing.
Men. All men's faces are true, whatsoe'er their hands are.
Eno. But there is never a fair woman has a true face.
Men. No slander ; they steal hearts.
Eno. We came hither to fight with you.
Men. For my part,† I am sorry it is turned to a drinking. Pompey doth this day laugh away his fortune.
Eno. If he do, sure, he cannot weep it back
 again.
Men. You have said, Sir. We looked not for Mark Antony : Pray you, is he married to Cleopatra ?
Eno. Cesar's sister is call'd Octavia.
Men. True, Sir ; she was the wife of Caius
 Marcellus.
Eno. But she is now the wife of Marcus An-tonius.
Men. Pray you, Sir ?
Eno. 'Tis true.
Men. Then is Cesar, and he, for ever knit together.
Eno. If I were bound to divine of this unity, I would not prophesy so.
Men. I think the policy of that purpose made more in the marriage, than the love of the parties.
Eno. I think so too. But you shall find the band that seems to tie their friendship together, will be the very strangler of their amity :
 Octavia is of a holy, cold, and still conversation.†
Men. Who would not have his wife so ?
Eno. Not he that himself is not so ; which is Mark Antony. He will to his Egyptian dish again : then shall the sighs of Octavia blow the fire up in Cesar : and, as I said before, that which is the strength of their amity, shall prove the immediate author of their variance. Antony

* Been acquainted.

† Behaviour.

will use his affection where it is : he married but his occasion here.

Men. And thus it may be. Come, Sir, will you aboard ? I have a health for you.

Eno. I shall take it, Sir : we have used our throats in Egypt.

Men. Come, let's away. [Exeunt.]

SCENE VII.—On Board POMPEY'S Galley, lying near Misenum.

Music. Enter two or three SERVANTS with a Banquet.*

1 Serv. Here they'll be, man : Some o'their plants† are ill-rooted already, the least wind i'the world will blow them down.

2 Serv. Lepidus is high-coloured.

1 Serv. They have made him drink aims-drink.

2 Serv. As they pinch one another by the disposition, he cries out, no more ; reconciles them to his entreaty, and himself to the drink.

1 Serv. But it raises the greater war between him and his discretion.

2 Serv. Why, this is to have a name in great men's fellowship ; I had as lief have a reed that will do me no service, as a partizan‡ I could not heave.

1 Serv. To be called into a huge sphere, and not to be seen to move in't, are the holes where eyes should be, which pitifully disaster the cheeks.

A Sennet sounded. Enter CESAR, ANTONY,
 POMPEY, LEPIDUS, AGRIPPA, MECÆNAS,
 ENOBARBUS, MENAS, with other Captains.

Ant. Thus do they, Sir : [To CESAR.] They take the flow o'the Nile.

By certain scales i'the pyramid ; they know,
 By the height, the lowness, or the mean,§ if dearth,

Or folzon,|| follow ; The higher Nilus swells,
 The more it promises : as it ebbs, the seedsman
 Upon the slime and ooze scatters his grain,
 And shortly comes to harvest.

Lep. You have strange serpents there.

Ant. Ay, Lepidus.

Lep. Your serpent of Egypt is bred now of your mud by the operation of your sun : so is your crocodile.

Ant. They are so.

Pom. Sit,—and some wine.—A health to Lepidus.

Lep. I am not so well as I should be, but I'll ne'er out.

Eno. Not till you have slept ; I fear me, you'll be in, till then.

Lep. Nay, certainly, I have heard the Ptolemies' pyramids¶ are very goodly things ; without contradiction, I have heard that.

Men. Pompey, a word. [Aside.]

Pom. Say in mine ear : What is't ?

Men. Forsake thy seat, I do beseech thee, captain, [Aside.]

And hear me speak a word.

Pom. Forbear me till anon.—

This wine for Lepidus.

Lep. What manner o'thing is your crocodile ?

Ant. It is shaped, Sir, like itself ; and it is as broad as it hath breadth : it is just so high as it is, and moves with its own organs : it lives by that which nourisheth it ; and the elements once out of it, it transmigrates.

Lep. What colour is it of ?

Ant. Of its own colour too.

Lep. 'Tis a strange serpent.

Ant. 'Tis so. And the tears of it are wet.

Ces. Will this description satisfy him ?

Ant. With the health that Pompey gives him, else he is a very epicure.

Pom. [To MENAS aside.] Go, hang, Sir, hang Tell me of that ? away !

* Desert. † Feet. ‡ Pike. § Middle.
 † Plenty. ¶ Pyramids.

Do as I bid you.—Where's this cup I call'd for?

Men. If for the sake of merit thou wilt hear me,
Rise from thy stool. [Aside.]

Pom. I think thou'rt mad. The matter?
[Rises, and walks aside.]

Men. I have ever held my cap off to thy fortunes.

Pom. Thou hast serv'd me with much faith:
What's else to say?

Be jolly, lords.

Ant. These quick-sands, Lepidus,

Keep off them, for you sink.

Men. Wilt thou be lord of all the world?

Pom. What say'st thou?

Men. Wilt thou be lord of the whole world?
That's twice.

Pom. How should that be?

Men. But entertain it, and,
Although thou think me poor, I am the man
Will give thee all the world.

Pom. Hast thou drunk well?

Men. No, Pompey, I have kept me from the cup.

Thou art, if thou dar'st be, the earthly Jove:
Whate'er the ocean pales, or sky inclips,†
Is thine, if thou wilt have't.

Pom. Show me which way.

Men. These three world-sharers, these competitors,‡

Are in thy vessel: let me cut the cable;
And, when we are put off, fall to their throats:
All there is thine.

Pom. Ah, this thou should'st have done,
And not have spoke on't! In me, 'tis villany;
In thee it had been good service. Thou must know,

'Tis not my profit that does lead mine honour;
Mine honour it. Repent, that e'er thy tongue
Hath so betray'd thine act: Being done unknown,
I should have found it afterwards well done;
But must condemn it now. Desist and drink.

Men. For this, [Aside.]
I'll never follow thy pall'd § fortunes more.—
Who seeks, and will not take, when once 'tis Shall never find it more. [offer'd,]

Pom. This health to Lepidus.

Ant. Bear him ashore.—I'll pledge it for him,
Pompey.

Eno. Here's to thee, Menas.

Men. Enobarbus, welcome.

Pom. Fill, till the cup be hid.

Eno. There's a strong fellow, Menas.

[Pointing to the Attendant who carries off LEPIDUS.]

Men. Why?

Eno. He bears

The third part of the world, man: See'st not?

Men. The third part then is drunk: 'Would it were all,

That it might go on wheels!

Eno. Drink thou; increase the reels.

Men. Come.

Pom. This is not yet an Alexandrian feast.

Ant. It ripens towards it. Strike the vessels, |
Here is to Cesar. [ho!]

Ces. I could well forbear it.

It's monstrous labour, when I wash my brain,
And it grows fouler.

Ant. Be a child o'the time.

Ces. Possess ¶ it, I'll make answer: but I had rather fast

From all, four days, than drink so much in one.

Eno. Ha, my brave emperor! [To ANTONY.]
Shall we dance now the Egyptian Bacchanals
And celebrate our drink?

Pom. Let's ha't, good soldier.

Ant. Come, let us all take hands;
Till that the conquering wine hath steep'd our sense
In soft and delicate Lethe.

Eno. All take hands.—

Make battery to our ears with the loud music;—
The while, I'll place you: Then the boy shall sing:

The holding* every man shall bear, as loud
As his strong sides can volley.

[Music plays. ENOBARBUS places them hand in hand.]

SONG.

*Come, thou monarch of the vine,
Plumpy Bacchus, with pink eyne †
In thy vats our cares be drown'd:
With thy grapes our hairs be crown'd
Cup us, till the world go round;
Cup us, till the world go round!*

Ces. What would you more?—Pompey, good night. Good brother,

Let me request you off: our graver business
Frowns at this levity.—Gentle lords, let's part;
You see, we have burnt our cheeks: strong Enobarbe

Is weaker than the wine; and mine own tongue
Splits what it speaks: the wild disguise hath almost Antick'd us all. What needs more words? Good night.—

Good Antony your hand.

Pom. I'll try you o'the shore.

Ant. And shall, Sir: give's your hand.

Pom. O Antony,

You have my father's house, But what? we are friends:

Come, down into the boat.

Eno. Take heed you fall not.—

[Exeunt POMPEY, CESAR, ANTONY, and Attendants.]

Menas, I'll not on shore.

Men. No, to my cabin.—

These drums!—these trumpets, flutes! what!—
Let Neptune hear we bid a loud farewell
To these great fellows: Sound, and be hang'd sound out.

[A Flourish of Trumpets, with Drums.]

Eno. Ho, says 'a!—There's my cap.

Men. Ho!—noble captain!

Come. [Exeunt.]

ACT III.

SCENE I.—A plain in Syria.

Enter VENTIDIUS, as after conquest, with SILIUS, and other Romans, Officers, and Soldiers; the dead body of PACORUS borne before him.

Ven. Now, darting Parthia, art thou struck;
and now

Pleas'd fortune does of Marcus Crassus' death
Make me revenger.—Bear the king's son's body
Before our army:—Thy Pacorus, Orodes, †
Pays this for Marcus Crassus.

Sil. Noble Ventidius,

Whilst yet with Parthian blood thy sword is warm, [Media,]
The fugitive Parthians follow; spur through Mesopotamia, and the shelters whither
The routed fly: so thy grand captain, Antony, Shall set thee on triumphant chariots, and Put garlands on thy head.

Ven. O Silius, Silius,

I have done enough: A lower place, note well,
May make too great an act: For learn this, Silius;
Better leave undone, than by our deed acquire
Too high a fame, when him we serve's away.
Cesar, and Antony, have ever won
More in their officer than person: Sossius,
One of my place in Syria, his lieutenant,
For quick accumulation of renown,
Which he achiev'd by the minute, lost his favour.
Who does i'the wars more than his captain can,

* Accompanys. † Embraces. ‡ Confederates.
§ Cloyed. ¶ Kettle drums. † Understand.

* Chorus. † Red eyes.
‡ Pacorus was the son of Orodes, king of Parthia.

Becomes his captain's captain; and ambition,
The soldier's virtue, rather makes choice of loss,
Than gain, which darkens him.
I could do more to do Antonius good,
But 'twould offend him; and in his offence
Should my performance perish.

Sil. Thou hast, Ventidius,
That without which a soldier, and his sword,
Grants scarce distinction. Thou wilt write to Antony?

Ven. I'll humbly signify what in his name,
That magical word of war, we have effected;
How, with his banners, and his well-paid ranks,
The ne'er-yet-beaten horse of Parthia
We have jaded out o'the field.

Sil. Where is he now?

Ven. He purposeth to Athens: whither with what haste
The weight we must convey with us will permit,
We shall appear before him.—On, there; pass along. [Exeunt.]

SCENE II.—Rome.—An Antechamber in CESAR'S house.

Enter AGRIPPA, and ENOBARBUS, meeting.

Agr. What, are the brothers parted?

Eno. They have despatch'd with Pompey, he is gone;

The other three are sealing. Octavia weeps
To part from Rome: Cesar is sad; and Lepidus,
Since Pompey's feast, as Menas says, is troubled
With the green-sickness.

Agr. 'Tis a noble Lepidus.

Eno. A very fine one: Oh! how he loves Cesar!

Agr. Nay, but how dearly he adores Mark
Antony!

Eno. Cesar? Why, he's the Jupiter of men.

Agr. What's Antony? The god of Jupiter.

Eno. Spake you of Cesar? How! the nonpari-el!

Agr. O Antony! O thou Arabian bird!*

Eno. Would you praise Cesar, say,—Cesar;
—go no farther.

Agr. Indeed, he piled them both with excellent praises.

Eno. But he loves Cesar best;—Yet he loves
Antony:

Ho! hearts, tongues, figures, scribes, bards, poets, cannot

Think, speak, cast, write, sing, number, ho, his

Agr. Both he loves.

Eno. They are his shards,† and he their beetle. So,— [Trumpets.]

This is to horse.—Adieu, noble Agrippa.

Agr. Good fortune, worthy soldier; and fare-
well.

Enter CESAR, ANTONY, LEPIDUS, and Oc-TAVIA.

Ant. No farther, Sir.

Ces. You take from me a great part of myself;

Use me well in it.—Sister, prove such a wife
As my thoughts make thee, and as my farthest
hand‡

Shall pass on thy approval.—Most noble Antony,
Let not the piece of virtue,§ which is set
Betwixt us, as the cement of our love,
To keep it builded, be the ram, to batter
The fortress of it: for better might we
Have lov'd without this mean, if on both parts
This be not cherish'd.

Ant. Make me not offended
In your distrust.

Ces. I have said.

Ant. You shall not find,
Though you be therein curious,|| the least cause

For what you seem to fear: So, the gods keep
you,

And make the hearts of Romans serve your ends!
We will here part.

Ces. Farewell, my dearest sister, fare thee
well;

The elements* be kind to thee, and make
Thy spirits all of comfort! fare thee well.

Oct. My noble brother!—

Ant. The April's in her eyes: It is love's spring
And these the showers to bring it on.—Be cheerful.

Oct. Sir, look well to my husband's house;
and—

Ces. What,

Octavia?

Oct. I'll tell you in your ear.

Ant. Her tongue will not obey her heart, nor can

Her heart inform her tongue: the swan's down feather,

That stands upon the swell at full of tide,
And neither way inclines.

Eno. Will Cesar weep? [Aside to AGRIPPA.]

Agr. He has a cloud in's face.

Eno. He were the worse for that, were he a
So is he, being a man. [horse

Agr. Why, Enobarbus?

When Antony found Julius Cesar dead,
He cried almost to roaring: and he wept,
When at Philippi he found Brutus slain.

Eno. That year, indeed he was troubled with a rheum;

What willingly he did confound,† he wall'd:

Believe it, till I weep too.

Ces. No, sweet Octavia,
You shall hear from me still; the time shall not
Out-go my thinking on you.

Ant. Come, Sir, come;
I'll wrestle with you in my strength of love:

Look, here I have you; thus I let you go
And give you to the gods.

Ces. Adieu; be happy!

Lep. Let all the number of the stars give light
To thy fair way!

Ces. Farewell, Farewell! [Kisses OCTAVIA.]

Ant. Farewell! [Trumpets sound. Exeunt.]

SCENE III.—Alexandria.—A Room in the Palace.

ALEXAS.*

Cleo. Where is the fellow?

Alex. Half afeard to come.

Cleo. Go to, go to:—Come hither, Sir.

Enter a MESSENGER.

Alex. Good majesty,
Herod of Jewry dare not look upon you,
But when you are well pleas'd.

Cleo. That Herod's head
I'll have: But how? when Antony is gone Through whom I might command it.—Come thou near.

Mess. Most gracious majesty,—

Cleo. Didst thou behold
Octavia?

Mess. Ay, dread queen.

Cleo. Where?

Mess. Madam, in Rome.

I look'd her in the face: and saw her led Between her brother and Mark Antony.

Cleo. Is she as tall as me?†

Mess. She is not, madam.

Cleo. Didst hear her speak? Is she shrilltongu'd, or low?

Mess. Madam, I heard her speak; she is lowvoic'd.

Cleo. That's not so good:—he cannot like her long.

* The Phoenix. † Wings.
‡ Band and § Cesar's sister.
|| Doubtful.

* Of air and water. † Destroy.
‡ This scene is levelled at Queen Elizabeth's 'salony of her rival, Mary, Queen of Scots.

Char. Like her? O Isis! 'tis impossible.

Cleo. I think so, Charmian: Dull of tongue and dwarfish!—

What majesty is in her gait? Remember, If e'er thou look'st on majesty.

Mess. She creeps;

Her motion and her station* are as one: She shows a body rather than a life:

A statue, than a breather.

Cleo. Is this certain?

Mess. Or I have no observance.

Char. Three in Egypt Cannot make better note.

Cleo. He's very knowing, I do perceiv't:—There's nothing in her yet:— The fellow has good judgment.

Char. Excellent.

Cleo. Guess at her years, I pr'ythee.

Mess. Madam, She was a widow.

Cleo. Widow?—Charmian, bark.

Mess. And I do think, she's thirty.

Cleo. Bear'st thou her face in mind? Is it long or round?

Mess. Round, even to faultiness.

Cleo. For the most part too, [four?] They are foolish that are so.—Her hair, what colour?

Mess. Brown, madam: And her forehead is as low

As she would wish it.

Cleo. There is gold for thee.

Thou must not take my former sharpness ill:— I will employ thee back again; I find thee

Most fit for business: Go, make thee ready;

Our letters are prepar'd. [Exit MESSENGER.]

Char. A proper man.

Cleo. Indeed, he is so: I repent me much, That so I harry'd† him. Why, methinks, by him, This creature's no such thing.

Char. O nothing, madam.

Cleo. The man hath seen some majesty, and should know.

Char. Hath he seen majesty? Isis else defend, And serving you so long!

Cleo. I have one thing more to ask him yet, good Charmian:—

But 'tis no matter; thou shalt bring him to me Where I will write: All may be well enough.

Char. I warrant you, madam. [Exit.]

SCENE IV.—Athens.—A Room in ANTONY'S House.

Enter ANTONY and OCTAVIA.

Ant. Nay, nay, Octavia, not only that,— That were excusable, that, and thousands more Of semblable import,‡—but he hath wag'd New wars 'gainst Pompey; made his will, and read it

To public ear:

Spoke scantily of me: when perforce he could not But pay me terms of honour, cold and sickly He vented§ them; most narrow measure lent me: When the best hint was given him, he not took't, Or did it from his teeth.¶

Oct. O my good lord, Believe not all; or, if you must believe, Stomach not all. A more unhappy lady, If this division chance, ne'er stood between, Praying for both parts: And the good gods will mock me presently, When I shall pray, O bless my lord and husband!

Undo that prayer, by crying out as loud, O bless my brother! Husband win, win brother, Prays, and destroys the prayer; no midway 'Twixt these extremes at all.

Ant. Gentle Octavia, Let your best love draw to that point, which seeks Best to preserve it: If I lose mine honour, I lose myself: better I were not yours, Than yours so branchless. But, as you requested,

* Standing. † Ruffled. ‡ Similar tendency. § Exposed. ¶ Indistinctly.

Yourself shall go between us: The mean time, lady,

I'll raise the preparation of a war Shall stain your brother; Make your soonest haste; So your desires are yours.

Oct. Thanks to my lord.

The Jove of power make me most weak, most weak, [be]

Your reconciler! Wars 'twixt you twain would As if the world should cleave, and that slain men Should solder up the rift.*

Ant. When it appears to you where this begins,

Turn your displeasure that way; for our faults Can never be so equal, that your love

Can equally move with them. Provide your going; [cost]

Choose your own company; and command what Your heart has miud to. [Exit.]

SCENE V.—The same.—Another Room in the same.

Enter ENOBARBUS and EROS, meeting.

Ero. How now, friend Eros?

Eros. There's strange news come, Sir.

Ero. What, man?

Eros. Cesar and Lepidus have made wars upon Pompey.

Ero. This is old: What is the success?†

Eros. Cesar, having made use of him in the wars 'gainst Pompey, presently denied him rivalry;‡ I would not let him partake in the glory of the action: and not resting here, accuses him of letters he had formerly wrote to Pompey; upon his own appeal,§ seizes him: So poor the third is up, till death enlarge his confine.

Ero. Then, world, thou hast a pair of chaps; no more;

And throw between them all the food thou hast, They'll grind the one the other. Where's Antony?

Eros. He's walking in the garden—thus; and spurns [dus!]

The rush that lies before him; cries, Fool, Lepidus! And threats the throat of that his officer, That murder'd Pompey.

Ero. Our great navy's rigged.

Eros. For Italy and Cesar. More, Domitius; My lord desires you presently: my news I might have told hereafter.

Ero. 'Twill be naught:

But let it be.—Bring me to Antony.

Eros. Come Sir. [Exit.]

SCENE VI.—Rome.—A Room in CESAR'S House.

Enter CESAR, AGRIPPA, and MECÆNAS.

Ces. Contemning Rome, he has done all this: And more;

In Alexandria,—here's the manner of it,— I'the market place, on a tribunal silver'd, Cleopatra and himself in chairs of gold Were publicly enthron'd: at the feet, sat Cæsarion whom they call my father's son; And all the unlawful issue, that their lust Since then hath made between them. Unto her He gave the 'stablishment of Egypt; made her Of lower Syria, Cyprus, Lydia, Absolute queen.

Mec. This in the public eye?

Ces. I'the common show-place, where they exercise.

His sons, he there proclaim'd The kings of kings: Great Media, Parthia, and Armenia, He gave to Alexander; to Ptolemy he assign'd Syria, Cilicia, and Phœnicia: She In the habiliments of the goddess Isis [ence,] That day appear'd; and oft before gave audience. As 'tis reported, so.

* Opening. † What follows? § Accusation. ¶ Equal rank.

Scene VI. ANTONY AND CLEOPATRA.

Mec. Let Rome be thus inform'd.

Ag. Who, queasy * with his insolence Already, will their good thoughts call from him.

Ces. The people know it; and have now re- His accusations. [ceiv'd

Ag. Whom does he accuse?

Ces. Cesar: and that, having in Sicily Sextus Pompeius spoil'd, we had not rated † him. His part o'the tale: then does he say, he lent me Some shipping unrestor'd: lastly, he frets That Lepidus of the triumvirate Should be depos'd; and, being, that we detain All his revenue.

Ag. Sir, this should be answer'd.

Ces. 'Tis done already, and the messenger gone.

I have told him, Lepidus was grown too cruel; That he his high authority abus'd, And did deserve his change; for what I have conquer'd,

I grant him part; but then, in his Armenia, And other of his conquer'd kingdoms, I Demand the like.

Mec. He'll never yield to that.

Ces. Nor must not then be yielded to in this.

Enter OCTAVIA.

Oct. Hail, Cesar, and my lord! hail, most dear Cesar!

Ces. That ever I should call thee, cast-away!

Oct. You have not call'd me so, nor have you cause.

Ces. Why have you stol'n upon us thus? You come not

Like Cesar's sister: The wife of Antony Should have an army for an usher, and The neighs of horse to tell of her approach, Long ere she did appear; the trees by the way, Should have borne men; and expectation faint'd, Longing for what it had not: nay, the dust Should have ascended to the roof of heaven, Rais'd by your populous troops: But you are come

A market-maid to Rome; and have prevented The ostent; of our love, which, left unshown, Is often left unlov'd: we should have met you By sea, and land; supplying every stage With an augmented greeting.

Oct. Good my lord, To come thus was I not constrain'd, but did it On my free-will. My lord, Mark Antony, Hearing that you prepar'd for war, acquainted My griev'd ear withal; whereon, I begg'd His pardon for return.

Ces. Which soon he granted, Being an obstruct ‡ 'tween his lust and him.

Oct. Do not say so, my lord.

Ces. I have eyes upon him, And his affairs come to me on the wind. Where is he now?

Oct. My lord, in Athens.

Ces. No, my most wronged sister: Cleopatra Hath nodded him to her. He hath given his empire

Up to a whore; who now are levying [bled The kings o'the earth for war: He hath assem- Bocchus, the king of Lybia; Archelaus, Of Cappadocia; Philadelphos, king Of Paphlagonia; the Thracian king, Adallas: King Malchus of Arabia; king of Pont; Herod of Jewry; Mithridates, king Of Comagene; Polemon and Amintas, The kings of Mede, and Lycaonia, with a More larger list of sceptres.

Oct. Ah me, most wretched, That have my heart parted betwixt two friends, That do afflict each other!

Ces. Welcome hither:

Your letters did withhold our breaking forth; Till we perceiv'd, both how you were wrong led, And we in negligent danger. Cheer your heart:

Be you not troubled with the time, which drives O'er your content these strong necessities; But let determined things to destiny Hold unbewail'd their way. Welcome to Rome: Nothing more dear to me. You are abus'd Beyond the mark of thought; and the high gods, To do you justice, make them ministers Of us, and those that love you. Best of comfort; And ever welcome to us.

Ag. Welcome, lady.

Mec. Welcome, dear madam.

Each heart in Rome does love and pity you: Only the adulterous Antony, most large In his abominations, turns you off, And gives his potent regiment * to a trull, † That noises ‡ it against us.

Oct. Is it so, Sir?

Ces. Most certain. Sister, welcome: Pray you,

Be ever known to patience: My dearest sister!

[Exit.

SCENE VII.—ANTONY'S Camp, near the Promontory of Actium.

Enter CLEOPATRA and ENOBABUS.

Cleo. I will be even with thee, doubt it not.

Eno. But why, why, why?

Cleo. Thou hast forespoke § my being in these wars;

And say'st, it is not fit.

Eno. Well, is it, is it?

Cleo. Is't not? Denounce against us, why should not we

Be there in person?

Eno. [Aside.] Well, I could reply:—

If we should serve with horse and mares to- gether, [hear

The horse were merely ¶ lost; the mares would A soldier and his horse.

Cleo. What is't you say?

Eno. Your presence needs must puzzle An- tony;

Take from his heart, take from his brain, from his time,

What should not then be spar'd. He is already Traduc'd for levity; and 'tis said in Rome, That Photinus a eunuch, and your maids, Manage this war.

Cleo. Sink Rome; and their tongues rot, That speak against us! A charge we bear ¶ the war,

And, as the president of my kingdom, will Appear there for a man. Speak not against it; I will not stay behind.

Eno. Nay, I have done:

Here comes the emperor.

Enter ANTONY and CANIDIUS.

Ant. Is't not strange, Canidius, That from Tarentum, and Brundisium, He could so quickly cut the Ionian sea, And take in ¶ Torus?—You have heard on't sweet?

Cleo. Celerity is never more admir'd, Than by the negligent.

Ant. A good rebuke, Which might have well becom'd the best of men, To taunt at slackness.—Canidius, we Will fight with him by sea.

Cleo. By sea! What else?

Can. Why will my lord do so?

Ant. For  he dares us to't.

Eno. So hath my lord dar'd him to single fight.

Can. Ay, and to wage this battle at Pharsalia, Where Cesar fought with Pompey: But these offers,

Which serve not for his vantage, he shakes off; And so should you.

Eno. Your ships are not well mann'd:

* Disgusted.

† Divided. § Barrier.

‡ Taken.

* Power and empire. † Harlot. ‡ Threatens. § Forbid.

¶ Absolutely  Because.

¶ Subdue.

Your mariners are mulcteers,* reapers, people
Ingross'd by swift impress;† in Cesar's fleet
Are those, that often have 'gainst Pompey fought:
Their ships are yare;‡ yours, heavy. No disgrace

Shall fall you for refusing him at sea,
Being prepar'd for land.

Ant. By sea, by sea,

Eno. Most worthy Sir, you therein throw away
The absolute soldiership you have by land;
Distract your army, which doth most consist
Of war-mark'd footmen; leave unexecuted
Your own renowned knowledge; quite forego
The way which promises assurance; and Give up yourself merely to chance and hazard,
From firm security.

Ant. I'll fight at sea.

Cleo. I have sixty sails, Cesar none better.

Ant. Our overplus of shipping will we burn;
And, with the rest full-mann'd, from the head of Actium

Beat the approaching Cesar. But if we fail,

Enter a MESSENGER.

We then can do't at land.—Thy business?

Mess. The news is true, my lord; he is des-
Cesar has taken Tornyne. [cried;

Ant. Can he be there in person? 'tis impossible:

Strange, that his power should be.—Canidius,
Our nineteen legions thou shalt hold by land,
And our twelve thousand horse:—We'll to our ship;

Enter a SOLDIER.

Away, my Thetis!§—How now, worthy soldier?

Sold. O noble emperor, do not fight by sea:
Trust not to rotten planks: Do you misdoubt
The sword, and these my wounds? Let the Egyptians,

And the Phœnicians, go a ducking; we
Have used to conquer standing on the earth,
And fighting foot to foot.

Ant. Well, well, away.

[Exeunt ANTONY, CLEOPATRA, and ENOBARBUS.

Sold. By Hercules, I think I am i'the right.

Can. Soldier, thou art: but his whole action grows

Not in the power on't: So our leader's led,
And we are women's men.

Sold. You keep by land

The legions and the horse whole, do you not?

Can. Marcus Octavius, Marcus Justellus,
Publicola, and Cælius, are for sea: [sar's
But we keep whole by land. This speed of Ce-
Carries beyond belief.

Sold. While he was yet in Rome,
His power went out in such distractions;||
Beguill'd all spies.

Can. Who's his lieutenant, hear you?

Sold. They say, one Taurus.

Can. Well I know the man.

Enter a MESSENGER.

Mess. The emperor calls for Canidius.

Can. With news the time's with labour; and throes forth,
Each minute, some. [Exeunt.

SCENE VIII.—A Plain near Actium.

Enter CESAR, TAURUS, Officers, and others.

Ces. Taurus,—

Taur. My lord.

Ces. Strike not by land; keep whole:
Provoke not battle, till we have done at sea.
Do not exceed the prescript of this scroll:
Our fortune lies upon this jump.¶ [Exeunt.

* Mule drivers. † Pressed in haste. ‡ Manageable.

Enter ANTONY and ENOBARBUS.

Ant. Set we our squadrons on yon' side o'the
hill

In eye* of Cesar's battle; from which place
We may the number of the ships behold,
And so proceed accordingly. [Exeunt.

Enter CANIDIUS, marching with his Land Army one way, over the Stage; and TAURUS, the Lieutenant of CESAR, the other way. After their departure, is heard the noise of a Sea-fight.

Alarum. Re-enter ENOBARBUS.

Eno. Naught, naught, all naught! I can behold
no longer:
The Antoniad,† the Egyptian admiral,
With all their sixty, fly, and turn the rudder;
To see't, mine eyes are blasted.

Enter SCARUS.

Scar. Gods, and goddesses,
All the whole synod of them!

Eno. What's thy passion?

Scar. The greater cantle‡ of the world is lost
With very ignorance: we have kiss'd away
Kingdoms and provinces.

Eno. How appears the fight?

Scar. On our side like the token'd§ pestilence,
Where death is sure. Yon' ribald-rid nag|| of
Egypt,

Whom leprosy o'ertake! i'the midst o'the fight,—
When vantage like a pair of twins appear'd,
Both as the same, or rather ours the elder,
The brize¶ upon her, like a cow in June,
Hoists sails, and flies.

Eno. That I beheld: mine eyes
Did sicken at the sight on't, and could not Endure a further view.

Scar. She once being loof'd,
The noble ruin of her magic, Antony, [lard
Claps on his sea-wing, and like a doting mal-
Leaving the fight in height, flies after her:
I never saw an action of such shame;
Experience, manhood, honour, ne'er before
Did violate so itself.

Eno. Alack, alack!

Enter CANIDIUS.

Can. Our fortune on the sea is out of breath
And sinks most lamentably. Had our general
Been what he knew himself, it had gone well:
Oh! he has given example for our flight,
Most grossly, by his own.

Eno. Ay, are you thereabouts? Why then, good
night

Indeed. [Aside.

Can. Towards Peloponnesus are they fled.

Scar. 'Tis easy to't; and there I will attend
What further comes.

Can. To Cesar will I render
My legions and my horse; six kings already
Show me the way of yielding.

Eno. I'll yet follow
The wounded chance†† of Antony, though my reason
Sits in the wind against me. [Exeunt.

SCENE IX.—Alexandria.—A Room in the Palace.

Enter ANTONY and ATTENDANTS.

Ant. Hark, the land bids me tread no more upon't,
It is asham'd to bear me!—Friends, come hither,
I am so lated‡‡ in the world, that I
Have lost my way for ever:—I have a ship
Laden with gold; take that, divide it; fly,
And make your peace with Cesar.

* Sight. † Name of Cleopatra's ship. ‡ Corner.
§ Spotted. || Common strumpet.
¶ The gad-fly that stings cattle.
 Loof is to bring a ship close to the wind.
†† The broken fortunes. ‡‡ Benighted.

Att. Fly! not we.

Ant. I have fled myself; and have instructed cowards
To run and show their shoulders.—Friends, be gone;

I have myself resolv'd upon a course,
Which has no need of you; be gone:
My treasure's in the harbour, take it.—Oh!
I follow'd that I blush to look upon:
My very hairs do mutiny; for the white
Reprove the brown for rashness, and they them
For fear and doting.—Friends, be gone: you shall

Have letters from me to some friends, that will Sweep your way for you. Pray you, look not sad,

Nor make replies of loathness: take the hint
Which my despair proclaims; let that be left
Which leaves itself: to the sea side straightway:
I will possess you of that ship and treasure.
Leave me, I pray, a little: 'pray you now:—
Nay, do so; for, indeed, I have lost command,
Therefore I pray you:—I'll see you by and by.
[Sits down.]

Enter EROS; and CLEOPATRA led by CHARMIAN and IRAS.

Eros. Nay, gentle madam, to him:—Comfort him

Irás. Do, most dear queen.

Char. Do! Why, what else?

Cleo. Let me sit down. O Juno!

Ant. No, no, no, no, no.

Eros. See you here, Sir?

Ant. O fie, fie, fie.

Char. Madam,—

Irás. Madam; O good empress!—

Eros. Sir, Sir,—

Ant. Yes, my lord, yes:—He, * at Philippi, kept

His sword even like a dancer; while I struck
The lean and wrinkled Cassius; and 'twas I
That the mad Brutus ended: he alone
Dealt on lieutenantry,† and no practice had
In the brave squares of war: Yet now—No matter.

Cleo. Ah! stand by.

Eros. The queen, my lord, the queen.

Irás. Go to him, madam, speak to him;
He is unqualified‡ with very shame.

Cleo. Well then,—Sustain me:—Oh!

Eros. Most noble Sir, arise; the queen approaches;
Her head's declin'd, and death will seize her: but §
Your comfort makes the rescue.

Ant. I have offended reputation;
A most unnooble swerving.

Eros. Sir, the queen.

Ant. O whither hast thou led me, Egypt?
See,
How I convey my shame out of thine eyes
By looking back on what I have left behind
'Strey'd in dishonour.

Cleo. O my lord, my lord!
Forgive my fearful sails! I little thought
You would have follow'd.

Ant. Egypt, thou knew'st too well
My heart was to thy rudder tied by the strings,
And thou should'st tow me after: O'er my spirit
Thy full supremacy thou knew'st: and that Thy beck might from the bidding of the gods Command me.

Cleo. Oh! my pardon.

Ant. Now I must
To the young man send humble treaties, dodge
And palter in the shifts of lowness; who
With half the bulk o'the world play'd as I pleas'd, Making and marring fortunes. You did know
How much you were my conqueror; and that My sword made weak by my affection, would Obey it on all cause.

Cleo. Oh! pardon, pardon.

* Caesar. † Fought by proxy. ‡ Bewildered.
§ Unless.

Ant. Fall not a tear, I say: one of them rates *
All that is won and lost: Give me a kiss;
Even this repays me.—We sent our school-master,
Is he come back?—Love, I am full of lead:—
Some wine, within there, and our viands:—Fortune knows,
We scorn her most, when most she offers blows,
[Exeunt.]

SCENE X.—CESAR'S Camp in Egypt.

Enter CESAR, DOLABELLA, THYREUS, and others.

Ces. Let him appear that's come from An-
Know you him? [Antony.—

Dol. Caesar, 'tis his schoolmaster: †
An argument that he is pluck'd, when hither
He sends so poor a pinion of his wing,
Which had superfluous kings for messengers,
Not many moons gone by.

Enter EUPHRONIUS.

Ces. Approach, and speak.

Eup. Such as I am, I come from Antony:
I was of late as petty to his ends,
As is the morn-dew on the myrtle leaf
To his grand sea.

Ces. Be it so: Declare thine office.

Eup. Lord of his fortunes he salutes thee, and Requires to live in Egypt: which, not granted,
He lessens his requests; and to thee sues
To let him breathe between the heavens and
earth,

A private man in Athens: This for him.
Next, Cleopatra does confess thy greatness;
Submits her to thy might; and of thee craves
The circle‡ of the Ptolemies for her heirs,
Now hazarded to thy grace.

Ces. For Antony,
I have no ears to his request. The queen
Of audience, nor desire, shall fail; so she
From Egypt drive her all-disgraced friend, §
Or take his life there: This if she perform,
She shall not sue unheard. So to them both.

Eup. Fortune pursue thee!

Ces. Bring him through the bands.

[Exit EUPHRONIUS.]

To try thy eloquence, now 'tis time: Despatch;
From Antony win Cleopatra: promise,

[To THYREUS.]

And in our name, what she requires: add more,
From thine invention, offers: women are not,
In their best fortunes, strong; but want will perjure [Thyreus;
The ne'er-touch'd vestal: Try thy cunning,
Make thine own edict for thy pains, which we
Will answer as a law.

Thyr. Caesar, I go.

Ces. Observe how Antony becomes his flaw; ¶
And what thou think'st his very action speaks
In every power that moves.

Thyr. Caesar, I shall.

[Exeunt.]

SCENE XI.—Alexandria.—A Room in the Palace.

Enter CLEOPATRA, ENOBARBUS, CHARMIAN, and IRAS.

Cleo. What shall we do, Enobarbus?

Eno. Think, and die.

Cleo. Is Antony, or we, in fault for this;

Eno. Antony only, that would make his will Lord of his reason. What although you fled From that great face of war, whose several ranges

Frighted each other, why should he follow?
The itch of his affection should not then
Have nick'd ¶ his captainship; at such a point,
When half to half the world oppos'd, he being
The mered question,  'twas a shame no less

* Is worth. † Euphronius, schoolmaster to Antony's children. ‡ Diadem, the crown.
§ Par amour. ¶ Bears his misfortunes. ¶ Cozened deceived.  The sole occasion of the war

Than was his loss, to course your flying flags,
And leave his navy gazing.

Cleo. Pr'ythee, peace.

Enter ANTONY, with EUPHRONIUS.

Ant. Is this his answer?

Eup. Ay, my lord.

Ant. The queen
Shall then have courtesy, so she will yield
Us up.

Eup. He says so.

Ant. Let her know it.—

To the boy Cesar send this grizled head,
And he will fill thy wishes to the brim
With principalities.

Cleo. That head, my lord?

Ant. To him again: Tell him, he wears the rose [note
Of youth upon him; from which the world should Something particular: his coin, ships, legions,
May be a coward's; whose minister would prevail
Under the service of a child, as soon
As i'the command of Cesar: I dare him, therefore,
To lay his gay comparisons* apart,
And answer me, declin'd,† sword against
sword.

Ourselves alone: I'll write it; follow me.

[Exeunt ANTONY and EUPHRONIUS.]

Eno. Yes, like enough, high-battled Cesar will Unstate his happiness, and be stag'd to the show, Against a sworder.—I see, men's judgments are
A parcel‡ of their fortunes; and things outward
To draw the inward quality after them,
To suffer all alike. That he should dream,
Knowing all measures, the full Cesar will Answer his emptiness!—Cesar, thou hast subdu'd
His judgment too.

Enter an ATTENDANT.

Att. A messenger from Cesar.

Cleo. What, no more ceremony?—See my women!—

Against the blown rose may they stop their nose,
That kneel'd unto the buds.—Admit him, Sir.

Eno. Mine honesty and I begin to square.§

[Aside.

The loyalty, well held to fools, does make
Our faith mere folly:—Yet, he that can enlure
To follow with allegiance a fallen lord,
Does conquer him that did his master conquer,
And earns a place i'the story.

Enter THYREUS.

Cleo. Cesar's will?

Thyr. Hear it apart.

Cleo. None but friends: say boldly,

Thyr. So, haply,|| are they friends to Antony.

Eno. He needs as many, Sir, as Cesar has;
Or needs not us. If Cesar please, our master
Will leap to be his friend: For us, you know,
Whose he is, we are; and that's Cesar's.

Thyr. So.—

Thus then, thou most renown'd! Cesar entreats,
Not to consider in what case thou stand'st,
Further than he is Cesar.

Cleo. Go on: Right royal.

Thyr. He knows, that you embrace not Antony
As you did love, but as you fear'd him.

Cleo. Oh!

Thyr. The scars upon your honour, therefore,
Does pity, as constrained blemishes, [he
Not as deserv'd.

Cleo. He is a god, and knows
What is most right: Mine honour was not yielded,
But conquer'd merely.

Eno. To be sure of that, [Aside.
I will ask Antony.—Sir, Sir, thou'rt so leaky,
That we must leave thee to thy sinking, for
Thy dearest quit thee. [Exit ENOBARBUS.

* The comparisons in which he indulges on reviewing his fortune and mine.
‡ Of a piece with. § Quarrel. † That am fallen.
|| Perhaps.

Thyr. Shall I say to Cesar
What you require of him? for he partly begs
To be desir'd to give. It much would please
him,

That of his fortunes you should make a staff
To lean upon: but it would warm his spirits,
To hear from me you had left Antony,
And put yourself under his shroud,
The universal landlord.

Cleo. What's your name?

Thyr. My name is Thyrens.

Cleo. Most kind messenger,
Say to great Cesar this, in disputation*
I kiss his conqu'ring hand; tell him, I am prompt

To lay my crown at his feet, and there to kneel:
Tell him, from his all-obeying† breath I hear
The doom of Egypt.

Thyr. 'Tis your noblest course.
Wisdom and fortune combating together,
If that the former dare but what it can,
No chance may shake it. Give me grace to lay
My duty on your hand.

Cleo. Your Cesar's father
Oft, when he hath mus'd of taking kingdoms in,
Bestow'd his lips on that unworthy place,
As it rain'd kisses.

Re-enter ANTONY and ENOBARBUS.

Ant. Favours, by Jove that thunders!—
What art thou, fellow?

Thyr. One, that but performs
The bidding of the fullest man, and worthiest
To have command obey'd.

Eno. You will be whipp'd.

Ant. Approach, there:—Ay, you kite!—Now gods and devils! [No!
Authority melts from me: Of late, when I cry'd,
Like boys unto a muss,‡ kings would start forth,
And cry, Your will! Have you no ears? I am

Enter ATTENDANTS.

Antony yet. Take hence this Jack,§ and whip
him.

Eno. 'Tis better playing with a lion's whelp,
Than with an old one dying.

Ant. Moon and stars! [butaries
Whip him:—Were't twenty of the greatest tri-
That do acknowledge Cesar, should I find them
So saucy with the hand of she here, (What's her
name,

Since she was Cleopatra?)—Whip him, fellows,
Till, like a boy, you see him cringe his face,
And whine aloud for mercy: Take him hence.

Thyr. Mark Antony,—

Ant. Tug him away; being whipp'd,
Bring him again:—This Jack of Cesar's shall Bear us an errand to him.—

[Exeunt ATTEND. with THYREUS.]

You were half blasted ere I knew you:—Ha!
Have I my pillow left unpress'd in Rome
Forborne the getting of a lawful race,
And by a gem of women, to be abus'd
By one that looks on feeders?||

Cleo. Good my lord,—

Ant. You have been a boggler ever:
But when we in our viciousness grow hard,
(O misery on't!) the wise gods seal our eyes;
In our own filth drop our clear judgments;
make us

Adore our errors; laugh at us, while we strut
To our confusion.

Cleo. Oh! is it come to this?

Ant. I found you as a morsel cold upon Dead Cesar's trencher: nay, you were a fragment

Of Cneius Pompey's; besides what hotter hours, Unregister'd in vulgar fame, you have
Luxuriously pick'd out:—For I am sure,
Though you can guess what temperance should be
You know not what it is.

* Supposed to be an error for deputation, i. e. by proxy.
† Breath which all obey. ‡ Scramble.
§ A term of contempt. || Servants.

Att. Fly! not we.

Ant. I have fled myself; and have instructed cowards To run and show their shoulders.—Friends, be gone;
I have myself resolv'd upon a course, Which has no need of you; be gone:
My treasure's in the harbour, take it.—Oh! I follow'd that I blush to look upon:
My very hairs do mutiny; for the white Reprove the brown for rashness, and they them For fear and doting.—Friends, be gone: you shall Have letters from me to some friends, that will Sweep your way for you. Pray you, look not sad,
Nor make replies of loathness: take the hint Which my despair proclaims; let that be left Which leaves itself: to the sea side straightway: I will possess you of that ship and treasure.
Leave me, I pray, a little: 'pray you now:— Nay, do so; for, indeed, I have lost command, Therefore I pray you:—I'll see you by and by.
[Sits down.]

Enter EROS; and CLEOPATRA led by CHARMIAN and IRAS.

Eros. Nay, gentle madam, to him:—Comfort him
Irás. Do, most dear queen.
Char. Do! Why, what else?
Cleo. Let me sit down. O Juno!
Ant. No, no, no, no, no.
Eros. See you here, Sir?
Ant. O fie, fie, fie.
Char. Madam,—
Irás. Madam; O good empress!—
Eros. Sir, Sir,—
Ant. Yes, my lord, yes:—He, * at Philippi, kept
His sword even like a dancer; while I struck The lean and wrinkled Cassius; and 'twas I That the mad Brutus ended: he alone Dealt on lieutenantry, † and no practice had In the brave squares of war: Yet now—No matter.
Cleo. Ah! stand by.
Eros. The queen, my lord, the queen.
Irás. Go to him, madam, speak to him; He is unqualified ‡ with very shame.
Cleo. Well then,—Sustain me:—Oh!
Eros. Most noble Sir, arise; the queen approaches;
Her head's declin'd, and death will seize her: but § Your comfort makes the rescue.
Ant. I have offended reputation;
A most annoble swerving.
Eros. Sir, the queen.
Ant. O whither hast thou led me, Egypt? See,
How I convey my shame out of thine eyes By looking back on what I have left behind 'Strey'd in dishonour.
Cleo. O my lord, my lord!
Forgive my fearful sails! I little thought You would have follow'd.
Ant. Egypt, thou knew'st too well
My heart was to thy rudder tied by the strings, And thou should'st tow me after: O'er my spirit Thy full supremacy thou knew'st: and that Thy beck might from the bidding of the gods Command me.
Cleo. Oh! my pardon.
Ant. Now I must
To the young man send humble treaties, dodge And palter in the shifts of lowness; who With half the bulk o'the world play'd as I pleas'd, Making and marring fortunes. You did know How much you were my conqueror; and that My sword made weak by my affection, would Obey it on all cause.
Cleo. Oh! pardon, pardon.

* Caesar. † Fought by proxy. ‡ Bewildered. § Unless.

Ant. Fall not a tear, I say: one of them rates * All that is won and lost: Give me a kiss;
Even this repays me.—We sent our school-master, Is he come back?—Love, I am full of lead:—
Some wine, within there, and our viands:—Fortune knows,
We scorn her most, when most she offers blows,
[Exeunt.]

Ces. Let him appear that's come from Antony. Know you him? [Antony.—

SCENE III.—The same.—Before the Palace.

Enter two SOLDIERS, to their Guard.

1 Sold. Brother, good night: to-morrow is the day.

2 Sold. It will determine one way: fare you well.

Heard you of nothing strange about the streets?

1 Sold. Nothing: What news?

2 Sold. Belike, 'tis but a rumour:
Good night to you.

1 Sold. Well, Sir, good night.

Enter two other SOLDIERS.

2 Sold. Soldiers,
Have careful watch.

3 Sold. And you: Good night, good night.

[The first two place themselves at their Posts.]

4 Sold. Here we: [They take their Posts.]
and if to-morrow

Our navy thrive, I have an absolute hope
Our landmen will stand up.

3 Sold. 'Tis a brave army,
And full of purpose.

[Music of Hautboys under the Stage.]

1 Sold. List, list!

2 Sold. Hark!

1 Sold. Music i'the air.

3 Sold. Under the earth.

4 Sold. It signs § well,
Does't not?

3 Sold. No.

1 Sold. Peace, I say. What should this mean?

2 Sold. 'Tis the god Hercules, whom Antony
lov'd,

Now leaves him.

1 Sold. Walk; let's see if other watchmen
Do hear what we do.

[They advance to another Post.]

2 Sold. How now, masters?

Sold. How now?

How now? do you hear this?

[Several speaking together.]

* Perhaps.

Sold. [Several speaking.] Content: 'Tis
strange. [Exeunt.]

SCENE IV.—The same.—A Room in the Palace.

*Enter ANTONY and CLEOPATRA; CHARMIAN,
and others, attending.*

Ant. Eros! mine armour, Eros!

Cleo. Sleep a little.

Ant. No, my chuck.—Eros, come; mine armour, Eros!

Enter EROS, with Armour.

Come, my good fellow, put thine iron on:—

If fortune be not our's to-day, it is

Because we brave her.—Come.

Cleo. Nay, I'll help too.

What's this for?

Ant. Ah, let be, let be! thou art [this.
The armourer of my heart:—False, false; this,

Cleo. Sooth, la, I'll help: Thus it must be.

Ant. Well, well; [fellow?

We shall thrive now.—See'st thou, my good
Go, put on thy defences.

Eros. Briefly,* Sir.

Cleo. Is not this buckled well?

Ant. Rarely, rarely:
He that unbuckles this, till we do please

To doff† for our repose, shall hear a storm.—

Thou fumblest, Eros; and my queen's a squire

More tight† at this, than thou: Despatch.—O

love, [knew'st

come: [charge:

And go to it with delight.

1 Off. A thousand, Sir,
Early though it be, have on their rivetted trim,

And at the port expect you.

[Shout. Trumpets. Flourish.]

Enter other OFFICERS, and SOLDIERS.

2 Off. The morn is fair.—Good morrow, general.

All. Good morrow, general.

Ant. 'Tis well blown, lads.

This morning, like the spirit of a youth
That means to be of note, begins betimes.—

So, so; come, give me that: this way; well
said.

Fare thee well, dame, whate'er becomes of me:
This is a soldier's kiss: rebukable,

[Kisses her.]

And worthy shameful check it were, to stand
On more mechanic compliment; I'll leave thee

Now, like a man of steel.—You, that will fight,
Follow me close; I'll bring you to't.—Adieu.

[Exeunt ANTONY, EROS, OFFICERS, and SOLDIERS.]

Char. Please you, retire to your chamber?
He goes forth gallantly. That he and Cesar might

Determine this great war in single fight!
Then, Antony,—But now,—Well, on.

[Exeunt]

SCENE V.—ANTONY's Camp near Alexandria.

*Trumpets sound.—Enter ANTONY and EROS,
a SOLDIER meeting them.*

Sold. The gods make this a happy day to Antony.

* Shortly.

† Adroit.

Cleo. Wherefore is this?

Ant. To let a fellow that will take rewards,
And say, God quit you! be familiar with
My playfellow, your hand; this kingly seal,
And pligher of high hearts!—Oh! that I were
Upon the hill of Basan, to outroar
The horned herd! for I have savage cause:
And to proclaim it civilly, were like
A halter'd neck, which does the hangman thank
For being yare * about him.—Is he whipp'd?

Re-enter ATTENDANTS, with THYREUS.

1 Att. Soundly, my lord.

Ant. Cry'd he? and begg'd he pardon?

1 Att. He did ask favour.

Ant. If that thy father live, let him repent
Thou wast not made his daughter; and be thou
To follow Cesar in his triumph, since [sorry
Thou hast been whipp'd for following him:
henceforth,

The white hand of a lady fever thee,
Shake thou to look on't.—Get thee back to Cesar,
Tell him thy entertainment: Look thou say,
He makes me angry with him, for he seems
Proud and disdainful, harping on what I am,
Not what he knew I was: He makes me angry;
And at this time most easy 'tis to do't;
When my good stars, that were my former guides,
Have empty left their orbs, and shot their fires
Into the abism of hell. If he mislike
My speech, and what is done; tell him, he has Hipparchus, my enfranchis'd bondman, whom
He may at pleasure whip, or hang, or torture,
As he shall like, to quit † me: Urge it thou:
Hence, with thy stripes, begone.

[Exit THYREUS.]

Cleo. Have you done yet?

Ant. Alack, our terrene moon
Is now eclips'd; and it portends alone
The fall of Antony!

Cleo. I must stay his time.

Ant. To flatter Cesar, would you mingle eyes
With one that ties his points?

Cleo. Not know me yet?

Ant. Cold-hearted toward me!

Cleo. Ah! dear, if I be so,
From my cold heart let heaven engender hail,
And poison it in the source; and the first stone
Drop in my neck; as it determines ‡ so
Dissolve my life! The next Cesarion § amite!
Till, by degrees, the memory of my womb,
Together with my brave Egyptians all,
By the discandying ¶ of this pelleted storm,
Lie graveless; till the flies and gnats of Nile
Have buried them for prey!

Ant. I am satisfied.

Cesar sits down in Alexandria; where
I will oppose his fate. Our force by land
Hath nobly held: our sever'd navy too
Have knit again, and fleet, ¶ threat'ning most sealike.

Where hast thou been, my heart?—Dost thou hear, lady?

If from the field I shall return once more
To kiss these lips, I will appear in blood;
I and my sword will earn our chronicle;
There is hope in it yet.

Cleo. That's my brave lord!

Ant. I will be treble-sinew'd, hearted, breath'd,
And fight maliciously: for when mine hours
Were nice and lucky, men did ransom lives
Of me for jests: but now, I'll set my teeth,
And send to darkness all that stop me.—Come,
Let's have one other gaudy night: call to me
All my sad captains, fill our bowls; once more
Let's mock the midnight bell.

Cleo. It is my birth-day:

I had thought to have held it poor; but, since
my lord

Is Antony again, I will be Cleopatra.

Ant. We'll yet do well.

Cleo. Call all his noble captains to my lord.

Ant. Do so, we'll speak to them; and to-night
I'll force

The wine peep through their scars.—Come on,
my queen;

There's sap in't yet. The next time I do fight,
I'll make death love me; for I will contend
Even with his pestilent scythe.

[Exeunt ANTONY, CLEOPATRA, and Attendants.]

Eno. Now he'll out-stare the lightning. To be furious,
Is, to be frightened out of fear: and, in that mood,

The dove will peck the estridge; * and I see still,
A diminution in our captain's brain
Restores his heart: When valour preys on
reason,

It eats the sword it fights with. I will seek
Some way to leave him. [Exit.]

ACT IV.

SCENE I.—CESAR'S Camp at Alexandria.

Enter CESAR, reading a Letter; AGRIPPA, MECENAS, and others.

Ces. He calls me boy; and chides, as he had power

To beat me out of Egypt: my messenger
He hath whipp'd with rods; dares me to personal combat;

Cesar to Antony:—Let the old ruffian know,
I have many other ways to die; mean time,
Laugh at his challenge.

Mec. Cesar must think,
When one so great begins to rage, he's hunted
Even to falling. Give him no breath, but now
Make boot † of his distraction: Never anger
Made good guard for itself.

Ces. Let our best heads
Know, that to-morrow the last of many battles
We mean to fight:—Within our files there are
Of those that serv'd Mark Antony but late,
Enough to fetch him in. See it be done;
And feast the army: we have store to do't,
And they have earn'd the waste. Poor Antony!
[Exeunt.]

SCENE II.—Alexandria.—A Room in the Palace.

Enter ANTONY, CLEOPATRA, ENOBARBUS, CHARMIAN, IRAS, ALEXAS, and others.

Ant. He will not fight with me, Domitius?

Eno. No.

Ant. Why should he not?

Eno. He thinks, being twenty times of better
fortune,

He is twenty men to one.

Ant. To-morrow, soldier,
By sea and land I'll fight; or I will live,
Or bathe my dying honour in the blood
Shall make it live again. Woo't thou fight well?

Eno. I'll strike; and cry, Take all.

Ant. Well said; come on.—

Call forth my household servants; let's to-night

Enter SERVANTS.

Be bounteous at our meal.—Give me thy hand,
Thou hast been rightly honest;—so hast thou;—
And thou,—and thou,—and thou:—you have serv'd me well,

And kings have been your fellows.

Cleo. What means this?

Eno. 'Tis one of those odd tricks, which sorrow shoots [Aside.

2 Sold. It will determine one way: fare you well.

Heard you of nothing strange about the streets?

1 Sold. Nothing: What news?

2 Sold. Belike, 'tis but a rumour:
Good night to you.

1 Sold. Well, Sir, good night.

Enter two other SOLDIERS.

2 Sold. Soldiers,
Have careful watch.

3 Sold. And you: Good night, good night.

[The first two place themselves at their Posts.]

4 Sold. Here we: [They take their Posts.]
and if to-morrow

Our navy thrive, I have an absolute hope
Our landmen will stand up.

3 Sold. 'Tis a brave army,
And full of purpose.

[Music of Hautboys under the Stage.]

4 Sold. Peace, what noise?

1 Sold. List, list!

2 Sold. Hark!

1 Sold. Music i' the air.

3 Sold. Under the earth.

4 Sold. It signifies well,
Does't not?

3 Sold. No.

1 Sold. Peace, I say. What should this mean?

2 Sold. 'Tis the god Hercules, whom Antony
lov'd,

Now leaves him.

1 Sold. Walk; let's see if other watchmen
Do hear what we do.

[They advance to another Post.]

2 Sold. How now, masters?

Sold. How now?

How now? do you hear this?

[Several speaking together.]

* Perhaps.

† Reward.

‡ Desist.

§ Bodes.

1 Sold. Ay! Is't not strange?

3 Sold. Do you hear, masters? do you hear?

1 Sold. Follow the noise so far as we have quarter;

Let's see how't will give off.

Sold. [Several speaking.] Content: 'Tis
strange. [Exeunt.]

SCENE IV.—The same.—A Room in the Palace.

*Enter ANTONY and CLEOPATRA; CHARMIAN,
and others, attending.*

Ant. Eros! mine armour, Eros!

Cleo. Sleep a little.

Ant. No, my chuck.—Eros, come; mine armour, Eros!

Enter EROS, with Armour.

Come, my good fellow, put thine iron on:—

If fortune be not our's to-day, it is

Because we brave her.—Come.

Cleo. Nay, I'll help too.

What's this for?

Ant. Ah, let be, let be! thou art [this.]

The armourer of my heart:—False, false; this,

Cleo. Sooth, la, I'll help: Thus it must be.

Ant. Well, well; [fellow?]

We shall thrive now.—See'st thou, my good
Go, put on thy defences.

Eros. Briefly,* Sir.

Cleo. Is not this buckled well?

Ant. Rarely, rarely:

He that unbuckles this, till we do please

To doff† for our repose, shall hear a storm.—

Thou fumblest, Eros; and my queen's a squire

More tight† at this, than thou: Despatch.—O
love, [knew'st]

That thou could'st see my wars to-day, and
The royal occupation! thou should'st see

Enter an OFFICER, armed.

A workman in't.—Good morrow to thee; welcome: [charge:]

Thou look'st like him that knows a warlike
To business that we love, we rise betime,

And go to it with delight.

1 Off. A thousand, Sir,

Early though it be, have on their rivetted trim,
And at the port expect you.

[Shout. Trumpets. Flourish.]

Enter other OFFICERS, and SOLDIERS.

2 Off. The morn is fair.—Good morrow, general.

All. Good morrow, general.

Ant. 'Tis well blown, lads.

This morning, like the spirit of a youth

That means to be of note, begins betimes.—

So, so; come, give me that: this way; well
said.

Fare thee well, dame, whate'er becomes of me:
This is a soldier's kiss: rebukable,

[Kisses her.]

And worthy shameful check it were, to stand
On more mechanic compliment; I'll leave thee

Now, like a man of steel.—You, that will fight,
Follow me close; I'll bring you to't.—Adieu.

[Exeunt ANTONY, EROS, OFFICERS, and SOLDIERS.]

Char. Please you, retire to your chamber?

He goes forth gallantly. That he and Cesar might
Determine this great war in single fight!

Then, Antony,—But now,—Well, on.

[Exeunt]

SCENE V.—ANTONY's Camp near Alexandria.

*Trumpets sound.—Enter ANTONY and EROS,
a SOLDIER meeting them.*

Sold. The gods make this a happy day to Antony.

* Shortly.

† Adieu.

Ant. Would, thou and those thy scars had once prevail'd

To make me light at land ;

Sold. Had'st thou done so,
The kings that have revolted, and the soldier
That has this morning left thee, would have still Follow'd thy heels.

Ant. Who's gone this morning ?

Sold. Who ?

One ever near thee : Call for Enohbarbus,
He shall not hear thee ; or from Cesar's camp
Say, I am none of thine.

Ant. What say'st thou ?

Sold. Sir,
He is with Cesar.

Eros. Sir, his chests and treasure
He has not with him.

Ant. Is he gone ?

Sold. Most certain.

Ant. Go, Eros, send his treasure after ; do it ;
Detain no jot, I charge thee : write to him
(I will subscribe) gentle adieus and greetings :
Say, that I wish he never find more cause
To change a master.—Oh ! my fortunes have Corrupted honest men :—Eros, despatch.

[Exeunt.]

SCENE VI.—CESAR'S Camp before Alexandria.

Flourish.—Enter CESAR with AGRIPPA, ENO-
BARBUS, and others.

Ces. Go forth, Agrippa, and begin the fight ;
Our will is, Antony be took alive ;
Make it so known.

Agr. Cesar, I shall. [Exit AGRIPPA.]

Ces. The time of universal peace is near :
Prove this a prosperous day, the three-hoof'd
Shall bear the olive freely. [world]

Enter a MESSENGER.

Mess. Antony
Is come into the field.

Ces. Go, charge Agrippa
Plant those that have revolted in the van,
That Antony may seem to spend his fury
Upon himself.

[Exeunt CESAR and his Train.]

Eros. Alexas did revolt : and went to Jewry,
On affairs of Antony ; there did persuade Great Herod to incline himself to Cesar,
And leave his master Antony : for his pains,
Cesar hath hang'd him. Canidius, and the rest
That fell away, have entertainment, but
No honourable trust. I have done ill ;
Of which I do accuse myself so sorely,
That I will joy no more.

Enter a SOLDIER of CESAR'S.

Sold. Enohbarbus, Antony
Hath after thee sent all thy treasure, with
His bounty overplus : The messenger
Came on my guard ; and at thy tent is now,
Unloading of his mules.

Eros. I give it you.

Sold. Mock me not, Enohbarbus.
I tell you true : Best that you sa'd the bringer
Out of the host : I must attend mine office,
Or would have done't myself. Your emperor Continues still a Jove.

[Exit SOLDIER.]

Eros. I am alone the villain of the earth,
And feel I am so most. O Antony,
Thou mine of bounty, how would'st thou have paid
My better service, when my turpitude Thou dost so crown with gold ! This blows * my heart.

If swift thought break it not, a swifter mean
Shall outstrike thought : but thought † will do't,
I feel.

I fight against thee !—No : I will go seek
Some ditch, wherein to die ; the foul'st best fits
My latter part of life. [Exit.]

* Swells.

† Conscience.

SCENE VII.—Field of Battle between the Camps.

Alarum.—Drums and trumpets.—Enter
AGRIPPA, and others.

Agr. Retire, we have engag'd ourselves too far,
Cesar himself has work, and our oppression
Exceeds what we expected. [Exeunt.]

Alarum.—Enter ANTONY, and SCARUS wounded.

Scar. O my brave emperor, this is fought indeed !
Had we done so at first, we had driven them
With clouts about their heads. [home]

Ant. Thou bled'st at apace.

Scar. I had a wound here that was like a T,
But now 'tis made an H.

Ant. They do retire.

Scar. We'll beat 'em into bench-holes ; I have yet
Room for six scotches * more.

Enter EROS.

Eros. They are beaten, Sir ; and our advantage
For a fair victory. [serves]

Scar. Let us score their backs,
And snatch 'em up, as we take hares, behind ;
'Tis sport to maul a runner.

Ant. I will reward thee
Once for thy spritely comfort, and ten fold
For thy good valour. Come thee on.

Scar. I'll halt after. [Exeunt.]

SCENE VIII.—Under the walls of Alexandria.

Alarum. Enter ANTONY, marching ; SCARUS, and Forces.

Ant. We have beat him to his camp ; Run one before. [row,]
And let the queen know of our guests.—To-mor-
Before the sun shall see us, we'll spill the blood
That has to-day escap'd. I thank you all ;
For doughty †-handed are you : and have fought
Not as you serv'd the cause, but as it had been Each man's like mine ; you have shown all Hectors.

Enter the city, clip ‡ your wives, your friends,
Tell them your feats ; whilst they, with joyful tears, [kiss]
Wash the congealment from your wounds, and
The honour'd gashes whole.—Give me thy hand ;
[To SCARUS.]

Enter CLEOPATRA, attended.

To this great fairy § I'll commend thy acts,
Make her thanks bless thee.—O thou day o'the
world,
Chain mine arm'd neck ; leap thou, attire and all,
Through proof of harness to my heart and there
Ride on the pants triumphing.

Cleo. Lord of lords !
O infinite virtue ! com'st thou smiling from
The world's great snare uncaught ?

Ant. My nightingale,
We have beat them to their beds. What, girl though grey [we]
Do something mingle with our brown ; yet have
A brain that nourishes our nerves, and can Get gaol for gaol of youth. Behold this man ;
Commend unto his lips thy favouring hand ;—
Kiss it, my warrior :—He hath fought to-day,
As if a god, in hate of mankind, had Destroy'd in such a shape.

Cleo. I'll give thee, friend,
An armour all of gold : it was a king's.

Ant. He has deserv'd it, were it curbuncled
Like holy Phœbus' car.—Give me thy hand ;
Through Alexandria make a jolly march ;

* Cuts.

† Brave.

‡ Embrace.

§ Beauty, united with power, was the characteristic of fairies.

Bear our hack'd targets like the men that owe them : *

Had our great palace the capacity
To camp this host, we all would sup together,
And drink carouses to the next day's fate,
Which promises royal peril.—Trumpeters,
With brazen din blast you the city's ear ;
Make mingle with our rattling tabourines ;
That heaven and earth may strike their sounds
together,
Applauding our approach. [Exeunt.]

SCENE IX.—CESAR'S Camp.

SENTINELS on their Post. Enter ENOBARBUS.

1 Sold. If we be not reliev'd within this hour,
We must return to the court of guard : † The
night

Is shiny ; and, they say, we shall embattle
By the second hour i'the morn.

2 Sold. This last day was
A shrewd one to us.

Eno. O bear me witness, night !—

3 Sold. What man is this ?

2 Sold. Stand close, and list to him.

Eno. Be witness to me, O thou blessed moon,
When men revolted shall upon record
Bear hateful memory, poor Enobarbus did
Before thy face repent !—

1 Sold. Enobarbus !

3 Sold. Peace ;
Hark further.

Eno. O sovereign mistress of true melancholy,
The poisonous damp of night dispunge ‡ upon me ;
That life, a very rebel to my will,
May hang no longer on me : Throw my heart
Against the flint and hardness of my fault ;
Which, being dried with grief, will break to powder,

And finish all foul thoughts. O Antony,
Nobler than my revolt is infamous,
Forgive me in thine own particular ;
But let the world rank me in register
A master-leaver, and a fugitive :

O Antony ! O Antony !

[Dies.]

2 Sold. Let's speak

To him.

1 Sold. Let's hear him, for the things he speaks
May concern Cesar.

3 Sold. Let's do so. But he sleeps.

1 Sold. Swoons rather ; for so bad a prayer as his

Was never yet for sleeping.

2 Sold. Go we to him.

3 Sold. Awake, awake, Sir ; speak to us.

2 Sold. Hear you, Sir.

1 Sold. The hand of death hath raught § him.
Hark, the drums

[Drums afar off.]

Demurely wake the sleepers. Let us bear him
To the court of guard ; he is of note : our hour
Is fully out.

3 Sold. Come on then ;
He may recover yet.

[Exeunt with the Body.]

SCENE X.—Between the two Camps.

Enter ANTONY and SCARUS, with Forces marching.

Ant. Their preparation is to-day by sea ;
We please them not by land.

Scar. For both, my lord.

Ant. I would, they'd fight i'the fire, or in the air ;
We'd fight there too. But this it is : Our foot
Upon the hills adjoining to the city,
Shall stay with us ; order for sea is given ;
They have put forth the haven : Further on,
Where their appointment we may best discover,
And look on their endeavour. [Exeunt.]

* As becomes the warriors that own them. † The guard-room. ‡ Pour out, as a sponge when squeezed. § The ancient preterite tense of reach.

Enter CESAR with his Forces, marching.

Ces. But being charg'd, we will be still by land,
Which, as I take't, we shall ; for his best force
Is forth to man his gallies. To the vales,
And hold our best advantage. [Exeunt.]

Re-enter ANTONY and SCARUS.

Ant. Yet they're not join'd : Where yonder
pine does stand,
I shall discover all ; I'll bring thee word
Straight how 'tis like to go. [Exit.]

Scar. Swallows have built
In Cleopatra's sails their nests : the augurers Say, they know not,—they cannot tell ;—look grimly,

And dare not speak their knowledge. Antony
Is valiant and dejected ; and, by starts,
His fretted fortunes give him hope and fear,
Of what he has and has not.

Alarm afar off, as at a Sea Fight.

Re-enter ANTONY.

Ant. All is lost !
This foul Egyptian hath betrayed me :
My fleet have yielded to the foe ; and yonder
They cast their caps up, and carouse together
Like friends long lost.—Triple-turn'd whore ! *
'tis thou

Hast sold me to this novice ; and my heart
Makes only wars on thee.—Bid them all fly :
For when I am reveng'd upon my charm,
I have done all :—Bid them all fly, begone.

[Exit SCARUS.]

O sun, thy uprise shall I see no more :
Fortune and Antony part here ; even here
Do we shake hands.—All come to this !—The hearts

That spaniel'd me at heels, to whom I gave
Their wishes, do discandy, melt their sweets
On blossoming Cesar ; and this pine is bark'd,
That overtopp'd them all. Betray'd I am :
O this false soul of Egypt ! this grave charin, † Whose eye beck'd ‡ forth my wars, and call'd them home ;

Whose bosom was my crownet, my chief end,
Like a right gipsey, hath, at fast and loose, §
Beguil'd me to the very heart of loss.—
What, Eros, Eros !

Enter CLEOPATRA.

Ah ! thou spell ! Avaunt.

Cleo. Why is my lord enrag'd against his love ?

Ant. Vanish ; or I shall give thee thy deserv-
ing,

And blemish Cesar's triumph. Let him take thee,
And hoist thee up to the shouting plebeians :
Follow his chariot, like the greatest spot
Of all thy sex ; most monster-like, be shown
For poor'st diminutives, to dolts : || and let Patient Octavia plough thy visage up
With her prepared nails. [Exit CLEO.] 'Tis well thou'rt gone.

If it be well to live : But better 'twere
Thou fell'st into my fury, for one death
Might have prevented many.—Eros, ho !—
The shirt of Nessus is upon me : Teach me,
Alcides, ¶ thou mine ancestor, thy rage :
Let me lodge Lichas  on the horns o'the moon ;
And with those hands, that grasp'd the heaviest club,
Subdue my worthiest self. The witch shall die ;
To the Roman boy she hath sold me, and I fall
Under this plot : she dies for't.—Eros, ho !
[Exit.]

* Cleopatra first belonged to Julius Cesar, then to Antony, and now, as Antony supposes, to Augustus.
† This majestic beauty. ‡ Called forth.
§ A cheating game, at present named pricking at the belt. || For the smallest piece of money to clown.
¶ Hercules.  The boy that brought the poisoned shirt to Hercules.

SCENE XI.—Alexandria.—A Room in the Palace.

Enter CLEOPATRA, CHARMIAN, IRAS, and MARDIAN.

Cleo. Help me, my women! Oh, he is more mad Than Telamon* for his shield; the boar of
Was never so emboss'd †

Char. To the monument;
There lock yourself, and send him word you are
dead.

The soul and body rive ‡ not more in parting,
Than greatness going off.

Cleo. To the monument:—
Mardian, go tell him I have slain myself;
Say, that the last I spoke was, Antony;
And word it, pr'ythee, piteously: Hence,
Mardian; and bring me how he takes my death.—
To the monument. [Exeunt.]

SCENE XII.—The same.—Another Room.

Enter ANTONY and EROS.

Ant. Eros, thou yet behold'st me?

Eros. Ay, noble lord.

Ant. Sometime, we see a cloud that's dra-gonish;
A vapour, sometime, like a bear, or lion,
A tower'd citadel, a pendant rock,
A forked mountain, or blue promontory
With trees upon't, that nod unto the world,
And mock our eyes with air: Thou hast seen
these signs;
They are black vespers' pageants.

Eros. Ay, my lord.

Ant. That, which is now a horse, even with a
thought,
The rack § dislimbs; and makes it indistinct,
As water is in water.

Eros. It does, my lord.

Ant. My good knave, || Eros, now thy captain
Even such a body: here I am Antony; [is]
Yet cannot hold this visible shape, my knave.
I made these wars for Egypt; and the queen,— Whose heart, I thought, I had, for she had
mine—

(Which, whilst it was mine, had annex'd unto't
A million more, now lost)—she, Eros, has Pack'd cards with Cesar and false play'd my Unto an enemy's triumph.— [glory]
Nay, weep not, gentle Eros; there is left us
Ourselves to end ourselves.—Oh! thy vile lady!

Enter MARDIAN.

She has robb'd me of my sword.

Mar. No, Antony;
My mistress lov'd thee, and her fortunes mingled
With thine entirely.

Ant. Hence, sancy eunuch; peace:
She hath betray'd me, and shall die the death.

Mar. Death of one person can be paid but once;
And that she has discharg'd: What thou would'st
do,

Is done unto thy hand; the last she spake
Was, Antony! most noble Antony!
Then in the midst a tearing groan did break
The name of Antony; it was divided Between her heart and lips: she render'd life,
Thy name so buried in her.

Ant. Dead then?

Mar. Dead.

Ant. Eros, unarm: the long day's task is
done,
And we must sleep:—That thou depart'st hence safe,

Does pay thy labour richly; Go.—Off, pluck off;— [Exit MARDIAN.]
The seven-fold shield of Ajax cannot keep
The battery from my heart. O cleave, my sides!

* Ajax Telamon for the shield of Achilles.
† Imbosa, in hunting, is when the animal foams at the mouth. § Split. || The track, or form, destroys.
} Servant.

Heart, once be stronger than thy continent,*
Crack thy frail case!—Apace, Eros, apace.—
No more a soldier:—Bruised pieces, go:
You have been nobly borne.—From me awhile.—
[Exit EROS.]

I will o'ertake thee, Cleopatra, and Weep for my pardon. So it must be, for now
All length is torture:—Since the torch is out,
Lie down, and stray no further: Now all labour
Mars what it does; yea, very force entangles Itself with strength: Seal then, † and all is
done.—

Eros!—I come, my queen:—Eros!—Stay for me.
Where souls do couch on flowers, we'll hand in
hand,
And with our sprightly port make the ghosts gaze:
Dido and her Aeneas shall want troops,
And all the haunt be ours.—Come, Eros, Eros!

Re-enter EROS.

Eros. What would my lord?

Ant. Since Cleopatra died,
I have liv'd in such dishonour, that the gods
Detest my baseness. I, that with my sword Quarter'd the world, and o'er green Neptune's
back

With ships made cities, condemn myself, to lack
The courage of a woman; less noble mind
Than she, which, by her death, our Cesar tells,
I am conquerer of myself. Thou art sworn,
Eros, [now]

That, when the exigent should come, (which Is come indeed) when I should see behind me
The inevitable prosecution of Disgrace and horror, that, on my command, Thou then would'st kill me: do't; the time is
come:

Thou strik'st not me, 'tis Cesar thou defeat'st.
Put colour in thy cheek.

Eros. The gods withhold me!
Shall I do that, which all the Parthian darts,
Though enemy, lost aim and could not?

Ant. Eros, [see]
Would'st thou be window'd in great Rome, and Thy master thus with pleach'd ‡ arms, bending
down

His corrigible § neck, his face subdued
To penetrative || shame; whilst the wheel'd seat
Of fortunate Cesar, drawn before him, branded
His baseness that ensued?

Eros. I would not see't.

Ant. Come then; for with a wound I must be cur'd.

Draw that thy honest sword, which thou hast worn
Most useful for thy country.

Eros. O Sir! pardon me.

Ant. When I did make thee free, swor'st thou not then

To do this when I bade thee? Do it at once;
Or thy precedent services are all
But accidents unpurpos'd. Draw and come.

Eros. Turn from me then that noble countenance

Wherein the worship of the whole world lies.

Ant. Lo thee. [Turning from him.]

Eros. My sword is drawn.

Ant. Then let it do at once
The thing why thou hast drawn it

Eros. My dear master,
My captain, and my emperor! let me say,
Before I strike this bloody stroke, farewell.

Ant. 'Tis said, man;—and farewell.

Eros. Farewell, great chief. Shall I strike
now?

Ant. Now, Eros.

Eros. Why, there then:—
[Falls on his Sword.]

Thus do I escape the sorrow
Of Antony's death. [Dies.]

Ant. Thrice nobler than myself!
Thou teachest me, O valliant Eros, what

* Than the body which contains thee. † A metaphor borrowed from civil contracts. ‡ Folded.
§ Corrected. || Corroding.

I should, and thou could'st not. My queen and Eros

Have, by their brave instruction, got upon me
A nobleness in record: but I will be
A bridegroom in my death, and run into't
As to a lover's bed. Come then; and, Eros,
Thy master dies thy scholar: to do thus

[Falling on his Sword.

I learn'd of thee. How! not yet dead? not dead?—

The guard!—ho!—Oh! despatch me.

Enter DERCEAS and GUARD.

1 Guard. What's the noise?

Ant. I have done my work ill, friends; Oh! make an end
Of what I have begun.

2 Guard. The star is fallen.

1 Guard. And time is at his period.

All. Alas, and woe!

Ant. Let him that loves me, strike me dead.

1 Guard. Not I.

2 Guard. Nor I.

3 Guard. Nor any one. [Exeunt GUARD.

Der. Thy death and fortunes bid thy followers fly.

This sword but shown to Cesar, with this tidings,
Shall enter me with him.

Enter DIOMEDES.

Dio. Where's Antony?

Der. There, Diomed, there.

Dio. Lives he?

Wilt thou not answer, man? [Exit DERCEAS.

Ant. Art thou there, Diomed? Draw thy sword, and give me
Sufficing strokes for death.

Dio. Most absolute lord,

My mistress Cleopatra sent me to thee.

Ant. When did she send thee?

Dio. Now, my lord.

Ant. Where is she?

Dio. Lock'd in her monument. She had a prophesying fear

Of what hath come pass: for when she saw
(Which never should be found,) you did suspect
She had dispos'd* with Cesar, and that your rage

Would not be purg'd, she sent you word she was dead;

But, fearing since how it might work, hath sent
Me to proclaim the truth; and I am come,
I dread, too late.

Ant. Too late, good Diomed:—Call my guard,
I pr'ythee.

Dio. What, ho! the emperor's guard! The guard, what ho!

Come, your lord calls.

Enter some of the GUARD.

Ant. Bear me, good friends, where Cleopatra bides:

'Tis the last service that I shall command you.

1 Guard. Woe are we, Sir, you may not live to wear

All your true followers out.

All. Most heavy day!

Ant. Nay, good my fellows, do not please sharp fate

To grace it with your sorrows: bid that welcome
Which comes to punish us, and we punish it Seeming to bear it lightly. Take me up:

I have led you off; carry me now, good friends,
And have my thanks for all.

[Exeunt, bearing ANTONY.

SCENE XIII.—The same.—A Monument.

Enter above, CLEOPATRA, CHARMIAN, and IRAS.

Cleo. O Charmian, I will never go from hence.

Char. Be comforted, dear madam.

Cleo. No, I will not:

All strange and terrible events are welcome,
But comforts we despise; our size of sorrow,
Proportion'd to our cause, must be as great

Enter DIOMEDES.

As that which makes it.—How now? is he dead?

Dio. His death's upon him, but not dead.

Look out o'the other side your monument,

His guard hath brought him thither.

Enter ANTONY, borne by the GUARD.

Cleo. O thou sun,
Burn the great sphere thou mov'st in!—darkling* stand

The varying shore o'the world!—O Antony!

Antony, Antony!—Charmian, help; help, Iras:

Help, friends below; let's draw him hither.

Ant. Peace:

Not Cesar's valour hath o'erthrown Antony,

But Antony's hath triumphed on itself.

Cleo. So it should be, that none but Antony

Should conquer Antony: but woe 'tis so!

Ant. I am dying, Egypt, dying; only

I here importune death a while, until

Of many thousand kisses the poor last

I lay upon thy lips.—

Cleo. I dare not, dear

(Dear my lord, pardon,) I dare not,

Lest I be taken: not the imperious show

Of the full-fortun'd Cesar ever shall

Be brooch'd† with me: if knife, drugs, serpents, have

Edge, sting, or operation, I am safe:

Your wife Octavia, with her modest eyes,

And still conclusion, shall acquire no honour

Demuring upon me.—But come, come, An-

tony,—

Help me, my women, we must draw thee up:—

Assist, good friends.

Ant. O quick, or I am gone.

Cleo. Here's sport, indeed!—How heavy weighs

my lord!

Our strength is all gone into heaviness,

That makes the weight: Had I great Juno's

power,

The strong-wing'd Mercury should fetch thee up,

And set thee by Jove's side. Yet come a little,—

Wishers were ever fools;—O come, come, come;

[They draw ANTONY up.

And welcome, welcome! die where thou hast

liv'd:

Quicken with kissing; had my lips that power,

Thus would I wear them out.

All. A heavy sight!

Ant. I am dying, Egypt, dying:

Give me some wine, and let me speak a little.

Cleo. No, let me speak; and let me rail so high,

That the false housewife Fortune break her

Provok'd by my offence. [wheel

Ant. One word, sweet queen:

Of Cesar seek your honour, with your safety.—O!

Cleo. They do not go together.

Ant. Gentle, hear me:

None about Cesar trust, but Proculeius.

Cleo. My resolution, and my hands, I'll trust;

None about Cesar.

Ant. The miserable change now at my end,

Lament nor sorrow at: but please your thoughts,

In feeding them with those my former fortunes

Wherein I liv'd, the greatest prince o'the world,

The noblest; and do now not basely die,

Nor cowardly; put off my helmet to

My countryman; a Roman, by a Roman,

Valiantly vanquish'd. Now, my spirit is going;

I can no more. [Dies.

Cleo. Noblest of men, woo't die?

Hast thou no care of me? shall I abide

In this dull world, which in thy absence is

No better than a sty?—O see, my women,

The crown o'the earth doth melt:—My lord!—

* Made terms with

* Without light.

† Adorned.

Oh! wither'd is the garland of the war,
The soldier's pole* is fallen; young boys, and girls,
Are level now with men: the odds is gone,
And there is nothing left remarkable,
Beneath the visiting moon. [She faints.]

Char. O quietness, lady!

Iras. She is dead too, our sovereign.

Char. Lady,—

Iras. Madam,—

Char. O madam, madam, madam!

Iras. Royal Egypt!
Empress!

Char. Peace, peace, Iras.

Cleo. No more, but e'en a woman; and commanded

By such poor passion as the maid that milks,
And does the meanest chares.†—It were for me
To throw my sceptre at the injurious gods;
To tell them, that this world did equal theirs,
Till they had stolen our jewel. All's but naught;
Patience is sottish; and impatience does
Become a dog that's mad: Then, is it sin,
To rush into the secret house of death,
Ere death dare come to us?—How do you,
women?

What, what! good cheer! Why, how now,
Charmian?

My noble girls!—Ah, women, women! look,
Our lamp is spent, it's out:—Good Sirs, take heart:—

[To the GUARD below.]

We'll bury him: and then, what's brave, what's noble,

Let's do it after the high Roman fashion,
And make death proud to take us. Come, away:
This case of that huge spirit now is cold.

Ah, women, women! come; we have no friend
But resolution, and the briefest end.

[Exeunt: those above bearing off ANTONY'S Body.]

ACT V.

SCENE I.—CESAR'S Camp before Alexandria.

Enter CESAR, AGRIPPA, DOLABELLA, MECÆ-NAS, GALLUS, PROCULEIUS, and others.

Ces. Go to him, Dolabella, bid him yield;
Being so frustrate,† tell him, he mocks us by
The paces that he makes.

Dol. Cesar, I shall.

[Exit DOLABELLA.]

Enter DERCETAS, with the sword of ANTONY.

Ces. Wherefore is that? and what art thou, that dar'st
Appear thus‡ to us?

Der. I am call'd Dercetas:
Mark Antony I serv'd, who best was worthy
Best to be serv'd: whilst he stood up and spoke,
He was my master; and I wore my life,
To spend upon his haters: If thou please
To take me to thee, as I was to him
I'll be to Cesar; if thou pleasest not,
I yield thee up my life.

Ces. What is't thou say'st?

Der. I say, O Cesar, Antony is dead.

Ces. The breaking of so great a thing should make [shook]
A greater crack: The round world should have Lions into civil streets,
And citizens to their dens:—The death of Antony
Is not a single doom; in the name lay
A moiety of the world.

Der. He is dead, Cesar;
Not by a public minister of justice,
Nor by a hired knife: but that self hand,
Which writ his honour in the acts it did,

Hath, with the courage which the heart did lend it,

Splitted the heart.—This is his sword,
I robb'd his wound of it: behold it stain'd
With his most noble blood.

Ces. Look you sad, friends?

The gods rebuke me, but it is a tidings
To wash the eyes of kings.

Agr. And strange it is,
That nature must compel us to lament
Our most persisted deeds.

Mec. His taints and honours
Waged equal with him.

Agr. A rarer spirit never Did steer humanity: but you, gods, will give us
Some faults to make us men. Cesar is touch'd.

Mec. When such a spacious mirror's set before him,

He needs must see himself.

Ces. O Antony!

I have follow'd thee to this:—But we do lance
Diseases in our bodies: I must perforce
Have shown to thee such a declining day,
Or look on thine; we could not stall together
In the whole world: But yet let me lament,
With tears as sovereign as the blood of hearts,
That thou, my brother, my competitor
In top of all design, my mate in empire,
Friend and companion in the front of war,
The arm of mine own body, and the heart
Where mine his* thoughts did kindle,—that our stars,

Unreconcilable, should divide
Our equalness to this.—Hear me, good friends,—
But I will tell you at some meetter season;

Enter a MESSENGER.

The business of this man looks out of him,
We'll hear him what he says.—Whence are you?

Mess. A poor Egyptian yet. The queen my mistress,

Confin'd in all she has, her monument,
Of thy intents desires instruction:
That she preparedly may frame herself
To the way she's forced to.

Ces. Bid her have good heart;
She soon shall know of us, by some of ours,
How honourable and how kindly we Determine for her: for Cesar cannot live
To be ungentle.

Mess. So the gods preserve thee! [Exit.]

Ces. Come hither, Proculeius: Go, and say,
We purpose her no shame: give her what comforts

The quality of her passion shall require;
Lest, in her greatness, by some mortal stroke
She do defeat us; for her life in Rome,
Would be eternal in our triumph: Go,
And, with your speediest, bring us what she says,
And how you find of her.

Pro. Cesar I shall.

[Exit PROCULEIUS.]

Ces. Gallus, go you along.—Where's Dolabella,
To second Proculeius?

[Exit GALLUS.]

Agr. Mec. Dolabella!

Ces. Let him alone, for I remember now
How he's employed: he shall in time be ready.
Go with me to my tent, where you shall see
How hardly I was drawn into this war;
How calm and gentle I proceeded still
In all my writings: Go with me, and see
What I can show in this.

[Exeunt.]

SCENE II.—Alexandria.—A Room in the Monument.

Enter CLEOPATRA, CHARMAIN, and IRAS.

Cleo. My desolation does begin to make
A better life: 'Tis paltry to be Cesar;
Not being fortune, he's but fortune's knave,†

* The soldier's object of admiration. † Task-work.
‡ Frustrated. § With Antony's bloody sword.

* Its.

† Servant

A minister of her will ; And it is great
To do that thing that ends all other deeds ;
Which shackles accidents, and bolts up change ;
Which sleeps, and never palates more the dung,
The beggar's nurse and Cesar's.

Enter, to the Gates of the Monument, PROCULIUS, GALLUS, and Soldiers.

Pro. Cesar sends greeting to the queen of Egypt ;

And bids thee study on what fair demands
Thou mean'st to have him grant thee.

Cleo. [Within.] What's thy name ?

Pro. My name is Proculeius.

Cleo. [Within.] Antony

Did tell me of you, bade me trust you ; but I do not greatly care to be deceiv'd,
That have no use for trusting. If your master
Would have a queen his beggar, you must tell him,
That majesty, to keep decorum, must
No less beg than a kingdom : if he please
To give me conquer'd Egypt for my son,
He gives me so much of mine own, as I
Will kneel to him with thanks.

Pro. Be of good cheer :

You are fallen into a princely hand ; fear nothing ;

Make your full reference freely to my lord,
Who is so full of grace, that it flows over
On all that need : Let me report to him
Your sweet dependancy ; and you shall find
A conqueror, that will pray in aid for kindness,
Where he for grace is kneel'd to.

Cleo. [Within.] Pray you, tell him
I am his fortune's vassal, and I send him
The greatness he has got. * I hourly learn
A doctrine of obedience, and would gladly
Look him i'the face.

Pro. This I'll report, dear lady.

Have comfort : for I know your plight is pitied
Of him that caus'd it.

Gal. You see how easily she may be surpriz'd ;

[Here PROCULIUS, and two of the Guard, ascend the Monument by a Ladder placed against a Window, and having descended, come behind CLEOPATRA. Some of the Guard unbar and open the Gates.

Guard her till Cesar come.

[To PROCULIUS and the Guard. Exit. GALLUS.

Iras. Royal queen !

Char. O Cleopatra ! thou art taken, queen !—

Cleo. Quick, quick, good hands.

[Drawing a Dagger.

Pro. Hold, worthy lady, hold :

[Seizes and disarms her.

Do not yourself such wrong, who are in this Reliev'd, but not betray'd.

Cleo. What, of death too
That rids our dogs of languish ?

Pro. Cleopatra,

Do not abuse my master's bounty, by
The undoing of yourself : let the world see
His nobleness well acted, which your death
Will never let come forth.

Cleo. Where art thou, death ?
Come hither, come ! come, come, and take a queen
Worth many babes and beggars !

Pro. O temperance, lady !

Cleo. Sir, I will eat no meat, I'll not drink,
If idle talk will once be necessary, [Sir ;
I'll not sleep neither : This mortal house I'll ruin,

Do Cesar what he can. Know, Sir, that I
Will not wait pinion'd † at your master's court ;
Nor once be châtis'd with the sober eye
Of dull Octavia. Shall they holst me up,
And show me to the shouting varlety ‡
Of censuring Rome ? Rather a ditch in Egypt
Be gentle grave to me ! rather on Nilus' mud
Lay me stark naked, and let the water-flies

* The crown which he has won.
‡ Rabble.

† In bonds.

Blow me into abhorring ! rather make
My country's high pyramids my gibbet,
And hang me up in chains !

Pro. You do extend
These thoughts of horror further than you shall Find cause in Cesar.

Enter DOLABELLA.

Dol. Proculeius,
What thou hast done thy master Cesar knows,
And he hath sent for thee : as for the queen,
I'll take her to my guard.

Pro. So, Dolabella,
It shall content me best : be gentle to her.—
To Cesar I will speak what you shall please.

[To CLEOPATRA,

If you'll employ me to him.

Cleo. Say, I would die.

[Exeunt PROCULIUS, and Soldiers.

Dol. Most noble empress, you have heard of
me ?

Cleo. I cannot tell.

Dol. Assuredly, you know me.

Cleo. No matter, Sir, what I have heard, or known.

You laugh, when boys, or women, tell their dreams ;

Is't not your trick ?

Dol. I understand not, madam.

Cleo. I dream'd, there was an emperor Antony ;—

Oh ! such another sleep, that I might see
But such another man !

Dol. If it might please you,—

Cleo. His face was as the heavens ; and therein stuck
A sun and moon ; which kept their course, and lighted

The little O, the earth.

Dol. Most sovereign creature,—

Cleo. His legs bestrid the ocean : his rear'd arm

Crested the world : his voice was propertied
As all the tuned spheres, and that to friends ;
But when he meant to quail * and shake the
orb,

He was as rattling thunder. For his bounty,
There was no winter in't ; an autumn 'twas,
That grew the more by reaping : His delights
Were dolphin-like ; they show'd his back above
The element they liv'd in : In his livery Walk'd erowns and crownets ; realms and islands were

As plates † dropp'd from his pocket.

Dol. Cleopatra,—

Cleo. Think you there was, or might be, such a man

As this I dream'd of ?

Dol. Gentle madam, no.

Cleo. You lie, up to the hearing of the gods.
But, if there be, or ever were one such,
It's past the size of dreaming : Nature wants stuff

To vie strange forms with fancy ; yet, to imma-
An Antony, were nature's piece 'gainst fancy, Condemning shadows quite.

Dol. Hear me, good madam :

Your loss is as yourself, great ; and you bear it
As answering to the weight : 'Would I might never

O'ertake pursu'd success, but I do feel,
By the rebound of yours, a grief that shoots
My very heart at root.

Cleo. I thank you, Sir.

Know you what Cesar means to do with me ?

Dol. I am loath to tell you what I would you knew.

Cleo. Nay, pray you, Sir,—

Dol. Though he be honourable,—

Cleo. He'll lead me then in triumph ?

Dol. Madam, he will :

I know it.

Within. Make way there,—Cesar.

* Crush.

† Silver money.

Enter CESAR, GALLUS, PROCULIUS, MECÆNAS, SELEUCUS, and Attendants.

Ces. Which is the queen Of Egypt?

Dol. 'Tis the emperor, madam.

[CLEOPATRA kneels.]

Ces. Arise :

You shall not kneel :—

I pray you, rise : rise, Egypt.

Cleo. Sir, the gods Will have it thus ; my master and my lord I must obey.

Ces. Take to you no hard thoughts : The record of what injuries you did us, Though written in our flesh, we shall remember As things but done by chance.

Cleo. Sole Sir o'the world, I cannot project * mine own cause so well To make it clear ; but to confess, I have Been laden with like frailties, which before Have often sham'd our sex.

Ces. Cleopatra, know, We will extenuate rather than enforce : If you apply yourself to our intents, (Which towards you are most gentle,) you shall find

A benefit in this change : but if you seek To lay on me a cruelty, by taking Antony's course, you shall bereave yourself Of my good purposes, and put your children To that destruction which I'll guard them from, If thereon you rely. I'll take my leave.

Cleo. And may, through all the world : 'tis yours : and we

Your 'scutcheons, and your signs of conquest, shall

Hang in what place you please. Here, my good

Ces. You shall advise me in all for Cleopatra.

Cleo. This is the brief of money, plate, and jewels,

I am possess'd of : 'tis exactly valued ; Not petty things admitted.—Where's Seleucus ?

Sel. Here, madam.

Cleo. This is my treasurer : let him speak, my lord,

Upon his peril, that I have reserv'd To myself nothing. Speak the truth, Seleucus.

Sel. Madam, I had rather seal † my lips, than, to my peril, Speak that which is not.

Cleo. What have I kept back ?

Sel. Enough to purchase what you have made known.

Ces. Nay, blush not, Cleopatra ; I approve Your wisdom in the deed.

Cleo. See, Cesar ! O behold How pomp is follow'd ! mine will now be yours ; And, should we shift estates, yours would be mine.

The ingratitude of this Seleucus does Even make me wild :—O slave, of no more trust Than love that's hir'd !—What, goest thou back ?—thou shalt

Go back, I warrant thee ; but I'll catch thine eyes, Though they had wings : Slave, soulless villain, dog !

O rarely ‡ base !

Ces. Good queen, let us entreat you.

Cleo. O Cesar, what a wounding shame is this ;

That thou, vouchsafing here to visit me, Doing the honour of thy lordliness To one so meek, that mine own servant should Parcel § the sum of my disgraces by Addition of his envy ! Say, good Cesar, That I some lady trifles have reserv'd, Immoment toys, things of such dignity As we greet modern ¶ friends withal ; and say, Some nobler token I have kept apart For Livia ¶ and Octavia,  to induce Their mediation ; must I be unfolded

With one that I have bred ? The gods ! It smites me

Beneath the fall I have. Prythee, go hence ; [To SELEUCUS.]

Or I shall show the cinders of my spirits Through the ashes of my chance :—Wert thou a man,

Thou would'st have mercy on me.

Ces. Forbear, Seleucus.

[Exit SELEUCUS.]

Cleo. Be it known, that we, the greatest, are misthought

For things that others do ; and, when we fall, We answer others' merits * in our names, Are therefore to be pitied.

Ces. Cleopatra,

Not what you have reserv'd, nor what acknow- ledg'd,

Put we i'the roll of conquest : still be it yours, Bestow it at your pleasure, and believe, Cesar's no merchant, to make prize with you Of things that merchants sold. Therefore be cheer'd ;

Make not your thoughts your prisons : no, dear queen ;

For we intend so to dispose you, as Yourself shall give us counsel. Feed, and sleep : Our care and pity is so much upon you, That we remain your friend ; And so adieu.

Cleo. My master, and my lord !

Ces. Not so : Adieu.

[Exit CESAR, and his Train.]

Cleo. He words me, girls, he words me, that I should not

Be noble to myself : but hark thee, Charmian.

[Whispers CHARMIAN.]

Iras. Finish, good lady : the bright day is done, And we are for the dark.

Cleo. Hie thee again :

I have spoke already, and it is provided : Go, put it to the haste.

Char. Madam, I will.

Re-enter DOLABELLA.

Dol. Where is the queen ?

Char. Behold, Sir.

[Exit CHARMIAN.]

Cleo. Dolabella ?

Dol. Madam, as thereto sworn by your command,

Which my love makes religion to obey, I tell you this : Cesar through Syria Intends his journey ; and, within three days, You with your children will be send before : Make your best use of this : I have perform'd Your pleasure, and my promise.

Cleo. Dolabella, I shall remain your debtor.

Dol. I your servant.

Adieu, good queen ; I must attend on Cesar.

Cleo. Farewell, and thanks.

[Exit DOL.]

Now, Iras, what think'st thou ?

Thou, an Egyptian puppet, shalt be shown In Rome, as well as I : mechanic slaves, With greasy aprons, rules, and hammers, shall Uplift us to the view ; in their thick breaths, Rank of gross diet, shall we be enclouded, And forc'd to drink their vapour.

Iras. The gods forbid !

Cleo. Nay, 'tis most certain, Iras : Saucy lictors † Will catch at us, like strumpets ! and scald ‡ rhy- Ballad us out o'tune : the quick comedians Extemporally will stage us, and present Our Alexandrian revels : Antony Shall be brought drunken forth, and I shall see Some squeaking Cleopatra boy § my greatness I'the posture of a whore.

Iras. O the good gods !

Cleo. Nay, that is certain.

* State. † Sew up. ‡ Uncommonly.
§ Add to. ¶ Common.
¶ Cesar's wife and  Sister

* Merits or demerits. † Beadles.
‡ A term of contempt. § Female characters were played by boys.

Irás. I'll never for it; for, I am sure, my nails
Are stronger than mine eyes.

Cleo. Why that's the way
To fool their preparation, and to conquer
Their most absurd intents.—Now, Charmian?—

Enter CHARMIAN.

Show me, my women, like a queen;—Go fetch
My best attires;—I am again for Cydnus,
To meet Mark Antony:—Sirrah, Irás, go.—
Now, noble Charmian, we'll despatch indeed:
And, when thou hast done this chare, I'll give thee leave
To play till doomsday.—Bring our crown and all.
Wherefore's this noise?

[Exit IRÁS. A Noise within.]

Enter one of the GUARD.

Guard. Here is a rural fellow,
That will not be denied your highness' presence:

He brings you figs.

Cleo. Let him come in. How poor an instrument

[Exit GUARD.]

May do a noble deed! he brings me liberty.
My resolution's plac'd, and I have nothing
Of woman in me: Now from head to foot
I am marble-constant: now the fleeting moon
No planet is of mine.

Re-enter GUARD, with a CLOWN bringing a Basket.

Guard. This is the man.

Cleo. Avoid, and leave him.

[Exit GUARD.]

Hast thou the pretty worm * of Nilus there,
That kills and pains not?

Clown. Truly I have him: but I would not be the party that should desire you to touch him, for his biting is immortal: those that do die of it, do seldom or never recover.

Cleo. Remembers't thou any that have died
on't?

Clown. Very many, men and women too. I heard of one of them no longer than yesterday—a very honest woman, but something given to lie as a woman should not do, but in the way of honesty—how she died of the biting of it, what pain she felt,—Truly, she makes a very good report o'the worm: But he that will believe all that they say, shall never be saved by half that they do: But this is most fallible, the worm's an odd worm.

Cleo. Get thee hence: farewell.

Clown. I wish you all joy of the worm.

Cleo. Farewell.

[CLOWN sets down the Basket.]

Clown. You must think this, look you, that the worm will do his kind. †

Cleo. Ay, ay; farewell.

Clown. Look you, the worm is not to be trusted, but in the keeping of wise people; for, indeed, there is no goodness in the worm.

Cleo. Take thou no care: it shall be heeded.

Clown. Very good: give it nothing, I pray you, for it is not worth the feeding.

Cleo. Will it eat me?

Clown. You must not think I am so simple, but I know the devil himself will not eat a woman: I know that a woman is a dish for the gods, if the devil dress her not. But, truly, these same whoreson devils do the gods great harm in their women; for in every ten that they make, the devils mar five.

Cleo. Well, get thee gone: farewell.

Clown. Yes, forsooth; I wish you joy of the worm.

[Exit.]

Re-enter IRÁS, with a Robe, Crown, &c.

Cleo. Give me my robe, put on my crown; I have

* Serpent.

† Act according to his nature.

Immortal longings in me: Now no more
The juice of Egypt's grape shall moist this lip:—

Yare, yare,* good Irás; quick.—Methinks, I
hear

Antony call; I see him rouse himself
To praise my noble act; I hear him mock
The luck of Cesar, which the gods give men
To excuse their after wrath: Husband, I come:
Now to that name my courage prove my title!
I am fire, and air; my other elements
I give to baser life.—So,—have you done?
Come then, and take the last warmth of my lips.

Farewell, kind Charmian;—Irás, long farewell.

[Kisses them. IRÁS falls and dies.]

Have I the aspic in my lips? † Dost fall?
If thou and nature can so gently part,
The stroke of death is as a lover's pinch,
Which hurts and is desir'd. Dost thou lie still?
If thus thou vanishest, thou tell'st the world
It is not worth leave-taking.

Char. Dissolve, thick cloud and rain; that I may say

The gods themselves do weep!

Cleo. This proves me base:
If she first meet the curled Antony, He'll make demand of her; and spend that
kiss,

Which is my heaven to have. Come, mortal
wretch,

[*To the Asp, which she applies to her
Breast.*]

With thy sharp teeth this knot intricate
Of life at once untie: poor venomous fool,
Be angry, and despatch. Oh! could'st thou
speak!

That I might hear thee call great Cesar, Ass Unpoliced! ‡

Char. O eastern star!

Cleo. Peace, peace!

Dost thou not see my baby at my breast,
That sucks the nurse asleep?

Char. O break! O break!

Cleo. As sweet as balm, as soft as air, as gentle,—

O Antony!—Nay, I will take thee too:—

[Applying another Asp to her Arm.]

What should I stay—

[Falls on a Bed and Dies.]

Char. In this wild world?—So fare thee
well.—

Now boast thee, death! in thy possession lies
A lass unparallel'd.—Downy windows, close;
And golden Phoebus never be beheld
Of eyes again so royal! Your crown's awry.
I'll mend it, and then play. ||

Enter the GUARD, rushing in.

1 Guard. Where is the queen?

Char. Speak softly, wake her not.

1 Guard. Cesar hath sent—

Char. Too slow a messenger.

[Applies the Asp.]

O come; apace, despatch: I partly feel thee.

1 Guard. Approach, ho! All's not well: Ce-sar's bequild.

2 Guard. There's Dolabella sent from Cesar:—call him.

1 Guard. What work is here?—Charmian, is this well done?

Char. It is well done, and fitting for a princess

Descended of so many royal kings.

Ah, soldier!

[Dies.]

Enter DOLABELLA.

Dol. How goes it here?

2 Guard. All dead.

* Make haste.

† Are my lips already poisoned by the aspic?

‡ An ass without common policy, thus to leave me to myself.

|| Play my part in this tragedy.

Dol. Cesar, thy thoughts
Touch their effects in this : Thyself art coming
To see perform'd the dreaded act, which thou
So sought'st to hinder.

Within. A way there, way for Cesar !

Enter CESAR, and Attendants.

Dol. O Sir, you are too sure an augurer ;
That you did fear, is done.

Ces. Bravest at the last :
She levell'd at our purposes, and, being royal,
Took her own way.—The manner of their deaths ?
I do not see them bleed.

Dol. Who was last with them ?

I Guard. A simple countryman, that brought her figs :
This was his basket.

Ces. Poison'd then.

I Guard. O Cesar,
This Charmian lived but now ; she stood, and spake :

I found her trimming up the diadem
On her dead mistress ; tremblingly she stood,
And on the sudden dropp'd.

Ces. O noble weakness !—
If they had swallow'd poison, 'twould appear
By external swelling ; but she looks like sleep,

As she would catch another Antony
In her strong toil of grace.

Dol. Here, on her breast,
There is a vent of blood, and something blown, *
The like is on her arm.

I Guard. This is an aspic's trail : and these fig-leaves

Have slime upon them, such as the aspic leaves
Upon the caves of Nile.

Ces. Most probable,
That so she died ; for her physician tells me,
She had pursu'd conclusions † infinite
Of easy ways to die.—Take up her bed ;
And bear her women from the monument :—
She shall be buried by her Antony :
No grave upon the earth shall clip ‡ in it
A pair so famous. High events as these Strike those that make them, and their story is No less in pity, than his glory, which Brought them to be lamented. Our army shall,
In solemn show, attend the funeral ;
And then to Rome.—Come, Dolabella, see
High order in this great solemnity.

[Exeunt.

* Some part of the flesh puffed.
† Tried experiments. ‡ Enfold.

TITUS ANDRONICUS.

LITERARY AND HISTORICAL NOTICE.

AS it is intended, in the present collection of Shakspeare's Dramatic Works, to present in regular succession all such as have the scenery, characters, or manners, drawn from the same country, the sanguinary and disgusting Tragedy of Titus Andronicus is placed in immediate sequence to those that are essentially of Roman origin. The events, however, are not of historical occurrence, but were probably borrowed from an old ballad entered on the books of the Stationers' Company in the year 1593, about which period it may also have been written. Its identity, however, as one of Shakspeare's productions, rests on a very doubtful foundation. Dr. Percy supposes it only to have been corrected and re-touched by him; but, says Dr. Johnson, "I do not find his touches very discernible." It is devoid of any striking sentiment---it has none of the philosophic stateliness which generally distinguishes his plays---the anachronisms are gross---the language throughout is as tumid and laboured as the plot is horrid and unnatural;---and the only approach to energy discernible in the play, occurs in the scene between Aaron, the nurse, and Demetrius. Indeed, there is internal evidence enough (in the versification, the character of the composition, the total difference of conduct, language, and sentiment, and also in its resemblance to several dramas of much more ancient date) to prove, with irresistible force, that it has been erroneously ascribed to Shakspeare. Dr. Johnson says, "All the editors and critics agree with Mr. Theobald in supposing this play spurious. I see no reason for differing from them; for the colour of the style is wholly different from that of the other play, and there is an attempt at regular versification and artificial closes, not always inelegant, yet seldom pleasing. The barbarity of the spectacle, and the general massacre which are here exhibited, can scarcely be conceived tolerable to any audience; yet we are told by Jonson, that they were not only borne but applauded. That Shakspeare wrote any part, though Theobald declares it incontestible, I see no reason for believing."

MARTIUS, }	Goths and Romans.
MUTIUS, }	TAMORA, Queen of the Goths.
YOUNG LUCIUS, a Boy, Son to Lucius.	LAVINIA, Daughter to Titus Andronicus.
PUBLIUS, Son to Marcus the Tribune.	A NURSE, and A BLACK CHILD.
	Kinsmen of Titus, Senators, Tribunes, Officers, Soldiers, and Attendants.

SCENE: Rome, and the Country near it.

ACT I.

SCENE I.—Rome.—Before the Capitol.

The tomb of the ANDRONICI appearing; the TRIBUNES and SENATORS aloft, as in the Senate. Enter, below, SATURNINUS and his Followers, on one side; and BASSIANUS and his Followers on the other; with Drum and Colours.

Sat. Noble patricians, patrons of my right,
Defend the justice of my cause with arms;
And, countrymen, my loving followers,
Plead my successive title * with your swords:
I am his first-born son, that was the last
That wore the imperial diadem of Rome,
Then let my father's honours live in me,
Nor wrong mine age with this indignity.

Bas. Romans,—friends, followers, favourers of of my right,—
If ever Bassianus, Cesar's son,
Were gracious in the eyes of royal Rome,

* My title to the succession.

Keep then this passage to the Capitol:
And suffer not dishonour to approach
The imperial seat, to virtue consecrate,
To justice, continence, and nobility:
But let desert in pure election shine;
And, Romans, fight for freedom in your choice.

Enter MARCUS ANDRONICUS, aloft, with the Crown.

Mar. Princes, that strive by factions and by
friends,
Ambitiously for rule and empery,— Know, that the people of Rome, for whom we stand
A special party, have, by their common voice,
In election for the Roman empery,
Chosen Andronicus, surnamed Pius
For many good and great deserts to Rome;
A nobler man, a braver warrior,
Lives not this day within the city walls:
He by the senate is accited * home,
From weary wars against the barbarous Goths,

* Summoned.

Citus Andronicus.

Luc. ———— O, how this villainy does fit me with the very thought of it!
Good do good, and fair men call for grace,
as will have his soul black as his face.

Mut. My lord, you pass not here.
Tit. What, villain boy?
Barret me my way in Rome? [Flourish like Mutius.
Act I. Scene II.

Lam. My lovely Aaron, wherefore look'st thou sad, as every thing doth make a gloeful banquet?
Act II. Scene III.

Tit. O, reverend tribunes! gentle aged men!
Unbind my sons, reverse the doom of death;
And let me say, that never wept before,
My tears are now prevailing orators.
Act III. Scene I.

Ver. Heaven guide thy pen to print thy sorrows plain,
as we may know the traitors, and the truth!
Act IV. Scene I.

Mar. ———— Behold this child:
Of this was Tamora delivered:
The issue of an irreligious Moor,
Chief architect and plotter of these woes.
Act V. Scene III.

That, with his sons, a terror to our foes,
Hath yok'd a nation strong, train'd up in arms.
Ten years are spent, since first he undertook
This cause of Rome, and chastised with arms
Our enemies' pride : Five times he hath return'd
Bleeding to Rome, bearing his valiant sons
In coffins from the field ;
And now, at last, laden with honour's spoils,
Returns the good Andronicus to Rome,
Renowned Titus, flourishing in arms.
Let us entreat,—By honour of his name,
Whom, worthily, you would have now succeed,
And in the Capitol and senate's right.
Whom you pretend to honour and adore,—
That you withdraw you, and abate your strength :
Dismiss your followers, and, as suitors should,
Plead your deserts in peace and humbleness.

Sat. How fair the tribune speaks to calm my thoughts !

Bas. Marcus Andronicus, so I do affy *
In thy uprightness and integrity,
And so I love and honour thee and thine,
Thy nobler brother Titus, and his sons,
And her, to whom my thoughts are humbled all,
Gracious Lavinia, Rome's rich ornament,
That I will here dismiss my loving friends,
And to my fortunes, and the people's favour,
Commit my cause in balance to be weigh'd.

[Exeunt the Followers of Bassianus.]

Sat. Friends, that have been thus forward in my right,
I thank you all, and here dismiss you all ;
And to the love and favour of my country
Commit myself, my person, and my cause.

[Exeunt the Followers of Saturninus.]

Rome, be as just and gracious unto me,
As I am confident and kind to thee.—
Open the gates, and let me in.

Bas. Tribunes ! and me, a poor competitor.

[Sat. and Bas. go into the Capitol, and exeunt with Senators, Marcus, &c.]

SCENE II.—The same.

Enter a Captain, and others.

Cap. Romans, make way—The good Andronicus,
Patron of virtue, Rome's best champion,
Successful in the battles that he fights,
With honour and with fortune is return'd,
From where he circumscribed with his sword,
And brought to yoke, the enemies of Rome.

Flourish of Trumpets, &c. Enter Mutius and Martius : after them, two Men bearing a Coffin covered with black ; then Quintus and Lucius. After them, Titus Andronicus ; and then Tamora, with Alarbus, Chiron, Demetrius, Aaron, and other Goths, prisoners ; Soldiers and People following. The Bearers set down the Coffin, and Titus speaks.

Tit. Hail, Rome, victorious in thy mourning weeds !

Lo, as the bark that hath discharged her freight, †
Returns with precious lading to the bay,
From whence at first she weigh'd her anchorage,
Cometh Andronicus, bound with laurel boughs,
To re-salute his country with his tears ;
Tears of true joy for his return to Rome.—
Thou great defender of this Capitol, †
Stand gracious to the rights that we intend !—
Romans, of five and twenty valiant sons,
Half of the number that king Priam had,
Behold the poor remains, alive, and dead !
These, that survive, let Rome reward with love :
These, that I bring unto their latest home,
With burial amongst their ancestors :
Here Goths have given me leave to sheath my sword.

Titus, unkind, and careless of thine own,
Why suffer'st thou thy sons, unburied yet,

To hover on the dreadful shore of Styx ?—
Make way to lay them by their brethren.

[The Tomb is opened.]

There greet in silence, as the dead are wont,
And sleep in peace, slain in your country's wars !
O sacred receptacle of my joys,
Sweet cell of virtue and nobility,
How many sons of mine hast thou in store,
That thou wilt never render to me more !

Luc. Give us the proudest prisoner of the Goths,

That we may hew his limbs, and, on a pile
Ad manes fratrum sacrifice his flesh,
Before this earthly prison of their bones :
That so the shadows be not unappeas'd,
Nor we disturb'd with prodigies on earth.*

Tit. I give him you ; the noblest that survives,
The eldest son of this distressed queen.

Tam. Stay, Roman brethren—Gracious conqueror.

Victorious Titus, rue the tears I shed,
A mother's tears in passion for her son :
And, if thy sons were ever dear to thee,
Oh ! think my son to be as dear to me.
Sufficeth not, that we are brought to Rome
To beautify thy triumphs, and return,
Captive to thee, and to thy Roman yoke ;
But must my sons be slaughter'd in the streets,
For valiant doings in their country's cause ?
Oh ! if to fight for king and common weal
Were piety in thine, it is in these.
Andronicus, stain not thy tomb with blood :
Wilt thou draw near the nature of the gods,
Draw near them then in being merciful :
Sweet mercy is nobility's true badge—
Thrice-noble Titus, spare my first-born son.

Tit. Patient yourself, madam, and pardon me.
These are their brethren, whom you Goths beheld

Alive and dead ; and, for their brethren slain,
Religiously they ask a sacrifice :
To this your son is mark'd ; and die he must,
To appease their groaning shadows that are gone.

Luc. Away with him ! and make a fire straight :

And with your swords, upon a pile of wood,
Let's hew his limbs, till they be clean consum'd
Exeunt Lucius, Quintus, Martius, and Mutius, with Alarbus.

Tam. O cruel, irreligious piety !

Chi. Was ever Scythia half so barbarous ?

Dem. Oppose not Scythia to ambitious Rome.
Alarbus goes to rest ; and we survive
To tremble under Titus' threatening look.
Then, madam, stand resolv'd : but hope withal,
The self-same gods, that arm'd the queen of Troy
With opportunity of sharp revenge
Upon the Thracian tyrant in his tent,
May favour Tamora, the queen of Goth,
(When Goths were Goths, and Tamora was queen.)

To quit the bloody wrongs upon her foes.

Re-enter Lucius, Quintus, Martius, and Mutius, with their Swords bloody.

Luc. See, lord and father, how we have perform'd

Our Roman rites : Alarbus' limbs are lopp'd
And entrails feed the sacrificing fire,
Whose smoke, like incense, doth perfume the sky.
Remaineth nought, but to inter our brethren,
And with loud 'larums welcome them to Rome.

Tit. Let it be so, and let Andronicus
Make this his latest farewell to their souls.

[Trumpets sounded, and the Coffins laid in the Tomb.]

In peace and honour rest you here, my sons.
Rome's readiest champions, repose you here,
Secure from worldly chances and mishaps !
Here lurks no treason, here no envy swells,
Here grow no damned grudges, here are no storms.

* Confide. † Freight.
Jupiter, to whom the Capitol was sacred.

* It was supposed that the ghosts of unburied people appeared to solicit the rights of funeral.

No noise : but silence and eternal sleep :

Enter LAVINIA,

In peace and honour rest you here, my sons !

Lav. In peace and honour live lord Titus long ;

My noble lord and father, live in fame !

Lo ! at this tomb my tributary tears

I render, for my brethren's obsequies ;

And at thy feet I kneel, with tears of joy

Shed on the earth, for thy return to Rome :

O bless me here with thy victorious band,

Whose fortunes Rome's best citizens applaud.

Tit. Kind Rome, that hast thus lovingly re-serv'd

The cordial of mine age to glad my heart !—

Lavinia, live ; outlive thy father's days,

And fame's eternal date, for virtue's praise !*

Enter MARCUS ANDRONICUS, SATURNINUS, BASSIANUS, and others.

Mar. Long live lord Titus, my beloved brother, Gracious triumpher in the eyes of Rome !

Tit. Thanks, gentle tribune, noble brother Marcus.

Mar. And welcome, nephews, from successful wars,

You that survive, and you that sleep in fame.

Fair lords, your fortunes are alike in all,

That in your country's service drew your swords :

But safer triumph is this funeral pomp,

That hath aspir'd to Solon's happiness,†

And triumphs over chance in honour's bed.—

Titus Andronicus, the people of Rome,

Whose friend in justice thou hast ever been,

Send thee by me, their tribune, and their trust,

This palliament‡ of white and spotless hue ;

And name thee in election for the empire,

With these our late-deceased emperor's sons :

Be candidatus then, and put it on,

And help to set a head on headless Rome.

Tit. A better head her glorious body fits,

Than his, that shakes for age and feebleness :

What ! should I don§ this robe, and trouble you ?

Be chosen with proclamations to-day ;

To-morrow, yield up rule, resign my life,

And set abroad new business for you all ?

Rome, I have been thy soldier forty years,

And buried one and twenty valiant sons,

Knighted in field, slain manfully in arms,

In right and service of their noble country :

Give me a staff of honour for mine age,

But not a sceptre to control the world.

Upright he held it, lords, that held it last.

Mar. Titus, thou shalt obtain and ask the empery.

Sat. Proud and ambitious tribune, canst thou tell ?—

Tit. Patience, prince Saturnine.

Sat. Romans, do me right :—

Patricians, draw your swords, and sheath them not

Till Saturninus be Rome's emperor :—

Andronicus, 'would thou wert shipp'd to hell,

Rather than rob me of the people's hearts.

Luc. Proud Saturnine, interrupter of the good That noble-minded Titus means to thee !

Tit. Content thee, prince ; I will restore to thee

The people's hearts, and wean them from themselves.

Bas. Andronicus, I do not flatter thee,

But honour thee, and will do till I die :

My faction if thou strengthen with thy friends,

I will most thankful be : and thanks, to men

Of noble minds, is honourable need.

Tit. People of Rome, and people's tribunes here,

* He wishes that her life may be longer than his, and let her praise longer than fame

† The maxim alluded to is, that no man can be pronounced happy before his death.

‡ A robe.

§ Put it on.

I ask your voices, and your suffrages—

Will you bestow them friendly on Andronicus ?

Trib. To gratify the good Andronicus,

And gratulate his safe return to Rome,

The people will accept whom he admits.

Tit. Tribunes, I thank you : and this suit I make,

That you create your emperor's eldest son,

Lord Saturnine, whose virtues will, I hope,

Reflect on Rome as Titan's* rays on earth,

And ripen justice in this common-weal :

Then, if you will elect by my advice,

Crown him, and say,—Long live our emperor !

Mar. With voices and applause of every sort,

Patricians and plebeians, we create

Lord Saturninus, Rome's great emperor ;

And say, Long live our emperor Saturninus.

[A long Flourish.]

Sat. Titus Andronicus, for thy favours done

To us in our election this day,

I give thee thanks in part of thy deserts,

And will with deeds requite thy gentleness :

And, for an onset, Titus, to advance

Thy name, and honourable family,

Lavinia will I make my empress,

Rome's royal mistress, mistress of my heart,

And in the sacred Pantheon her espouse :

Tell me, Andronicus, doth this motion please thee ?

Tit. It doth, my worthy lord ; and, in this match,

I hold me highly honour'd of your grace :

And here, in sight of Rome, to Saturnine,—

King and commander of our common-weal,

The wide world's emperor,—do I consecrate

My sword, my chariot, and my prisoners ;

Presents well worthy Rome's imperial lord :

Receive them then, the tribute that I owe,

Mine honour's ensigns humbled at thy feet.

Sat. Thanks, noble Titus, father of my life !

How proud I am of thee, and of thy gifts,

Rome shall record ; and, when I do forget

The least of these unspeakable deserts,

Romans, forget your fealty to me.

Tit. Now, madam, are you prisoner to an emperor ;

[To TAMORA.]

To him, that for your honour and your state,

Will use you nobly, and your followers.

Sat. A goodly lady, trust me ; of the hue

That I would choose, were I to choose anew.—

Clear up, fair queen, that cloudy countenance :

Though chance of war hath wrought this change of cheer,

Thou com'st not to be made a scorn in Rome :

Princely shall be thy usage every way.

Rest on my word, and let not discontent

Daunt all your hopes. Madam, he comforts you,

Can make you greater than the queen of Goths.—

Lavinia, you are not displeas'd with this ?

Lav. Not I, my lord ; with true nobility

Warrants these words in princely courtesy.

Sat. Thanks, sweet Lavinia.—Romans, let us go

Ransomless here we set our prisoners free :

Proclaim our honours, lords, with trumpet and drum.

Bas. Lord Titus, by your leave, this maid is mine.

[Seizing LAVINIA.]

Tit. How, Sir ? are you in earnest then, my lord ?

Bas. Ay, noble Titus ; and resolv'd withal,

To do myself this reason and this right.

[The Emperor courts TAMORA in dumb show.]

Mar. Suum cuique is our Roman justice :

This prince in justice seizeth but his own.

Luc. And that he will, and shall, if Lucius live.

Tit. Traitors, avaunt ! Where is the emperor's guard ?

Treason, my lord ! Lavinia is surpris'd.

* The sun.

† Since.

Sat. Surpris'd ! by whom ?

Bas. By him that justly may
Bear his betroth'd from all the world away.

[Exeunt MARCUS and BASSIANUS, with LAVINIA.

Mut. Brothers, help to convey her hence away,
And with my sword I'll keep this door safe.

[Exeunt LUCIUS, QUINTUS, and MARTIUS.

Tit. Follow my lord, and I'll soon bring her back.

Mut. My lord, you pass not here.

Tit. What, villain boy !

Barr'st me my way in Rome ?

[Titus kills MUTIUS.

Mut. Help, Lucius, help.

Re-enter LUCIUS.

Luc. My lord, you are unjust ; and, more than so,
In wrongful quarrel you have slain your son.

Tit. Nor thou, nor he, are any sons of
mine :

My sons would never so dishonour me :

Traitor, restore Lavinia to the emperor.

Luc. Dead, if you will : but not to be his wife.

That is another's lawful promis'd love.

[Exit.

Sat. No, Titus, no ; the emperor needs her
not,

Not her, nor thee, nor any of thy stock :
I'll trust, by leisure, him that mocks me once :
Thee never, nor thy traitorous haughty sons,
Confederates all thus to dishonour me.

Was there none else in Rome to make a stale * of

But Saturnine ? Full well, Andronicus, Agree these deeds with that proud brag of
thine,

That said'st, I begg'd the empire at thy hands.

Tit. O monstrous ! what reproachful words are these ?

Sat. But go thy ways : go, give that changing piece

To him that flourish'd for her with his sword :

A valliant son-in-law thou shalt enjoy ;

One fit to bandy with thy lawless sons,

To ruffle† in the commonwealth of Rome.

Tit. These words are razors to my wounded
heart.

Sat. And therefore, lovely Tamora, queen of Goths,—

That like the stately Phœbe 'mongst her nymphs,

Dost overshadow the gallant'st dames of Rome,—

If thou be pleas'd with this my sudden choice,

Behold, I choose thee, Tamora, for my bride,

And will create thee emperess of Rome.

Speak, queen of Goths, dost thou applaud my choice ?

And here I swear by all the Roman gods,—

Sith priest and holy water are so near,

And tapers burn so bright, and every thing

In readiness for Hymeneus stand.—

I will not re-salute the streets of Rome,

Or climb my palace, till from forth this place

I lead espous'd my bride along with me.

Tam. And here, in sight of heaven, to Rome
I swear,

If Saturnine advance the queen of Goths,

She will a handmaid be to his desires,

A loving nurse, a mother to his youth,

Sat. Ascend, fair queen, Pantheon :—Lords, accompany

Your noble emperor, and his lovely bride,

Sent by the heavens for prince Saturnine,

Whose wisdom hath her fortune conquered :

There shall we consummate our spousal rites.

[Exeunt SATURNINUS and his followers ;

TAMORA and her sons ; AARON and Goths.

Tit. I am not bid * to wait upon this bride :—

Titus, when wert thou wont to talk alone,
Dishonour'd thus, and challenged of wrongs ?

Re-enter MARCUS, LUCIUS, QUINTUS, and
MARTIUS.

Mar. O Titus, see, oh ! see, what thou hast
done !

In a bad quarrel slain a virtuous son.

Tit. No, foolish tribune, no ; no son of mine,—

Nor thou, nor these, confederates in the deed

That hath dishonour'd all our family ;

Unworthy brother, and unworthy sons !

Luc. But let us give him burial as becomes ;

Give Mutius burial with our brethren.

Tit. Traitors, away ! he rests not in this tomb.

This monument five hundred years hath stood,

Which I have sumptuously re-edified :

Here none but soldiers, and Rome's servitors,

Repose in fame : none basely slain in brawls :—

Bury him where you can, he comes not here.

Mar. My lord, this is impiety in you :

My nephew Mutius' deeds do plead for him :

He must be buried with his brethren.

Quin. Mar. And shall, or him we will accompany.

Tit. And shall ? What villain was it spoke that

word ?

Quin. He that would vouch't in any place but

here.

Tit. What, would you bury him in my despite ?

Mar. No, noble Titus ; but entreat of thee

To pardon Mutius, and to bury him.

Tit. Marcus, even thou hast struck upon my crest,

And, with these boys, mine honour thou hast

My foes I do repute you every one ; [wounded :

So trouble me no more, but get you gone.

Mart. He is not with himself ; let us withdraw.

Quin. Not I, till Mutius' bones be buried.

[MARCUS and the Sons of TITUS kneel.

Mar. Brother, for in that name doth nature plead.

Quin. Father, and in that name doth nature

speak.

Tit. Speak thou no more, if all the rest will speed.

Mar. Renowned Titus, more than half my

soul,—

Luc. Dear father, soul and substance of us

all,—

Mar. Suffer thy brother Marcus to inter

His noble nephew here in virtue's nest,

That died in honour and Lavinia's cause.

Thou art a Roman, be not barbarous.

The Greeks, upon advice, did bury Ajax,

That slew himself ; and wise Laertes' son

Did graciously plead for his funerals.

Let not young Mutius then, that was thy joy,

Be barr'd his entrance here.

Tit. Rise, Marcus, rise :—

The dismal'st day is this, that e'er I saw,—

To be dishonour'd by my sons in Rome !—

Well, bury him, and bury me the next.

[MUTIUS is put into the Tomb.

Luc. There lie thy bones, sweet Mutius, with thy friends,

Till we with trophies do adorn thy tomb !—

All. No man shed tears for noble Mutius :

He lives in fame that died in virtue's cause.

Mar. My lord,—to step out of these dreary dumps,—

How comes it, that the subtle queen of Goths

Is of a sudden thus advanc'd in Rome ?

Tit. I know not, Marcus ; but, I know, it is :

Whether by device, or no, the heavens can tell :

Is she not then beholden to the man

That brought her for this high good turn so far ?

Yes, and will nobly him remunerate.

* A stalking horse.

† A ruffler was a bully.

* Invited.

Flourish. Re-enter, at one side, SATURNINUS, attended; TAMORA, CHIRON, DEMETRIUS, and AARON: At the other, BASSIANUS, LAVINIA, and others.

Sat. So, Bassianus, you have play'd your prize:

God give you joy, Sir, of your gallant bride.

Bas. And you of your's, my lord, I say no more,

Nor wish no less; and so I take my leave.

Sat. Traitor, if Rome have law, or we have power,

Thou and thy faction shall repent this rape.

Bas. Rape, call you it, my lord, to seize my own,

My true-betrothed love, and now my wife?

But let the laws of Rome determine all:

Mean while I am possess'd of what is mine.

Sat. 'Tis good, Sir: You are very short with But, if we live, we'll be as sharp with you. [us;

Bas. My lord, what I have done, as best I may,

Answer I must, and shall do with my life.

Only thus much I give your grace to know—

By all the duties that I owe to Rome,

This noble gentleman, lord Titus here,

Is in opinion, and in honour, wrong'd;

That, in the rescue of Lavinia,

With his own hand did slay his youngest son,

In zeal to you, and highly mov'd to wrath

To be control'd in that he frankly gave:

Receive him then to favour, Saturnine;

That hath express'd himself, in all his deeds,

A father and a friend to thee and Rome.

Tit. Prince Bassianus, leave to plead my deeds;

'Tis thou, and those, that have dishonour'd me; Rome and the righteous heavens be my judge.

How I have lov'd and honour'd Saturnine!

Tam. My worthy lord, if ever Tamora

Were gracious in those princely eyes of thine,

Then hear me speak indifferently for all;

And at my suit, sweet, pardon what is past.

Sat. What! madam! be dishonour'd openly, And basely put it up without revenge?

Tam. Not so, my lord: The gods of Rome forefend,*

I should be author to dishonour you!

But, on mine honour, dare I undertake

For good lord Titus' innocence in all,

Whose fury, not dissembled, speaks his griefs:

Then, at my suit, look graciously on him;

Lose not so noble a friend on vain suppose,

Nor with sour looks afflict his gentle heart.—

[Aside.

My lord, be rul'd by me, be won at last,

Dissemble all your griefs and discontents:

You are but newly planted in your throne:

Lest then the people and patricians too,

Upon a just survey, take Titus' part,

And so supplant us for ingratitude,

(Which Rome reputes to be a heinous sin,)

Yield at entreats, and then let me alone:

I'll find a day to massacre them all,

And raze their faction, and their family,

The cruel father, and his traitorous sons,

To whom I sued for my dear son's life;

And make them know, what 'tis to let a queen

Kneel in the streets, and beg for grace in vain.—

Come, come, sweet emperor,—come, Andronicus, Take up this good old man, and cheer the heart That dies in tempest of thy angry frown.

Sat. Rise, Titus, rise; my empress hath prevail'd.

Tit. I thank your majesty, and her, my lord; These words, these looks, infuse new life in me.

Tam. Titus, I am incorporate in Rome,

A Roman now adopted happily,

And must advise the emperor for his good.

This day all quarrels die, Andronicus;

And let it be mine honour, good my lord,

That I have reconcil'd your friends and you.—

* Forbid.

For you, prince Bassianus, I have pass'd My word and promise to the emperor, That you will be more mild and tractable.— And fear not, lords,—and you, Lavinia; By my advice, all humbled on your knees, You shall ask pardon of his majesty.

Luc. We do; and vow to heaven, and to his highness,

That what we did was mildly, as we might,

Tend'ring our sister's honour and our own.

Mar. That on mine honour here I do protest.

Sat. Away, and talk not: trouble us no more.—

Tam. Nay, nay, sweet emperor, we must all be friends:

The tribune and his nephews kneel for grace:

I will not be denied. Sweet heart, look back.

Sat. Marcus, for thy sake, and thy brother's here,

And at my lovely Tamora's entreats,

I do remit these young men's heinous faults.

Stand up.

Lavinia, though you left me like a churl,

I found a friend; and sure as death I swore,

I would not part a bachelor from the priest.

Come, if the emperor's court can feast two brides.

You are my guest, Lavinia, and your friends;

This day shall be a love-day, Tamora.

Tit. To-morrow, an it please your majesty,

To hunt the panther and the hart with me,

With horn and hound, we'll give your grace bonjour.

Sat. Be it so, Titus, and gramercy,* too.

[Exeunt.

ACT II.

SCENE I.—The same.—Before the Palace.

Enter AARON.

Aar. Now climbeth Tamora Olympus' top, Safe out of fortune's shot: and sits aloft, Secure of thunder's crack, or lightning's flash: Advanc'd above pale envy's threat'ning reach.

As when the golden sun salutes the morn,

And having gilt the ocean with his beams,

Gallops the zodiac in his glistening coach,

And overlooks the highest-peering hills:

So Tamora.—

Upon her wit doth early honour wait,

And virtue stoops and trembles at her frown:

Then, Aaron, arm thy heart, and fit thy thoughts,

To mount aloft with thy imperial mistress,

And mount her pitch: whom thou in triumph long

Hast prisoner held, fetter'd in amorous chains;

And faster bound to Aaron's charming eyes,

Than is Prometheus tied to Caucasus.

Away with slavish weeds, and idle thoughts!

I will be bright, and shine in pearl and gold,

To wait upon this new-made empress.

To wait, said I? to wanton with this queen,

This goddess, this Semiramis;—this queen,

This syren, that will charm Rome's Saturnine.

And see his shipwreck, and his commonweal's.

Holla! what storm is this?

Enter CHIRON and DEMETRIUS, braving.

Dem. Chiron, thy years want wit, thy wit wants edge,

And manners, to intrude where I am grac'd; And may, for ought thou know'st, affected be.

Chi. Demetrius, thou dost o'erween in all; And so in this to bear me down with braves.

'Tis not the difference of a year or two, Makes me less gracious, thee more fortunate.

I am as able and as fit as thou,

To serve and to deserve my mistress' grace;*

And that my sword upon thee shall approve,

And plead my passions for Lavinia's love.

* Grand merci—great thanks.

† Favours.

Aer. Clubs, clubs ! * these lovers will not keep the peace.

Dem. Why, boy, although our mother, unadvis'd,

Gave you a dancing-rapier † by your side,
Are you so desperate grown, to threat your friends?
Go to ! have your lath glued within your sheath,
Till you know better how to handle it.

Chi. Mean while, Sir, with the little skill I have,
Full well shalt thou perceive how much I dare.

Dem. Ay, boy, grow ye so brave ?

[They draw.]

Aer. Why, how now, lords ?
So near the emperor's palace dare you draw,
And maintain such a quarrel openly ?
Full well I wot ‡ the ground of all this grudge ;
I would not for a million of gold,
The cause were known to them it most concerns :
Nor would your noble mother, for much more,
Be so dishonour'd in the court of Rome.
For shame, put up,

Dem. Not I, till I have sheath'd
My rapier in his bosom, and, withal,
Thrust these reproachful speeches down his throat,
That he hath breath'd in my dishonour here.

Chi. For that I am prepar'd and full resolv'd,—

[tongue,]

Foul-spoken coward ! that thunder'st with thy
And with thy weapon nothing dar'st perform.

Aer. Away, I say.—

Now by the gods, that warlike Goths adore,
This petty brabble will undo us all.—
Why, lords,—and think you not how dangerous
It is to jut upon a prince's right ?
What, is Lavinia then become so loose,
Or Bassianus so degenerate,
That for her love such quarrels may be broach'd,
Without controlment, justice, or revenge ?
Young lords, beware !—an should the empress
know

This discord's ground, the music would not please.

Chi. I care not ; I, knew she and all the world ;
I love Lavinia more than all the world.

Dem. Youngling, learn thou to make some meaner choice :

Lavinia is thine elder brother's hope.

Aer. Why, are ye mad ? or know ye not, in Rome.

How furious and impatient they be,
And cannot brook competitors in love ?
I tell you, lords, you do but plot your deaths
By this device.

Chi. Aaron, a thousand deaths
Would I propose, to achieve her whom I love.

Car. To achieve her !—How ?

Dem. Why makest thou it so strange ?
She is a woman, therefore may be woo'd ;
She is a woman, therefore may be won ;
She is Lavinia, therefore must be lov'd.
What, man ! more water glideth by the mill
Than wots the miller of ; and easy it is
Of a cut loaf to steal a shive, § we know :
Though Bassianus be the emperor's brother,
Better than he have yet worn Vulcan's badge.

Car. Ay, and as good as Saturninus may.

[Aside.]

Dem. Then why should he despair, that knows to court it

With words, fair looks and liberality ?
What, hast thou not full often struck a doe,
And borne her cleanly by the keeper's nose ?

Car. Why then, it seems, some certain snatch, or so,

Would serve your turns.

Chi. Ay, so the turn were serv'd.

Dem. Aaron, thou hast hit it.

Car. 'Would you had hit it too ;

Then should not we be thr'd with this ado.
Why, hark ye, hark ye,—And are you such fools,
To square ¶ for this ? Would it offend you then
That both should speed ?

Chi. I'faith, not me.

Dem. Nor me,

So I were one.

Aer. For shame, be friends ; and join for that you jar.

'Tis policy and stratagem must do
That you affect ; and so must you resolve :
That what you cannot, as you would, achieve,
You must perforce accomplish as you may.
Take this of me, Lucrece was not more chaste
Than this Lavinia, Bassianus' love.
A speedier course than lingering languishment
Must we pursue, and I have found the path.
My lords, a solemn hunting is in hand ;
There will the lovely Roman ladies troop :
The forest walks are wide and spacious,
And many unfrequented plots there are,
Fitted by kind * for rape and villainy :
Single you thither then this dainty doe.
And strike her home by force, if not by words :
This way, or not at all, stand you in hope.
Come, come, our empress, with her sacred † wit,
To villainy and vengeance consecrate,
Will we acquaint with all that we intend :
And she shall file our engines with advice,
That will not suffer you to square yourselves,
But to your wishes' height advance you both.
The emperor's court is like the house of fame,
The palace full of tongues, of eyes, of ears :
The woods are ruthless, dreadful, deaf and dull :
There speak, and strike, brave boys, and take your turns : [eye,
There serve your lust, shadow'd from heaven's
And revel in Lavinia's treasury.

Chi. Thy counsel, lad, smells of no cowardice.

Dem. Sit fas aut nefas, till I find the stream
To cool this heat, a charm to calm these fits,
Per Styga, per manes vehor. [Exit.

SCENE II.—A Forest near Rome.—A Lodge seen at a distance. Horns, and cry of Hounds heard.

Enter TITUS ANDRONICUS, with Hunters, &c.
MARCUS, LUCIUS, QUINTUS, and MARTIUS.

Tit. The hunt is up, the morn is bright and grey, [green :

The fields are fragrant, and the woods are
Uncoupled here, and let us make a bay,
And wake the emperor and his lovely bride,
And rouse the prince ; and ring a hunter's peal,
That all the court may echo with the noise.
Sons, let it be your charge, as it is ours,
To tend the emperor's person carefully :
I have been troubled in my sleep this night,
But dawning day new comfort hath inspir'd.

Horns wind a Peal. Enter SATURNINUS, TAMORA, BASSIANUS, LAVINIA, CHIRON, DEMETRIUS, and attendants.

Tit. Many good morrows to your majesty :—
Madam, to you as many and as good !—
I promised your grace a hunter's peal.

Sat. And you have rung it lustily, my lords,
Somewhat too early for new-married ladies.

Bas. Lavinia, how say you ?

Lav. I say, no :

I have been broad awake two hours and more.

Sat. Come on then, horse and chariots let us
have,

And to our sport :—Madam, now shall ye see
Our Roman hunting. [To TAMORA.

Mar. I have dogs, my lord,
Will rouse the proudest panther in the chase,
And climb the highest promontory top.

Tit. And I have horse will follow where the game

Makes way, and run like swallows o'er the plain.

Dem. Chiron, we hunt not, we, with horse nor bound,

But hope to pluck a dainty doe to ground.

[Exit.

SCENE III.—A desert Part of the Forest.

Enter AARON, with a Bag of Gold.

Aar. He that had wit, would think that I had none,

To bury so much gold under a tree,
And never after to inherit * it.
Let him that thinks of me so abjectly,
Know, that this gold must coin a stratagem ;
Which, cunningly effected, will beget
A very excellent piece of villany ;
And so repose, sweet gold, for their unrest, †
[Hides the Gold.
That have their aims out of the empress' chest.

Enter TAMORA.

Tam. My lovely Aaron, wherefore look'st thou sad,

When every thing doth make a gleeful boast ?
The birds chaunt melody on every bush ;
The snake lies rolled in the cheerful sun ;
The green leaves quiver with the cooling wind,
And make a chequer'd shadow on the ground :
Under their sweet shade, Aaron, let us sit :
And—whilst the babbling echo mocks the hounds,
Replying shrilly to the well-tun'd horns,
As if a double hunt were heard at once,—
Let us sit down, and mark their yelling noise :
And—after conflict, such as was suppos'd
The wandering prince of Dido once enjoy'd,
When with a happy storm they were surpris'd,
And curtain'd with a counsel-keeping cave,—
We may, each wreathed in the other's arms,
Our pastimes done, possess a golden slumber ;
Whilst hounds, and horns, and sweet melodious birds,
Be unto us, as is a nurse's song
Of lullaby, to bring her babe asleep.

Aar. Madam, though Venus govern your desires,
Saturn is dominator over mine :
What signifies my deadly standing eye,
My silence, and my cloudy melancholy,
My fleece of woolly hair that now uncurls,
Even as an adder, when she doth unroll
To do some fatal execution ?
No, madam, these are no venereal signs ;
Vengeance is in my heart, death in my hand,
Blood and revenge are hammering in my head.
Hark, Tamora—the empress of my soul,
Which never hopes more heaven than rests in thee,—

This is the day of doom for Bassianus :
His Philomel ‡ must loose her tongue to-day :
Thy sons make pillage of her chastity,
And wash their hands in Bassianus' blood.
Seest thou this letter ? Take it up, I pray thee,
And give the king this fatal-plotted scroll :—
Now question me no more, we are espied ;
Here comes a parcel § of our hopeful booty,
Which dreads not yet their lives' destruction.

Tam. Ah, my sweet Moor, sweeter to me than life !

Aar. No more, great empress, Bassianus comes :
Be cross with him ; and I'll go fetch thy sons
To back thy quarrels whatsoever they be.

[Exit.]Enter BASSIANUS and LAVINIA.

Bas. Who have we here ? Rome's royal emperess,
Unfurnish'd of her well-beseeming troop ?
Or is it Dian, habited like her ;
Who hath abandoned her holy groves,
To see the general hunting in this forest ?

Tam. Saucy controller of our private steps !
Had I the power that some say, Dian had,
Thy temples should be planted presently
With horns, as was Actæon's ; and the hounds
Should drive upon thy new transformed limbs :
Unmannerly intruder as thou art !

Lav. Under your patience, gentle emperess,

'Tis thought you have a goodly gift in morning ;
And to be doubted, that your Moor and you
Are singled forth to try experiments :
Jove shield your husband from his hounds to-day :
'Tis pity they should take him for a stag.

Bas. Believe me, queen, your swarth Cim-merian

Doth make your honour of his body's hue,
Spotted, detested, and abominable.
Why are you sequester'd from all your train ?
Disinounted from your snow-white goodly steed,
And wander'd hither to an obscure plot,
Accompanied with a barbarous Moor,
If soul desire had not conducted you ?

Lav. And, being intercepted in your sport,
Great reason that my noble lord be rated
For sauciness.—I pray you, let us hence,
And let her 'joy her raven colour'd love ;
This valley fits the purpose passing well.

Bas. The king, my brother, shall have note of this.

Lav. Ay, for these slips have made him noted
long :

Good king ! to be so mightily abus'd !

Tam. Why have I patience to endure all this ?

Enter CHIRON and DEMETRIUS.

Dem. How now, dear sovereign, and our gracious mother,

Why doth your highness look so pale and wan ?

Tam. Have I not reason, think you, to look pale ?

These two have 'tic'd me hither to this place,
A barren detested vale, you see, it is :
The trees, though summer, yet forlorn and lean,
O'ercome with moss, and baleful mistletoe.
Here never shines the sun ; here nothing breeds,
Unless the nightly owl, or fatal raven ;
And, when they show'd me this abhorred pit,
They told me, here, at dead time of the night,
A thousand fiends, a thousand hissing snakes,
Ten thousand swelling toads, as many urchins,*
Would make such fearful and confused cries,
As any mortal body, hearing it,
Should straight fall mad, or else die suddenly.
No sooner had they told this hellish tale,
But straight they told me, they would bind me
here

Unto the body of a dismal yew ;
And leave me to this miserable death.
And then they call'd me, foul adulteress,
Lascivious Goth, and all the bitterest terms
That ever ear did hear to such effect.
And, had you not by wondrous fortune come,
This vengeance on me had they executed :
Revenge it, as you love your mother's life,
Or be ye not henceforth call'd my children.

Dem. This is a witness that I am thy son.

[Stabs BASSIANUS.]

Chl. And this for me, struck home to show my strength.

[Stabbing him likewise.]

Lav. Ay, come, Semiramis,—way, barbarous Tamora !

For no name fits thy nature but thy own !

Tam. Give me thy poniard ; you shall know my boys,

Your mother's hand shall right your mother's wrong.

Dem. Stay, madam, here is more belongs to
her ;

First thrash the corn, then after burn the straw :
This minion stood upon her chastity,
Upon her nuptial vow, her loyalty,
And with that painted hope braves your mighti-
ness.

And shall she carry this unto her grave ?

Chl. An if she do, I would I were a cunuch.
Drag hence her husband to some secret hole,
And make his dead trunk pillow to our lust.

Tam. But when you have the honey you desire,

Let not this wasp outlive, us both to sting

* Poessess.

† Disquice.

• Hedge-hogs.

And for these bitter tears, which now you see
Filling the aged wrinkles in my cheeks ;
Be pitiful to my condemned sons,
Whose souls are not corrupted as 'tis thought !
For two and twenty sons I never wept,
Because they died in honour's lofty bed :
For these, these, tribunes, in the dust I write (Throwing himself on the Ground.)
My heart's deep languor, and my soul's sad tears.
Let my tears staunch the earth's dry appetite :
My sons' sweet blood will make it shame and blush.

(Exeunt SENATORS, TRIBUNES, &c. with the Prisoners.)

O earth, I will befriend thee more with rain,
That shall distil from these two ancient urns,
Than youthful April shall with all his showers :
In summer's drought, I'll drop upon thee still :
In winter, with warm tears I'll melt the snow,
And keep eternal spring-time on thy face,
So thou refuse to drink my dear sons' blood.

Enter Lucius, with his Sword drawn.

O reverend tribunes ! gentle aged men !
Unbind my sons, reverse the doom of death ;
And let me say, that never wept before,
My tears are now prevailing orators.

Luc. O noble father, you lament in vain ;
The tribunes hear you not, no man is by,
And you recount your sorrows to a stone.

Tit. Ah ! Lucius, for thy brothers let me plead :
Grave tribunes, once more I entreat of you.

Luc. My gracious lord, no tribune hears you speak.

Tit. Why, 'tis no matter, man : if they did hear,

They would not mark me ; or if they did mark,
All bootless to them, they'd not pity me.
Therefore I tell my sorrows to the stones ;
Who, though they cannot answer my distress,
Yet in some sort they're better than the tribunes,
For that they will not intercept my tale :
When I do weep, they humbly at my feet
Receive my tears, and seem to weep with me ;
And, were they but attired in grave weeds,
Rome could afford no tribune like to these.
A stone is soft as wax, tribunes more hard than stones :

A stone is silent, and offendeth not :
And tribunes with their tongues doom men to death.

But wherefore stand'st thou with thy weapon drawn ?

Luc. To rescue my two brothers from their death :

For which attempt, the judges have pronounce'd
My everlasting doom of banishment.

Tit. O happy man, they have befriended thee.
Why, foolish Lucius, dost thou not perceive,
That Rome is but a wilderness of tigers ?

Tigers must prey ; and Rome affords no prey,
But me and mine : How happy art thou then,
From these devourers to be banished !
But who comes with our brother Marcus here ?

Enter MARCUS and LAVINIA.

Mar. Titus, prepare thy noble eyes to weep ;
Or, if not so, thy noble heart to break ;
I bring consuming sorrow to thine age.

Tit. Will it consume me ? let me see it then.

Mar. This was thy daughter.

Tit. Why, Marcus, so she is.

Luc. Ah ! me, this object kills me !

Tit. Faint hearted boy, arise, and look upon her :—

Speak, my Lavinia, what accursed hand
Hath made thee handless in thy father's sight ?
What fool hath added water to the sea,
Or brought a faggot to bright burning Troy ?
My grief was at the height before thou cam'st,
And now, like Nilus,* it disdaineth bounds,
Give me a sword, I'll chop off my hands too ;
For they have fought for Rome, and all in vain ;

And they have nurs'd this woe, in feeding life ;
In bootless prayer have they been held up,
And they have serv'd me to effectless use :
Now, all the service I require of them
Is, that the one will help to cut the other.—
'Tis well, Lavinia, that thou hast no hands ;
For hands, to do Rome service, are but vain.

Luc. Speak, gentle sister, who hath martyr'd thee ?

Mar. Oh ! that delightful engine of her thoughts,

That blabb'd them with such pleasing eloquence,
Is torn from forth that pretty hollow cage :
Where, like a sweet melodious bird, it sung
Sweet varied notes, enchanting every ear !

Luc. Oh ! say thou for her, who hath done this deed ?

Mar. Oh ! thus I found her, staying in the park,

Seeking to hide herself, as doth the deer,
That hath receiv'd some unrecuring wound.

Tit. It was my deer ; and he that wounded her,

Hath hurt me more, than had he kill'd me dead :

For now I stand as one upon a rock,
Environ'd with a wilderness of sea ;

Who marks the waxing tide grow wave by wave,
Expecting ever when some envious surge
Will in his brinish bowels swallow him.

This way to death my wretched sons are gone ;
Here stands my other son a banish'd man !

And here, my brother, weeping at my woes ;
But that which gives my soul the greatest spurn,

Is dear Lavinia, dearer than my soul.—
Had I but seen thy picture in this plight,

It would have maddened me ; What shall I do
Now I behold thy lively body so ?

Thou hast no hands to wipe away thy tears ;
Nor tongue to tell me who has martyr'd thee :

Thy husband he is dead : and, for his death,
Thy brothers are condemn'd and dead by this :—

Look, Marcus ! ah ! son Lucius, look on her !
When I did name her brothers, then fresh tears

Stood on her cheeks ; as doth the honey dew
Upon a gather'd lily almost wither'd.

Mar. Perchance, she weeps because they kill'd her husband :

Perchance, because she knows them innocent.
Tit. If they did kill thy husband, then be joyful,

Because the law hath ta'en revenge on them.
No, no, they would not do so foul a deed ;

Witness the sorrow that their sister makes.—
Gentle Lavinia, let me kiss thy lips ;

Or make some sign how I may do thee ease :
Shall thy good uncle, and thy brother Lucius,

And thou, and I, sit round about some fountain ;
Looking all downwards, to behold our cheeks

How they are stain'd ; like meadows, yet not dry

With miry slime left on them by a flood ?
And in the fountain shall we gaze so long,

Till the fresh taste be taken from that clearness,
And made a brine-pit with our bitter tears ?

Or shall we cut away our hands, like thine ?
Or shall we bite our tongues, and in dumb shows

Pass the remainder of our hateful days ?
What shall we do ? let us, that have our tongues,

Plot some device of further misery,
To make us wonder'd at in time to come.

Luc. Sweet father, cease your tears ; for, at your grief,

See how my wretched sister sobs and weeps.
Mar. Patience, dear niece :—good Titus, dry thine eyes.

Tit. Ah, Marcus, Marcus ! brother, well I wot,*

Thy napkin† cannot drink a tear of mine,
For thou, poor man, hast drown'd it with thine crown.

Luc. Ah ! my Lavinia, I will wipe thy cheeks.

* The river Nile.

Murt. We know not where you left him all alive,
But, out alas! here have we found him dead.

Enter TAMORA, with Attendants; TITUS ANDRONICUS, and LUCIUS.

Tam. Where is my lord, the king?

Sat. Here, Tamora; though griev'd with killing grief.

Tam. Where is thy brother Bassianus?

Sat. Now to the bottom dost thou search my wound:

Poor Bassianus here lies murdered.

Tam. Then all too late I bring this fatal writ, [Giving a Letter.

The complot of this timeless * tragedy;
And wonder greatly, that man's face can fold
In pleasing smiles such murderous tyranny.

Sat. [Reads.] An if we miss to meet him handsomely,—

*Sweet huntsman, Bassianus 'tis, we mean,—
Do thou so much as dig the grave for him;
Thou know'st our meaning; Look for thy reward*

*Among the nettles at the elder tree,
Which overshades the mouth of that same pit,
Where we decreed to bury Bassianus.*

*Do this, and purchase us thy lasting friends.
O Tamora! was ever heard the like?*

*This is the pit, and this the elder tree:
Look, Sirs, if you can find the huntsman out,
That should have murder'd Bassianus here.*

Aar. My gracious lord, here is the bag of gold.
[Showing it.

Sat. Two of thy whelps, [To Tit.] fell curs of bloody kind,

Have here bereft my brother of his life:—
Sirs, drag them from the pit unto the prison;
There let them bide, until we have devis'd
Some never-heard-of torturing pain for them.

Tam. What, are they in this pit? O wondrous thing!

How easily murder is discovered!

Tit. High emperor, upon my feeble knee
I beg this boon, with tears not lightly shed,
That this fell fault of my accursed sons,
Accursed, if the fault be prov'd in them,—

Sat. If it be prov'd! you see, it is apparent.—

Who found this letter? Tamora, was it you?

Tam. Andronicus himself did take it up.

Tit. I did, my lord: yet let me be their bail:
For by my father's reverend tomb, I vow,
They shall be ready at your highness' will,
To answer their suspicion with their lives.

Sat. Thou shalt not bail them: see, thou follow me. [Derers:

Some bring the murder'd body, some the murder:
Let them not speak a word, the guilt is plain;
For, by my soul, were there worse end than death,

That end upon them should be executed.

Tam. Andronicus, I will entreat the king:
Fear not thy sons, they shall do well enough.

Tit. Come, Lucius, come: stay not to talk with them.

[Exeunt severally.

SCENE V.—The same.

Enter DEMETRIUS and CHIRON, with LAVINIA, ravished; her Hands cut off, and her Tongue cut out.

Dem. So, now go tell, an if thy tongue can speak,

Who 'twas that cut thy tongue, and ravish'd thee.

Chi. Write down thy mind, bewray thy meaning so;

And if thy stumps will let thee play the scribe.

Dem. See, how with signs and tokens she can scowl.

Chi. Go home, call for sweet water, wash thy hands.

* Untimely.

Dem. She hath no tongue to call, nor hand to wash;

And so let's leave her to her silent walks.

Chi. An 'twere my case, I should go hang myself.

Dem. If thou hadst hands to help thee knit the cord.

[Exeunt DEMETRIUS and CHIRON.

Enter MARCUS.

Mar. Who's this,—my niece, that flies away so fast?

Cousin, a word; Where is your husband?—

If I do dream, 'would all my wealth would wake me!

If I do wake, some planet strike me down,
That I may slumber in eternal sleep!—

Speak, gentle niece, what stern ungentle hands
Have lopp'd, and hew'd, and made thy body bare

Of her two branches! those sweet ornaments,
Whose circling shadows kings have sought to sleep in;

And might not gain so great a happiness,
As half thy love! Why dost not speak to me?—

Alas, a crimson river of warm blood,
Like to a bubbling fountain stirr'd with wind,

Doth rise and fall between thy rosed lips,
Coming and going with thy honey breath.

But sure, some Tereus hath deflower'd thee;

And, lest thou should'st detect him, cut thy tongue.

Ah! now thou turnest away thy face for shame,
And, notwithstanding all this loss of blood,—

As from a conduit with three issuing spouts,—

Yet do thy cheeks look red as Titan's face,
Blushing to be encounter'd with a cloud.

Shall I speak for thee? shall I say, 'tis so?

Oh! that I knew thy heart; and knew the beast,
That I might rail at him to ease my mind!

Sorrow concealed, like an oven stopp'd
Doth burn the heart to cinders where it is.

Fair Philomela, she but lost her tongue,

And in a tedious sampler sew'd her mind:

But, lovely niece, that mean is cut from thee;

A craftier Tereus hast thou met withal,

And he hath cut those pretty fingers off,

That could have better sew'd than Philomel.

Oh! had the monster seen those lily hands

Tremble, like aspen leaves, upon a lute,

And make the silken strings delight to kiss them,

He would not then have touch'd them for his life;

Or, had he heard the heavenly harmony,

Which that sweet tongue hath made,

He would have dropp'd his knife, and fell asleep.

As Cerberus at the Thracian poet's * feet.

Come, let us go, and make thy father blind:

For such a sight will blind a father's eye:

One hour's storm will drown the fragrant meads;

What will whole months of tears thy father's eyes?

Do not draw back, for we will mourn with thee;

Oh! could our mourning ease thy misery!

[Exeunt.

ACT III.

SCENE I.—Rome.—A Street.

Enter SENATORS, TRIBUNES, and Officers of Justice, with MARTIUS and QUINTUS, bound, passing on to the Place of Execution: Titus going before, pleading.

Tit. Hear me, grave fathers! noble tribunes stay!

For pity of mine age, whose youth was spent
In dangerous wars, whilst you securely slept;
For all my blood in Rome's great quarrel shed;
For all the frosty nights that I have watch'd;

* Orpheus.

Fill all these mischiefs be return'd again,
Even in their throats that have committed
them.

Come, let me see what task I have to do.—
You heavy people, circle me about;
That I may turn me to each one of you,
And swear unto my soul to right your wrongs.
The vow is made.—Come, brother, take a head;
And in this hand the other will I bear:
Lavinia, thou shalt be employed in these things;
Bear thou my hand, sweet wench, between thy teeth.

As for thee, boy, go, got thee from my sight;
Thou art an exile, and thou must not stay:
Hie to the Goths, and raise an army there:
And, if you love me, as I think you do,
Let's kiss and part, for we have much to do.

[Exeunt TITUS, MARCUS, and LAVINIA.]

Luc. Farewell, Andronicus, my noble father;
The woeful'st man that ever liv'd in Rome!
Farewell, proud Rome! till Lucius come again,
He leaves his pledges dearer than his life.
Farewell, Lavinia, my noble sister;
Oh! would thou wert as thou 'tore hast been!
But now nor Lucius nor Lavinia lives,
But in oblivion, and hateful griefs.
If Lucius live, he will requite your wrongs;
And make proud Saturninus and his empress
Beg at the gates, like Tarquin and his queen.
Now will I to the Goths, and raise a power,
To be reveng'd on Rome and Saturnine.

[Exit.]

SCENE II.—A Room in TITUS' House.—
A Banquet set out.

Enter TITUS, MARCUS, LAVINIA, and young
LUCIUS, a boy.

Tit. So, so; now sit: and look, you eat no
more
Than will preserve just so much strength in us
As will revenge these bitter woes of ours.
MARCUS, unknit that sorrow-wreathen knot;
Thy niece and I, poor creatures, want our hands,
And cannot passionate our tenfold grief
With folded arms. This poor right hand of mine
Is left to tyrannise upon my breast;
And when my heart, all mad with misery,
Beats in this hollow prison of my flesh,
Then thus I thump it down.—

Thou map of woe that thus dost talk in signs!
—[To LAVINIA.
When thy poor heart beats with outrageous beating,

Thou canst not strike it thus to make it still.
Wound it with sighing, girl, kill it with groan;
Or get some little knife between thy teeth,
And just against thy heart make thou a hole;
That all the tears that thy poor eyes let fall,
May run into that sink, and soaking in,
Drown the lamenting fool in sea-salt tears.

Mar. Fie, brother, fie! teach her not thus to lay
Such violent hands upon her tender life.

Tit. How now! has sorrow made thee dote already?

Why, MARCUS, no man should be mad but I.
What violent hands can she lay on her life!
Ah! wherefore dost thou urge the name of hands;—

To bid Aeneas tell the tale twice o'er,
How Troy was burnt, and he made miserable!
O handle not the theme, to talk of hands;
Lest we remember still, that we have none.—
Fie, fie, how frantically I square my talk!
As if we should forget we had no hands,
I, MARCUS did not name the word of hands!—
Come, let's fall to; and, gentle girl, eat this:— Here is no drink! Hark, MARCUS, what she says;—

I can interpret all her martyr'd signs;—
She says, she drinks no other drink but tears, Brew'd with her sorrows, mesh'd upon her cheeks:—

As all on to brewing.

Speechless complainer, I will learn thy thought;
In thy dumb action will I be as perfect,
As begging hermits in their holy prayers:
Thou shalt not sigh, nor hold thy stumps to heaven,

Nor wink, nor nod, nor kneel, nor make a sign,
But I, of these, will wrest an alphabet,
And, by still * practice, learn to know thy mean-
ing.

Boy. Good grandsire, leave these bitter deep laments:

Make my aunt merry with some pleasing tale.

Mar. Alas! the tender boy, in passion mov'd,
Doth weep to see his grandsire's heaviness.

Tit. Peace, tender sapling; thou art made of
tears,

And tears will quickly melt thy life away.—

[MARCUS strikes the Dish with a Knife.
What dost thou strike at, MARCUS, with thy knife?

Mar. At that that I have kill'd, my lord; a fly.

Tit. Out on thee, murderer! thou kill'st my
heart;

Mine eyes are cloy'd with view of tyranny:
A deed of death, done on the innocent,
Becomes not Titus' brother: Get thee gone;
I see thou art not for my company.

Mar. Alas! my lord, I have but kill'd a fly.

Tit. But how, if that fly had a father and mother?

How would he hang his slender gilded wings,
And buz lamenting doings in the air?

Poor harmless fly!

That, with his pretty buzzing melody,
Came here to make us merry; and thou hast
kill'd him.

Mar. Pardon me, Sir; 'twas a black ill-favour'd fly,

Like to the empress' Moor; therefore I kill'd him.

Tit. Oh! oh! oh!

Then pardon me for reprehending thee,
For thou hast done a charitable deed.
Give me thy knife, I will insult on him;
Flattering myself, as if it were the Moor
Come hither purposely to poison me.—
There's for thyself, and that's for Tamora.—
Ah! sirrah!†—

Yet I do think we are not brought so low,
But that, between us, we can kill a fly,
That comes in likeness of a coal-black Moor.

Mar. Alas! poor man! grief has so wrought on him,

He takes false shadows for true substances.

Tit. Come, take away.—Lavinia, go with me:
I'll to thy closet; and go read with thee
Sad stories, chanced in the times of old.—
Come, boy, and go with me; thy sight is young,
And thou shalt read, when mine begins to dazzle.

[Exeunt]

ACT IV.

SCENE I.—The same.—Before TITUS'
House.

Enter TITUS and MARCUS. Then enter young
LUCIUS, LAVINIA running after him.

Boy. Help, grandsire, help! my aunt Lavinia
Follows me every where, I know not why:—
Good uncle MARCUS, see how swift she comes!
Alas! sweet aunt, I know not what you mean.

Mar. Stand by me, Lucius; do not fear thine aunt.

Tit. She loves thee, boy, too well to do thee harm.

Boy. Ay, when my father was in Rome, she did.

Mar. What means my niece Lavinia by these signs?

* Constant practice.

† This was formerly not a disrespectful expression.

Tit. Fear her not, Lucius:—Somewhat doth she mean:

See, Lucius, see, how much she makes of thee: Somewhither would she have thee go with her. Ah! boy, Cornelia never with more care Read to her sons, than she hath read to thee, Sweet poetry, and Tully's Orator.* Canst thou not guess wherefore she plies thee thus?

Boy. My lord, I know not, I, nor can I guess, Unless some fit or frenzy do possess her: For I have heard my grandsire say full oft, Extremity of griefs would make men mad; And I have read that Hecuba of Troy Ran mad through sorrow: That made me to fear; Although, my lord, I know my noble aunt Loves me as dear as e'er my mother did, And would not, but in fury, fright my youth: Which made me down to throw my books, and fly;

Causeless, perhaps: But pardon me, sweet aunt: And, madam, if my uncle Marcus go, I will most willingly attend your ladyship.

Mar. Lucius, I will.

[LAVINIA turns over the books which LUCIUS has let fall.]

Tit. How now, Lavinia?—Marcus, what means this?

Some book there is that she desires to see:— Which is it, girl, of these?—Open them, boy.— But thou art deeper read, and better skill'd; Come, and take choice of all my library, And so beguile thy sorrow, till the heavens Reveal the damn'd contriver of this deed.— Why lifts she up her arms in sequence† thus?

Mar. I think she means, that there was more than one

Confederate in the fact:—Ay, more there was:— Or else to heaven she heaves them for revenge.

Tit. Lucius, what book is that she tosseth so?

Boy. Grandsire, 'tis Ovid's Metamorphosis; My mother gave't me.

Mar. For love of her that's gone, Perhaps she cull'd it from among the rest.

Tit. Soft! see, how busily she turns the leaves! Help her:

What would she find?—Lavinia, shall I read? This is the tragic tale of Philomel, And treats of Tereus' treason and his rape; And rape, I fear, was root of thine annoy.

Mar. See, brother, see! note, how she quotes† the leaves.

Tit. Lavinia, wert thou thus surpris'd, sweet girl, Ravish'd and wrong'd, as Philomela was, Forc'd in the ruthless, § vast, and gloomy woods?— See, see!—

Ay, such a place there is, where we did hunt, (Oh! had we never, never, hunted there!) Pattern'd by that the poet here describes. By nature made for murders and for rapes.

Mar. Oh! why should nature build so foul a den.

Unless the gods delight in tragedies!

Tit. Give signs, sweet girl,—for here are none but friends,—

What Roman lord it was durst do the deed: Or slunk not Saturnine, as Tarquin erst, That left the camp to sin in Lucrece' bed?

Mar. Sit down, sweet niece;—brother, sit down by me.—

Apollo, Pallas, Jove, or Mercury, Inspire me, that I may this treason find!— My lord, look here,—Look here, Lavinia: This sandy plot is plain; guide, if thou canst, This after me, when I have writ my name Without the help of any hand at all.

[He writes his name with his staff, and guides it with his feet and mouth.]

Curs'd be that heart, that forc'd us to this shift!— Write thou, good niece; and here display, at last,

What God will have discover'd for revenge:

Heaven guide thy pen to print thy sorrows plain That we may know the traitors and the truth! [She takes the staff in her mouth, and guides it with her stumps, and writes.]

Tit. Oh! do you read, my lord, what she hath Stuprum—Chiron—Demetrius. [writ?]

Mar. What, what!—the lustful sons of Tamora

Performers of this heinous, bloody deed?

Tit. Magne Dominator poli, Tam lentus audis scelera? tam lentus vides?

Mar. Oh! calm thee, gentle lord! although, I know,

There is enough written upon this earth, To stir a mutiny in the mildest thoughts, And arm the minds of infants to exclams. My lord, kneel down with me; Lavinia, kneel; And kneel, sweet boy, the Roman Hector's hope: And swear with me,—as with the woeful scere,* And father, of that chaste dishonour'd dame, Lord Junius Brutus swear for Lucrece' rape,— That we will prosecute, by good advice, Mortal revenge upon these traitorous Goths, And see their blood, or die with this reproach.

Tit. 'Tis sure enough, and you knew how, But if you hurt these bear-whelps, then beware: The dam will wake; and, if she wind you once, She's with the lion deeply still in league, And lulls him whilst she playeth on her back, And, when he sleeps, will she do what she list. You're a young huntsman, Marcus; let it alone; And come, I will go get a leaf of brass, And with a gad† of steel will write these words, And lay it by: the angry northern wind Will blow these sands, like Sybil's leaves, abroad, And where's your lesson then?—Boy, what say you?

Boy. I say, my lord, that if I were a man, Their mother's bed-chamber should not be safe For these bad-bondmen to the yoke of Rome.

Mar. Ay, that's my boy! thy father hath full oft,

For this ungrateful country done the like.

Boy. And, uncle, so will I, an if I live.

Tit. Come, go with me into mine armoury; Lucius, I'll fit thee; and withal, my boy Shall carry from me to the empress' sons Presents, that I intend to send them both: Come, come; thou'lt do thy message, wilt thou not?

Boy. Ay, with my dagger in their bosoms, grandsire.

Tit. No, boy, not so; I'll teach thee another course.

Lavinia, come:—Marcus, look to my house:

Lucius and I'll go brave it at the court;

Ay, marry, will we, Sir: and we'll be waited on.

[Exeunt TITUS, LAVINIA, and BOY.]

Mar. O heavens, can you hear a good man groan,

And not relent, or not compassion him?

Marcus, attend him in his ecstasy; That hath more scars of sorrow in his heart, Than foe men's marks upon his batter'd shield: But yet so just, that he will not revenge:— Revenge the heavens for old Andronicus!—

[Exit.]

SCENE II.—The same.—A Room in the Palace.

Enter AARON, CHIRON, and DEMETRIUS, at one Door; at another Door, young LUCIUS, and an Attendant, with a Bundle of Weapons, and Verses writ upon them.

Chl. Demetrius, here's the son of Lucius; He hath some message to deliver to us.

Aar. Ay, some mad message from his mad grandfather.

Boy. My lords, with all the humbleness I may,

* Tully's Treatise on Eloquence entitled Orator.
† Succession. § Observes. ‡ Useless.

* Husband.

† The point of a spear.

I greet your honours from Andronicus ;—
And pray the Roman gods, confound you both.

[Aside.

Dem. Gramercy, lovely Lucius : What's the news ?

Boy. That you are both decipher'd that's the news,

For villains mark'd with rape. [Aside.] May it please you,

My grandsire, well-advis'd, hath sent by me
The goodliest weapons of his armoury,
To gratify your honourable youth.

The hope of Rome ; for so he bade me say ;
And so I do, and with his gifts present
Your lordships, that whenever you have need,
You may be armed and appointed well :

And so I leave you both, [Aside.] like bloody villains.

[Exeunt Boy and Attendant.

Dem. What's here ? A scroll ; and written round about ?

Let's see :

*Integer vite, scelerisque purno,
Non eget Mauri jaculis, nec arcu.*

Chi. Oh ! 'tis a verse in Horace ; I know it
I read it in the grammar long ago. [well :

Aar. Ay, just !—a verse in Horace :—right, you have it.—

Now, what a thing it is to be an ass ! [Aside.
Here's no sound jest ! the old man hath found their guilt ;

And sends the weapons wrapp'd about with lines,
That wound, beyond their feeling, to the quick.

But were our witty empress well-a-foot,
She would applaud Andronicus' conceit.

But let her rest in her unrest awhile.—

And now, young lords, was't not a happy star
Led us to Rome, strangers, and, more than so,
Captives, to be advanced to this height ?

It did me good, before the Palace gate,
To brave the tribune in his brother's hearing,

Dem. But me more good, to see so great a lord
Basely insinuate, and send us gifts

Aar. Had he not reason, lord Demetrius ?
Did you not use his daughter very friendly ?

Dem. I would we had a thousand Roman dames

At such a bay, by turn to serve our lust.

Chi. A charitable wish, and full of love.

Aar. Here lacks but your mother for to say amen.

Chi. And that would she for twenty thousand
more.

Dem. Come, let us go ; and pray to all the
For our beloved mother in her pains. [gods

Aar. Pray to the devils ; the gods have given us o'er. [Aside. Flourish.

Dem. Why do the emperor's trumpets flourish
thus ?

Chi. Betike for joy the emperor hath a son.

Dem. Soft ; who comes here ?

Enter a Nurse, with a black-a-moor Child in her arms.

Nur. Good morrow, lords :

Oh ! tell me, did you see Aaron the Moor.

Aar. Well, more or less, or ne'er a whit at
all,

Here Aaron is : and what with Aaron now ?

Nur. O gentle Aaron, we are all undone !

Now help or woe betide thee evermore !

Aar. Why, what a caterwauling doest thou keep !

What doest thou wrap and fumble in thine arms ?

Nur. Oh ! that which I would hide from heaven's eye, [grace ;—

Our empress' shame, and stately Rome's dis-she is deliver'd, lords, she is deliver'd.

Aar. To whom ?

Nur. I mean, she's brought to bed.

Aar. Well, God

Give her good rest ! What hath he sent her ?

Nur. A devil.

Aar. Why then she's the devil's dam ; a joyful issue.

Nur. A joyless, dismal, black, and sorrowful
issue :

Here is the babe, as loathsome as a toad
Amongst the fairest breeders of our clime.
The empress sends it thee, thy stamp, thy seal,
And bids thee christen it with thy dagger's point.

Aar. Out, out, you whore ! is black so base a hue ?—

Sweet blowse, you are a beauteous blossom, sure.

Dem. Villain, what hast thou done ?

Aar. Done ! that which thou
Canst not undo.

Chi. Thou hast undone our mother.

Aar. Villain, I have done thy mother.

Dem. And therein, hellish dog, thou hast undone.

Woe to her chance, and damn'd her loathed
choice !

Accurs'd the offspring of so foul a fiend !

Chi. It shall not live.

Aar. It shall not die.

Nur. Aaron, it must ; the mother wills it so.

Aar. What, must it, nurse ? then let no man
but I,

Do execution on my flesh and blood.

Dem. I'll brouch * the tadpole on my rapier's point : [it.

Nurse, give it me ; my sword shall soon despatch

Aar. Sooner this sword shall plough thy bowels up.

[Takes the Child from the Nurse and draws.

Stay, murderous villains ! will you kill your brother ?

Now, by the burning tapers of the sky,
That shone so brightly when this boy was got,

He dies upon my scimitar's sharp point,
That touches this my first-born son and heir !

I tell you, younglings, not Enceladus, †
With all his threat'ning band of Typhon's brood,

Nor great Alcides, ‡ nor the god of war,
Shall seize this prey out of his father's hands.

What, what, ye saugine, shallow-hearted boys !
Ye white-lim'd walls ! ye alehouse painted
signs !

Coal black is better than another hue,
In that it scorns to bear another hue :

For all the water in the ocean
Can never turn a swan's black legs to white,

Although she lave them hourly in the flood.
Tell the empress from me, I am of age

To keep mine own ; excuse it how she can.

Dem. Wilt thou betray thy noble mistress thus ?

Aar. My mistress is my mistress ; this myself ;

The vigour and the picture of my youth :
This, before all the world, do I prefer ;

This maugre § all the world, will I keep safe,
Or some of you shall smoke for it in Rome.

Dem. By this our mother is for ever sham'd.

Chi. Rome will despise her for this foul escape.

Nur. The emperor, in his rage, will doom her death.

Chi. I blush to think upon this ignomy, ||

Aar. Why, there's the privilege your beauty bears :

Fie, treacherous hue ! that will betray with blush-
ing

The close enacts and counsels of the heart !
Here's a young lad fram'd of another leer : ¶

Look, how the black slave smiles upon the father ;

As who should say, Old lad, I am thine own.
He is your brother, lords ; sensibly fed

Of that self-blood that first gave life to you ;
And, from that womb where you imprison'd were,

He is enfranchis'd and come to light :
Nay, he's your brother by the surer side,

Although my seal be stamped in his face.

Nur. Aaron, what shall I say unto the empress ?

* Spit.
‡ Hercules.

† A giant, the son of Titan and Terra.
‡ In spite of.
§ Complexion.
|| Ignominy.

Dem. Advise thee, Aaron, what is to be done,
And we will all subscribe to thy advice :
Save thou the child, so we may all be safe.

Aar. Then sit we down, and let us all consult.

My son and I will have the wind of you :
Keep there : Now talk at pleasure of your safety.
[They sit on the Ground.]

Dem. How many women saw this child of his ?

Aar. Why, so, brave lords : When we all join in league,

I am a lamb : but if you brave the Moor,
The chafed boar, the mountain lioness,
The ocean swells not so as Aaron storms.—
But, say again, how many saw the child ?

Nur. Cornelia the midwife, and myself,
And no one else, but the delivered empress.

Aar. The empress, the midwife, and yourself :
Two may keep counsel, when the third's away :
Go to the empress ; tell her, this I said :—

[Stabbing her.]

Weke, weke !—so cries a pig prepar'd to the spit.

Dem. What mean'st thou, Aaron ? Wherefore didst thou this ?

Aar. O lord, Sir, 'tis a deed of policy :
Shall she live to betray this guilt of ours ?
A long-tongu'd babbling gossip ? no, lords, no.
And now be it known to you my full intent.
Not far, one Muliteus lives, my countryman,
His wife but yesternight was brought to bed,
His child is like to her, fair as you are :
Go pack * with him, and give the mother gold,
And tell them both the circumstance of all ;
And how by this their child shall be advanc'd
And be received for the emperor's heir,
And substituted in the place of mine,
To calm this tempest whirling in the court ;
And let the emperor dandle him for his own,
Mark ye, lords, ye see, that I have given her physic, [Pointing to the Nurse.

And you must needs bestow her funeral ;
The fields are near and you are gallant grooms :
This done, see that you take no longer days,
But send the midwife presently to me.
The midwife, and the nurse, well made away,
Then let the ladies tattle what they please.

Chi. Aaron, I see, thou wilt not trust the air
With secrets.

Dem. For this care of Tamora,
Herself, and her's, are highly bound to thee.

[Exeunt DEM. and CHI. bearing off the Nurse.]

Aar. Now to the Goths, as swift as swallow
flies ;

There to dispose this treasure in mine arms,
And secretly to greet the empress' friends.—
Come on, you thick-lipp'd slave, I'll bear you
hence ;

For it is you that puts us to our shifts :
I'll make you feed on berries, and on roots,
And feed on curds and whey, and suck the goat,
And cabin in a cave ; and bring you up
To be a warrior, and command a camp. [Exit.]

SCENE III.—The same.—A Public Place.

Enter TITUS, bearing arrows, with letters at the ends of them ; with him MARCUS, young LUCIUS, and other Gentlemen with bows.

Tit. Come, Marcus, come ; Kinsmen, this is the way :—

Sir boy, now let me see your archery :
Look ye draw home enough, and 'tis there straight :
Terras Astræa reliquit :
Be you remember'd, Marcus, she's gone, she's fled.

Sir, take you to your tools. You, cousins, shall Go sound the ocean, and cast your nets ;
Happily you may find her in the sea ;
Yet there's as little justice as at land :—
No : Publius and Sempronius, you must do it ;
'Tis you must dig with mattock, and with spade,

And pierce the inmost centre of the earth :
Then, when you come to Pluto's region,
I pray you, deliver him this petition :
Tell him, it is for justice and for aid,
And that it comes from old Andronicus,
Shaken with sorrows in ungrateful Rome.—
Ah ! Rome !—Well, well ; I made thee miserable
What time I threw the people's suffrages
On him that thus doth tyrannise o'er me.—
Go, get you gone ; and pray be careful all,
And leave you not a man of war unsearch'd ;
This wicked emperor may have shipp'd her hence,
And, kinsmen, then we may go pipe for justice.

Mar. O Publius, is not this a heavy case,
To see thy noble uncle thus distract ?

Pub. Therefore, my lord, it highly us concerns,

By day and night to attend him carefully ;
And feed his humour kindly as we may,
Till time beget some careful remedy.

Mar. Kinsmen, his sorrows are past remedy.
Join with the Goths ; and with revengeful war
Take wreak on Rome for this ingratitude,
And vengeance on the traitor Saturnine.

Tit. Publius, how now ? how now, my masters ! What,

Have you met with her ?

Pub. No, my good lord ; but Pluto sends you word,

If you will have revenge from hell, you shall :
Marry, for Justice, she is so employ'd, [else,
He thinks, with Jove in heaven, or somewhere
So that perforce you must needs stay a time.

Tit. He doth me wrong, to feed me with de-
I'll dive into the burning lake below, [lays.

And pull her out of Acheron by the heels.—
Marcus, we are but shrubs, no cedars we ;
No big-bon'd men, fram'd of the Cyclop's size :
But metal, Marcus, steel to the very back ;
Yet wrung * with wrongs, more than our backs
can bear :

And sith † there is no justice in earth nor hell,
We will solicit heaven ; and move the gods
To send down justice for to wreak ‡ our wrongs :
Come, to this gear. § You are a good archer,

Marcus. [He gives them the arrows.
Ad Jovem, that's for you :—Here, ad Apollin-

Ad Martem, that's for myself ;— [new :—
Here, boy, to Pallas : Here, to Mercury :

To Saturn, Caius, not to Saturnine,—
You were as good to shoot against the wind.—

To it, boy. Marcus, loose when I bid ;
O' my word, I have written to effect ;
There's not a god left unsolicited.

Mar. Kinsmen, shoot all your shafts into the court :

We will afflict the emperor in his pride.

Tit. Now, masters, draw. [They shoot.] O,
well said, Lucius !

Good boy, in Virgo's lap ; give it Pallas.

Mar. My lord, I aim a mile beyond the moon ;
Your letter is with Jupiter by this.

Tit. Ha ! Publius, Publius what hast thou
done !

See, see, thou hast shot off one of Taurus' horns,

Mar. This was the sport, my lord : when Publius shot,

The bull being gall'd, gave Aries such a knock That down fell both the ram's horns in the court ; [villain !

And who should find them but the empress' ?
She laugh'd, and told the Moor, he should not choose

But give them to his master for a present.

Tit. Why, there it goes : God give your lordship joy.

Enter a CLOWN, with a basket and two pigeons.
News, news from heaven ! Marcus, the post is
come.

Sirrah, what tidings ? have you any letters ?
Shall I have justice ? what says Jupiter ?

* Strained.

† Since.

‡ Revenge

§ Dress, furniture

* Bargain with.

Clo. Ho! the gibbet-maker? he says that he hath taken them down again, for the man must not be hanged till the next week.

Tit. But what says Jupiter, I ask thee?

Clo. Alas, Sir, I know not Jupiter; I never drank with him in all my life.

Tit. Why, villain, art not thou the carrier?

Clo. Ay, of my pigeons, Sir; nothing else.

Tit. Why, didst thou not come from heaven?

Clo. From heaven? alas, Sir, I never came there: God forbid I should be so bold to press to heaven in my young days. Why, I am going with my pigeons to the tribunal plebs,* to take up a matter of brawl betwixt my uncle and one of the imperial's men.

Mar. Why, Sir, that is as fit as can be, to serve for your oration; and let him deliver the pigeons to the emperor from you.

Tit. Tell me, can you deliver an oration to the emperor with a grace?

Clo. Nay, truly, Sir, I could never say grace in all my life.

Tit. Sirrah, come hither: make no more ado, but give your pigeons to the emperor:

By me thou shalt have justice at his hands.

Hold, hold—mean while, here's money for thy charges.

Give me a pen and ink.—

Sirrah, can you with a grace deliver a supplica-

Clo. Ay, Sir.

Tit. Then here is a supplication for you. And when you come to him, at the first approach, you must kneel; then kiss his foot; then deliver up your pigeons; and then look for your reward; I'll be at hand, Sir: see you do it bravely.

Clo. I warrant you, Sir; let me alone.

Tit. Sirrah, hast thou a knife? Come, let me Here, Marcus, fold it in the oration; [sees it.] For thou hast made it like an humble suppliant:—

And when thou hast given it to the emperor, Knock at my door, and tell me what he says.

Clo. God be with you, Sir; I will.

Tit. Come, Marcus, let's go:—Publius, follow me. [Exeunt.]

SCENE IV.—The same.—Before the Palace.

Enter SATURNINUS, TAMORA, CHIRON, DEMETRIUS, LORDS, and others: SATURNINUS with the arrows in his hand, that TITUS shot.

Sat. Why, lords, what wrongs are these? Was ever seen

An emperor of Rome thus overborne, Troubled, confronted thus: and, for the extent Of equal justice, us'd in such contempt? My lords, you know, as do the mighty gods, However these disturbers of our peace But in the people's ears, there nought hath pass'd,

But even with law, against the wilful sons Of old Andronicus. And what an if His sorrows have so overwhelm'd his wits, Shall we be thus afflicted in his wrecks, His fits, his frenzy, and his bitterness? And now he writes to heaven for his redress: See, here's to Jove, and this to Mercury; This to Apollo; this to the god of war: Sweet scrolls to fly about the streets of Rome! What's this, but libelling against the senate, And blazoning our injustice every where? A goodly humour, is it not, my lords? As who would say, in Rome no justice were. But, if I live, his feigned ecstasies Shall be no shelter to these outrages: But he and his shall know that justice lives In Saturninus' health; whom, if she sleep, He'll so awake, as she in fury shall Cut off the proud'st conspirator that lives.

Tam. My gracious lord, my lovely Saturnine, Lord of my life, commander of my thoughts, Calm thee, and bear the faults of Titus' age,

The effects of sorrow for his valliant sons, Whose loss hath pierc'd him deep, and scar'd his heart;

And rather comfort his distressed plight, Than prosecute the meanest, or the best, For these contempts. Why, thus it shall become High-witted Tamora to gloze* with all:

[Aside.]

But, Titus, I have touch'd thee to the quick, Thy life-blood out: If Aaron now be wise, Then is all safe, the anchor's in the port.—

Enter CLOWN.

How now, good fellow? would'st thou speak with us?

Clo. Yes, forsooth, an your mistership be imperial.

Tam. Empress I am, but yonder sits the emperor.

Clo. 'Tis he.—God and saint Stephen give you good den:—I have brought you a letter, and a couple of pigeons here.

[SATURNINUS reads the Letter.]

Sat. Go, take him away, and hang him presently.

Clo. How much money must I have?

Tam. Come, Sirrah, you must be hang'd.

Clo. Hang'd! by'r lady, then I have brought up a neck to a fair end. [Exit guarded]

Sat. Despiteful and intolerable wrongs!

Shall I endure this monstrous villany?

I know from whence this same device proceeds: May this be borne?—as if his traitorous sons, That died by law for murder of our brother, Have by my means been butcher'd wrongfully.—Go, drag the villain hither by the hair; Nor age, nor honour, shall shape privilege:—For this proud mock, I'll be thy slaughterman; Sly frantic wretch, that holp'st to make me great, In hope thyself should govern Rome and me.

Enter EMILIUS.

What news with thee, Emilius?

Emil. Arm, arm, my lord; Rome never had more cause!

The Goths have gather'd head; and with a power Of high-resolved men, bent to the spoil, They hither march again, under the conduct Of Lucius, son to old Andronicus; Who threats, in course of this revenge, to do As much as ever Coriolanus did.

Sat. Is warlike Lucius general of the Goths? These tidings nip me; and I hang the head As flowers with frost, or grass beat down with storms.

Ay, now begin our sorrows to approach: 'Tis he the common people love so much; Myself hath often over-heard them say, (When I have walked like a private man,) That Lucius' banishment was wrongfully, And they have wish'd that Lucius were their emperor.

Tam. Why should you fear? Is not your city strong?

Sat. Ay, but the citizens favour Lucius; And will revolt from me, to succour him.

Tam. King, be thy thoughts imperious, † like thy name.

Is the sun dimm'd, that gnats do fly in it? The eagle suffers little birds to sing, And is not careful what they mean thereby; Knowing that with the shadow of his wings, He can at pleasure stint ‡ their melody: Even so may'st thou the giddy men of Rome. Then cheer thy spirit: for know thou, emperor, I will enchant the old Andronicus With words more sweet, and yet more dangerous, Than baits to fish, or honey-stalks § to sheep; When as the one is wounded with the bait, The other rotted with delicious feed.

Sat. But he will not entreat his son for us.

Tam. If Tamora entreat him, then he will:

* The Clown means to say plebeian tribune, i. e. tribune of the people.
† Equal.

* Flatter

† Imperial.

‡ Stop.

§ Clover-flowers.

For I can smooth, and fill his aged ear
With golden promises; that were his heart
Almost impregnable, his old ears deaf,
Yet should both ear and heart obey my tongue.—
Go thou before, be our ambassador;

[To ÆMILIUS.]

Say, that the emperor requests a parley
Of warlike Lucius, and appoint the meeting
Even at his father's house, the old Andronicus'.

Sat. Æmilius, do this message honourably:
And if he stand on hostage for his safety,
Bid him demand what pledge will please him best.

Æmil. Your bidding shall I do effectually.

[Exit ÆMILIUS.]

Tam. Now will I to that old Andronicus;
And temper him, with all the art I have,
To pluck proud Lucius from the warlike Goths.
And now, sweet emperor, be blithe again,
And bury all thy fear in my devices.

Sat. Then go successfully, and plead to him.

[Exeunt.]

ACT V.

SCENE I.—Plains near Rome.

Enter LUCIUS and GOTHs, with drum and colours.

Luc. Approved warriors, and my faithful friends,
I have received letters from great Rome,
Which signify, what hate they bear their em-
And how desirous of our sight they are. [peror,
Therefore, great lords, be, as your titles witness,
Imperious, and impatient of your wrongs;
And, wherein Rome hath done you any scath,*
Let him make treble satisfaction.

1 Goth. Brave slip, sprung from the great An-dronicus, [fort,
Whose name was once our terror, now our com-
Whose high exploits, and honourable deeds,
Ingrateful Rome requites with foul contempt,
Be bold in us: we'll follow where thou lead'st,—
Like stinging bees in hottest summer's day,
Led by their master to the flower'd fields,—
And be aveng'd on cursed Tamora.

Goths. And, as he saith, so say we all with him.

Luc. I humbly thank him, and I thank you all.

But who comes here, led by a lusty Goth?

Enter a GOTH, leading AARON, with his child in his arms.

2 Goth. Renowned Lucius, from our troops I stray'd,
To gaze upon a ruinous monastery;
And as I earnestly did fix mine eye
Upon the wasted building, suddenly
I heard a child cry underneath a wall:
I made unto the noise; when soon I heard
The crying babe controll'd with this discourse:
Peace, tawny slave; half me, and half thy dam!

*Did not thy hue betray whose brat thou art,
Had nature lent thee but thy mother's look,
Villain, thou might'st have been an emperor:
But where the bull and cow are both milk-
white,*

*They never do beget a coal-black calf.
Peace, villain, peace!—even thus he rates the babe,—*

*For I must bear thee to a trusty Goth;
Who, when he knows thou art the empress'
babe,*

*Will hold thee dearly for thy mother's sake.
With this my weapon drawn, I rush'd upon him,
Surpris'd him suddenly, and brought him hi-
ther,*

To see as you think needful of the man.

Luc. O worthy Goth! this is the incarnate devil

That robb'd Andronicus of his good hand:
This is the pearl that pleas'd your empress' eye;†

And here's the base fruit of his burning lust.—
Say, wall-ey'd slave, whither would'st thou convey

This growing image of thy fiend-like face?
Why dost not speak? What! deaf? No; not a word?

A halter, soldiers; hang him on this tree,
And by his side his fruit of bastardy.

Aar. Touch not the boy, he is of royal blood.

Luc. Too like the sire for ever being good.—
First hang the child, that he may see it sprawl
A sight to vex the father's soul withal.
Get me a ladder.

[A ladder brought, which AARON is obliged to ascend.]

Aar. Lucius, save the child;
And bear it from me to the empress.
If thou do this, I'll show thee wondrous things,
That highly may advantage thee to hear:
If thou wilt not, befall what may befall,
I'll speak no more—But vengeance rot you all!

Luc. Say on; and, if it please me which thou
speak'st,

Thy child shall live, and I will see it nourish'd.

Aar. An if it please thee? why, assure thee
Lucius,

'Twill vex thy soul to hear what I shall speak;
For I must talk of murders, rapes, and massacres,

Acts of black night, abominable deeds,
Complots of mischief, treason; villainies
Ruthful to hear, yet piteously perform'd;
And this shall all be buried by my death,
Unless thou swear to me, my child shall live.

Luc. Tell on thy mind: I say, thy child shall live.

Aar. Swear that he shall, and then I will begin.

Luc. Who should I swear by? thou believ'st
no god:

That granted, how canst thou believe an oath?

Aar. What if I do not? as indeed, I do not:
Yet,—for I know thou art religious,
And hast a thing within thee, called conscience,
With twenty popish tricks and ceremonies,
Which I have seen thee careful to observe,—

Therefore I urge thy oath;—For that, I know,
An idiot holds his bauble for a god,
And keeps the oath, which by that god he swears;
To that I'll urge him:—Therefore, thou shalt vow

By that same god, what god soe'er it be,
That thou ador'st and hast in reverence,—
To save my boy, to nourish, and bring him up;
Or else I will discover nought to thee.

Luc. Even by my god, I swear to thee, I will.

Aar. First, know thou, I begot him on the empress.

Luc. O most insatiate, luxurious† woman!

Aar. Tut, Lucius! this was but a deed of charity,

To that which thou shalt hear of me anon.

'Twas her two sons that murder'd Bassianus:
They cut thy sister's tongue and ravish'd her,
And cut her hands, and trimm'd her as thou saw'st.

Luc. O detestable villain! call'st thou that trimming?

Aar. Why, she was wash'd, and cut, and trimm'd; and 'twas

Trim sport for them that had the doing of it.

Luc. O barbarous, beastly villains, like thyself!

Aar. Indeed, I was their tutor to instruct
them;

That coddling spirit had they from their mother,
As sure a card as ever won the set:

* Harm.

† Alluding to the proverb, "A black man is a pearl in a fair woman's eye." † Lascivious.

That bloody mind, I think, they learn'd of me,
As true a dog as ever fought at head.—
Well, let my deeds be witness of my worth.
I train'd thy brethren to that guileful hole,
Where the dead corpse of Bassianus lay :
I wrote the letter that thy father found,
And hid the gold within the letter mention'd,
Confederate with the queen, and her two sons ;
And what not done, that thou hast cause to rue,
Wherein I had no stroke of mischief in it ?
I play'd the cheater for thy father's hand ;
And, when I had it, drew myself apart,
And almost broke my heart with extreme laughter.

I pry'd me through the crevice of a wall,
When, for his hand, he had his two sons' heads ;
Beheld his tears, and laugh'd so heartily,
That both mine eyes were rainy like to his ;
And when I told the empress of this sport,
She swooned almost at my pleasing tale,
And, for my tidings, gave me twenty kisses.

Goth. What ! canst thou say all this, and never blush ?

Aar. Ay, like a black dog, as the saying is.

Luc. Art thou not sorry for these heinous deeds ?

Aar. Ay, that I had not done a thousand more.
Even now I curse the day, (and yet I think Few come within the compass of my curse,)
Wherein I did not some notorious ill :
As kill a man, or else devise his death ;
Ravish a maid, or plot the way to do it ;
Accuse some innocent, and forswear myself ;
Set deadly enmity between two friends ;
Make poor men's cattle break their necks ;
Set fire on barns and hay-stacks in the night,
And bid the owners quench them with their tears.
Oft have I digg'd up dead men from their graves,
And set them upright at their dear friends' doors,
Even when their sorrows almost were forgot ;
And on their skins, as on the bark of trees,
Have with my knife carved in Roman letters,
Let not your sorrow die, though I am dead.
Tut, I have done a thousand dreadful things,
As willingly as one would kill a fly ;
And nothing grieves me heartily indeed,
But that I cannot do ten thousand more.

Luc. Bring down the devil ; for he must not die

So sweet a death as hanging presently.

Aar. If there be devils, 'would I were a devil,
To live and burn in everlasting fire ;
So I might have your company in hell,
But to torment you with my bitter tongue !

Luc. Sirs, stop his mouth, and let him speak no more.

Enter a GOTH.

Goth. My lord, there is a messenger from Rome,
Desires to be admitted to your presence.

Luc. Let him come near.—

Enter ÆMILIUS.

Welcome Æmilias, what's the news from Rome ?

Æmil. Lord Lucius, and you princes of the Goths,

The Roman emperor greets you all by me :
And, for he understands you are in arms,
He craves a parley at your father's house,
Willing you to demand your hostages,
And they shall be immediately deliver'd.

I Goth. What says our general ?

Luc. Æmilias, let the emperor give his pledges,
Unto my father and my uncle Marcus,
And we will come.—March away.* [Exeunt.]

SCENE II.—Rome.—Before TITUS' House.

Enter TAMORA, CHIRON, and DEMETRIUS, disguised.

Tam. Thus, in this strange and sad habiliment,
I will encounter with Andronicus ;

* Perhaps this is a stage direction, crept into the text.

And say, I am Revenge, sent from below,
To join with him, and right his heinous wrongs.
Knock at his study, where, they say, he keeps,
To ruminate strange plots of dire revenge ;
Tell him, Revenge is come to join with him,
And work confusion on his enemies.

[They knock.]

Enter TITUS, above.

Tit. Who deth molest my contemplation ?
Is it your trick to make me ope the door ;
That so my sad decrees may fly away,
And all my study be to no effect ?
You are deceiv'd : for what I mean to do,
See here, in bloody lines I have set down ;
And what is written shall be executed.

Tam. Titus, I am come to talk with thee.

Tit. No ; not a word : How can I grace my Wanting a hand to give it action ? [talk,
Thou hast the odds of me, therefore no more.

Tam. If thou didst know me, thou would'st talk with me.

Tit. I am not mad ; I know thee well enough :
Witness this wretched stump, these crimson lines ;
Witness these trenches, made by grief and care ;
Witness the tiring day, and heavy night ;
Witness all sorrow, that I know thee well
For our proud empress, mighty Tamora :
Is not thy coming for my other hand ?

Tam. Know thou, sad man, I am not Tamora ;
She is thy enemy, and I thy friend : [moans ;
I am Revenge, sent from the infernal kingdom,
To ease the gnawing vulture of thy mind,
By working wreakful vengeance on thy foes.
Come down, and welcome me to this world's light :

Confer with me of murder and of death,
There's not a hollow cave, or lurking-place ;
No vast obscurity, or misty vale,
Where bloody murder, or detested rape,
Can couch for fear, but I will find them out ;
And in their ears tell them my dreadful name,
Revenge, which makes the soul offender quake.

Tit. Art thou Revenge ? and art thou sent to
To be a torment to mine enemies ? [me,

Tam. I am : therefore come down, and welcome me.

Tit. Do me some service, ere I come to thee.
Lo, by thy side where Rape and Murder stand ;
Now give some 'surance that thou art Revenge :
Stab them, or tear them on thy chariot wheels ;
And then I'll come, and be thy waggoner,
And whirl along with thee about the globes.
Provide thee proper palfries, black as jet,
To hale thy vengeful waggon swift away,
And find out murderers in their guilty caves :
And, when thy car is loaden with their heads,
I will dismount, and by the waggon wheel
Trot, like a servile footman, all day long !
E'en from Hyperion's rising in the east,
Until his very downfall in the sea.
And day by day I'll do this heavy task,
So thou destroy Rapine and Murder there.

Tam. These are my ministers, and come with me.

Tit. Are they thy ministers ? what are they call'd ?

Tam. Rapine and Murder ; therefore called so,
'Cause they take vengeance of such kind of men.

Tit. Good lord, how like the empress' sons they are !

And you the empress ! But we worldly men
Have miserable, mad, mistaking eyes.
O sweet Revenge, now do I come to thee :
And, if one arm's embracement will content thee,
I will embrace thee in it by and by.

[Exit TITUS from above.]

Tam. This closing with him fits his lunacy :
What'er I forge, to feed his brain-sick fits,
Do you uphold and maintain in your speeches.
For now he firmly takes me for Revenge ;
And being credulous in this mad thought,
I'll make him send for Lucius, his son ;
And, whilst I at a banquet hold him sure,
I'll find some cunning practice out of hand,

To scatter and disperse the giddy Goths,
Or, at the least, make them his enemies.
See, here he comes, and I must ply my theme.

Enter TITUS.

Tit. Long have I been forlorn, and all for thee:
Welcome, dread fury, to my woful house;—
Rapine, and Murder, you are welcome too:—
How like the empress and her sons you are!
Well are you fitted, had you but a Moor;—
Could not all hell afford you such a devil?—
For, well I wot, the empress never wags,
But in her company there is a Moor;
And, would you represent our queen aright,
It were convenient you had such a devil:
But welcome, as you are. What shall we do?

Tam. What would'st thou have us do, Andronicus?

Dem. Show me a murderer, I'll deal with him.

Chi. Show me a villain, that hath done a rape.
And I am sent to be reveng'd on him.

Tam. Show me a thousand that hath done
And I will be revenged on them all. [thee wrong,

Tit. Look round about the wicked streets of Rome,

And when thou find'st a man that's like thyself,
Good Murder, stab him: he's a murderer.—
Go thou with him; and when it is thy hap,
To find another that is like to thee,
Good Rapine, stab him! he is a ravisher.—
Go thou with them! and, in the emperor's court,
There is a queen, attended by a Moor;
Well may'st thou know her by thy own proportion,

For up and down she doth resemble thee:
I pray thee, do on them some violent death,
They have been violent to me and mine.

Tam. Well hast thou lesson'd us; this shall we do.

But would it please thee, good Andronicus,
To send for Lucius, thy thrice valiant son,
Who leads towards Rome a band of warlike Goths,
And bid him come and banquet at thy house:
When he is here, even at thy solemn feast,
I will bring in the empress and her sons,
The emperor himself, and all thy foes,
And at thy mercy shall they stoop and kneel,
And on them shalt thou ease thy angry heart.
What says Andronicus to this device?

Tit. Marcus, my brother!—'tis sad Titus calls.

Enter MARCUS.

Go, gentle Marcus, to thy nephew Lucius!
Thou shalt inquire him out among the Goths:
Bid him repair to me, and bring with him
Some of the chiefest princes of the Goths:
Bid him encamp his soldiers where they are:
Tell him, the emperor and the empress too
Feast at my house: and he shall feast with them.
This do thou for my love; and so let him,
As he regards his aged father's life.

Marc. This will I do, and soon return again.

[Exit.

Tam. Now will I hence about thy business,
And take my ministers along with me.

Tit. Nay, nay, let Rape and Murder stay with
Or else I'll call my brother back again, [me;
And cleave to no revenge but Lucius.

Tam. What say you, boys? will you abide Whiles I go tell my lord the emperor, [with him,
How I have govern'd our determin'd jest?
Yield to his humour, smooth and speak him fair,

[Aside.

And tarry with him, till I come again.

Tit. I know them all, though they suppose me mad,
And will o'er-reach them in their own devices;
A pair of cursed hell-hounds, and their dam.

[Aside.

Dem. Madam, depart at pleasure, leave us here.

Tam. Farewell, Andronicus: Revenge now goes
To lay a complot to betray thy foes.

[Exit TAMORA.

Tit. I know thou dost; and, sweet Revenge,
farewell.

Chi. Tell us, old man, how shall we be employ'd.

Tit. Tut, I have work enough for you to do.—
Publius, come hither, Calus, and Valentine!

Enter PUBLIUS, and others.

Pub. What's your will?

Tit. Know you these two?

Pub. Th' empress' sons,
I take them, Chiron and Demetrius.

Tit. Fie, Publius, fie! thou art too much deceiv'd;

The one is Murder, Rape is the other's name:
And therefore bind them, gentle Publius;
Calus and Valentine, lay hands on them:
Oft have you heard me wish for such an hour,
And now I find it: therefore bind them sure;
And stop their mouths, if they begin to cry.

[Exit TITUS.—PUBLIUS, &c. lay hold on CHIRON and DEMETRIUS.

Chi. Villains, forbear: we are the empress' sons.

Pub. And therefore do we what we are commanded.— [word:

Stop close their mouths, let them not speak a
Is he sure bound? look that you bind them fast.

*Re-enter TITUS ANDRONICUS, with LAVINIA;
she bearing a basin, and he a knife.*

Tit. Come, come, Lavinia! look, thy foes are bound;

Sirs, stop their mouths, let them not speak to me;
But let them hear what fearful words I utter.—
O villains, Chiron and Demetrius!

Here stands the spring whom you have stain'd with mud;

This goodly summer with your winter mix'd.
You kill'd her husband; and, for that vile fault,
Two of her brothers were condemn'd to death;
My hand cut off, and made a merry jest;
Both her sweet hands, her tongue, and that,
more dear

Than hands or tongue, her spotless chastity,
Inhuman traitors, you constrain'd and forc'd.
What would you say, if I should let you speak?
Villains, for shame you could not beg for grace.
Hark, wretches, how I mean to martyr you.
This one hand yet is left to cut your throats;
Whilst that Lavinia 'tween her stumps doth hold
The basin that receives your guilty blood.

You know your mother means to feast with me,
And calls herself Revenge, and thinks me mad,—
Hark, villains; I will grind your bones to dust,
And with your blood and it, I'll make a paste;
And of the paste a coffin* I will rear,
And make two pasties of your shameful heads;
And bid that strumpet, your unhallow'd dam,
Like to the earth, swallow her own increase.

This is the feast that I have bid her to,
And this the banquet she shall surfeit on;
For worse than Philomel you us'd my daughter,
And worse than Progne I will be reveng'd:
And now prepare your throats,—Lavinia, come,

[He cuts their Throats.

Receive the blood, and, when that they are dead,
Let me go grind their bones to powder small,
And with this hateful liquor temper it;
And in this paste let their vile heads be bak'd.

Come, come, be every one officious
To make this banquet; which I wish may prove
More stern and bloody than the Centaur's feast.
So, now bring them in, for I will play the cook,
And see them ready 'gainst their mother cooks.

[Exeunt, bearing the dead bodies.

SCENE III.—The same.—A Pavilion, with Tables, &c.

Enter LUCIUS, MARCUS, and GOTHs, with AARON, prisoner.

Luc. Uncle Marcus, since 'tis my father's mind
That I repair to Rome, I am content.

* Crust of a raised pye.

I Goth. And our's, with thine, befall what fortune will.

Luc. Good uncle take you in this barbarous Moor,

This ravenous tiger, this accursed devil ;
Let him receive no sustenance, fetter him,
Till he be brought unto the empress' face,
For testimony of her foul proceedings :
And see the ambush of our friends be strong :
I fear the emperor means no good to us.

Aar. Some devil whisper curses in mine ear.
And prompt me, that my tongue may utter forth
The venomous malice of my swelling heart !

Luc. Away, inhuman dog ! unhallow'd slave !—
Sirs, help our uncle to convey him in.—

[Exeunt GOTHs, with AARON. Flourish.
The trumpets show, the emperor is at hand.

Enter SATURNINUS and TAMORA, with Tribunes, Senators, and others.

Sat. What, hath the firmament more suns than one ?

Luc. What boots * it thee, to call thyself a sun ?

Mar. Rome's emperor, and nephew, break † the parle ;

These quarrels must be quietly debated.
The feast is ready which the careful Titus
Hath ordain'd to an honourable end,
For peace, for love, for league, and good to Rome :

Please you, therefore, draw nigh, and take your places.

Sat. Marcus, we will.

[Hautboys sound. The Company sit down at table.

Enter TITUS, dressed like a cook, LAVINIA, veiled, young LUCIUS, and others. TITUS places the dishes on the table.

Tit. Welcome, my gracious lord : welcome, dread queen :

Welcome, ye warlike Goths : welcome, Lucius :
And welcome, all : although the cheer be poor,
'Twill fill your stomachs ; please you eat of it.

Sat. Why art thou thus attir'd, Andronicus ?

Tit. Because I would be sure to have all well,
To entertain your highness and your empress.

Tam. We are beholden to you, good Andronicus.

Tit. An if your highness knew my heart, you were.

My lord the emperor, resolve me this ;
Was it well done of rash Virginus,
To slay his daughter with his own right hand,
Because she was enforc'd, stain'd, and deflower'd ?

Sat. It was, Andronicus.

Tit. Your reason, mighty lord !

Sat. Because the girl should not survive her shame,

And by her presence still renew his sorrows.

Tit. A reason mighty, strong, and effectual ;
A pattern, precedent, and lively warrant,
For me, most wretched to perform the like :—
Die, die, Lavinia, and thy shame with thee ;

[He kills LAVINIA.
And, with thy shame, thy father's sorrow die !

Sat. What hast thou done, unnatural, and unkind ?

Tit. Kill'd her, for whom my tears have made
I am as woful as Virginus was : [me blind.
And have a thousand times more cause than he
To do this outrage ; and it is now done.

Sat. What, was she ravish'd ? tell, who did the deed.

Tit. Will't please you eat ? will't please your highness feed ?

Tam. Why hast thou slain thine only daughter thus ?

Tit. Not I, 'twas Chiron and Demetrius :
They ravish'd her, and cut away her tongue,
And they, 'twas they, that did her all this wrong.

Sat. Go, fetch them hither to us presently.

Tit. Why, there they are both baked in that pye,

Whereof their mother daintily hath fed,
Eating the flesh that she herself hath bred.

'Tis true, 'tis true ; witness my knife's sharp point. [Killing TAMORA.

Sat. Die, frantic wretch, for this accursed deed. [Killing TITUS.

Luc. Can the son's eye behold his father bleed ?

There's need for meed, death for a deadly deed.

[Kills SATURNINUS. A great tumult. The People in confusion disperse. MARCUS, LUCIUS, and their Partisans, ascend the steps before TITUS' house.

Mar. You sad-fac'd men, people and sons of Rome,

By uproar sever'd, like a flight of fowl
Scatter'd by winds and high tempestuous gusts,
O let me teach you how to knit again

This scatter'd corn into one mutual sheaf,
These broken limbs again into one body.

Sen. Lest Rome herself be bane unto her-
self :

And she, whom mighty kingdoms cur'sy to,
Like a forlorn and desperate cast-away,

Do shameful execution on herself.

But if my frosty signs and chaps of age,

Grave witnesses of true experience,

Cannot induce you to attend my words,—

Speak, Rome's dear friend ; [To LUCIUS.] as erst
our ancestor,

When with his solemn tongue he did discourse

To love-sick Dido's sad attending ear,

The story of that baleful burning night,

When subtle Greeks surpris'd king Priam's
Troy ;

Tell us, what Sinon hath bewitch'd our ears,

Or who hath brought the fatal engine in,

That gives our Troy, our Rome, the civil
wound.—

My heart is not compact of flint nor steel ;

Nor can I utter all our bitter grief,

But floods of tears will drown my oratory,

And break my very utterance : even i'the time

When it should move you to attend me most,

Lending your kind commiseration :

Here is a captain, let him tell the tale ;

Your hearts will throb and weep to hear him
speak.

Luc. Then, noble auditory, be it known to you,

That cursed Chiron and Demetrius

Were they that murdered our emperor's brother ;

And they it were that ravished our sister :

For their fell faults our brothers were beheaded ;

Our father's tears despis'd ; and * basely cozen'd

Of that true hand, that fought Rome's quarrel
out,

And sent her enemies unto the grave.

Lastly, myself unkindly banished,

The gates shut on me, and turn'd weeping out,

To beg relief among Rome's enemies ;

Who drown'd their enmity in my true tears,

And op'd their arms to embrace me as a friend :

And I am the turn'd-forth, be it known to you,

That have preserv'd her welfare in my blood ;

And from her bosom took the enemy's point,

Sheathing the steel in my advent'rous body.

Alas ; you know, I am no vaunter, I ;

My scars can witness, dumb although they are,

That my report is just, and full of truth.

But, soft : methinks I do digress too much,

Citing my worthless praise : O pardon me ;

For when no friends are by, men praise themselves.

Mar. Now is my turn to speak : Behold this child,

[Pointing to the child in the arms of an attendant.

Of this was Tamora delivered ;

The issue of an irreligious Moor,

Chief architect and plotter of these woes ;

* Benefits.

† Begin the parley.

* Read he.

The villain is alive in Titus' house,
 Damn'd as he is, to witness this is true.
 Now judge, what cause had Titus to revenge
 These wrongs, unspeakable, past patience,
 Or more than any living man could bear.
 Now you have heard the truth, what say you,
 Romans?

Have we done aught amiss? Show us wherein,
 And, from the place where you behold us now,
 (The poor remainder of Andronici)

We'll hand in hand, all headlong cast us down,
 And on the ragged stones beat forth our brains,
 And make a mutual closure of our house.

Speak, Romans, speak; and, if you say we shall,

Lo, hand in hand, Lucius and I will fall.

Emil. Come, come, thou reverend man of
 Rome,

And bring our emperor gently in thy hand:

Lucius our emperor; for, well I know

The common voice do cry, it shall be so.

Rom. [Several speak.] Lucius, all hail;
 Rome's royal emperor!

Lucius, &c. descend.

Mar. Go, go into old Titus' sorrowful house;
 [To an Attendant.]

And hither hale that misbelieving Moor,
 To be adjudg'd some direful slaughtering death,
 As punishment for his most wicked life.

Rom. [Several speak.] Lucius, all hail;
 Rome's gracious governor!

Luc. Thanks, gentle Romans; May I govern
 so,

To heal Rome's harms, and wipe away her woe!
 But, gentle people, give me aim awhile,—

For nature puts me to a heavy task;—

'I aloof:—but, uncle, draw you near,

obsequious tears upon this trunk:—

this warm kiss on thy pale cold lips,

[Kisses Titus.]

These sorrowful drops upon thy blood-stain'd
 face,

The last true duties of thy noble son!

Mar. Tear for tear, and loving kiss for kiss,

Thy brother Marcus tenders on thy lips:

Oh! were the sum of these that I should pay

Countless and infinite, yet would I pay them!

Luc. Come hither, boy; come, come, and learn of us

To melt in showers: Thy grandsire lov'd thee
 well:

Many a time he danc'd thee on his knee,
 Sung thee asleep, his loving breast thy pillow;
 Many a matter hath he told to thee,
 Meet, and agreeing with thine infancy;
 In that respect then, like a loving child,
 Shed yet some small drops from thy tender
 spring,

Because kind nature doth require it so: [woe:
 Friends should associate friends in grief and
 Bid him farewell; commit him to the grave;
 Do him that kindness, and take leave of him.

Boy. O grandsire, grandsire! even with all my heart

Would I were dead, so you did live again!—

O lord, I cannot speak to him for weeping;

My tears will choke me, if I ope my mouth.

Enter Attendants, with AARON.

I Rom. You sad Andronici, have done with woes;

Give sentence on this execrable wretch,
 That hath been breeder of these dire events.

Luc. Set him breast-deep in earth, and famish him;

There let him stand, and rave and cry for food;
 If any one relieves or pities him,

For the offence he dies. This is our doom:

Some stay, to see him fasten'd in the ear.

Aar. Oh! why should wrath be mute, and fury dumb?

I am no baby, I that, with base prayers,

I should repent the evils I have done:

Ten thousand worse than ever yet I did

Would I perform, if I might have my will;

If one good deed in all my life I did,

I do repent it from my very soul.

Luc. Some loving friends convey the emperor
 hence,

And give him burial in his father's grave:

My father, and Lavinia, shall forthwith

Be closed in our household's monument

As for that heinous tiger, Tamora,

No funeral rite, nor man in mournful weeds,

No mournful bell shall ring her burial;

But throw her forth to beasts and birds of prey.

Her life was beast-like, and devoid of pity;

And, being so, shall have like want of pity.

See justice done to Aaron, that damn'd Moor,

By whom our heavy haps had their beginning:

Then, afterwards, to order well the state;

That like events may ne'er it ruin.

[Exeunt.]

Troilus and Cressida.

Troilus. Instance, O instance! strong as heaven itself!
The bonds of heaven are slipp'd, dissolv'd, and loos'd!

Doth lesser blanch at sufferance than I do.

With the rude brevity and discharge of one.

TROILUS AND CRESSIDA.

LITERARY AND HISTORICAL NOTICE.

THIS tragedy was written about the year 1602, and Shakespeare is supposed to have taken the greatest part of its materials from the Troie Boke of Lydgate, an author who derived many of his particulars from a History of Troy, in Latin, by Guido of Columpna. Chaucer had previously celebrated the loves of Troilus and Cressida, in a translation from a Latin poem of one Lollius, an old Lombard author. The characters in this play (which was not originally divided into acts) are strikingly assimilated to the portraits which history has preserved of them—the aged loquacity of Nestor—the insinuating eloquence of Ulysses—the boasting confidence of Ajax—the cullen self-importance of Achilles—the conscious dignity of Agamemnon, and the sneaking insignificance of the cuckold Menelaus, are excellently displayed in the development of the piece; whilst the scurrile malignity of Thersites most humorously and ingeniously advances its interest throughout. The mode of Hector's death is, however, at variance with historical record, and was probably accompanied with such baseness on the part of Achilles, to perfect the amiable attributes in which the poet chose to invest the character of his Trojan opponent. Troilus, the hero of the play, has little to recommend him beyond personal intrepidity, and the sincerity of a youthful attachment—some authors rank him among the elder of Priam's sons: others (and among them Virgil, who describes in the 1st book of the Æneid, line 474, the manner of his death by the hand of Achilles) call him the youngest. Anachronisms are of frequent occurrence in this play: such as Hector's citing Aristotle, and Ulysses alluding to the "bull-bearing Milo," who did not live till many years after the Trojan war. It must, nevertheless, be remembered, that the greater part of Shakespeare's library consisted of ancient romances; and nothing could be less correct than their computation of dates. The language of the piece is greatly tinged with the peculiarities of the age in which he lived; and although Dr. Johnson considers it more correctly written than many of its companions, he exempts it from any extent of view or elevation of fancy. "The vicious characters" (says that discriminating critic) "sometimes disgust, but cannot corrupt; for both Cressida and Pandarus are detested and condemned. The comic characters seem to have been the favourites of the writer: they are of the superficial kind, and exhibit more of manners than nature; but they are copiously filled, and powerfully impressed."

PROLOGUE.

IN Troy there lies the scene. From lakes of Greece.
 The princes orgulous,* their high blood chaf'd,
 Have to the port of Athens sent their ships,
 Fraught with the ministers and instruments
 Of cruel war: Sixty and nine, that wore
 Their crownets regal, from the Athenian bay
 Put forth toward Phrygia: and their vow is made,
 To ransack Troy; within whose strong immures
 The ravish'd Helen, Menelaus' queen,
 With wanton Paris sleeps: And that's the quarrel.
 To Tenedos they come;
 And the deep-drawing barks do there disgorge
 Their warlike fraughtage;† Now on Dardan plains
 The fresh and yet unbruised Greeks do pitch

Their brave pavilions: Priam's six-gated city,
 Dardan, and Tymbria, Ilios, Chetas, Trojan,
 And Antenorides, with massy staples,
 And corresponsive and fulfilling bolts,
 Sperr* up the sons of Troy.
 Now expectation, tickling skittish spirits,
 On one and other side, Trojan and Greek,
 Sets all on hazard:—And hither am I come
 A prologue arm'd,—but not in confidence
 Of author's pen, or actor's voice; but suited
 In like conditions as our argument,—
 To tell you, fair beholders, that our play Leaps o'er the vaunt† and firstlings of those broils,
 'Ginning in the middle; starting thence away
 To what may be digested in a play.
 Like, or find fault; do as your pleasures are;
 Now good, or bad, 'tis but the chance of war.

* Proud, disdainful

† Freight.

* Shut.

† Avau what went before.

ACT I.

SCENE I.—Troy.—Before PRIAM'S Palace.

Enter TROILUS arm'd, and PANDARUS.

Tro. Call here my varlet,* I'll unarm again :
Why should I war without the walls of Troy,
That find such cruel battle here within ?
Each Trojan that is master of his heart,
Let him to field : Triolus, alas ! hath none.

Pan. Will this geer ne'er be mended ?

Tro. The Greeks are strong, and skilful to their strength,
Pierce to their skill, and to their fierceness valiant ;

But I am weaker than a woman's tear,
Tamer than sleep, sonder† than ignorance ;
Less valiant than the virgin in the night,
And skillless as unpractis'd infancy.

Pan. Well, I have told you enough of this ;
for my part, I'll not meddle nor make no further.
He that will have a cake out of the wheat must tarry the grinding.

Tro. Have I not tarried ?

Pan. Ay, the grinding ; but you must tarry the bolting.

Tro. Have I not tarried ?

Pan. Ay, the bolting ; but you must tarry the leavening.

Tro. Still have I tarried.

Pan. Ay, to the leavening ; but here's yet, in the word, hereafter, the kneading, the making of the cake, (the heating of the oven, and the baking : nay, you must stay the cooling too, or you may chance to burn your lips.

Tro. Patience herself, (what goddess e'er she be)

Doth lesser blench‡ at sufferance than I do
At Priam's royal table do I sit,
And when fair Cressid comes into my thoughts,— So, traitor !—when she comes !—When is she thence ?

Pan. Well, she looked yesternight fairer than ever I saw her look, or any woman else.

Tro. I was about to tell thee,—When my
heart,
As wedged with a sigh, would rive § in twain,
Lest Hector or my father should perceive me,
I have (as when the sun doth light a storm,)
Buried this sigh in wrinkle of a smile :
But sorrow that is couch'd in seeming glad-
ness,

Is like that mirth fate turns to sudden sadness.

Pan. An her hair were not somewhat darker than Helen's, (well, go to,) there were no more comparison between the women,—But, for my part, she is my kinswoman : I would not, as they term it, praise her,—But I would somebody had heard her talk yesterday, as I did. I will not dispraise your sister Cassandra's wit ; but—

Tro. O Pandarus ! I tell thee, Pandarus,—
When I do tell thee, there my hopes lie drown'd,
Reply not in how many fathoms deep
They lie indrench'd. I tell thee, I am mad
In Cressid's love : Thou answer'st, she is fair ;
Pour'st in the open ulcer of my heart
Her eyes, her hair, her cheek, her gait, her voice ;
Handiest in thy discourse, oh ! that her hand,
In whose comparison all whites are ink,
Writing their own reproach ; To whose soft seizure

The cygnet's down is harsh, and spirit of sense
Hard as the palm of ploughmen ! This thou tell'st me,

As true thou tell'st me, when I say—I love her ;
But, saying thus, instead of oil and balm,
Thou lay'st in every gash that love hath given me
The knife that made it.

Pan. I speak no more than truth.

Tro. Thou dost not speak so much.

Pan. 'Faith, I'll not meddle in't. Let her be as she is : if she be fair, 'tis the better for her :

an she be not, she has the mends in her own hands.

Tro. Good Pandarus ! How now, Pandarus ?

Pan. I have had my labour for my travel ; ill-thought on of her, and ill-thought on of you :
gone between and between, but small thanks for my labour.

Tro. What, art thou angry, Pandarus ? what,
with me ?

Pan. Because she is kin to me, therefore, she's not so fair as Helen : an she were not kin to me, she would be as fair on Friday, as Helen is on Sunday. But what care I ? I care not, an she were a black-a-moor ; 'tis all one to me.

Tro. Say I, she is not fair ?

Pan. I do not care whether you do or no.
She's a fool to stay behind her father ; let her to the Greeks ; and so I'll tell her the next time I see her : for my part, I'll meddle nor make no more in the matter.

Tro. Pandarus,—

Pan. Not I.

Tro. Sweet Pandarus,—

Pan. Pray you, speak no more to me ; I will leave all as I found it, and there an end.

[Exit PANDARUS. An Alarum.

Tro. Peace, you ungracious clamours ! peace, rude sounds !

Fools on both sides ! Helen must needs be fair,
When with your blood you daily paint her thus.
I cannot fight upon this argument ;
It is too starv'd a subject for my sword.
But Pandarus—O gods, how do you plague me !
I cannot come to Cressid, but by Pandarus ;
And he's as tetchy to be woo'd to woo,
As she is stubborn-chaste against all suit.
Tell me, Apollo, for thy Daphne's love,
What Cressid is, what Pandarus, and what we
Her bed is India ; there she lies, a pearl :
Between our Ilium and where she resides,
Let it be call'd the wild and wandering flood ;
Ourself, the merchant ; and this sailing Pan-
darus,
Our doubtful hope, our convoy, and our bark.

Alarum. Enter ÆNEAS.

Æne. How now, prince Troilus ? wherefore not afield ?

Tro. Because not there. This woman's answer sorts*

For womanish it is to be from thence.

What news, Æneas, from the field to-day ?

Æne. That Paris is returned home, and hurt.

Tro. By whom, Æneas ?

Æne. Troilus, by Menelaus.

Tro. Let Paris bleed : 'tis but a scar to scorn ;

Paris is gor'd with Menelaus' horn. [Alarum.

Æne. Hark ! what good sport is out of town
to-day !

Tro. Better at home, if would I might, were may.— [ther ?

But to the sport abroad ;—Are you bound thi-

Æne. In all swift haste.

Tro. Come, go we then together. [Exeunt.

SCENE II.—The same.—A Street.

Enter CRESSIDA and ALEXANDER.

Cres. Who were those went by ?

Alex. Queen Hecuba, and Helen.

Cres. And whither go they ?

Alex. Up to the eastern tower,
Whose height commands as subject all the vale
To see the battle. Hector, whose patience
Is as a virtue fix'd, to-day was mov'd :
He chid Andromache, and struck his armourer ;
And, like as there were husbandry in war,
Before the sun rose he was harness'd light,
And to the field goes he ; where every flower
Did as a prophet weep what it foresaw
In Hector's wrath.

Cres. What was his cause of anger ?

* A servant : † a knight.
‡ Shrink

† More foolish.
‡ Split.

* Is becoming.

Alex. The noise goes, this: There is among the Greeks
A lord of Trojan blood, nephew to Hector;
They call him, Ajax.

Cres. Good; And what of him?

Alex. They say he is a very man per se,^{*}
And stands alone.

Cres. So do all men; unless they are drunk, sick, or have no legs.

Alex. This man, lady, hath robbed many beasts of their particular additions:† he is as valiant as the lion, churlish as the bear, slow as the elephant: a man into whom nature hath so crowded humours, that his valour is crushed‡ into folly, his folly sauced with discretion: there is no man hath a virtue that he hath not a glimpse of; nor any man an attain, but he carries some stain of it: he is melancholy without cause, and merry against the hair:§ He hath the joints of every thing; but every thing so out of joint, that he is a gouty Briareus, many hands and no use: or perblind Argus, all eyes and no sight.

Cres. But how should this man, that makes me smile, make Hector angry?

Alex. They say, he yesterday coped Hector in the battle, and struck him down; the disdain and shame whereof hath ever since kept Hector fasting and waking.

Enter PANDARUS.

Cres. Who comes here?

Alex. Madam, your uncle Pandarus.

Cres. Hector's a gallant man.

Alex. As may be in the world, lady.

Pan. What's that? what's that?

Cres. Good morrow, uncle Pandarus.

Pan. Good morrow, cousin Cressid: What do you talk of?—Good morrow, Alexander.—How do you, cousin? When were you at Ilium?

Cres. This morning, uncle.

Pan. What were you talking of when I came?
Was Hector armed, and gone, ere ye came to Ilium? Helen was not up, was she?

Cres. Hector was gone; but Helen was not up.

Pan. E'en so; Hector was stirring early.

Cres. That were we talking of, and of his anger.

Pan. Was he angry?

Cres. So he says here.

Pan. True, he was so; I know the cause too;
he'll lay about him to-day, I can tell them that:
and there is Troilus will not come far behind him; let them take heed of Troilus; I can tell them that too.

Cres. What, is he angry too?

Pan. Who, Troilus? Troilus is the better man of the two.

Cres. O Jupiter! there's no comparison.

Pan. What, not between Troilus and Hector?
Do you know a man if you see him?

Cres. Ay; if ever I saw him before, and knew
him.

Pan. Well, I say, Troilus is Troilus.

Cres. Then you say as I say; for I am sure he is not Hector.

Pan. No, nor Hector is not Troilus, in some degrees.

Cres. 'Tis just to each of them; he is himself.

Pan. Himself? Alas, poor Troilus! I would, he were,—

Cres. So he is.

Pan. —'Condition, I have gone barefoot to India.

Cres. He is not Hector.

Pan. Himself? no, he's not himself.—'Would a were himself! Well, the gods are above;
Jove must friend, or end: Well, Troilus, well,
—I would my heart were in her body!—No,
Hector is not a better man than Troilus.

Cres. Excuse me.

Pan. He is elder.

Cres. Pardon me, pardon me.

Pan. The other's not come to't; you shall tell me another tale, when the other's come to't.
Hector shall not have his wit this year.

Cres. He shall not need it, if he have his own.

Pan. Nor his qualities;—

Cres. No matter.

Pan. Nor his beauty.

Cres. 'Twould not become him, his own's better.

Pan. You have no judgment, niece: Helen herself swore the other day, that Troilus, for a brown favour, (for so 'tis, I must confess,)—
Not brown neither.

Cres. No, but brown.

Pan. 'Faith, to say truth, brown and not brown.

Cres. To say the truth, true and not true.

Pan. She prais'd his complexion above Paris

Cres. Why, Paris hath colour enough.

Pan. So he has.

Cres. Then, Troilus should have too much:
if she praised him above, his complexion is higher than his; he having colour enough, and the other higher, is too flaming a praise for a good complexion. I had as lief Helen's golden tongue had commended Troilus for a copper nose.

Pan. I swear to you, I think Helen loves him better than Paris.

Cres. Then she's a merry Greek, indeed.

Pan. Nay, I am sure she does. She came to him the other day into a compassed window,*
—and, you know, he has not past three or four hairs on his chin.

Cres. Indeed, a tapster's arithmetic may soon bring his particulars therein to a total.

Pan. Why, he is very young: and yet will he, within three pound, lift as much as his brother
Hector.

Cres. Is he so young a man, and so old a lifter?†

Pan. But, to prove to you that Helen loves him;—she, came, and puts me her white hand to his cloven‡ chin,——

Cres. Juno have mercy!—How came it clo-ven?

Pan. Why, you know, 'tis dimpled: I think, his smiling becomes him better than any man in all Phrygia.

Cres. Oh! he smiles valiantly.

Pan. Does he not?

Cres. O yes, an 'twere a cloud in autumn.

Pan. Why, go to then:—But to prove to you that Helen loves Troilus,——

Cres. Troilus will stand to the proof, if you'll prove it so.

Pan. Troilus? why, he esteems her no more than I esteem an addle egg.

Cres. If you love an addle egg as well as you love an idle head, you would eat chickens †the shell.

Pan. I cannot choose but laugh, to think how she tickled his chin;—Indeed, she has a marvellous white hand, I must needs confess.

Cres. Without the rack.

Pan. And she takes upon her to spy a white hair on his chin.

Cres. Alas, poor chin! many a wart is richer.

Pan. But there was such laughing;—Queen
Hecuba laughed, that her eyes ran o'er.

Cres. With mill-stones.‡

Pan. And Cassandra laughed.

Cres. But there was a more temperate fire under the pot of her eyes;—Did her eyes run o'er too?

Pan. And Hector laughed.

Cres. At what was all this laughing?

Pan. Marry, at the white hair that Helen spied on Troilus' chin.

Cres. An't had been a green hair, I should have laughed too.

Pan. They laughed not so much at the hair, as at his pretty answer.

* By himself. † Characters. ‡ Mingled with.
§ Grain.

* Bow window. † Thief. ‡ A proverbial saying.

Cres. What was his answer?

Pan. Quoth she, Here's but one and fifty hairs on your chin, and one of them is white.

Cres. This is her question.

Pan. That's true; make no question of that. One and fifty hairs, quoth he, and one white: That white hair is my father, and all the rest are his sons. Jupiter! quoth she, which of these hairs is Paris my husband? The forked one, quoth he; pluck it out and give it him. But, there was such laughing! and Helen so blushed, and Paris so chafed, and all the rest so laughed, that it passed.*

Cres. So let it now; for it has been a great while going by.

Pan. Well, cousin, I told you a thing yesterday; think on't.

Cres. So I do.

Pan. I'll be sworn, 'tis true; he will weep you, an 'twere † a man born in April.

Cres. And I'll spring up in his tears, an 'twere a nettle against May.

[A Retreat sounded.

Pan. Hark, they are coming from the field: Shall we stand up here, and see them as they pass toward Ilium? good niece, do; sweet niece Cressida.

Cres. At your pleasure.

Pan. Here, here, here's an excellent place; here we may see most bravely: I'll tell you them all by their names as they pass by: but mark Troilus above the rest.

ÆNEAS passes over the stage.

Cres. Speak not so loud.

Pan. That's Æneas; is not that a brave man? he's one of the flowers of Troy, I can tell you; But mark Troilus; you shall see anon.

Cres. Who's that?

ANTENOR passes over.

Pan. That's Antenor; he has a shrewd wit, I can tell you; and he's a man good enough; he's one o'the soundest judgments in Troy, whosoever, and a proper man of person;—When comes Troilus?—I'll show you Troilus anon: if he see me, you shall see him nod at me.

Cres. Will he give you the nod?

Pan. You shall see.

Cres. If he do, the rich shall have more.

HECTOR passes over.

Pan. That's Hector, that, that, look you, that; There's a fellow!—Go thy way, Hector;—There's a brave man, niece.—O brave Hector!—Look, how he looks! there's a countenance: is't not a brave man?

Cres. Oh! a brave man!

Pan. Is a not? It does a man's heart good—Look you what hacks are on his helmet? look you yonder, do you see? look you there! There's no jesting: there's laying on; take't off who will, as they say: there be hacks!

Cres. Be those with swords?

PARIS passes over.

Pan. Swords? any thing, he cares not: an the devil come to him, it's all one: By god's lid, it does one's heart good:—Yonder comes Paris, yonder comes Paris: look ye yonder, niece; is't not a gallant man too, is't not?—Way, this is brave now.—Who said he came hurt home to-day? he's not hurt: why this will do Helen's heart good now. Ha! 'would I could see Troilus now!—you shall see Troilus anon.

Cres. Who's that?

HELENUS passes over.

Pan. That's Helenus,—I marvel, where Troilus is:—That's Helenus;—I think he went not forth to-day:—That's Helenus.

Cres. Can Helenus fight, uncle?

Pan. Helenus? no;—yes, he'll fight indifferently well:—I marvel, where Troilus is!—Hark!—do you not hear the people cry, Troilus?—Helenus is a priest.

Cres. What sneaking fellow comes yonder?

TROILUS passes over.

Pan. Where? yonder? that's Deiphobus: 'Tis Troilus! there's a man, niece!—Hem!—Brave Troilus! the prince of chivalry!

Cres. Peace, for shame, peace!

Pan. Mark him; note him;—O brave Troilus!—look well upon him, niece; look you, how his sword is bloodied, and his helm* more hack'd than Hector's; And how he looks, and how he goes!—O admirable youth! he ne'er saw three and twenty. Go thy way, Troilus, go thy way; had I a sister were a grace, or a daughter a goddess, he should take his choice. O admirable man! Paris?—Paris is dirt to him; and I warrant, Helen, to change, would give an eye to boot.

Forces pass over the stage.

Cres. Here come more.

Pan. Asses, fools, dolts! chaff and bran, chaff and bran! porridge after meat! I could live and die i'the eyes of Troilus. Ne'er look, ne'er look; the eagles are gone; crows and daws, crows and daws! I had rather be such a man as Troilus, than Agamemnon and all Greece.

Cres. There is among the Greeks, Achilles; a better man than Troilus.

Pan. Achilles? a drayman, a porter, a very camel.

Cres. Well, well.

Pan. Well, well?—Why, have you any discretion? have you any eyes? Do you know what a man is? Is not birth, beauty, good shape, discourse, manhood, learning, gentleness, virtue, youth, liberality, and such like, the spice and salt that season a man?

Cres. Ay, a minced man: and then to be baked with no date† in the pye,—for then the man's date is out.

Pan. You are such a woman! one knows not at what ward‡ you lie.

Cres. Upon my back, to defend my belly; upon my wit, to defend my wiles; upon my secrecy, to defend mine honesty; my mask, to defend my beauty; and you, to defend all these: and at all these wards I lie, at a thousand watches.

Pan. Say one of your watches.

Cres. Nay, I'll watch you for that; and that's one of the chiefest of them too: if I cannot ward what I would not have hit, I can watch you for telling how I took the blow; unless it swell past hiding, and then it is past watching.

Pan. You are such another!

Enter TROILUS' Boy.

Boy. Sir, my lord would instantly speak with you.

Pan. Where?

Boy. At your own house; there he unarms him.

Pan. Good boy, tell him I come: [Exit Boy.] I doubt he be hurt.—Fare ye well, good niece.

Cres. Adieu, uncle.

Pan. I'll be with you, niece, by and by.

Cres. To bring, uncle,—

Pan. Ay, a token from Troilus.

Cres. By the same token you are a bawd.

[Exit PANDARUS.]

Words, vows, griefs, tears, and love's full sacrifice,

He offers in another's enterprize:

But more in Troilus thousand fold I see

Than in the glass of Pandar's praise may be;

* Exceeded all bounds

† As if 'twere.

* Helmet. † An ingredient in all ancient pastry. ‡ A metaphor from the art of defence.

Yet hold I off. Women are angels, wooing :
Things won are done, joy's soul lies in the doing :
That she belov'd knows nought, that knows not
this,—

Men prize the thing ungain'd more than it is :
That she was never yet, that ever knew
Love got so sweet, as when desire did sue :
Therefore this maxim out of love I teach,— Achievement is command ; ungain'd beseech :
Then though my heart's content firm love doth
bear,
Nothing of that shall from mine eyes appear.

[Exit.

SCENE III.—The Grecian Camp.—Before Agamemnon's Tent.

Trumpets. Enter AGAMEMNON, NESTOR, ULYSSES, MENELAUS, and others.

Agam. Princes,

What grief hath set the jaundice on your cheeks ?
The ample proposition, that hope makes
In all designs begun on earth below,
Falls in the promis'd largeness ; checks and disasters

Grew in the veins of actions highest rear'd ;
As knots, by the conflix of meeting sap,
Infect the sound pine, and divert his grain
Tortive and errant * from his course of growth.
Nor, princes, is it matter new to us,
That we come short of our suppose so far,
That, after seven years' siege, yet Troy walls
stand ;

Sith † every action that hath gone before,
Whereof we have record, trial did draw
Bias and thwart, not answering the aim,
And that unbodied figure of the thought
That gav't surmised shape. Why then, you
princes,

Do you with cheeks abash'd behold our works ;
And thing them shames, which are, indeed,
nought else

But the protractive trials of great Jove.
To find perulative constancy in men ?
The fluxeness of which metal is not found
In fortune's love ; for then, the bold and coward,

The wise and fool, the artist and unlearned,
The hard and soft, seem all affin'd ‡ and kin :
But, in the wind and tempest of her frown,
Distinction, with a broad and powerful fan,
Puffing at all, winnows the light away ;
And what hath mass or matter, by itself
Lies, rich in virtue, and unmingled.

Nest. With due observance of thy godlike seat, §

Great Agamemnon, Nestor shall apply
Thy latest words. In the reproof of chance Lies the true proof of men : The sea being smooth,

How many shallow haubie boats dare sail
Upon her patient breast, making their way
With those of noble bulk.

But let the ruffian Boreas once enrage
The gentler Thetis, ¶ and, anon, behold
The strong ribb'd bark through liquid mountains cut,

Bounding between the two moist elements,
Like Perseus' horse ; Where's then the saucy boat,

Whose weak untimber'd sides but even now
Co-rival'd greatness † either to harbour fled,
Or made a toast for Neptune. Even so
Doth valour's show, and valour's worth, divide,
In storms of fortune : For, in her ray and brightness,

The herd hath more annoyance by the breeze, ¶
Than by the tiger : but when the splitting wind
Makes flexible the knees of knott'd oaks,
And flies bed under shade, why, then the thing
of courage

As rous'd with rage, with rage doth sympathize,
And with an accent turn'd in self-same key,
Returns to chiding fortune.

Ulyss. Agamemnon,—

Thou great commander, nerve, and bone of Greece,

Heart of our numbers, soul and only spirit
In whom the tempers and the minds of all
Should be shut up,—hear what Ulysses speaks
Besides the applause and approbation
The which,—most mighty for thy place and away,—

[To AGAMEMNON.

And thou most reverend for thy stretch'd-out
life,—

[To NESTOR.

I give to both your speeches,—which were such,
As Agamemnon and the band of Greece
Should hold up high in brass ; and such again,
As venerable Nestor, hatch'd in silver,
Should with a bond of air (strong as the axle-tree

On which heaven rides,) knit all the Greekish cars

To his experienc'd tongue,—yet let it please
Thou great,—and wise,—to hear Ulysses speak.

We shall hear music, wit, and oracle.

And, look, how many Grecian tents do stand

Observe degree, priority, and place,

Office, and custom, in all line of order :
And therefore is the glorious planet, Sol,
In noble eminence enthron'd and spher'd
Amidst the other ; whose med'cinable eye
Corrects the ill aspects of planets evil,
And posts, like the commandment of a king,
Sans ¶ check, to good and bad : But when the planets,

In evil mixture, to disorder wander,
What plagues, and what portents ? what mutiny ?
What raging of the sea ? shaking of earth ?
Commotion in the winds ? frights, changes, horrors,

Divert and crack, rend and deracinate ¶
The unity and married calm of states Quite from their fixture ? Oh ! when degree is shak'd,

Which is the ladder of all high designs,
The enterprise is sick ! How could communities,

Degrees in schools, and brotherhoods  in cities,
Peaceful commerce from dividable †† shores,
The primogenitive and due of birth,
Prerogative of age, crowns, sceptres, laurels,
But by degree, stand in authentic place ?

Take but degree away, untune that string,
And, hark, what discord follows ! each thing
meets

In mere ‡‡ oppugnancy : The bounded waters
Should lift their bosoms higher than the shores,
And make a sop of all this solid globe :
Strength should be lord of imbecility,
And the rude son should strike his father
dead :

Force should be right; or, rather, right and wrong,
(Between whose endless jar justice resides,) Should lose their names, and so should justice too.

Then every thing includes itself in power,
Power into will, will into appetite;
And appetite, a universal wolf,
So doubly seconded with will and power,
Must make perforce a universal prey,
And, last, eat up himself. Great Agamemnon,
This chaos, when degree is suffocate,
Follows the choking.
And this neglect of degree it is,
That by a pace goes backward, with a purpose
It hath to climb. The general's diad'm'd
By him one step below; he, by the next;
That next, by him beneath: so every step,
Exempl'd by the first pace that is sick
Of his superior, grows to an envious fever
Of pale and bloodless emulation:
And 'tis this fever that keeps Troy on foot,
Not her own sinews. To end a tale of length,
Troy in our weakness stands, not in her strength.

Nest. Most wisely hath Ulysses here discover'd

The fever whereof all our power* is sick.

Agam. The nature of the sickness found,
What is the remedy? [Ulysses,

Ulyss. The great Achilles,—whom opinion crowns

The sinew and the forehead of our host,—
Having his ear full of his airy fame,
Grows dainty of his worth, and in his tent
Lies mocking our designs: With him Patroclus,
Upon a lazy bed the livelong day
Breaks scurril jests;
And with ridiculous and awkward action
(Which, slanderer, he imitation calls,)
He pageants† us. Sometime, great Agamemnon,
Thy topless‡ deputation he puts on;
And, like a strutting player,—whose conceit
Lies in his hamstring, and doth think it rich
To hear the wooden dialogue and sound
'Twixt his stretch'd footing and the scaffoldage, §—

Such to-be-pitied and o'er-wrested || seeming
He acts thy greatness in: and when he speaks,
'Tis like a chime a mending; with terms un-
suar'd, ¶ [dropp'd,
Which, from the tongue of roaring Typhon
Would seem hyperboles. At this fusty stuff,
The large Achilles, on his press'd bed lolling,
From his deep chest laughs out a loud applause;

Cries—Excellent!—'tis Agamemnon just.— Now play me Nestor;—hem, and stroke thy beard,

As he, being dress'd to some oration.

That's done:—as near as the extremest ends
Of parallels; as like as Vulcan and his wife.
Yet good Achilles still cries, Excellent!

'Tis Nestor right! *Now play him me, Patro-
clus,*

Arming to answer in a night alarm.

And then, forsooth, the faint defects of age
Must be the scene of mirth; to cough, and spit,
And with a palsy-fumbling on his gorget,
Shake in and out the rivet:—and at this sport,
Sir Valour dies; cries, *O!—enough, Patro-
clus;—*

*Or give me ribs of steel! I shall split all
In pleasure of my spleen.* And in this fashion,
All our abilities, gifts, natures, shapes,
Severals and generals of grace exact,
Achievements, plots, orders, preventions,
Excitements to the field, or speech for truce,
Success, or loss, what is, or is not, serves
As stuff for these two to make paradoxes.

¶ Unadapted.

With an imperial voice,) many are infect.
Ajax is grown self-will'd; and bears his head
In such a reign, in full as proud a place
As broad Achilles: keeps his tent like him;
Makes factions feasts; rails on our state of war
Bold as an oracle: and sets Theraites
(A slave, whose gall coins slanders like a mint,)
To match us in comparisons with dirt;
To weaken and discredit our exposure,
How rank soever rounded in with danger.

Ulyss. They tax our policy, and call it cowardice;

Count wisdom as no member of the war;
Foretell prescience, and esteem no act
But that of hand: the still and mental parts,—
That do contrive how many hands shall strike,
When fitness call them on; and know, by measure

Of their observant toil, the enemies' weight,—
Why, this hath not a finger's dignity:
They call this—bed-work, mappery, closet-war:
So that the ram, that batters down the wall,
For the great swing and ru'eness of his poise,
They place before his hand that made the engine;

Or those, that with the fineness of their souls
By reason guide his execution.

Nest. Let this be granted, and Achilles' horse

Makes many Thetis' sons. [Trumpet sounds.

Agam. What trumpet? look, Menelaus.

Enter ÆNEAS.

Men. From Troy.

Agam. What would you 'fore our tent?

Æne. Is this

Great Agamemnon's tent, I pray?

Agam. Even this.

Æne. May one, that is a herald and a prince,
Do a fair message to his kingly ears?

Agam. With surety stronger than Achilles' arm,
'Fore all the Greekish heads, which with one voice

Call Agamemnon head and general.

Æne. Fair leave, and large security. How may
A stranger to those most imperial looks
Know them from eyes of other mortals?

Agam. How?

Æne. Ay;

I ask, that I might waken reverence,
And bid the cheek be ready with a blush
Modest as morning when she coldly eyes
The youthful Phoebus:

Which is that god in office, guiding men?

Which is the high and mighty Agamemnon?

Agam. This Trojan scorns us; or the men of Troy,
Are ceremonious courtiers.

Æne. Courtiers as free, as debonaire, unarm'd,
As bending angels; that's their fame in peace:
But when they would seem soldiers, they have galls,

Good arms, strong joints, true swords; and,
Jove's accord,

Nothing so full of heart. But peace, Æneas,

Peace, Trojan; lay thy finger on thy lips!

The worthiness of praise distains his worth,
If that the prais'd himself bring the praise
forth:

But what the repining enemy commends,
That breath fame follows; that praise, sole pure, transcends.

Agam. Sir, you of Troy, call you yourself
Æneas?

Æne. Ay, Greek, that is my name.

Agam. What's your affair, I pray you?

Æne. Sir, pardon; 'tis for Agamemnon's ears.

Agam. He hears nought privately, that comes from Troy.

Æne. Nor I from Troy come not to whisper
him:

I bring a trumpet to awake his ear;
To set his sense on the attentive bent,
And then to speak.

Agam. Speak frankly * as the wind ;
It is not Agamemnon's sleeping hour :
That thou shalt know, Trojan, he is awake,
He tells thee so himself.

Æne. Trumpet blow loud,
Send thy brass voice through all these lazy tents ;—

And every Greek of mettle, let him know,
What Troy means fairly shall be spoke aloud.

[Trumpet sounds.]

We have, great Agamemnon, here in Troy,
A prince call'd Hector, (Priam is his father)
Who in this dull and long-continued truce
Is rusty grown ; he bade me take a trumpet,
And to this purpose speak. Kings, princes,
lords !

If there be one among the fair'st of Greece,
That holds his honour higher than his ease ;
That seeks his praise more than he fears his
peril ;

That knows his valour, and knows not to fear ;
That loves his mistress more than in confession,
(With transient vows to her own lips he loves,)
And dare avow her beauty and her worth,
In other arms than hers,—to him this challenge.

Hector, in view of Trojans and of Greeks,
Shall make it good, or do his best to do it
He hath a lady, wiser, fairer, truer,
Than ever Greek did compass in his arms ;
And will to-morrow with his trumpet call,
Mid-way between your tents and walls of Troy,
To rouse a Grecian that is true in love :
If any come, Hector shall honour him ;
If none, he'll say in Troy, when he retires,
The Grecian dames are sun-burn'd, and not worth

The splinter of a lance. Even so much :

Agam. This shall be told our lovers, lord
Æneas ;

If none of them have soul in such a kind,
We left them all at home. But we are soldiers ;

And may that soldier a mere recreant prove,
That means not, hath not, or is not in love !
If then one is, or hath, or means to be,
That one meets Hector ; if none else, I am he.

Nest. Tell him of Nestor, one that was a
man

When Hector's grandsire suck'd ; he is old now ;
But if there be not in our Grecian host
One noble man, that hath one spark of fire
To answer for his love, tell him from me,—
I'll hide my silver beard in a gold beaver.
And in my vambrace† put this wither'd brawn ;
And meeting him, will tell him, That my lady
Was fairer than his grandame, and as chaste
As may be in the world : His youth in flood, I'll prove this truth with my three drops of
blood

Æne. Now heavens forbid such scarcity of youth !

Ulyss. Amen !

Agam. Fair lord Æneas, let me touch your
hand ;

To our pavilion shall I lead you, Sir.
Achilles shall have word of this intent :
So shall each lord of Greece, from tent to tent :
Yourself shall feast with us before you go,
And find the welcome of a noble foe.

[Exeunt all but ULYSSES and NESTOR.]

Ulyss. Nestor,—

Nest. What says Ulysses ?

Ulyss. I have a young conception in my brain,

Be you my time to bring it to some shape.

Nest. What is't ?

Ulyss. This 'tis :

Must wedges rive hard knots : The seeded pride
That hath to this maturity blown up
In rank Achilles, must or now be cropp'd,
Or, shedding, breed a nursery of like evil,
To overbulk us all.

Nest. Well, and how ?

Ulyss. This challenge that the gallant Hector sends,

However it is spread in general name,
Relates in purpose only to Achilles.

Nest. The purpose is perspicuous even as substance,

Whose grossness little characters sum up :

And, in the publication, make no strain, *

But that Achilles, were his brain as barren

As banks of Libya,—though, Apollo knows,

'Tis dry enough,—will, with what great speed of judgment,

Ay, with celerity, find Hector's purpose

Pointing on him.

Ulyss. And wake him to the answer, think
you ?

Nest. Yes,

It is most meet ; Whom may you else oppose.

That can from Hector bring those honours off,

If not Achilles ? Though't be a sportful combat,

Yet in the trial much opinion dwells ;

For here the Trojans taste our dear'st repute

With their fin'st palate : And trust to me,

Ulysses,

Our imputation shall be oddly pois'd

In this wild action : for the success,

Although particular, shall give a scantling †

Of good or bad into the general ;

And in such indexes, although small pricks ‡

To their subsequent volumes, there is seen

The baby figure of the giant mass

Of things to come at large. It is suppos'd,

He, that meets Hector, issues from our choice :

And choice, being mutual, act of all our souls,

Makes merit her election ; and doth bull,

As 'twere from forth us all, a man distill'd

Out of our virtues ; Who miscarrying,

What heart receives from hence a conquering
part,

To steel a strong opinion to themselves ?

Which entertain'd, limbs are his instruments,

In no less working, than are swords and bows

Directive by the limbs.

Ulyss. Give pardon to my speech ;—

Therefore 'tis meet, Achilles meet not Hector.

Let us, like merchants, show our foulest wares,

And think, perchance, they'll sell : If not,

The lustre of the better shall exceed,

By showing the worse first. Do not consent,

That ever Hector and Achilles meet ;

For both our honour and our shame, in this,

Are dogg'd with two strange followers.

Nest. I see them not with my old eyes ; what are they ?

Ulyss. What glory our Achilles shares from Hector,

Were he not proud, we all should share with him :

But he already is too insolent ;

And we were better parch in Afric sun,

Than in the pride and salt scorn of his eyes,

Should he 'scape Hector fair : If he were foil'd,

Why, then we did our main opinion § crush

In taint of our best man. No, make a lottery ,

And, by device, let blockish Ajax draw

The sort ¶ to fight with Hector : Among our selves,

Give him allowance for the better man,

For that will physic the great Myrmidon,

Who broils in loud applause ; and make him fall

His crest, that prouder than blue Iris bends.

If the dull brainless Ajax come safe off,

We'll dress him up in voices : If he fall,

Yet go we under our opinion still

That we have better men. But, hit or miss,

Our project's life this shape of sense assumes—

Ajax, employ'd, plucks down Achilles' plumes.

Nest. Ulysses,

Now I begin to relish thy advice ;

And I will give a taste of it forthwith

ACT II.

SCENE I.—Another part of the Grecian Camp.

Enter AJAX and THERSITES.

Ajax. Thersites,——

Ther. Agamemnon—how if he had boils ? full, all over, generally ?

Ajax. Thersites,——

Ther. And those boils did run ?—Say so,—did not the general run then ? were not that a botchy core ?

Ajax. Dog,——

Ther. Then would come some matter from him ; I see none now.

Ajax. Thou bitch-wolf's son, canst thou not hear ? Feel then. [Strikes him.]

Ther. The plague of Greece upon thee, thou mongrel beef-witted lord !

Ajax. Speak then, thou unsalted leaven ! speak : I will beat thee into handsomeness.

Ther. I shall sooner rail thee into wit and boldness : but I think thy horse will sooner con an oration, than thou learn a prayer without book. Thou canst strike, canst thou ? a red murrain o' thy jade's tricks !

Ajax. Toads-stool, learn me the proclamation.

Ther. Dost thou think I have no sense, thou strikest me thus ?

Ajax. The proclamation,——

Ther. Thou art proclaimed a fool, I think.

Ajax. Do not, porcupine, do not ; my fingers itch.

Ther. I would thou didst itch from head to foot, and I had the scratching of thee ; I would make thee the loathsome scab in Greece. When thou art forth in the incursions, thou strikest as slow as another.

Ajax. I say, the proclamation,——

Ther. Thou grumblest and raillest every hour on Achilles ; and thou art as full of envy at his greatness as Cerberus is at Proserpina's beauty ; ay, that thou barkest at him.

Ajax. Mistress Thersites !

Ther. Thou shouldst strike him.

Ajax. Cobloaf ! †

Ther. He would pun ‡ thee into shivers with his fist, as a sailor breaks a biscuit.

Ajax. You whoreson cur ! [Beating him.]

Ther. Do, do.

Ajax. Thou stool for a witch !

Ther. Ay, do, do ; thou sodden-witted lord ! thou hast no more brain than I have in mine elbows ; an assinego § may tutor thee : Thou scurvy valiant ass ; thou art here put to thrash Trojans ; and thou art bought and sold among those of any wit, like a Barbarian slave. If thou use ¶ to beat me, I will begin at thy heel, and tell what thou art by inches, thou thing of no bowels, thou !

Ajax. You dog !

Ther. You scurvy lord !

Ajax. You cur ! [Beating him.]

Ther. Mars his idiot, do ! rudeness ; do, camel ; do, do.

Enter ACHILLES and PATROCLUS.

Achil. Why, how now, Ajax ? wherefore do you thus ?

How now, Thersites ? what's the matter, man ?

Ther. You see him there, do you ?

Achil. Ay ; what's the matter ?

Ther. Nay, look upon him.

Achil. So I do ; What's the matter ?

Ther. Nay, but regard him well.

Achil. Well, why I do so.

Ther. But yet you look not well upon him : for whosoever you take him to be, he is Ajax.

Achil. I know that, fool.

Ther. Ay, but that fool knows not himself.

Ajax. Therefore I beat thee.

Ther. Lo, lo, lo, lo, what modicums of wit he utters ! his evasions have ears thus long. I have bobbed his brain, more than he has beat my bones : I will buy nine sparrows for a penny and his pis mater * is not worth the ninth part of a sparrow. This lord, Achilles, Ajax,—who wears his wit in his belly, and his guts in his head,—I'll tell you what I say of him.

Achil. What ?

Ther. I say this, Ajax——

Achil. Nay, good Ajax.

[AJAX offers to strike him, ACHILLES interposes.]

Ther. Has not so much wit——

Achil. Nay, I must hold you.

Ther. As will stop the eye of Helen's needle, for whom he comes to fight.

Achil. Peace, fool !

Ther. I would have peace and quietness, but the fool will not : he there ; that he ; look you there.

Ajax. O thou damned cur ! I shall——

Achil. Will you set your wit to a fool's ?

Ther. No, I warrant you ; for a fool's will shame it.

Patr. Good words, Thersites.

Achil. What's the quarrel ?

Ajax. I bade the vile owl go learn me the tenour of the proclamation, and he rails upon me.

Ther. I serve thee not.

Ajax. Well, go to, go to.

Ther. I serve here voluntary. †

Achil. Your last service was sufferance, 'twas not voluntary ; no man is beaten voluntary ; Ajax was here the voluntary, and you as under an impress.

Ther. Even so ?—a great deal of your wit too lies in your sinews, or else there be hairs. Hector shall have a great catch, it he knock out either of your brains ; a' were as good crack a fusty nut with no kernel.

Achil. What with me too, Thersites ?

Ther. There's Ulysses, and old Nestor,—whose wit was mouldy ere your grandaies had nails on their toes,—yoke you like draught oxen, and make you plough up the war.

Achil. What, what ?

Ther. Yes, good sooth ; To, Achilles ! 'o Ajax ! to !

Ajax. I shall cut out your tongue.

Ther. 'Tis no matter ; I shall speak as much as thou afterwards.

Patr. No more words, Thersites ; peace.

Ther. I will hold my peace when Achilles' brach ‡ bids me, shall I ?

Achil. There's for you, Patroclus.

Ther. I will see you hanged, like clatpoles, ere I come any more to your tents ; I will keep where there is wit stirring, and leave the faction of fools. [Exit.]

Patr. A good riddance.

Achil. Marry, this, Sir, is proclaim'd through all our host :

That Hector, by the first hour of the sun, Will, with a trumpet, 'twixt our tents and Troy, To-morrow morning call some knight to arms, That hath a stomach ; and such a one, that dare Maintain—I know not what ; 'tis trash : Farewell.

Ajax. Farewell. Who shall answer him ?

Achil. I know not it is put to lottery ; other-He knew his man. [wise,]

SCENE II.—Troy.—A Room in PRIAM'S Palace.

Enter PRIAM, HECTOR, TROILUS, PARIS, and HELENUS.

Pri. After so many hours, lives, speeches spent,
Thus once again says Nestor from the Greeks:
*Deliver Helen, and all damage else—
As honour, loss of time, travel, expence,
Wounds, friends, and what else dear that is consum'd*
*In hot digestion of this cormorant war,—
Shall be struck off.*—Hector, what say you to't?

Hect. Though no man lesser fears the Greeks than I,
As far as toucheth my particular, yet,
Dread Priam,
There is no lady of more softer bowels,
More spongy to suck in the sense of fear,
More ready to cry out—Who knows what follows?

Then Hector is: The wound of peace is surety,
Surety secure; but modest doubt is call'd
The beacon of the wise, the tent that searches
To the bottom of the worst. Let Helen go:
Since the first sword was drawn about this question,

Every tithes soul, 'mongst many thousand dismes,*
Hath been as dear as Helen: I mean, of ours:
If we have lost so many tenths of ours,
To guard a thing not ours; not worth to us,
Had it our name, the value of one ten;
What merits in that reason, which denies
The yielding of her up?

Tro. Fle, fle, my brother!
Weigh you the worth and honour of a king,
So great as our dread father, in a scale
Of common ounces? will you with counters sum
The part-proportion of his infinite?
And buckel-in a waist most fathomless,
With spans and inches so diminutive
As fears and reasons? fle, for godly shame!

Hec. No marvel, though you bite so sharp at reasons,
You are so empty of them. Should not our father

Bear the great sway of his affairs with reason?—
Because your speech hath none, that tells him so?

Tro. You are for dreams and slumbers, brother priest,
You fur your gloves with reason. Here are your reasons:

You know, an enemy intends you harm;
You know, a sword employ'd is perilous,
And reason flies the object of all harm:
Who marvels then, when Helenus beholds
A Grecian and his sword, if he do set
The very wings of reason to his heels;
And fly like chidden Mercury from Jove,
Or like a star disorb'd?—Nay, if we talk of reason,

Let's shut our gates, and sleep: Manhood and Should have bare hearts, would they but sat their thoughts

With this cramm'd reason: reason and respect
Make livers pale, and lustihood deject.

Hect. Brother, she is not worth what she doth cost

The holding.

Tro. What is aught, but as 'tis valued?

Hect. But value dwells not in particular will;
It holds his estimate and dignity
As well wherein 'tis precious of itself
As in the prizer: 'tis mad idolatry,
To make the service greater than the god;
And the will dotes, that is attributive
To what infection itself affects,
Without some image of the affected merit.

Tro. I take to-day a wife, and my election
Is led on in the conduct of my will;
My will enkindled by mine eyes and ears,

* Tenths.

† Caution.

Two traded pilots 'twixt the dangerous shores
Of will and judgment: How may I avoid,
Although my will distaste what it elected,
The wife I chose? there can be no evasion
To blench* from this, and to stand firm by honour:

We turn not back the silks upon the merchant
When we have sold them; nor the remainder viands

We do not throw in unrespective sieve,†
Because we now are full. It was thought meet,
Paris should do some vengeance on the Greeks:
Your breath with full consent bellied his sails;
The seas and winds (old wranglers) took a truce,
And did him service: he touch'd the ports desired;

And, for an old aunt; whom the Greeks held
He brought a Grecian queen, whose youth and freshness

Wrinkles Apollo's, and makes pale the morning.
Why keep we her? the Grecians keep our aunt:
Is she worth keeping? why, she is a pearl
Whose price hath launch'd above a thousand ships,

And turn'd crown'd kings to merchants.
If you'll avouch 'twas wisdom Paris went,
(As you must needs, for you all cried—Go, go,)
If you'll confess, he brought home noble prize,
(As you must needs, for you all clapp'd your hands,

And cried—Inestimable!) why do you now
The issue of your proper wisdoms rate;
And do a deed that fortune never did,
Beggard the estimation which you priz'd
Richer than sea and land? O theft most base;
That we have stolen what we do fear to keep!
But, thieves, unworthy of a thing so stolen,
That in their country did them that disgrace,
We fear to warrant in our native place!

Cas. [Within.] Cry, Trojans, cry!

Pri. What noise? what shriek is this?

Tro. 'Tis our mad sister, I do know her voice.

Cas. [Within.] Cry, Trojans!

Hect. It is Cassandra.

Enter CASSANDRA, raving.

Cas. Cry, Trojans, cry! lend me ten thousand eyes,

And I will fill them with prophetic tears.

Hect. Peace, sister, peace.

Cas. Virgins and boys, mid-age and wrinkled elders,

Soft infancy, that nothing canst but cry,
Add to my clamours! let us pay betimes
A moiety of that mass of moan to come.
Cry, Trojans, cry! practise your eyes with tears!
Troy must not be, nor goodly Ilium stand;
Our fire-brand brother, Paris, † burns us all.
Cry, Trojans, cry! a Helen, and a woe:
Cry, cry! Troy burns, or else let Helen go.

[Exit.]

Hect. Now youthful Troilus, do not these high strains

Of divination in our sister work
Some touches of remorse? or is your blood
So madly hot, that no discourse of reason,
Nor fear of bad success in a bad cause,
Can qualify the same!

Tro. Why, brother Hector,
We may not think the justness of each act
Such and no other than event doth form it
Nor once deject the courage of our minds,
Because Cassandra's mad: her brain-sick raptures

Cannot distaste ‡ the goodness of a quarrel,
Which hath our several honours all engag'd
To make it gracious. ¶ For my private part,
I am no more touch'd than all Priam's sons:
And Jove forbid, there should be done amongst us

Such things as might offend the weakest spleen
To fight for and maintain!

Par. Else might the world convince * of levity
As well my undertakings, as your counsels:
But I attest the gods, your full consent
Gave wings to my propension, and cut off
All fears attending on so dire a project.
For what, alas, can these my single arms!
What propugnation† is in one man's valour,
To stand the push and enmity of those
This quarrel would excite? Yet, I protest,
Were I alone to pass the difficulties,
And had as ample power as I have will,
Paris should ne'er retract what he hath done,
Nor faint in the pursuit.

Pri. Paris, you speak
Like one besotted on your sweet delights:
You have the honey still, but these the gall;
So to be valiant, is no praise at all.

Par. Sir, I propose not merely to myself
The pleasures such a beauty brings with it;
But I would have the soil of her fair rape
Wip'd off in honourable keeping her.
What treason were it to the ransack'd queen,
Disgrace to your great worths, and shame to me,
Now to deliver her possession up,
On terms of base compulsion? Can it be,
That so degenerate a strain as this [soms?]
Should once set footing in your generous bo-
There's not the meanest spirit on our party,
Without a heart to dare, or sword to draw,
When Helen is defended; nor none so noble,
Whose life were ill bestow'd, or death unsam'd,
Where Helen is the subject; then, I say,
Well may we fight for her, whom, we know well,
The world's large spaces cannot parallel.

Hect. Paris and Troilus, you have both said
well:

And on the cause and question now in hand
Have glori'd,—but superficially; † not much
Unlike young men, whom Aristotle thought
Unfit to hear moral philosophy:
The reasons you allege, do more conduce
To the hot passion of distemper'd blood,
Than to make up a free determination
Twixt right and wrong; For pleasure and revenge

Have ears more deaf than adders to the voice
Of any true decision. Nature craves
All dues be render'd to their owners: Now
What nearer debt in all humanity,
Than wife is to the husband? If this law
Of nature be corrupted through affection;
And that great minds, of § partial indulgence
To their benumbed || wills, resist the same;
There is a law in each well-order'd nation,
To curb those raging appetites that are
Most disobedient and refractory.
If Helen then be wife to Sparta's king;—
As it is known she is,—these moral laws
Of nature, and of nations, speak aloud
To have her back return'd: Thus to persist
In doing wrong, extenuates not wrong,
But makes it much more heavy. Hector's opinion

Is this in way of truth: yet ne'ertheless,
My spritely brethren, I propend ¶ to you
In resolution to keep Helen still;
For 'tis a cause that hath no mean dependence
Upon our joint and several dignities.

Tro. Why, there you touch'd the life of our design:
Were it not glory that we more affected
Than the performance of our heaving spleens,
I would not wish a drop of Trojan blood
Spent more in her defence. But, worthy Hector,
She is a theme of honour and renown;
A spur to valiant and magnanimous deeds;
Whose present courage may beat down our foes,
And fame, in time to come, canonize us;

SCENE III.—The Grecian Camp.—Before
ACHILLES' Tent.

Enter THERSITES.

Ther. How now, Thersites? what, lost in the labyrinth of thy fury? Shall the elephant Ajax carry it thus? he beats me, and I rail at him:
O worthy satisfaction! 'would it were otherwise;
that I could beat him whilst he railed at me:
'Sfoot, I'll learn to conjure and raise devils, but I'll see some issue of my spiteful execrations.
Then there's Achilles,—a rare engineer. If Troy be not taken till these two undermine it, the walls will stand till they fall of themselves. O thou great thunder-darter of Olympus, forget that thou art Jove the king of gods; and, Mercury, lose all the serpentine craft of thy Caduceus; ‡
if ye take not that little little less-than-little wit from them that they have! which short-armed ignorance itself knows is so abundant scarce, it will not in circumvention deliver a fly from a spider, without drawing their massy irons, and cutting the web. After this, the vengeance on the whole camp! or, rather, the bone-ache! for that, methinks, is the curse dependent on those that war for a placket. I have said my prayers; and devil, envy, say Amen. What, ho! my lord Achilles!

Enter PATROCLUS.

Patr. Who's there? Thersites? Good Thersites, come in and rail.

Ther. If I could have remembered a gilt counterfeit, thou wouldest not have slipped out of my contemplation: but it is no matter: Thyself upon thyself! The common curse of mankind, folly and ignorance, be thine in great revenue! heaven bless thee from a tutor, and discipline come not near thee! Let thy blood § be thy direction till thy death! then if she, that lays thee out, says—thou art a fair corpse, I'll be sworn and sworn upon't, she never shrouded any but lazars. || Amen.—Where's Achilles?

Patr. What, art thou devout? wast thou in prayer?

Ther. Ay; The heavens hear me!

Enter ACHILLES.

Achil. Who's there?

Patr. Thersites, my lord.

Achil. Where, where?—Art thou come? Why, my cheese, my digestion, why hast thou not served thyself in to my table so many meals?
Come; what's Agamemnon?

Ther. Thy commander, Achilles:—Then tell me, Patroclus, what's Achilles?

Patr. Thy lord, Thersites; Then tell me, I pray thee, what's thyself?

Ther. Thy knower, Patroclus; Then tell me,
Patroclus, what art thou?

Patr. Thou mayest tell, that knowest.

Achil. Oh! tell, tell.

Ther. I'll decline the whole question. Aga-memnon commands Achilles; Achilles is my lord; I am Patroclus' knower; and Patroclus is a fool.

Patr. You rascal!

Ther. Peace, fool; I have not done.

* Blustering. † Envy.
‡ The wand of Mercury wreathed with serpents.
‡ Passions. ‡ Leprous persons.

Achil. He is a privileged man.—Proceed, Thersites.

Ther. Agamemnon is a fool : Achilles is a fool ; Thersites is a fool ; and, as aforesaid, Patroclus is a fool.

Achil. Derive this ; come.

Ther. Agamemnon is a fool to offer to command Achilles ; Achilles is a fool to be commanded of Agamemnon ; Thersites is a fool to serve such a fool ; and Patroclus is a fool positive.

Patr. Why am I a fool ?

Ther. Make that demand of the prover.—It suffices me, thou art. Look you, who comes here !

Enter AGAMEMNON, ULYSSES, NESTOR, DIOMEDES, and AJAX.

Achil. Patroclus, I'll speak with nobody :—Come in with me, Thersites. [Exit.

Ther. Here is such patchery, such juggling, and such knavery ! all the argument is, a cuckold and a whore ; A good quarrel to draw emulous * factions, and bleed to death upon ! Now the dry serpigo † on the subject ! and war and lechery confound all ! [Exit.

Agam. Where is Achilles ?

Patr. Within his tent ; but ill dispos'd, my lord.

Agam. Let it be known to him that we are here.

He shent ‡ our messengers ; and we lay by—Our appertainments, § visiting of him : Let him be told so ; lest, perchance, he think We dare not move the question of our place, Or know not what we are.

Patr. I shall say so to him. [Exit.

Ulyss. We saw him at the opening of his tent : He is not sick.

Ajax. Yes, lion-sick, sick of proud heart : you may call it melancholy, if you will favour the man ; but, by my head, 'tis pride : But why, why ? let him show us a cause.—A word, my lord. [Takes AGAMEMNON aside.

Nest. What moves Ajax thus to bay at him ?

Ulyss. Achilles hath inveigled his fool from him.

Nest. Who ? Thersites ?

Ulyss. He.

Nest. Then will Ajax lack matter, if he have out his argument. ¶

Ulyss. No you see, he is his argument, that has his argument ; Achilles.

Nest. All the better ; their fraction is more our wish, than their faction : But it was a strong composition, a fool could disunite.

Ulyss. The amity that wisdom knits not, folly may easily untie. Here comes Patroclus.

Re-enter PATROCLUS.

Nest. No Achilles with him.

Ulyss. The elephant hath joints, but none for courtesy : his legs are legs for necessity, not for flexure.

Patr. Achilles bids me say—he is much sorry,

If any thing more than your sport and pleasure Did move your greatness, and this noble state, To call upon him : he hopes, it is no other, But for your health and your digestion sake, And after-dinner's breath. ¶

Agam. Hear you, Patroclus ;—We are too well acquainted with these answers : But his evasion, wing'd thus swift with scorn, Cannot outfly our apprehensions.

Much attribute he hath ; and much the reason Why we ascribe it to him : yet all his virtues,—Not virtuously on his own part beheld,—

Do, in our eyes, begin to lose their gloss ; Yea, like fair fruit in an unwholesome dish, Are like to rot untasted. Go and tell him, Patr. I shall ; and bring his answer presently. [Exit.

Agam. In second voice we'll not be satisfied, We come to speak with him.—Ulysses, enter. [Exit ULYSSES.

Ajax. What is he more than another ?

Agam. No more than what he thinks he is.

Ajax. Is he so much ? Do you not think, he thinks himself a better man than I am ?

Agam. No question.

Ajax. Will you subscribe his thought, and say—he is ?

Agam. No, noble Ajax ; you are as strong, as vallant, as wise, no less noble, much more gentle, and altogether more tractable.

Ajax. Why should a man be proud ? How doth pride grow ? I know not what pride is.

Agam. Your mind's the clearer, Ajax, and your virtues the fairer. He that is proud, eats up himself : pride is his own glass, his own trumpet, his own chronicle ; and whatever praises itself but in the deed, devours the deed in the praise.

Ajax. I do hate a proud man, as I hate the engendering of toads.

Nest. And yet he loves himself : Is it not strange ? [Aside.

Re-enter ULYSSES.

Ulyss. Achilles will not to the field to-morrow.

Agam. What's his excuse ?

Ulyss. He doth rely on none ; But carries on the stream of his dispose, Without observance or respect of any, In will peculiar and in self-admission.

Agam. Why will he not, upon our fair request,

Untent his person, and share the air with us ?

Ulyss. Things small as nothing, for request's sake only, [greatness ;

He makes important : Possess'd he is with And speaks not to himself, but with a pride That quarrels at self-breath : imagin'd worth Holds in his blood such swoln and hot discourse,

That, 'twixt his mental and his active parts, Kingdom'd Achilles in commotion rages, And batters down himself : What should I say ? He is so plaguy proud, that the death tokens of it Cry—No recovery.

Agam. Let Ajax go to him.—

Dear lord, go you and greet him in his tent : 'Tis said he holds you well : and will be led, At your request, a little from himself.

Ulyss. O Agamemnon, let it not be so ! We'll consecrate the steps that Ajax makes When they go from Achilles : shall the proud lord,

That bastes his arrogance with his own seam, ¶ And never suffers matter of the world Enter his thoughts,—save such as do revolve

* Attend. † Shyness. ‡ Obey
§ Fits of lunacy. ¶ Approbation.
¶ Swine-seam is hog's lard.

And ruminat himself,—shall he be worshipp'd

Must not so stale his palm, nobly acquir'd,
Nor, by my will, assubjugate his merit,
As amply titled as Achilles is,
By going to Achilles:
That were to enlard his fat-already pride;
And add more coals to Cancer,* when he burns
With entertaining great Hyperion.
This lord go to him! Jupiter forbid;
And say in thunder—Achilles, go to him.

Nest. Oh! this is well; he rubs the vein of him. [Aside.]

Dio. And how his silence drinks up this applause! [Aside.]

Ajax. If I go to him, with my arm'd fist I'll pash† him over the face.

Agam. Oh! no, you shall not go.

Ajax. An he be proud with me, I'll pheeze‡ his pride:

Let me go to him.

Ulyss. Not for the worth that hangs upon our quarrel.

Ajax. A paltry, insolent fellow,—

Nest. How he describes Himself! [Aside.]

Ajax. Can he not be sociable?

Ulyss. The raven Chides blackness. [Aside.]

Ajax. I will let his humours blood.

Agam. He'll be physician, that should be the patient. [Aside.]

Ajax. An all men Were o' my mind,—

Ulyss. Wit would be out of fashion. [Aside.]

Ajax. He should not bear it so,
He should eat swords first: Shall pride carry it?

Nest. An 'twould, you'd carry half. [Aside.]

Ulyss. He'd have ten shares. [Aside.]

Ajax. I'll knead him, I will make him supple:—

Nest. He's not yet thorough warm: force him with praises:

Pour in, pour in; his ambition is dry. [Aside.]

Ulyss. My lord, you feed too much on this dislike. [To AGAMEMNON.]

Nest. O noble general, do not do so.

Dio. You must prepare to fight without Achilles.

Ulyss. Why, 'tis this naming of him does him harm.

Here is a man—But 'tis before his face;
I will be silent.

Nest. Wherefore should you so?

He is not emulous§ as Achilles is.

Ulyss. Know the whole world, he is as valiant.

Ajax. A whoreson dog, that shall palter¶ thus with us!

I would he were a Trojan!

Nest. What a vice

Were it in Ajax now—

Ulyss. If he were proud?

Dio. Or covetous of praise?

Ulyss. Ay, or surly borne?

Dio. Or strange, or self-affected?

Ulyss. Thank the heavens, lord, thou art of sweet composure;

Praise him that got thee, she that gave thee suck:

Fam'd be thy tutor, and thy parts of nature

Thrice-fam'd beyond all erudition:

But he that disciplin'd thy arms to fight,

Let Mars divide eternity in twain,

And give him half: and, for thy vigour,

Bull-bearing Milo his addition yield

To sinewy Ajax. I will not praise thy wisdom,

Which, like a bourn,†† a pale, a shore, confines

Thy spacious and dilated parts: Here's Nestor,— Instructed by the antiquary times,
He must, he is, he cannot but be wise;—
But pardon, father Nestor, were your days
As green as Ajax', and your brain so temper'd
You should not have the eminence of him,
But be as Ajax.

Ajax. Shall I call you father?

Nest. Ay, my good son.

Dio. Be rul'd by him, lord Ajax.

Ulyss. There is no tarrying here; the hart Achilles

Keeps thicket. Please it our great general

To call together all his state of war;

Fresh kings are come to Troy: To-morrow,

We must with all our main of power stand fast:

And here's a lord,—come knights from east to west,

And cull their flower, Ajax shall cope the best.

Agam. Go we to council. Let Achilles sleep:
Light boats sail swift, though greater hulks draw deep. [Exeunt.]

ACT III.

SCENE I.—Troy.—A Room in PRIAM'S Palace.

Enter PANDARUS and a SERVANT.

Pan. Friend! you! pray you, a word: Do not you follow the young lord Paris?

Serv. Ay, Sir, when he goes before me.

Pan. You do depend upon him, I mean?

Serv. Sir, I do depend upon the lord.

Pan. You do depend upon a noble gentleman; I must needs praise him.

Serv. The lord be praised!

Pan. You know me, do you not?

Serv. Faith, Sir, superficially.

Pan. Friend, know me better; I am the lord Pandarus.

Serv. I hope, I shall know your honour better.

Pan. I do desire it.

Serv. You are in the state of grace. [Music within.]

Pan. Grace! not so, friend; honour and lordship are my titles:—What music is this?

Serv. I do but partly know, Sir; it is music in parts.

Pan. Know you the musicians?

Serv. Wholly, Sir.

Pan. Who play they to?

Serv. To the hearers, Sir.

Pan. At whose pleasure, friend?

Serv. At mine, Sir, and their's that love music.

Pan. Command, I mean, friend.

Serv. Who shall I command, Sir?

Pan. Friend, we understand not one another; I am too courtly, and thou art too cunning: At whose request do these men play?

Serv. That's to't, indeed, Sir: Marry, Sir at the request of Paris my lord, who is there in person; with him, the mortal Venus, the heart-blood of beauty, love's invisible soul,—

Pan. Who, my cousin Cressida?

Serv. No, Sir, Helen; Could you not find out that by her attributes?

Pan. It should seem, fellow, that thou hast not seen the lady Cressida. I come to speak with Paris from the prince Troilus: I will make a complimentary assault upon him, for my business seeths.*

Serv. Sudden business! there's a stewed phrase, indeed!

Enter PARIS and HELEN, attended.

Pan. Fair be to you, my lord, and to all this fair company! fair desires, in all fair measure,

Helen. Dear lord, you are full of fair words.

Pan. You speak your fair pleasure, sweet queen.—

Fair prince, here is good broken music.

Par. You have broke it, cousin ; and, by my life, you shall make it whole again : you shall piece it out with a piece of your performance.—
Nell, he is full of harmony.

Pan. Truly, lady, no.

Helen. O Sir,—

Pan. Rude, in sooth ; in good sooth, very rude.

Par. Well said, my lord ! well, you say so in this.

Pan. I have business to my lord, dear queen :—

My lord, will you vouchsafe me a word ?

Helen. Nay, this shall not hedge us out ; we'll hear you sing, certainly.

Pan. Well, sweet queen, you are pleasant with me.—But (marry) thus, my lord,—My dear lord, and most esteemed friend, your brother Troilus—

Helen. My lord Pandarus ; honey-sweet lord,—

Pan. Go to, sweet queen, go to :—commend himself most affectionately to you.

Helen. You shall not bob us out of our melody ; if you do, our melancholy upon your head !

Pan. Sweet queen, sweet queen ; that's a sweet queen, I'faith.

Helen. And to make a sweet lady sad, is a sour offence.

Pan. Nay, that shall not serve your turn ; that shall it not, in truth, la. Nay, I care not for such words ; no, no.—And, my lord, he desires you, that, if the king call for him at supper, you will make his excuse.

Helen. My lord Pandarus,—

Pan. What says my sweet queen,—my very sweet queen ?

Par. What exploit's in hand ? where sups he to-night ?

Helen. Nay, but my lord,—

Pan. What says my sweet queen ?—My cousin will fall out with you. You must not know where he sups.

Par. I'll lay my life, with my disposer Cressida.

Pan. No, no, no such matter, you are wide ;† come, your disposer is sick.

Par. Well, I'll make excuse.

Pan. Ay, good my lord. Why should you say—Cressida ? no, your poor disposer's sick.

Par. I spy.

Pan. You spy ! what do you spy ?—Come, give me an instrument.—Now, sweet queen.

Helen. Why, this is kindly done.

Pan. My niece is horribly in love with a thing you have, sweet queen.

Helen. She shall have it, my lord, if it be not my lord Paris.

Pan. He ! no, she'll none of him ; they two are twain.

Helen. Falling in, after falling out, may make them three.

Pan. Come, come, I'll hear no more of this ; I'll sing you a song now.

Helen. Ay, ay, prythee now. By my troth, sweet lord, thou hast a fine forehead.

Pan. Ay, you may, you may.

Helen. Let thy song be love : this love will undo us all. O Cupid, Cupid, Cupid !

Pan. Love ! ay, that it shall, I'faith.

Par. Ay, good now, love, love, nothing but love.

Pan. In good troth, it begins so :

Love, love, nothing but love, still more !

For, oh ! love's bow

Shoots buck and doe :

* By him.

† Wide of your mark.

*The shaft confounds,
Not that it wounds
But tickles still the sore.*

*These lovers cry—Oh ! oh ! they die !
Yet that which seems the wound to kill,
Doth turn oh ! oh ! to ha ! ha ! ha !
So dying love lives still :
Oh ! oh ! a while, but ha ! ha ! ha !
Oh ! oh ! groans out for ha ! ha ! ha !*

Hey ho !

Helen. In love, I'faith, to the very tip of the nose.

Par. He eats nothing but doves, love ; and that breeds hot blood, and hot blood begets hot thoughts, and hot thoughts beget hot deeds, and hot deeds is love.

Pan. Is this the generation of love ? hot blood, hot thoughts, and hot deeds ?—Why, they are vipers : is love a generation of vipers ? Sweet lord, who's a-field to-day ?

Par. Hector, Delphobus, Helenus, Antenor, and all the gallantry of Troy : I would fain have armed to-night, but my Nell would not have it so. How chance my brother Troilus went not ?

Helen. He hangs the lip at something ;—you know all, lord Pandarus.

Pan. Not I, honey-sweet queen,—I long to hear how they sped to-day.—You'll remember your brother's excuse ?

Par. To a hair.

Pan. Farewell, sweet queen.

Helen. Commend me to your niece.

Pan. I will, sweet queen.

[Exit.

[A Retreat sounded.

Par. They are come from field : let us to Priam's hall,

To greet the warriors. Sweet Helen, I must woo you

To help unarm our Hector : his stubborn buckles,

With these your white enchanting fingers touch'd,

Shall more obey, than to the edge of steel,

Or force of Greekish sinews ; you shall do more Than all the island kings, disarm great Hector.

Helen. 'Twill make us proud to be his servant, Paris :

Yea, what he shall receive of us in duty,
Give us more palm in beauty than we have ;
Yea, overshines ourself.

Par. Sweet, above thought I love thee.

[Exeunt.

SCENE II.—The same. PANDARUS' Orchard.

Enter PANDARUS and a SERVANT, meeting.

Pan. How now ? where's thy master ? at my cousin Cressida's ?

Serv. No, Sir ; he stays for you to conduct him thither.

Enter TROILUS.

Pan. Oh ! here he comes.—How now, how now ?

Tro. Sirrah, walk off. [Exit SERVANT.

Pan. Have you seen my cousin ?

Tro. No, Pandarus : I stalk about her door, Like a strange soul upon the Stygian banks Staying for wassage. Oh he thou my Charon, And give me swift transportance to those fields, Where I may wallow in the lily beds, Propos'd for the deserver ! O gentle Pandarus, From Cupid's shoulder pluck his painted wings, And fly with me to Cressid !

Pan. Walk here i'the orchard ; I'll bring her straight. [Exit PANDARUS.

Tro. I am giddy : expectation whirls me The imaginary relish is so sweet [round. That it enchants my sense : What will it be, When that the watery palate tastes indeed Love's thrice-reputed nectar ? death, I fear me ; Swooning destruction ; or some joy too fine, Too subtle-potent, tun'd too sharp in sweetness, For the capacity of my ruder powers :

Q

I fear it much ; and I do fear besides,
That I shall lose distinction in my joys ;
As doth a battle, when they charge on heaps
The enemy flying.

Re-enter PANDARUS.

Pan. She's making her ready, she'll come straight : you must be witty now. She does so blush, and fetches her wind so short, as if she were frayed with a sprite : I'll fetch her. It is the prettiest villain :—she fetches her breath as short as a new-ta'en sparrow.

[Exit PANDARUS.]

Tro. Even such a passion doth embrace my bosom :
My heart beats thicker than a feverous pulse ;
And all my powers do their bestowing lose,
Like vassalage at unawares encount'ring
The eye of majesty.

Enter PANDARUS and CRESSIDA.

Pan. Come, come, what need you blush ? shame's a baby.—Here she is now : swear the oaths now to her, that you have sworn to me.—What are you gone again ? you must be watched ere you be made tame, must you ? Come your ways, come your ways : an you draw backward, we'll put you i'the fills. *—Why do you not speak to her ?—Come, draw this curtain, and let's see your picture. Alas the day, how loath you are to offend daylight ! an 'twere dark, you'd close sooner. So, so ; rub on, and kiss the mistress. † How now, a kiss in fee-farm ! build there, carpenter ; the air is sweet. Nay, you shall fight your hearts out, ere I part you. Tro. You have bereft me of all words, lady.

Pan. Words pay no debts, give her deeds : but she'll bereave you of the deeds too, if she call your activity in question. What, billing again ? Here's—In witness whereof the parties interchangeably—Come in come in ; I'll go get a fire.

Exit PANDARUS.

Cres. Will you walk in, my lord ?

Tro. O Cressida, how often have I wished me thus ?

Cres. Wished my lord ?—The gods grant !—O my lord !

Tro. What should they grant ? what makes this pretty abruption ? What too curious dreg espies my sweet lady in the fountain of our love ?

Cres. More dregs than water if my fears have eyes.

Tro. Fears make devils cherubins ; they never see truly.

Cres. Blind fear, that seeing reason leads, finds safer footing than blind reason stumbling without fear : To fear the worst, oft cures the worst.

Tro. Oh ! let my lady apprehend no fear : in all Cupid's pageant there is presented no monster.

Cres. Nor nothing monstrous neither ?

Tro. Nothing but our undertakings ; when we vow to weep seas, live in fire, eat rocks, tame tigers ; thinking it harder for our mistress to devise imposition enough, than for us to undergo any difficulty imposed. This is the monstruosity in love, lady,—that the will is infinite, and the execution confined ; that the desire is boundless, and the act a slave to limit.

Cres. They, say, all lovers swear more performance than they are able, and yet reserve an ability that they never perform ; vowing more than the perfection of ten, and discharging less than the tenth part of one. They that have the voice of lions, and the act of hares, are they not monsters ?

* I. e. In the shafts. † An allusion to bowling ; what is now called the jack was formerly termed the mistress. ‡ The tercel is the male and the falcon the female hawk.

Tro. Are there such ? such are not we : Praise us as we are tasted, allow us as we prove ; our head shall go bare, till merit crown it : no perfection in reversion shall have a praise in present : we will not name desert, before his birth ; and, being born, his addition* shall be humble. Few words to fair truth : Troilus shall be such to Cressid, as what envy can say worst, shall be a mock for his truth ; and what truth can speak truest, not truer than Troilus.

Cres. Will you walk in, my lord ?

Re-enter PANDARUS.

Pan. What, blushing still ? have you not done talking yet ?

Cres. Well, uncle, what folly I commit, I dedicate to you.

Pan. I thank you for that : if my lord get a boy of you, you'll give him me : Be true to my lord : if he flinch, chide me for it.

Tro. You know now your hostages : your uncle's word, and my firm faith.

Pan. Nay, I'll give my word for her too ; our kindred, though they be long ere they are wooed, they are constant, being won : they are burs, I can tell you ; they'll stick where they are thrown.

Cres. Boldness comes to me now, and brings me heart :

Prince Troilus, I have lov'd you night and day
For many weary months.

Tro. Why was my Cressid then so hard to win ?

Cres. Hard to seem won ; but I was won, my lord,

With the first glance that ever—Pardon me ;
If I confess much, you will play the tyrant.
I love you now ; but not, till now, so much
But I might master it :—in faith, I lie ;
My thoughts were like unbridled children, grown Too headstrong for their mother : See, we fools !

Why have I blabb'd ? who shall be true to us,
When we are so unsecret to ourselves ?
But though I lov'd you well, I woo'd you not ;
And yet, good faith, I wish'd myself a man ;
Or that we women had men's privilege
Of speaking first. Sweet, bid me hold my tongue ;
For, in this rapture, I shall surely speak
The thing I shall repent. See, see, your silence,

Cunning in dumbness, from my weakness draws
My very soul of counsel : Stop my mouth.

Tro. And shall, albeit sweet music issues thence.

Pan. Pretty, I'faith.

Cres. My lord, I do beseech you, pardon me ; 'Twas not my purpose, thus to beg a kiss : I am asham'd ;—O heavens ! what have I done ?—For this time will I take my leave, my lord.

Tro. Your leave, sweet Cressid ?

Pan. Leave ? an you take leave till to-morrow morning,—

Cres. Pray you, content you.

Tro. What offends you, lady ?

Cres. Sir, mine own company.

Tro. You cannot shun Yourself.

Cres. Let me go and try :
I have a kind of self resides with you ;
But an unkind self, that itself will leave,
To be another's fool. I would be gone :
Where is my wit ? I know not what I speak.

Tro. Well know they what they speak, that speak so wisely.

Cres. Perchance my lord, I show more craft than love ;
And fell so roundly to a large confession,
To angle for your thoughts : But you are wise ;
Or else you love not ; For to be wise, and love, Exceeds man's might ; that dwells with gods above.

Tro. Oh! that I thought it could be in a woman,

(As, if it can, I will presume in you.)

To feed for aye^{*} her lamp and flames of love;
To keep her constancy in plight and youth,
Outliving beauty's outward, with a mind
That doth renew swifter than blood decays!
Or, that persuasion could but thus convince
That my integrity and truth to you [me,—
Might be affronted† with the match and weight
Of such a winnow'd purity in love:
How were I then uplifted! but, alas,
I am as true as truth's simplicity,
And simpler than the infancy of truth.

Cres. In that, I'll war with you.

Tro. O virtuous fight,
When right with right wars who shall be most right!

True swains in love, shall in the world to come,
Approve their truths by Troilus: when their rhymes,

Full of protest, of oath, and big compare,†
Want similes, truth tir'd with iteration,—
As true as steel, as plantage to the moon,
As sun to day, as turtle to her mate,
As iron to adamant, as earth to the centre,—
Yet, after all comparisons of truth,
As truth's authentic author to be cited,
As true as Troilus shall crown up‡ the verse,
And sanctify the numbers.

Cres. Prophet may you be!

If I be false, or swerve a hair from truth,
When time is old and hath forgot itself,
When waterdrops have worn the stones of Troy,

And blind oblivion swallow'd cities up,
And mighty states characterless are grated
To dusty nothing; yet let memory,
From false to false, among false maids in love,
Uphraid my falsehood! when they have said—
as false

As air, as water, wind, or sandy earth,
As fox to lamb, as wolf to heifer's calf,
Pard to the hind, or stepdame to her son;
Yea, let them say, to stick the heart of falsehood,
As false as Cressid.

Pen. Go to, a bargain made: seal it, seal it;
I'll be the witness.—Here I hold your hand;
here, my cousin's. If ever you prove false one to another, since I have taken such pains to bring you together, let all pitiful goers-between be called to the world's end after my name, call them all—Pandars: let all constant men be Troiluses, all false women Cressids, and all brokers-between Pandars! say, amen.

Tro. Amen.

Cres. Amen.

Pen. Amen. Whereupon I will show you a chamber and a bed; which bed, because it shall not speak of your pretty encounters, press it to death: away.

And Cupid grant all tongue-tied maidens here,
Bed, chamber, Pandar to provide this gear!

[Exeunt.]

SCENE III.—The Grecian Camp.

Enter AGAMEMNON, ULYSSES, DIOMEDES, NESTOR, AJAX, MENELAUS, and CALCHAS.

Cal. Now, princes, for the service I have done you

The advantage of the time prompts me aloud
To call for recompense. Appear it to your mind,
That, through the sight I bear in things, to Jove

I have abandon'd Troy, left my possession,
Incurs'd a traitor's name; expos'd myself,
From certain and possess'd conveniences,
To doubtful fortunes; sequest'ring from me all
That time, acquaintance, custom, and condition,
Made tame and most familiar to my nature;
And here, to do you service, am become

As new into the world, strange, unacquainted:
I do beseech you, as in way of taste,
To give me now a little benefit,
Out of those many register'd in promise,
Which, you say, live to come in my behalf.

Agam. What would'st thou of us, Trojan? make demand.

Cal. You have a Trojan prisoner, call'd Antenor,
Yesterday took; Troy holds him very dear.
Oft have you, (often have you thanks there-fore,)

Desir'd my Cressid in right great exchange,
Whom Troy hath still denied: But this Antenor,

I know, is such a wrest^{*} in their affairs
That their negotiations all must slack,
Wanting his manage; and they will almost
Give us a prince of blood, a son of Priam,
In change of him: let him be sent, great princes
And he shall buy my daughter; and her presence

Shall quite strike off all service I have done,
In most accepted pain.

Agam. Let Diomedes hear him,
And bring us Cressid hither: Calchas shall have
What he requests of us.—Good Diomed,
Furnish you fairly for this interchange:
Withal, bring word—if Hector will to-morrow
Be answer'd in his challenge: Ajax is ready.

Dio. This shall I undertake; and 'tis a burden
Which I am proud to bear.

[Exeunt DIOMEDES and CALCHAS.]

Enter ACHILLES and PATROCLUS, before their Tent.

Ulyss. Achilles stands i'the entrance of his tent:—

Please it our general to pass strangely† by him,
As if he were forgot; and, princes all,
Lay negligent and loose regard upon him:
I will come last: 'Tis like, he'll question me,
Why such unplaisive eyes are bent, why turn'd on him:

If so, I have derision med'cinable,
To use between your strangeness and his pride,
Which his own will shall have desire to drink;
It may be good: pride hath no other glass
To show itself, but pride; for supple knees
Feed arrogance, and are the proud men's fees.

Agam. We'll execute your purpose, and put on

A form of strangeness as we pass along;—
So do each lord; and either greet him not,
Or else disdainfully, which shall shake him more

Than if not look'd on. I will lead the way.

Achil. What, comes the general to speak with me?

You know my mind, I'll fight no more 'gainst Troy.

Agam. What says Achilles? would he ought with us?

Nest. Would you, my lord, aught with the general?

Achil. No.

Nest. Nothing, my lord.

Agam. The better.

[Exeunt AGAMEMNON and NESTOR.]

Achil. Good day, good day.

Men. How do you? how do you?

[Exit MENELAUS.]

Achil. What, does the cuckold scorn me?

Ajax. How now, Patroclus?

Achil. Good morrow, Ajax.

Ajax. Ha?

Achil. Good morrow.

Ajax. Ay, and good next day too.

[Exit AJAX.]

Achil. What mean these fellows? Know they not Achilles?

Patr. They pass by strangely: they were us'd to bend,

* Ever. † Met with and matched.
‡ Comparison. † Concludes it.

* An instrument for tuning harps, &c.

† Shyly.

To send their smiles before them to Achilles ;
To come as humbly, as they us'd to creep
To holy altars.

Achil. What, am I poor of late ?
'Tis certain, greatness, once fallen out with
fortune,

Must fall out with men too : What the declin'd is,
He shall as soon read in the eyes of others,
As feel in his own fall : for men, like butterflies,

Show not their mealy wings, but to the sun-
And not a man, for being simply man,
Hath any honour ; but honour for those honours
That are without him, as place, riches, favour,
Prizes of accident as oft as merit :

Which when they fall, as being slippery standers,
The love that lean'd on them as slippery too,
Do one pluck down another, and together
Fall in the fall. But 'tis not so with me :

Fortune and I are friends ; I do enjoy
At ample point all that I did possess,
Save these men's looks ; who do, methinks,
Find out

Something not worth in me such rich beholding
As they have often given. Here is Ulysses ;
I'll interrupt his reading.—

How now, Ulysses ?

Ulyss. Now great Thetis' son ?

Achil. What are you reading ?

Ulyss. A strange fellow here

Writes me, That man—how dearly ever parted,*
How much in having, or without, or in,—
Cannot make boast to have that which he hath,
Nor feels not what he owes, but by reflection ;
As when his virtues shining upon others
Heat them, and they retort that heat again
To the first giver.

Achil. This is not strange, Ulysses.
The beauty that is borne here in the face
The bearer knows not, but commends itself
To others' eyes : nor doth the eye itself
(That most pure spirit of sense,) behold itself,
Not going from itself ; but eye to eye oppos'd
Salutes each other with each other's form.
For speculation turns not to itself,
Till it hath travell'd, and is married there
Where it may see itself : this is not strange at all.

Ulyss. I do not strain at the position ;
It is familiar ; but at the author's drift :
Who, in his circumstance, † expressly proves—
That no man is the lord of any thing, (Though in and of him there be much consisting,)

Till he communicate his parts to others :
Nor doth he of himself know them for aught
Till he behold them form'd in the applause
Where they are extended ; which, like an arch, reverberates

The voice again : or like a gate of steel
Fronting the sun, receives and renders back
His figure and his heat. I was much rapt in
And apprehended here immediately [this ;
The unknown Ajax.

Heavens, what a man is there ! a very horse ;
That has he knows not what. Nature, what things there are,

Most abject in regard, and dear in use !
What things again most dear in the esteem,
And poor in worth ! Now shall we see to-morrow,

An act that very chance doth throw upon him,
Ajax renew'd. O heavens, what some men do,
While some men leave to do !
How some men creep in skittish fortune's hall,
Whiles others play the idiots in her eyes !
How one man eats into another's pride,
Whiles pride is fasting in his wantonness !
To see these Grecian lords !—why, even already
They clap the lubber Ajax on the shoulder ;
As if his foot were on brave Hector's breast,
And great Troy shrinking,

* How excellent power endowed.
† Detail of argument.

Achil. I do believe it ; for they pass'd by me,
As misers do by beggars : neither gave to me
Good word nor look : What, are my deeds forgot ?

Ulyss. Time hath, my lord, a wallet at his back,
Wherein he puts alms for oblivion,
A great-sized monster of ingratitude ;
Those scraps are good deeds past : which are devour'd

As fast as they are made, forgot as soon
As done : Perseverance, dear my lord,
Keeps honour bright : To have done, is to hang Quite out of fashion, like a rusty mail
In monumental mockery. Take the instant way :
For honour travels in a strait so narrow,
Where one but goes abreast : keep the the path ;
For emulation hath a thousand sons,
That one by one pursue : If you give way,
Or hedge aside from the direct forthright,
Like to an enter'd tide they all rush by,
And leave you hindmost ;—

Or, like a gallant horse fallen in first rank,
Lie there for pavement to the abject rear,
O'er-run and trampled on : Then what they do
in present,

Though less than your's in past, must o'erstep
For time is like a fashionable host, [your's :
That slightly shakes his parting guest by the
hand,

And with his arms out-stretch'd, as he would fly,
Grasps in the comer : Welcome ever smiles,
And farewell goes out sighing. Oh ! let not virtue seek

Remuneration for the thing it was ;
For beauty, wit,
High birth, vigour of bone, desert in service,
Love, friendship, charity, are subjects all
To envious and calumniating time.

One touch of nature makes the whole world
kin,— [gawds,*

That all, with one consent, praise new-born
Though they are made and moulded of things
past ;

And give to dust, that is a little gilt,
More laud than gilt o'er-dusted.

The present eye praises the present object :
Then marvel not, thou great and complete man,
That all the Greeks begin to worship Ajax ;
Since things in motion sooner catch the eye,
Than what not stirs. The cry went once on thee,
And still it might ; and yet it may again,
If thou would'st not entomb thyself alive,
And ease thy reputation in thy tent ;
Whose glorious deeds, but in these fields of late,
Made emulous missions † 'mongst the gods them-
And drove great Mars to faction. [selves,

Achil. Of this my privacy
I have strong reasons.

Ulyss. But 'gainst your privacy
The reasons are more potent and heretofore :
'Tis known, Achilles, that you are in love
With one of Priam's daughters. ‡

Achil. Ha ! known ?

Ulyss. Is that a wonder ?
The providence that's in a watchful state,
Knows almost every grain of Plutus' gold ;
Fluds bottom in the uncomprehensive deeps ;
Keeps place with thought, and almost, like the gods,

Does thoughts unveil in their dumb cradles.
There is a mystery (with whom relation Durst never meddle) in the soul of state,
Which hath an operation more divine,
Than breath, or pen, can give expressure to :
All the commerce that you have had with Troy,
As perfectly is our's, as your's my lord ;
And better would it fit Achilles much,
To throw down Hector, than Polyxena :
But it must grieve young Pyrrhus now at home,
When fame shall in our islands sound her
trump,

And all the Greekish girls shall tripping sing,—

* New fashioned toys. † Causing the gods themselves to enlist among the combatants.
‡ Polyxena.

*Great Hector's sister did Achilles win ;
But our great Ajax bravely beat down him.
Farewell, my lord : I as your lover * speak ;
The fool slides o'er the ice that you should break.*

[Exit.]

Patr. To this effect, Achilles, have I mov'd
A woman impudent and mannish grown [you :
Is not more loath'd than an effeminate man
In time of action. I stand condemn'd for this :
They think my little stomach to the war,
And your great love to me, restrains you thus :
Sweet, rouse yourself ; and the weak wanton
Cupid

Shall from your neck unloose his amorous fold,
And, like a dew-drop from the lion's mane,
Be shook to air.

Achil. Shall Ajax fight with Hector ?

Patr. Ay, and, perhaps, receive much honour
by him.

Achil. I see my reputation is at stake ;
My fame is shrewdly gor'd.

Patr. Oh ! then beware ;
These wounds heal ill, that men do give them-
Omission to do what is necessary [selves :
Send a commission to a blank of danger ;
And danger, like an ague, subtly taints
Even them when we sit idly in the sun.

Achil. Go call Therites hither, sweet Patro-
clus :

I'll send the fool to Ajax, and desire him
To invite the Trojan lords, after the combat,
To see us here unarm'd : I have a woman's
An appetite that I am sick withal, [longing,
To see great Hector in his weeds of peace ;
To talk with him, and to behold his visage,
Even to my full of view. A labour sav'd !

Enter THERITES.

Ther. A wonder !

Achil. What ?

Ther. Ajax goes up and down the field, asking for himself.

Achil. How so ?

Ther. He must fight singly to-morrow with Hector ; and is so prophetically proud of an heroical cudgelling, that he raves in saying nothing.

Achil. How can that be ?

Ther. Why, he stalks up and down like a peacock, a stride, and a stand : ruminates, like an hustler, that hath no arithmetic but her brain to set down her reckoning : bites his lip with a politic regard, as who should say—there were wit in this head, an 'twould out ; and so there is ;
but it lies as coldly in him as fire in a flint, which will not show without knocking. The man's undone for ever ; for if Hector break not his neck i' the combat, he'll break it himself in vain-glory. He knows not me : I said, Good-morrow, Ajax ; and he replies, Thanks, Agamem-non. What think you of this man, that takes me for the general ? He is grown a very land-lubber, languageless, a monster. A plague of opinion ! a man may wear it on both sides, like a leather jerkin.

Achil. Thou must be my ambassador to him,
Therites.

Ther. Who, if why, he'll answer nobody ;
he professes not answering ; speaking is for beggars ; he wears his tongue in his arms. I will put on his presence ; let Patroclus make demands to me, you shall see the pageant of Ajax.

Achil. To him, Patroclus : Tell him,—I humbly desire the valiant Ajax, to invite the most valorous Hector to come unarm'd to my tent ;
and to procure safe conduct for his person, of the magnanimous and most illustrious six-or-seven-times-honoured captain general of the Grecian army, Agamemnon. Do this.

Patr. Jove bless great Ajax.

Ther. Humph !

Patr. I come from the worthy Achilles,—

Ther. Ha !

Patr. Who most humbly desires you, to invite Hector to his tent !—

Ther. Humph !

Patr. And to procure safe conduct from Agamemnon ?

Ther. Agamemnon ?

Patr. Ay, my lord.

Ther. Ha !

Patr. What say you to't ?

Ther. God be wi' you, with all my heart.

Patr. Your answer, Sir.

Ther. If to-morrow be a fair day, by eleven o'clock it will go one way or other ; howsoever, he shall pay for me ere he has me.

Patr. Your answer, Sir.

Ther. Fare you well, with all my heart.

Achil. Why, but he is not in this tune, is he ?

Ther. No, but he's out o'tune thus. What music will be in him when Hector has knocked out his brains, I know not : But, I am sure, none ; unless the fiddler Apollo get his sinews to make callings * on.

Achil. Come, thou shalt bear a letter to him
straight.

Ther. Let me bear another to his horse ; for that's the more capable † creature.

Achil. My mind is troubled, like a fountain
stirr'd ;

And I myself see not the bottom of it.

[Exeunt ACHILLES and PATROCLUS.]

Ther. 'Would the fountain of your mind were clear again, that I might water an ass at it ! I had rather be a tick in a sheep, than such a valiant ignorance. [Exit.]

ACT IV.

SCENE I.—Troy.—A Street.

Enter, at one side, ÆNEAS and SERVANT,
with a torch ; at the other, PARIS, DRIPH-BUS, ANTENOR, DIOMEDES, and others, with torches.

Par. See, ho ! who's that there ?

Del. 'Tis the lord Æneas.

Æne. Is the prince there in person ?—

Had I so good occasion to lie long,
As you, prince Paris, nothing but heavenly business

Should rob my bed-mate of my company.

Dio. That's my mind too.—Good morrow, lord
Æneas.

Par. A valiant Greek, Æneas ; take his hand :
Witness the process of your speech, wherein
You told—how Diomed, a whole week by days,
Did haunt you in the field.

Æne. Health to you, valiant Sir,
During all question ‡ of the gentle truce :
But when I meet you arm'd, as black defiance
As heart can think, or courage execute.

Dio. The one and other Diomed embraces.
Our bloods are now in calm ; and, so long,
health :

But when contention and occasion meet,
By Jove, I'll play the hunter for thy life,
With all my force, pursuit, and policy.

Æne. And thou shalt hunt a lion, that will fly
With his face backward.—In humane gentle-
ness,

Welcome to Troy ! now, by Anchises' life,
Welcome indeed ! By Venus' hand I swear,
No man alive can love, in such a sort,
The thing he means to kill more excellently.

Dio. We sympathize :—Jove, let Æneas live,
If to my sword his fate be not the glory,
A thousand complete courses of the sun !
But, in mine emulous honour, let him die,
With every joint a wound ; and that to-morrow !

* Late-strings made of catgut.
‡ Conversation.

† Intelligent.

* Friend.

Æne. We know each other well.

Dio. We do; and long to know each other worse.

Par. This is the most despitelful gentle greeting,
The noblest hateful love, that e'er I heard of.—
What business, lord, so early?

Æne. I was sent for to the king; but why, I know not.

Par. His purpose meets you; 'Twas to bring this Greek
To Calchas' house; and there to render him,
For the enfréed Antenor, the fair Cressid:
Let's have your company; or, if you please,
Haste there before us: I constantly do think,
(Or, rather, call my thought a certain knowledge,)

My brother Troilus lodges there to-night;
Rouse him, and give him note of our approach,
With the whole quality wherefore: I fear,
We shall be much unwelcome.

Æne. That I assure you;
Troilus had rather Troy were borne to Greece,
Than Cressid borne from Troy.

Par. There is no help;
The bitter disposition of the time
Will have it so. On, lord; we'll follow you.

Æne. Good morrow, all. [Exit.]

Par. And tell me, noble Diomed; 'faith, tell me true,
Even in the soul of sound good-fellowship,—
Who, in your thoughts, merits fair Helen best,
Myself, or Menelaus?

Dio. Both alike:
He merits well to have her, that doth seek her
(Not making any scruple of her soilure,)
With such a hell of pain, and world of charge;
And you as well to keep her, that defend her
(Not palating the taste of her dishonour,)
With such a costly loss of wealth and friends:
He, like a pulling cuckold, would drink up
The lees and dregs of a flat tamed piece;
You, like a lecher, out of whorish loins
Are pleas'd to breed out your inheritors:
Both merits pois'd, each weighs nor less nor more;
But he as he, the heavier for a whore.

Par. You are too bitter to your countrywoman.

Dio. She's bitter to her country: Hear me, Paris,—

For every false drop in her bawdy veins
A Grecian's life hath sunk; for every scruple
Of her contaminated carrion weight,
A Trojan hath been slain; since she could speak,

She hath not given so many good words breath,
As for her Greeks and Trojans suffer'd death.

Par. Fair Diomed, you do as chapmen do,
Dispraise the thing that you desire to buy:
But we in silence hold this virtue well.—
We'll not commend what we intend to sell,
Here lies our way. [Exeunt.]

SCENE II.—The same.—Court before the House of PANDARUS.

Enter TROILUS and CRESSIDA.

Tro. Dear, trouble not yourself the morn is cold.

Cres. Then, sweet my lord, I'll call mine uncle down;
He shall unbolt the gates.

Tro. Trouble him not;
To bed, to bed: Sleep kill those pretty eyes,
And give us soft attachment to thy senses,
As infants' empty of all thought!

Cres. Good morrow then.

Tro. 'Pr'ythee now, to bed.

Cres. Are you weary of me?

Tro. O Cressida! but that the busy day,
Wak'd by the lark, hath rous'd the ribald
crows,

* Lowd, noisy.

And dreaming night will hide our joys no longer
I would not from thee.

Cres. Night hath been too brief.

Tro. Beshrew the witch! with venomous wights she stays,
As tediously as hell; but flies the grasps of love,
With wings more momentary-swift than thought.
You will catch cold, and curse me.

Cres. 'Pr'ythee tarry;—
You men will never tarry.—

O foolish Cressid!—I might have still held off,
And then you would have tarried. Hark! there's one up.

Pan. [Within.] What, are all the doors open
here?

Tro. It is your uncle.

Enter PANDARUS.

Cres. A pestilence on him! now will he be mocking:
I shall have such a life,—

Pan. How now, how now! how go maiden-heads?—Here, you maid! where's my cousin Cressid?

Cres. Go hang yourself, you naughty mocking uncle!

You bring me to do,* and then you float me too.

Pan. To do what? to do what?—let her say what: what have I brought you to do?

Cres. Come, come; beshrew† your heart!
you'll ne'er be good,
Nor suffer others.

Pan. Ha, ha! Alas, poor wretch! a poor capocchia!‡—hast not slept to-night? would he not, a naughty man, let it sleep? a bugbear take him! [Knocking.]

Cres. Did I not tell you?—would he were knock'd o'the head!—

Who's that at door? good uncle, go and see.—
My lord, come you again into my chamber:
You smile, and mock me, as if I meant naughtily.

Tro. Ha, ha!

Cres. Come, you are deceiv'd, I thing of no such thing.— [Knocking.]

How earnestly they knock!—pray you, come in;
I would not for half Troy have you seen here.

[Exeunt TROILUS and CRESSIDA.]

Pan. [Going to the door.] Who's there?
what's the matter? will you beat down the door?
How now? what's the matter?

Enter ÆNEAS.

Æne. Good morrow, lord, good morrow.

Pan. Who's there? my lord Æneas? By my troth, I knew you not: what news with you so early?

Æne. Is not prince Troilus here?

Pan. Here! what should he do here?

Æne. Come, he is here, my lord, do not deny
him;

It doth import him much, to speak with me.

Pan. Is he here, say you? 'tis more than I know.

I'll be sworn:—For my own part, I came in What should he do here? [Late:]

Æne. Who!—nay, then:—
Come, come, you'll do him wrong ere you are
'ware:

You'll be so true to him, to be false to him:
Do not you know of him, yet go fetch him hither;
Go.

As PANDARUS is going out, enter TROILUS.

Tro. How now? what's the matter?

Æne. My lord, I scarce have leisure to salute you,

My matter is so rash: § There is at hand
Paris your brother, and Deiphobus,
The Grecian Diomed, and our Antenor
Deliver'd to us: and for him forthwith,
Ere the first sacrifice, within this hour,

* A wanton insinuation.

† An Italian word for poor fool.

‡ Ill betide

§ Hasty.

We must give up to Diomedes' hand
The lady Cressida.

Tro. Is it so concluded?

Æne. By Priam, and the general state of
Troy:

They are at hand, and ready to effect it.

Tro. How my achievements mock me!
I will go meet them: and, my lord Æneas,
We met by chance; you did not find me here.

Æne. Good, good, my lord: the secrets of nature
Have not more gift in taciturnity.

[Exeunt TROILUS and ÆNEAS.]

Pan. Is't possible? no sooner got, but lost?
The devil take Antenor! the young prince will go mad. A plague upon Antenor, I would, they had broke's neck!

Enter CRESSIDA.

Cres. How now? What is the matter? Who was here?

Pan. Ah! ah!

Cres. Why sigh you so profoundly? where's my lord gone?

Tell me, sweet uncle, what's the matter?

Pan. 'Would I were as deep under the earth
as I am above!

Cres. O the gods!—What's the matter?

Pan. Prythee, get thee in; 'Would thou had'st ne'er been born! I knew, thou would'st be his death:—O poor gentleman!—A plague upon Antenor!

Cres. Good uncle, I beseech you on my knees,
I beseech you, what's the matter?

Pan. Thou must be gone, wench, thou must be gone; thou art changed for Antenor: thou must to thy father, and begone from Troilus;
'twill be his death; 'twill be his bane; he cannot bear it.

Cres. O you immortal gods!—I will not go.

Pan. Thou must.

Cres. I will not, uncle: I have forgot my father:

I know no touch * of consanguinity;
No kin, no love, no blood, no soul so near me,
As the sweet Troilus.—O you gods divine!
Make Cressid's name the very crown of falsehood,

If ever she leave Troilus! Time, force, and death,
Do to this body what extremes you can;
But the strong base and building of my love
Is as the very centre of the earth, Drawing all things to it.—I'll go in, and weep;—

Pan. Do, do.

Cres. Tear my bright hair, and scratch my praised cheeks,
Crack my clear voice with sobs, and break my
heart

With sounding Troilus. I will not go from Troy.
[Exeunt.]

*SCENE III.—The same.—Before PANDARUS'
House.*

Enter PARIS, TROILUS, ÆNEAS, DRIPHOBUS, ANTENOR, and DIOMEDES.

Par. It is great morning; and the hour pre-fix'd

Of her delivery to this valliant Greek
Comes fast upon:—Good my brother Troilus,
Tell you the lady what she is to do,
And haste her to the purpose.

Tro. Walk in to her house;
I'll bring her to the Grecian presently:
And to his hand when I deliver her,
Think it an altar; and thy brother Troilus
A priest, there offering to it his own heart.

[Exit.]

Par. I know what 'tis to love;
And 'would, as I shall pity, I could help!—
Pleas you, walk in, my lords. [Exeunt.]

* Sense or feeling of relationship.

*SCENE IV.—The same.—A Room in PANDARUS'
House.*

Enter PANDARUS and CRESSIDA.

Pan. Be moderate, be moderate.

Cres. Why tell you me of moderation?
The grief is fine, full, perfect, that I taste,
And violenteth in a sense as strong
As that which causeth it: How can I moderate
If I could temporize with my affection, [it
Or brew it to a weak and colder palate,
The like allayment could I give my grief:
My love admits no qualifying dross;
No more my grief, in such a precious loss.

Enter TROILUS.

Pan. Here, here, here he comes.—Ah! sweet ducks!

Cres. O Troilus! Troilus!

[Embracing him.]

Pan. What a pair of spectacles is here! Let me embrace too: O heart,—as the goodly saying is,—

—O heart, O heavy heart,

Why sigh'st thou without breaking?

where he answers again,

Because thou canst not ease thy smart,
By friendship, nor by speaking.

There never was a truer rhyme. Let us cast away nothing, for we may live to have need of such a verse; we see it, we see it.—How now, lambs!

Tro. Cressid, I love thee in so strain'd a purity,
That the bless'd gods—as angry with my fancy,
More bright in zeal than the devotion which Cold lips blow to their deities,—take thee from
me.

Cres. Have the gods envy?

Pan. Ay, ay, ay, ay; 'tis too plain a case.

Cres. And is it true, that I must go from Troy?

Tro. A hateful truth.

Cres. What, and from Troilus too?

Tro. From Troy and Troilus.

Cres. Is it possible?

Tro. And suddenly; where injury of chance Puts back leave-taking, justles roughly by
All time of pause, rudely beguiles our lips
Of all rejoindure, forcibly prevents
Our lock'd embrasures, strangles our dear vows
Even in the birth of our own labouring breath:
We two, that with so many thousand sighs
Did buy each other, must poorly sell ourselves
With the rude brevity and discharge of one.
Injurious time now, with a robber's haste,
Crams his rich thievery up, he knows not how:
As many farewells as be stars in heaven,
With distinct breath and consign'd kisses to
He fumbles up into a loose adieu; [them,
And scants us with a single famish'd kiss,
Distasted with the salt of broken tears.

Æne. [Within.] My lord! is the lady ready?

Tro. Hark! you are call'd: Some say, the Genius so

Cries, Come! to him that instantly must die.—
Bid them have patience; she shall come anon.

Pan. Where are my tears? rain, to lay this wind, or my heart will be blown up by the root!

[Exit PANDARUS.]

Cres. I must then to the Greeks?

Tro. No remedy.

Cres. A woeful Cressid 'mongst the merry
When shall we see again? [Greeks!]

Tro. Hear me, my love: Be thou but true of
heart,—

Cres. I true! how now? what wicked deem is this?

Tro. Nay, we must use expostulation kindly,
For it is parting from us:
I speak not, be thou true, as fearing thee;

* Sealed.

† Interrupted.

‡ Surmise.

For I will throw my glove to death himself,
That there's no maculation* in thy heart:
But be thou true, say I, to fashion in
My sequent† protestation; be thou true,
And I will see thee.

Cres. Oh! you shall be expos'd, my lord, to dangers
As infinite as imminent! but, I'll be true.

Tro. And I'll grow friend with danger. Wear this sleeve.

Cres. And you this glove. When shall I see
you?

Tro. I will corrupt the Grecian sentinels,
To give thee nightly visitation.
But yet, be true.

Cres. O heavens!—be true again!

Tro. Hear why I speak it, love:
The Grecian youths are full of quality; †
They're loving, well compos'd, with gifts of nature flowing,
And swelling o'er with arts and exercise;
How novelty may move, and parts with person,
Alas, a kind of godly jealousy
(Which I beseech you, call a virtuous sin)
Makes me afraid.

Cres. O heavens! you love me not.

Tro. Die I a villain then!

In this I do not call your faith in question,
So mainly as my merit: I cannot sing,
Nor heel the high lavolt, § nor sweeten talk,
Nor play at subtle games; fair virtues all,
To which the Grecians are most prompt and pregnant:

But I can tell, that in each grace of these
There lurks a still and dumb-discouraging devil,
That tempts most cunningly: but be not tempted.

Cres. Do you think I will?

Tro. No.

But something may be done, that we will not:
And sometimes we are devils to ourselves,
When we will tempt the frailty of our powers,
Presuming on their changeable potency.

Aene. [Within.] Nay, good my lord,—

Tro. Come, kiss; and let us part.

Par. [Within.] Brother Troilus!

Tro. Good brother, come you hither;
And bring Aeneas and, the Grecian, with you.

Cres. My lord, will you be true?

Tro. Who, I? alas, it is my vice, my fault:
While others fish with craft for great opinion,
I with great truth catch mere simplicity;
Whilst some with cunning gild their copper crowns,

With truth and plainness I do wear mine bare.
Fear not my truth; the moral of my wit
Is—plain and true,—there's all the reach of it.

Enter AENEAS, PARIS, ANTENOR, DRIPHOBUS, and DIOMEDES.

Welcome, Sir Diomed! here is the lady,
Which for Antenor we deliver you:
At the port, || lord, I'll give her to thy hand;
And, by the way, possess † thee what she is.
Entreat her fair; and, by my soul, fair Greek,
If e'er thou stand at mercy of my sword,
Name Cressid, and thy life shall be as safe
As Priam is in Ilion.

Dio. Fair lady Cressid,
So please you, save the thanks this prince expects:

The lustre in your eye, heaven in your cheek,
Pleads your fair usage; and to Diomed
You shall be mistress and command him wholly.

Tro. Grecian, thou dost not use me courteously,

To shame the seal of my petition to thee,
In praising her: I tell thee, lord of Greece,
She is as far high-soaring o'er thy praises,
As thou unworthy to be call'd her servant.
I charge thee, use her well, even for my charge;
For by the dreadful Pinto, if thou dost not,

Though the great bulk Achilles be thy guard,
I'll cut thy throat.

Dio. Oh! be not mov'd, prince Troilus:
Let me be privileg'd by my place and message,
To be a speaker free; When I am hence,
I'll answer to my lust: * And know you, lord,
I'll nothing do on charge: To her own worth
She shall be priz'd; but that you say—be't so,
I'll speak it in my spirit and honour,—no.

Tro. Come, to the port.—I'll tell thee, Dio med, [head.—

This brave shall oft make thee to hide thy
Lady, give me your hand; and, as we walk,
To our own selves bend we our needful talk.

[Exeunt TROILUS, CRESSIDA, and DIOMEDES.
[Trumpet heard.

Par. Hark! Hector's trumpet.

Aene. How have we spent this morning!
The prince must think me tardy and remiss,
That swore to ride before him to the field.

Par. 'Tis Troilus' fault: Come, come, to field
with him.

Det. Let us make ready straight.

Aene. Yea, with a bridegroom's fresh alacrity,
Let us address to tend on Hector's heels:
The glory of our Troy doth this day lie,
On his fair worth and single chivalry.

[Exeunt.

*SCENE V.—The Grecian Camp.—Lists set
out.*

Enter AJAX, armed; AGAMEMNON, ACHILLES, PATROCLUS, MENELAUS, ULYSSES, NESTOR, and others.

Agam. Here art thou in appointment† fresh and fair.

Anticipating time with starting courage.
Give with thy trumpet a loud note to Troy,
Thou dreadful Ajax; that the appalled air
May pierce the head of the great combatant,
And hale him thither.

Ajax. Thou, trumpet, there's my pure.
Now crack thy lungs, and split thy brazen pipe:
Blow, villain, till thy spher'd bias cheek
Out-swell the colic of puff'd Aquilon:
Come, stretch thy chest, and let thy eyes spout
blood;

Thou blow'st for Hector. [Trumpet sounds.

Ulyss. No trumpet answers.

Achil. 'Tis but early days.

Agam. Is not you Diomed, with Calchas'
daughter?

Ulyss. 'Tis he, I ken the manner of his gait;
He rises on the toe: that spirit of his
In aspiration lifts him from the earth.

Enter DIOMEDES, with CRESSIDA.

Agam. Is this the lady Cressid?

Dio. Even she.

Agam. Most dearly welcome to the Greeks sweet lady.

Nest. Our general doth salute you with a kiss.

Ulyss. Yet is the kindness but particular;

'Twere better she were kiss'd in general.

Nest. And very courtly counsel: I'll begin.—
So much for Nestor.

Achil. I'll take that winter from your lips fair lady:

Achilles bids you welcome.

Men. I had good argument for kissing once.

Patr. But that's no argument for kissing now
For thus popp'd Paris in his bardiment;
And parted thus you and your argument.

Ulyss. O deadly gall, and theme of all our scorns!

For which we lose our heads to gild his horns.

Patr. The first was Menelaus' kiss;—this Patroclus kisses you. [mine.

Men. Oh! this is trim!

Patr. Paris, and I, kiss evermore for him.

Men. I'll have my kiss, Sir:—Lady, by your leave.

* Spot. † Following. ‡ Highly accomplished.
§ A dance. ¶ Gate. ¶ Inform.

* Pleasure, will.

† Preparation.

Ores. In kissing do you render or receive?
Patr. Both take and give.
Ores. I'll make my match to live,
 The kiss you take is better than you give:
 Therefore no kiss.
Men. I'll give you boot, I'll give you three for one.
Ores. You're an odd man; give even or give none.
Men. An odd man, lady? every man is odd.
Ores. No, Paris is not; for, you know 'tis
 true,
 That you are odd, and he is even with you,
Men. You flipp me o'the head.
Ores. No, I'll be sworn.
Ulyss. It were no match, you sail against his horn.—
May I, sweet lady, beg a kiss of you?
Ores. You may.
Ulyss. I do desire it.
Ores. Why, beg then.
Ulyss. Why then, for Venus' sake, give me
 a kiss,
 When Helen is a maid again, and his.
Ores. I am your debtor, claim it when 'tis due.
Ulyss. Never's my day, and then a kiss of
 you.
Dio. Lady, a word;—I'll bring you to your father. [DIOMED leads out CRESSIDA.]
Nest. A woman of quick sense.
Ulyss. Fie, lie upon her!
 There's language in her eye, her cheek, her lip;
 Nay, her foot speaks; her wanton spirits look
 At every joint and motive * of her body. [out]
 Oh! these encounterers, so glib of tongue,
 That give a coasting welcome ere it comes,
 And wide unclasp the tables of their thoughts
 To every ticklish reader! set them down
 For sluttish spoils of opportunity,
 And daughters of the game. [Trumpet within.]
All. The Trojan's trumpet.
Agam. Yonder comes the troop.
Enter HECTOR, armed; ÆNEAS, TROILUS, and other Trojans, with Attendants.
Æne. Hail, all the state of Greece! what shall be done [pose,]
 To him that victory commands? Or do you pur-
 A victor shall be known? will you, the knights
 Shall to the edge of all extremity
 Pursue each other; or shall they be divided
 By any voice or order of the field?
Hector bade ask.
Agam. Which way would Hector have it?
Æne. He cares not, he'll obey conditions.
Achil. 'Tis done like Hector; but securely
 done.
 A little proudly, and great deal misprising
 The knight oppos'd.
Æne. If not Achilles, Sir,
 What is your name?
Achil. If not Achilles, nothing.
Æne. Therefore Achilles: But, what's er, know this;—
 In the extremity of great and little,
 Valour and pride excol themselves in Hector;
 The one almost as infinite as all,
 The other blank as nothing. Weigh him well,
 And that, which looks like pride, is courtesy.
 This Ajax is half made of Hector's blood:
 In love whereof, half Hector stays at home;
 Half heart, half hand, half Hector comes to seek
 This blended knight, half Trojan, and half Greek.
Achil. A maiden battle then?—Oh! I perceive
 you.

Re-enter DIOMED.

Agam. Here is Sir Diomed:—Go, gentle
 knight,
 Stand by our Ajax: as you and lord Æneas
 Consent upon the order of their fight,
 So be it; either to the uttermost,

* Motion.

Or else a breath; * the combatants being him,
 Half stints† their strife before their strokes
 begin.

[AJAX and HECTOR enter the lists]
Ulyss. They are oppos'd already.
Agam. What Trojan is that same that looks so heavy?
Ulyss. the youngest son of Priam, a true
 knight;
 Not yet mature, yet matchless; firm of word;
 Speaking in deeds and deedless; in his tongue;
 Not soon provok'd, nor, being provok'd, soon
 calm'd:
 His heart and hand both open, and both free;
 For what he has, he gives, what thinks, he shows;
 Yet gives he not till judgment guide his bounty,
 Nor dignifies an impair'd thought with breath:
 Manly as Hector, but more dangerous;
 For Hector, in his blaze of wrath, subscribes‡
 To tender objects; but he, in heat of action,
 Is more vindictive than jealous love:
 They call him Troilus; and on him erect
 A second hope as fairly built as Hector.
 Thus says Æneas; one that knows the youth
 Even to his inches, and, with private soul,
 Did in great Ilium thus translate ¶ him to me.

[Alarm. HECTOR and AJAX fight.]

Agam. They are in action.
Nest. Now, Ajax, hold thine own!
Tro. Hector, thou sleep'st;
 Awake thee!
Agam. His blows are well dispos'd:—there,
 Ajax!
Dio. You must no more. [Trumpets cease.]
Æne. Princes, enough, so please you.
Ajax. I am not warm yet, let us fight again.
Dio. As Hector pleases.

Hect. Why then will I no more:—
 Thou art, great lord, my father's sister's son,
 A cousin-german to great Priam's seed;
 The obligation of our blood forbids
 A gory  emulation 'twixt us twain:
 Were they commixtion Greek and Trojan so,
 That thou could'st say—This hand is Grecian
And this is Trojan; the sinews of this leg [all,
All Greek, and this all Troy; my mother's
blood

Runs on the dexter †† cheek, and this sinister‡‡
Bounds in my father's; by Jove multipotent, Thou should'st not bear from me a Greekish
 member

Wherein my sword had not impressure made
 Of our rank feud: But the just gods gainsay,
 Than any drop thou borrow'st from thy mother
 My sacre aunt, should by my mortal sword
 Be drain'd! Let me embrace thee, Ajax:
 By him that thunders, thou hast lusty arms;
 Hector would have them fall upon him thus:
 Cousin, all honour to thee!

Ajax. I thank thee, Hector:
 Thou art too gentle, and too free a man;
 I came to kill thee, cousin, and bear hence
 A great addition §§ earned in thy death.
Hect. Not Neoptolemus || so admirable
 (On whose bright crest Fame with her loud'st O yes!

Cries, This is he,) could promise to himself
 A thought of added honour torn from Hector.
Æne. There is expectance here from both the
 What further you will do. [sides,]

Hect. We'll answer it:
 The issue is embracement:—Ajax, farewell.
Ajax. If I might in entreaties find success
 (As said ¶¶ I have the chance,) I would desire
 My famous cousin to our Grecian tents.

Dio. 'Tis Agamemnon's wish: and great
 Achilles

Doth long to see unarm'd the valliant Hector.
Hect. Æneas, call my brother Troilus to me:

* Or else merely for exercise. † Stops.
 ‡ No honour. § Unsuitable to his character.
 ¶ Yields. ¶ Explain his character.
  Bloody. †† Right. ‡‡ Left.
 †† Title. || Achilles. ¶¶ Seldom.
 R

And signify this loving interview
To the expecters of our Trojan part ; [sin ;
Desire them home.—Give me thy hand, my cou-
I will go out with thee, and see your knights.

Ajax. Great Agamemnon comes to meet us here.

Hect. The worthiest of them tell me name by name ;

But for Achilles, my own searching eyes
Shall find him by his large and portly size.

Agam. Worthy of arms ! as welcome as to one
That would be rid of such an enemy ;
But that's no welcome : Understand more clear,
What's past and what's to come, is stew'd with
And formless ruin of oblivion ; [husks,
But in this extant moment, faith and troth,
Strain'd purely from all hollow bias-drawing,
Bids thee, with most divine integrity,
From heart of every heart, great Hector, welcome.

Hect. I thank thee, most imperious* Aga-memnon.

Agam. My well fam'd lord of Troy, no less to
you. [To TROILUS.

Men. Let me confirm my princely brother's greeting ;—

You brace of warlike brothers, welcome hither.

Hect. Whom must we answer ?

Men. The noble Menelaus.

Hect. O you, my lord ! by Mars his gauntlet,
thanks !

Mock not, that I affect the untraded† oath ;
Your quondam‡ wife swears still by Venus'
glove :

She's well, but bade me not commend her to you.

Men. Name her not now, Sir ; she's a deadly theme.

Hect. Oh ! pardon ; I offend.

Nest. I have, thou gallant Trojan, seen thee
Labouring for destiny, make cruel way [oft,
Through ranks of Greekish youth : and I have seen thee,

As hot as Perseus, spur thy Phrygian steed,
Despising many forfeits and subduements,
When thou hast hung thy advanced sword
I'the air,

Not letting it decline on the declin'd ; §
That I have said to some my standers-by Lo, Jupiter is yonder, dealing life !

And I have seen thee pause, and take thy breath,
When that a ring of Greeks have hemm'd thee in,

Like an Olympian wrestling : This have I seen ;
But this thy countenance, still lock'd in steel,
I never saw till now. I knew thy grandsire, ||
And once fought with him : he was a soldier
good ;

But, by great Mars, the captain of us all,
Never like thee : Let an old man embrace thee ;
And, worthy warrior, welcome to our tents.

Aene. 'Tis the old Nestor.

Hect. Let me embrace thee, good old chronicle, [time :—
Thou hast so long walk'd hand in hand with Most reverend Nestor, I am glad to clasp thee.

Nest. I would my arms could match thee in contention,
As they contend with thee in courtesy.

Hect. I would they could.

Nest. Ha !

By this white beard, I'd fight with thee to-morrow.
Well, welcome, welcome ! I have seen the
time—

Ulyss. I wonder now how yonder city stands,
When we have here her base and pillar by us.

Hect. I know your favour, lord Ulysses, well.
Ah ! Sir, there's many a Greek and Trojan dead,
Since first I saw yourself and Diomed
In Ilion, on your Greekish embassy.

Ulyss. Sir, I foretold you then what would ensue :

My prophecy is but half his journey yet ;

For yonder walls, that pertly front your town,
Yon towers, whose wanton tops do buss the
clouds,
Must kiss their own feet.

Hect. I must not believe you :
There they stand yet ; and modestly I think,
The fall of every Phrygian stone will cost
A drop of Grecian blood : The end crowns all ;
And that old common arbitrator, time,
Will one day end it.

Ulyss. So to him we leave it.
Most gentle, and most vallant Hector, welcome.
After the general, I beseech you next
To feast with me, and see me at my tent.

Achil. I shall forestall thee, lord Ulysses,
thou !—

Now, Hector, I have fed mine eyes on thee ;
I have with exact view perus'd thee, Hector,
And quoted* joint by joint.

Hect. Is this Achilles ?

Achil. I am Achilles.

Hect. Stand fair, I pray thee : let me look on
thee.

Achil. Behold thy fill.

Hect. Nay, I have done already.

Achil. Thou art too brief ; I will the second
time,

As I would buy thee, view thee limb by limb.

Hect. Oh ! like a book of sport thou'lt read me o'er ;

But there's more in me than thou understand'st.
Why dost thou so oppress me with thine eye ?

Achil. Tell me, you heavens, in which part of his body [there ?

Shall I destroy him ? whether there, there, or
That I may give the local wound a name ;
And make distinct the very breach whereout
Hector's great spirit flew : Answer me, heavens !

Hect. It would discredit the bleas'd gods, proud
man,

To answer such a question : Stand again :
Think'st thou to catch my life so pleasantly,
As to prenominate† in nice conjecture,
Where thou wilt hit me dead ?

Achil. I tell thee, yea.

Hect. Wert thou an oracle to tell me so,
I'd not believe thee. Henceforth guard thee
well ;

For I'll not kill thee there, nor there, nor there .
But, by the forge that stithied‡ Mars his helm,
I'll kill thee every where, yea, o'er and o'er.—
You wisest Grecians, pardon me this brag,
His insolence draws folly from my lips ;
But I'll endeavour deeds to match these words,
Or may I never—

Ajax. Do not chase thee, cousin ;—

And you, Achilles, let these threats alone
Till accident or purpose bring you to't :
You may have every day enough of Hector,
If you have stomach ; § the general state, I fear
Can scarce entreat you to be odd with him.

Hect. I pray you, let us see you in the field ;
We have had pelting || wars, since you refus'd
The Grecians' cause.

Achil. Dost thou entreat me, Hector ?

To-morrow do I meet thee, fell as death ;
To-night all friends.

Hect. Thy hand upon that match.

Agam. First, all you peers of Greece go to my tent ;

There in the full convive ¶ we : afterwards,
As Hector's leisure and your bounties shall Concur together, severally entreat him.—
Beat loud the tabourines, let the trumpets blow,

That this great soldier may his welcome know.

[Exeunt all but TROILUS and ULYSSES.

Tro. My lord Ulysses, tell me, I beseech you
In what place of the field doth Calchas keep ?

Ulyss. At Menelaus' tent, most princely Troi-lus :

* Imperial. † Singular, not common. ‡ Former.
§ Fallen. || Laomedon.

* Observed.
‡ Stithy, a smith's shop.
|| Petty. ¶ Feast.

† Forename.
§ Inclination.
 Small drums

There Diomed doth feast with him to-night;
Who neither looks upon the heaven, nor earth,
But gives all gaze and bent of amorous view
On the fair Cressid.

Tro. Shall I, sweet lord, be bound to you so much,

After we part from Agamemnon's tent,
To bring me thither?

Ulyss. You shall command me, Sir.
As gentle tell me, of what honour was
This Cressida in Troy? Had she no lover
there

That walls her absence?

Tro. O Sir, to such as boasting show their scars,

A mock is due. Will you walk on, my lord?
She was belov'd, she lov'd; she is, and doth:
But, still, sweet love is food for fortune's tooth.

[Exeunt.]

ACT V.

SCENE I.—The Grecian Camp.—Before
ACHILLES' Tent.

Enter ACHILLES and PATROCLUS.

Achil. I'll heat his blood with Greekish wine
to-night,

Which with my scimitar I'll cool to-morrow.—
Patroclus, let us feast him to the height.

Patr. Here comes Thersites.

Enter THERSITES.

Achil. How now, thou core of envy?
Thou crusty batch of nature, what's the news?

Ther. Why, thou picture of what thou seem-est, and idol of idiot-worshippers, here's a letter for thee.

Achil. From whence, fragment?

Ther. Why, thou full dish of fool, from Troy.

Patr. Who keeps the tent now?

Ther. The surgeon's box, or the patient's wound.

Patr. Well said, Adversity! * and what need these tricks?

Ther. Pr'ythee be silent, boy; I profit not by thy talk: thou art thought to be Achilles' male varlet.

Patr. Male varlet, you rogue! what's that?

Ther. Why, his masculine whore. Now the rotten diseases of the south, the guts-gripping, ruptures, catarrhs, loads o' gravel i'the back, lethargies, cold palsies, raw eyes, dirt-rotten livers, wheezing lungs, bladders full of impos-thume, sciaticas, limekilns i'the palm, incurable bone-ache, and the rivelled fee-simple of the letter; take and take again such preposterous discoveries!

Patr. Why thou damnable box of envy, thou, what meanest thou to curse thus?

Ther. Do I curse thee?

Patr. Why, no, you ruinous butt; you whore-son indistinguishable cur, no.

Ther. No? why art thou then exasperate, thou idle immaterial skein of sleave† silk, thou green sarcenet flap for a sore eye, thou tassell of a prodigal's purse, thou? Ah! how the poor world is pestered with such water-flies; diminutives of nature!

Patr. Out, gall!

Ther. Pinch egg!

Achil. My sweet Patroclus, I am thwarted quite

From my great purpose in to-morrow's battle.

Here is a letter from queen Hecuba:

A token from her daughter, my fair love;

Both taxing me, and gaging me to keep

An oath that I have sworn. I will not break it:

Fail, Greeks; fail, fame; honour, or go, or stay;

My major vow lies here, this I'll obey.—

* Contrariety.

† Coarse, unwrought.

Come, come, Thersites, help to trim my tent.
This night in banqueting must all be spent.
Away, Patroclus.

[Exeunt ACHILLES and PATROCLUS.]

Ther. With too much blood, and too little brain, these two may run mad; but if with too much brain, and too little blood, they do, I'll be a curer of madmen. Here's Agamemnon,— an honest fellow enough, and one that loves quails; * but he has not so much brain as ear-wax: And the goodly transformation of Jupiter
there, his brother, the bull,—the primitive statue and oblique memorial of cuckolds; † a thrifty shoeing-horn in a chain, hanging at his brother's leg,—to what form, but that he is, should wit larded with malice, and malice forced ‡ with wit turn him to? To an ass, were nothing; he is both ass and ox: to an ox were nothing; he is both ox and ass. To be a dog, a mule, a cat, a itchew, § a toad, a lizard, an owl, a puttock, or a herring without a row, I would not care: but to be Menelaus,—I would conspire against destiny. Ask me not what I would be, if I were not Thersites; for I care not to be the louse of a lazar, ¶ so I were not Menelaus.—Hey-day!
spirits and fires!

Enter HECTOR, TROILUS, AJAX, AGAMEMNON, ULYSSES, NESTOR, MENELAUS, and DIOMED, with Lights.

Agam. We go wrong, we go wrong.

Ajax. No, yonder 'tis;

There, where we see the lights.

Hect. I trouble you.

Ajax. No, not a whit.

Ulyss. Here comes himself to guide you.

Enter ACHILLES.

Achil. Welcome, brave Hector; welcome, princes all.

Agam. So now, fair prince of Troy, I bid good
Ajax commands the guard to tend on you. [Night.]

Hect. Thanks, and good night to the Greeks'
general.

Men. Good night, my lord.

Hect. Good night, sweet Menelaus.

Ther. Sweet draught: ¶ Sweet, quoth 'a! sweet sink, sweet sewer.

Achil. Good night,

And welcome, both to those that go, or tarry.

Agam. Good night.

[Exeunt AGAMEMNON and MENELAUS.]

Achil. Old Nestor tarries; and you too, Dio-
Keep Hector company an hour or two. [Med,

Dio. I cannot, lord; I have important business. [Hector.]

The tide whereof is now,—Good night, great

Hect. Give me your hand.

Ulyss. Follow his torch, he goes
To Calchas' tent; I'll keep you company.

[Aside to TROILUS

Tro. Sweet Sir, you honour me.

Hect. And so good night.

[*Exit DIOMED; ULYSSES and TROILUS
following.*]

Achil. Come, come, enter my tent.

[Exeunt ACHILLES, HECTOR, AJAX, and NESTOR.]

Ther. That same Diomed's a false-hearted rogue, a most unjust knave; I will no more trust him when he leers, than I will a serpent when he hisses: he will spend his mouth, and promise, like Brabler the hound; but when he performs, astronomers foretel it; it is prod-gious,  there will come some change; the sun borrows of the moon, when Diomed keeps his word. I will rather leave to see Hector, than not to dog him: they say, he keeps a Trojan drab, and uses the traitor Calchas' tent: I'll after.—Nothing but lechery! all inclement varlets! [Exit.]

* Harlots.

† Polecat.

‡ Menelaus.

§ A diseased beggar.

 Ominous.

¶ Scuffed.

¶ Privy

SCENE II.—The same.—Before CALCHAS' Tent.

Enter DIOMEDES.

Dio. What! are you up here, ho? speak.

Cal. [Within.] Who calls?

Dio. Diomed.—Calchas, I think.—Where's your daughter?

Cal. [Within.] She comes to you.

Enter TROILUS and ULYSSES, at a distance; after them THERSITES.

Ulyss. Stand where the torch may not discover us.

Enter CRESSIDA.

Tro. Cressid come forth to him!

Dio. How now, my charge?

Cres. Now, my sweet guardian!—Hark! a word with you. [Whispers.]

Tro. Yea, so familiar!

Ulyss. She will sing any man at first sight.

Ther. And any man may sing her, if he can take her cliff;* she's noted.

Dio. Will you remember?

Cres. Remember? yes.

Dio. Nay, but do then;

And let your mind be coupled with your words.

Tro. What should she remember?

Ulyss. List!

Cres. Sweet honey Greek, tempt me no more to folly.

Ther. Roguery!

Dio. Nay, then,—

Cres. I'll tell you what:

Dio. Pho! pho! come, tell a pin: You are forsworn.—

Cres. In faith, I cannot: what would you have me do?

Ther. A juggling trick, to be—secretly open.

Dio. What did you swear you would bestow on me?

Cres. I pr'ythee, do not hold me to mine oath;

Did me do any thing but that, sweet Greek.

Dio. Good night.

Tro. Hold, patience!

Ulyss. How now, Trojan?

Cres. Diomed,—

Dio. Do, no, good night: I'll be your fool no more.

Tro. Thy better matt.

Cres. Hark! one word in your ear.

Tro. O plague and madness!

Ulyss. You are mov'd, prince; let us depart, I pray you,

Lest your displeasure should enlarge itself To wrathful terms; this place is dangerous; The time right deadly: I beseech you, go.

Tro. Behold, I pray you!

Ulyss. Now, good my lord, go off:

You flow to great destruction; come, my lord.

Tro. I pr'ythee, stay.

Ulyss. You have not patience; come.

Tro. I pray you, stay: by hell, and all hell's torments,

I will not speak a word.

Dio. And so, good night.

Cres. Nay, but you part in anger.

Tro. Doth that grieve thee?

O wither'd truth!

Ulyss. Why, how now, lord?

Tro. By Jove,

I will be patient.

Cres. Guardian!—why, Greek!

Dio. Pho, pho! adieu; you palter.†

Cres. In faith, I do not; come hither once again.

Ulyss. You shake, my lord, at something; will you go?

You will break out.

Tro. She strokes his cheek!

Ulyss. Come, come.

Tro. Nay, stay; by Jove, I will not speak a word:

There is between my will and all offences A guard of patience:—stay a little while.

Ther. How the devil luxury, with his fat rump, and potatoe finger, tickles these together! Fry, lechery, fry!

Dio. But will you then?

Cres. In faith, I will, la; never trust me else.

Dio. Give me some token for the surety of it.

Cres. I'll fetch you one. [Exit.]

Ulyss. You have sworn patience.

Tro. Fear me not, my lord;

I will not be myself, nor have cognition* Of what I feel: I am all patience.

Re-enter CRESSIDA.

Ther. Now the pledge; now, now, now!

Cres. Here, Diomed, keep this sleeve.

Tro. O beauty! where's thy faith?

Ulyss. My lord,—

Tro. I will be patient: outwardly I will.

Cres. You look upon that sleeve; Behold it well.—

He loved me—O false wench!—Giv't me again.

Dio. Who was't?

Cres. No matter, now I hav't again.

I will not meet with you to-morrow night:

I pr'ythee Diomed, visit me no more.

Ther. Now she sharpens;—Well said, whet stone.

Dio. I shall have it.

Cres. What, this?

Dio. Ay, that.

Cres. Oh! all you gods!—O pretty pretty pledge!

Thy master now lies thinking in his bed

Of thee and me; and sighs, and takes my glove, And gives memorial dainty kisses to it,

As I kiss thee.—Nay, do not snatch it from me; He that takes that, must take my heart withal.

Dio. I had your heart before, this follows it.

Tro. I did swear patience.

Cres. You shall not have it, Diomed; 'faith you shall not:

I'll give you something else,

Dio. I will have this; Whose was it?

Cres. 'Tis no matter.

Dio. Come, tell me whose it was.

Cres. 'Twas one's that loved me better than you will.

But now you have it, take it.

Dio. Whose was it?

Cres. By all Diana's waiting-women yonder,† And by herself, I will not tell you whose.

Dio. To morrow will I wear it on my helm; And grieve his spirit that dares not challenge it.

Tro. Wert thou the devil, and wor'st on thy It should be challenged. [born,]

Cres. Well, well, 'tis done, 'tis past;—And yet it is not;

I will not keep my word.

Dio. Why then, farewell;

Thou never shalt mock Diomed again.

Cres. You shall not go:—One cannot speak a word,

But it straight starts you.

Dio. I do not like this fooling.

Ther. Nor I, by Pluto: but that that likes not you, pleases me best.

Dio. What, shall I come? the hour?

Cres. Ay, come:—O Jove!—

Do come:—I shall be plagu'd.

Dio. Farewell till then.

Cres. Good night. I pr'ythee, come.—

[Exit DIOMEDES.]

Troilus, farewell! one eye yet looks on thee;

But with my heart the other eye doth see.

Ah! poor our sex! this fault in us I find,

The error of our eye directs our mind:

What error leads, must err; O then, conclude,

Minds, sway'd by eyes, are full of turpitude.

[Exit CRESSIDA.]

* Key note.

† Shuffle.

* Knowledge.

† The stars.

Ther. A proof of strength she could not publish more,
Unless she said, My mind is now turn'd where.
Ulyss. All's done, my lord.

Tro. It is.

Ulyss. Why stay we then?

Tro. To make a recordation* to my son
Of every syllable that here was spoke.
But, if I tell how these two did co-act
Shall I not lie in publishing a truth?
Sith† yet there is a credence‡ in my heart,
And esperance§ so obstinately strong,
That doth invert the attest|| of eyes and ears;
As if those organs had deceptions functions,
Created only to calumniate.
Was Cressid here?

Ulyss. I cannot conjure, Trojan.

Tro. She was not sure.

Ulyss. Most sure she was.

Tro. Why, my negation¶ hath no taste of madness.

Ulyss. Nor mine, my lord: Cressid was here but now.

Tro. Let it not be believ'd for womanhood! **
Think, we had mothers; do not give advantage
To stubborn critics††—apt, without a theme,
For depravation,—to square the general sex
By Cressid's rule: rather think this not Cressid.

Ulyss. What hath she done, prince, that can soil our mothers?

Tro. Nothing at all, unless that this were she.

Ther. Will he swagger himself out on's own eyes?

Tro. This she? no, this is Diomed's Cressida:
If beauty have a soul, this is not she;
If some guide vows, if vows be sanctimony,
If sanctimony be the gods' delight,
If there be rule in unity itself,
This was not she. O madness of discourse,
That canse sets up with and against itself!
Bifold authority! where reason can revolt
Without perdition, and loss assume all reason
Without revolt; this is, and is not, Cressid!
Within my soul there doth commence a fight
Of this strange nature, that a thing inseparate
Divides more widely than the sky and earth;
And yet the spacious breath of this division
Admits no orifice for a point as subtle
As is Arachne's broken wool, to enter.
Instance, O instance! strong as Pluto's gates;
Cressid is mine, tied with the bonds of heaven:
Instance, O instance! strong as heaven itself;
The bonds of heaven are slipp'd, dissolv'd, and loos'd;

And with another knot, five-finger tied,
The fractions of her faith, orts of her love,
The fragments, scraps, the bits, and greasy reliquies

Of her o'er-eaten faith, are bound to Diomed.

Ulyss. May worthy Troilus be half attach'd
With that which here his passion doth express?

Tro. Ay, Greek; and that shall be divulged
In characters as red as Mars his heart [well inflam'd with Venus: never did young man fancy‡‡

With so eternal and so fix'd a soul.
Hark, Greek;—As much as I do Cressid love,
So much by weight hate I her Diomed:
That sleeve is mine, that he'll bear on his helm;
Were it a casque§§ compos'd by Vulcan's skill,
My sword should bite it: not the dreadful spout,
Which shipmen do the hurricano call,
Constring'd|| in mass by the almighty sun,
Shall dizzy with more clamour Neptune's ear
In his descent, than shall my prompted sword
Falling on Diomed.

Ther. He'll tickle it for his concupy.¶¶

Tro. O Cressid! O false Cressid! false, false, false!

Let all untruths stand by thy stained name,
And they'll seem glorious.

Ulyss. Oh! contain yourself;
Your passion draws ears hither.

Enter ÆNEAS.

Æne. I have been seeking you this hour, my
lord:

Hector, by this, is arming him in Troy;

Ajax, your guard, stays to conduct you home.

Tro. Have with you, prince:—My courteous lord, adieu:

Farewell, revolted fair!—and, Diomed,
Stand fast, and wear a castle on thy head!

Ulyss. I'll bring you to the gates.

Tro. Accept distracted thanks.

[Exeunt TROILUS, ÆNEAS, and ULYSSES.]

Ther. 'Would I could meet that rogue Dio-med! I would croak like a raven; I would bode,
I would bode. Patroclus will give me any thing for the intelligence of this whore: the parrot will not do more for an almond, than he for a commodious drab. Lechery, lechery; still, wars and lechery; nothing else holds fashion: A burning devil take them!

[Exit]

SCENE III.—Troy.—Before PRIAM'S Palace.

Enter HECTOR and ANDROMACHE.

And. When was my lord so much ungently temper'd,

To stop his ears against admonishment?

Unarm, unarm, and do not fight to-day.

Hect. You train me to offend you; get you in:
By all the everlasting gods, I'll go.

And. My dreams will, sure, prove ominous to the day.

Hect. No more, I say.

Enter CASSANDRA.

Cas. Where is my brother Hector?

And. Here, sister; arm'd, and bloody in intent:

Consort with me in loud and dear petition,
Pursue we him on knees; for I have dream'd
Of bloody turbulence, and this whole night Hath nothing been but shapes and forms of slaughter.

Cas. Oh! it is true.

Hect. Ho! bid my trumpet sound!

Cas. No notes of sally, for the heavens, sweet brother.

Hect. Begone, I say: the gods have heard me swear.

Cas. The gods are deaf to hot and peevish*
vows;

They are polluted offerings, more abhor'd
Than spotted livers in the sacrifice.

And. Oh! be persuaded: Do not count it holy

To hurt by being just: it is as lawful,
For we would give much, to use violent thefts
And rob in the behalf of charity.

Cas. It is the purpose that makes strong the
vow;

But vows, to every purpose, must not hold:
Unarm, sweet Hector.

Hect. Hold you still, I say;

Mine honour keeps the weather of my fate:
Life every man holds dear; but the dear man Holds honour far more precious-dear† than life.—

Enter TROILUS.

How now, young man? mean'st thou to fight today?

And. Cassandra, call my father to persuade.

[Exit CASSANDRA.]

Hect. No, 'faith, young Troilus; doff‡ thy harness, youth,
I am to-day i'the vein of chivalry:

* Remembrance. † State. ‡ Belief.
§ Hope. || Testimony. ¶ Denial.
 For the sake of. †† Cynical. ‡ Love.
§§ Helmet. || Composed. ¶¶ Concupiscence.

* Foolish. † Valuable. ‡ Put off.

Let grow thy sinews till their knots be strong,
And tempt not yet the brushes of the war.
Unarm thee, go; and doubt thou not, brave boy,
I'll stand, to-day, for thee, and me, and Troy.

Tro. Brother, you have a vice of mercy in you,
Which better fits a lion than a man.

Hect. What vice is that, good Troilus? chide me for it.

Tro. When many times the captive Grecians
fall,
Even in the fau and wind of your fair sword,
You bid them rise, and live.

Hect. Oh! 'tis fair play.

Tro. Fool's play, by heaven, Hector.

Hect. How now? how now?

Tro. For the love of all the gods,
Let's leave the hermit pity with our mother;
And when we have our armours buckled on,
The venom'd vengeance ride upon our swords;
Spur them to ruthless* work, rein them from ruth.†

Hect. Fie, savage, fie!

Tro. Hector, then 'tis wars.

Hect. Troilus, I would not have you fight
to-day.

Tro. Who should withhold me?
Not fate, obedience, nor the hand of Mars
Beckoning with fiery truncheon my retire;
Not Priamus and Hecuba on knees,
Their eyes o'ergalled with recourse of tears;
Nor you, my brother, with your true sword drawn,
Oppos'd to hinder me, should stop my way,
But by my ruin.

Re-enter CASSANDRA, with PRIAM.

Cas. Lay hold upon him, Priam, hold him fast:

He is thy crutch; now if thou lose thy stay,
Thou on him leaning, and all Troy on thee,
Fall altogether.

Pri. Come, Hector, come, go back:
Thy wife hath dream'd; thy mother hath had visions;

Cassandra doth foresee; and I myself
Am like a prophet suddenly enrapt,
To tell thee—that this day is ominous:
Therefore, come back.

Hect. Aeneas is a-field;
And I do stand engag'd to many Greeks,
Even in the faith of valour, to appear
This morning to them.

Pri. But thou shalt not go.

Hect. I must not break my faith.
You know me dutiful; therefore, dear Sir,
Let me not shame respect; but give me leave
To take that course by your consent and voice,
Which you do here forbid me, royal Priam.

Cas. O Priam, yield not to him.

And. Do not, dear father.

Hect. Andromache, I am offended with you:
Upon the love you bear me, get you in.

[Exit ANDROMACHE.]
Tro. This foolish, dreaming, superstitious girl
Makes all these bodements.

Cas. O farewell, dear Hector.

Look, how thou diest! look, how thy eye turns
pale!

Look, how thy wounds do bleed at many vents!
Hark, how Troy roars! how Hecuba cries out!
How poor Andromache shrills her dolours
forth!

Behold, destruction, frenzy, and amazement,
Like witless antics, one another meet,
And all cry—Hector! Hector's dead! O Hector!

Tro. Away!—Away!

Cas. Farewell.—Yet, soft:—Hector, I take my
leave:

Thou dost thyself and all our Troy deceive.

[Exit.]
Hect. You are amaz'd, my liege, at her exclaim:

* Ruesful, weeful.

† Morey.

Go in, and cheer the town: we'll forth, and fight; [night.]

Do deeds worth praise, and tell you them at Pri. Farewell: the gods with safety stand about thee!

[Exeunt severally PRIAM and HECTOR.]
Alarums.

Tro. They are at it; hark! Proud Diomed, believe,
I come to lose my arm, or win my sleeve.

As TROILUS is going out, enter, from the other side, PANDARUS.

Pan. Do you hear, my lord? do you hear?

Tro. What now?

Pan. Here's a letter from yon' poor girl.

Tro. Let me read.

Pan. A whoreson ptisick, a whoreson rascally ptisick so troubles me, and the foolish fortune of this girl: and what one thing, what another, that I shall leave you one o'these days: And I have a rheum in mine eyes too; and such an ache in my bones, that, unless a man were cursed,
I cannot tell what to think on't.—What says she
there?

Tro. Words, words, mere words, no matter from the heart; [Tearing the letter.]
The effect doth operate another way.—
Go, wind, to wind, there turn and change together.—

My love with words and errors still she feeds;
But edifies another with her deeds.

[Exeunt severally.]

SCENE IV.—Between Troy and the Grecian Camp.

Alarums: Excursions. Enter THESSITES.

Ther. Now they are clapper-clawing one another; I'll go look on. This dissembling abominable varlet, Diomed, has got that same scurvy doting foolish young knave's sleeve of Troy
there, in his helm: I would fain see them meet;
that that same young Trojan ass, that loves the whore there, might send that Greekish whore-masterly villain with the sleeve, back to the dissembling luxurious drab, on a sleeveless errand.
O' the other side, The policy of those crafty swearing rascals,—that stale old mouse-eaten dry cheese, Nestor: and that same dog-fox, Ulysses, —is not proved worth a blackberry:—They set me up, in policy, that mongrel cur, Ajax, against that dog of as bad a kind, Achilles: and now is the cur Ajax prouder than the cur Achilles, and will not arm to-day: whereupon the Grecians begin to proclaim barbarism, and policy grows into an ill opinion. Soft! here come sleeve, and t'other.

Enter DIOMEDES, TROILUS following.

Tro. Fly not; for, should'st thou take the river Styx,
I would swim after.

Dio. Thou dost miscall retire:
I do not fly; but advantageous care
Withdrew me from the odds of multitude:
Have at thee!

Ther. Hold thy whore, Grecian!—now for thy whore, Trojan!—now the sleeve, now the sleeve!

[Exeunt TROILUS and DIOMEDES, fighting.]

Enter HECTOR.

Hect. What art thou, Greek? art thou for Hector's match?
Art thou of blood, and honour?

Ther. No, no: I am a rascal; a scurvy railing knave; a very filthy rogue.

Hect. I do believe thee;—live. [Exit.]

Ther. God-a-mercy, that thou wilt believe me;
But a plague break thy neck, for frightening me!
What's become of the wenching rogues? I think they have swallowed one another: I would laugh at that miracle. Yet, in a sort, lechery eats itself. I'll seek them. [Exit.]

SCENE V.—The same.

Enter DIOMEDES and a SERVANT.

Dio. Go, go, my servant, take thou Troilus' horse;
Present the fair steed to my lady Cressid:
Fellow, commend my service to her beauty;
Tell her, I have chastis'd the amorous Trojan,
And am her knight by proof.

Serv. I go, my lord. [Exit SERVANT.]

Enter AGAMEMNON.

Agam. Renew, renew! The fierce Polydamus
Hath beat down Menon: bastard Margarelon
Hath Doreus prisoner:
And stands colossus-wise, waving his beam,*
Upon the pashed† corse of the king
Epistrophus and Cedius: Polixenes is slain;
Amphimachus, and Thoas, deadly hurt;
Patroclus ta'en, or slain; and Palamedes
Sore hurt and bruised: the dreadful Sagittary
Appeals our numbers; haste we, Diomed,
To reinforcement, or we perish all.

Enter NESTOR.

Nest. Go, bear Patroclus' body to Achilles;
And bid the snail-pac'd Ajax arm for'shame.—
There is a thousand Hectors in the field:
Now here he fights on Galathea his horse,
And there lacks work; anon, he's there afoot,
And there they fly, or die, like scaled sculls‡
Before the belching whale; then is he yonder,
And there the strawy Greeks, ripe for his edge,
Fall down before him, like the mower's swath:
Here, there, and every where, he leaves, and Dexterity so obeying appetite, [takes;
That what he will he does; and does so much,
That proof is call'd impossibility.

Enter ULYSSES.

Ulyss. Oh! courage, courage, princes! great
Achilles
Is arming, weeping, cursing, vowing vengeance:
Patroclus' wounds have rous'd his drowsy blood,
Together with his mangled Myrmidons,
That noseless, handless, hack'd and chipp'd, come
to him,
Crying on Hector. Ajax hath lost a friend,
And foams at mouth, and he is arm'd, and at
it,
Roaring for Troilus; who hath done to-day
Mad and fantastic execution;
Engaging and redeeming of himself,
With such a careless force, and forceless care,
As if that luck, in very spite of cunning,
Bade him win all.

Enter AJAX.

Ajax. Troilus! thou coward Troilus! [Exit.]

Dio. Ay, there, there.

Nest. So, so, we draw together.

Enter ACHILLES.

Achil. Where is this Hector?
Come, come, thou boy-queller, § show thy face;
Know what it is to meet Achilles angry.
Hector! where's Hector? I will none but Hector. [Exit.]

SCENE VI.—Another part of the Field.

Enter AJAX.

Ajax. Troilus, thou coward Troilus, show thy
head!

Enter DIOMEDES.

Dio. Troilus, I say! where's Troilus?

Ajax. What would'st thou?

Dio. I would correct him.

Ajax. Were I the general thou should'st have my office, [Troilus!
Ere that correction:—Troilus, I say! what,

* Lance. † Bruised, crushed.
‡ Shoal of fish. § Killer.

Enter TROILUS.

Tro. O traitor Diomed!—turn thy false face
thou traitor,
And pay thy life thou ow'st me for my horse!

Dio. Ha! art thou there?

Ajax. I'll fight with him alone: stand, Dio-med.

Dio. He is my prize, I will not look upon.*

Tro. Come both, you cogg'ing† Greeks; have at you both. [Exeunt, fighting.]

Enter HECTOR.

Hect. Yea, Troilus? Oh! well fought my youngest brother!

Enter ACHILLES.

Achil. Now do I see thee: Ha!—Have at thee, Hector.

Hect. Pause, if thou wilt.

Achil. I do disdain thy courtesy, proud Trojan.

Be happy, that my arms are out of use:
My rest and negligence befriended thee now,
But thou anon shalt hear of me again;
Till when go seek thy fortune. [Exit.]

Hect. Fare thee well:—

I would have been much more a fresher man,
Had I expected thee.—How now, my brother?

Re-enter TROILUS.

Tro. Ajax hath ta'en Aeneas; shall it be?
No, by the flame of yonder glorious heaven,
He shall not carry ‡ him; I'll be taken too,
Or bring him off:—Fate, hear me what I say!
I reck § not though I end my life to-day. [Exit.]

Enter one in sumptuous Armour.

Hect. Stand, stand, thou Greek; thou art a goodly mark:—

No! wilt thou not?—I like thy armour well;
I'll crush ¶ it, and unlock the rivets all,
But I'll be master of it:—Wilt thou not, beast, abide?

Why, then, fly on, I'll hunt thee for thy hide.
[Exeunt.]

SCENE VII.—The same.

Enter ACHILLES, with Myrmidons.

Achil. Come here about me, you my Myr-midons;

Mark what I say.—Attend me where I wheel:
Strike not a stroke, but keep yourselves in
breath;

And when I have the bloody Hector found,
Empale him with your weapons round about;
In fellest manner execute ¶ your arms.

Follow me, Sirs, and my proceedings eye:
It is decreed—Hector the great must die.

[Exeunt.]

SCENE VIII.—The same.

Enter MENELAUS and PARIS, fighting: then THERSITES.

Ther. The cuckold, and the cuckold-maker are

[Exeunt PARIS and MENELAUS.]

Enter MARGARELON.

Mar. Turn, slave, and fight.

Ther. What art thou?

Mar. A bastard son of Priam's.

Ther. I am a bastard too; I love bastards: I am a bastard begot, bastard instructed, bastard in mind, bastard in valour, in every thing illegitimate. One bear will not bite another, and wherefore should one bastard? Take heed, the quarrel's most ominous to us: If the son of a

Mar. The devil take thee, coward !
[Exeunt.]

SCENE IX.—Another part of the field.

Enter HECTOR.

Hect. Most putrified core, so fair without,
Thy goodly armour thus hath cost thy life.
Now is my day's work done ! I'll take good breath :
Rest, sword ; thou hast thy fill of blood and
death !

[Puts off his helmet, and hangs his shield behind him.]

Enter ACHILLES and Myrmidons.

Achil. Look, Hector, how the sun begins to set ;
How ugly night comes breathing at his heels :
Even with the veil and dark'ning of the sun,
To close the day up Hector's life is done.

Hect. I am unarm'd ; forego this vantage,*
Greek.

Achil. Strike, fellows, strike ; this is the man
I seek. [Hector falls.]
So, Ilion, fall thou next ! now, Troy, sink down ;
Here lies thy heart, thy shew, and thy bone.—
On, Myrmidons : and cry you all again,
Achilles hath the mighty Hector slain.

[A Retreat sounded.]

Hark ! a retreat upon our Grecian part.

Myr. The Trojan trumpets sound the like,
my lord.

Achil. The dragon wing of night o'erspreads
the earth,
And, stickier † like, the armies separates.
My half-suppl'd sword, that frankly ‡ would have fed,

Pleas'd with this dainty bit, thus goes to bed.—
[Sheathes his sword.]

Come, tie his body to my horse's tail ;
Along the field I will the Trojan trail. [Exeunt.]

SCENE X.—The same.

Enter AGAMEMNON, AJAX, MENELAUS, NESTOR,
DIOKEDES, and others marching.
Shout within.

Agam. Hark ! hark ! what shout is that ?

Nest. Peace, drums.

[Within] Achilles !

Achilles ! Hector's slain ! Achilles !

Dio. The bruit § is—Hector's slain and by Achilles.

Ajax. If it be so, yet bragless let it be ;
Great Hector was as good a man as he.

Agam. March patiently along :—Let one be sent

To pray Achilles see us at our tent.—

If in his death the gods have us befriended, Great Troy is our's, and our sharp wars are ended. [Exeunt, marching.]

SCENE XI.—Another part of the field.

Enter ÆNEAS and TROJANS.

Æne. Stand, ho ! yet are we masters of the field :
Never go home : here starve we out the night.

* Take not this advantage.

† An arbitrator at Athletic games.

‡ Pattering.

§ Noise, rumour.

Enter TROILUS.

Tro. Hector is slain.

All. Hector !—The gods forbid !

Tro. He's dead ; and at the murderer's horse's tail, [field.—

In beastly sort, dragg'd through the shameful Frown on, you heavens, effect your rage with speed !

Sit, gods, upon your thrones, and smile at Troy !
I say, at once let your brief plagues be mercy,
And linger not our sure destructions on !

Æne. My lord, you do discomfort all the host.

Tro. You understand me not, that tell me so :
I do not speak of flight, of fear, of death ;
But dare all imm'mence, that gods and men,
Address their dangers in. Hector is gone !
Who shall tell Priam so, or Hecuba ?

Let him that will a screech-owl eye* be call'd,
Go in to Troy, and say there—Hector's dead :

There is a word will Priam turn to stone ;

Make wells and Niobes of the maids and wives,

Cold statues of the youth ; and, in a word,

Scare Troy out of itself, But, march, away :

Hector is dead ; there is no more to say.

Stay yet ;—You vile abominable tents.

Thus proudly plight † upon our Phrygian plains,

Let Titan rise as early as he dare,

I'll through and through you !—And then greatsly'd coward !

No space of earth shall sunder our two hates :

I'll haunt thee like a wicked conscience still,

That mouldeth goblins swift as frenzy thoughts.—

Strike a free march to Troy !—with comfort go :

Hope of revenge shall hide our inward woe.

Exeunt ÆNEAS and TROJANS.

As TROILUS is going out, enter from the other side, PANDARUS.

Pan. But hear you, hear you !

Tro. Hence, broker lackey ! ignomy ‡ and shame

Pursue thy life, and live aye § with thy name !

Exit TROILUS.

Pan. A goodly medicine for my aching bones !—O world ! world ! world ! thus is the poor agent despised ! O traitors and bawds, how earnestly are you set a' work, and how ill requited ! Why should our endeavour be so loved, and the performance so loathed ! what verse for it ! what instance for it !—Let me
see :—

Full merrily the humble-bee doth sing,

Till he hath lost his honey and his sting :

And being once subdued in armed tail,

Sweet honey and sweet notes together fall.—

Good traders in the flesh, set this in your painted cloths. ¶

As many as be here of Pander's hall,

Your eyes, half out, weep out at Pander's fall :

Or, if you cannot weep, yet give some groans,

Though not for me, yet for your aching bones.

Brethren and sisters of the hold-door trade,

Some two months hence my wife shall here be
made ;

It should be now, but that my fear is this,—

Some galled geese of Winchester would hiss :

Till then I'll sweat, and sob about for cases ;

And, at that time, bequeath you my diseases.

TIMON OF ATHENS.

LITERARY AND HISTORICAL NOTICE.

THIS play, which contains many perplexed, obscure, and corrupt passages, was written about the year 1610, and was probably suggested by a passage in Plutarch's Life of Antony, wherein the latter professes to imitate the conduct of Timon, by retiring to the woods, and inveighing against the ingratitude of his friends. The finding of hidden gold, (see Act IV.) was an incident borrowed from a MS. play, apparently transcribed about the year 1600, and at one time in the possession of Mr. Strutt the antiquary. A building yet remains near Athens, called Timon's Tower. Phrynia, one of the courtezans whom Timon reviles so outrageously, was that exquisitely beautiful Phryne, who, when the Athenian Judges were about to condemn her for enormous offences, by the sight of her bosom disarmed the court of its severity, and secured her life from the sentence of the law. Alcibiades, known as a hero who, to the principles of a debauchee added the sagacity of a statesman, the intrepidity of a general, and the humanity of a philosopher, is reduced to comparative insignificance in the present production. Its relative merits, as to action and construction, are succinctly pointed out by Johnson. He describes it as "a domestic tragedy, which strongly fastens on the attention of the reader. In the plan there is not much art; but the incidents are natural, and the characters various and exact. The catastrophe affords a very powerful warning against the ostentatious liberality, which scatters bounty, but confers no benefits, and buys flattery but not friendship."

ACT I.

SCENE I.—Athens.—A Hall in TIMON'S House.

Enter POET, PAINTER, JEWELLER, MERCHANT, and others, at several Doors.

Poet. Good day, Sir.

Pain. I am glad you are well.

Poet. I have not seen you long. How goes the world?

Pain. It wears, Sir, as it grows.

Poet. Ay, that's well known:

But what particular rarity? what strange, Which manifest record not matches? See, Magic of bounty! all these spirits thy power Hath conjur'd to attend. I know the merchant.

Pain. I know them both; 't'other's a jeweller.

Mer. Oh! 'tis a worthy lord.

Jew. Nay, that's most fix'd.

Mer. A most incomparable man; breath'd,* as it were,

To an untirable and continue goodness: He passes.†

Jew. I have a jewel here.

* Inspired.

† Goes beyond common bounds.

Mer. O pray let's see't: For the lord Timon Sir?

Jew. If he would touch the estimate: But, for that—

Poet. When we for recompense have prais'd the vile,

It stains the glory in that happy verse Which aptly sings the good.

Mer. 'Tis a good form.

[Looking at the Jewel.

Jew. And rich: here is a water, look you.

Pain. You are rapt, Sir, in some work, some dedication

To the great lord.

Poet. A thing slipp'd idly from me.

Our poesy is as a gum, which ooze From whence 'tis nourished: The fire i'the flint Shows not, till it be struck; our gentle flame Provokes itself, and, like the current, flies Each bound it chafes. What have you there?

Pain. A picture, Sir.—And when comes your book forth?

Poet. Upon the heels of my presentment* Sir. Let's see your piece.

Pain. 'Tis a good piece.

[lent.

Poet. So 'tis: this comes off well and excel-

* As soon as my book has been presented to Timon.

Pain. Indifferent.

Poet. Admirable: How this grace
Speaks his own standing! what a mental power
This eye shoots forth! how big imagination
Moves in this lip! to the dumbness of the gesture
One might interpret.

Pain. It is a pretty mocking of the life.
Here is a touch; is't good?

Poet. I'll say of it,
It tutors nature: artificial strife*
Lives in these touches, livelier than life.

Enter certain SENATORS, and pass over.

Pain. How this lord's follow'd!

Poet. The senators of Athens:—Happy men!

Pain. Look, more!

Poet. You see this confluence, this great flood of visitors.

I have, in this rough work, shap'd out a man,
Whom this beneath world doth embrace and hug

With amplest entertainment: My free drift
Halts not particularly,† but moves itself
In a wide sea of wax: no levell'd malice
Infects one comma in the course I hold;
But flies an eagle flight, hold, and forth on,
Leaving no tract behind.

Pain. How shall I understand you?

Poet. I'll unbolt‡ to you.
You see how all conditions, how all minds,
(As well of glib and slippery creatures, as Of grave and austere quality,) tender down
Their services to lord Timon: his large fortune,
Upon his good and gracious nature hanging,
Subdues and properties to his love and tend-ance

All sorts of hearts; yea, soon the glass-fac'd flatterer§

To Apemantus, that few things loves better
Than to abhor himself: even he drops down
The knee before him, and returns in peace
Most rich in Timon's nod.

Pain. I saw them speak together.

Poet. Sir, I have upon a high and pleasant
hill,
Feign'd Fortune to be thron'd: The base o'the
mount

Is rank'd with all deserts, all kind of natures,
That labour on the bosom of this sphere
To propagate their states:‖ amongst them all,
Whose eyes are on this sovereign lady fix'd,
One do I personate of lord Timon's frame, Whom Fortune with her ivory hand wafts to
her;

Whose present grace to present slaves and servants translates his rivals.

Pain. 'Tis conceiv'd to scope. [thinks,
This throne, this Fortune, and this hill, me-
With one man beckon'd from the rest below,
Bowing his head against the steepy mount
To climb his happiness would be well express'd in our condition.

Poet. Nay, Sir, but hear me on:
All those which were his fellows but of late,
(Some better than his value,) on the moment
Follow his strides, his lobbies fill with tendance
Rain sacrificial whisperings¶ in his ear,
Make sacred even his stirrup, and through him
Drink the free air.

Pain. Ay, marry, what of these?

Poet. When Fortune in her shift and change of mood, [ants,
Spurns down her late belov'd, all his depend-
Which labour'd after him to the mountain's top,
Even on their knees and hands, let him slip
down,

Not one accompanying his declining foot.

Pain. 'Tis common:
A thousand moral paintings I can show

* The contest of art with nature.

† My poem does not allude to any particular character.

ditions of life.  Whisperings of officious servility.

Trumpets sound. Enter TIMON, attended; the SERVANT of VENTIDIUS talking with him.

Tim. Imprison'd is he, say you?

Ven. Serv. Ay, my good lord: five talents is his debt;

His means most short, his creditors most strait:
Your honourable letter he desires [him,
To those have shut him up; which failing to Periods his comfort.

Tim. Noble Ventidius! Well;
I am not of that feather to shake off [him
My friend when he must need me. I do know
A gentleman that well deserves a help,
Which he shall have: I'll pay the debt, and free
him.

Ven. Serv. Your lordship ever binds him.

Tim. Commend me to him: I will send his ransom;
And, being enfranchis'd, bid him to come to
me:—

'Tis not enough to help the feeble up,
But to support him after.—Fare you well.

Ven. Serv. All happiness to your honour!

[Exit.

Enter an old ATHENIAN.

Old Ath. Lord Timon, hear me speak.

Tim. Freely, good father.

Old Ath. Thou hast a servant nam'd Lucilius.

Tim. I have so: What of him?

Old Ath. Most noble Timon, call the man before thee.

Tim. Attends he here, or no?—Lucilius!

Enter LUCILIUS.

Luc. Here, at your lordship's service.

Old Ath. This fellow here, lord Timon, this thy creature,

By night frequents my house. I am a man
That from my first have been inclin'd to thrift;
And my estate deserves an heir more rais'd,
Than one which holds a trencher

Tim. Well; what further?

Old Ath. One only daughter have I, no kin
else,

On whom I may confer what I have got:
The maid is fair, o'the youngest for a bride,
And I have bred her at my dearest cost,
In qualities of the best. This man of thine
Attempts her love: I pr'ythee, noble lord,
Join with me to forbid him her resort;
Myself have spoke in vain.

Tim. The man is honest.

Old Ath. Therefore he will be, Timon:
His honesty rewards him in itself,
It must not bear my daughter.

Tim. Does she love him?

Old Ath. She is young, and apt:
Our own precedent passions do instruct us
What levity's in youth.

Tim. [To LUCILIUS.] Love you the maid?

Luc. Ay, my good lord, and she accepts of it.

Old Ath. If in her marriage my consent be missing,

I call the gods to witness, I will choose
Mine heir from forth the beggars of the world,
And dispossess her all.

Tim. How shall she be endow'd,
If she be mated with an equal husband?

Old Ath. Three talents, on the present; in future, all.

Tim. This gentleman of mine hath serv'd me
long:

To build his fortune, I will strain a little,
For 'tis a bond in men. Give him thy daughter:

* Inferior spectators.

What you bestow, in him I'll counterpoise,
And make him weigh with her.

Old Ath. Most noble lord,
Pawn me to this your honour, she is his.

Tim. My hand to thee; mine honour on my promise.

Luc. Humbly I thank your lordship: Never may
That state or fortune fall into my keeping,
Which is not ow'd to you!

[Exeunt LUCILIUS and old ATHENIAN.]

Poet. Vouchsafe my labour, and long live your lordship!

Tim. I thank you; you shall hear from me anon:

Go not away.—What have you there, my friend?

Pain. A piece of painting, which I do be-
Your lordship to accept. [seecch

Tim. Painting is welcome.
The painting is almost the natural man;
For since dishonour traffics with man's nature,
He is but outside: These pencil'd figures are Even such as they give out.* I like your work;

And you shall find, I like it: wait attendance
Till you hear further from me.

Pain. The gods preserve you!

Tim. Well: you, gentlemen: Give me your hand!

We must needs be together.—Sir, your jewel
Hath suffer'd us — r praise.

Jew. What, my lord? dispraise?

Tim. A mere satiety of commendations.
If I should pay you for't as 'tis extoll'd,
It would unclew† me quite.

Jew. My lord, 'tis rated [know,
As those, which sell, would give: But you well
Things of like value, differing in the owners,
Are prized by their masters: believe't, dear lord,
You mend the jewel by wearing it.

Tim. Well mock'd.

Mer. No, my good lord; he speaks the common tongue,
Which all men speak with him.

Tim. Look, who comes here. Will you be chid?

Enter APEMANTUS.

Jew. We will bear with your lordship.

Mer. He'll spare none.

Tim. Good morrow to thee, gentle Apemantus!

Apem. Till I be gentle, stay for thy good morrow; [honest.

When thou art Timon's dog, and these knaves

Tim. Why dost thou call them knaves? thou know'st them not.

Apem. Are they not Athenians?

Tim. Yes.

Apem. Then I repent not.

Jew. You know me, Apemantus.

Apem. Thou know'st I do; I call'd thee by thy name.

Tim. Thou art proud, Apemantus.

Apem. Of nothing so much, as that I am not like Timon.

Tim. Whither art going?

Apem. To knock out an honest Athenian's brains.

Tim. That's a deed thou'lt die for.

Apem. Right, if doing nothing be death by the law.

Tim. How likest thou this picture, Apemantus?

Apem. The best, for the innocence.

Tim. Wrought he not well, that painted it?

Apem. He wrought better, that made the painter; and yet he's but a filthy piece of work.

Pain. You are a dog.

Apem. Thy mother's of my generation: What's she, if I be a dog?

Tim. Wilt dine with me, Apemantus?

Apem. No; I eat not lords.

Tim. An thou should'st, thou'dst anger ladies.

Apem. Oh! they eat lords; so they come by great bellies.

Tim. That's a lascivious apprehension.

Apem. So thou apprehend'st it: Take it for thy labour.

Tim. How dost thou like this jewel, Apemantus?

Apem. Not so well as plain-dealing,* which will not cost a man a doit.

Tim. What dost thou think 'tis worth?

Apem. Not worth my thinking.—How now, poet?

Poet. How now, philosopher?

Apem. Thou liest.

Poet. Art not one?

Apem. Yes.

Poet. Then I lie not.

Apem. Art not a poet?

Poet. Yes.

Apem. Then thou liest: look in thy last work, where thou hast feign'd him a worthy fellow.

Poet. That's not feign'd, he is so.

Apem. Yes, he is worthy of thee, and to pay thee for thy labour: He that loves to be flattered, is worthy o'the flatterer. Heavens, that I were a lord!

Tim. What would'st do then, Apemantus?

Apem. Even as Apemantus does now, hate a lord with my heart.

Tim. What, thyself?

Apem. Ay.

Tim. Wherefore?

Apem. That I had no angry wit to be a lord.—
Art not thou a merchant?

Mer. Ay, Apemantus.

Apem. Traffic confound thee, if the gods will
not!

Mer. If traffic do it, the gods do it.

Apem. Traffic's thy god, and thy god confound
thee!

Trumpets sound. Enter a SERVANT.

Tim. What trumpet's that?

Serv. 'Tis Alcibiades, and
Some twenty horse, all of companionship.

Tim. Pray, entertain them; give them guide to us.— [Exeunt some Attendants.]

You must needs dine with me:—Go not you
hence, [done,

Till I have thank'd you; and, when dinner's Show me this piece.—I am joyful of your sights.—

Enter ALCIBIADES, with his Company.

Most welcome, Sir! [They salute.]

Apem. So, so; there!—

Aches contract and starve your supple joints!—
That there should be small love 'mongst these sweet knaves, [out

And all this court'sy! The strain of man's bred into baboon and monkey.†

Alcib. Sir, you have sav'd my longing, and I
Most hungrily on your sight. [feed

Tim. Right welcome, Sir:
Ere we depart, we'll share a bounteous time in different pleasures. Pray you, let us in.

[Exeunt all but APEMANTUS.]

Enter two LORDS.

1 Lord. What time a day is't, Apemantus?

Apem. Time to be honest.

1 Lord. That time serves still.

Apem. The most accursed thou, that still omit'st it.

2 Lord. Thou art going to lord Timon's feast.

Apem. Ay; to see meat fill knaves, and wine heat fools.

2 Lord. Fare thee well, fare thee well.

* What they profess to be.

† Draw out the whole mass of my fortunes.

* Alluding to the proverb: plain-dealing is a jewel,
but they who use it beggars.

† His lineage degenerated into a monkey.

Apem. Thou art a fool, to bid me farewell twice.

2 Lord. Why, Apemantus?

Apem. Shouldst have kept one to thyself, for I mean to give thee none.

1 Lord. Hang thyself.

Apem. No, I will do nothing at thy bidding: make thy requests to thy friend.

2 Lord. Away, unpeaceable dog, or I'll spurn thee hence.

Apem. I will fly, like a dog, the heels of the ass. [Exit.]

1 Lord. He's opposite to humanity. Come, shall we in,

And taste lord Timon's bounty? he outgoes
The very heart of kindness.

2 Lord. He pours it out: Plutus, the god of gold,

Is but his steward: no meed* but he repays
Sevenfold above itself: no gift to him,
But breeds the giver a return exceeding
All use of quittance.†

1 Lord. The noblest mind he carries,
That ever govern'd man.

2 Lord. Long may he live in fortunes! Shall we in?

1 Lord. I'll keep you company. [Exeunt.]

SCENE II.—The same.—A Room of State in TIMON'S House.

Hautboys playing loud music. A great banquet served in; FLAVIUS and others attending; then enter TIMON, ALCIBIADES, LUCIUS, LUCULLUS, SEMPRONIUS, and other Athenian Senators, with VENTIDIUS, and Attendants. Then comes, dropping after all, APEMANTUS, discontentedly.

Ven. Most honour'd Timon, 't hath pleas'd the gods remember

My father's age, and call him to long peace.
He is gone happy, and has left me rich:
Then, as in grateful virtue I am bound
To your free heart, I do return those talents,
Doubled, with thanks and service, from whose help

I deriv'd liberty.

Tim. Oh! by no means,
Honest Ventidius: you mistake my love;
I gave it freely ever; and there's none
Can truly say he gives, if he receives:
If our betters play at that game, we must not dare

To imitate them: Faults that are rich, are fair.

Ven. A noble spirit.

[They all stand ceremoniously looking on TIMON.]

Tim. Nay, my lords, ceremony
Was but devis'd at first, to set a gloss
On faint deeds, hollow welcomes,
Recanting goodness, sorry ere 'tis shown;
But where there is true friendship, there needs none.

Pray, sit; more welcome are ye to my fortunes,
Than my fortunes to me.

[They sit.]
1 Lord. My lord, we always have confess'd it.

Apem. Oh, ho, confess'd it? hang'd it, have you not?

Tim. O Apemantus!—you are welcome.

Apem. No,

You shall not make me welcome:

I come to have thee thrust me out of doors.

Tim. Fle, thou art a churl; you have got a humour there

Does not become a man, 'tis much to blame:
Thy say, my lords, that ira furor brevis est,‡
But yond' man's ever angry.
Go, let him have a table by himself;
For he does neither affect company,
Nor is he fit for it, indeed.

* No desert. obligations.

† All customary returns for
2 Anger is a short madness.

Apem. Let me stay at thine own peril, Timon;

I come to observe; I give thee warning on't.

Tim. I take no heed of thee; thou art an Athenian; therefore welcome: I myself would have no power: prythee, let my meat make thee silent.

Apem. I scorn thy meat; 'twould choke me for I should Ne'er flatter thee.—O you gods! what a number

Of men eat Timon, and he sees them not!
It grieves me, to see so many dip their meat
In one man's blood; and all the madness is,
He cheers them up too.*

I wonder men dare trust themselves with men:
Methinks they should invite them without knives;
Good for their meat, and safer for their lives.

There's much example for't; the fellow that Sits next him now, parts bread with him, and pledges

The breath of him in a divided draught,
Is the readiest man to kill him: it has been
If I [prov'd,

Were a huge man, I should fear to drink at meals;

Lest they should spy my windpipe's dangerous notes;

Great men should drink with harness† on their throats.

Tim. My lord, in heart;‡ and let the health go round.

2 Lord. Let it flow this way, my good lord.

Apem. Flow this way! [mon,

A brave fellow!—he keeps his tides well. Ti-
Those healths will make thee and thy state look ill.

Here's that which is too weak to be a sinner,
Honest water, which ne'er left man i'th' mire:
This and my food, are equals; there's no odds
Feasts are too proud to give thanks to the gods.

APEMANTUS' GRACE.

*Immortal gods, I crave no self;
I pray for no man, but myself:
Grant I may never prove so fond, §
To trust man on his oath or bond;
Or a harlot, for her weeping;
Or a dog, that seems a sleeping;
Or a keeper with my freedom;
Or my friends, if I should need 'em.
Amen. So fall to't:
Rich men sin, and I eat root.*

[Eats and drinks.]

Much good dich thy good heart, Apemantus!

Tim. Captain Alcibiades, your heart's in the field now.

Alcib. My heart is ever at your service, my lord.

Tim. You had rather be at a breakfast of enemies, than a dinner of friends.

Alcib. So they were bleeding-new, my lord, there's no meat like them: I could wish my best friend at such a feast.

Apem. 'Would all those flatterers were thine enemies then; that then thou might'st kill 'em, and bid me to 'em.

1 Lord. Might we but have that happiness, my lord, that you would once use our hearts, whereby we might express some part of our zeals, we should think ourselves for ever perfect.¶

Tim. O no doubt, my good friends, but the gods themselves have provided that I shall have much help from you: How had you been my friends else? why have you that charitable ¶ title from thousands, did you not chiefly belong to my heart? I have told more of you to myself, than you can with modesty speak in your own behalf; and thus far I confirm you. O you gods, think

* Alluding to hounds which are trained to pursue by the blood of the animal which they kill. † Armour. ‡ In sincerity. § Foolish. ¶ At the summit of happiness. ¶ Endearing.

I, what need we have any friends, if we should never have need of them? they were the most needless creatures living, should we ne'er have use for them; and would most resemble sweet instruments hung up in cases, that keep their sounds to themselves. Why, I have often wished myself poorer, that I might come nearer to you. We are born to do benefits; and what better or properer can we call our own, than the riches of our friends? Oh! what a precious comfort 'tis, to have so many, like brothers, commanding one another's fortunes! O joy, e'en made away ere it can be born! Mine eyes cannot hold out water, methinks: to forget their faults, I drink to you.

Apem. Thou weepest to make them drink, Timon.

2 Lord. Joy had the like conception in our eyes,
And, at that instant, like a babe sprung up.

Apem. Ho! ho! I laugh to think that babe a bastard.

3 Lord. I promise you, my lord, you mov'd me much.

Apem. Much! [Tucket sounded.]

Tim. What means that trumpet?—How now?

Enter a SERVANT.

Serv. Please you, my lord, there are certain ladies most desirous of admittance.

Tim. Ladies? what are their wills?

Serv. There comes with them a forerunner, my lord which bears that office, to signify their pleasures.

Tim. I pray, let them be admitted.

Enter CUPID.

Cup. Hail to thee, worthy Timon;—and to all

That of his bounties taste!—The five best senses Acknowledge thee their patron; and come freely

To gratulate thy plenteous bosom: The ear, Taste touch, smell, all pleas'd from thy table rise;

They only now come but to feast thine eyes.

Tim. They are welcome all; let them have kind admittance.

Music, make their welcome. [Exit CUPID.]

1 Lord. You see, my lord, how ample you are belov'd.

Music.—Re-enter CUPID, with a masque of LADIES as Amazons, with lutes in their hands, dancing, and playing.

Apem. Hey day, what a sweep of vanity comes this way!

They dance! they are mad women.

Like madness is the glory of this life,

As this pomp shows to a little oill, and root.

We make ourselves fools, to disport ourselves;

And spend our flatteries, to drink those men,

Upon whose age we void it up again,
With poisonous spite and envy. Who lives, that's not

Depraved, or depraves? who dies, that bears
Not one spurn to their graves of their friends' gift?

I should fear, those that dance before me now,
Would one day stamp upon me. It has been
done;

Men shut their doors against a setting sun.

The LORDS rise from table, with much adoring of TIMON; and, to shew their loves, each singles out an Amazon, and all dance, men with women, a lofty strain or two to the hautboys, and cease.

Tim. You have done our pleasures much grace, fair ladies,

Set a fair fashion on our entertainment,
Which was not half so beautiful and kind;

You have added worth unto't, and lively lustre,
And entertain'd me with mine own device;
I am to thank you for it.

1 Lady. My lord, you take us even at the best.

Apem. 'Faith, for the worst is filthy; and would not hold taking, I doubt me.

Tim. Ladies, there is an idle banquet Attends you: Please you to dispose yourselves.

All Lad. Most thankfully, my lord.

[Exeunt CUPID, and LADIES.]

Tim. Flavius,—

Flav. My lord.

Tim. The little casket bring me hither.

Flav. Yes, my lord.—More jewels yet! There is no crossing him in his humour;

[Aside.] Else I should tell him,—Well,—'Faith, I should When all's spent, he'd be cross'd* then, an he could.

'Tis pity, bounty had not eyes behind; † That man might ne'er be wretched for his mind. ‡

[Exit, and returns with the casket.]

1 Lord. Where be our men?

Serv. Here, my lord, in readiness.

2 Lord. Our horses.

Tim. O my friends, I have one word To say to you:—Look you, my good lord, I must Entreat you, honour me so much, as to Advance this jewel;

Accept and wear it, kind my lord.

1 Lord. I am so far already in your gifts,—

All. So are we all.

Enter a SERVANT.

Serv. My lord, there are certain nobles of the senate Newly alighted, and come to visit you.

Tim. They are fairly welcome.

Flav. I beseech your honour, Vouchsafe me a word; it does concern you near.

Tim. Near? why then another time I'll hear I prythee, let us be provided [thee:] To shew them entertainment.

Flav. I scarce know how. [Aside.]

Enter Another SERVANT.

2 Serv. May it please your honour, the lord Lucius,

Out of his free love, hath presented to you Four milk-white horses, trapp'd in silver.

Tim. I shall accept them fairly: let the presents

Enter a third SERVANT.

Be worthily entertain'd.—How now, what news?

3 Serv. Please you, my lord, that honourable gentleman, Lord Lucullus, entreats your company to-morrow to hunt with him; and has sent your honour two brace of greyhounds.

Tim. I'll hunt with him; And let them be receiv'd,
Not without fair reward.

Flav. [Aside.] What will this come to? He commands us to provide, and give great gifts,
And all out of an empty coffer.—

Nor will he know his purse; or yield me this,

To shew him what a beggar his heart is,

Being of no power to make his wishes good;

His promises fly so beyond his state,

That what he speaks is all in debt, he owes

For every word; he is so kind, that he now

Pays interest for't; his land's put to their books.

Well 'would I were gently put out of office,

Before I were forc'd out!

Happier is he that has no friend to feed,

Than such as do even enemies exceed.

I bleed inwardly for my lord. [Exit.]

Tim. You do yourselves

Much wrong, you bate too much of your own merits:—

Here, my lord, a trifle of our love.

* A play on the word cross: from the piece of money called a cross. † To see the miseries that will follow ‡ For his generosity of mind.

2 Lord. With more than common thanks I will receive it.

3 Lord. Oh! he is the very soul of bounty!

Tim. And now I remember me, my lord, you gave

Good words the other day of a bay courser rode on: it is yours, because you lik'd it.

2 Lord. I beseech you, pardon me, my lord, in that.

Tim. You may take my word, my lord; I know, no man

Can justly praise but what he does affect: I weigh my friend's affection with mine own; I'll tell you true. I'll call on you.

All Lords. None so welcome.

Tim. I take all and your several visitations so kind to heart, 'tis not enough to give; Methinks, I could deal kingdoms to my friends, And ne'er be weary.—Alcibiades, Thou art a soldier, therefore seldom rich, It comes in charity to thee: for all thy living is 'mongst the dead; and all the lands thou hast lie in a pitch'd field.

Alcib. Ay, defiled land, my lord.

1 Lord. We are so virtuously bound,—

Tim. And so

Am I to you.

2 Lord. So infinitely endear'd,—

Tim. All to you. *—Lights, more lights.

1 Lord. The best of happiness, Honour, and fortunes, keep with you, lord Timon!

Tim. Ready for his friends.

[Exeunt ALCIBIADES, LORDS, &c.]

Apem. What a coll's here!

Serving of becks,† and jutting out of bums! I doubt whether their legs be worth the sums That are given for 'em. Friendship's full of dregs: [legs.]

Methinks, false hearts should never have sound Thus honest fools lay out their wealth on court'sies.

Tim. Now Apemantus if thou wert not sullen, I'd be good to thee.

Apem. No, I'll nothing: for, [left] If I should be brib'd too, there would be none To rail upon thee: and then thou wouldest sin the faster.

Thou giv'st so long, Timon, I fear me, thou wilt give away thyself in paper ‡ shortly; What need these feasts, pomps, and vain glories?

Tim. Nay, An you begin to rail on society once, I am sworn, not to give regard to you. Farewell; and come with better music. [Exit.]

Apem. So;— Thou'lt not hear me now,—thou shalt not then, I'll lock Thy heaven § from thee. Oh! that men's ears should be To counsel deaf, but not to flattery! [Exit.]

ACT II.

SCENE I.—The same.—A Room in a SENATOR'S House.

Enter a SENATOR, with papers in his hand.

Sen. And late, five thousand to Varro; and to Isidore

He owes nine thousand; besides my former sum, Which makes it five and twenty.—Still in motion Of raging waste? It cannot hold; it will not. If I want gold, steal but a beggar's dog, And give it Timon, why, the dog coils gold: If I would sell my horse, and buy twenty more Better than he, why, give my horse to Timon, Ask nothing, give it him, it foals me, straight, And able horses: No porter at his gate; But rather one that smiles, and still invites

* All happiness to you
‡ In bonds.

† Offering salutations
‡ I.e. good advice.

All that pass by. It cannot hold; no reason Can found his state in safety. * Caphis, ho! Caphis, I say!

Enter CAPHIS.

Caph. Here, Sir; What is your pleasure?

Sen. Get on your cloak, and haste you to lord Timon;

Impertune him for my monies; be not ceas'd † With slight denial; nor then silenc'd, when— Commend me to your master—and the cap Plays in the right hand, thus:—but tell him, Sirrah,

My uses cry to me, I must serve my turn Out of mine own; his days and times are past, And my reliances on his fracted dates Have smit my credit: I love and honour him; But must not break my back, to heal his finger: Immediate are my needs; and my relief Must not be toss'd and turn'd to me in words, But find supply immediate. Get you gone: Put on a most importunate aspect, A visage of demand; for I do fear, When every feather sticks in his own wing, Lord Timon will be left a naked gull, Which flashes now a phoenix. Get you gone.

Caph. I go, Sir.

Sen. I go, Sir?—take the bonds along with you And have the dates in compt.

Caph. I will, Sir.

Sen. Go.

[Exeunt]

SCENE II.—The same.—A Hall in TIMON'S House.

Enter FLAVIUS, with many bills in his hand.

Flav. No care, no stop! so senseless of expense, That he will neither know how to maintain it, Nor cease his flow of riot: Takes no account How things go from him; nor resumes no care Of what is to continue; Never mind Was to be so unwise, to be so kind. What shall be done? He will not hear, till feel: I must be round with him now he comes from hunting. Fie, fie, fie, fie!

Enter CAPHIS, and the SERVANTS of ISIDORE and VARRO.

Caph. Good even, Varro: What, You come for money?

Var. Serv. Is't not your business too?

Caph. It is;—And yours too, Isidore?

Isid. Serv. It is so.

Caph. 'Would we were all discharg'd!

Var. Serv. I fear it.

Caph. Here comes the lord.

Enter TIMON, ALCIBIADES, and LORDS, &c.

Tim. So soon as dinner's done, we'll forth again,

My Alcibiades.—With me? What's your will?

Caph. My lord, here is a note of certain dues.

Tim. Dues? Whence are you?

Caph. Of Athens here, my lord.

Tim. Go to my steward.

Caph. Please it your lordship, he hath put me off

To the succession of new days this month: My master is awak'd by great occasion, To call upon his own; and humbly prays you, That with your other noble parts you'll suit, In giving him his right.

Tim. Mine honest friend,

I prythee, but repair to me next morning.

Caph. Nay, good my lord,—

Tim. Contain thyself, good friend.

Var. Serv. One Varro's servant, my good lord,—

Isid. Serv. From Isidore;

He humbly prays your speedy payment,—

* By no argument can be proved in a solvent state.
† Repulsed.

Ceph. If you did know, my lord, my master's wants,—

Var. Serv. 'Twas due on forfeiture, my lord, six weeks,

And past,—

Isid. Serv. Your steward puts me off, my lord;

And I am sent expressly to your lordship.

Tim. Give me breath:—

I do beseech you, good my lords, keep on;

[Exeunt ALCIBIADES and LORDS.]

I'll wait upon you instantly.—Come hither, pray you.

[To FLAVIUS.]

How goes the world, that I am thus encounter'd

With clamorous demands of date-broke bonds,
And the detention of long-since-due debts,
Against my honour?

Flav. Please you, gentlemen,
The time is unagreeable to this business:
Your importunacy cease, till after dinner;
That I may make his lordship understand
Wherefore you are not paid.

Tim. Do so, my friends:

See them well entertain'd.

[Exit TIMON.]

Flav. I pray, draw near.

[Exit FLAVIUS.]

Enter APEMANTUS and a FOOL.

Ceph. Stay, stay, here comes the fool with Apemantus; let's have some sport with 'em.

Var. Serv. Hang him, he'll abuse us.

Isid. Serv. A plague upon him, dog!

Var. Serv. How dost, fool?

Apem. Dost dialogue with thy shadow?

Var. Serv. I speak not to thee.

Apem. No; 'tis to thyself,—Come away

[To the FOOL.]

Isid. Serv. [To VAR. SERV.] There's the fool hangs on your back already.

Apem. No, thou stand'st single, thou art not on him yet.

Ceph. Where's the fool now?

Apem. He last asked the question.—Poor rogues, and usurers' men! bawds between gold and want!

All Serv. What are we, Apemantus?

Apem. Asses.

All Serv. Why?

Apem. That you ask me what you are, and do not know yourselves.—Speak to 'em, fool.

Fool. How do you, gentlemen?

All Serv. Gramercies, good fool: How does your mistress?

Fool. She's e'en setting on water to scald such chickens as you are. 'Would, we could see you at Corinth.

Apem. Good! gramercy.

Enter PAGE.

Fool. Look you, here comes my mistress' page.

Page. [To the FOOL.] Why, how now, captain? what do you in this wise company?—How dost thou, Apemantus?

Apem. 'Would I had a rod in my mouth, that I might answer thee profitably.

Page. Pr'ythee, Apemantus, read me the superscription of these letters; I know not which is which.

Apem. Canst not read?

Page. No.

Apem. There will little learning die then, that day thou art hanged. This is to lord Timon; this to Alcibiades. Go; thou wast born a bastard, and thou'lt die a bawd.

Page. Thou wast whelped a dog; and thou shalt famish, a dog's death. Answer not, I am gone.

[Exit PAGE.]

Apem. Even so thou out-run'st grace. Fool, I will go with you to lord Timon's.

Fool. Will you leave me there?

Apem. If Timon stay at home.—You three serve three usurers?

All Serv. Ay, 'would they served us!

Apem. So would I,—as good a trick as ever hangman served thief.

Fool. Are you three usurers' men?

All Serv. Ay, fool.

Fool. I think, no usurer but has a fool to his servant: My mistress is one, and I am her fool. When men come to borrow of your masters, they approach sadly, and go away merry; but they enter my mistress' house merrily, and go away sadly: The reason of this?

Var. Serv. I could render one.

Apem. Do it then, that we may account thee a whoremaster and a knave; which, notwithstanding, thou shalt be no less esteemed.

Var. Serv. What is a whoremaster, fool?

Fool. A fool in good clothes, and something like thee. 'Tis a spirit: sometime, it appears like a lord: sometime, like a lawyer; sometime, like a philosopher, with two stones more than his artificial one: He is very often like a knight; and, generally in all shapes, that man goes up and down in, from fourscore to thirteen, this spirit walks in.

Var. Serv. Thou art not altogether a fool.

Fool. Nor thou altogether a wise man; as much foolery as I have, so much wit thou lackest.

Apem. That answer might have become Apemantus.

All Serv. Aside, aside; here comes lord Timon.

Re-enter TIMON and FLAVIUS.

Apem. Come with me, fool, come.

Fool. I do not always follow lover, elder brother, and woman; sometime, the philosopher.

[Exeunt APEMANTUS and FOOL.]

Flav. 'Pray you, walk near; I'll speak with you anon.

[Exeunt SERV.]

Tim. You make me marvel: Wherefore, ere this time,

Had you not fully laid my state before me;
That I might so have rated my expense,
As I had leave of means?

Flav. You would not hear me,
At many leasures I propos'd.

Tim. Go to:

Perchance, some single vantages you took
When my indisposition put you back;
And that unaptness made your minister,
Thus to excuse yourself.

Flav. O my good lord!

At many times I brought in my accounts,
Laid them before you; you would throw them off,

And say, you found them in mine honesty.

When, for some trifling present, you have bid me

Return so much,* I have shook my head, and wept:

Yea, 'gainst the authority of manners, pray'd you

To hold your hand more close; I did endure
Not seldom, nor so slight checks; when I have Prompted you, in the ebb of your estate,
And your great flow of debts. My dear-lov'd lord,
Though you hear now, (too late!) yet now's a time,

The greatest of your having lacks a half
To pay your present debts.

Tim. Let all my land be sold.

Flav. 'Tis all engag'd, some forfeited and gone;

And what remains will hardly stop the mouth
Of present dues: the future comes apace:
What shall defend the interim? and at length
How goes our reckoning?

Tim. To Lacedæmon did my land extend.

Flav. O my good lord, the world is but word;

Were it all your's, to give it in a breath,
How quickly were it gone?

Tim. You tell me true.

* I. e. a certain sum.

Flav. If you suspect my husbandry, or false-
Call me before the exactest auditors, [hood,
And set me on the proof. So the gods bless me,
When all our offices* have been oppress'd
With riotous feeders; when our vaults have wept
With drunken spillth of wine; when every room
Hath blas'd with lights, and bray'd with minstrelsy;
I have retir'd me to a wasteful cock,†
And set mine eyes at flow.

Tim. Pr'ythee, no more.

Flav. Heavens, have I said, the bounty of this lord!
How many prodigal bits have slaves and pea-
This night englutted! Who is not Timon's?
What heart, head, sword, force, means, but is lord Timon's?

Great Timon, noble, worthy, royal Timon?
Ah! when the means are gone, that buy this
praise,
The breath is gone whereof this praise is made:
Feast-won, fast-lost; one cloud of winter
showers,
These flies are couch'd.

Tim. Come, sermon me no further:
No villanous bounty yet hath pass'd my heart;
Unwisely, not ignobly, have I given.
Why dost thou weep? Canst thou the conscience lack,

To think I shall lack friends? Secure thy heart:
If I would broach the vessels of my love,
And try the argument‡ of hearts by borrow-
ing,

Men, and men's fortunes, could I frankly use,
As I can bid thee speak.

Flav. Assurance bless your thoughts!

Tim. And, in some sort, these wants of mine are crown'd §
That I account them blessings; for by these Shall I try friends: You shall perceive, how
you

Mistake my fortunes; I am wealthy in my friends.
Within there, ho!—Flaminus! Servilius!

Enter FLAMINIUS, SERVILIUS, and other SERVANTS.

Serv. My lord, my lord,—

Tim. I will despatch you severally.—You to lord Lucius,—

To lord Lucullus you: I hunted with his Honour to-day;—You, to Sempronius;
Commend me to their loves; and, I am proud,
say

That my occasions have found time to use them
Toward a supply of money: let the request
Be fifty talents.

Flam. As you have said, my lord.

Flav. Lord Lucius, and Lord Lucullus?
humph! [Aside.]

Tim. Go you, Sir, [To another SERV.] to the senators,
(Of whom, even to the state's best health, I have Deserv'd this hearing,) bid 'em send o'the instant

A thousand talents to me.

Flav. I have been bold,
(For that I knew it the most general way,)
To them to use your signet, and your name:
But they do shake their heads, and I am here
No richer in return.

Tim. Is't true? can it be?

Flav. They answer, in a joint and corporate
voice,
That now they are at fall,|| want treasure, can-
not
Do what they would; are sorry—you are honourable,—
But yet they could have wish'd—they know not—but

* The apartments allotted to culinary offices, &c.

† A pipe with a turning stopple running to waste.

‡ If I would, (says Timon,) by borrowing, try of what men's hearts are composed, what they have in them, &c.

§ Dignified

|| At an ebb.

Something hath been amiss—a noble nature
May catch a wrench—would all were well—'tis pity—

And so intending* other serious matters,
After distasteful looks, and these hard fractions,†

With certain half-caps,‡ and cold moving nods,
They froze me into silence.

Tim. You gods, reward them!—

I pr'ythee man, look cheerily; These old fellows

Have their ingratitude in them hereditary:
Their blood is cak'd, 'tis cold, it seldom flows;
'Tis lack of kindly warmth, they are not kind;
And nature as it grows again toward earth,
Is fashion'd for the journey, dull, and heavy.—
Go to Ventidius,—[To a SERV.] Pr'ythee, [To

FLAVIUS,] be not sad,

Thou art true, and honest; ingeniously § I speak,
No blame belongs to thee:—[To SERV.] Ventidius lately

Buried his father by whose death, he's stepp'd
Into a great estate: when he was poor,
Imprison'd, and in scarcity of friends,
I clear'd him with five talents; Greet him from Bid him suppose, some good necessity ¶ me;
Touches his friend, which crav'd to be re-member'd

With those five talents:—that had,—[To FLAV.]
give it these fellows

To whom 'tis instant due. Ne'er speak, or think, [sink.]

That Timon's fortunes 'mong his friends can thought is bounty's foe;

Being free || itself, it thinks all others so.

[Exeunt.]

ACT III.

SCENE I.—The same.—A Room in LUCULLUS' House.

FLAMINIUS waiting. Enter a SERVANT to him.

Serv. I have told my lord of you, he is coming down to you.

Flam. I thank you, Sir.

Enter LUCULLUS.

Serv. Here's my lord.

Lucul. [Aside.] One of Lord Timon's men? a gift, I warrant. Why, this hits right; I dreamt of a silver basin and ewer to-night. Flaminus, honest Flaminus; you are very respectfully ¶
welcome, Sir.—Fill me some wine.—[Exit SER-VANT.] And how does that honourable, complete, free-hearted gentleman of Athens, thy very bountiful good lord and master?

Flam. His health is well, Sir.

Lucul. I am right glad that his health is well,
Sir: And what hast thou there under thy cloak, pretty Flaminus?

Flam. 'Faith, nothing but an empty box, Sir;
which in my lord's behalf, I come to entreat your honour to supply; who, having great and instant occasion to use fifty talents, hath sent to your lordship to furnish him; nothing doubting your present assistance therein.

Lucul. La, la, la, la,—nothing doubting, says he? alas, good lord! a noble gentleman 'tis, if he would not keep so good a house. Many a time and often I have dined with him, and told him on't: and come again to supper to him, of purpose to have him spend less; and yet he would embrace no counsel, take no warning by my coming. Every man has his fault, and he neasty is his; I have told him on't, but I could never get him from it.

* Regarding.

† Abrupt remarks.

‡ A cap slightly moved, not put off.

§ For ingeniously.

¶ Liberal.

|| For respectfully.  Honesty meaning liberality.

Re-enter SERVANT, with wine.

Serv. Please your lordship, here is the wine.

Lucul. Flaminius, I have noted thee always wise. Here's to thee.

Flam. Your lordship speaks your pleasure.

Lucul. I have observed thee always for a towardsly prompt spirit,—give thee thy due,—and one that knows what belongs to reason: and cannot use the time well, if the time use thee well: good parts in thee.—Get you gone, Sirrah.—[To the SERVANT, who goes out.]—Draw nearer, honest Flaminius. Thy lord's a bountiful gentleman: but thou art wise; and thou knowest well enough, although thou comest to me, that this is no time to lend money; especially upon bare friendship, without security. Here's three solidares* for thee; good boy, wink at me, and say thou saw'st me not. Fare thee well.

Flam. Is't possible, the world should so much differ;
And we alive, that liv'd † Fly, damned base—
To him that worships thee. [Exit.]

Lucul. Ha! Now I see thou art a fool, and fit for thy master. [Throwing the money away.]

Flam. May these add to the number that may scald thee!

Let molten coin be thy damnation,
Thou disease of a friend, and not himself!
Has friendship such a faint and milky heart,
It turns in less than two nights? O you gods,
I feel my master's passion! ‡ This slave
Unto his honour, has my lord's meat in him:
Why should it thrive, and turn to nutriment,
When he is turn'd to poison?
Oh! may diseases only work upon't!
And, when he is sick to death, let not that part of nature
Which my lord paid for, be of any power
To expel sickness, but prolong his hour! [Exit.]

SCENE II.—The same.—A public place.

Enter LUCIUS, with three STRANGERS.

Luc. Who, the lord Timon? he is my very good friend, and an honourable gentleman.

1 Stran. We know † him for no less, though we are but strangers to him. But I can tell you one thing, my lord, and which I hear from common rumours; now lord Timon's happy hours are done ¶ and past, and his estate shrinks from him.

Luc. Fie no, do not believe it; he cannot want for money.

2 Stran. But believe you this, my lord, that, not long ago, one of his men was with the lord Lucullus, to borrow so many talents; nay, urg'd extremely for't, and showed what necessity belonged to't, and yet was denied.

Luc. How?

3 Stran. I tell you denied, my lord.

Luc. What a strange case was that? now, before the gods, I am ashamed on't. Denied that honourable man? there was very little honour show'd in't. For my own part, I must needs confess, I have received some small kindnesses from him, as money, plate, jewels, and such like trifles, nothing comparing to his; yet, had he mistook him, and sent to me, I should ne'er have denied his occasion so many talents.

Enter SERVILIUS.

Serv. See, by good hap, yonder's my lord; I have sweat to see his honour.—My honoured lord,— [To LUCIUS.]

Luc. Servilius! you are kindly met, Sir. Fare thee well:—Commend me to thy honourable-virtuous lord, my very exquisite friend.

* A piece of Shakespeare's coinage.

† And we who were alive then, alive now.

‡ Suffering.

§ His life.

¶ Acknowledge.

‡ Consumed.

Serv. May it please your honour, my lord hath sent—

Luc. Ha! what has he sent? I am so much endeared to that lord; he's ever sending: How shall I thank him, thinkest thou? and what has he sent now?

Serv. He has only sent his present occasion now, my lord; requesting your lordship to supply his instant use with so many talents.

Luc. I know; his lordship is but merry with me;

He cannot want fifty-five hundred talents.

Serv. But in the mean time he wants less, my lord. If his occasion were not virtuous,* [Lord.] I should not urge it so half faithfully.

Luc. Dost thou speak seriously, Servilius?

Serv. Upon my soul, 'tis true, Sir.

Luc. What a wicked beast was I, to disfigure myself against such a good time, when I might have shown myself honourable? how unluckily it happened, that I should purchase the day before for a little part, and undo a great deal of honour?—Servilius, now before the gods, I am not able to do't; the more beast, I say:—I was sending to use lord Timon myself these gentlemen can witness; but I would not, for the wealth of Athens, I had done it now. Commend me bountifully to his good lordship; and I hope his honour will conceive the fairest of me, because I have no power to be kind: And tell him this from me, I count it one of my greatest afflictions, say, that I cannot pleasure such an honourable gentleman. Good Servilius, will you befriend me so far as to use mine own words to him?

Serv. Yes, Sir, I shall.

Luc. I will look you out a good turn, Servilius.— [Exit SERVILIUS.]

True, as you said, Timon is shrunk, indeed:

And he, that's once denied, will hardly speed.

[Exit LUCIUS.]

1 Stran. Do you observe this, Hostilius?

2 Stran. Ay, too well.

1 Stran. Why this

Is the world's soul; and just of the same piece
Is every flatterer's spirit. Who can call him
His friend, that digs in the same dish? for, in
My knowing, Timon hath been this lord's father,
And kept his credit with his purse;
Supported his estate; nay, Timon's money
Has paid his men their wages: He ne'er drinks,
But Timon's silver treads upon his lip;
And yet, (oh! see the monstrousness of man
When he looks out in an ungrateful shape!)
He does deny him, in respect of his,
What charitable men afford to beggars.

3 Stran. Religion groans at it.

1 Stran. For mine own part,
I never tasted Timon in my life,
Nor came any of his bounties over me,
To mark me for his friend; yet, I protest,
For his right noble mind, illustrious virtue,
And honourable carriage,
Had his necessity made use of me,
I would have put my wealth into donation †
And the best half should have return'd to him,
So much I love his heart: But I perceive,
Men must learn now with pity to dispense:
For policy sits above conscience. [Exit.]

SCENE III.—The same.—A Room in SEMPRONIUS' House.

Enter SEMPRONIUS, and a SERVANT of TIMON'S.

Sem. Must he needs trouble me in't? Humph! 'Bove all others?

He might have tried lord Lucius, or Lucullus;
And now Ventidius is wealthy too,
Whom he redeem'd from prison: All these three Owe their estates unto him.

Serv. O my lord,

* "If he did not want it for a good use."
† Presented it as a donation.

They have all been touch'd,* and found base metal; for

They have all denied him!

Sem. How! have they denied him?

Has Ventidius and Lucullus denied him?

And does he send to me? Three? humph!—

It shows but little love or judgment in him.

Must I be his last refuge? His friends, like physicians,

Thrive, give him over; Must I take the cure upon me? [him,

He has much disgrac'd me in't; I am angry at That might have known my place: I see no sense for't,

But his occasions might have woo'd me first;

For, in my conscience, I was the first man

That e'er receiv'd gift from him:

And does he think so backwardly of me now,

That I'll requite it last? No: So it may prove

An argument of laughter to the rest,

And I amongst the lords be thought a fool.

I had rather than the worth of thrice the sun,

He had sent to me first, but for my mind's sake;

I had such a courage† to do him good. But now return,

And with their faint reply this answer join;

Who bates mine honour, shall not know my coin. [Exit.

Serv. Excellent! Your lordship's a goodly villain. The devil knew not what he did, when he made man politic; he cross'd himself by't: and I cannot think, but, in the end, the villainies of man will set him clear. How fairly this lord strives to appear foul! takes virtuous copies to be wicked: like those that, under hot ardent zeal, would set whole realms on fire.

Of such a nature is his politic love.

This was my lord's best hope; now all are fled,

Save the gods only: Now his friends are dead,

Doors, that were ne'er acquainted with their wards

Many a bounteous year, must be employ'd

Now to guard sure their master.

And this is all a liberal course allows:

Who cannot keep his wealth, must keep his house. ‡ [Exit.

SCENE IV.—The same.—A Hall in TIMON'S House.

Enter two Servants of VARRO, and the Servant of LUCIUS, meeting TITUS, HORTENSIVS, and other Servants to TIMON'S Creditors, waiting his coming out.

Var. Serv. Well met; good-morrow, Titus and Hortensius.

Tit. The like to you, kind Varro.

Hor. Lucius?

What, do we meet together?

Luc. Serv. Ay, and I think

One business does command us all; for mine is money.

Tit. So is theirs and ours.

Enter PHILOTUS.

Luc. Serv. And Sir

Philotus too!

Phi. Good day at once.

Luc. Serv. Welcome, good brother.

What do you think the hour?

Phi. Labouring for nine.

Luc. Serv. So much?

Phi. Is not my lord seen yet?

Luc. Serv. Not yet.

Phi. I wonder on't: he was wont to shine at seven.

Luc. Serv. Ay, but the days are waxed shorter with him:

You must consider, that a prodigal course is like the sun's; § but not, like his, recoverable.

I fear,

'Tis deepest winter in lord Timon's purse;

That is, one may reach deep enough, and yet find little.

Phi. I am of your fear for that.

Tit. I'll show you how to observe a strange event.

Your lord sends now for money.

Hor. Most true, he doeth.

Tit. And he wears jewels now of Timon's gift For which I wait for money.

Hor. It is against my heart.

Luc. Serv. Mark, how strange it shows, Timon in this should pay more than he owes: And e'en as if your lord should wear rich jewels, And send for money for 'em.

Hor. I am weary of this charge,* the gods can witness:

I know, my lord hath spent of Timon's wealth, And now ingratitude makes it worse than stealth.

Var. Serv. Yes, mine's three thousand crowns: What's yours?

Luc. Serv. Five thousand mine.

Var. Serv. 'Tis much deep: and it should seem by the sum,

Your master's confidence was above mine; Else, surely, his had equal'd.

Enter FLAMINIUS.

Tit. One of lord Timon's men.

Luc. Serv. Flaminius! Sir, a word: 'Pray, is my lord ready to come forth?

Flam. No, indeed, he is not,

Tit. We attend his lordship; pray, signify so much.

Flam. I need not tell him that; he knows you are too diligent. [Exit FLAMINIUS.

Enter FLAVIUS in a cloak, muffled.

Luc. Serv. Ha! is not that his steward muffled so?

He goes away in a cloud: call him, call him.

Tit. Do you hear, Sir?

Var. Serv. By your leave, Sir,—

Flav. What do you ask of me, my friend?

Tit. We wait for certain money here, Sir.

Flav. Ay,

If money were as certain as your waiting,

'Twere sure enough. Why then prefer'd you not [eat

Your sums and bills, when your false masters Of my lord's meat? Then they could smile, and fawn

Upon his debts, and take down the interest Into their gluttonous maws. You do yourselves but wrong,

To stir me up; let me pass quietly:

Believ't, my lord and I have made an end;

I have no more to reckon, he to spend.

Luc. Serv. Ay, but this answer will not serve.

Flav. If 'twill not,

'Tis not so base as you; for you serve knaves. [Exit.

Var. Serv. How! what does his cashier'd worship mutter?

Var. Serv. No matter what; he's poor, and that's revenge enough. Who can speak broader than he that has no house to put his head in? such may rail against great buildings.

Enter SERVILIUS.

Tit. Oh! here's Servilius; now we shall know some answer.

Serv. If I might beseech you, gentlemen, To repair some other hour, I should much derive from it: for, take it on my soul, My lord leans wond'rously to discontent.

His comfortable temper has forsook him;

He is much out of health, and keeps his chamber.

Luc. Serv. Many do keep their chambers, are not sick:

And, if it be so far beyond his health,

Methinks, he should the sooner pay his debts, And make a clear way to the gods.

* Tric'd.
‡ For fear of debts.

† Eager desire.
§ In blaze and splendour.

* Commission.

Ser. Good gods!

Tit. We cannot take this for an answer, Sir.

Flam. [Within.] Servilius, help!—my lord!
my lord!

Enter TIMON, in a rage; FLAMINIUS following.

Tim. What, are my doors oppos'd against my passage.

Have I been ever free, and must my house
Be my retentive enemy, my jail:
The place which I have feasted, does it now,
Like all mankind, show me an iron heart?

Luc. Serv. Put it now, Titus.

Tit. My lord, here is my bill.

Luc. Serv. Here's mine.

Hor. Serv. And mine, my lord.

Both Var. Serv. And ours, my lord.

Phi. All our bills.

Tim. Knock me down with 'em: * cleave me to the girdle.

Luc. Serv. Alas! my lord,—

Tim. Cut my heart in sums.

Tit. Mine, fifty talents.

Tim. Tell out my blood.

Luc. Serv. Five thousand crowns, my lord.

Tim. Five thousand drops pays that

What yours?—and yours?

1 Var. Serv. My lord,—

2 Var. Serv. My lord,—

Tim. Tear me, take me, and the gods fall upon you! [Exit.]

Hor. 'Faith, I perceive our masters may throw their caps at their money; these debts may well be called desperate ones, for a madman owes
'em. [Exeunt.]

Re-enter TIMON and FLAVIUS.

Tim. They have e'en put my breath from me,
the slaves:

Creditors!—devils.

Flav. My dear lord,—

Tim. What if it should be so?

Flav. My lord,—

Tim. I'll have it so:—My steward!

Flav. Here, my lord.

Tim. So fitly? Go, bid all my friends again,
Lacius, Lucullus, and Sempronius; all:
I'll once more feast the rascals.

Flav. O my lord,
You only speak from your distracted soul;
There is not so much left, to furnish out
A moderate table.

Tim. Be't not in thy care; go.
I charge thee; invite them all: let in the tide
Of knaves once more; my cook and I'll provide.
[Exeunt.]

SCENE V.—The same.—The Senate-House.

The Senate sitting. Enter ALCIBIADES, attended.

1 Sen. My lord, you have my voice to it; the fault's

bloody; 'tis necessary he should die:
Nothing emboldens sin so much as mercy.

2 Sen. Most true: the law shall bruise him.

Alcib. Honour, health, and compassion to the senate!

1 Sen. Now, captain?

Alcib. I am an humble suitor to your virtues;
For pity is the virtue of the law,
And none but tyrants use it cruelly.
It pleases time, and fortune, to lie heavy
Upon a friend of mine, who in hot blood,
Hath stepp'd into the law, which is past depth
To those that, without heed, do plunge into it.
He is a man, setting his fate aside,†
Of comely virtues:
Nor did he sell the fact with cowardice;
(An honour in him which buys out his fault,)
But, with a noble fury, and fair spirit,

Seeing his reputation touch'd to death,
He did oppose his foe:

And with such sober and unnoted passion*
He did behave† his anger, ere 'twas spent,
As if he had but prov'd an argument.

1 Sen. You undergo too strict a paradox,‡
Striving to make an ugly deed look fair:
Your words have took such pains, as if they labour'd

To bring manslaughter into form, set quarrelling
Upon the head of valour; which, indeed,
Is valour misbegot, and came into the world
When sects and factions were newly born:

He's truly valiant, that can wisely suffer
The worst that man can breathe; and make his wrongs (lessly;

His outsides; wear them like his raiment, care-
And ne'er prefer his injuries to his heart,
To bring it into danger.

If wrongs be evils, and enforce us kill,
What folly 'tis, to hazard life for ill?

Alcib. My lord.—

1 Sen. You cannot make gross sins look clear;
To revenge is no valour, but to bear.

Alcib. My lords, then, under favour, pardon
me.

If I speak like a captain.—

Why do fond men expose themselves to battle,
And not endure all threat'nings? sleep upon it,
And let the foes quietly cut their throats,
Without repugnancy? but if there be Such valour in the bearing, what make we Abroad?§ why then, women are more valiant,
That stay at home, if bearing carry it;
And th' ass, more captain than the lion; the felon,
Loaden with irons, wiser than the judge,
If wisdom be in suffering. O my lords,
As you are great, be pitifully good:

Who cannot condemn rashness in cold blood?

To kill, I grant, is sin's extremest gust;||

But, in defence, by mercy, 'tis most just.¶

To be in anger, is impiety;

But who is man, that is not angry?

Weigh but the crime with this.

2 Sen. You breathe in vain.

Alcib. In vain? his service done

At Lacedæmon and Byzantium,

Were a sufficient briber for his life.

1 Sen. What's that?

Alcib. Why, I say, my lords, h'as done fair
service,

And slain in fight many of your enemies:

How full of valour did he bear himself

In the last conflict, and made plenteous wounds?

2 Sen. He has made too much plenty with 'em, he

Is a sworn rioter: h'as a sin that often

Drowns him, and takes his valour prisoner:

If there were no foes, that were enough alone

To overcome him: in that beastly fury

He has been known to commit outrages,

And cherish factions: 'Tis inferr'd to us,

His days are foul, and his drink dangerous.

1 Sen. He dies.

Alcib. Hard fate! he might have died in war.

My lords, if not for any parts in him,

(Though his right arm might purchase his own
time,

And be in debt to none,) yet, more to move you,

Take my deserts to his, and join them both:

And, for I know, your reverend ages love

Security, I'll pawn my victories, all

My honour to you, upon his good returns.

If by this crime he owes the law his life,

Why, let the war receiv't in valiant gore;

For law is strict, and war is nothing more.

1 Sen. We are for law, he dies; urge it no more, [ther,

On height of our displeasure: Friend, or bro-

He forfeits his own blood, that spills another.

* A bill was also a battle-axe—Timon, therefore,
plays upon the word.

† With the exception of this one act.

* Passion so moderated that no one could note its operation. † Manage. ‡ You undertake a paradox too hard. § Why do we take the field?
Rashness. ¶ I call mercy to witness, that de-lusive violence is just.

Alcib. Must it be so? it must not be. My
I do beseech you, know me. [Lords,

2 Sen. How?

Alcib. Call me to your remembrances.

3 Sen. What?

Alcib. I cannot think, but your age has forgot
me;

It could not else be, I should prove so base,*
To sue and be denied such common grace:
My wounds ache at you.

1 Sen. Do you dare our anger?

'Tis in few words, but specious in effect—
We banish thee for ever.

Alcib. Banish me?

Banish your dotage; banish usury,
That makes the senate ugly.

1 Sen. If, after two days' shine, Athens contain thee,
Attend our weightier judgment. And, not to swell our spirit,†
He shall be executed presently.

[Exeunt SENATORS.]

Alcib. Now the gods keep you old enough;
that you may live

Only in bone, that none may look on you!
I am worse than mad: I have kept back their
foes,

While they have told their money, and let out
Their coin upon large interest; I myself,
Rich only in large hurts;—All those, for this?
Is this the balsam, that the usuring senate
Pours into captains' wounds? ha! banishment?
It comes not ill; I hate not to be banish'd;
It is a cause worthy my spleen and fury,
That I may strike at Athens. I'll cheer up
My discontented troops, and lay for hearts,‡
'Tis honour, with most lands to be at odds;
Soldiers should brook as little wrongs as gods.

[Exit.]

SCENE VI.—A magnificent Room in TIMON'S
House.

Music. Tables set out: SERVANTS attending.
Enter divers LORDS at several doors.

1 Lord. The good time of day to you, Sir.

2 Lord. I also wish it to you. I think, this honourable lord did but try us this other day.

1 Lord. Upon that were my thoughts tiring, when we encountered: I hope, it is not so low with him, as he made it seem in the trial of his several friends.

2 Lord. It should not be, by the persuasion of his new feasting.

1 Lord. I should think so: He hath sent me an earnest inviting, which many my near occasions did urge me to put off; but he hath conjured me beyond them, and I must needs appear.

2 Lord. In like manner was I in debt to my importunate business, but he would not hear my excuse. I am sorry, when he sent to borrow of me, that my provision was out.

1 Lord. I am sick of that grief too, as I understand how all things go.

2 Lord. Every man here's so. What would he have borrowed of you?

1 Lord. A thousand pieces.

2 Lord. A thousand pieces!

1 Lord. What of you?

3 Lord. He sent to me, Sir.—Here he comes.

Enter TIMON, and Attendants.

Tim. With all my heart, gentlemen both:—
And how fare you?

1 Lord. Ever at the best, hearing well of your lordship.

2 Lord. The swallow follows not summer more willing, than we your lordship.

Tim. [Aside.] Nor more willingly leaves winter; such summer-birds are men.—Gentlemen,

our dinner will not recompense this long stay:
feast your ears with the music awhile; if they will fare so harshly on the trumpet's sound: we shall to't presently.

2 Lord. I hope it remains not unkindly with your lordship, that I returned you an empty
messenger.

Tim. O Sir, let it not trouble you.

2 Lord. My noble lord,—

Tim. Ah! my good friend! what cheer?

[The banquet brought in.]

2 Lord. My most honourable lord, I am e'en sick of shame, that when your lordship this other day sent to me, I was so unfortunate a beggar.

Tim. Think not on't, Sir.

2 Lord. If you had sent but two hours before,—

Tim. Let it not cumber your better remembrance.* Come, bring in all together.

2 Lord. All cover'd dishes!

1 Lord. Royal cheer, I warrant you.

2 Lord. Doubt not that, if money and the season can yield it.

1 Lord. How do you? what's the news?

3 Lord. Alcibiades is banished: Hear you
of it?

1 & 2 Lord. Alcibiades banished!

3 Lord. 'Tis so, be sure of it.

1 Lord. How? how?

2 Lord. I pray you, upon what?

Tim. My worthy friends, will you draw near?

3 Lord. I'll tell you more anon. Here's a noble feast toward.†

2 Lord. This is the old man still.

3 Lord. Will't hold? will't hold?

2 Lord. It does: but time will—and so—

3 Lord. I do conceive.

Tim. Each man to his stool with that spur as he would to the lip of his mistress: your diet shall be in all places alike. Make not a city feast of it, to let the meat cool ere we can agree upon the first place: Sit, sit. The gods require our thanks.

*You great benefactors, sprinkle our society with thankfulness. For your own gifts, make yourselves praised: but reserve still to give, lest your deities be despised. Lend to each man enough, that one need not lend to the other: for, were your godheads to borrow of men, men would forsake the gods. Make the meat be beloved, more than the man that gives it. Let no assembly of twenty be without a score of villains: If there sit twelve women at the table, let a dozen of them be—as they are.—The rest of your fees, O gods,— the senators of Athens, together with the common lag‡ of people,—what is amiss in them, you gods make suitable for destruction.
For these my present friends,—as they are to be nothing, so in nothing bless them, and to nothing they are welcome.*

Uncover, dogs, and lap.

[The dishes uncovered are full of warm water.]

Some speak. What does his lordship mean?

Some other. I know not.

Tim. May you a better feast never behold,
You knot of mouth-friends! smoke, and lukewarm water

Is your perfection. This is Timon's last;
Who stuck and spangled you with flatteries,
Washes it off, and sprinkles in your faces

[Throwing water in their faces.]

Your reeking villany. Live loath'd, and long,
Most smiling, smooth, detested parasites,
Courteous destroyers, affable wolves, meek bears,
You fools of fortune, trencher-friends, time's
flies,§

* So dishonoured. † Not to put ourselves in a rage. ‡ Lay out for hearts, or, for the affections of the people. § Were idly employed.

* Your good memory. † I. e. in a state of readiness. ‡ The rag-end of a piece of cloth, or the lag § Flies of a season.

Cap and knee slaves, vapours, and minute-jacks!*

Of man, and beast, the infinite malady †
Crust you quite o'er!—What, dost thou go?
Soft, take thy physic first—thou too,—and
thou;—

[Throws the dishes at them, and drives them out.]

Stay, I will lend thee money, borrow none.—
What, all in motion? Henceforth be no feast,
Whereat a villain's not a welcome guest.
Burn, house; sink, Athens! henceforth hated be
Of Timon, man, and all humanity? [Exit.]

Re-enter the LORDS, with other LORDS and SENATORS.

1 Lord. How now, my lords?

2 Lord. Know you the quality of lord Timon's fury?

3 Lord. Pish! did you see my cap?

4 Lord. I have lost my gown.

3 Lord. He's but a mad lord, and nought but humour sways him. He gave me a jewel the other day, and now he has beat it out of my hat:—Did you see my jewel?

4 Lord. Did you see my cap?

3 Lord. Here 'tis.

4 Lord. Here lies my gown.

1 Lord. Let's make no stay.

2 Lord. Lord Timon's mad.

3 Lord. I feel't upon my bones.

4 Lord. One day he gives us diamonds, next day stones. [Exit.]

ACT IV.

SCENE I.—Without the walls of Athens.

Enter TIMON.

Tim. Let me look back upon thee, O thou wall,
That girdlest in those wolves! Dive in the earth,
And fence not Athens! Matrons, turn incontinent!

Obedience fail in children! slaves and fools
Pluck the grave wrinkled senate from the bench,

And minister in their steads! to general filths ‡
Convert o'the instant, green virginity!
Do't in your parents' eyes! bankrupts, hold fast:
Rather than render back, out with your knives,
And cut your trusters' throats! bound servants,
steal!

Large handed robbers your grave masters are,
And pill by law! maid, to thy master's bed;
Thy mistress is o'the brothel! son of sixteen,
Pluck the lim'd crutch from the old limping
sire,

With it beat out his brains! piety, and fear,
Religion to the gods, peace, justice, truth,
Domestic awe, night-rest, and neighbourhood,
Instruction, manners, mysteries, and trades,
Degrees, observances, customs, and laws,
Decline to your confounding contraries, §
And yet confusion live!—Plagues, incident to men,

Your potent and infectious fevers heap
On Athens, ripe for stroke! thou cold sciatica,
Cripple our senators, that their limbs may halt
As lamely as their manners! lust and liberty ||
Creep in the minds and marrows of our youth;
That 'gainst the stream of virtue they may strive,

And drown themselves in riot! itches, blains,
Sow all the Athenian bosoms; and their crop
Be general leprosy! breath infect breath;
That their society, as their friendship, may
Be merely poison! Nothing I'll hear from thee,

* Jacks of the clock; like those at St. Dunstan's church, in Fleet-street. † Every kind of disease.
‡ Common sewers. § Contrivances, which waste
or destroy each other. || Libertinism

But nakedness, thou detestable town!
Take thou that too, with multiplying banners! *
Timon will to the woods; where he shall find
The unkindest beast more kinder than man kind.

The gods confound (hear me, ye good gods all,)
The Athenians both within and out that wall!
And grant, as Timon grows, his hate may grow
To the whole race of mankind, high and low!
Amen. [Exit]

SCENE II.—Athens.—A Room in TIMON'S House.

Enter FLAVIUS, with two or three SERVANTS.

1 Ser. Hear you, master steward, where's our master?

Are we undone? cast off? nothing remaining?
Flav. Alack, my fellows, what should I say
to you?

Let me be recorded by the righteous gods,
I am as poor as you.

1 Ser. Such a house broke!
So noble a master fallen! All gone! and not
One friend, to take his fortune by the arm,
And go along with him!

2 Ser. As we do turn our backs
From our companion, thrown into his grave;
So his familiars to his buried fortunes
Slink all away; leave their false vows with him
Like empty purses pick'd; and his poor self,
A dedicated beggar to the air,
With his disease of all-shunn'd poverty,
Walks, like contempt, alone.—More of our fellows.

Enter other SERVANTS.

Flav. All broken implements of a ruined
house.

3 Ser. Yet do our hearts wear Timon's livery,

That see I by our faces; we are fellows still,
Serving alike in sorrow: Leak'd is our bark;
And we, poor mates, stand on the dying deck,
Hearing the surges threat: we must all part
Into this sea of air.

Flav. Good fellows all,
The latest of my wealth I'll share amongst you.
Wherever we shall meet, for Timon's sake,
Let's yet be fellows; let's shake our heads, and
say,

As 'twere a knell unto our master's fortunes,
We have seen better days. Let each take some;
[Giving them money.]

Nay, put out all your hands. Not one word
more:

Thus part we rich in sorrow, parting poor,
[Exit SERVANTS.]

Oh! the fierce † wretchedness that glory brings
us!

Who would not wish to be from wealth exempt,
Since riches point to misery and contempt?
Who'd be so mock'd with glory, as to live
But in a dream of friendship? [pounds,
To have his pomp, and all what state com-
But only painted like his varnish'd friends?
Poor honest lord, brought low by his own
heart;

Undone by goodness! Strange unusual blood, ‡
When man's worst sin is, he does too much good!

Who then dares to be half so kind again?
For bounty that makes gods, does still mar
men.

My dearest lord,—bless'd, to be most accurs'd,
Rich, only to be wretched;—thy great fortunes
Are made thy chief afflictions. Alas, kind
lord!

He's flung in rage from this ungrateful seat
Of monstrous friends; nor has he with him to Supply his life, or that which can command it.
I'll follow and inquire him out:

* Accumulated curses.
† Quick. ‡ Propensity.

I'll serve his mind with my best will ;
Whilst I have gold, I'll be his steward still.

[Exit.

SCENE III.—The Woods.

Enter TIMON.

Tim. O blessed breeding sun, draw from the earth
Rotten humidity ; below thy sister's orb *
Infect the air ! Twinn'd brothers of one womb,—
Whose procreation, residence, and birth, Scarce is dividant,—touch them with several fortunes ;

The greater scorns the lesser : Not nature,
To whom all sores lay siege, can bear great sor-
But by † contempt of nature. [tune,

Raise me this beggar, and denude that lord ;
The senator shall bear contempt hereditary,
The beggar native honour.

It is the pasture lards the brother's sides,
The want that makes him lean. Who dares,
who dares,

In purity of manhood stand upright,
And say, This man's a flatterer ? if one be,

So are they all ; for every grize ‡ of fortune
Is smoothed by that below : the learned pate

Ducks to the golden fool : All is oblique ;
There's nothing level in our cursed natures,
But direct villany. Therefore, be abhorr'd

All feasts, societies, and throngs of men !
His semblable, yea, himself, Timon disdains !
Destruction fang § mankind !—Earth, yield me

roots ! [Digging.
Who seeks for better of thee, sauce his palate
With thy most operant poison ! What is here ?
Gold ? yellow, glittering, precious gold ? No, gods, [vows !

I am no idle votarist. || Roots, you clear hea-
Thus much of this, will make black white ; foul,
fair ;

Wrong, right ; base, noble ; old, young ; coward,
valiant.

Ha, you gods ! why this ? What this, you gods ?
Why this

Will lug your priests and servants from your sides ;

Pluck stout men's pillows from below their heads :
This yellow slave

Will knit and break religions ; bless the accurs'd ;

Make the hoar leprosy ador'd ; place thieves,
And give them title, knee, and approbation,
With senators on the bench : this is it,

That makes the wappen'd ¶ widow wed again ;
She, whom the spital-house, and ulcerous sores
Would cast the gorge at, this embalms and spices

To the April day again.  Come, damned earth,
Thou common whore of mankind, that put'st odds

Among the rout of nations, I will make thee
Do thy right nature.—[March afar off.]—Ha !

a drum !—Thou'rt quick,
But yet I'll bury thee : Thou'lt go, strong thief,
When gouty keepers of thee cannot stand :—

Nay, stay thou out for earnest.

[Keeping some gold.

Enter ALCIBIADES, with drum and fife, in warlike manner ; PHRYNIA and TIMANDRA.

Alcib. What art thou there ?
Speak.

Tim. A beast, as thou art. The canker know
thy heart,

For showing me again the eyes of man !
Alcib. What is thy name ? Is man so hateful
to thee,

That art thyself a man ?
Tim. I am misanthropos, and hate mankind.

I.e. The moon's. † Without.
‡ Step a degree. § Gripe. ¶ No insincere supplicant. I want not gold, but roots. ¶ Sorrowful.

 Restores to all the sweetness and freshness of her youth.

For thy part, I do wish thou wert a dog,
That I might love thee something.

Alcib. I know thee well ;
But in thy fortunes am unlearn'd and strange.

Tim. I know thee too ; and more, than that I know thee,

I not desire to know. Follow thy drum ;
With man's blood paint the ground, gules,
gules :

Religious canons, civil laws are cruel ;
Then what should war be ? This fell whore of thine

Hath in her more destruction than thy sword,
For all her cherubin look.

Phr. Thy lips rot off !

Tim. I will not kiss thee ; then the rot returns
To thine own lips again.

Alcib. How came the noble Timon to this change ? [give :

Tim. As the moon does by wanting light to
But then renew I could not like the moon :

There were no suns to borrow of.

Alcib. Noble Timon,
What friendship may I do thee ?

Tim. None, but to Maintain my opinion.

Alcib. What is it, Timon ?

Tim. Promise me friendship, but perform none : If

Thou wilt not promise, the gods plague thee : for Thou art a man ! If thou dost perform, confound
thee,

For thou'rt a man !

Alcib. I have heard in some sort of thy miseries.

Tim. Thou saw'st them, when I had prosperity.

Alcib. I see them now ; then was a blessed
time.

Tim. As thine is now, held with a brace of harlots.

Timan. Is this the Athenian minion, whom the world

Voic'd so regardfully ?

Tim. Art thou Timandra ?

Timan. Yes.

Tim. Be a whore still ! they love thee not, that use thee :

Give them diseases, leaving with thee their lust.
Make use of thy salt hours : season the slaves

For tubs, and baths ; bring down rose-cheeked
To the tub-fast, and the diet. * [youth

Timan. Hang thee, monster !

Alcib. Pardon him, sweet Timandra ; for his wits

Are drown'd and lost in his calamities.—

I have but little gold of late, brave Timon

The want whereof doth daily make revolt

In my penurious band : I have heard and griev'd,

How cursed Athens, mindless of thy worth,
Forgetting thy great deeds, when neighbour states,

But for thy sword and fortune, trod upon them,—

Tim. I pr'ythee, beat thy drum, and get thee gone.

Alcib. I am thy friend, and pity thee, dear
Timon.

Tim. How dost thou pity him, whom thou dost trouble ?

I had rather be alone.

Alcib. Why, fare thee well :

Here's some gold for thee.

Tim. Keep't, I cannot eat it.

Alcib. When I have laid proud Athens on a heap,—

Tim. Warr'st thou 'gainst Athens ?

Alcib. Ay, Timon, and have cause.

Tim. The gods confound them all i'thy conquest ; and

Thee after, when thou hast conquer'd !

Alcib. Why me, Timon ?

Tim. That,

By killing villains, thou wast born to conquer

* Used in the cure of a peculiar disorder

My country.

Put up thy gold. Go on,—here's gold,—go on ;
Be as a planetary plague, when Jove
Will o'er some high-vic'd city hang his poison
In the sick air : Let not thy sword skip one :
Pity not honour'd age for his white beard,
He's a nurer. Strike me the counterfeit matron ;
It is her habit only that is honest,
Herself's a bawd. Let not the virgin's cheek
Make soft thy trenchant * sword ; for those milk-

paps,
That through the window-bars bore at men's eyes,
Are not within the leaf of pity writ, Set them down horrible traitors. Spare not the babe, [mercy ;

Whose dimpled smiles from fools exhaust their
Think it a bastard,† whom the oracle
Hath doubtfully pronounc'd thy throat shall cut,
And mince it sans remorse.‡ Swear against objects ; §

Put armour on thine ears, and on thine eyes ;
Whose proof, nor yells of mothers, maids, nor babes,

Nor sight of priests in holy vestments bleeding,
Shall pierce a jot. There's gold to pay thy soldiers ;

Make large confusion : and, thy fury spent,
Confounded be thyself ! Speak not, be gone.

Alcib. Hast thou gold yet ? I'll take the gold thou giv'st me,

Not all thy counsel.

Tim. Dost thou, or dost thou not, heaven's curse upon thee !

Phr. & Timon. Give us some gold, good Timon : Hast thou more ?

Tim. Enough to make a whore forswear her trade, [sluts,

And to make whores, a bawd. Hold up, you
Your aprons mountant : You are not oathable,—
Although, I know, you'll swear, terribly swear,
Into strong shudders, and to heavenly agues,
The immortal gods that hear you,—spare your oaths,

I'll trust to your conditions. ¶ Be whores still ;
And he whose pious breath seeks to convert you,
Be strong in whore, allure him, burn him up ;
Let your close fire predominate his smoke,
And be no turncoats : Yet may your pains, six months, [roofs

Be quite contrary : And thatch your poor thin
With burdens of the dead ;—some that were hang'd,

No matter : wear them, betray with them : whore
still ;

Paint till a horse may mire upon your face :
A pox of wrinkles !

Phr. & Timon. Well, more gold ;—What
then ?—

Believ't, that we'll do any thing for gold.

Tim. Consumptions sow
In hollow bones of man ; strike their sharp shins,
And mar men's spurring. Crack the lawyer's
voice,

That he may never more false title plead,
Nor sound his quillts § shrilly : hear  the flamen,

That scolds against the quality of flesh,
And not believes himself : down with the nose,
Down with it flat ; take the bridge quite away
Of him, that his particular to foresee,
Smells from the general weal : make curl'd-pate
ruffians bald ;

And let the unscarr'd braggarts of the war
Derive some pain from you : Plague all ;
That your activity may defeat and quell
The source of all erection.—There's more gold :—
Do you damn others, and let this damn you,
And ditches grave†† you all !

Phr. & Timon. More counsel with more money, bounteous Timon.

* Sharp. † Alluding to Jocasta, the wife of Œdipus, who murdered her incestuous offspring.
‡ Without pity. § Against objects of compassion.
¶ Veracious. † Subtilties.  Give him
th. heavy leprosy. †† Entomb.

Tim. More whore, more mischief first ; I have given you earnest.

Alcib. Strike up the drum towards Athens.
Farewell, Timon ;

If I thrive well, I'll visit thee again.

Tim. If I hope well, I'll never see thee more.

Alcib. I never did thee harm.

Tim. Yes, thou spok'st well of me.

Alcib. Call'st thou that harm ?

Tim. Men daily find it such. Get thee away
And take thy beagles with thee.

Alcib. We but offend him.—
Strike.

[Drum beats. Exeunt ALCIBIADES.
PHRYNIA, and TIMANDRA.

Tim. That nature, being sick of man's unkind-
ness,

Should yet be hungry !—Common mother, thou, [Digging.

Whose womb unmeasurable, and infinite breast,*
Teems, and feeds all ; whose self-same mettle,
Whereof thy proud child, arrogant man, is puff'd,

Engenders the black toad, and adder blue,
The gilded newt, and eyeless venom'd worm,†
With all the abhorred births below crisp‡
heaven

Whereon Hyperion's quickening fire doth shine ;
Yield him, who all thy human sons doth hate,
From forth thy plenteous bosom one poor root !
Ensear thy fertile and conceptions womb,
Let it no more bring out ingrateful man !

Go great with tigers, dragons, wolves, and bears ;
Teem with new monsters, whom thy upward
face

Hath to the marbled mansion all above
Never presented !—Oh ! a root,—Dear thanks !

Dry up thy marrows, vines, and plough-torn leas ;

Whereof ingrateful man, with liquorish draughts,
And morsels unctuous, greases his pure mind,
That from it all consideration slips !

Enter APEMANTUS.

More man ? Plague ! plague !

Apem. I was directed hither : Men report,
Thou dost affect my manners, and dost use them.

Tim. 'Tis then, because thou dost not keep a dog

Whom I would imitate : Consumption catch thee !

Apem. This is in thee a nature but affected !
A poor unmanly melancholy, sprung
From change of fortune. Why this spade ? this place ?

This slave-like habit ? and these looks of care ?
Thy flatterers yet wear silk, drink wine, lie soft,
Hug their diseas'd perfumes, § and have forgot
That ever Timon was. Shame not these woods,
By putting on the cunning of a carper. ¶

Be thou a flatterer now, and seek to thrive
By that which has undone thee : hinge thy knee,
And let his very breath, whom thou'lt observe,
Blow off thy cap ; praise this most vicious strain,
And call it excellent. Thou wast told thus :

Thou gav'st thine ears, like tapsters, that bid
welcome,

To knaves, and all approachers : 'Tis most just,
That thou turn rascal ; had'st thou wealth again, Rascals should hav't. Do not assume my like-
ness.

Tim. Were I like thee, I'd throw away myself.

Apem. Thou hast cast away thyself, being like thyself ;

A madman so long, now a fool : What think'st
That the bleak air, thy bolsterous chamberlain,
Will put thy shirt on warm ? Will these moss'd trees,

That have outliv'd the eagle, page thy heels,
And skip when thou point'st out ? Will the cold brook,

Candied with ice, candle thy morning taste,

* Boundless surface. † The serpent called the blind worm. ‡ Bent. § Their diseased perfumed mistresses ¶ Finding fault.

To cure thy o'er-night's surfeit? call the creatures,—

Whose naked natures live in all the spite
Of wreakful heaven; whose bare unhoused trunks,

To the conflicting elements expos'd,
Answer mere nature,—bid them flatter thee.
Oh! thou shalt find—

Tim. A fool of thee: Depart.

Apem. I love thee better now than e'er I did.

Tim. I hate thee worse.

Apem. Why?

Tim. Thou flatter'st misery.

Apem. I flatter not; but say thou art a caltiff.

Tim. Why dost thou seek me out?

Apem. To vex thee.

Tim. Always a villain's office, or a fool's.
Dost please thyself in't?

Apem. Ay.

Tim. What! a knave too?

Apem. If thou didst put this sour cold habit on
To castigate thy pride, 'twere well: but thou
Dost it enforcedly; thou'dst courtier be again,
Wert thou not beggar. Willing misery
Outlives incertain pomp, is crown'd before: *
The one is filling still, never complete;
The other, at high wish: Best state, contentless,
Hath a distracted and most wretched being,
Worse than the worst, content.

Thou should'st desire to die, being miserable.

Tim. Not by his breath, † that is more miserable.

Thou art a slave, whom Fortune's tender arm
With favour never clasp'd; but bred a dog.
Hadst thou, like us, from our first swath, ‡ proceeded

The sweet degrees that this brief world affords
To such as may the passive drugs of it Freely command, thou would'st have plung'd
thyself

In general riot; melted down thy youth
In different beds of lust; and never learn'd
The icy precepts of respect, § but follow'd
The sugar'd game before thee. But myself,
Who had the world as my confectionary;
The mouths, the tongues, the eyes, and hearts of men

At duty, more than I could frame employment;
That numberless upon me stuck, as leaves
Do on the oak, have with one winter's brush
Fell from their boughs, and left me open, bare
For every storm that blows. I, to bear this,
That never knew but better, is some burden:
Thy nature did commence in sufferance, time
Hath made thee hard in't. Why should'st thou hate men?

They never flatter'd thee: What hast thou given?
If thou wilt curse,—thy father, that poor rag,
Must be thy subject; who, in spite, put stuff
To some she beggar, and compounded thee
Poor rogue hereditary. Hence! be gone!—
If thou hadst not been born the worst of men,
Thou hadst been a knave and flatterer.

Apem. Art thou proud yet?

Tim. Ay, that I am not thee.

Apem. I, that I was No prodigal.

Tim. I, that I am one now;
Were all the wealth I have, shut up in thee,
I'd give thee leave to hang it. Get thee gone.—
That the whole life of Athens were in this!
Thus would I eat it. [Eating a roof.]

Apem. Here; I will mend thy feast.

[Offering him something.]

Tim. First mend my company, take away thyself.

Apem. So I shall mend mine own, by the lack of thine.

Tim. 'Tis not well mended so, it is but botch'd;
If not, I would it were.

Apem. What would'st thou have to Athens?

Tim. Thee thither in a whirlwind. If thou wilt,

Tell them there I have gold: look, so I have.

Apem. Here is no use for gold.

Tim. The best and truest:

For here it sleeps, and does no hired harm.

Apem. Where liest o' nights, Timon?

Tim. Under that's above me.

Where feed'st thou o' days, Apemantus?

Apem. Where my stomach finds meat; or,
rather, where I eat it.

Tim. 'Would poison were obedient, and knew my mind!

Apem. Where would'st thou send it?

Tim. To sance thy dishes.

Apem. The middle of humanity thou never knewest, but the extremity of both ends: When thou wast in thy gilt, and thy perfume, they mocked thee for too much curiosity; * in thy rags thou knowest none, but are despised for the contrary. There's a medlar for thee, eat it.

Tim. On what I hate, I feed not.

Apem. Dost hate a medlar?

Tim. Ay, though it look like thee.

Apem. An thou had'st hated medlars sooner, thou should'st have loved thyself better now.
What man didst thou ever know unthrift, that was beloved after his means?

Tim. Who, without those means thou talkest of, didst thou ever know beloved?

Apem. Myself.

Tim. I understand thee; thou hadst some means to keep a dog.

Apem. What things in the world canst thou nearest compare to thy flatterers?

Tim. Women nearest; but men, men are the things themselves. What would'st thou do with the world, Apemantus, if it lay in thy power?

Apem. Give it the beasts, to be rid of the men.

Tim. Would'st thou have thyself fall in the confusion of men, and remain a beast with the beasts?

Apem. Ay, Timon.

Tim. A beastly ambition, which the gods grant thee to attain to! If thou wert the lion, the fox would beguile thee: if thou wert the lamb, the fox would eat thee: if thou wert the fox, the lion would suspect thee, when, peradventure, thou wert accused by the ass: if thou wert the ass, thy dulness would torment thee: and still thou livedst but as a breakfast to the wolf: if thou wert the wolf, thy greediness would afflict thee, and oft thou shouldst hazard thy life for thy dinner: wert thou the unicorn, pride and wrath would confound thee, and make thine own self the conquest of thy fury: wert thou a bear, thou would'st be killed by the horse; wert thou
a horse, thou would'st be seized by the leopard;
wert thou a leopard, thou wert german to the lion, and the spots of thy kindred were jarers on thy life: all thy safety were remotion; † and thy defence, absence. What beast could'st thou be, that were not subject to a beast? and what a beast art thou already, that seest not thy loss in transformation?

Apem. If thou could'st please me with speaking to me, thou might'st have hit upon it here:
The commonwealth of Athens is become a forest of beasts.

Tim. How has the ass broke the wall, that thou art out of the city?

Apem. Yonder comes a poet, and a painter:
The plague of company light upon thee! I will fear to catch it, and give way: When I know not what else to do, I'll see thee again.

Tim. When there is nothing living but thee, thou shalt be welcome. I had rather be a beggar's dog, than Apemantus.

Apem. Thou art the cap ‡ of all the fools alive.

* Arrives sooner at the completion of its wishes.

† By his sentence.

‡ From infancy.

§ The cold admonitions of prudence.

* For too much finical delicacy.

† I. e. in being placed at a distance from the lion.

‡ The top.

Tim. 'Would thou wert clean enough to spit upon.

Apem. A plague on thee, thou art too bad to curse.

Tim. All villains, that do stand by thee, are pure.

Apem. There is no leprosy but what thou speak'st.

Tim. If I name thee.—

I'll beat thee,—but I should infect my hands.

Apem. I would my tongue could rot them off!

Tim. Away, thou issue of a mangy dog!

Choler doth kill me that thou art alive;

I swoon to see thee.

Apem. 'Would thou would'st burst!

Tim. Away,

Thou tedious rogue! I am sorry I shall lose
A stone by thee. [Throws a stone at him.]

Apem. Beast!

Tim. Slave!

Apem. Toad!

Tim. Rogue, rogue, rogue!

[APEMANTUS retreats backwards, as going.]

I am sick of this false world; and will love nought

But even the mere necessities upon it.

Then, Timon, presently prepare thy grave;

Lie where the light foam of the sea may beat

Thy grave-stone daily: make thine epitaph,

That death in me at others' lives may laugh.

O thou sweet king-killer, and dear divorce

[Looking on the gold.]

'Twixt natural son and sire! thou bright defiler

Of Hymen's purest bed! thou valiant Mars!

Thou ever young, fresh, lov'd, and delicate wooer,

Whose blush doth thaw the consecrated snow

That lies on Dian's lap! thou visible god,

That solder'st close impossibilities,

And mak'st them kiss! that speak'st with every
tongue,

To every purpose! O thou touch* of hearts!

Think, thy slave man rebels; and by thy virtue

Set them into confounding odds; that beasts

May have the world in empire!

Apem. 'Would 'twere so;—

But not till I am dead!—I'll say, thou hast gold:
Thou wilt be throng'd to shortly.

Tim. Throng'd to!

Apem. Ay.

Tim. Thy back, I prythee.

Apem. Live, and love thy misery!

Tim. Long live so, and so die!—I am quit.—

[Exit APEMANTUS.]

More things like men?—Eat, Timon, and abhor
them.

Enter THIEVES.

1 Thief. Where should he have this gold? It is some poor fragment, some slender oit of his remainder: The mere want of gold, and the falling-from of his friends, drove him into this melancholy.

2 Thief. It is naysed, he hath a mass of treasure.

3 Thief. Let us make the assay upon him: If he care not for't, he will supply us easily; If he covetously reserve it, how shall's get it?

3 Thief. True; for he bears it not about him
'tis hid.

1 Thief. Is not this he?

Thieves. Where?

2 Thief. 'Tis his description.

3 Thief. He; I know him.

Thieves. Save thee, Timon.

Tim. Now thieves?

Thieves. Soldiers, not thieves.

Tim. Both too; and women's sons.

Thieves. We are not thieves, but men that much do want.

Tim. Your greatest want is, you want much of meat,

[roots;

Why should you want? Behold, the earth hath

* For touchstone.

Within this mile break forth a hundred springs
The oaks bear mast, the briars scarlet hips;
The bounteous housewife, nature, on each bush Lays her full mess before you. Want? why want?

Thief. We cannot live on grass, on berries,
As beasts, and birds, and fishes. [water,

Tim. Nor on the beasts themselves, the birds,
and fishes; [con,

You must eat men. Yet thanks I must you
That you are thieves profess'd; that you work
not

In holier shapes: for there is boundless theft

In limited* professions. Rascal thieves,

Here's gold: Go, seek the subtle blood of the grape,

Till the high fever seeth your blood to froth,

And so 'scape hanging: trust not the physician;

His antidotes are poison, and he slays [gether;

More than you rob: take wealth and lives to-

Do villany, do, since you profess to do't,

Like workmen. I'll example you with thievery:

The sun's a thief, and with his great attraction

Robs the vast sea: the moon's an arrant thief,

And her pale fire she snatches from the sun:

The sea's a thief, whose liquid surge resolves

The moon into salt tears: the earth's a thief,

That feeds and breeds by a composture† stolen

From general excrement: each thing's a thief:

The laws, your curb and whip, in their rough power [away;

Have uncheck'd theft. Love not yourselves:

Rob one another. There's more gold: Cut throats;

All that you meet are thieves: To Athens, go,

Break open shops; nothing can you steal,

But thieves do lose it: Steal not less, for this

I give you; and gold confound you howsoever!

Amen. [TIMON retires to his Cave.]

3 Thief. He has almost charmed me from my profession, by persuading me to it.

1 Thief. 'Tis in the malice of mankind, that he thus advises us; not to have us thrive in our mystery.

2 Thief. I'll believe him as an enemy, and give o'er my trade.

1 Thief. Let us first see peace in Athens;

There is no time so miserable, but a man may be true. [Exeunt THIEVES.]

Enter FLAVIUS.

Flav. O you gods!

Is yon despis'd and ruinous man my lord?

Full of decay and falling? O monument

And wonder of good deeds evilly bestow'd!

What an alteration of honour‡ has

Desperate want made!

What viler thing upon the earth, than friends,

Who can bring noblest minds to basest ends!

How rarely§ does it meet with this time's guise,

When man was wish'd|| to love his enemies:

Grant, I may ever love, and rather woo [do!]

Those that would mischief me, than those that

He has caught me in his eye: I will present

My honest grief unto him; and, as my lord,

Still serve him with my life.—My dearest

master!

TIMON comes forward from his Cave.

Tim. Away! what art thou?

Flav. Have you forgot me, Sir? [men;

Tim. Why dost ask that? I have forgot all

Then, if thou grant'st thou'rt man, I have forgot thee.

Flav. An honest poor servant of yours.

Tim. Then

I know thee not: I ne'er had honest man

About me, I: all that I kept were knaves,

To serve in meat to villains.

Flav. The gods are witness,

* Legal.

† Manure.

‡ I. e. From an honourable state to one of disgrace.

§ How happily.

|| Recommended.

U

Ne'er did poor steward wear a truer grief
For his undone lord, than mine eyes for you.

Tim. What, dost thou weep?—Come nearer;
—then I love thee,

Because thou art a woman, and disclaim'st
Flinty mankind; whose eyes do never give,
But thorough lust and laughter. Pity's sleep-

ing:
Strange times, that weep with laughing, not with weeping!

Flav. I beg of you to know me, good my
lord,
To accept my grief, and whilst this poor wealth
To entertain me as your steward still.

Tim. Had I a steward so true, so just, and
So comfortable? It almost turns [now
My dangerous nature wild. Let me behold Thy face.—Surely, this man was born of woman.—

Forgive my general and exceptless rashness,
Perpetual-sober gods! I do proclaim
One honest man,—mistake me not,—but one:
No more, I pray,—and he is a steward.—
How fain would I have hated all mankind,
And thou redeem'st thyself: but all save thee,
I fell with curses. [wise,
Methinks, thou art more honest now, than
For, by oppressing and betraying me,
Thou might'st have sooner got another service:
For many so arrive at second masters,
Upon their first lord's neck. But tell me true,
(For I must ever doubt, though ne'er so sure,)
Is not thy kindness subtle, covetous,
If not a usuring kindness; and as rich men deal
gifts,

Expecting in return twenty for one?

Flav. No, my most worthy master, in whose breast

Doubt and suspect, alas, are plac'd too late:
You should have fear'd false times, when you did feast:

Suspect still comes where an estate is least.

That which I show, heaven knows, is merely
love,

Duty and zeal to your unmatched mind,
Care of your food and living: and, believe it,
My most honour'd lord,
For any benefit that points to me,
Either in hope, or present, I'd exchange
For this one wish, That you had power and wealth

To requite me, by making rich yourself.

Tim. Look thee, 'tis so!—Thou singly honest
Here take:—the gods out of my misery [man,
Have sent thee treasure. Go, live rich, and happy: [men; "

But thus condition'd; Thou shalt build from hate all, curse all: show charity to none;
But let the famish'd flesh slide from the bone,
Ere thou relieve the beggar: give to dogs
What thou deny'st to men; let prisons swallow
them,

Debts wither them: Be men like blasted woods,
And may diseases lick up their false bloods!
And so, farewell, and thrive.

Flav. O let me stay,
And comfort you, my master.

Tim. If thou hat'st
Curses, stay not: fly, whilst thou'rt bless'd and free:

Ne'er see thou man, and let me ne'er see thee.
[Exeunt severally.

ACT V.

SCENE I.—The same.—Before TIMON'S Cave.

Enter POET and PAINTER; TIMON behind, unseen.

Pain. As I took note of the place, it cannot be far where he abides.

* Away from the abodes of men.

Poet. What's to be thought of him? Does the rumour hold for true, that he is so full of gold?

Pain. Certain: Alcibiades reports it; Phrynia and Timandra had gold of him: he likewise enriched poor straggling soldiers with great quantity: 'Tis said, he gave unto his steward a mighty sum.

Poet. Then this breaking of his has been but a try for his friends.

Pain. Nothing else: you shall see him a palm in Athens again, and flourish with the highest.
Therefore, 'tis not amiss, we tender our loves to him, in this supposed distress of his: it will show honestly in us; and is very likely to load our purposes with what they travel for, if it be a just and true report that goes of his having.

Poet. What have you now to present unto
him?

Pain. Nothing at this time but my visitation:
only I will promise him an excellent piece.

Poet. I must serve him so too: tell him of an intent that's coming toward him.

Pain. Good as the best. Promising is the very air o'the time: it opens the eyes of expect-tation: performance is ever the duller for his act; and, but in the plainer and simpler kind of people, the deed of saying * is quite out of use.
To promise is most courtly and fashionable: performance is a kind of will and testament, which argues a great sickness in his judgment that makes it.

Tim. Excellent workman! Thou canst not paint a man so bad as is thyself.

Poet. I am thinking what I shall say I have provided for him: It must be a personating of himself: a satire against the softness of prosperity; with a discovery of the infinite flatteries that follow youth and opulency.

Tim. Must thou needs stand for a villain in thine own work? Wilt thou whip thine own faults in other men? Do so, I have gold for
thee.

Poet. Nay, let's seek him:
Then do we sin against our own estate,
When we may profit meet, and come too late.

Pain. True;
When the day serves, before black-corner'd
night,
Find what thou want'st by free and offer'd light.
Come.

Tim. I'll meet you at the turn. What a god's
gold,
That he is worshipp'd in a baser temple,
Than where swine feed!

'Tis thou that rigg'st the bark, and plough'st the foam;

Settlest admired reverence in a slave:
To thee be worship! and thy saints for aye
Be crown'd with plagues, that thee alone obey!
'Fit I do meet them. [Advancing.

Poet. Hail, worthy Timon!

Pain. Our late noble master.

Tim. Have I once liv'd to see two honest men?

Poet. Sir,
Having often of your open bounty tasted,
Hearing you were retir'd, your friends fall'n off,
Whose thankless natures—O abhorred spirits!
Not all the whips of heaven are large enough—
What! to you!

Whose star-like nobleness gave life and influence
To their whole being! I'm rapt and cannot cover

The monstrous bulk of this ingratitude
With any size of words.

Tim. Let it go naked, men may see't the
better:

You, that are honest, by being what you are,
Make them best seen, and known.

Pain. He, and myself,
Have travell'd in the great shower of your gifts
And sweetly felt it.

* The doing of what we have said we would do.

Tim. Ay, you are honest men.

Pain. We are hither come to offer you our service.

Tim. Most honest men! Why, how shall I requit you?

Can you eat roots, and drink cold water? no.

Both. What we can do, we'll do, to do you service.

Tim. You are honest men: You have heard that I have gold;

I am sure you have: speak truth: you are honest men.

Pain. So it is said, my noble lord: but there came not my friend, nor I. [fore

Tim. Good honest men!—Thou draw'st a counterfeit*

Best in all Athens: thou art, indeed, the best; Thou counterfeit'st most lively.

Pain. So, so, my lord.

Tim. Even so, Sir, as I say:—And, for thy action, [To the Port.

Why thy verse swells with stuff so fine and smooth,

That thou art even natural in thine art.—

But, for all this, my honest-natur'd friends, I must needs say, you have a little fault:

Marry, 'tis not monstrous in you; neither wish I, You take much pains to mend.

Both. Beseech your honour, To make it known to us.

Tim. You'll take it ill.

Both. Most thankfully, my lord.

Tim. Will you, indeed?

Both. Doubt it not, worthy lord.

Tim. There's ne'er a one of you but trusts a That mightily deceives you. [knave

Both. Do we, my lord?

Tim. Ay, and you bear him cog, see him dissemble,

Know his gross patchery, love him, feed him, Keep in your bosom: yet remain assur'd, That he's a made-up villain.†

Pain. I know none such, my lord.

Peet. Nor I.

Tim. Look you, I love you well; I'll give you gold,

Rid me these villains from your companies: Hang them, or stab them, drown them in a draught,‡

Confound them by some course, and come to me, I'll give you gold enough.

Both. Name them, my lord, let's know them.

Tim. You that way, and you this, but two in company:—

Each man apart, all single and alone,

Yet an arch-villain keeps him company.

If, where thou art, two villains shall not be.

[To the Painter.

Come not near him.—If thou would'st not reside

[To the Port.

But where one villain is, then him abandon.—

Hence! pack! there's gold, ye came for gold, ye slaves: [Hence!

You have done work for me, there's payment: You are an alchymist, make gold of that:—

Out, rascal dogs!

[Exit, beating and driving them out.

SCENE II.—The same.

Enter FLAVIUS, and two SENATORS.

Flav. It is in vain that you would speak with For he is set so only to himself, [Timon; That nothing but himself, which looks like man, is friendly with him.

1 Sen. Bring us to his cave:

It is our part and promise to the Athenians, To speak with Timon.

2 Sen. At all times alike

Men are not still the same: 'Twas time, and griefs,

That fram'd him thus: time, with his fairer hand,

Offering the fortunes of his former days, The former man may make him: Bring us to And chance it as it may. [him,

Flav. Here is his cave.—

Peace and content be here! Lorc Timon! Timon! Look out, and speak to friends: The Athenians,

By two of their most reverend senate, greet Speak to them, noble Timon. [thee:

Enter TIMON.

Tim. Thou sun, that comfort'st, burn!—Speak, and be hang'd:

For each true word, a blister! and each false Be as a caut'ring to the root o'the tongue, Consuming it with speaking!

1 Sen. Worthy Timon—

Tim. Of none but such as you, and you of Timon.

2 Sen. The senators of Athens greet thee, Timon.

Tim. I thank them; and would send them back the plague,

Could I but catch it for them.

1 Sen. Oh! forget

What we are sorry for ourselves in thee.

The senators, with one consent of love,*

Entreat thee back to Athens; who have thought On special dignities, which vacant lie

For thy best use and wearing.

2 Sen. They confess,

Toward thee, forgetfulness too general, gross:

Which now the public body,—which doth seldom Play the recanter,—feeling in itself

A lack of Timon's aid, hath sense withal

Of its own fall, restraining aid to Timon;

And send forth us, to make their sorrowed render,†

Together with a recompense more fruitful

Than their off'ence can weigh down by the dram;

Ay, even such heaps and sums of love and wealth,

As shall to thee blot out what wrongs were theirs,

And write in thee the figures of their love,

Ever to read them thine.

Tim. You witch me in it;

Surprise me to the very brink of tears:

Lend me a fool's heart, and a woman's eyes,

And I'll bewEEP these comforts, worthy senators.

1 Sen. Therefore, so please thee to return with us,

And of our Athens (thine, and ours,) to take

The captainship, thou shalt be met with thanks, Allow'd‡ with absolute power, and thy good name

Live with authority:—so soon we shall drive back

Of Alcibiades the approaches wild;

Who, like a bear too savage, doth root up

His country's peace.

2 Sen. And shakes his threat'ning sword

Against the walls of Athens.

1 Sen. Therefore, Timon,—

Tim. Well, Sir, I will; therefore, I will, Sir:

Thus,—

If Alcibiades kill my countrymen,

Let Alcibiades know this of Timon, [Athens,

That—Timon cares not. But if he sack fair

And take our goodly aged men by the beards,

Giving our holy virgins to the stain

Of contumelious, beastly, mad-brain'd war;

Then, let him know,—and tell him Timon speaks

it,

In pity of our aged, and our youth,

I cannot chuse but tell him, that—I care not,

And let him tak't at worse; for their knives care

not,

While you have throats to answer: for myself,

There's not a whittle§ in the unruly camp,

But I do prize it at my love, before [you

The reverend'st throat in Athens. So I leave

* As a portrait was then called.

† A complete villain. ‡ In a jakes, or house of office.

* With an united voice of affection.

† Confession.

‡ Licensed.

§ A clasp knife.

To the protection of the prosperous gods,*
As thieves to keepers.

Flav. Stay not, all's in vain.

Tim. Why, I was writing of my epitaph,
It will be seen to-morrow; My long sickness
Of health,† and living, now begins to mend,
And nothing brings me all things. Go, live
still;

Be Alcibiades your plague, you his,
And last so long enough!

1 Sen. We speak in vain.

Tim. But yet I love my country: and am not
One that rejoices in the common wreck,
As common bruit‡ doth put it.

1 Sen. That's well spoke.

Tim. Commend me to my loving country-
men,—

1 Sen. These words become your lips as they pass through them.

2 Sen. And enter in our ears like great trium-phers

In their applauding gates.

Tim. Commend me to them;
And tell them, that, to ease them of their griefs,
Their fears of hostile strokes, their aches, losses,
Their pangs of love, with other incident throes
That nature's fragile vessel doth sustain
In life's uncertain voyage, I will some kindness do
them:

I'll teach them to prevent wild Alcibiades' wrath.

2 Sen. I like this well, he will return again.

Tim. I have a tree, which grows here in my close,

That mine own use invites me to cut down,
And shortly must I fell it; Tell my friends,
Tell Athens, in the sequence of degree, §
From high to low throughout, that whose please
To stop affliction, let him take his haste,
Come hither, ere my tree hath felt the axe,
And hang himself:—I pray you do my greet-
ing.

Flav. Trouble him no further, thus you still shall find him.

Tim. Come not to me again: but say to Athens,

Timon hath made his everlasting mansion
Upon the beached verge of the salt flood;
Which once a day with his embossed froth ||
The turbulent surge shall cover; thither come,
And let my grave-stone be your oracle,—
Lips, let sour words go by, and language end:
What is amiss, plague and infection mend!
Graves only be men's works; and death, their gain!

Sun, hide thy beams! Timon hath done his reign. [Exit TIMON.]

1 Sen. His discontents are unremoveably
Coupled to nature.

2 Sen. Our hope in him is dead: let us return,
And strain what other means is left unto us
In our dear ¶ peril.

3 Sen. It requires swift foot. [Exeunt.]

SCENE III.—The Walls of Athens.

Enter two SENATORS, and a MESSENGER.

1 Sen. Thou hast painfully discover'd; are his files
As full as thy report?

Mess. I have spoke the least:
Besides, his expedition promises
Present approach.

2 Sen. We stand much hazard, if they bring not Timon.

Mess. I met a courier, one mine ancient
friend;—

Whom, though in general part we were oppos'd,
Yet our old love made a particular force,

* The gods who especially dispense prosperity.
† The disease of life is drawing to a period.
‡ Report. § In due succession from highest to lowest. || Swollen froth. ¶ Dreadful.

And made us speak like friends:—this man was riding

From Alcibiades to Timon's cave,
With letters of entreaty, which imported
His fellowship in the cause against your city,
In part for his sake mov'd.

Enter SENATORS from TIMON.

1 Sen. Here come our brothers.

2 Sen. No talk of Timon, nothing of him expect.—

The enemies' drum is heard, and fearful scour-
Doth choke the air with dust: in and prepare;
Our's is the fall, I fear; our foes, the mare.

[Exeunt.]

SCENE IV.—The Woods.—TIMON'S CAVE, and a Tomb-stone seen.

Enter a SOLDIER, seeking TIMON.

Sol. By all description this should be the place.

Who's here? speak, ho!—No answer?—What is
this?

Timon is dead, who hath outstretch'd his span:
Some beast rear'd this; there does not live a man.
Dead, sure; and this his grave.—

What's on this tomb I cannot read; the character
I'll take with wax.

Our captain hath in every figure skill;
An ag'd interpreter, though young in days:
Before proud Athens he's set down by this.
Whose fall the mark of his ambition is.

[Exit.]

SCENE V.—Before the Walls of Athens.

Trumpets sound. Enter ALCIBIADES, and Forces.

Alcib. Sound to this coward and lascivious town
Our terrible approach. [A Parley sounded.]

Enter SENATORS on the Walls.

Till now you have gone on, and fill'd the time
With all licentious measure, making your wills
The scope of justice; till now, myself, and such

As slept within the shadow of your power,
Have wander'd with our travers'd arms,* and breath'd,

Our sufferance vainly: Now the time is flash †
When crouching marrow, in the bearer strong,
Cries, of itself, No more: now breathless wrong,
Shall sit and pant in your great chairs of ease;
And purvey insolence shall break his wind,
With fear and horrid flight.

1 Sen. Noble and young,
When thy first griefs were but a mere conceit,
Ere thou hadst power, or we had cause of fear,
We sent to thee; to give thy rages balm,
To wipe out our ingratitude with loves
Above their quantity.

2 Sen. So did we woo
Transformed Timon to our city's love,
By humble message, and by promis'd means; ‡
We were not all unkind, nor all deserve
The common stroke of war.

1 Sen. These walls of ours
Were not erected by their hands, from whom
You have receiv'd your griefs: nor are they such,
Than these great towers, trophies, and schools should fall
For private faults in them.

2 Sen. Nor are they living,
Who were the motives that you first went out;
Shame, that they wanted cunning, in excess
Hath broke their hearts. March, noble lord,
Into our city with thy banners spread:
By decimation, and a tithed death,
(If thy revenges hunger for that food,
Which nature loaths,) take thou the destin'd tenth;

* Arms revers'd. † Marure.
‡ I. e. By promising him a competent subsistence.

And by the hazard of the spotted die,
Let die the spotted.

1 Sen. All have not offended ;
For those that were, it is not square, * to take,
On those that are, revenges : crimes like lands,
Are not inherited. Then, dear countryman,
Bring in thy ranks, but leave without thy rage :
Spare thy Athenian cradle, and those kin,
Which, in the bluster of thy wrath, must fall,
With those that have offended : like a shepherd,
Approach the fold, and cull the infected forth.
But kill not altogether.

2 Sen. What thou wilt,
Thou rather shalt enforce it with thy smile.
Than hew to't with thy sword.

1 Sen. Set but thy foot
Against our rampir'd gates, and they shall ope :
So thou wilt send thy gentle heart before,
To my, thou'lt enter friendly.

2 Sen. Throw thy glove.
Or any token of thine honour else,
That thou wilt use the wars as thy redress,
And not as our confusion, all thy powers
Shall make their harbour in our town, till we Have seal'd thy full desire.

Alcib. Then there's my glove ;
Descend, and open your uncharged ports ; †
Those enemies of Timon's, and mine own,
Whom you yourselves shall set out for reproof,
Fall, and no more : and,—to atone ‡ your fears
With my more noble meaning,—not a man
Shall pass his quarter, or offend the stream
Of regular justice in your city's bounds,
But shall be remedied, to your public laws
At heaviest answer.

* Not regular, not equitable.
† Unattached gates. ‡ Reconcile.

Both. 'Tis most nobly spoken.

Alcib. Descend, and keep your words.

The SENATORS descend, and open the Gates.

Enter a SOLDIER.

Sold. My noble general, Timon is dead ;
Entomb'd upon the very hem o'the sea :
And on his grave-stone, this insculpture ; which
With wax I brought away, whose soft impress
Interprets for my poor ignorance.

Alcib. [Reads.] *Here lies a wretched corse,
Of wretched soul bereft :
Seek not my name : A plague consume you
Wicked catiffs left !
Here lies I Timon ; who, alive, all living men
Did hate :
Pass by, and curse thy fill ; but pass, and Stay not here thy gait.*

These well express in thee thy latter spirits :
Though thou abhorr'dst in us our human griefs, Scorn'dst our brain's flow, * and those our drop lets which
From niggard nature fall, yet rich conceit
Taught thee to make vast Neptune weep for aye
On thy low grave, on faults forgiven. Dead
Is noble Timon ; of whose memory
Hereafter more.—Bring me into your city
And I will use the olive with my sword :
Make war breed peace ; make peace stint † war ;
make each
Prescribe to other, as each other's leech. ‡
Let our drums strike. [Exeunt.]

† Stop. * I. e. Our tears. † Physician.

PERICLES, PRINCE OF TYRE

LITERARY AND HISTORICAL NOTICE.

THIS play, the authorship of which has been much disputed, was probably written about the year 1608. Pope ranks it among "the wretched pieces," which cannot be attributed to Shakspeare; but Malone, who divided it into scenes, considers the internal evidence, (such as the congenial sentiments, the situation of the persons, the colour of the style, and the similitude of its expressions, to passages in his undisputed dramas) sufficiently decisive as to his having written the last three acts, and occasional portions of the preceding two. Indeed, unless it be considered as the production of some inferior playwright, amended by Shakspeare, an earlier date must be assigned to its production, than acknowledged authorities will warrant; for no play in the English language is so incorrect as this---the metre is seldom attended to---verse is frequently printed as prose---and the grossest errors appear throughout. With all these faults, however, it is mentioned as a very popular performance; and may still be read with pleasure; for it abounds with situations of difficulty and danger, is full of bustle and vivacity, the interest never lags, and the results are all gratifying. Some of the dialogues are nevertheless gross and nonsensical---those which take place in the brothel are superlatively disgusting, nor can they be excused by the moral intended to be drawn from them. Steevens, upon this portion, has judiciously remarked, that Marina, who is designed for a character of juvenile innocence, appears much too knowing in the impurities of a brothel; nor are her expressions more chastised than her ideas. The unities of time and place are equally outraged; the action of the piece is alternately occurring at Antioch in Syria---Tyre in Phœnicia---Tarsus in Cilicia---Mitylene in the island of Lesbos---and Ephesus the capital of Ionia. The story on which the play is founded, is of great antiquity; but the dramatic hero bears no resemblance to his great Athenian namesake. It is taken from the history of Apollonius, king of Tyre, in the Gesta Romanorum, a very old book; which is also related by Gower, in his Confessio Amantis, a poem. Many incidents of the play may be found in the latter work, and even a few of its particular expressions; and, therefore, as Gower himself is introduced, (like the chorus of old) it is reasonable to suppose that Shakspeare chiefly followed the work of that poet.

To give thee hallow'd to thy grave.

Act III. Scene I.

Per. ——— Ah me! poor maid,
as a serpent, when my mother died,
is wroth to me is like a lasting storm,
drags me from my friends.

Act IV. Scene I.

Per. ——— Yet thou dost look
Like patience, gazing on kings' graves, and smiling
Extremity out of act.

Act V. Scene I.

To seek her as a bed-fellow,
In marriage pleasures play fellow :
Which to prevent, he made a law,
(To keep her still, and men in awe,)
That whose ask'd her for his wife,
His riddle told not, lost his life :
So for her many a wight did die,
As you grim looks do testify.*
What now ensues, to the judgment of your eye
I give, my cause who best can justify.

[Exit.]

SCENE I.—Antioch.—A Room in the Palace.

Enter ANTIOCHUS, PERICLES, and Attendants.

Ant. Young prince of Tyre, you have at large receiv'd

The danger of the task you undertake.

Per. I have, Antiochus ; and with a soul
Embolden'd with the glory of her praise,
Think death no hazard, in this enterprise.

[Music.]

Ant. Bring in our daughter clothed like a bride,
For the embracements even of Jove himself ;
At whose conception, (till Lucina reign'd,)
Nature this dowry gave, to glad her presence,
The senate-house of planets all did sit,
To knit in her their best perfections.

Enter the DAUGHTER of ANTIOCHUS.

Per. See where she comes, apparell'd like the spring,

Graces her subjects, and her thoughts the king
Of every virtue † gives renown to men !
Her face, the book of praises, where is read
Nothing but curious pleasures, as from thence Sorrow were ever raz'd, and testy wrath
Could never be her mild companion.

Ye gods that made me man, and sway in love,
That have inflam'd desire within my breast,
To taste the fruit of yon celestial tree,
Or die in the adventure,—be my helps,
As I am son and servant to your will.
To compass such a boundless happiness !

Ant. Prince Pericles,—

Per. That would be son to great Antiochus.

Ant. Before thee stands this fair Hesperides,
With golden fruit, but dangerous to be touch'd ;
For death-like dragons here affright thee hard :
Her face, like heaven, enticeth thee to view
A countless glory, which desert must gain :
And which, without desert, because thine eye
Presumes to reach, all thy whole heap must die.
You' sometime famous princes, like thyself,
Drawn by report, advent'rous by desire,
Tell thee with speechless tongues, and semblance
pale,

That, without covering, save you' field of stars,
They here stand martyrs, slain in Cupid's wars :
And with dead cheeks advise thee to desist,
For going on death's net, whom none resist.

Per. Antiochus, I thank thee, who hast taught
My frail mortality to know itself,
And by those fearful objects to prepare
This body, like to them, to what I must :
For death remember'd, should be like a mirror,
Who tells us life's but breath ; to trust it, error.
I'll make my will then ; and as sick men do,
Who know the world, see heaven, but feeling
we,

Gripe not at earthly joys, as erst they did :
So I bequeath a happy peace to you,
And all good men, as every prince should do ;
My riches to the earth from whence they came ;
But my unspotted fire of love to you.

[To the DAUGHTER of ANTIOCHUS.]

Thus ready for the way of life or death,
I wait the sharpest blow, Antiochus,
Scorning advice.

* Pointing to the scene of the palace gate at Antioch, on which the heads of these unfortunate wights were Aad.
† I. e. That gives.

Ant. Read the conclusion then ;
Which read, and not expounded, 'tis decreed,
As these before thee, thou thyself shalt bleed.

Daugh. In all, save that, may'st thou prove prosperous !

Per. Like a bold champion, I assume the lists,

Nor ask advice of any other thought
But faithfulness, and courage.

[He reads the Riddle.]

*I am no viper, yet I feed
On mother's flesh, which did me breed :
I sought a husband, in which labour,
I found that kindness in a father.
He's father, son, and husband mild,
I mother, wife, and yet his child.
How they may be, and yet in two,
As you will live, resolve it you.*

Sharp physic is the last : but, O you powers !
That give heaven countless eyes to view men's acts,

Why cloud they not their sights perpetually,
If this be true, which makes me pale to read it ?
Fair glass of light, I lov'd you, and could still,

[Takes hold of the hand of the princess.]

Were not this glorious casket stor'd with ill :
But I must tell you,—now, my thoughts revolt ;
For he's no man on whom perfections wait,
That knowing sin within, will touch the gate.
You're a fair viol, and your sense the strings ;
Who, finger'd to make man his lawful music,
Would draw heaven down, and all the gods to hearken ;

But, being play'd upon before your time,
Hell only danceth at so harsh a chime :
Good sooth, I care not for you.

Ant. Prince Pericles, touch not, upon thy life,
For that's an article within our law,
As dangerous as the rest. Your time's expir'd :
Either expound now, or receive your sentence.

Per. Great king,

Few love to hear the sins they love to act :
'Twould 'braid yourself too near for me to tell it.

Who has a book of all that monarchs do,
He's more secure to keep it shut, than shown ;
For vice repeated, is like the wand'ring wind,
Blows dust in others' eyes, to spread itself ;
And yet the end of all is bought thus dear,
The breath is gone, and the sore eyes see clear :
To stop the air would hurt them. The blind mole casts

Copp'd* hills towards heaven, to tell the earth is wrong'd [die for't.]

By man's oppression ; and the poor worm doth Kings are earth's gods : in vice their law's their will ;

And if Jove stray, who dares say, Jove doth ill ?
It is enough you know ; and it is fit,
What, being more known, grows worse, to smother it.

All love the womb that their first beings bred,
Then give my tongue like leave to love my
head.

Ant. Heaven, that I had thy head ; He has found the meaning :—

But I will glose † with him. [Aside.] Young prince of Tyre,

Though by the tenour of our strict edict,
Your exposition misinterpreting,
We might proceed to cancel of your days ; ‡
Yet hope, succeeding from so fair a tree
As your fair self, doth tune us otherwise :
Forty days longer we do respite you ;
If by which time our secret be undone,
This mercy shows, we'll joy in such a son ;
And, until then, your entertain shall be,
As doth best fit our honour, and your worth.

[Exeunt ANTIOCHUS, his DAUGHTER, and Attendants.]

* Rising to a top or head.

† Or, play falsely with him. ‡ To take away your life.

Per. How courtesy would seem to cover sin !
When what is done is like an hypocrite,
The which is good in nothing but in sight.
If it be true that I interpret false,
Then were it certain you were not so bad,
As with foul incest to abuse your soul :
Where * now you're both a father and a son,
By your untimely claspings with your child,
(Which pleasure fits an husband, not a father ;)
And she an eater of her mother's flesh,
By the defiling of her parent's bed ;
And both like serpents are, who though they feed
On sweetest flowers, yet they poison breed.
Antioch, farewell ! for wisdom sees, those men
Blush not in actions blacker than the night,
Will shun no course to keep them from the
light :
One sin, I know, another doth provoke ;
Murder's as near to lust, as flame to smoke :
Poison and treason are the hands of sin,
Ay, and the targets, to put off the shame :—
Then, lest my life be cropp'd to keep you clear,
By flight I'll shun the danger which I fear.

[Exit.]Re-enter ANTIOCHUS.

Ant. He hath found the meaning, for the which we mean
To have his head.
He must not live to trumpet forth my infamy,
Nor tell the word, Antiochus doth sin
In such a loathed manner :
And therefore instantly this prince must die ;
For by his fall my honour must keep high.
Who attends on us there ?

Enter THALIARD.

Thal. Doth your highness call ?
Ant. Thaliard, you're of our chamber, and our mind
Partakes her private actions to your secrecy ;
And for your faithfulness we will advance you.
Thaliard, behold, here's poison, and here's gold :
We hate the prince of Tyre, and thou must kill
him.
It fits thee not to ask the reason why,
Because we bid it. Say, is it done ?
Thal. My lord,
'Tis done.

Enter a MESSENGER.

Ant. Enough :
Lest your breath cool yourself, telling your haste.
Mess. My lord, prince Pericles is fled.
[Exit MESSENGER.]

Ant. As thou
Wilt live, fly after : and, as an arrow, shot
From a well experienced archer, hits the mark
His eye doth level at, so ne'er return,
Unless thou say, Prince Pericles is dead.

Thal. My lord, if I
Can get him once within my pistol's length,
I'll make him sure : so farewell to your highness.
[Exit.]

Ant. Thaliard, adieu ! till Pericles be dead,
My heart can lend no succour to my head.
[Exit.]

SCENE II.—Tyre.—A Room in the Palace.Enter PERICLES, HELICANUS, and other Lords.

Per. Let none disturb us : Why this charge of thoughts ?
The sad companion, dull-ey'd melancholy,
By me so us'd a guest is, not an hour,
In the day's glorious walk or peaceful night,
(The tomb where grief should sleep,) can breed me quiet !
Here pleasures court mine eyes, and mine eyes
shun them,
And danger, which I feared, is at Antioch,
Whose arm seems far too short too hit me here :

* Wharoso.

Yet neither pleasure's art can joy my spirits,
Nor yet the other's distance comfort me.
Then it is thus : the passions of the mind,
That have their first conception by mis-dread,
Have after-nourishment and life by care ;
And what was first but fear what might be
done,
Grows elder now, and cares it be not done. *
And so with me :—the great Antiochus
(Gainst whom I am too little to contend,
Since he's so great, can make his will his act,)
Will think me speaking, though I swear to silence ;
Nor boots it me to say, I honour him, *
If he suspect I may dishonour him :
And what may make him blush in being known,
He'll stop the course by which it might be
known :
With hostile forces he'll o'erspread the land,
And with the ostent of war will look so huge,
Amazement shall drive courage from the state ;
Our men be vanquish'd, ere they do resist,
And subjects punish'd, that ne'er thought of fence :

Which care of them, not pity of myself,
(Who am no more but as the tops of trees,
Which fence the roots they grow by, and defend
them.)

Makes both my body pine, and soul to languish,
And punish that before, that he would punish.

1 Lord. Joy and all comfort in your sacred
breast !

2 Lord. And keep your mind, till you return
Peaceful and comfortable ! [to us,

Hel. Peace, peace, my lords, and give experience tongue.

They do abuse the king, that flatter him
For flattery is the bellows blows up sin ;
The thing the which is flatter'd, but a spark,
To which that breath gives heat and stronger glowing :

Whereas reproof, obedient and in order,
Fits kings, as they are men, for they may err.
When signior Sooth here does proclaim a peace,
He flatters you, makes war upon your life :
Prince, pardon me, or strike me, if you please ;
cannot be much lower than my knees.

Per. All leave us else : but let your cares o'erlook

What shipping and what lading's in our haven,
And then return to us. [Exit LORDS.] Helicanus, thou

Hast moved us : what seest thou in our looks ?

Hel. An angry brow, dread lord.

Per. If there be such a dart in princes'
frowns,

How durst thy tongue move anger to our face ?

Hel. How dare the plants look up to heaven, from whence

They have their nourishment ?

Per. Thou know'st I have power

To take thy life.

Hel. [Kneeling.] I have ground the axe my-
Do you but strike the blow. [self ;

Per. Rise, prythee rise ;

Sit down, sit down ; thou art no flatterer :
I thank thee for it ; and high heaven forbid
That kings should let their ears hear their faults hid !

Fit counsellor and servant for a prince,
Who by thy wisdom mak'st a prince thy servant
What would'st thou have me do ?

Hel. With patience bear

Such griefs as you do lay upon yourself.

Per. Thou speak'st like a physician, Helicanus ;
Who minister'st a potion unto me,
That thou would'st tremble to receive thyself.
Attend me then : I went to Antioch,
Where, as thou know'st, against the face of death
I sought the purchase of a glorious beauty,
From whence an issue I might propagate,
Bring arms to princes, and to subjects joys.
Her face was to mine eye beyond all wonder ;

* I. e. Take care it be not done.

The rest (hark in thine ear) as black as incest ;
Which, by my knowledge found, the sinful
father

Seem'd not to strike, but smooth : but thou know'st this,

'Tis time to fear, when tyrants seem to kiss.
Which fear so grew in me, I hither fled,
Under the covering of a careful night,
Who seem'd my good protector ; and being here,
Bethought me what was past, what might succeed.

I knew him tyrannous ; and tyrants' fears
Decrease not, but grow faster than their years :
And should he doubt it, (as no doubt he doth)
That I should open to the listening air
How many worthy princes' bloods were shed,
To keep his bed of blackness unalaid ope,—
To lop that doubt, he'll fill this land with arms,
And make pretence of wrong that I have done
him ;

When all, for mine, if I may call't offence,
Must feel war's blow, who spares not innocence :

Which love to all (of which thyself art one,
Who now reprov'st me for it)——

Hel. Alas, Sir !

Per. Drew sleep out of mine eyes, blood from my cheeks,

Musings into my mind ; a thousand doubts
How I might stop this tempest, ere it came ;
And, finding little comfort to relieve them,
I thought it princely charity to grieve them.

Hel. Well, my lord, since you have given me leave to speak,

Freely I'll speak. Antiochus you fear ;
And justly too, I think, you fear the tyrant,
Who either by public war, or private treason,
Will take away your life.

Therefore, my lord, go travel for a while,
Till that his rage and anger be forgot,
Or Destinies do cut his thread of life.
Your rule direct to any ; if to me,
Day serves not light more faithful than I'll be.

Per. I do not doubt thy faith :

But should he wrong my liberties in absence——

Hel. We'll mingle bloods together in the earth,
From whence we had our being and our birth.

Per. Tyre, I now look from thee then, and to Tharsus

Intend my travel, where I'll hear from thee ;
And by whose letters I'll dispose myself.

The care I had and have of subjects' good,
On thee I lay, whose wisdom's strength can bear it.

I'll take thy word for faith, not ask thine oath ;
Who shuns not to break one, will sure crack
both :

But in our orbs * we'll live so round and safe,
That time of both this truth shall ne'er convince, †

Thou show'st a subject's shine, I a true
prince. [Exeunt.]

SCENE III.—Tyre.—An Ante-chamber in the Palace.

Enter THALIARD.

Thal. So, this is Tyre, and this is the court.
Here must I kill king Pericles ; and if I do not,
I am sure to be hanged at home : 'tis dangerous.—Well, I perceive he was a wise fellow, and had good discretion, that being bid to ask what he would of the king, desired he might know none of his secrets. Now do I see he had some reason for it ; for if a king bid a man be a villain, he is bound by the indenture of his oath to be one.—Hush, here come the lords of Tyre.

Enter HELICANUS, ESCANES, and other Lords.

Hel. You shall not need, my fellow peers of Tyre,
Further to question of your king's departure.

* In our different spheres

† Overcome.

His seal'd commission, left in trust with me.
Doth speak sufficiently—he's gone to travel.

Thal. How ! the king gone ! [Aside.]

Hel. If further yet you will be satisfied,
Why, as it were unlicens'd of your loves,
He would depart, I'll give some light unto you.
Being at Antioch——

Thal. What from Antioch ? [Aside.]

Hel. Royal Antiochus (on what cause I know
not,)

Took some displeasure at him ; at least he judg'd so :

And doubting lest that he had err'd or sinn'd,
To show his sorrow, would correct himself ;
So puts himself unto the shipman's toll,
With whom each minute threatens life or death.

Thal. Well, I perceive [Aside.]

I shall not be hang'd now, although I would :
But since he's gone, the king it sure must please :

He scap'd the land, to perish on the seas,—
But I'll present me. Peace to the lords of Tyre !

Hel. Lord Thaliard from Antiochus is wel-
come.

Thal. From him I come
With message unto princely Pericles ;
But, since my landing, as I have understood,
Your lord has took himself to unknown travels,
My message must return from whence it came.

Hel. We have no reason to desire it, since Commended to our master not to us :
Yet, ere you shall depart, this we desire,—
As friends to Antioch, we may feast in Tyre.
[Exeunt.]

SCENE IV.—Tharsus.—A Room in the Governor's House.

Enter CLEON, DIONYZA, and Attendants.

Cle. My Dionyza, shall we rest us here,
And by relating tales of others' griefs,
See if 'twill teach us to forget our own ?

Dio. That were to blow at fire, in hope to quench it :

For who digs hills because they do aspire—
Throws down one mountain, to cast up a higher.
O my distressed lord, even such our griefs ;
Here they're but felt, and seem with mistful eyes, [rise.]

But like to groves, being topp'd, they higher

Cle. O Dionyza,
Who wanteth food, and will not say he wants it,
Or can conceal his hunger till he famish ?
Our tongues and sorrows do sound deep our
woes

Into the air ; our eyes do weep, till lungs
Fetch breath that may proclaim them louder ;
that,

If heaven slumber while their creatures want,
They may awake their helps to comfort them.

I'll then discourse our woes, felt several years,
And wanting breath to speak, help me with tears.

Dio. I'll do my best, Sir.

Cle. This Tharsus, o'er which I have government,

(A city on whom plenty held full hand,
For riches, strew'd herself even in the streets ;)
Whose towers bore heads so high, they kiss'd the
clouds,

And strangers ne'er beheld, but wonder'd at ;
Whose men and dames so jettied * and adorn'd,
Like one another's glass to trim † them by :
Their tables were stor'd full, to glad the sight,
And not so much to feed on, as delight ;
All poverty was scorn'd, and pride so great,
The name of help grew odious to repeat.

Dio. Oh ! 'tis too true.

Cle. But see what heaven can do ! By this our change, [air,
These mouths whom but of late, earth, sea, and
Were all too little to content and please,

* To jet, to strut.

† To dress them by.

Although they gave their creatures in abundance,
As houses are defiled for want of use;
They are now starv'd for want of exercise:
Those palates, who not yet too summers younger,

Must have inventions to delight the taste,
Would now be glad of bread, and beg for it:
Those mothers who, to nouse * up their babes,
Thought nought too curious, are ready now
To eat those little darlings whom they lov'd:
So sharp are hunger's teeth, that man and
wife

Draws lots who first shall die, to lengthen life:
Here stands a lord, and there a lady weeping;
Here many sink, yet those which see them fall,
Have scarce strength left to give them burial.
Is not this true?

Dio. Our cheeks and hollow eyes do witness it.

Cle. Oh! let those cities, that of plenty's cup
And her prosperities so largely taste,
With their superfluous riots, hear these tears!
The misery of Tharsus may be their's.

Enter a LORD.

Lord. Where's the lord governor?

Cle. Here. [haste,
Speak out thy sorrows which thou bring'st, in
For comfort is too far for us to expect.

Lord. We have descried, upon our neighbouring shore
A portly sail of ships make hitherward.

Cle. I thought as much.
One sorrow never comes, but brings an heir,
That may succeed as his inheritor;—
And so in our's: some neighbouring nation,
Taking advantage of our misery, [power, †
Hath stuff'd these hollow vessels with their
To beat us down, the which are down already;
And make a conquest of unhappy me,
Whereas no glory's got to overcome.

Lord. That's the least fear; for, by the semblance [peace,
Of their white flags display'd, they bring us
And come to us as favourers, not as foes.

Cle. Thou speak'st like him's tutor'd to repeat; [deceit.
Who makes the fairest show, means most But bring they what they will, what need we fear? [there.

The ground's the low'st, and we are half way
Go tell their general, we attend him here,
To know for what he comes, and whence he
And what he craves. [comes,

Lord. I go, my lord. [Exit.

Cle. Welcome is peace, if he on peace con-
If wars we are unable to resist. [sist; †

Enter PERICLES with Attendants.

Per. Lord governor, (for so we hear you are)
Let not our ships and number of our men,
Be, like a beacon fir'd, to amaze your eyes.
We have heard your miseries as far as Tyre,
And seen the desolation of your streets;
Nor come we to add sorrow to your tears,
But to relieve them of their heavy load;
And these our ships (you happily ‡ may think
Are, like the Trojan horse, war-stuff'd within,
With bloody views, expecting overthrow)
Are stor'd with corn, to make your needy bread,
And give them life, who are hunger-starv'd,
half dead.

All. The gods of Greece protect you.
And we'll pray for you.

Per. Rise, I pray you, rise:
We look not for reverence but for love,
And harbourage for ourself, our ships, and men.

Cle. The which when any shall not gratify,
Or pay you with unthankfulness in thought,
Be it our wives, our children, or ourselves,

* Nurse fondly.

‡ If he stands on peace.

† Forces.

‡ Perhaps.

The curse of heaven and men succeed their evils! [seen,]

Till when, (the which, I hope, shall ne'er be
Your grace is welcome to our town and us.

Per. Which welcome we'll accept: feast here
a while,

Until our stars, that frown, lend us a smile.

[Exeunt.]

ACT II.

Enter GOWER.

Gow. Here have you seen a mighty king
His child, I wis, * to incest bring;
A better prince, and benign lord,
Prove awful both in deed and word.
Be quiet then, as men should be,
Till he hath pass'd necessity.
I'll show you those in trouble's reign,
Losing a mite, a mountain gain.
The good in conversation †
(To whom I give my benison,) ‡
Is still at Tharsus, where each man
Thinks all is writ he spoken can:
And, to remember what he does,
Glid his statue glorious:
But tidings to the contrary
Are brought your eyes; what need speak I?

Dumb Show.

Enter at one door PERICLES, talking with CLEON; all the train with them. Enter at another door, a GENTLEMAN with a Letter to PERICLES; PERICLES shows the letter to CLEON; then gives the Messenger a reward, and knights him. Exeunt PERICLES, CLEON, &c. severally.

Gow. Good Hellicane hath staid at home,
Not to eat honey, like a drone,
From others' labours; forth he strive
To killen bad, keep good alive;
And to fulfil his prince's desire,
Sends word of all that haps in Tyre:
How Thaliard came full bent with sin,
And hid intent, to murder him;
And that in Tharsus was not best
Longer for him to make his rest:
He knowing so, put forth to seas,
Where when men beem, there's seldom ease;
For now the wind begins to blow;
Thunder above, and deeps below,
Make such unquiet, that the ship [split;
Should house him safe, is wreck'd and
And he, good prince, having all lost,
By waves from coast to coast is tost:
All perishes of man, of pelf,
Ne aught escapen but himself;
Till fortune, tir'd with doing bad,
Threw him ashore, to give him glad:
And here he comes what shall be next,
Pardon old Gower; this 'longs the text.
[Exit.]

SCENE I.—Pentapolis. §—An open Place by the Sea Side.

Enter PERICLES, wet.

Per. Yet cease your ire, ye angry stars of heaven! [man]
Wind, rain, and thunder, remember, earthly
Is but a substance that must yield to you;
And I, as fits my nature, do obey you.
Alas! the sea hath cast me on the rocks,
Wash'd me from shore to shore, and left me
breath
Nothing to think on, but ensuing death:
Let it suffice the greatness of your powers,

* I suppose.

‡ Blessing.

† I. e. In behaviour.

§ Although Pentapolis is found in an ancient map of the world, M. S. in the Cotton library, this is esteemed an imaginary name borrow'd from some romance.

To have bereft a prince of all his fortunes ;
And having thrown him from your wat'ry
grave,
Here to have death in peace, is all he'll crave.

Enter three FISHERMEN.

1 Fish. What, ho, Pilche!

2 Fish. Ho! come and bring away the nets.

1 Fish. What Patch-breech I say!

3 Fish. What say you, master?

1 Fish. Look how thou stirrest now! come away, or I'll fetch thee with a wamion.

3 Fish. 'Faith, master, I am thinking of the poor men that were cast away before us, even now.

1 Fish. Alas, poor souls, it griev'd my heart to hear what pitiful cries they made to us to help them, when, well-a-day, we could scarce help ourselves.

2 Fish. Nay, master, said not I as much, when I saw the porpus, how he bounced and tumbled? they say, they are half fish half flesh: a plague on them, they ne'er come, but I look to be wash'd. Master, I marvel how the fishes live in the sea.

1 Fish. Why as men do a-land; the great ones eat up the little ones: I can compare our rich misers to nothing so fitly as to a whale; 'a plays and tumbles, driving the poor fry before him, and at last devours them all at a mouthful. Such whales have I heard on a'the land, who never leave gaping, till they've swallow'd the whole parish, church, steeple, bells, and all.

Per. A pretty moral.

3 Fish. But, master, if I had been the sexton, I would have been that day in the belfry.

2 Fish. Why, man?

3 Fish. Because he should have swallow'd me too: and when I had been in his belly, I would have kept such a jangling of the bells, that he should have never have left, till he cast bells, steeple, church, and parish, up again. But if the good king Simonides were of my mind—

Per. Simonides!

3 Fish. We would purge the land of these drones that rob the bee of her honey.

Per. How from the finny subject of the sea These fishers tell the infirmities of men; And from their wat'ry empire recollect All that may men approve, or men detect! Peace be at your labour, honest fishermen.

2 Fish. Honest! good fellow, what's that? if it be a day fits you, scratch it out of the calendar, and no body will look after it.

Per. Nay, see, the sea hath cast upon your coast—

3 Fish. What a drunken knave was the sea, to cast thee in our way!

Per. A man whom both the waters and the wind,

In that vast tennis-court, hath made the ball For them to play upon, entreats you pity him: He asks of you, that never us'd to beg.

1 Fish. No, friend, cannot you beg? here's them in our country of Greece gets more with begging than we can do with working.

2 Fish. Canst thou catch any fishes then?

Per. I never practis'd it.

3 Fish. Nay, then thou wilt starve sure; for here's nothing to be got now-a-days, unless thou canst fish for't.

Per. What I have been, I have forgot to know;

But what I am, want teaches me to think on: A man shrunk up with cold; my veins are chill,

And have no more of life than may suffice To give my tongue that heat, to ask your help; Which if you shall refuse, when I am dead, For I am a man, pray see me buried.

1 Fish. Die quoth-a? Now gods forbid! I have a gown here; come, put it on; keep thee warm. Now, afore me, a handsome fellow! Come, thou shalt go home, and we'll have flesh for holidays, fish for fasting-days, and moreo'er puddings and flap-jacks,* and thou shalt be welcome.

Per. I thank you, Sir.

2 Fish. Hark you, my friend, you said you could not beg.

Per. I did but crave.

2 Fish. But crave? Then I'll turn craver too, and so I shall 'scape whipping. [then?]

Per. Why, are all your beggars whipp'd?

2 Fish. Oh! not all, my friend, not all: for if all your beggars were whipp'd, I would wish no better office than to be headle. But, master, I'll go draw up the net.

[Exeunt two of the FISHERMEN.]

Per. How well this honest mirth becomes their labour!

1 Fish. Hark you, Sir! do you know where you are?

Per. Not well.

1 Fish. Why, I'll tell you: this is called Pentapolis, and our king, the good Simonides.

Per. The good king Simonides, do you call him?

1 Fish. Ay, Sir, and he deserves to be so call'd, for his peaceable reign and good government.

Per. He is a happy king, since from his subjects

He gains the name of good, by his government. How far is his court distant from this shore?

1 Fish. Marry, Sir, half a day's journey; and I'll tell you he hath a fair daughter, and to-morrow is her birth-day; and there are princes and knights come from all parts of the world, to just and tourney† for her love.

Per. Did but my fortunes equal my desires, I'd wish to make one there.

1 Fish. O Sir, things must be as they may; and what a man cannot get, he may lawfully deal for—his wife's soul

Re-enter the Two FISHERMEN, drawing up a net.

2 Fish. Help, master, help; here's a fish hangs in the net, like a poor man's right in the law; 'twill hardly come out. Ha! bets out, 'tis come at last, and 'tis turn'd to a rusty armour.

Per. An armour, friends! I pray you, let me see it.

Thanks, fortune, yet, that after all my crosses, Thou giv'st me somewhat to repair myself; And, though it was mine own, part of mine heritage,

Which my dead father did bequeath to me, With this strict charge, (even as he left his life,) Keep it, my Pericles, it hath been a shield 'Twixt me and death: (and pointed to this brace)‡

For that it sav'd me, keep it; in like necessity Which gods protect thee from! it may defend thee.

It kept where I kept, I so dearly lov'd it; Till the rough seas, that spare not any man, Took it in rage, though calm'd, they give't again:

I thank thee for't; my shipwreck's now no ill, Since I have here my father's gift by will.

1 Fish. What mean you, Sir?

Per. To beg of you, kind friends, this coat of worth,

For it was sometime target to a king; I know it by this mark. He lov'd me dearly, And for his sake I wish the having of it; And that you'd guide me to your sovereign's court,

Where with't I may appear a gentleman;

And if that ever my low fortunes better, I'll pay your bounties: till then, rest your debtor.

1 Fish. Why, wilt thou tourney for the lady?

Per. I'll show the virtue I have borne in arms.

* Pancakes.

† To tilt as at a tournament.

‡ Armour for the arm.

1 Fish. Why, do ye take it, and the gods give thee good on't!

2 Fish. Ay, but hark you, my friend; 'twas we that made up this garment through the rough seams of the waters: there are certain condolences, certain veils. I hope, Sir, if you thrive, you'll remember from whence you had it.

Per. Believe't, I will.
Now by your furtherance, I am cloth'd in steel;
And, spite of all the rupture of the sea,
This jewel holds his bidding* on my arm:
Unto thy value will I mount myself
Upon a courser, whose delightful steps
Shall make the gazer joy to see him tread.—
Only, my friend, I yet am unprovided
Of a pair of bases.†

2 Fish. We'll sure provide: thou shalt have my best gown to make thee a pair; and I'll bring thee to the court myself.

Per. Then honour be but a goal to my will;
This day I'll rise, or else add ill to ill.

[Exeunt.]

SCENE II.—The same.—A public Way, or Platform, leading to the Lists. A Pavilion by the Side of it, for the reception of the KING, PRINCESS, LORDS, &c.

Enter SIMONIDES, THAISA, LORDS, and Attendants.

Sim. Are the knights ready to begin the triumph?

1 Lord. They are, my liege:
And stay your coming to present themselves.

Sim. Return them,‡ we are ready; and our daughter,
In honour of whose birth these triumphs are,
Sits here, like beauty's child, whom nature gat
For men to see, and seeing wonder at.

[Exit a LORD.]

Thai. It pleaseth you, my father, to express
My commendations great, whose merit's less.

Sim. 'Tis fit it should be so; for princes are
A model, which heaven makes like to itself:
As jewels lose their glory, if neglected,
So princes their renown, if not respected.
'Tis now your honour, daughter, to explain
The labour of each knight, in his device.§

Thai. Which, to preserve mine honour, I'll perform.

Enter a Knight; he passes over the Stage, and his Squire presents his Shield to the Princess.

Sim. Who is the first that doth prefer himself?

Thai. A knight of Sparta, my renowned father;
And the device he bears upon his shield
Is a black Æthiop, reaching at the sun:
The word, ¶ Lux tua vita mihi.

Sim. He loves you well, that holds his life of you.
[The second Knight passes.]

Who is the second, that presents himself?
Thai. A prince of Macedon, my royal father;
And the device he bears upon his shield
Is an arm'd knight, that's conquer'd by a lady:
The motto thus, in Spanish, Plu per dulcura que per fuerca. **

[The third Knight passes.]

Sim. And what's the third?

Thai. The third, of Antioch;
And his device, a wreath of chivalry:
The word, Me pompe prorexit apex.

[The fourth Knight passes.]

Sim. What is the fourth?

Thai. A burning torch, that's turned upside down:
The word, Quod me alit, me extinguit.

* The brace was fastened by a jewel, which the sea had not removed from its place.

† A kind of loose breeches.

‡ I. e. Tell them.

§ Emblem on a shield.

¶ Offer.

 I. e. More by sweetness than by force.

Sim. Which shows that beauty hath his power and will,

Which can as well inflame, as it can kill

[The fifth Knight passes.]

Thai. The fifth, a hand environed with clouds;
Holding out gold that's by the touchstone tried:
The motto thus, Sic spectanda fides.

[The sixth Knight passes.]

Sim. And what's the sixth and last, which the knight himself

With such a graceful courtesy deliver'd?
Thai. He seems a stranger; but his present is
A wither'd branch, that's only green at top:
The motto, In hac spe vivo.

Sim. A pretty moral;
From the dejected state wherein he is,
He hopes by you his fortunes yet may flourish.

1 Lord. He had need mean better than his outward show

Can any way speak in his just commend:
For, by his rusty outside, he appears
To have practis'd more the whipstock,* than the lance.

2 Lord. He well may be a stranger, for he comes
To an honour'd triumph strangely furnish'd.

3 Lord. And on set purpose let his armour rust
Until this day, to scour it in the dust.

Sim. Opinion's but a fool, that makes us scan
The outward habit by the inward man.
But stay, the knights are coming; we'll withdraw

Into the gallery. [Exeunt.]

[Great shouts, and all cry, The mean knight!]

SCENE III.—The same.—A Hall of State.—A Banquet prepared.

Enter SIMONIDES, THAISA, LORDS, KNIGHTS, and Attendants.

Sim. Knights,
To say you are welcome, were superfluous.
To place upon the volume of your deeds,
As in a title-page, your worth in arms,
Were more than you expect, or more than's fit,
Since every worth in show commends itself.
Prepare for mirth, for mirth becomes a feast:
You are my guests.

Thai. But you, my knight and guest:
To whom this wreath of victory I give,
And crown you king of this day's happiness.

Per. 'Tis more by fortune, lady, than my merit.

Sim. Call it by what you will, the day is yours;

And here, I hope, is none that envies it.
In framing artists, art hath thus decreed,
To make some good, but others to exceed;

And you're her labour'd scholar. Come, queen
o'the feast, [place:]

(For, daughter, so you are,) here take your Marshal the rest, as they deserve their grace.

Knights. We are honour'd much by good Simonides.

Sim. Your presence glads our days; honour
we love,

For who hates honour, hates the gods above.

Marsh. Sir, yond's your place.

Per. Some other is more fit.

1 Knight. Contend not, Sir; for we are gentlemen,

That neither in our hearts, nor outward eyes,
Envy the great, nor do the low despise.

Per. You are right courteous knights.

Sim. Sit, sit, Sir; sit.

Per. By Jove, I wonder, that is king of
thoughts,

These cates resist me,* she not thought upon.

Thai. By Juno, that is queen
Of marriage, all the viands that I eat
Do seem unsavoury, wishing him my meat:
Sure he's a gallant gentleman.

* Handle of a whip.

† I. e. These delicacies go against my stomach.

Sim. He's but
A country gentleman :
He has done no more than other knights have Broken a staff, or so : so let it pass. [done ;

Thai. To me he seems like diamond to a glass.

Per. You' king's to me, like to my father's picture,

Which tells me, in that glory once he was ;
Had princes sit, like stars, about his throne,
And he the sun, for them to reverence.
None that beheld him, but, like lesser lights,
Did veil * their crown to his supremacy ;
Where now his son's a glow-worm in the night,
The which hath fire in darkness, none in light ;
Whereby I see that time's the king of men,
For he's their parent, and he is their grave,
And gives them what he will, not what they crave.

Sim. What, are you merry, knights ?

1 Knight. Who can be other, in this royal presence ?

Sim. Here, with a cup that's stor'd unto the brim,

(As you do love, fill to your mistress' lips,)
We drink this health to you.

Knights. We thank your grace.

Sim. Yet pause a while :

You knight, methinks, doth sit too melancholy,
As if the entertainment in our court
Had not a show might countervail his worth.
Note it not you, Thaisa ?

Thai. What is it

To me, my father ?

Sim. Oh ! attend, my daughter ;
Princes, in this, should live like gods above,
Who freely give to every one that comes
To honour them : and princes, not doing so,
Are like to goats, which make a sound, but kill'd

Are wonder'd at.

Therefore to make's entrance more sweet, here
say,

We drink this standing bowl of wine to him.

Thai. Alas, my father, it befits not me
Unto a stranger knight to be so bold ;
He may my proffer take for an offence.
Since men take women's gifts for impudence.

Sim. How !

Do as I bid you, or you'll move me else.

Thai. Now, by the gods, he could not please me better. [Aside.

Sim. And further tell him, we desire to
know,

Of whence he is, his name and parentage.

Thai. The king my father, Sir, has drunk to
you.

Per. I thank him.

Thai. Wishing it so much blood unto your life.

Per. I thank both him and you, and pledge him freely.

Thai. And further he desires to know of you,
Of whence you are, your name and parentage.

Per. A gentleman of Tyre—(my name, Peri-
cles :

My education being in arts and arms ;)—
Who, looking for adventures in the world,
Was by the rough seas reft of ships and men,
And, after shipwreck, driven upon this shore.

Thai. He thanks your grace ; names himself
Pericles,

A gentleman of Tyre, who, only by Misfortune of the seas, has been bereft
Of ships and men, and cast upon this shore.

Sim. Now, by the gods, I pity his misfortune,

And will awake him from his melancholy.
Come, gentlemen, we sit too long on trifles,
And waste the time, which looks for other revels.

Even in your armours, as you are address'd, †
Will very well become a soldier's dance.
I will not have excuse, with saying, this

Low music is too harsh for ladies' heads ;
Since they love men in arms, as well as beds.

[The KNIGHTS dance.

So, this was well ask'd, 'twas so well perform'd.
Come, Sir :

Here is a lady that wants breathing too ;
And I have often heard, you knights of Tyre
Are excellent in making ladies trip ;
And that their measures * are as excellent.

Per. In those that practise them, they are my
lord.

Sim. Oh ! that's as much as you would be deny'd

[The KNIGHTS and LADIES dance.

Of your fair courtesy.—[Unclasp, unclasp :

Thanks, gentlemen, to all ; all have done well ;
But you the best. [To PERICLES.] Pages and lights, conduct

These knights unto their several lodgings ; Your's
We have given order to be next our own.

Per. I am at your grace's pleasure.

Sim. Princes, it is too late to talk of love,
For that's the mark I know you level at :
Therefore each one betake him to his rest ;
To-morrow, all for speeding do their best.

[Exeunt.

SCENE IV.—Tyre.—A Room in the Governor's House.

Enter HELICANES and ESCANES.

Hel. No, no, my Escanes : know this of me,— Antiochus from incest liv'd not free ;
For which, the most high gods not minding longer

To withhold the vengeance that they had in store,
Due to this heinous capital offence,
Even in the height and pride of all his glory,
When he was seated, and his daughter with him,
In a chariot of inestimable value,
A fire from heaven came, and shrivell'd up
Their bodies, even to loathing ; for they so stunk,

That all those eyes ador'd them, † ere their fall,
Scorn now their hand should give them burial.

Esca. 'Twas very strange.

Hel. And yet but just ; for though
This king were great, his greatness was no guard
To bar heaven's shaft, but sin had his reward.

Esca. 'Tis very true.

Enter three LORDS.

1 Lord. See, not a man in private conference,
Or council, has respect with him but he.

2 Lord. It shall no longer grieve without reproof.

3 Lord. And curs'd be he that will not second it.

1 Lord. Follow me, then : Lord Helicane, a
word.

Hel. With me ? and welcome : Happy day,
my lords.

1 Lord. Know that our griefs are risen to the top,
And now at length they overflow their banks.

Hel. Your griefs, for what ? wrong not the prince you love.

1 Lord. Wrong not yourself them, noble Heli-cane ;

But if the prince do live, let us salute him,
Or know what ground's made happy by his
breath.

If in the world he live, we'll seek him out ;
If in his grave he rest, we'll find him there ;
And be resolv'd, ‡ he lives to govern us,
Or dead, gives cause to mourn his funeral,
And leaves us to our free election.

2 Lord. Whose death's, indeed, the strongest in our censure : §

And knowing this kingdom, if without a head,
(Like goodly buildings left without a roof,)
Will soon to ruin fall, your noble self,

* Lower.

† Accentuated.

* Dances.
‡ Satisfied.

† Which adored them.
§ Most probable in our opinion.

That best know'st how to rule, and how to reign,
We thus submit unto,—our sovereign.

All. Live, noble Helicane!

Hel. Try honour's cause, forbear your sufferings:

If that you love prince Pericles, forbear.
Take I your wish, I leap into the seas,
Where's hourly trouble for a minute's ease.
A twelvemonth longer, let me then entreat you
To forbear choice i'th' absence of your king;
If, in which time expir'd, he not return,
I shall with aged patience bear your yoke.
But if I cannot win you to this love.
Go search like noblemen, like noble subjects,
And in your search spend your adventurous worth;

Whom if you find, and win unto return,
You shall like diamonds sit about his crown.

1 Lord. To wisdom he's a fool that will not yield;

And, since lord Helicane enjoined us,
We with our travels will endeavour it.

Hel. Then you love us, we you, and we'll clasp hands;

When peers thus knit, a kingdom ever stands.

[Exeunt.]

SCENE V.—Pentapolis.—A Room in the Palace.

Enter SIMONIDES, reading a Letter, the KNIGHTS meet him.

1 Knight. Good morrow to the good Simonides.

Sim. Knights, from my daughter this I let you know,

That, for this twelvemonth, she'll not undertake
A married life.

Her reason to herself is only known,
Which from herself by no means can I get.

2 Knight. May we not get access to her, my lord?

Sim. Faith, by no means: she hath so strictly tied her

To her chamber, that it is impossible.

One twelve moons more she'll wear Diana's livery—

This by the eye of Cynthia hath she vow'd
And on her virgin honour will not break it.

3 Knight. Though loath to bid farewell, we take our leaves.

[Exeunt.]

Sim. So

They're well despatch'd; now to my daughter's letter:

She tells me here she'll wed the stranger knight,
Or never more to view nor day nor night.

Mistress, 'tis well, your choice agrees with mine:

I like that well:—nay, how absolute she's in't,
Not minding whether I dislike or no!

Well, I commend her choice;

And will no longer have it be delay'd.

Soft, here he comes:—I must dissemble it.

Enter PERICLES.

Per. All fortune to the good Simouides!

Sim. To you as much, Sir! I am beholden to you,

For your sweet music this last night: my ears,
I do protest, were never better fed
With such delightful pleasing harmony.

Per. It is your grace's pleasure to commend;
Not my desert.

Sim. Sir, you are music's master.

Per. The worst of all her scholars, my good lord.

Sim. Let me ask one thing. What do you think, Sir, of

My daughter?

Per. As of a most virtuous princess.

Sim. And she is fair too, is she not?

Per. As a fair day in summer; wondrous fair.

Sim. My daughter, Sir, thinks very well of you;

Ay, so well, Sir, that you must be her master,
And she'll your scholar be: therefore look to it.

Per. Unworthy I to be her schoolmaster.

Sim. She thinks not so; peruse this writing else.

Per. What's here!

A letter, that she loves the knight of Tyre?

'Tis the king's subtilty, to have my life.

[Aside.]

Oh! seek not to entrap, my gracious lord,
A stranger and distressed gentleman,
That never aim'd so high to love your daughter,
But bent all offices to honour her.

Sim. Thou hast bewitch'd my daughter, and thou art

A villain.

Per. By the gods, I have not, Sir.

Never did thought of mine levy offence;

Nor never did my actions yet commence

A deed might gain her love, or your displeasure.

Sim. Traitor, thou liest.

Per. Traitor!

Sim. Ay, traitor, Sir.

Per. Even in his throat, (unless it be the king.)

That calls me traitor, I return the lie.

Sim. Now, by the gods, I do applaud his courage.

[Aside.]

Per. My actions are as noble as my thoughts,
That never relish'd of a base descent.

I came unto your court for honour's cause,

And not to be a rebel to her state;

And he that otherwise accounts of me,

This sword shall prove he's honour's enemy.

Sim. No!

Here comes my daughter, she can witness it.

Enter THAISA.

Per. Then, as you are as virtuous as fair,
Resolve your angry father, if my tongue

Did e'er solicit, or my hand subscribe

To any syllable that made love to you?

Thai. Why, Sir, say if you had,
Who takes offence at that would make me glad?

Sim. Yea, mistress, are you so peremptory?

I am glad of it with all my heart. [Aside.] I'll tame you;

I'll bring you in subjection.—

Will you, not having my consent, bestow

Your love and your affections on a stranger?

(Who, for ought I know to the contrary,

Or think, may be as great in blood as I.)

[Aside.]

Hear, therefore, mistress; frame your will to mine,—

And you, Sir, hear you.—Either be rul'd by me,
Or I will make you—man and wife.—

Nay, come; your hands and lips must seal it too.—

And, being join'd, I'll thus your hopes destroy;
And, for a further grief,—God give you joy!

What, are you both pleas'd?

Thai. Yes, if you love me, Sir.

Per. Even as my life, my blood that fosters it.

Sim. What, are you both agreed?

Both. Yes, 'please your majesty.

Sim. It pleaseth me so well, I'll see you wed;
Then, with what haste you can, get you to bed.

[Exeunt.]

ACT III.

Enter GOWAN.

Gow. Now sleep yslaked* hath the rout;
No din but snores, the house about,
Made louder by the o'er-fed breast
Of this most pompous marriage-feast.
The cat, with eyne of burning coal,
Now couches 'fore the mouse's hole:

* Quenched.

And crickets sing at th' oven's mouth,
As the bilther for their drouth.
Hymen hath brought the bride to bed,
Where, by the loss of maidenhead,
A babe is moulded.—Be attent,
And time, that is so briefly spent,
With your fine fancies quaintly eche : *
What's dumb in show, I'll plain with speech.

Dumb show.

Enter PERICLES and SIMONIDES at one door, with Attendants; a Messenger meets them, kneels, and gives PERICLES a letter. PERICLES shows it to SIMONIDES; the Lords kneel to the former. Then enter THAISA with child, and Lychorida. SIMONIDES shows his daughter the letter; she rejoices: she and PERICLES take leave of her father, and depart. Then SIMONIDES, &c. retire.

Gow. By many a dearn † and painful perch : ‡
Of Pericles the careful search
By the four opposing colines, §
Which the world together joins,
Is made, with all due diligence,
That horse, and sail, and high expense,
Can stand the quest. ¶ At last from Tyre
(Pame answering the most strong inquire,)
To the court of king Simonides
Are letters brought; the tenour these :—
Antiochus and his daughter's dead :
The men of Tyrus, on the head
Of Helicanus would set on
The crown of Tyre, but he will none ;
The mutiny there he hastes † appease :
Says to them, If king Pericles
Come not, in twice six moons, home,
He, obedient to their doom,
Will take the crown. The sum of this,
Brought hither to Pentapolis,
Y-ravished the regions round,
And every one, with claps, † gan sound
Our heir apparent is a king :
Who dream'd, who thought, of such a thing ?
Brief, he must hence depart to Tyre ;
His queen, with child, makes her desire
(Which who shall cross ?) along to go :
(Omit we all their dole and woe)
Lychorida, her nurse, she takes,
And so to sea. Their vessel shakes
(In Neptune's billow ; half the flood
Hath their keel cut : but fortune's mood ¶
Varies again : the grizzled north
Disgorges such a tempest forth,
That as a duck for life that dives,
So up and down the poor ship drives.
The lady shrieks, and, well-a-need ! **
Doth fall in travail with her fear :
And what ensues in this fell storm,
Shall, for itself, itself perform.
I will † relate ; action may Conveniently the rest convey ;
Which might not what by me is told.
In your imagination hold
This stage, the ship, upon whose deck
The sea-poss'd prince appears to speak.

[Exit.]

SCENE I.

Enter PERICLES, on a ship at sea.

Per. Thou God of this great vast, †† rebuke
these surges,
Which wash both heaven and hell ; and thou,
that hast
Upon the winds command, bind them in brass, Having call'd them from the deep ! Oh ! still thy deaf'ning, [ble,
Thy dreadful thunders ; gently quench thy nim-bulphureous flashes !—O how, Lychorida,

How does my queen ?—This storm, thou ! venomously *

Wilt thou spit all thyself ?—The seaman's whis-
Is as a whisper in the ears of death, [the Unheard.—Lychorida !—Lucina ! † O
Divinest patroness, and midwife, gentle
To those that cry by night, convey thy delty Aboard our dancing boat ; make swift the pangs

Of my queen's travails !—Now, Lychorida—

Enter Lychorida, with an Infant.

Lyc. Here is a thing
Too young for such a place, who, if it had Conceit, † would die as I am like to do.
Take in your arms this piece of your dead
queen.

Per. How ! how, Lychorida !

Lyc. Patience, good Sir : do not assist the storm.

Here's all that is left living of your queen,—
A little daughter : for the sake of it,
Be manly, and take comfort.

Per. O you gods !
Why do you make us love your goodly gifts,
And snatch them straight away ? We, here
below,

Recall not what we give, and therein may
Vie honour § with yourselves.

Lyc. Patience, good Sir,
Even for this charge.

Per. Now, mild may be thy life !
For a more blust'rous birth had never babe :
Quiet and gentle thy conditions !
For thou'rt the rudeliest welcom'd to this world,
That e'er was prince's child. Happy what follows !

Thou hast as chiding ¶ a nativity,
As fire, air, water, earth, and heaven can make,
To herald thee from the womb : even at the first,

Thy loss is more than can thy portage quit, ¶
With all thou canst find here.—Now the good gods
Throw their best eyes upon it !

Enter two SAILORS.

1 Sail. What courage, Sir ? God save you.

Per. Courage enough : I do not fear the flaw ; **

It hath done to me the worst. Yet, for the love
Of this poor infant, this fresh-new sea-farer,
I would, it would be quiet.

1 Sail. Slack the bolins †† there ; thou wilt not, wilt thou ? Blow, and split thyself.

2 Sail. But sea-room, an the brine and clondy billows kiss the moon, I care not.

1 Sail. Sir, your queen must overboard : the sea works high, the wind is loud, and will not lie, till the ship be cleared of the dead.

Per. That's your superstition.

1 Sail. Pardon us, Sir ; with us at sea it still hath been observed ; and we are strong in earnest. Therefore briefly yield her ; for she must overboard straight.

Per. Be it as you think meet.—Most wretched
queen !

Lyc. Here she lies, Sir.

Per. A terrible child-bed hast thou had, my dear !

No light, no fire : the unfriendly elements
Forgot thee utterly ; nor have I time
To give thee hallow'd to thy grave, but straight
Must cast thee, scarcely coffin'd, in the ooze ;
Where, for a monument upon thy bones,
And aye-remaining †† lamps, the belching whale,
And humming water must o'erwhelm thy corpse,
Lying with simple shells. Lychorida,
Bid Nestor bring me spices, ink, and paper,
My casket and my jewels ; and bid Nicander
Bring me the satin coffer : lay the babe

* Exit out. † Lonely. ‡ A measure.
§ Corners. ¶ Assist the search. ¶ Disposition.
 An exclamation equivalent to "Well-a-day"

* Maliciously. † The goddess of child-bearing.
‡ Thought. § Contend with you in honour.
¶ As noisy a one. ¶ Than thy entrance into life can ‡‡ Ever burning.

Upon the pillow ; hie thee, whiles I say
A priestly farewell to her : suddenly, woman.

[Exit Lychorida.]

2 Sail. Sir, we have a chest beneath the hatches, caulk'd and bitum'd ready.

Per. I thank thee. Mariner, say, what coast
is this ?

2 Sail. We are near Tharsus.

Per. Thither, gentle mariner, Alter thy course for Tyre. When canst thou reach it ?

2 Sail. By break of day, if the wind cease.

Per. Oh ! make for Tharsus.

There will I visit Cleon, for the babe
Cannot hold out to Tyrus ; there I'll leave it
At careful nursing. Go thy ways, good mariner ;
I'll bring the body presently.

[Exit.]

SCENE II.—Ephesus.—A Room in CERIMON'S
House.

Enter CERIMON, a SERVANT, and some persons who have been shipwrecked.

Cer. Philemon, ho !

Enter PHILEMON.

Phil. Doth my lord call ?

Cer. Get fire and meat for these poor men ;
It has been a turbulent and stormy night.

Serv. I have been in many ; but such a night as this,
I'll now, I ne'er endur'd.

Cer. Your master will be dead ere you return ;
There's nothing can be minister'd to nature,
That can recover him. Give this to the 'pothe-
And tell me how it works. [cary,

[To PHILEMON.]

[Exit PHILEMON, SERVANT, and those who had been shipwrecked.]

Enter two GENTLEMEN.

1 Gent. Good morrow, Sir.

2 Gent. Good morrow to your lordship.

Cer. Gentlemen,
Why do you stir so early ?

1 Gent. Sir,
Our lodgings, standing bleak upon the sea,
Shook, as the earth did quake ;
The very principals * did seem to rend,
And all to topple ; † pure surprise and fear
Made me to quit the house.

2 Gent. That is the cause we trouble you so
'Tis not our husbandry. ‡ [early ;

Cer. Oh ! you say well.

1 Gent. But I much marvel that your lordship, having
Rich tire § about you, should at these early hours
Shake off the golden slumber of repose.
It is most strange,
Nature should be so conversant with pain,
Being thereto not compell'd.

Cer. I held it ever,
Virtue and cunning ¶ were endowments greater
Than nobleness and riches : careless heirs
May the two latter darken and expend ;
But immortality attends the former,
Making a man a god. 'Tis known, I ever
Have studied physic, through which secret art,
By turning o'er authorities, I have (Together with my practice,) made familiar
To me and to my aid, the blest infusions
That dwell in vegetives, in metals, stones ;
And I can speak of the disturbances
That nature works, and of her cures ; which gives me

A more content in course of true delight
Than to be thirsty after tottering honour,
Or tie my treasure up in silken bags,
To please the fool and death.

* The principals are the strongest rafters in the roof of a building. † Tumble. ‡ I. e. Economical prudence, early rising. § Attire. ¶ Knowledge.

2 Gent. Your honour has through Ephesus pour'd forth

Your charity, and hundreds call themselves
Your creatures, who by you have been restor'd ;
And not your knowledge, personal pain, but even
Your purse, still open, hath built lord Cerimon
Such strong renown as time shall never—

Enter two SERVANTS with a chest.

Serv. So : lift there.

Cer. What is that ?

Serv. Sir, even now

Did the sea toss upon our shore this chest :
'Tis of some wreck.

Cer. Set't down, let's look on it.

2 Gent. 'Tis like a coffin, Sir,

Cer. Whate'er it be,

'Tis wondrous heavy. Wrench it open straight
If the sea's stomach be o'ercharg'd with gold,
It is a good constraint of fortune, that
It belches upon us.

2 Gent. 'Tis so, my lord.

Cer. How close 'tis caulk'd and bitum'd !—
Did the sea cast it up ?

Serv. I never saw so huge a billow, Sir,
As toss'd it upon shore.

Cer. Come, wrench it open—
Soft, soft ?—it smells most sweetly in my sense.

2 Gent. A delicate odour.

Cer. As evet hit my nostril ; so,—up with it.
O you most potent god ! what's here ? a curse !

1 Gent. Most strange !

Cer. Shrouded in cloth of state ; balm'd and entreasur'd

With bags of spices full ! A passport too !

Apollo, perfect me ! the characters !

[Unfolds a scroll.]

Here I give to understand, [Reads.
(If e'er this coffin drive a-land,)

I, king Pericles, have lost

This queen, worth all our mundane * cost.

Who finds her, give her burying,

She was the daughter of a king :

Besides this treasure for a fee,

The gods requite his charity !

If thou liv'st, Pericles, thou hast a heart
That even cracks for woe !—This chanc'd tonight.

2 Gent. Most likely, Sir.

Cer. Nay, certainly to-night ;

For look, how fresh she looks !—They were too rough,

That threw her in the sea. Make fire within ;
Fetch hither all the boxes in my closet.

Death may usurp on nature many hours,

And yet the fire of life kindle again

The overpressed spirits. I have heard

Of an Egyptian, had nine hours lie dead,

By good appliance was recovered.

Enter a SERVANT, with boxes, napkins, and fire.

Well said, well said ; the fire and the cloths.—

The rough and woful music that we have,

Cause it to sound, 'beseech you.

The vial once more—How thou stirr'st, thou block !—

The music there.—I pray you, give her air :—
Gentlemen,

This queen will live : nature awakes ; a warmth
Breathes out of her ; she hath not been entranc'd

Above five hours. See, how she 'gins to blow
Into life's flower again !

1 Gent. The heavens, Sir,

Through you, increase our wonder, and set up
Your fame for ever.

Cer. She's alive—behold

Her eyelids, cases to those heavenly jewels

Which Pericles hath lost,

Begin to part their fringes of bright gold ;

* Worldly.

The diamonds of a most praised water
Appear, to make the world twice rich. O live,
And make us weep to hear your fate, fair creature,

Rare as you seem to be! [She moves.

Thai. O dear Diana,
Where am I? Where's my lord? What world
is this?

2 Gent. Is not this strange?

1 Gent. Most rare.

Cer. Hush, gentle neighbours:
Lend me your hands: to the next chamber bear
her.

Get linc; now this matter must be look'd to,
For her relapse is mortal. Come, come, come;
And Esculapius guide us!

[Exeunt carrying THAISA away.

SCENE III.—Tharsus.—A Room in CLEON'S
House.

Enter PERICLES, CLEON, DIONYZA, LYCHORIDA, and MARINA.

Per. Most honour'd Cleon, I must needs be
gone;
My twelve months are expir'd, and Tyrus stays in a litigious peace. You, and your lady,
Take from my heart all thankfulness! The gods
Make up the rest upon you!

Cle. Your shafts of fortune, though they hurt
you mortally,
Yet glance full wand'ringly on us.

Dion. O your sweet queen!
That the strict fates had pleas'd you had brought her hither,
To have bless'd mine eyes!

Per. We cannot but obey
The powers above us. Could I rage, and roar
As doth the sea she lies in, yet the end Must be as 'tis. My babe Marina (whom,
For she was born at sea, I have nam'd so) here
I charge your charity withal, and leave her
The infant of your care; beseeching you
To give her princely training, that she may be Manner'd as she is born.

Cle. Fear not, my lord:
Your grace,* that fed my country with your corn,
(For which the people's prayers still fall upon you,) [tion

Must in your child be thought on. If neglec-Should therein make me vile, the common body;†

By you reliev'd, would force me to my duty:
But if to that my nature need a spur,
The gods revenge it upon me and mine,
To the end of generation!

Per. I believe you:
Your honour and your goodness teach me credit,
Without your vows. Till she be married,
madam,

By bright Diana, whom we honour all,
Unscissar'd shall this hair of mine remain,
Though I show will ‡ in't. So I take my leave.
Good madam, make me blessed in your care
In bringing up my child.

Dion. I have one myself,
Who shall not be more dear to my respect,
Than your's, my lord.

Per. Madam, my thanks and prayers.

Cle. We'll bring your grace even to the edge
o'the shore;
Then give you up to the mask'd Neptune, § and
The gentlest winds of heaven.

Per. I will embrace
Your offer. Come, dear'st madam.—O no tears,
Lychorida, no tears:
Look to your little mistress, on whose grace
You may depend hereafter. Come, my lord.

[Exeunt.

* Bounty. † The common people.
‡ Appear wilful or perverse by allowing it.
§ Insidious waves that wear a treacherous smile.

SCENE IV.—Ephesus.—A Room in CERI-MON'S House.

Enter CERIMON and THAISA.

Cer. Madam, this letter, and some certain jewels,

Lay with you in your coffer: which are now
At your command. Know you the character?

Thai. It is my lord's.
That I was shipp'd at sea, I well remember,
Even on my yearning* time; but whether
there

Delivered or no, by the holy gods,
I cannot rightly say: But since king Pericles,
My wedded lord, I ne'er shall see again,
A vestal livery will I take me to,
And never more have joy.

Cer. Madam, if this you purpose as you
speak,

Diana's temple is not distant far,
Where you may 'bide until your date expire.
Moreover, if you please, a niece of mine
Shall there attend you.

Thai. My recompense is thanks; that's all;
Yet my good will is great, though the gift small.
[Exeunt.

ACT IV.

Enter GOWER.

Gow. Imagine Pericles at Tyre,
Welcom'd to his own desire.
His woeful queen leave at Ephess,
To Dian there a votaress.
Now to Marina bend your mind,
Whom our fast growing scene must find,
At Tharsus, and by Cleon train'd
In music, letters: who hath gain'd
Of education all the grace,
Which makes her both the heart and place
Of general wonder. But, alack!
That monster envy, oft the wrack
Of earned praise, Marina's life
Seeks to take off by treason's knife.
And in this kind hath our Cleon
One daughter, and a wench full grown,
Even ripe for marriage fight; this maid
Hight † Philoten: and it is said
For certain in our story, she Would ever with Marina be:
Be't when she weav'd the sleided ‡ silk
With fingers long, small, white as milk;
Or when she would with sharp needl § wound
The cambric, which she made more sound
By hurting it; or when to the lute
She sung, and made the night-bird mute,
That still records ¶ with moan † or when
She would with rich and constant pen
Vell to her mistress Dian; still
This Philoten contends in skill
With absolute ¶ Marina: so
With the dove of Paphos might the crow
Vie feathers white. Marina gets
All praises, which are paid as debts,
And not as given. This so darks
In Philoten all graceful marks,
That Cleon's wife, with envy rare,
A present murderer does prepare
For good Marina, that her daughter
Might stand peerless by this slaughter.
The sooner her vile thoughts to stead;
Lychorida, our nurse, is dead;
And cursed Dionyza hath
The pregnant  instrument of wrath
Prest †† for this blow. The unborn event
I do commend to your content:
Only I carry winged time
Post on the lame feet of my rhyme;

* Groaning. † Called. ‡ Untwisted.
§ Needle. ¶ Sings. ¶ Accomplished.
 Prepared. †† Ready.

Which never could I so convey,
Unless your thoughts went on my way.—
Dionyza does appear,
With Leonine, a murderer. [Exit.

SCENE I.—Tharsus.—An open Place near the sea-shore.

Enter DIONYZA and LEONINE.

Dion. Thy oath remember; thou hast sworn to do it:
'Tis but a blow, which never shall be known.
Thou canst not do a thing i'the world so soon,
To yield thee so much profit. Let not conscience,
Which is but cold, inflame love in thy bosom,
Inflame too nicely; nor let pity, which Even women have cast off, melt thee, but be
A soldier to thy purpose.

Leon. I'll do't; but yet she is a goodly creature.

Dion. The fitter then the gods should have her.
Here
Weeping she comes for her old nurse's death.
Thou art resolv'd.

Leon. I am resolv'd.

Enter MARINA, with a Basket of Flowers.

Mar. No, no, I will rob Tellus* of her weeds,
To strew thy green with flowers: the yellows,
blues,
The purple violets, and marigolds,
Shall, as a chaplet, hang upon thy grave,
While summer days do last. Ah me! poor
maid,
Born in a tempest, when my mother died,
This world to me is like a lasting storm,
Whirring me from my friends.

Dion. How now, Marina! Why do you keep alone?
How chance my daughter is not with you? Do not Consume your blood with sorrowing: you have A nurse of me. Lord! how your favour's†
chang'd
With this unprofitable woe! Come, come;
Give me your wreath of flowers. Ere the sea
mar it,
Walk forth with Leonine;‡ the air is quick there
Piercing, and sharpens well the stomach.
Come;—

Leonine, take her by the arm, walk with her.

Mar. No, I pray you;
I'll not bereave you of your servant.

Dion. Come, come;
I love the king your father, and yourself,
With more than foreign heart. We every day
Expect him here; when he shall come, and find
Our paragon to all reports, thus blasted,
He will repent the breadth of his great voyage;
Blame both my lord and me, that we have ta'en
No care to your best courses. Go, I pray you,
Walk, and be cheerful once again; reserve
That excellent complexion, which did steal
The eyes of young and old. Care not for me;
I can go home alone.

Mar. Well, I will go;
But yet I have no desire to it.

Dion. Come, come, I know 'tis good for you.
Walk half an hour, Leonine, at the least:
Remember what I have said.

Leon. I warrant you, madam.

Dion. I'll leave you, my sweet lady, for a while;
Pray you walk softly, do not heat your blood:
What! I must have a care of you.

Mar. Thanks, sweet madam.—

[Exit DIONYZA.

Is this wind westerly that blows?

Leon. South west.

Mar. When I was born, the wind was north.

Leon. Was't so?

Mar. My father, as nurse said, did never
fear,
But cry'd, good seamen! to the sailors, galling
His kingly hands with hauling of the ropes;
And, clasping to the mast, endur'd a sea
That almost burst the deck, and from the ladder-tackle

Wash'd off a canvas-climber: * Ha! says one,
Wilt out! and, with a dropping industry,
They skip from stem to stern: the boatswain
whistles,

The master calls, and trebles their confusion

Leon. And when was this?

Mar. It was when I was born:
Never were waves nor wind more violent.

Leon. Come, say your prayers speedily.

Mar. What mean you?

Leon. If you require a little space for prayer,
I grant it: Pray; but be not tedious,
For the gods are quick of ear, and I am sworn
To do my work with haste.

Mar. Why, will you kill me?

Leon. To satisfy my lady.

Mar. Why would she have me kill'd?
Now, as I can remember by my troth,

I never did her hurt in all my life;
I never spake bad word, nor did ill turn

To any living creature: believe me, la,
I never kill'd a mouse, nor hurt a fly:

I trod upon a worm against my will,
But I wept for it. How have I offended,
Wherein my death might yield her profit, or
My life imply her danger?

Leon. My comission
Is not to reason of the deed, but do it.

Mar. You will not do't for all the world, I hope.

You are well-favour'd, and your looks foreshow
You have a gentle heart. I saw you lately,
When you caught hurt in parting two that
fought:

Good sooth, it show'd well in you; do so now:
Your lady seeks my life: come you between,
And save poor me, the weaker.

Leon. I am sworn,
And will despatch.

Enter PIRATES, whilst MARINA is struggling.

1 Pirate. Hold, villain!

[LEONINE runs away.

2 Pirate. A prize! a prize!

3 Pirate. Half-part, mates, half-part. Come let's have her aboard suddenly.

[Exit PIRATES with MARINA.

SCENE II.—The same.

Re-enter LEONINE.

Leon. These roving thieves serve the great pirate Valdes;

And they have seiz'd Marina. Let her go:
There's no hope she'll return. I'll swear she's
dead,

And thrown into the sea.—But I'll see further:
Perhaps they will but please themselves upon her,
Not carry her aboard. If she remain,
Whom they have ravish'd, must by me be slain.

[Exit.

SCENE III.—Mitylene.—A Room in a Brothel.

Enter PANDER, BAWD, and BOULT.

Pand. Boult.

Boult. Sir.

Pand. Search the market narrowly; Mitylene is full of gallants. We lost too much money this mart, by being too wenchless.

Bawd. We were never so much out of creatures. We have but poor three, and they can do no more than they can do; and with continual action are even as good as rotten.

Pand. Therefore let's have fresh ones, what-

* The earth. † Countenance.
‡ I. e. Ere the coming in of the tide prevent you.

* A ship-boy.

er we pay for them. If there be not a conscience to be us'd in every trade, we shall never prosper.

Bard. Thou say'st true: 'tis not the bringing up of poor bastards, as I think I have brought up some eleven—

Boult. Ay, to eleven, and brought them down again. But shall I search the market?

Bard. What else, man? The stuff we have, a strong wind will blow it to pieces, they are so pitifully sodden.

Pand. Thou say'st true; they are too unwholesome o'conscience. The poor Transilvanian is dead, that lay with the little baggage.

Boult. Ay, she quickly poop'd him; she made him roast meat for worms:—but I'll go search the market. [Exit BOULT.]

Pand. Three or four thousand chequins were as pretty a proportion to live quietly, and so give over.

Bard. Why, to give over, I pray you? Is it a shame to get when we are old?

Pand. Oh! our credit comes not in like the commodity; nor the commodity wages not with the danger: therefore, if in our youths we could pick up some pretty estate, 'twere not amiss to keep our door hatch'd. Besides, the sore terms we stand upon with the gods, will be strong with us for giving over.

Bard. Come, other sorts offend as well as we.

Pand. As well as we! ay, and better too; we offend worse. Neither is our profession any trade; it's no calling:—but here comes Boult.

Enter the PIRATES, and BOULT, dragging in MARINA.

Boult. Come your ways. [To MARINA.]—My masters, you say she's a virgin?

1 Pirate. O Sir, we doubt it not.

Boult. Master, I have gone thorough for this piece,† you see: if you like her, so; if not, I have lost my earnest.

Bard. Boult, has she any qualities?

Boult. She has a good face, speaks well, and has excellent good clothes; there's no further necessity of qualities can make her be refused.

Bard. What's her price, Boult?

Boult. I cannot be bated one doit of a thousand pieces.

Pand. Well, follow me, my masters; you shall have your money presently. Wife, take her in; instruct her what she has to do, that she may not be raw in her entertainment.†

[Exeunt PANDER and PIRATES.]

Bard. Boult, take you the marks of her; the colour of her hair, complexion, height, age, with warrant of her virginity; and cry, He that will give most, shall have her first. Such a maidenhead were no cheap thing; if men were as they have been. Get this done as I command you.

Boult. Performance shall follow.

[Exit BOULT.]

Mar. Alack, that Leonine was so slack, so slow!

(He should have struck, not spoke;) or that these pirates

(Not enough barbarous,) had not overboard Thrown me, to seek my mother!

Bard. Why lament you, pretty one?

Mar. That I am pretty.

Bard. Come, the gods have done their part in you.

Mar. I accuse them not.

Bard. You are lit into my hands, where you are like to live.

Mar. The more my fault, To 'scape his hands, where I was like to die.

Bard. Ay, and you shall live in pleasure.

Mar. No.

Bard. Yes, indeed, shall you, and taste gentlemen of all fashions. You shall fare well; you shall have the difference of all complexions. What! do you stop your ears?

Mar. Are you a woman?

Bard. What would you have me be, an I be not a woman?

Mar. An honest woman, or not a woman.

Bard. Marry, whip thee, gosling: I think I shall have something to do with you. Come, you are a young foolish sapling, and must be bowed as I would have you.

Mar. The gods defend me!

Bard. If it please the gods to defend you by men, then men must comfort you, men must feed you, men must stir you up.—Boult's returned!

Enter BOULT.

Now, Sir, hast thou cried her through the market?

Boult. I have cried her almost to the number of her hairs; I have drawn her picture with my voice.

Bard. And I pr'ythee tell me, how dost thou find the inclination of the people, especially of the younger sort?

Boult. Faith, they listened to me, as they would have hearkened to their father's testament. There was a Spaniard's mouth so watered, that he went to bed to her very description.

Bard. We shall have him here to-morrow with his best ruff on.

Boult. To-night, to-night. But, mistress, do you know the French knight that cowers* i'the hams?

Bard. Who? Monsieur Veroles?

Boult. Ay; he offered to cut a caper at the proclamation; but he made a groan at it, and swore he would see her to-morrow.

Bard. Well, well: as for him, he brought his disease hither: here he does but repair it. I know, he will come in our shadow, to scatter his crowns in the sun.

Boult. Well, if we had of every nation a traveller, we should lodge them with this sign.

Bard. Pray you, come hither awhile. You have fortunes coming upon you. Mark me: you must seem to do that fearfully, which you commit willingly; to despise profit, where you have most gain. To weep that you live as you do, makes pity in your lovers: Seldom, but that pity begets you a good opinion, and that opinion a mere† profit.

Mar. I understand you not.

Boult. O, take her home, mistress, take her home: these blushes of her's must be quenched with some present practice.

Bard. Thou say'st true, i'faith, so they must: for your bride goes to that with shame, which is her way to go with warrant.

Boult. Faith some do, and some do not. But, mistress, if I have bargained for the joint,

Bard. Thou may'st cut a morsel off the spit.

Boult. I may so.

Bard. Who should deny it? Come, young one, I like the manner of your garments well.

Boult. Ay, by my faith, they shall not be changed yet.

Bard. Boult, spend thou that in the town: report what a sojourner we have; you'll lose nothing by custom. When nature framed this piece, she meant thee a good turn; therefore say what a paragon she is, and thou hast the harvest out of thine own report.

Boult. I warrant you, mistress, thunder shall not so awake the beds of eels, as my giving out her beauty stir up the lewdly-inclined. I'll bring home some to-night.

Bard. Come your ways; follow me.

Mar. If fires be hot, knives sharp, or waters Untied I still my virgin knot will keep. [deep, Diana, aid my purpose!]

* I Half open. † Bid a high price for her ‡ Unskilful in what she has to do.

* Bonds.

* A certain profit.

Bawd. What have you to do with Diana?
Pray you, will you go with us?

[Exeunt.]

SCENE IV.—Tharsus.—A Room in CLEON'S House.

Enter CLEON and DIONYZA.

Dion. Why are you foolish? Can it be undone?

Cle. O Dionyza, such a piece of slaughter
The sun and moon ne'er look'd upon!

Dion. I think
You'll turn a child again.

Cle. Were I chief lord of all the spacious
world,

I'd give it to undo the deed. O lady,
Much less in blood than virtue, yet a princess
To equal any single crown o'the earth,
I'the justice of compare! O villain Leonine,
Whom thou hast poison'd too!
If thou hadst drunk to him, it had been a kindness

Becoming well thy feat: * what canst thou say,
When noble Pericles shall demand his child?

Dion. That she is dead. Nurses are not the
To foster it, nor ever to preserve. [fates
She died by night; I'll say so. Who can cross
it?

Unless you play the impious innocent, †
And, for an honest attribute, cry out
She died by foul play.

Cle. Oh! go to. Well, well,
Of all the faults beneath the heavens, the gods
Do like this worst.

Dion. Be one of those, that think
The petty wrens of Tharsus will fly hence,
And open this to Pericles. I do shame
To think of what a noble strain you are,
And of how cow'd a spirit.

Cle. To such proceeding
Who ever but his approbation added,
Though not his preconsent, he did not flow
From honourable courses.

Dion. Be it so then:
Yet none does know, but you, how she came
dead,

Nor none can know, Leonine being gone.
She did disdain my child, and stood between Her and her fortunes: None would look on
her,
But cast their gazes on Marina's face;
Whilst ours was blurted at, and held a malkin, ‡
Not worth the time of day. It pierc'd me thorough;

And though you call my course unnatural,
You not your child well loving, yet I find,
It greets me as an enterprise of kindness,
Perform'd to your sole § daughter.

Cle. Heavens forgive it!

Dion. And as for Pericles,
What should he say? We wept after her hearse,

And even yet we mourn: her monument
Is almost finish'd, and her epitaphs
In glittering golden characters express
A general praise to her, and care in us
At whose expense 'tis done.

Cle. Thou art like the harpy,
Which, to betray, doth wear an angel's face,
Seize with an eagle's talons.

Dion. You are like one that superstitiously Doth swear to the gods, that winter kills the flies:

But yet I know you'll do as I advise.

[Exeunt.]

Enter GOWER, before the Monument of MARINA, at Tharsus.

Gow. Thus time we waste, and longest leagues make short;
Sail seas in cockles; have, and wish but for't;

* I. e. Of a piece with the rest of my exploit.
† A common appellation for an idiot.
‡ A coarse wench. § Only.

Making (to take your imagination,)
From bourn to bourn, * region to region.
By you being pardon'd, we commit no crime,
To use one language, in each several clime,
Where our scenes seem to live. I do beseech
you,
To learn of me, who stand i'the gap to teach
you,
The stages of our story. Pericles
Is now again thwarting the wayward seas,
(Attended on by many a lord and knight,)
To see his daughter, all his life's delight.
Old Escanes, whom Helicanus late
Advanc'd in time to great and high estate,
Is left to govern. Bear you it in mind,
Old Helicanus goes along behind.
Well-sailing ships, and bounteous winds, have brought
This king to Tharsus, (think his pilot thought;
So with his steerage shall your thoughts grow on,)
To fetch his daughter home, who first is gone.
Like moles and shadows see them move awhile;
Your ears unto your eyes I'll reconcile.

Dumb show.

*Enter at one door PERICLES, with his Train;
CLEON, and DIONYZA at the other. CLEON shows PERICLES the tomb of MARINA; whereat PERICLES makes lamentation, puts on Sackcloth, and in a mighty passion departs. Then CLEON and DIONYZA retire.*

Gow. See how belief may suffer by foul show!
This borrow'd passion stands for true old woe;
And Pericles, in sorrow all devour'd,
With sighs shot through, and biggest tears o'er-show'd,
Leaves Tharsus, and again embarks. He swears
Never to wash his face, nor cut his hairs:
He puts on sackcloth, and to sea. He bears
A tempest, which his mortal vessel † tears,
And yet he rides it out. Now please you wit ‡
The epitaph is for Marina writ
By wicked Dionyza.

[Reads the inscription on MARINA'S Monument.

*The fairest, sweet'st, and best, lies here,
Who wither'd in her spring of year.
She was of Tyrus, the king's daughter,
On whom foul death hath made this slaughter;*

*Marina was she call'd; and at her birth,
Thetis, § being proud, swallow'd some part
o'the earth:*

*Therefore the earth, fearing to be o'erflow'd,
Hath Thetis' birth-child on the heavens
bestow'd;*

Wherefore she does, (and swears she'll never stint,) ||

Make raging battery upon shores of flint.

No visor does become black villany,

So well as soft and tender flattery.

Let Pericles believe his daughter's dead,

And bear his courses to be ordered

By lady Fortune; while our scenes display

His daughter's woe and heavy well-a-day,

In her unholy service. Patience then,

And think you now are all in Mitylen.

[Exit.]

SCENE V.—Mitylene.—A Street before the Brothel.

Enter, from the Brothel, two GENTLEMEN.

1 Gent. Did you ever hear the like?

2 Gent. No, nor never shall do in such a place as this, she being once gone.

* Travelling from country to country.

† His body.

‡ To know.

§ The war.

|| Never cease.

1 Genl. But to have divinity preached there ! Did you ever dream of such a thing ?

2 Genl. No, no. Come, I am for no more bawdy-houses : shall we go hear the vestals sing ?

1 Genl. I'll do any thing now that is virtuous ; but I am out of the road of rutting, for ever.

[Exeunt.]

SCENE VI.—The same.—A Room in the Brothel.

Enter PANDER, BAWD, and BOULT.

Pand. Well, I had rather than twice the worth of her, she had ne'er come here.

Bawd. Fie, fie upon her ; she is able to freeze the god Priapus, and undo a whole generation. We must either get her ravish'd, or be rid of her. When she should do for clients her fitment, and do me the kindness of our profession, she has me her quirks, her reasons, her master-reasons, her prayers, her knees ; that she would make a puritan of the devil, if he should cheapen a kiss of her.

Boult. 'Faith I must ravish her, or she'll dis-furnish us of all our cavaliers, and make all our swearers priests.

Pand. Now, the pox upon her green-sickness for me !

Bawd. 'Faith, there's no way to be rid on't, but by the way to the pox. Here comes the lord Lysimachus, disguised.

Boult. We should have both lord and lown, if the peevish baggage would but give way to customers.

Enter LYSIMACHUS.

Lys. How now ! How* a dozen of virgini-ties ?

Bawd. Now, the gods to-bless your hon-our !

Boult. I am glad to see your honour in good health.

Lys. You may so ; 'tis the better for you that your resorters stand upon sound legs. How now, wholesome iniquity ! Have you that a man may deal withal, and defy the surgeon ?

Bawd. We have here one, Sir, if she would—but there never came her like in Mity-lene.

Lys. If she'd do the deeds of darkness, thou would'st say.

Bawd. Your honour knows what 'tis to say, well enough.

Lys. Well ; call forth, call forth.

Boult. For flesh and blood, Sir, white and red, you shall see a rose ; and she were a rose indeed, if she had but—

Lys. What, pr'ythee ?

Boult. O Sir, I can be modest.

Lys. That dignifies the renown of a bawd, no less than it gives a good report to a number to be chaste.

Enter MARINA.

Bawd. Here comes that which grows to the stalk ;—never plucked yet, I can assure you. Is she not a fair creature ?

Lys. 'Faith, she would serve after a long voyage at sea. Well, there's for you ;—leave us.

Bawd. I beseech your honour, give me leave : a word, and I'll have done presently.

Lys. I beseech you, do.

Bawd. First, I would have you note, this is an honourable man.

[To MARINA, whom she takes aside.]

Mar. I desire to find him so, that I may wor-thily note him.

Bawd. Next, he's the governor of this coun-try, and a man whom I am bound to.

Mar. If he govern the country, you are bound to him indeed ; but how honourable he is in that, I know not.

Bawd. 'Pray you, without any more virginal fencing, will you use him kindly ? He will line your apron with gold.

Mar. What he will do graciously, I will thank-fully receive.

Lys. Have you done ?

Bawd. My lord, she's not paced yet ; you must take some pains to work her to your manage. Come, we will leave his honour and her together.

[Exeunt BAWD, PANDER, and BOULT.]

Lys. Go thy ways.—Now, pretty one, how long have you been at this trade ?

Mar. What trade, Sir ?

Lys. What I cannot name, but I shall of-fend.

Mar. I cannot be offended with my trade. Please you to name it.

Lys. How long have you been of this profes-sion ?

Mar. Ever since I can remember.

Lys. Did you go to it so young ? Were you a gamester* at five, or at seven ?

Mar. Earlier too, Sir, if now I be one.

Lys. Why, the house you dwell in, proclaims you to be a creature of sale.

Mar. Do you know this house to be a place of such resort, and will come into it ? I hear say, you are of honourable parts, and are the governor of this place.

Lys. Why, bath your principal made known unto you who I am ?

Mar. Who is my principal ?

Lys. Why, your herb woman : she that sets seeds and roots of shame and iniquity. Oh ! you have heard something of my power, and so stand aloof for more serious wooing. But I protest to thee, pretty one, my authority shall not see thee, or else look friendly upon thee. Come, bring me to some private place. Come, come.

Mar. If you were born to honour, show it now ;

If put upon you, make the judgment good That thought you worthy of it.

Lys. How's this ? how's this ?—Some more ;—be sage.

Mar. For me,

That am a maid, though most ungentle fortune Hath plac'd me here within this loathsome sty, Where, since I came, diseases have been sold Dearer than physic,—O that the good gods Would set me free from this unhallow'd place, Though they did change me to the meanest bird That flies i'the purer air !

Lys. I did not think

Thou couldst have spoke so well ; ne'er dream'd thou couldst.

Had I brought hither a corrupted mind, Thy speech had alter'd it. Hold, here's gold for thee ;

Perséver still in that clear way thou goest, And the gods strengthen thee !

Mar. The gods preserve you !

Lys. For me, be you thoughten

That I came with no ill intent : for to me The very doors and windows savour vilely. Farewell. Thou art a piece of virtue, and I doubt not but thy training hath been noble.—Hold ; here's more gold for thee.—

A curse upon him, die he like a thief, That robs thee of thy goodness ! If thou hear'st from me,

It shall be for thy good.

[As LYSIMACHUS is putting up his Purse.]

BOULT enters.

Boult. I beseech your honour, one piece for me.

Lys. Avaunt, thou damned door-keeper ! Your house,

* How much shall I give for ?

* A wanton.

But for this virgin that doth prop it up,
Would sink, and overwhelm you all. Away!

[Exit LYSIMACHUS.]

Boult. How's this? We must take another course with you. If your peevish chastity, which is not worth a breakfast in the cheapest country under the cope,* shall undo a whole household, let me be gelded like a spaniel. Come your ways.

Mar. Whither would you have me?

Boult. I must have your maidenhead taken off, or the common hangman shall execute it. Come your way. We'll have no more gentlemen driven away. Come your ways, I say.

Re-enter BAWD.

Bawd. How now! what's the matter?

Boult. Worse and worse, mistress: she has here spoken holy words to the lord Lysimachus.

Bawd. Oh! abominable!

Boult. She makes our profession as it were to stink afore the face of the gods.

Bawd. Marry, hang her up for ever!

Boult. The nobleman would have dealt with her like a nobleman, and she sent him away as cold as a snowball; saying his prayers too.

Bawd. Boult, take her away; use her at thy pleasure; crack the glass of her virginity, and make the rest malleable.

Boult. An if she were a thornier piece of ground than she is, she shall be ploughed.

Mar. Hark, hark, you gods!

Bawd. She conjures: away with her. Would she had never come within my doors! Marry hang you! She's born to undo us. Will you not go the way of women-kind? Marry come up, my dish of chastity with rosemary and bays!

[Exit BAWD.]

Boult. Come, mistress; come your way with me.

Mar. Whither would you have me?

Boult. To take from you the jewel you hold so dear.

Mar. Prythee tell me one thing first.

Boult. Come now, your one thing.

Mar. What canst thou wish thine enemy to be?

Boult. Why, I could wish him to be my master, or rather, my mistress.

Mar. Neither of these are yet so bad as thou art

Since they do better thee in their command.

Thou hold'st a place, for which the palmed† st

fiend

Of hell would not in reputation change:

Thou'rt the damn'd door-keeper to every coy-strel†

That hither comes enquiring for his tib;

To the cholerick fisting of each rogue thy ear

Is liable; thy very food is such

As hath been belch'd on by infected lungs.

Boult. What would you have me? go to the wars, would you? where a man may serve seven years for the loss of a leg, and have not money enough in the end to buy him a wooden one?

Mar. Do any thing but this thou doest. Empty

Old receptacles, common sewers, of filth;

Serve by indenture to the common hangman;

Any of these ways are better yet than this:

For that which thou professest, a baboon,

Could he but speak, would own a name too dear.

Oh! that the gods would safely from this place

Deliver me! Here, here is gold for thee.

If that thy master would gain aught by me,

Proclaim that I can sing, weave, sew, and dance,

With other virtues, which I'll keep from boast;

And I will undertake all these to teach.

* Canopy of heaven.

† Paltry fellow.

I doubt not but this populous city will Yield many scholars.

Boult. But can you teach all this you speak of?

Mar. Prove that I cannot, take me home again,

And prostitute me to the basest groom
That doth frequent your house.

Boult. Well, I will see what I can do for thee: if I can place thee, I will.

Mar. But, amongst honest women?

Boult. 'Faith, my acquaintance lies little amongst them. But since my master and mistress have bought you, there's no going but by their consent; therefore I will make them acquainted with your purpose, and I doubt not but I shall find them tractable enough. Come, I'll do for thee what I can: come your ways.

[Exeunt.]

ACT V.

Enter GOWAN.

Gow. Marina thus the brothel 'scapes, and chances

Into an honest house, our story says.

She sings like one immortal, and she dances

As goddess-like to her admired lays:

Deep clerks* she dumbs; and with her need composes

Nature's own shape, of bud, bird, branch, or berry;

That even her art sisters the natural roses:

Her inkle, silk, twine with the rubied cherry:

That pupils lacks she none of noble race,

Who pour their bounty on her; and her gain

She gives the cursed bawd. Here we her
place;

And to her father turn our thoughts again.

Where we left him, on the sea. We there him
ost;

Whence, driven before the winds, he is arriv'd

Here where his daughter dwells; and on this coast

Suppose him now at anchor. The city striv'd God Neptune's annual feast to keep: from whence

Lysimachus our Tyrian ship espies,

His banners sable, trimm'd with rich expense;

And to him in his barge with fervour hies.

In your supposing once more put your sight;

Of heavy Pericles think this the bark:

Where, what is done in action, more, if might,
Shall be discover'd; please you, sit, and hark.

[Exit.]

SCENE I.—On board PERICLES' Ship, off Mitylene. A close Pavilion on deck, with a Curtain before it; PERICLES within it, reclined on a Couch. A Barge lying beside the Tyrian Vessel.

Enter two SAILORS, one belonging to the Tyrian Vessel, the other to the Barge; to them HELICANUS.

Tyr. Sail. Where's the lord Helicanus? he can resolve you.

[To the SAILOR of Mitylene.]

Oh! here he is.—

Sir, there's a barge put off from Mitylene.

And in it is Lysimachus the governor,

Who craves to come aboard. What is your will?

Hel. That he have his. Call up some gentlemen.

Tyr. Sail. Ho, gentlemen! my lord calls.

Enter two GENTLEMEN.

1 Gent. Doth your lordship call?

* Learned men.

Hel. Gentlemen,
There is some of worth would come aboard : I pray you,
To greet them fairly.

[The GENTLEMEN and the two SAILORS descend and go on board the Barge.]

*Enter, from thence, LYSIMACHUS and LORDS ;
the Tyrian GENTLEMEN, and the two SAILORS.*

Tyr. Sail. Sir,
This is the man that can, in aught you would,
Resolve you.

Lys. Hail, reverend Sir ! the gods preserve
you !

Hel. And you, Sir, to out-live the age I am,
And die as I would do.

Lys. You wish me well.
Being on shore, honouring of Neptune's triumphs,

Seeing this goodly vessel ride before us,
I make to it, to know of whence you are.

Hel. First, Sir, what is your place ?

Lys. I am governor of this place you lie before.

Hel. Sir,
Our vessel is of Tyre, in it the king ;
A man, who for this three months hath not spoken

To any one, nor taken sustenance,
But to prorogue * his grief.

Lys. Upon what ground is his distempera-
ture ?

Hel. Sir, it would be too tedious to repeat ;
But the main grief of all, springs from the loss
Of a beloved daughter and a wife.

Lys. May we not see him, then ?

Hel. You may indeed, Sir
But bootless is your sight : he will not speak
To any.

Lys. Yet, let me obtain my wish.

Hel. Behold him, Sir : [PERICLES discovered.]
this was a goodly person,
Till the disaster, that, one mortal † night,
Drove him to this.

Lys. Sir, king, all hail ! the gods preserve you ! Hail,
Hail, royal Sir !

Hel. It is in vain : he will not speak to you.

Lord. Sir, we have a maid in Mitylene, I durst wager,
Would win some words of him.

Lys. 'Tis well bethought.

She, questionless, with her sweet harmony
And other choice attractions, would allure,
And make a battery through his deafen'd parts, ‡

Which now are midway stopp'd :

She, all as happy as of all the fairest,
Is, with her fellow-maidens, now within
The leafy shelter that abuts against
The island's side.

He whispers one of the attendant LORDS,— Exit LORD, in the Barge of LYSI-MACHUS.

Hel. Sure, all's effectless ; yet nothing we'll omit

That bears recovery's name. But, since your kindness

We have stretch'd thus far, let us beseech you
further,

That for our gold we may provision have,
Wherein we are not destitute for want,
But weary for the staleness.

Lys. O Sir, a courtesy,
Which if we should deny, the most just God
For every grass would send a caterpillar,
And so inflict our province.—Yet once more
Let me intreat to know at large the cause
Of your king's sorrow.

Hel. Sit, Sir, I will recount it :—
But see, I am prevented.

* To prolong.

‡ L. c. Ears

† Destructive.

Enter, from the Barge, LORD, MARINA, and a young LADY.

Lys. Oh ! here is

The lady that I sent for. Welcome, fair one !
Is't not a goodly presence ?

Hel. A gallant lady.

Lys. She's such, that were I well assur'd she came

Of gentle kind, and noble stock, I'd wish
No better choice, and think me rarely wed.
Fair one, all goodness that consists in bounty
Expect even here, where is a kingly patient
If that thy prosperous-artificial feat
Can draw him but to answer thee in aught,
Thy sacred physic shall receive such pay
As thy desires can wish.

Mar. Sir, I will use
My utmost skill in his recovery,
Provided none but I and my companion
Be suffer'd to come near him.

Lys. Come, let us leave her,
And the gods make her prosperous !

[MARINA sings]

Lys. Mark'd he your music ?

Mar. No, nor look'd on us.

Lys. See, she will speak to him.

Mar. Hail, Sir ! my lord, lend ear :—

Per. Hum ! ha !

Mar. I am a maid,
My lord, that ne'er before invited eyes,
But have been gaz'd on, comet-like : she speaks

My lord, that, may be, hath endur'd a grief
Might equal yours, if both were justly weigh'd.
Though wayward fortune did malign my state,
My derivation was from ancestors
Who stood equivalent with mighty kings :
But time hath rooted out my parentage,
And to the world and awkward casualties
Bound me in servitude.—I will desist ;
But there is something glows upon my cheek,
And whispers in mine ear, Go not till he speak.
[Asiae.]

Per. My fortunes—parentage—good parentage—

To equal mine !—was it not thus ? what say
you ?

Mar. I said, my lord, if you did know my parentage,

You would not do me violence.

Per. I do think so.

I pray you, turn your eyes again upon me.—
You are like something that—What countrywoman ?

Here of these shores ?

Mar. No, nor of any shores :

Yet I was mortally brought forth, and am
No other than I appear.

Per. I am great with woe, and shall deliver weeping.

My dearest wife was like this maid, and such a one

My daughter might have been : my queen's square brows ;

Her stature to an inch ; as wand-like straight ;
As silver-voic'd ; her eyes as jewel-like,
And cas'd as richly : in pace another Juno ;
Who starves the ears she feeds, and makes them
hungry,

The more she gives them speech—Where do you
live ?

Mar. Where I am but a stranger : from the deck

You may discern the place.

Per. Where were you bred ?

And how achiev'd you these endowments,
which

You make more rich to owe ?

Mar. Should I tell my history.

'Twould seem like lies disdain'd in the reporting.

Per. Pr'ythee speak :

* Possessive.

Falseness cannot come from thee, for thou look'st
Modest as justice, and thou seem'st a palace
For the crown'd truth to dwell in: I'll believe
thee,

And make my senses credit thy relation,
To points that seem impossible; for thou look'st

Like one I lov'd indeed. What were thy
friends?

Didst thou not say, when I did push thee back,
(Which was when I perceiv'd thee,) that thou cam'st

From good descending?

Mar. So indeed I did.

Per. Report thy parentage. I thing thou said'st

Thou hadst been toss'd from wrong to injury,
And that thou thought'st thy griefs might equal
mine,

If both were open'd.

Mar. Some such thing indeed

I said, and said no more but what my thoughts
Did warrant me was likely.

Per. Tell thy story:

If thine, consider'd, prove the thousandth part
Of my endurance, thou art a man, and I
Have suffer'd like a girl: yet thou dost look Like Patience, gazing on kings' graves, and smiling

Extremity out of act. What were thy friends?

How lost thou them? Thy name, my most kind virgin?

Recount, I do beseech thee: come, sit by me.

Mar. My name, Sir, is Marina.

Per. Oh! I am mock'd,
And thou by some incensed god sent hither
To make the world laugh at me.

Mar. Patience, good Sir,
Or here I'll cease.

Per. Nay, I'll be patient:
Thou little know'st how thou dost startle me,
To call thyself Marina.

Mar. The name, Marina,
Was given me by one that had some power;
My father, and a king.

Per. How! a king's daughter?
And call'd Marina?

Mar. You said you would believe me;
But, not to be a troubler of your peace,
I will end here.

Per. But are you flesh and blood?
Have you a working pulse? and are no fairy?
No motion?—Well; speak on. Where were you born?

And wherefore call'd Marina?

Mar. Call'd Marina,
For I was born at sea.

Per. At sea?—thy mother?

Mar. My mother was the daughter of a king;
Who died the very minute I was born,
As my good nurse Lychorida hath oft Deliver'd weeping.

Per. Oh! stop there a little!
This is the rarest dream that e'er dull sleep
Did mock sad fools withal: this cannot be.
My daughter's buried. [Aside.] Well:—where were you bred?

I'll hear you more, to the bottom of your story,
And never interrupt you.

Mar. You'll scarce believe me: 'twere best I did give o'er.

Per. I will believe you by the syllable:
Of what you shall deliver. Yet, give me
leave:—

How came you in these parts? Where were you bred?

Mar. The king, my father, did in Tharsus leave me;

Till cruel Cleon, with his wicked wife,
Did seek to murder me: and having woo'd
A villain to attempt it, who having drawn,

* I. e. No puppet dressed up to deceive me.
† I will believe every word you say.

A crew of pirates came and rescu'd me;
Brought me to Mitylene. But now, good Sir,
Whither will you have me? Why do you weep?

It may be,

You think me an impostor: no, good faith;
I am the daughter to king Pericles,
If good king Pericles be.

Per. Ho, Helicanus!

Hel. Calls my gracious lord?

Per. Thou art a grave and noble counsellor,
Most wise in general: Tell me, if thou canst,
What this maid is, or what is like to be,
That thus hath made me weep?

Hel. I know not; but

Here is the regent, Sir, of Mitylene,
Speaks nobly of her.

Lys. She would never tell

Her parentage, being demanded that,
She would sit still and weep.

Per. O Helicanus, strike me, honour'd Sir;
Give me a gash, put me to present pain;
Lest this great sea of joys rushing upon me,
O'erbear the shores of my mortality,
And drown me with their sweetness. O come
hither,

Thou that beget'st him that did thee beget;
Thou that wast born at sea, buried at Tharsus,
And found at sea again! O Helicanus, Down on thy knees, thank the holy gods, as loud

As thunder threatens us: This is Marina.—
What was thy mother's name? Tell me but
that,

For truth can never be confirm'd enough,
Though doubts did ever sleep.

Mar. First, Sir, I pray,

What is your title?

Per. I am Pericles of Tyre: but tell me now
(As in the rest thou hast been godlike perfect,)
My drown'd queen's name, thou art the heir of kingdoms,

And another life to Pericles thy father.

Mar. Is it no more to be your daughter, than
To say, my mother's name was Thaisa?
Thaisa was my mother, who did end
The minute I began.

Per. Now blessing on thee, rise: thou art my child.

Give me fresh garments. Mine own, Helicanus,
(Not dead at Tharsus, as she should have been,
By savage Cleon,) she shall tell thee all;
When thou shalt kneel and justify in knowledge,

She is thy very princess.—Who is this?

Hel. Sir, 'tis the governor of Mitylene,
Who, hearing of your melancholy state,
Did come to see you.

Per. I embrace you, Sir.

Give me my robes—I am wild in my beholding.
O heavens bless my girl! But hark, what music?

Tell Helicanus, my Marina, tell him
O'er, point by point, for yet he seems to doubt,
How sure you are my daughter.—But what
music?

Hel. My lord, I hear none.

Per. None?

The music of the spheres: list, my Marina.

Lys. It is not good to cross him: give him
way.

Per. Rarest sounds!

Do ye not hear?

Lys. Music? My lord, I hear—

Per. Most heavenly music:

It nips me unto list'ning, and thick slumber
Hangs on mine eye-lids: let me rest.

[He sleeps.]

Lys. A pillow for his head;

[The Curtain before the Pavilion of PERICLES is closed.]

So leave him all,—Well, my companion-friends,
If this but answer to my just belief,
I'll well remember you.

Exeunt LYSIMACHUS, HELICANUS, MARINA, and attendant LADY.

SCENE II.—The same.—PERICLES on the Deck asleep: DIANA appearing to him as in a vision.

Dia. My temple stands in Ephesus; hie thee thither,
And do upon mine altar sacrifice.
There, when my maiden priests are met together,
Before the people all,
Reveal how thou at sea didst lose thy wife:
To mourn thy crosses, with thy daughter's call,
And give them repetition to the life.
Perform my bidding, or thou liv'st in woe:
Do't, and be happy, by my silver bow.
Awake, and tell thy dream.

[DIANA disappears.]

Per. Celestial Dian, goddess argentine,
I will obey thee!—Helicanus!

Enter LYSIMACHUS, HELICANUS, and MARINA.

Hel. Sir.

Per. My purpose was for Tharsus, there to strike
The inhospitable Cleon; but I am
For other service first: toward Ephesus
Turn our blown sails; ere-soon* I'll tell thee
why.— [To HELICANUS.]

Shall we refresh us, Sir, upon your shore,
And give you gold for such provision
As our intents will need?

Lys. With all my heart, Sir; and, when you come ashore,
I have another suit.

Per. You shall prevail,
Were it to woo my daughter; for it seems
You have been noble towards her.

Lys. Sir, lend your arm.

Per. Come, my Marina.

[Exit.]

Enter GOWER, before the Temple of DIANA at Ephesus.

Gow. Now our sands are almost run;
More a little, and then done.
This, as my last boon, give me,
(For such kindness must relieve me,)
That you aptly will suppose
What pageantry, what feats, what shows,
What minstrelsy, and pretty din,
The regent made in Mitylin,
To greet the king. So he has thriv'd,
That he is promis'd to be wiv'd
To fair Marina; but in no wise,
Till he † had done his sacrifice,
As Dian bade: whereto being bound,
The interim, pray you, all confound. ‡
In feather'd briefness sails are fill'd,
And wishes fall out as they're will'd.
At Ephesus, the temple see,
Our king, and all his company.
That he can hither come so soon,
Is by your fancy's thankful boon.

[Exit.]

SCENE III.—The Temple of DIANA at Ephesus: THAISA standing near the Altar, as high Priestess; a number of Virgins on each side; CERIMON and other inhabitants of Ephesus attending.

Enter PERICLES, with his Train; LYSIMACHUS, HELICANUS, MARINA, and a Lady.

Per. Hail Dian! to perform thy just command,
I here confess myself the king of Tyre;
Who, frighted from my country, did wed
The fair Thaisa, at Pentapolis.
At sea in childbed died she, but brought forth
A maid-child call'd Marina; who, O goddess,

Wears yet thy silver livery.* She at Tharsus
Was nurs'd with Cleon: whom at fourteen years

He sought to murder: but her better stars
Brought her to Mitylene; against whose shore
Riding, her fortunes brought the maid aboard
us,

Where, by her own most clear remembrance, she
Made known herself my daughter.

Thai. Voice and favour!—

You are—you are—O royal Pericles!

[She faints.]

Per. What means the woman? she dies! help,
gentlemen!

Cer. Noble Sir.

If you have told Diana's altar true,
This is your wife.

Per. Reverend appearer, no:

I threw her o'erboard with these very arms,

Cer. Upon this coast, I warrant you.

Per. 'Tis most certain.

Cer. Look to the lady;—Oh! she's but o'erjoy'd.

Early, one blast'ring morn, this lady was Thrown on this shore. I op'd the coffin, and Found there rich jewels; recover'd her, and plac'd her

Here in Diana's temple.

Per. May we see them?

Cer. Great Sir, they shall be brought you to my house,

Whither I invite you. Look! Thaisa is Recover'd.

Thai. Oh! let me look!

If he be none of mine, my sanctity
Will to my sense † bend no licentious ear.
But curb it, spite of seeing. O my lord,
Are you not Pericles? Like him you speak,
Like him you are: Did you not name a tempest,

A birth, and death?

Per. The voice of dead Thaisa!

Thai. That Thaisa am I, supposed dead,
And drown'd. ‡

Per. Immortal Dian!

Thai. Now I know you better.—

When we with tears parted Pentapolis,
The king, my father, gave you such a ring.

[Shows a ring.]

Per. This, this: no more, you gods! your present kindness

Makes my past miseries sport: You shall do
well,

That on the touching of her lips I may Melt, and no more be seen. O come, be buried

A second time within these arms.

Mar. My heart

Leaps to be gone into my mother's bosom.

[Kneels to THAISA.]

Per. Look, who kneels here! Flesh of thy flesh, Thaisa;

Thy burden at the sea, and call'd Marina,
For she was yielded there.

Thai. Bless'd and mine own!

Hel. Hail, madam, and my queen!

Thai. I know you not.

Per. You have heard me say, when I did fly from Tyre,

I left behind an ancient substitute:
Can you remember what I call'd the man?
I have nam'd him oft.

Thai. 'Twas Helicanus then.

Per. Still confirmation:

Embrace him, dear Thaisa: this is he.
Now do I long to hear how you were found;
How possibly preserv'd; and whom to thank,
Besides the gods, for this great miracle.

Thai. Lord Cerimon, my lord; this man
Through whom the gods have shown their power;
that can
From first to last resolve you.

* Soon.

† I. e. Pericles.

‡ Confound here signifies to consume.

* I. e. Her white robe of innocence.

† Sensual passion.

‡ Drown'd here means overwhelmed, not suffocated.

Per. Reverend Sir,
The gods can have no mortal officer
More like a god than you. Will you deliver
How this dead queen re-lives?

Cer. I will, my lord.
Besetch you, first go with me to my house,
Where shall be shown you all was found with
her;
How she came placed here within the temple;
No needful thing omitted.

Per. Pure Diana!
I bless thee for thy vision, and will offer
My night oblations to thee. Thaisa,
This prince, the fair-betrothed of your daughter,
Shall marry her at Pentapolis. And now,
This ornament * that makes me look so dismal,
Will I, my lov'd Marina, clip to form;
And what this fourteen years no razor touch'd,
To grace thy marriage-day, I'll beautify.

Thai. Lord Cerimon hath letters of good credit,
Sir, that my father's dead.

Per. Heavens make a star of him! Yet there,
my queen,
We'll celebrate their nuptials, and ourselves
Will in that kingdom spend our following days;
Our son and daughter shall in Tyrus reign.

* I. e. His beard.

Lord Cerimon, we do our longing stay,
To hear the rest untold.—Sir, lead the way.
[Exeunt.]

Enter GOWER.

Gow. In Antioch, * and his daughter, you have heard
Of monstrous lust the due and just reward:
In Pericles, his queen and daughter, seen (Although assail'd with fortune fierce and keen,
Virtue preserv'd from fell destruction's blast, Led on by heaven, and crown'd with joy at last.

In Helicanus may you well descry
A figure of truth, of faith, of loyalty:
In reverend Cerimon there well appears,
The worth that learned charity aye wears.
For wicked Cleon and his wife, when fame
Had spread their cursed deed, and honour'd
name

Of Pericles, to rage the city turn;
That him and his they in his palace burn.
The gods for murder seemed so content
To punish them; although not done, but meant
So on your patience ever more attending,
New joy wait on you! Here our play has end-
ing.

HAMLET, PRINCE OF DENMARK.

LITERARY AND HISTORICAL NOTICE.

THIS tragedy is supposed to have been written in 1599. The principal incidents were probably drawn from a dramatic piece by one Thomas Ryd, and from a Historie of Hamblet, in black letter, adopted by Belleforest in his collection of novels (published 1564) from the narrative of Saxo-Grammaticus, the old Danish historian. The play has long been accounted a first-rate dramatic production, for, with some egregious blunders, it contains a variety of unparalleled beauties. As originally written, it consumed four hours in the representation; persons, in Shakspeare's time, visiting the theatre so early as four o'clock, and regarding the quality less than the quantity obtained for their money: this will excuse some of those trifling interlocations which yet remain. Perhaps none of our poet's undertakings have been subjected to so much erudite and ingenious criticism as this; and none, certainly, after its most severe exercise, have been left with so much to approve. For although it has been observed, with some appearance of justice, that in the management of the piece, Shakspeare has been rather unfortunate, all its most striking circumstances arising so early in the formation, as "not to leave him room for a conclusion suitable to the importance of its beginning;" yet this defect is amply recompensed by the sublimity of conception, the didactic morality of sentiment, the pathetic intensity of feeling, the power and comprehensiveness of diction, and the delightful diversity of character, which are displayed in almost every scene. Indeed, were each drama of Shakspeare to be characterized by the particular quality which distinguishes it from the rest, the praise of variety must especially be given to the tragedy of Hamlet; as it is interchangeably contrasted "with merriment that includes judicious and instructive observations; and with solemnity not strained by prectical violence above the natural sentiments of man." To those, however, who are mentally capable of appreciating its excellences as a play, the charm of perusing it in the closet will probably be greater than the delight of witnessing its exhibition; since it is rich in the treasures of contemplative and philosophical speculation; divested of the glare and bustle which captivate or bewilder the senses; whilst the principal character, though furnished with abundant materials, is almost the only support of the piece, and seldom meets with a representative in whom the beauties of the original are effectively embodied. Of the plot it may be observed, that it teems with slaughter, and is justly obnoxious to criticism in many of its parts; but the catastrophe is certainly its most disgusting feature, and can only be tolerated by the known partiality of an English audience for a multiplicity of deaths and bloodshed. "The manner of Hamlet's death (says Dr. Johnson) is not very happily produced; for the exchange of weapons is rather an expedient of necessity, than a stroke of art."

SCENE, Elsinore.

ACT I.

SCENE I.—Elsinore.—A Platform before the Castle.

FRANCISCO on his Post.—Enter to him BERNARDO.

Ber. Who's there?

Fran. Nay, answer me: stand, and unfold Yourself.

Ber. Long live the king!

Fran. Bernardo?

Ber. He.

Fran. You come most carefully upon your hour.

Ber. 'Tis now struck twelve; get thee to bed, Francisco.

Fran. For this relief, much thanks: 'tis bitter cold,

And I am sick at heart.

Ber. Have you had quiet guard?

Fran. Not a mouse stirring.

Ber. Well, good night.

If you do meet Horatio and Marcellus,
The rivals of my watch, bid them make haste.

Enter HORATIO and MARCELLUS.

Fran. I think, I hear them.—Stand, ho! Who is there?

Hor. Friends to this ground.

Mar. And liegemen to the Dane.

Fran. Give you good night.

Mar. O, farewell, honest soldier :
Who hath reliev'd you ?

Fran. Bernardo hath my place.

Give you good night. [Exit FRANCISCO.]

Mar. Holla ! Bernardo !

Ber. Say.

What, is Horatio there ?

Hor. A piece of him.

Ber. Welcome, Horatio ; welcome, good Marcellus.

Hor. What, has this thing appear'd again to-night ?

Ber. I have seen nothing.

Mar. Horatio says, 'tis but our fantasy ;
And will not let belief take hold of him,
Touching this dreaded sight, twice seen of us :
Therefore I have entreated him, along
With us to watch the minutes of this night,
That, if again this apparition come,
He may approve * our eyes, and speak to it.

Hor. Tush ! tush ! 'twill not appear.

Ber. Sit down awhile ;

And let us once again assail your ears,
That are so fortified against our story,
What we two nights have seen.

Hor. Well, sit we down,
And let us hear Bernardo speak of this.

Ber. Last night of all,
When yon same star, that's westward from the pole,
Had made his course to illumine that part of heaven
Where now it burns, Marcellus, and myself,
The bell then beating one,—

Mar. Peace, break thee off—look, where it comes again !

Enter GHOST.

Ber. In the same figure like the king that's
dead.

Mar. Thou art a scholar, speak to it, Horatio.

Ber. Looks it not like the king ? mark it,
Horatio.

Hor. Most like :—it harrows me with fear, and wonder.

Ber. It would be spoke to.

Mar. Speak to it, Horatio.

Hor. What art thou, that usurp'st this time of night,
Together with that fair and warlike form
In which the majesty of buried Denmark
Did sometimes march ?—By heaven I charge thee, speak !

Mar. It is offended.

Ber. See ! it stalks away.

Hor. Stay ; speak : speak I charge thee, speak. [Exit GHOST.]

Mar. 'Tis gone, and will not answer.

Ber. How now, Horatio ? you tremble, and look pale :
Is not this something more than fantasy ?
What think you of it ?

Hor. Before my God, I might not this believe,
Without the sensible and true avouch
Of mine own eyes.

Mar. Is it not like the king ?

Hor. As thou art to thyself :
Such was the very armour he had on.
When he the ambitious Norway combated :
So frown'd he once, when, in angry parle, †
He smote the sledged ‡ Polack § on the ice.
'Tis strange.

Mar. Thus, twice before, and jump ¶ at this dead hour,
With martial stalk hath he gone by our watch.

Hor. In what particular thought to work, I know not ;
But, in the gross and scope of mine opinion,
This bodes some strange eruption to our state.

Mar. Good now, sit down, and tell me, he that knows,

Why this same strict and most observant watch
So nightly toils the subject of the land ;
And why such daily cast of brazen cannon,
And foreign mart for implements of war ;
Why such impress of shipwrights, whose sore task

Does not divide the Sunday from the week :
What might be toward, that this sweaty haste Doth make the night joint-labourer with the
day ;

Who is't, that can inform me ?

Hor. That can I ;

At least, the whisper goes so. Our last king,
Whose image even but now appear'd to us,
Was, as you know, by Fortinbras of Norway,
Thereto prick'd on by a most emulate pride,
Dar'd to the combat ; in which our valiant Hamlet [him.]

(For so this side of our known world esteem'd)
Did slay this Fortinbras ; who, by a seal'd com-
Well ratified by law and heraldry, [pact.]
Did forfeit, with his life, all those his lands
Which he stood seiz'd of, to the conqueror :
Against the which, a moiety competent
Was gaged by our king ; which had return'd
To the inheritance of Fortinbras,
Had he been vanquisher ; as, by the same co-mart, *

And carriage of the article design'd, †
His fell to Hamlet : Now, Sir, young Fortin-
Of unimproved mettle hot and full, ‡ [bras.]
Hath in the skirts of Norway, here and there,
Shark'd § up a list of landless resolute,
For food and diet, to some enterprise
That hath a stomach ¶ in't : which is no other
(As it doth well appear unto our state,)
But to recover of us, by strong hand,
And terms compulsory, those 'foresaid lands
So by his father lost : And this, I take it,
Is the main motive of our preparations ;
The source of this our watch ; and the chief
head

Of this post-haste and romage ¶ in the land.

[Ber.] I think it be no other, but even so :
Well may it sort,  that this portentous figure Comes armed through our watch ; so like the king

That was, and is, the question of these wars.

Hor. A mote it is, to trouble the mind's eye.
In the most high and palmy †† state of Rome,
A little ere the mightiest Julius fell, [dead]
The graves stood tenantless, and the sheeted
Did squeak and gibber in the Roman streets.

Re-enter GHOST.

But, soft ; behold ! lo, where it comes again !
I'll cross it, though it blast me.—Stay, illusion !

Speak to me :

Ber. 'Tis here!

Hor. 'Tis here!

Mar. 'Tis gone! [Exit GHOST.

We do it wrong, being so majestic,
To offer it the show of violence;
For it is, as the air, invulnerable,
And our vain blows malicious mockery.

Ber. It was about to speak, when the cock crew.

Hor. And then it started like a guilty thing
Upon a fearful summons. I have heard,
The cock, that is the trumpet of the morn,
Doth with his lofty and shrill-sounding throat
Awake the god of day; and, at his warning,
Whether in sea or fire, in earth or air,
The extravagant and erring spirit hies
To his confine; and of the truth herein
This present object made probation.†

Mar. It faded on the crowing of the cock.
Some say, that ever 'gainst that season comes
Wherein our Saviour's birth is celebrated,
This bird of dawning singeth all night long:
And then they say no spirit dares stir abroad;
The nights are wholesome; then no planets
strike,

No fairy takes, nor witch hath power to charm;
So hallow'd and so gracious is the time.

Hor. So I have heard, and do in part believe it.

But look, the morn, in russet mantle clad,
Walks o'er the dew of yon high eastern hill:
Break we our watch up; and, by my advice,
Let us impart what we have seen to-night
Unto young Hamlet: for, upon my life,
This spirit, dumb to us, will speak to him:
Do you consent we shall acquaint him with it,
As needful in our loves, fitting our duty?

Mar. Let's do't, I pray; and I this morning know

Where we shall find him most convenient.

[Exeunt.

SCENE II.—The same.—A Room of State in the same.

Enter the KING, QUEEN, HAMLET, POLONIUS, LAERTES, VOLTIMAND, CORNELIUS, LORDS, and Attendants.

King. Though yet of Hamlet our dear brother's death

The memory be green; and that it us befitted
To bear our hearts in grief, and our whole kingdom

To be contracted in one brow of woe;
Yet so far hath discretion fought with nature,
That we with wisest sorrow think on him,
Together with remembrance of ourselves.

Therefore our sometime sister, now our queen,
The imperial jointress of this warlike state,
Have we, as 'twere, with a defeated joy,—
With one auspicious, and one dropping eye;
With mirth in funeral, and with dirge in marriage,

In equal scale weighing delight and dole,†
Taken to wife: nor have we herein barr'd
Your better wisdoms, which have freely gone
With this affair along.—For all, our thanks.

Now follows, that you know, young Fortinbras,—

Holding a weak supposal of our worth;
Or thinking, by our late dear brother's death,
Our state to be disjoint and out of frame,
Collagu'd with this dream of his advantage,
He hath not fail'd to pester us with message,
Importing our surrender of those lands
Lost by his father, with all bands of law,
To our most valiant brother.—So much for him.

Now for ourself, and for this time of meeting.
Thus much the business is: We have here writ
To Norway, uncle of young Fortinbras,—
Who, impotent and bed-rid, scarcely hears
Of this his nephew's purpose,—to suppress
His further gait* herein; in that the levies,
The lists, and full proportions, are all made
Out of his subject:—and we here despatch
You, good Cornelius, and you Voltimand,
For bearers of this greeting to old Norway;
Giving to you no further personal power
To business with the king, more than the scope
Of these dilated articles allow. [duty.

Farewell; and let your haste commend your
Cor. Vol. In that and all things will we show our duty.

King. We doubt it nothing; heartily farewell.

[Exeunt VOLTIMAND and CORNELIUS.

And now, Laertes, what's the news with you?
You told us of some suit; What is't, Laertes?
You cannot speak of reason to the Dane,
And lose your voice: What would'st thou beg,
Laertes,

That shall not be my offer, not thy asking?
The head is not more native to the heart,
The hand more instrumental to the mouth,
Than is the throne of Denmark to thy father.
What wouldst thou have, Laertes?

Laer. My dread lord,
Your leave and favour to return to France;
From whence, though willingly, I came to Denmark,

To show my duty in your coronation;
Yet now, I must confess, that duty done,
My thoughts and wishes bend again toward France,

And bow them to your gracious leave and pardon.

King. Have you your father's leave? What says Polonius?

Pol. He hath, my lord, [wrung from me my slow leave,

By laboursome petition; and, at last,
Upon his will I seal'd my hard consent:‡
I do beseech you, give him leave to go.

King. Take thy fair hour, Laertes; time be
thine,

And thy best graces; spend it at thy will.—
But now, my cousin Hamlet, and my son,—

Ham. A little more than kin, and less than kind.† [Aside.

King. How is it, that the clouds still hang on
you?

Ham. Not so, my lord, I am too much i'the sun.

Queen. Good Hamlet, cast thy nighted colour off,

And let thine eye look like a friend on Denmark.
Do not, for ever, with thy veiled lids‡
Seek for thy noble father in the dust:

Thou know'st 'tis common; all that live must die;

Passing through nature to eternity.

Ham. Ay, madam, it is common.

Queen. If it be,

Why seems it so particular with thee?

Ham. Seems, madam! nay, it is I know not seems.

'Tis not alone my inky cloak, good mother,
Nor customary suits of solemn black,
Nor windy suspiration of forc'd breath,
No, nor the fruitful river in the eye,
Nor the dejected haviour of the visage,
Together with all forms, modes, shows of grief,
That can denote me truly: These, indeed,
seem,

For they are actions that a man might play:
But I have that within, which passeth show—
These, but the trappings and the suits of woe.

King. 'Tis sweet and commendable in your nature, Hamlet,

To give these mourning duties to your father:

* Wandering.

† Proof.

‡ Grief.

§ Bonds.

* Way-path

† Kin is the Teutonick word for ‡ Dejected eyes.

But, you must know, your father lost a father ;
That father lost his ; and the survivor bound
In filial obligation, for some term
To do obsequious sorrow : But to persevere
In obstinate condolement, is a course
Of impious stubbornness ; 'tis unmanly grief :
It shows a will most incorrect to heaven ;
A heart unfortified, or mind impatient ;
An understanding simple and unschool'd ;
For what we know must be, and is as common

As any the most vulgar thing to sense,
Why should we, in our peevish opposition,
Take it to heart ? Fie ! 'Tis a fault to heaven.
A fault against the dead, a fault to nature,
To reason most absurd ; whose common theme
Is death of fathers, and who still hath cried,
From the first corse, till he that died to-day,
This must be so. We pray you, throw to earth
This unprevailing woe ; and think of us
As of a father : for let the world take note,
You are the most immediate to our throne ;
And, with no less nobility of love,
Than that which dearest father bears his son,
Do I impart toward you. For your intent
In going back to school in Wittenberg,
It is most retrograde * to our desire ;
And, we beseech you, bend you to remain
Here, in the cheer and comfort of our eye,
Our chiefest courtier, cousin, and our son.

Queen. Let not thy mother lose her prayers,
Hamlet ;
I pray thee, stay with us ; go not to Wittenberg.
Ham. I shall in all my best obey you, na-
dam.

King. Why, 'tis a loving and a fair reply ;
Be as ourself in Denmark.—Madam, come ;
This gentle and unforc'd accord of Hamlet
Sits smiling to my heart : in grace whereof,
No jocund health that Denmark drinks to-day,
But the great cannon to the clouds shall tell,
And the king's rouse† the heaven shall bruit‡
again,

Re-speaking earthly thunder. Come away.
[*Exeunt KING, QUEEN, Lords, &c. POLO-
NIUS, and LAERTES.*]

Ham. Oh ! that this too too solid flesh would Thaw, and resolve § itself into a dew ! [melt,
Or that the Everlasting had not fix'd [God !
His canon || 'gainst self-slaughter !—O God ! O
How weary, stale, flat, and unprofitable
Seem to me all the uses of this world !
Fie on't ! O fie ! 'tis an unweeded garden,
That grows to seed ; things rank and gross in nature

Possess it merely. ¶ That it should come to this !

That he might not beteem †† the winds of hea-

Must I remember ? why, she would hang on him,
As if increase of appetite had grown
By what it fed on : And yet, within a month,— Let me not think on't ;—Frailty, thy name is woman !—

A little month : or ere those shoes were old,
With which she follow'd my poor father's body,
Like Niobe, all tears ;—why she, even she,— O heaven ! a beast, that wants discourse of reason,

Would have mourn'd longer,—married with my
uncle,
My father's brother ; but no more like my father,

Than I to Hercules : Within a month,
Ere yet the salt of most unrighteous tears
Had left the flushing in her galled eyes,
She married :—O most wicked speed, to post
With such dexterity to incestuous sheets !

It is not, nor it cannot come to, good.—
But break, my heart ; for I must hold my tongue !

Enter HORATIO, BERNARDO, and MARCELLUS.

Hor. Hail to your lordship !

Ham. I am glad to see you well :

vant ever.

And what make you from Wittenberg, Hora-
Marcellus ?

Mar. My good lord,—

Ham. I am very glad to see you ; good even,
Sir.—

But what, in faith, make you from Wittenberg ?

Hor. A truant disposition, good my lord.

Ham. I would not hear your enemy say so :
Nor shall you do mine ear that violence,
To make it trust of your own report
Against yourself : I know you are no truant.
But what is your affair in Elsinore ?

We'll teach you to drink deep ere you depart

Hor. My lord, I came to see your father's funeral.

Ham. I pray thee, do not mock me, fellow student ;

I think, it was to see my mother's wedding.

Hor. Indeed, my lord, it follow'd hard upon.

Ham. Thrift, thrift, Horatio ! the funeral bak'd meats *

Did coldly furnish forth the marriage tables.
'Would I had met my dearest † foe in heaven
Or ever I had seen that day, Horatio !—
My father,—Methinks, I see my father.

Hor. Where,

My lord ?

Ham. In my mind's eye, Horatio.

Hor. I saw him once, he was a goodly king.

Ham. He was a man, take him for all in all,
I shall not look upon his like again.

Hor. My lord, I think I saw him yesternight.

Ham. Saw ! who ?

Hor. My lord, the king your father.

Ham. The king my father ?

Hor. Season your admiration for a while
With an attent ‡ ear ; till I may deliver,
Upon the witness of these gentlemen,
This marvel to you.

Ham. For God's love, let me hear.

Hor. Two nights together had these gentle-
men,
Marcellus and Bernardo, on their watch,
In the dead waist and middle of the night,
Been thus encounter'd. A figure like your father,
Armed at point, exactly, cap-a-pé,
Appears before them, and, with solemn march,
Goes slow and stately by them : thrice he walk'd

By their oppress'd and fear-surprized eyes,
Within his truncheon's length ; whilst they,
distill'd

Almost to jelly with the act of fear,
Stand dumb, and speak not to him. This to me
In dreadful secrecy impart they did ;
And I with them, the third night, kept the watch ;

Where, as they had deliver'd, both in time,
Form of the thing, each word made true and
good,

The apparition comes : I knew your father ;
These hands are not more like.

Ham. But where was this ?

Hor. My lord, upon the platform where we watch'd.

Ham. Did you not speak to it ?

But answer made it none : yet once, methought,
It lifted up its head, and did address

Ham. Arm'd, say you ?

All. Arm'd, my lord.

Ham. From top to toe ?

All. My lord, from head to foot.

Ham. Then saw you not
His face.

Hor. O yes, my lord ; he wore his beaver *
up.

Ham. What, look'd he frowningly ?

Hor. A countenance more
In sorrow than in anger.

Ham. Pale, or red ?

Hor. Nay, very pale.

Ham. And fix'd his eyes upon you ?

Hor. Most constantly.

Ham. I would I had been there.

Hor. It would have much amaz'd you.

Ham. Very like,

Very like : Stay'd it long ?

Hor. While one with moderate haste might tell a hundred.

Mar. Ber. Longer, longer.

Hor. Not when I saw it.

Ham. His beard was grizzl'd ? no ?

Hor. It was, as I have seen it in his life,
A sable silver'd.

Ham. I will watch to-night :
Perchance, 'twill walk again.

Hor. I warrant it will.

Ham. If it assume my noble father's person,
I'll speak to it, though hell itself should gape,
And bid me hold my peace. I pray you all,
If you have hitherto conceal'd this sight,
Let it be tenable in your silence still ;
And whatsoever else shall hap to-night,
Give it an understanding, but no tongue :
I will requite your loves : So, fare you well :
Upon the platform, 'twixt eleven and twelve,
I'll visit you.

All. Our duty to your honour.

Ham. Your loves, as mine to you : Farewell.
[Exeunt HORATIO, MARCELLUS, and BEN-NARDO.]

My father's spirit in arms ! all is not well ;
I doubt some foul play : 'would, the night were
come !
Till then, sit still, my soul : Foul deeds will rise (Though all the earth o'erwhelm them) to men's eyes. [Exit.]

SCENE III.—A Room in POLONIUS' House.

Enter LAERTES and OPHELIA.

Laer. My necessities are embark'd ; farewell :
And, sister, as the winds give benefit,
And convoy is assistant, do not sleep,
But let me hear from you.

Op'h. Do you doubt that ?

Laer. For Hamlet, and the trifling of his fa-
Held it a fashion, and a toy in blood ; [your,
A violet in the youth of primy nature,
Forward, not permanent, sweet, not lasting,
The perfume and suppliance of a minute ;
No more.

Op'h. No more but so ?

Laer. Think it no more :
For nature, crescent, † does not grow alone
In thews, ‡ and bulk ; but, as this temple waxes,
The inward service of the mind and soul
Grows wide withal. Perhaps, he loves you now ;

* That part of the helmet which may be lifted up.
† increasing. ‡ sinews.

And now no soil, nor cautel, * doth besmirch †
The virtue of his will : but, you must fear,
His greatness weigh'd, his will is not his own ;
For he himself is subject to his birth :
He may not, as unvalued persons do,
Carve for himself ; for on his choice depends
The safety and the health of the whole state ;
And therefore must his choice be circumscrib'd
Unto the voice and yielding of that body, Whereof he is the head : Then if he says he loves you,

It fits your wisdom so far to believe it,
As he in his particular act and place
May give his saying deed ; which is no further,
Than the main voice of Denmark goes withal.
Then weigh what loss your honour may sus-tain,

If with too credent ‡ ear you list § his songs ;
Or lose your heart : or your chaste treasure open
To his unmaster'd ¶ importunity.
Fear it, Ophelia, fear it, my dear sister ;
And keep you in the rear of your affection,
Out of the shot and danger of desire.
The chariest ¶ maid is prodigal enough,
If she unmask her beauty to the moon :
Virtue itself scapes not calumnious strokes :
The canker galls the infants of the spring,
Too oft before their buttons be disclos'd ;
And in the morn and liquid dew of youth
Contagious blastments are most imminent.
Be wary then : best safety lies in fear ;
Youth to itself rebels, though none else near.

Op'h. I shall the effect of this good lesson
keep,

As watchman to my heart : But, good my brother,
Do not, as some ungracious pastors do,
Show me the steep and thorny way to heaven ;
Whilst, like a puff'd and and reckless  libertine,
Himself the primrose path of dalliance treads,
And recks not his own read. ††

Laer. O fear me not.

I stay too long ;—But here my father comes.

Enter POLONIUS.

A double blessing is a double grace ;
Occasion smiles upon a second leave.

Pol. Yet here, Laertes ! aboard, aboard, for
shame ;

The wind sits in the shoulder of your sail,
And you are staid for : (n) There,—my blessing
with you ;

[Laying his Hand on LAERTES' Head.]
And these few precepts in thy memory
Look thou character. ‡‡ Give thy thoughts no
tongue,

Nor any unproportion'd thought his act.
Be thou familiar, but by no means vulgar.
The friends thou hast, and their adoption tried,
Grapple them to thy soul with hooks of steel ;
But do not dull thy palm §§ with entertainment
Of each new-hatch'd, unfledg'd comrade. Beware

Of entrance to a quarrel : but, being in,
Bear it that the opposer may beware of thee,
Give every man thine ear, but few thy voice :
Take each man's censure, ||| but reserve thy
judgment.

Costly thy habit as thy purse can buy,
But not express'd in fancy ; rich, not gaudy :
For the apparel oft proclaims the man ;
And they in France, of the best rank and station, [that.]

Are most select and generous, ¶¶ chief  in Neither a borrower, nor a lender be ;
For loan oft loses both itself and friend ;
And borrowing dulls the edge of husbandry. †††

* Subtlety, deceit. † Discolour.
‡ Believing. § Listen to. ¶ Licentious.
¶ Most cautious.  Careless. †† Regards not

|| Opinion. ¶¶ Noble.  Chiefly.

(n) The lines following this are usually omitted ; but they contain a compact richness of instruction deserving attention in public, and perusal in private.

This above all,—To thine ownself be true;
And it must follow, as the night the day,
Thou canst not then be false to any man.
Farewell; my blessing season * this in thee!

Laer. Most humble do I take my leave, my lord.

Pol. The time invites you; go, your servants tend.†

Laer. Farewell, Ophelia; and remember well
What I have said to you.

Oph. 'Tis in memory lock'd,
And you yourself shall keep the key of it.

Laer. Farewell. [Exit LAERTES.]

Pol. What is't, Ophelia, he hath said to you?

Oph. So please you, something touching the lord Hamlet.

Pol. Marry, well bethought:

'Tis told me, he hath very oft of late
Given private time to you; and you yourself
Have of your audience been most free and bounteous,

If it be so, (as so 'tis put on me,
And that in way of caution,) I must tell you,
You do not understand yourself so clearly,
As it behoves my daughter and your honour:
What is between you? give me up the truth.

Oph. He hath, my lord, of late, made many
Of his affection to me. [tenders]

Pol. Affection? puh! you speak like a green girl,

Unsifted‡ in such perilous circumstance.

Do you believe his tenders, as you call them?

Oph. I do not know, my lord, what I should think.

Pol. Marry, I'll teach you: think yourself a baby;

That you have ta'en these tenders for true pay,
Which are not sterling. Tender yourself more dearly;

Or (not to crack the wind of the poor phrase, Wrangling it thus,) you'll tender me a fool.

Oph. My lord he hath importun'd me with love,
In honourable fashion. §

Pol. Ay, fashion you may call it; go to, go to.

Oph. And hath given countenance to his speech, my lord,
With almost all the holy vows of heaven.

Pol. Ay, springes to catch woodcocks. I do know,

When the blood burns, how prodigal the soul
Lends the tongue vows: these blazes, daughter,
Giving more light than heat,—extinct in both,
Even in their promise, as it is a making,—
You must not take for fire. From this time,
Be somewhat scantier of your maiden presence;
Set your entreatments || at a higher rate,
Than a command to parley. For lord Hamlet,
Believe so much in him, That he is young;
And with a larger tether ¶ may he walk,
Then may be given you: In few, Ophelia,
Do not believe his vows; for they are brokers, **
Not of that die which their investments show,
But mere implorators †† of unholy suits,
Breathing like sanctified and pious bonds,
The better to beguile. This is for all,—
I would not, in plain terms, from this time forth,

Have you so slander any moment's leisure,
As to give words or talk with the lord Hamlet.
Look to't, I charge you; come your ways.

Oph. I shall obey, my lord. [Exit.]

SCENE IV.—The Platform.

Enter HAMLET, HORATIO, and MARCELLUS.

Ham. The air bites shrewdly; it is very cold.

Hor. It is a nipping and an eager ‡‡ air.

Ham. What hour now?

Hor. I think it lacks of twelve.

Mar. No, it is struck.

Hor. Indeed? I heard it not; it then draws near the season,

Wherein the spirit held is wont to walk.

[A Flourish of Trumpets, and Ordnance shot off, within.]

What does this mean, my lord?

Ham. The king doth wake to-night, and takes his rouse, *

Keeps wassel,† and the swaggering upsprung reels; ‡

And, as he drains his draughts of Rhenish down,
The kettle-drum and trumpet thus bray out
The triumph of his pledge.

Hor. Is it a custom?

Ham. Ay, marry, is't:

But to my mind,—though I am native here,
And to the manner born,—it is a custom
More honour'd in the breach, than the observance.

This heavy-headed revel, east and west,
Makes us traduc'd, and tax'd of other nations:
They clepe § us, drunkards, and with swinish phrase

Soil our addition; and, indeed it takes
From our achievements, though perform'd at height,

The pith and marrow of our attribute.

So, oft it chances in particular men,
That, for some vicious mode of nature in them,
As, in their birth, (wherein they are not guilty, Since nature cannot choose his origin,)

By the o'ergrowth of some complexion, ||
Oft breaking down the pales and forts of reason;

Or by some habit, that too much o'er-leavens
The form of plausible manners;—that these men,—

Carrying, I say, the stamp of one defect;
Being nature's livery, or fortune's star,—
Their virtues else (be they as pure as grace,
As infinite as man may undergo,)

Shall in the general censure take corruption
From that particular fault: The dram of base
Doth all the noble substance often dout, ¶
To his own scandal.

Enter GHOST.

Hor. Look, my lord, it comes!

Ham. Angels and ministers of grace defend
us!—

Be thou a spirit of health, or goblin damn'd,
Bring with thee airs from heaven, or blasts from
hell,

Be thy intents wicked, or charitable,
Thou com'st in such a questionable  shape,
That I will speak to thee: I'll call thee, Hamlet,
King, father, royal Dane: O answer me:

Let me not burst in ignorance! but tell,
Why thy canoniz'd bones, hearsed in death,
Have burst their cerements! why the sepulchre,
Wherein we saw thee quietly in-urn'd,

Hath op'd his ponderous and marble jaws,
To cast thee up again! What may this mean,
That thou, dead corse, again, in complete steel,
Revisit'st thus the glimpses of the moon,
Making night hideous; and we fools of nature

So horribly to shake our disposition, ††
With thoughts beyond the reaches of our souls?

Say, why is this? wherefore? what should we
do?

Hor. It beckons you to go away with it,
As if it some impartment did desire
To you alone.

Mar. Look, with what courteous action
It waves you to a more removed ‡‡ ground:
But do not go with it.

Hor. No, by no means.

Ham. It will not speak; then I will follow it.

Hor. Do not, my lord.

Ham. Why, what should be the fear?
I do not set my life at a pin's fee; §§

And, for my soul, what can it do to that,
Being a thing immortal as itself?
It waves me forth again;—I'll follow it.

Hor. What if it tempt you toward the flood,
my lord,
Or to the dreadful summit of the cliff,
That beetles * o'er his base into the sea,
And there assume some other horrible form,
Which might deprive your sovereignty of reason,

And draw you into madness?—think of it;
The very place puts toys † of desperation,
Without more motive, into every brain,
That looks so many fathoms to the sea,
And hears it roar beneath.

Ham. It waves me still:—
Go on, I'll follow thee.

Mar. You shall not go, my lord.

Ham. Hold off your hands.

Hor. Be rul'd, you shall not go.

Ham. My fate cries out,
And makes each petty artery in this body
As hardy as the Nemean lion's nerve.—

[GHOST beckons.

Still am I call'd;—unhand me, gentlemen;—

[Breaking from them.

By heaven, I'll make a ghost of him that lets ‡
I say, away:—Go on, I'll follow thee. [me:—

[Exeunt GHOST and HAMLET.

Hor. He waxes desperate with imagination.

Mar. Let's follow: 'tis not fit thus to obey
him.

Hor. Have after:—To what issue will this
come?

Mar. Something is rotten in the state of Denmark.

Hor. Heaven will direct it.

Mar. Nay, let's follow him. [Exeunt.

SCENE V.—A more remote part of the Platform.

Re-enter GHOST and HAMLET.

Ham. Whither wilt thou lead me? Speak:
I'll go no further.

Ghost. Mark me.

Ham. I will.

Ghost. My hour is almost come,
When I to sulphurous and tormenting flames
Must render up myself.

Ham. Alas, poor ghost!

Ghost. Pity me not, but lend thy serious hearing
To what I shall unfold.

Ham. Speak, I am bound to hear.

Ghost. So art thou to revenge, when thou shalt hear.

Ham. What?

Ghost. I am thy father's spirit;
Doom'd for a certain term to walk the night;
And, for the day, confin'd to fast in fires, (n)
Till the foul crimes, done in my days of nature,
Are burn'd and purg'd away. But that I am
To tell the secrets of my prison-house, [forbid
I could a tale unfold, whose lightest word
Would harrow up thy soul; freeze thy young blood; [spheres;

Make thy two eyes, like stars, start from their
Thy knotted and combined locks to part,
Like quills upon the fretful porcupine:
But this eternal blazon ‡ must not be
To ears of flesh and blood:—List, list, oh! list—
If thou didst ever thy dear father love,—

Ham. O heaven!

Ghost. Revenge his foul and most unnatural murder.

Ham. Murder?

Ghost. Murder most foul, as in the best it is;
But this most foul, strange, and unnatural.

Ham. Haste me to know it; that I, with wings as swift

As meditation, or the thoughts of love,
May sweep to my revenge.

Ghost. I find thee apt;
And duller shouldst thou be than the fat weed
That rots itself in ease on Lethe wharf. [hear:
Wouldst thou not stir in this. Now Hamlet,
'Tis given out, that, sleeping in mine orchard, *
A serpent stung me; so the whole ear of Denmark is by a forged process of my death [mark
Rankly abus'd: but know, thou noble youth,
The serpent that did sting thy father's life,
Now wears his crown.

Ham. O my prophetic soul! my uncle!

Ghost. Ay, that incestuous, that adulterate beast,

With witchcraft of his wit, with traitorous gifts,
(O wicked wit, and gifts, that have the power
So to seduce †) won to his shameful lust
The will of my most seeming virtuous queen:
O Hamlet, what a falling-off was there!
From me whose love was of that dignity,
That it went hand in hand even with the vow
I made to her in marriage; and to decline
Upon a wretch, whose natural gifts were poor
To those of mine!

But virtue, as it never will be mov'd,
Though lewdness court it in a shape of heaven;
So lust, though to a radiant angel link'd,
Will satiate ‡ itself in a celestial bed,
And prey on garbage.

But, soft! methinks I scent the morning air;
Brief let me be:—Sleeping within mine or-
My custom always of the afternoon, [chard,
Upon my secure hour thy uncle stole,
With juice of cursed hebenon † in a vial,
And in the porches of mine ears did pour
The leperous distilment; whose effect
Holds such an enmity with blood of man,
That, swift as quicksilver, it courses through
The natural gates and alleys of the body;
And, with a sudden vigour, it doth posset
And curd, like eager droppings into milk,
The thin and wholesome blood: so did it mine,
And a most instant tetter ‡ bark'd about,
Most laraz †-like, with vile and loathsome crust,
All my smooth body.

Thus was I, sleeping, by a brother's hand,
Of life, of crown, of queen, at once despatch'd: †

Cut off even in blossoms of my sin,
Unhousel'd,  unanointed, unanel'd: ††
No reckoning made, but sent to my account
With all my imperfections on my head:
O horrible! O horrible! most horrible! (n)
If thou hast nature in thee, bear it not;
Let not the royal bed of Denmark be
A couch for luxury and damned incest.
But, howsoever thou pursu'st this act,
Taint not thy mind, nor let thy soul contrive
Against thy mother aught: leave her to heav'n,
And to those thorns that in her bosom lodge,
To prick and sting her. Fare thee well at once!

The glow-worm shows the matin to be near,
And 'gins to pale his uneffectual fire:

Adieu, adieu, adieu! remember me. [Exit.

Ham. O all you host of heaven! O earth!
What else?

And shall I couple hell?—O fie!—Hold, hold,
my heart;

And you, my sinews, grow not instant old,
But bear me stiffly up!—Remember thee?
Ay, thou poor ghost, while memory holds a

Your visitation shall receive such thanks
As fits a king's remembrance.

Ros. Both your majesties
Might, by the sovereign power you have of us,
Put your dread pleasures more into command
Than to entreaty.

Gull. But we both obey;
And here give up ourselves, in the full bent,*
To lay our service freely at your feet,
To be commanded.

King. Thanks, Rosencrantz, and gentle Guildenstern.

Queen. Thanks, Guildenstern, and gentle Rosencrantz:
And I beseech you instantly to visit
My too much changed son.—Go, some of you,
And bring these gentlemen where Hamlet is.

Gull. Heavens make our presence and our practices
Pleasant and helpful to him!

Queen. Ay, amen!

[Exeunt ROSENCRANTZ, GUILDENSTERN, and some Attendants.]

Enter POLONIUS.

Pol. The ambassadors from Norway, my good lord,
Are joyfully return'd.

King. Thou still hast been the father of good news.

Pol. Have I, my lord? Assure you, my good liege,
I hold my duty, as I hold my soul,
Both to my God, and to my gracious king:
And I do think, (or else this brain of mine
Hunts not the trail† of policy so sure
As it hath us'd to do,) that I have found
The very cause of Hamlet's lunacy.

King. Oh! speak of that; that I do long to hear.

Pol. Give first admittance to the ambassadors;
My news shall be the fruit‡ to that great feast.

King. Thyself do grace to them, and bring them in. [Exit POLONIUS.]

He tells me, my dear Gertrude, he hath found
The head and source of all your son's distemper.

Queen. I doubt, it is no other but the main;
His father's death, and our o'erhasty marriage.

Re-enter POLONIUS, with VOLTIMAND and CORNELIUS.

King. Well, we shall sift him.—Welcome, my good friends! [way?]

Say, Voltimand, what from our brother Norway.

Volt. Most fair return of greetings and desires.
Upon our first, he sent out to suppress
His nephew's levies; which to him appear'd
To be a preparation 'gainst the Polack;§
But, better look'd into, he truly found
It was against your highness: Whereat griev'd,—
That so his sickness, age, and impotence,
Was falsely borne in hand,|| sends out arrests
On Fortinbras, which he, in brief, obeys;
Receives rebuke from Norway, and, in fine,
Makes vow before his uncle, never more
To give the assay of arms against your majesty.
Whereon old Norway, overcome with joy,
Gives him three thousand crowns in annual fee;
And his commission to employ those soldiers,
So levied as before, against the Polack;
With an entreaty, herein further shown,

[Gives a Paper.]
That it might please you to give quiet pass
Through your dominions for this enterprise;
—On such regards of safety, and allowance,
As therein are set down.

King. It likes us well:
And, at our more consider'd time, we'll read,
Answer, and think upon this business.
Meantime, we thank you for your well-took labour:

* Utmost exertion.
† Poland.

‡ Sent.
§ Imposed on.

‡ Desert.

Go to your rest; at night we'll feast together:
Most welcome home!

[Exeunt VOLTIMAND and CORNELIUS.]

Pol. This business is well ended.
My liege, and madam, to expostulate*
What majesty should be, what duty is,
Why day is day, night night, and time is time,
Were nothing but to waste night, day, and time.

Therefore,—since brevity is the soul of wit,
And tediousness the limbs and outward flourish,—

I will be brief: Your noble son is mad:
Mad call I it: for, to define true madness,
What is't, but to be nothing else but mad:
But let that go.

Queen. More matter, with less art.

Pol. Madam, I swear I use no art at all.

That he is mad, 'tis true: 'tis true, 'tis pity;
And pity 'tis, 'tis true: a foolish figure;
But farewell it, for I will use no art.

Mad let us grant him then: and now remains,
That we find out the cause of this defect;
Or, rather say, the cause of this defect;
For this effect, defective, comes by cause:
Thus it remains, and the remainder thus.
Perpend.

I have a daughter; have, while she is mine;
Who, in her duty and obedience, mark,
Hath given me this: Now gather and surmise.
—To the celestial, and my soul's idol, the most beautified Ophelia,—

That's an ill phrase, a vile phrase; beautified is a vile phrase; but you shall hear.—Thus:

In her excellent white bosom, these, &c.

Queen. Came this from Hamlet to her?

Pol. Good madam, stay awhile; I will be faithful.—

Doubt thou the stars are fire; [Reads.]

Doubt that the sun doth move:

Doubt truth to be a liar;

But never doubt I love.

*O dear Ophelia, I am ill at these numbers;
I have not art to reckon my groans; but that I love thee best, O most best, believe it.
Adieu.*

Thine evermore, most dear lady, whilst this machine is to him, Hamlet.

This, in obedience, hath my daughter shown me:
And more above, hath his solicitings,
As they fell out by time, by means, and place
All given to mine ear.

King. But how hath she Receiv'd his love?

Pol. What do you think of me?

King. As of a man faithful and honourable.

Pol. I would fain prove so. But what might
you think,

When I had seen this hot love on the wing,
(As I perceiv'd it, I must tell you that,
Before my daughter told me,) what might you,
Or my dear majesty your queen here, think,
If I had play'd the desk, or table-book,
Or given my heart a working, mute and dumb,
Or look'd upon this love with idle sight:
What might you think? no, I went round† to
work,

And my young mistress thus did I bespeak;
*Lord Hamlet is a prince out of thy sphere;
This must not be: and then I precepts gave*
her,

That she should lock herself from his resort,
Admit no messengers, receive no tokens.
Which done, she took the fruits of my advice;
And he, repulsed, (a short tale to make)
Fell into a sadness; then into a fast;
Thence to a watch; thence into a weakness;
Thence to a lightness; and, by this declension,
Into the madness wherein now he raves,
And all we mourn for.

* Discuss.

† Roundly, without reserve.

What forgeries you please; marry, none so rank

As may dishonour him; take heed of that;
But, Sir, such wanton, wild, and usual slips,
As are companions noted and most known
To youth and liberty.

Rey. As gaming, my lord.

Pol. Ay, or drinking, fencing, swearing, quarrelling,

Drabbing:—You may go so far.

Rey. My lord, that would dishonour him.

Pol. 'Faith, no; as you may season it in the charge.

You must not put another scandal on him,
That he is open to incontinency;
That's not my mending: but breathe his faults
so quaintly,

That they may seem the taints of liberty;
The flash and out-break of a fiery mind;
A savageness* in unreclaimed blood,
Of general assault.

Rey. But, my good lord,—

Pol. Wherefore should you do this?

Rey. Ay, my lord,
I would know that.

Pol. Marry, Sir, here's my drift;
And, I believe, it is a fetch of warrant:
You laying these slight sullies on my son,
As 'twere a thing a little soil'd i'the working,
Mark you,
Your party in converse, him you would sound,
Having ever seen in the prenominate† crimes,
The youth you breathe of guilty, he assur'd,
He closes with you in this consequence;
Good Sir, or so; or friend, or gentleman,—
According to the phrase, or the addition,
Of man, and country.

Rey. Very good, my lord.

Pol. And then, Sir, does he this,—He does—
What was I about to say?—By the mass, I was about to say something:—Where did I leave?

Rey. At, closes in the consequence.

Pol. At, closes in the consequence,—Ay, marry:

He closes with you thus:—*I know the gentle-
I saw him yesterday, or t'other day, [man;
Or then, or then; with such, or such; and,
as you say,*

There was he gaming; there o'ertook in his rouse;

*There falling out at tennis: or, perchance,
I saw him enter such a house of sale,
(Videlicet, ‡ a brothel,) or so forth.—*

See you now;

Your bait of falsehood takes this carp of truth:
And thus do we of wisdom and of reach,
With windlances, and with assays of bias,
By indirections find directions out;
So, by former lecture and advice,
Shall you, my son: You have me, have you not?

Rey. My lord, I have.

Pol. God be wi' you; fare you well.

Rey. Good my lord,—

Pol. Observe his inclination in yourself.

Rey. I shall, my lord.

Pol. And let him play his music.

Rey. Well, my lord. [Exit.

Enter OPHELIA.

Pol. Farewell!—How now, Ophelia? what's the matter?

Oph. O my lord, my lord, I have been so affrighted!

Pol. With what, in the name of heaven?

Oph. My lord, as I was sewing in my closet,

Lord Hamlet,—with his doublet all unbrac'd;
No hat upon his head; his stockings foul'd,
Unarter'd, and down-gyved § to his ankle;
Pale as his shirt; his knees knocking each other;
And with a look so piteous in purport,

As if he had been loosed out of hell,
To speak of horrors,—he comes before me.

Oph. My lord, I do not know;

But, truly, I do fear it.

Pol. What said he?

Oph. He took me by the wrist, and held me hard;

Then goes he to the length of all his arm;
And, with his other hand thus o'er his brow,
He falls to such perusal of my face,
As he would draw it. Long stay'd he so;
At last,—a little shaking of mine arm,
And thrice his head thus waving up and
down,—

He rais'd a sigh so piteous and profound,
As it did seem to shatter all his bulk,*
And end his being: That, done, he lets me go:
And, with his head over his shoulder turn'd,
He seem'd to find his way without his eyes;
For out o'doors he went without their helps,
And, to the last, bended their light on me.

Pol. Come, go with me; I will go seek the

I did repel his letters, and denied
His access to me.

SCENE II.—A Room in the Castle.

Enter KING, QUEEN, ROSENCRANTZ, GUILDEN-
STERN, and Attendants.

King. Welcome, dear Rosencrantz, and Guildenstern!

Moreover that we much did long to see you,
The need, we have to use you did provoke
Our hasty sending. Something have you heard
Of Hamlet's transformation; so I call it,
Since not the exterior nor the inward man
Resembles that it was: What it should be,
More than his father's death, that thus hath put
him

So much from the understanding of himself,
I cannot dream of: I entreat you both,

To draw him on to pleasures; and to gather,
So much as from occasion you may glean,
Whether aught, to us unknown, afflicts him thus,
That, open'd, lies within our remedy.

Queen. Good gentlemen, he hath much talk'd of you;

And sure I am, two men there are not living,
To whom he more adheres. If it will please

To show us so much gentry § and good-will,
As to expend your time with us a while,

Ros. What say you?

[To GUILDENSTERN.]

Ham. Nay, then I have an eye of you; [Aside.]—if you love me, hold not off.

Guil. My lord, we were sent for.

Ham. I will tell you why; so shall my anticipation prevent your discovery, and your secrecy to the king and queen moult no feather. I have of late (but, wherefore, I know not,) lost all my mirth, forgone all custom of exercises; and, indeed, it goes so heavily with my disposition, that this goodly frame, the earth, seems to me a steril promontory; this most excellent canopy, the air,—look you, this brave o'erhanging firmament, this majestical roof fretted with golden fire,—why, it appears no other thing to me, than a foul and pestilent congregation of vapours. What a piece of work is man! How noble in reason! how infinite in faculties! in form and moving, how express and admirable! in action, how like an angel! in apprehension, how like a god! the beauty of the world! the paragon of animals! And yet, to me, what is this quintessence of dust? man delights not me, nor woman neither; though, by your smiling, you seem to say so.

Ros. My lord, there is no such stuff in my thoughts.

Ham. Why did you laugh then, when I said, Man delights not me?

Ros. To think, my lord, if you delight not in man, what lenten* entertainment the players shall receive from you: we coted† them on the way; and hither are they coming, to offer you service.

Ham. he that plays the king, shall be welcome; his majesty shall have tribute of me: the adventurous knight shall use his foil, and target; the lover shall not sigh gratis; the humorous man shall end his part in peace; the clown shall make those laugh, whose lungs are tickled o'the sere‡ and the lady shall say her mind freely, or the blank verse shall halt for't, —What players are they?

Ros. Even those you were wont to take such delight in, the tragedians of the city.

Ham. How chanceth it, they travel?‡ their residence, both in reputation and profit, was better both ways.

Ros. I think their inhibition comes by the means of the late innovation.

Ham. Do they hold the same estimation they did when I was in the city? Are they so followed?

Ros. No, indeed they are not.

Ham. How comes it? Do they grow rusty?

Ros. Nay, their endeavour keeps in the wonted pace: But there is, Sir, an alergy of children, little eyases,§ that cry out on the top of question,|| and are most tyrannically clapped for't: these are now the fashion; and so berattle the common stages, (so they call them) that many, wearing rapiers, are afraid of goose quills, and dare scarce come thither.

Ham. What, are they children? who maintains them? how are they escoted?¶ Will they pursue the quality no longer than they can sing? will they not say afterwards, if they should grow themselves to common players, (as it is most like, if their means are no better,) their writers do them wrong, to make them exclaim against their own succession?

Ros. Faith, there has been much to do on both sides; and the nation holds it no sin, to tarre†† them on to controversy: there was, for a while, no money bid for argument, unless the poet and the player went to cuffs in the question.

Ham. Is it possible?

Guil. Oh! there has been much throwing about of brains.

Ham. Do the boys carry it away?

Ros. Ay, that they do, my lord; Hercules and his load too.*

Ham. It is not very strange: for my uncle is king of Denmark, and those that would make mouths at him while my father lived give twenty, forty, fifty, a hundred ducats a-piece, for his picture in little.† 'Sblood, there is something in this more than natural, if philosophy could find it out.

Come then: the apter-nance of welcome is fashion and ceremony: let me comply‡ with you in this garb; lest my extent to the players, which I tell you, must show fairly outward, should more appear like entertainment than yours. You are welcome: But my uncle-father, and aunt-mother, are deceived.

Guil. In what, my dear lord?

Ham. I am but mad north-north-west: when the wind is southerly, I know a hawk from a hand-saw.

Enter POLONIUS.

Pol. Well be with you, gentlemen!

Ham. Hark you, Guildenstern, and you too;—at each ear a hearer: that great baby, you see there, is not yet out of his swaddling-cloths.

Ros. Happily, he's the second time come to them; for, they say, an old man is twice a child.

Ham. I will prophesy he comes to tell me of the players: mark it.—You say right, Sir: o'Monday morning; 'twas then, indeed.

Pol. My lord, I have news to tell you.

Ham. My lord I have news to tell you; When Roscius was an actor in Rome,—

Pol. The actors are come hither, my lord.

Ham. Buz, buz!

Pol. Upon my honour,—

Ham. Then came each actor on his ass.—

For the law of writ,§ and the liberty, these are the only men.

Ham. O Jephthah, judge of Israel,—what a treasure hadst thou!

Pol. What a treasure had he, my lord?

Ham. Why—One fair daughter, and no more, The which he loved passing well.

Pol. Still on my daughter. [Aside.]

Ham. Am I not I'the right, old Jephthah?

Pol. If you call me Jephthah, my lord, I have a daughter, that I love passing well.

Pol. Not I, my lord.

Ham. Then I would you were so honest a goes, is to be one man picked out of ten thousand.

Pol. That's very true, my lord.

Ham. For if the sun breed maggots in a dead dog, being a god-kissing carrion,—Have you a daughter?

Pol. I have, my lord.

Ham. Let her not walk i'the sun : conception‡ is a blessing ; but as your daughter may conceive, § —friend, look to't.

Pol. How say you by that? [Aside.] Still harping on my daughter :—yet he knew me not at first ; he said, I was a fishmonger : He is far gone, far gone ; and truly, in my youth, I suffered much extremity for love ; very near this.
I'll speak to him again.—What do you read, my
lord?

Ham. Words, words, words!

Pol. What is the matter, my lord?

Ham. Between who?

Pol. I mean the matter that you read, my
lord.

Ham. Slanders, Sir : for the satirical rogue says here, that old men have grey beards ; that their faces are wrinkled ; their eyes purging thick amber, and plum-tree gum ; and that they have a plentiful lack of wit, together with most weak hams : All of which, Sir, though I most powerfully and potently believe, yet I hold it not honesty to have it thus set down ; for yourself, Sir, shall be as old as I am, if, like a crab, you could go backward.

Pol. Though this be madness, yet there's method in it. [Aside.] Will you walk out of, the air, my lord?

Ham. Into my grave?

Pol. Indeed, that is out o'the air.—How pregnant‡ sometimes his replies are! a happiness that often madness hits on, which reason and sanity¶ could not so prosperously be delivered of.

I will leave him, and suddenly contrive the means of meeting between him and my daughter.
—My honourable lord, I will most humbly take my leave of you.

Ham. You cannot, Sir, take from me any thing, that I will more willingly part withal ; except my life, except my life, except my life.

Pol. Fare you well, my lord.

Ham. These tedious old fools!

Enter ROSENCRANTZ and GUILDENSTERN.

Pol. You go to seek the lord Hamlet ; there he is.

Ros. God save you, Sir! [To POLONIUS.

[Exit POLONIUS.

Guil. My honour'd lord!—

Ros. My most dear lord!

Ham. My excellent good friends! How dost thou, Guildenstern? Ah! Rosencrantz! Good lads, how do ye both?

Ros. As the indifferent children of the earth.

Guil. Happy, in that we are not overhappy ;
On fortune's cap we are not the very button.

Ham. Nor the soles of her shoe?

Ros. Neither, my lord.

Ham. Then you live about her waist, or in the middle of her favours?

Guil. 'Faith her privates we.

Ham. In the secret parts of fortune? Oh! most true ; she is a strumpet. What news?

Ros. None, my lord ; but that the world is grown honest.

Ham. Then is doomsday near : But your news is not true. Let me question more in particular :
What have you, my good friends, deserved at the hands of fortune, that she sends you to prison
hither?

Guil. Prison, my lord!

Ham. Denmark's a prison.

Ros. Then is the world one.

Ham. A goodly one ; in which there are many confiners, wards, and dungeons ; Denmark being one of the worst.

Ros. We think not so, my lord.

Ham. Why, then 'tis none to you ; for there is nothing either good or bad, but thinking makes it so : to me it is a prison.

Ros. Why, then your ambition makes it one ;
'tis too narrow for your mind.

Ham. O God! I could be bounded in a nutshell, and count myself a king of infinite space ;
were it not that I have bad dreams.

Guil. Which dreams, indeed, are ambition ;
for the very substance of the ambitious is merely the shadow of a dream.

Ham. A dream itself is but a shadow.

Ros. Truly, and I hold ambition of so airy and light a quality, that it is but a shadow's shadow.

Ham. Then are our beggars, bodies ; and our monarchs and outstretch'd heroes the beggars' shadows : Shall we to the court? for, by my fay,
I cannot reason.

Ros. Guil. We'll wait upon you.

Ham. No such matter : I will not sort you with the rest of my servants ; for, to speak to you like an honest man, I am most dreadfully attended.
But, in the beaten way of friendship, what make you at Elsinore?

Ros. To visit you, my lord ; no other occasion.

Ham. Beggar that I am, I am even poor in thanks ; but I thank you : and sure, dear friends, my thanks are too dear, a halfpenny. Were you not sent for? Is it your own inclining? Is it a free visitation? Come, come : deal justly with me : come, come ; nay, speak.

Guil. What should we say, my lord?

Ham. Any thing—but to the purpose. You were sent for ; and there is a kind of confession in your looks, which your modesties have not craft enough to colour : I know, the good king and queen have sent for you.

1 Play. What speech, my lord?

Ham. I heard thee speak me a speech once, —but it was never acted; or, if it was, not above once: for the play, I remember, pleased not the million; 'twas caviare§ to the general:¶ but it was (as I received it, and others, whose judgments in such matters, cried in the top¶ of mine,) an excellent play; well digested in the scenes, set down with as much modesty as cunning. I remember, one said there were no sallads in the lines, to make the matter savoury; nor no matter in the phrase, that might indite the author of affection:†† but called it, an honest method, as wholesome as sweet, and by very much more handsome than fine. One speech in it I chiefly loved: 'twas Æneas' tale to Dido; and thereabout of it especially, where he speaks of Priam's slaughter: If it live in your memory, begin at this line; let me see, let me see;—

The rugged Pyrrhus, like the Hyrcanian beast—'tis not so; it begins with Pyrrhus.

The rugged Pyrrhus,—he, whose sable arms, Black as his purpose, did the night resemble When he lay couched in the ominous horse, Hath now this dread and black complexion smear'd

With heraldry more dismal; head to foot Now is he total gules; ‡‡ horribly trick'd §§ With blood of fathers, mothers, daughters, sons;

Bak'd and impasted with the parching streets, That lend a tyrannous and a damned light To their lord's murder: Roasted in wrath and fire,

And thus o'er-siz'd with congregate gore, With eyes like carbuncles, the hellish Pyrrhus

Old grandsire Priam seeks;—So proceed you.

Pol. 'Fore God, my lord, well spoken; with good accent, and good discretion.

1 Play. Anon he finds him

Striking too short at Greeks; his antique sword,

Rebellious to his arm, lies where it falls, Repugnant to command: Unequal match'd, Pyrrhus at Priam drives; in rage, strikes wide;

But with the whiff and wind of his fell sword The unnerved father falls. Then senseless Ilium,

Seeming to feel this blow, with flaming top Stoops to his base; and with a hideous crash Takes prisoner Pyrrhus' ear: for, lo! his sword,

Which was declining on the milky head Of reverend Priam, seem'd † the air to stick; So, as a painted tyrant, Pyrrhus stood; And, like a neutral to his will and matter, Did nothing.

But, as we often see, against some storm, A silence in the heavens, the rack ‡‡ stand still,

The bold winds speechless, and the orb below As hush as death: anon the dreadful thunder Doth rend the region: So, after Pyrrhus' pause,

A roused vengeance sets him new-a-work; And never did the Cyclops' hammers fall On Mars' armour, forg'd for proof eterne ¶¶

With less remorse than Pyrrhus' bleeding sword

Now falls on Priam!— [Gods

Out, out, thou strumpet, Fortune! All you

In general synod, take away her power;

Break all the spokes and fellyes from her wheel,

And bow the round nave down the hill of

Ham. It shall to the barber's, with your beard.—Pr'ythee, say on:—He's for a jig, or a tale of bawdry, or he sleeps:—say on: come to Hecuba.

1 Play. But who, ah woe! had seen the mobled* queen——

Ham. The mobled queen?

Pol. That's good; mobled queen is good.

1 Play. Run barefoot up and down, threat'ning the flames

Ham. 'Tis well; I'll have thee speak out the rest of this soon.—Good my lord, will you see the players well bestowed? Do you hear, let them be well used; for they are the abstract and brief chronicles of the time: After your death

you were better have a bad epitaph, than their ill report while you live.

Pol. My lord, I will use them according to their desert.

Ham. Odd's bodikin, man, much better:

Use every man after his desert, and who shall scape whipping? Use them after your own honour and dignity: The less they deserve,

the more merit is in your bounty. Take them in.

Pol. Come, Sirs.

1 Play. Ay, my lord.

Ham. We'll have it to-morrow night. You or sixteen lines, which I would set down, and

Oh! what a rogue and peasant slave am I!

Is it not monstrous that this player here,

But in a fiction, in a dream of passion,

Could force his soul so to his own conceit,

That, from her working, all his visage wann'd;

Tears in his eyes, distraction in's aspect,

A broken voice, and his whole function sultry

With forns to his conceit? And all for nothing!

For Hecuba!
 What's Hecuba to him, or he to Hecuba, [do,
 That he should weep for her? What would he Had he the motive and the cue for passion,
 'That I have? He would drown the stage with
 tears,
 And cleave the general ear with horrid speech;
 Make mad the guilty, and appal the free,
 Confound the ignorant, and amaze, indeed,
 The very faculties of eyes and ears.
 Yet I,
 A dull and muddy-mettled rascal, peak,
 Like John a-dreams, unpregnant of my cause,
 And can say nothing; no, not for a king,
 Upon whose property, and most dear life,
 A damn'd defeat * was made. Am I a coward?
 Who calls me villain? breaks my pate across?
 Plucks off my beard, and blows it in my face?
 'Tweaks me by the nose? gives me the lie i' the throat,
 As deep as to the lungs? Who does me this?
 Ha!
 Why, I should take it: for it cannot be,
 But I am pigeon-liver'd, and lack gall
 To make oppression bitter; or, ere this,
 I should have fatted all the region kites
 With this slave's offal: Bloody, bawdy villain!
 Remorseless, treacherous, lecherous, kindless, † villain!
 Why, what an ass am I? This is most brave;
 That I, the son of a dear father murder'd,
 Prompted to my revenge by heaven and hell,
 Must like a whore, unpack my heart with words,
 And fall a cursing, like a very drab,
 A scullion!
 Fie upon't! foh! About my brains! Humph!
 I have heard,
 That guilty creatures, sitting at a play,
 Have by the very cunning of the scene
 Been struck so to the soul, that presently
 They have proclaim'd their malefactions;
 For murder, though it have no tongue, will speak [players
 With most miraculous organ. I'll have these Play something like the murder of my father,
 Before mine uncle: I'll observe his looks;
 I'll tent him to the quick; ‡ if he do blench, §
 I know my course. The spirit that I have seen,
 May be a devil: and the devil hath power
 To assume a pleasing shape; yea, and, perhaps,
 Out of my weakness, and my melancholy,
 (As he is very potent with such spirits,)
 Abuses me to damn me: I'll have grounds
 More relative than this: The play's the thing,
 Wherein I'll catch the conscience of the king.

ACT III.

SCENE I.—A Room in the Castle.

Enter KING, QUEEN, POLONIUS, OPHELIA, ROSENCRANTZ, and GUILDENSTERN.

King. And can you, by no drift of conference,
 Get from him, why he puts on this confusion;
 Grating so harshly all his days of quiet
 With turbulent and dangerous lunacy?
 Ros. He does confess, he feels himself distracted;
 But from what cause he will by no means speak.
 Gull. Nor do we find him forward to be sounded;
 But, with a crafty madness, keeps aloof.
 When we would bring him on to some confession
 Of his true state.
 Queen. Did he receive you well?
 Ros. Most like a gentleman.

* Destruction.
 ‡ Search his wounds.

† Unnatural.
 § Shrink or start.

Gull. But with much forcing of his disposition.
 Ros. Niggard of question; but, of our demands
 Most free in his reply.
 Queen. Did you assay him
 To any pastime?
 Ros. Madam, it so fell out, that certain players
 We o'er-raught * on the way: of these we told
 him;
 And there did seem in him a kind of joy
 To hear of it: They are about the court;
 And, as I think, they have already order
 This night to play before him.
 Pol. 'Tis most true:
 And he beseech'd me to entreat your majesties,
 To hear and see the matter.
 King. With all my heart; and it doth much content me
 To hear him so inclin'd.
 Good gentlemen, give him a further edge,
 And drive his purpose on to these delights.
 Ros. We shall, my lord.
 [Exit ROSENCRANTZ and GUILDENSTERN
 King. Sweet Gertrude, leave us too:
 For we have closely sent for Hamlet hither;
 That he, as 'twere by accident, may here
 Affront † Ophelia:
 Her father, and myself (lawful espials, ‡)
 Will so bestow ourselves, that, seeing, unseen,
 We may of their encounter frankly § judge;
 And gather by him, as he is behav'd,
 If't be the affliction of his love, or no,
 That thus he suffers for.
 Queen. I shall obey you:
 And, for your part, Ophelia, I do wish
 That your good beauties be the happy cause Of Hamlet's wildness: so shall I hope, your virtues
 Will bring him to his wonted way again,
 To both your honours.
 Oph. Madam, I wish it may. [Exit QUEEN.
 Pol. Ophelia, walk you here:—Gracious, so
 please you,
 We will bestow ¶ ourselves:—Read on this book:
 [To OPHELIA.
 That show of such an exercise may colour
 Your loneliness.—We are oft to blame in this,—
 'Tis too much prov'd, ¶ that, with devotion's visage,
 And pious action, we do sugar o'er
 The devil himself.
 King. Oh! 'tis too true: how smart
 A lash that speech doth give my conscience!
 The harlot's cheek, beautified with plastering
 art,
 Is not more ugly to the thing that helps it,
 Than is my deed to my most painted word:
 O heavy burden! [Aside.
 Pol. I hear him coming; let's withdraw, my lord. [Exit KING and POLONIUS.

Enter HAMLET.

Ham. To be, or not to be, that is the question:—
 Whether 'tis nobler in the mind, to suffer
 The slings and arrows of outrageous fortune;
 Or to take arms against a sea of troubles,
 And, by opposing, end them?—To die—to sleep,—
 No more;—and, by a sleep, to say we end
 The heart-ache, and the thousand natural shocks
 That flesh is heir to,—'tis a consummation
 Devoutly to be wish'd. To die—to sleep;—
 To sleep! perchance to dream;—ay, there's the rub; [come,
 For in that sleep of death what dreams may
 When we have shuffled of this mortal coil, **
 Must give us pause: There's the respect ††
 That makes calamity of so long life:

* Overtook. † Meet. ‡ Spies.
 § Freely. ¶ Place. ¶ Too frequent
  Stir, bustle. †† Consideration.

For who would bear the whips and scorns of time,
The oppressor's wrong, the proud man's contumely,*

The pangs of despis'd love, the law's delay,
The insolence of office, and the spurns
That patient merit of the unworthy takes,
When he himself might his quietus† make
With a bare bodkin‡; who would fardels§

bear,
To groan and sweat under a weary life,
But that the dread of something after death,—
That undiscover'd country, from whose bourn||
No traveller returns,—puzzles the will,
And makes us rather bear those ills we have,
Than fly to others that we know not of?
Thus conscience does make cowards of us all;
And thus the native hue of resolution
Is sicklied o'er with the pale cast of thought;
And enterprises of great pith and moment,
With this regard, their currents turn awry,
And lose the name of action.—Soft you, now!
The fair Ophelia:—Nymph, in thy orisons¶
Be all my sins remember'd.

Oph. Good my lord,
How does your honour for this many a day?

Ham. I humbly thank you; well.

Oph. My lord, I have remembrances of your's

That I have longed long to re-deliver;
I pray you, now receive them.

Ham. No, not I;
I never gave you aught.

Oph. My honour'd lord, you know right well you did;
And, with them, words of so sweet breath com-
pos'd [lost,

As made the things more rich: their perfume
Take these again: for to the noble mind,
Rich gifts wax poor, when givers prove unkind.
There, my lord.

Ham. Ha, ha! are you honest?

Oph. My lord?

Ham. Are you fair?

Oph. What means your lordship?

Ham. That if you be honest, and fair, you should admit no discourse to your beauty.

Oph. Could beauty, my lord, have better commends than with honesty?

Ham. Ay, truly; for the power of beauty will sooner transform honesty from what it is to a bawd, than the force of honesty can translate beauty into his likeness: this was sometime a paradox, but now the time gives it proof. I did love you once.

Oph. Indeed, my lord, you made me believe
so.

Ham. You should not have believed me; for virtue cannot so inoculate our old stock, but we shall relish of it: I loved you not.

Oph. I was the more deceived.

Ham. Get thee to a nunnery; Why wouldst thou be a breeder of sinners? I am myself indifferent honest; but yet I could accuse me of such things, that it were better my mother had not borne me: I am very proud, revengeful, ambitious; with more offences at my beck,
than I have thoughts to put them in, imagination to give them shape, or time to act them in:
What should such fellows as I do crawling between earth and heaven! We are arrant knaves, all; believe none of us: Go thy ways to a nunnery. Where's your father?

Oph. At home, my lord.

Ham. Let the doors be shut upon him; that he may play the fool no where but in's own house. Farewell.

Oph. O help him, you sweet heavens!

Ham. If thou dost marry, I'll give thee this plague for thy dowry; Be thou as chaste as ice, as pure as snow, thou shalt not escape calumny.

Get thee to a nunnery; farewell: Or, if thou wilt needs marry, marry a fool; for wise men know well enough, what monsters you make of them. To a nunnery, go; and quickly too
Farewell.

Oph. Heavenly powers, restore him!

Ham. I have heard of your paintings too, well enough; God hath given you one face, and you make yourselves another: you jig, you amble, and you lisp, and nick-name God's creatures,
and make your wantonness your ignorance: Go to: I'll no more oft; it hath made me mad. I say, we will have no more marriages: those that are married already, all but one, shall live;
the rest shall keep as they are. To a nunnery,
go. [Exit HAMLET.

Oph. Oh! what a noble mind is here o'er-thrown! [sword:
The courtier's, soldier's, scholar's, eye, tongue,
The expectancy and rose of the fair state,
The glass of fashion, and the mould* of form,
The observ'd of all observers! quite, quite
down!

And I, of ladies most deject and wretched,
That suck'd the honey of his music vows,
Now see that noble and most sovereign reason,
Like sweet bells jangled, out of tune and harsh;
That unmatch'd form and feature of blown
youth,

Blasted with ecstasy: + O woe is me!
To have seen what I have seen, see what I see.

Re-enter KING and POLONIUS.

King. Love! his affections do not that way
tend;

Nor what he spake, though it lack'd form a little,
Was not like madness. There's something in his
soul,

O'er which his melancholy sits on brood;
And, I do doubt, the hatch, and the disclose,
Will be some danger: Which for to prevent,
I have, in quick determination,
Thus set it down; He shall, with speed to England,

For the demand of our neglected tribute:
Haply, the seas, and countries different,
With variable objects, shall expel
This something-settled matter in his heart;
Whereon his brains still beating, puts him thus
From fashion of himself. What think you
on't?

Pol. It shall do well; But yet I do believe
The origin and commencement of his grief
Sprung from neglected love.—How now, Ophelia?

He! You need not tell us what lord Hamlet said;
We heard it all.—My lord, do as you please;
But, if you hold it fit, after the play,
Let his queen mother all alone entreat him
To show his grief; let her be round† with him;
And I'll be plac'd, so please you, in the ear
Of all their conference; if she find him not,
To England send him; or confine him, where Your wisdom best shall think.

King. It shall be so:
Madness in great ones must not unwatch'd go.

SCENE II.—A Hall in the same.

Enter HAMLET, and certain PLAYERS.

Ham. Speak the speech, I pray you, as I pronounced it to you, trippingly on the tongue:
but if you mouth it, as many of our players do,
I had as lief the town-crier spoke my lines.
Nor do not saw the air too much with your hand, thus; but use all gently; for in the very torrent, tempest, and (as I may say) whirlwind of your passion, you must acquire and beget a temperance, that may give it smoothness. O,

1 Play. I warrant your honour.

Ham. Be not too tame neither, but let your own discretion be your tutor: suit the action to the word, the word to the action; with this special observance, that you o'erstep not the modesty of nature: for any thing so overdone is from the purpose of playing, whose end both at the first and now, was and is, to hold, as 'twere, the mirror up to nature; to show virtue her own feature, scorn her own image, and the very age and body of the time, his form and pressure. ‡ Now, this, overdone, or come tardy off, though it make the unskilful laugh, cannot but make the judicious grieve; the censure of which one must, in your allowance, § o'erweigh a whole theatre of others. Oh! there be players, that I have seen play,—and heard others praise, and that highly—not to speak it profanely, that, neither having the accent of Christians, nor the gait of Christian, Pagan, nor man, have so strutted and bellowed, that I have thought some of nature's journeymen had made men, and not made them well, they imitated humanity so abominably,

1 Play. I hope we have reformed that indifferently with us.

Ham. O reform it altogether. And let those that play your clowns, speak no more than is set down for them: for there be of them, that will themselves laugh, to set on some quantity of barren spectators to laugh too; though, in the meantime, some necessary question || of the play be then to be considered: that's villainous; and shows a most pitiful ambition in the soul that uses it. Go, make you ready.

[Exeunt PLAYERS.]

Enter POLONIUS, ROSENCRANTZ, and GUILDENSTERN.

How now, my lord? will the king hear this piece of work?

Pol. And the queen too, and that presently.

Ham. Bid the players make haste.—

[Exit POLONIUS.

Will you two help to hasten them?

Both. Ay, my lord.

No, let the candied tongue lick absurd pomp, And crook the pregnant ¶ hinges of the knee, Where thrift may follow fawning. Dost thou hear?

King. How fares our cousin Hamlet?

Ham. Excellent, i'faith; of the camelion's dish: I eat the air, promise-crainmed: You cannot feed capons so.

King. I have nothing with this answer,

Hamlet: these words are not mine.

Ham. No, nor mine now. My lord,—you played once in the university, you say?

Pol. That did I, my lord; and was accounted a good actor.

Enter a King and a Queen, very lovingly; the Queen embracing him, and he her. She kneels, and makes show of protestation unto him. He takes her up, and declines his head upon her neck: lays him down upon a bank of flowers; she, seeing him asleep, leaves him. Anon comes in a fellow, takes off his crown, kisses it, and pours poison in the King's ears, and exit. The Queen returns; finds the King dead, and makes passionate action. The poisoner, with some two or three Mutes, comes in again, seeming to lament with her. The dead body is carried away. The poisoner wooes the Queen with gifts; she seems loath and unwilling awhile, but, in the end, accepts his love. [Exit.

Oph. What means this, my lord?

Ham. Marry, this is mitching mallecho; * it means mischief.

Oph. Belike, this show imports the argument of the play.

Enter PROLOGUE.

Ham. We shall know by this fellow: the players cannot keep counsel; they'll tell all.

Oph. Will he tell us what this show meant?

Ham. Ay, or any show that you'll show him: Be not you ashamed to show, he'll not shame to tell you what it means.

Oph. You are naught, you are naught; I'll mark the play.

Pro. For us, and for our tragedy,
Here stooping to your clemency,
We beg your hearing patiently.

Ham. Is this a prologue, or the posy of a ring?

Oph. 'Tis brief, † my lord.

Ham. As woman's love.

And thirty dozen moons, with borrow'd sheen, ¶

Since love our hearts, and Hymen did our

P. Queen. So many journeys may the sun and moon

Make us again count o'er, ere love be done!
But, woe is me, you are so sick of late,
So far from cheer, and from your former state,
That I distrust you. Yet, though I distrust, Discomfort you, my lord, it nothing must:
For women fear too much, even as they love;
And women's fear and love hold quantity;
In neither aught, or in extremity. [know;

Now, what my love is, proof hath made you
And as my love is siz'd, ¶ my fear is so,
Where love is great, the littlest doubts are fear; [there.

Where little fears grow great, great love grows

P. King. 'Faith, I must leave thee, love, and shortly too; [do;

My operant  powers their functions leave to
And thou shalt live in this fair world behind,
Honour'd, belov'd; and, haply, one as kind
For husband shalt thou—

P. Queen. O confound the rest!
Such love must needs be treason in my breast:
In second husband let me be accurst!
None wed the second, but who kill'd the first.

Ham. That's wormwood.

P. Queen. The instances, †† that second marriage move,
Are base respects of thrift, but none of love;

* Secret wickedness. † Short.
‡ Car, chariot. § The earth. ¶ Shining, lustre.
§ Magnitude, proportion.  Active. †† Motives.

A second time I kill my husband dead,
When second husband kisses me in bed.

P. King. I do believe, you think what now you speak;

But, what we do determine, oft we break.
Purpose is but the slave to memory;

Of violent birth, but poor validity:
Which now, like fruit unripe, sticks on the tree;

But fall, unshaken, when they mellow be.
Most necessary 'tis, that we forget

To pay ourselves what to ourselves is debt:
What to ourselves in passion we propose,

The passion ending, doth the purpose lose.
The violence of either grief or joy

Their own enactures * with themselves destroy:
Where joy most revels, grief doth most lament;

Grief joys, joy grieves, on slender accident.
This world is not for aye: † nor 'tis not strange,

That even our loves should with our fortunes
For 'tis a question left us yet to prove, [change;

Whether love lead fortune, or else fortune love.
The great man down, you mark his favourite

flies;
The poor advanc'd makes friends of enemies.

And hitherto doth love on fortune tend;
For who not needs, shall never lack a friend;

And who in want a hollow friend doth try,
Directly seasons him his enemy.

But, orderly to end where I begun,—
Our wills, our fates, do so contrary run,

That our devices still are overthrown;
Our thoughts are our's, their ends none of our own:

So think thou wilt no second husband wed;

But die thy thoughts, when thy first lord is dead.

P. Queen. Nor earth to give me food, nor heaven light!

Sport and repose lock from me, day, and night!
To desperation turn my trust and hope!

An anchor's ‡ cheer in prison be my scope!
Each opposite, that blanks the face of joy,

Meet what I would have well, and it destroy!
Both here and hence pursue me, lasting strife,

If, once a widow, ever I be wife!

Ham. If she should break it now, — [To Ophelia.

P. King. 'Tis deeply sworn. Sweet, leave me here a while;

My spirits grow dull, and fain I would beguile
The tedious day with sleep. [Sleeps

P. Queen. Sleep rock thy brain;
And never come mischance between us twain!

[Exit.

Ham. Madam, how like you this play?

Queen. The lady doth protest too much, methinks.

Ham. Oh! but she'll keep her word.

King. Have you heard the argument? Is there no offence in't?

Ham. No, no, they do but jest; poison in jest;
no offence i'the world.

King. What do you call the play?

Ham. The mouse-trap. § Marry, how? Tropically. This play is the image of a murder done in Vienna: Gonzago is the duke's name;

his wife, Baptista: you shall see anon; 'tis a knave's piece of work: But what of that? your majesty, and we that have free souls, it touches us not: Let the galled jade wince, † our withers

are unwrung.—

Enter LUCIANUS.

This is one Lucianus, nephew to the king.

Oph. You are as good as a chorus, my lord.

Ham. I could interpret between you and your love, if I could see the puppets dallying.

Oph. You are keen, my lord, you are keen.

Ham. It would cost you a groaning, to take off my edge.

* Determinations. † Ever. ‡ Anchor's

Oph. Still better, and worse.

Ham. So you mistake your husbands.—Begin, murderer;—leave thy damnable faces, and begin. Come;—

—The croaking raven
Doth bellow for revenge.

Luc. Thoughts black, hands apt, drugs fit, and time agreeing;

Confederate season, else no creature seeing;
'Thou mixture rank, of midnight weeds collected,
With Hecate's ban* thrice blasted, thrice infected,

Thy natural magic and dire property,

[Pours the Poison into the Sleeper's Ears.]

Ham. He poisons him i'the garden for his estate. His name's Gonzago: the story is extant, and written in very choice Italian: You shall see anon, how the murderer gets the love of Gonzago's wife.

Oph. The king riots.

Ham. What! frightened with false fire!

Queen. How fares my lord?

Pol. Give o'er the play.

King. Give me some light:—away!

Pol. Lights, lights, lights!

Ham. Why, let the stricken deer go weep,

For some must watch, while some must sleep;

Hor. Half a share.

Ham. A whole one, I.

Of Jove himself; and now reigns here
A very, very—peacock.

Hor. You might have rymed.

Ham. O good Horatio, I'll take the ghost's word for a thousand pound. Did'st perceive?

Hor. Very well, my lord.

Ham. Upon the talk of the poisoning,—

Hor. I did very well note him.

Ham. Ah! ha!—Come, some music; come, the recorders.¶—

For if the king like not the comedy,
Why then, belike,—he likes it not, perdy.—

Enter ROSENCRANTZ and GUILDENSTERN.

Come, some music.

Guil. Good, my lord, vouchsafe me a word with you.

Ham. Sir, a whole history.

Guil. The king, Sir—

Ham. Ay, Sir, what of him?

Guil. Is, in his retirement, marvellously dis-tempered.

Ham. With drink, Sir?

Guil. No, my lord, with choler.

Ham. Your wisdom should show itself more richer, to signify this to the doctor; for, for me to put him to his purgation, would, perhaps, plunge him into more choler.

Guil. Good my lord, put your discourse into some frame, and start not so wildly from my affair.

Ham. I am tame, Sir:—pronounce.

Guil. The queen, your mother, in most great affliction of spirit, hath sent me to you.

Ham. You are welcome.

Guil. Nay, good my lord, this courtesy is not of the right breed. If it shall please you to make me a wholesome answer, I will do your mother's commandment: if not, your pardon, and my return, shall be the end of my business.

Ham. Sir, I cannot.

Guil. What, my lord?

Wam. Make you a wholesome answer; my wit's diseased: But, Sir, such answer as I can make, you shall command; or rather, as you say my mother: therefore no more, but to the matter: My mother, you say,—

Ros. Then thus she says; Your behaviour hath struck her into amazement and admiration.

Ham. O wonderful son, that can so astonish a mother!—But is there no sequel at the heels of this mother's admiration? Impart.

Ros. She desires to speak with you in her closet, ere you go to bed.

Ham. We shall obey, were she ten times our mother. Have you any further trade* with us?

Ros. My lord, you once did love me.

Ham. And do still, by these pickers and stealers.†

Ros. Good my lord, what is your cause of dis-temper? you do, surely, but bar the door upon your own liberty, if you deny your griefs to your friend.

Ham. Sir, I lack advancement.

Ros. How can that be, when you have the voice of the king himself for your succession in Denmark?

Ham. Ay, Sir, but, While the grass grows,—the proverb is something musty.

Enter the PLAYERS, with Recorders.

Oh! the recorders:—let me see one.—To withdraw with you:—Why do you go about to recover the wind of me, as if you would drive me into a toil?

Guil. Oh! my lord, if my duty be too bold, my love is too unmanually.

Ham. I do not well understand that. Will you play upon this pipe?

Guil. My lord, I cannot.

Ham. I pray you.

Guil. Believe me, I cannot.

Ham. I do beseech you.

Guil. I know no touch of it, my lord.

Ham. 'Tis as easy as lying: govern these ventages‡ with your fingers and thumb, give it breath with your mouth, and it will discourse most eloquent music. Look you, these are the stops.

Guil. But these cannot I command to any utterance of harmony; I have not the skill.

Ham. Why, look you now, how unworthy a thing you make of me. You would play upon me; you would seem to know my stops; you would pluck out the heart of my mystery; you would sound me from my lowest note to the top of my compass: and there is much music, excellent voice, in this little organ; yet cannot you make it speak. 'Sblood, do you think I am easier to be played on than a pipe? Call me what instrument you will, though you can fret me, you cannot play upon me.

Enter POLONIUS.

God bless you, Sir.

Pol. My lord, the queen would speak with you, and presently.

Ham. Do you see yonder cloud, that's almost in shape of a camel?

Pol. By the mass, and 'tis like a camel, indeed.

Ham. Methinks, it is like a weasel.

Pol. It is backed like a weasel.

Ham. Or, like a whale?

Pol. Very like a whale.

Ham. Then will I come to my mother by and by.—They fool me to the top of my bent.—I will come by and by.

Pol. I will say so. [Exit POLONIUS.]

Ham. By and by is easily said.—Leave me, friends. [Exeunt ROS. GUIL. HOR. &c.]
'Tis now the very witching time of night;

* Curse. † For his head.
‡ Change conditions. § Slashed. || Pack company.
¶ A kind of flute.  Per Dieu.

* Business. † Hands.
‡ Holes. § Utmost stretch.

When churchyards yawn, and hell itself breathes
out
Contagion to this world: Now could I drink hot
And do such business as the bitter day Would quake to look on. Soft; now to my mother:—

O heart, lose not thy nature; let not ever
The soul of Nero enter this firm bosom:
Let me be cruel, not unnatural:
I will speak daggers to her, but use none;
My tongue and soul in this be hypocrites:
How in my words soever she be shent,*
To give them seals † never, my soul, consent!
[Exit.]

SCENE III.—A Room in the same.

Enter KING, ROSENCRANTZ, and GUILDEN-
STERN.

King. I like him not; nor stands it safe with
us,
To let his madness range. Therefore, prepare
I your commission will forthwith despatch,
And he to England shall along with you:
The terms of our estate may not endure
Hazard so near us, as doth hourly grow
Out of his lunes. ‡

Guil. We will ourselves provide:
Most holy and religious fear it is,
To keep those many bodies safe,
That live and feed upon your majesty.

Ros. The single and peculiar life is bound
With all the strength and armour of the mind,
To keep itself from 'noyance: but much more
That spirit, upon whose weal depend and rest
The lives of many. The cease of majesty
Dies not alone; but, like a gulf, doth draw
What's near it, with it: it is a massy wheel,
Fix'd on the summit of the highest mount,
To whose huge spokes ten thousand lesser things

Are mortis'd and adjoin'd; which, when it falls,
Each small annexment, petty consequence,
Attends the bolst'rous ruin. Never alone
Did the king sigh, but with a general groan.

King. Arm you, I pray you, to this speedy voyage;
For we will fetters put upon this fear,
Which now goes too free-footed.

Ros. Guil. We will haste us.

[Exeunt ROSENCRANTZ and GUILDENSTERN.]

Enter POLONIUS.

Pol. My lord, he's going to his mother's closet:

Behind the arras † I'll convey myself,
To hear the process; I'll warrant, she'll tax
him home:

And, as you said, and wisely was it said,
'Tis meet, that some more audience than a
mother,

Since nature makes them partial, should o'er-
The speech, of vantage. Fare you well, my liege;

I'll call upon you ere you go to bed,
And tell you what I know.

King. Thanks, dear my lord.

[Exit POLONIUS.]

Oh! my offence is rank, it smells to heaven;
It hath the primal eldest curse upon't:
A brother's murder!—Pray can I not,
Though inclination be as sharp as will;
My stronger guilt defeats my strong intent;
And, like a man to double business bound,
I stand in pause where I shall first begin,
And both neglect. What, if this cursed hand
Were thicker than itself with brother's blood,
Is there not rain enough in the sweet heavens,
To wash it white as snow? Whereto serves mercy,

But to confront the visage of offence?
And what's in prayer, but this twofold force,—

* Reproved. † Authority to put them in execution.
‡ Lunacies. § Tapestry.

To be forestalled, ere we come to fall,
Or pardon'd, belug down? Then I'll look up;
My fault is past. But oh! what form of prayer
Can serve my turn? Forgive me my foul murder!—

That cannot be; since I am still possess'd
Of those effects for which I did the murder—
My crown, mine own ambition, and my queen.
May one be pardon'd, and retain the offence?
In the corrupted currents of this world,
Offence's gilded hand may shove by justice;
And oft 'tis seen, the wicked prize itself
Buys out the law: But 'tis not so above:
There is no shuffling; there the action lies
In his true nature; and we ourselves compell'd,
Even to the teeth and forehead of our faults,
To give in evidence. What then? what rests?
Try what repentance can: What can it not?
Yet what can it, when one can not repent?
O wretched state! O bosom black as death!
O limed † soul! that, struggling to be free,
Art more engag'd. Help, angels, make assay!
Bow, stubborn knees! and heart, with strings of steel,
Be soft as sinews of the new-born babe;
All may be well! [Retires and kneels.]

Enter HAMLET.

Ham. Now might I do it pat, now he is pray-
ing;

And now I'll do't; and so he goes to heaven:
And so am I reveng'd? That would be scann'd: ‡

A villain kills my father; and, for that,
I, his his sole † son, do this same villain send
To heaven.

Why, this his hire and salary, † not revenge.
He took my father grossly, full of bread;
With all his crimes broad blown, as flush as a May;

And how his audit stands, who knows, save
But, in our circumstance and course of thought,
'Tis heavy with him: And am I then reveng'd,
To take him in the purging of his soul,
When he is fit and season'd for his passage?
No.

Up, sword; and know thou a more horrid hent: †
When he is drunk, asleep, or in his rage,
Or in the incestuous pleasures of his bed:
At gaming, swearing; or about some act
That has no relish of salvation in't: [ven,

Then trip him, that his heels may kick at hea-
And that his soul may be as damn'd and black
As hell, whereto it goes. My mother stays:
This physic but prolongs thy sickly days.

[Exit.]

The KING rises and advances.

King. My words fly up, my thoughts remain
below:

Words, without thoughts, never to heaven go.
[Exit.]

SCENE IV.—Another Room in the same.

Enter QUEEN and POLONIUS.

Pol. He will come straight. Look you lay home to him:
Tell him his pranks have been too br ad to bear
with;

And that your grace hath screen'd and stood between
Much heat and him. I'll silence me e'en here.
Pray you, be round with him.

Queen. I'll warrant you;
Fear me not:—withdraw, I hear him coming.
[POLONIUS hides himself.]

Enter HAMLET.

Ham. Now, mother; what's the matter?

* Caught as with bird-lime. † Should be considered. ‡ Only. § Reward.
| Seize him at a more horrid time.

Queen. Hamlet, thou hast thy father much offended.

Ham. Mother, you have my father much offended.

Queen. Come, come, you answer with an idle tongue.

Ham. Go, go, you question with a wicked tongue.

Queen. Why, how now, Hamlet?

Ham. What's the matter now?

Queen. Have you forgot me?

Ham. No, by the rood,* not so:

You are the queen, your husband's brother's wife;

And,—would it were not so!—you are my mother.

Queen. Nay, then I'll set those to you that can speak.

Ham. Come, come, and sit you down; you shall not budge;

You go not, till I set you up a glass

Where you may see the inmost part of you.

Queen. What wilt thou do? thou wilt not murder me?

Help, help, ho!

Pol. [Behind.] What, ho! help!

Ham. How now! a rat?

[Draws.

Dead, for a ducut, dead.

[HAMLET makes a pass through the Arras.

Pol. [Behind.] Oh! I am slain.

[Falls and dies.

Queen. O me, what hast thou done?

Ham. Nay, I know not:

Is it the king?

[Lifts up the Arras and draws forth
POLONIUS.

Queen. O what a rash and bloody deed is this!

Ham. A bloody deed;—almost as bad, good mother,

As kill a king, and marry with his brother.

Queen. As kill a king!

Ham. Ay, lady, 'twas my word.—

Thou wretched, rash, intruding fool, farewell!

[To POLONIUS.

I took thee for thy better; take thy fortune:

Thou find'st, to be too busy is some danger.—

Leave wringing of your hands: Peace; sit you down,

And let me wring your heart; for so I shall,

If it be made of penetrable stuff;

'F dauned custom have not braz'd it so,

That it be proof and bulwark against sense.

Queen. What have I done, that thou dar'st wag thy tongue

In noise so rude against me?

Ham. Such an act,

That blurs the grace and blush of modesty;

Calls virtue, hypocrite; takes off the rose

From the fair forehead of an innocent love,

And sets a blister there; makes marriage vows

As false as dicers' oaths: Oh! such a deed

As from the body of contraction† plucks

The very soul; and sweet religion makes

A rhapsody of words: Heaven's face doth glow;

Yea, this solidity and compound mass,

With tristful‡-visage as against the doom,

Is thought-sick at the act.

Queen. Ah! me, what act,

That roars so loud, and thunders in the index?§

Ham. Look here, upon this picture; and on this;

The counterfeit presentment of two brothers.

See, what a grace was seated on this brow,

Hyperion's|| curls; the front of Jove himself;

An eye like Mars, to threaten and command;

A station¶ like the herald Mercury,

New-lighted on a heaven-kissing hill;

A combination and a form, indeed,

Where every god did seem to set his seal,

To give the world assurance of a man:

This was your husband.—Look you now, what follows:

Here is your husband; like a mildew'd ear,
Blasting his wholesome brother. Have you eyes?

Could you on this fair mountain leave to feed,
And batten* on this moor? Ha! have you eyes?

You cannot call it love; for, at your age,
The hey-day in the blood is tame, it's humble,
And waits upon the judgment; And what judgment

Would step from this to this? Sense,† sure, you have,

Else could you not have motion: But, sure, that is apoplex'd: for madness would not err;

Nor sense to ecstasy‡ was ne'er so thrall'd,
But it reserv'd some quantity of choice,

To serve in such a difference. What devil was't,

That thus hath cozen'd you at hoodman-blind?§ Eyes without feeling, feeling without sight,

Ears without hands or eyes, smelling sans|| all,
Or but a sickly part of one true sense

Could not so mope.¶

O shame! where is thy blush? Rebellious hell,
If thou canst mutine in a matron's bones,

To flaming youth let virtue be as wax,

And melt in her own fire: proclaim no shame,
When the compulsive ardour gives the charge;

Since frost itself as actively doth burn,

And reason panders will.

Queen. O Hamlet, speak no more:

Thou turn'st mine eyes into my very soul;

And there I see such black and grained spots,

As will not leave their tinct.

Ham. Nay, but to live

In the rank sweat of an enseamed†† bed;

Stew'd in corruption; honeying and making love
Over the nasty sty;—

Queen. O speak to me no more;

These words, like daggers, enter in mine ears:

No more, sweet Hamlet.

Ham. A murderer, and a villain:

A slave, that is not twentieth part the tythe

Of your precedent lord:—a vice†‡ of kings:

A cutpurse of the empire and the rule;

That from a shelf the precious diadem stole,

And put 't in his pocket!

Queen. No more.

Enter Ghost.

Ham. A king

Of shreds and patches:—

Save me, and hover o'er me with your wings,
You heavenly guards!—What would your gracious figure?

Queen. Alas! he's mad.

Ham. Do you not come your tardy son to chide,

That, laps'd in time and passion, lets go by
The important acting of your dread command?

O say!

Ghost. Do not forget: This visitation

Is but to whet thy almost blunted purpose.

But, look, amazement on thy mother sits:

O step between her and her fighting soul;

Conceit§§ in weakest bodies strongest works;

Speak to her, Hamlet.

Ham. How is it with you, lady?

Queen. Alas! how is't with you?

That you do bend your eye on vacancy,

And with the incorporal air do hold discourse?

Forth at your eyes your spirits wildly peep;

And, as the sleeping soldiers in the alarm,

Your bedded hair, like life in excrements,||

Starts up, and stands on end. O gentle son,

Upon the heat and flame of thy distemper

Sprinkle cool patience. Whereon do you look?

* Cross.

† Marriage contract.

‡ Sorrowful.

§ Index of contents prefixed to a book.

¶ The act of standing.

† Sensation.

‡ Without.

§ Greasy.

|| The hair of animals is excrementitious, that is, without life or sensation.

* To grow fat.

† Frenzy.

‡ Be so stupid.

§ Mimic.

§ Blindman's buff.

 Colour.

§§ Imagination.

Ham. On him! on him!—Look you, how pale he glares!
His form and cause conjoin'd, preaching to stones,
Would make them capable. —Do not look upon me;
Lest with this piteous action, you convert
My stern effects:† then what I have to do
Will want true colour; tears, perchance,‡ for blood.

Queen. To whom do you speak this?

Ham. Do you see nothing there?

Queen. Nothing at all; yet all, that is, I see.

Ham. Nor did you nothing hear?

Queen. No, nothing, but ourselves.

Ham. Why, look you there! look, how it steals away!

My father, in his habit as he liv'd!

Look, where he goes, even now, out at the portal!
[Exit Ghost.]

Queen. This is the very coinage of your brain:
This bodiless creation ecstasy §
Is very cunning in.

Ham. Ecstasy!

My pulse, as yours, doth temperately keep time,
And makes as healthful music: It is not madness,

That I have utter'd: bring me to the test,
And I the matter will re-word; which madness
Would gambol from. Mother, for love of grace,
Lay not that flattering unction to your soul,
That not your trespass but my madness speaks:
It will but skin and film the ulcerous place;
Whiles rank corruption, mining all within,
Infects unseen. Confess yourself to heaven;
Repent what's past; avoid what is to come;
And do not spread the compost‖ on the weeds,
To make them ranker. Forgive me this my virtue:

For in the fatness of these purpy times,
Virtue itself of vice must pardon beg;
Yea, curb‡ and woo, for leave to do him good.

Queen. O Hamlet! thou hast cleft my heart in twain.

Ham. O throw away the worser part of it,
And live the purer with the other half.
Good night: but go not to my uncle's bed;
Assume a virtue, if you have it not.
That monster, custom, who all sense doth eat
Of habit's devil, is angel yet in this;
That to the use of actions fair and good
He likewise gives a frock, or livery,
That aptly is put on: Refrain to-night;
And that shall lend a kind of easiness
To the next abstinence: the next more easy:
For use almost can change the stamp of nature,
And either curb the devil, or throw him out
With wondrous potency. Once more, good night!

And when you are desirous to be bless'd,
I'll blessing beg of you.—For this same lord,
[Pointing to POLONIUS.]

I do repent: But heaven hath pleas'd it so,—
To punish me with this, and this with me,
That I must be their scourge and minister.
I will bestow him, and will answer well
The death I gave him. So, again, good night:—
I must be cruel, only to be kind:
Thus bad begins, and worse remains behind.—
But one word more, good lady.

Queen. What shall I do?

Ham. Not this, by no means, that I bid you do:

Let the bloat king tempt you again to bed:
Pinch wanton on your cheek; call you, his mouse; **

And let him, for a pair of reechy †† kisses,
Or paddling in your neck with his damn'd fingers,

Make you to ravel all this matter out,
That I essentially am not in madness,

But mad in craft. 'Twere good you let him know:

For who, that's but a queen, fair, sober, wise,
Would from a paddock, * from a bat, a gib, †
Such dear concernings hide? who would do so?
No, in despite of sense and secrecy,
Unpeg the basket on the house's top,
Let the birds fly; and, like the famous ape,
To try conclusions,‡ in the basket creep,
And break your own neck down.

Queen. Be thou assur'd, if words be made of breath,

And breath of life, I have no life to breathe
What thou hast said to me.

Ham. I must to England; you know that?

Queen. Alack!

I had forgot; 'tis so concluded on.

Ham. There's letters seal'd: and my two school-fellows,—

Whom I will trust, as I will adders fang'd, §—
They bear the mandate; they must sweep my way,

And marshal me to knavery: Let it work;
For 'tis the sport, to have the engineer
Hoist with his own petar:‖ and it shall go hard,

But I will delve one yard below their mines,
And blow them at the moon: Oh! 'tis mee sweet,

When in one line two crafts directly meet.—
This man shall set me packing.

I'll lug the guts into the neighbour room:—
Mother, good night.—Indeed, this counsellor
Is now most still, most secret, and most grave
Who was in life a foolish prating knave.
Come, Sir, to draw toward an end with you:—
Good night, mother.

[Exit severally; HAMLET dragging in POLONIUS.]

ACT IV.

SCENE I.—The same.

Enter KING, QUEEN, ROSENCRANTZ, and GUILDENSTERN.

King. There's matter in these sighs; these profound heaves;
You must translate: 'tis fit we understand them:
Where is your son?

Queen. Bestow this place on us a little while.—

[To ROSENCRANTZ and GUILDENSTERN, who go out.]

Ah! my good lord, what have I seen to-night!

King. What, Gertrude? How does Hamlet?

Queen. Mad as the sea, and wind, when both contend

Which is the mightier: In his lawless fit,
Behind the arras hearing something stir,
Whips out his rapier, cries, A rat! a rat!
And, in his brainish apprehension, kills
The unseen good old man.

King. O heavy deed!

It had been so with us, had we been there:
His liberty is full of threats to all;
To you yourself, to us, to every one.
Alas! how shall this bloody deed be answer'd?
It will be laid to us, whose providence
Should have kept short, restrain'd, and out of haunt, ¶

This mad young man: but, so much was our
We would not understand what was most fit;
But, like the owner of a foul disease,
To keep it from divulging, let it feed
Even on the pith of life. Where is he gone?

Queen. To draw apart the body he hath kill'd:

O'er whom his very madness, like some ore,

* Intelligent. † Actions. ‡ Perhaps.
§ Frenzy. ‖ Manure. ¶ Bend.
 A term of endearment. †† Steaming with heat.

* Toad. † Cat. ‡ Experiments.
§ Having their teeth. ¶ Blown up with his own bomb. ¶ Company.

Among a mineral * of metals base,
Shows itself pure ; he weeps for what is done.

King. O Gertrude, come away !
The sun no sooner shall the mountains touch,
But we will ship him hence ; and this vile deed
We must, with all our majesty and skill,
Both countenance and excuse.—Ho ! Guilden-
stern !

Enter ROSENCRANTZ and GUILDENSTERN.
Friends both, go join you with some further
aid :
Hamlet in madness hath Polonius slain,
And from his mother's closet hath he dragg'd
him :
Go, seek him out ; speak fair, and bring the body
Into the chapel. I pray you, haste in this.
[Exeunt Ros. and GUIL.
Come, Gertrude, we'll call up our wisest friends ;
And let them know, both what we mean to do,
And what's untimely done : so, haply, slander,—
Whose whisper o'er the world's diameter,
As level as the cannon to his blank, † Transports his poison'd shot,—may miss our
name,
And hit the woundless air.—O come away !
My soul is full of discord and dismay.

[Exeunt.

SCENE II.—Another Room in the same.

Enter HAMLET.

Ham.—Safely stowed,—[Ros. &c. within.
Hamlet ! lord Hamlet !] But soft !—what noise ?
who calls on Hamlet ? Oh ! here they come.

Enter ROSENCRANTZ and GUILDENSTERN.

Ros. What have you done, my lord, with the dead body ?

Ham. Compounded it with dust, whereto 'tis kin.

Ros. Tell us where 'tis ; that we may take it thence,
And bear it to the chapel.

Ham. Do not believe it.

Ros. Believe what ?

Ham. That I can keep your counsel, and not mine own. Besides, to be demanded of a sponge !—what replication should be made by the son of a king ?

Ros. Take you me for a sponge, my lord ?

Ham. Ay, Sir ; that soaks up the king's countenance, his rewards, his authorities. But such officers do the king best service in the end : He keeps them, like an ape, in the corner of his jaw ; first mouthed, to be last swallowed :
When he needs what you have gleaned, it is but squeezing you, and, sponge, you shall be dry
again.

Ros. I understand you not, my lord.

Ham. I am glad of it : A knavish speech sleeps in a foolish ear.

Ros. My lord, you must tell us where the body is, and go with us to the king.

Ham. The body is with the king, but the king is not with the body. The king is a thing—

GUIL. A thing, my lord ?

Ham. Of nothing : bring me to him. Hide fox, and all after. ‡

[Exeunt.

SCENE III.—Another Room in the same.

Enter KING, attended.

King. I have sent to seek him, and to find the body.

How dangerous is it, that this man goes loose ?
Yet must not we put the strong law on him :
He's lov'd of the distracted multitude,
Who like not in their judgment, but their eyes ;
And where 'tis so, the offender's scourge is weigh'd,

But never the offence. To bear all smooth and even,

This sudden sending him away must seem
Deliberate pause : Diseases, desperate grown,
By desperate appliance are reliev'd,

Enter ROSENCRANTZ.

Or not at all.—How now ? what hath befallen ?

Ros. Where the dead body is bestow'd, my
lord,

We cannot get from him.

King. But where is he ?

Ros. Without, my lord ; guarded to know your pleasure.

King. Bring him before us,

Ros. Ho, Guildenstern ? bring in my lord.

Enter HAMLET and GUILDENSTERN.

King. Now, Hamlet, where's Polonius ?

Ham. At supper.

King. At supper ? Where ?

Ham. Not where he eats, but where he is eaten : a certain convocation of politic worms are e'en at him. Your worm is your only emperor for diet : we eat all creatures else, to eat us ; and we eat ourselves for maggots : Your fat king, and your lean beggar, is but variable service ; two dishes, but to one table ; that's the end.

King. Alas, alas !

Ham. A man may fish with the worm that hath eat of a king ; and eat of the fish that hath fed of that worm.

King. What dost thou mean by this ?

Ham. Nothing, but to show you how a king may go a progress through the guts of a beggar.

King. Where is Polonius ?

Ham. In heaven ; send thither to see : if your messenger find him not there, seek him i'the other place yourself. But, indeed, if you find him not within this month, you shall nose him as you go up the stairs into the lobby.

King. Go seek him there.

[To some Attendants.

Ham. He will stay till you come.

[Exeunt Attendants.

King. Hamlet, this deed, for thine especial safety,—

Which we do tender, as we dearly grieve
For that which thou hast done,—must send thee
hence

With fiery quickness : Therefore, prepare thyself. The bark is ready, and the wind at help,*
The associates tend, † and every thing is bent
For England.

Ham. For England ?

King. Ay, Hamlet.

Ham. Good.

Ham. So is it, if thou knew'st our purposes.

Ham. I see a cherub, that sees them.—But,
come ; for England !—Farewell, dear mother.

King. Thy loving father, Hamlet.

Ham. My mother : Father and mother is man and wife ; man and wife is one flesh ; and so, my mother. Come, for England. [Exit.

King. Follow him at foot ; tempt him with speed aboard ;

Delay it not, I'll have him hence to-night :
Away ; for every thing is seal'd and done
That else leans on the affair : Pray you, make haste, [Exeunt Ros. and GUIL.
And, England, if my love thou hold'st at aught,
(As my great power thereof may give thee
sense ;

Since yet thy cicatrice looks raw and red
After the Danish sword, and thy free awe Pays homage to us,) thou may'st not coldly
set ‡

Our sovereign process ; which imports at full,
By letters conjuring to that effect,
The present death of Hamlet. Do it, England ;
For like the hectic in my blood he rages,

* Mine. † Mark.
‡ A sport among children.

* Right, ready. † Attend.
‡ Value, estimate.

And thou must cure me: Till I know 'tis done,
How'er my haps, * my joys will ne'er begin.
[Exit.]

SCENE IV.—A Plain in Denmark.

Enter FORTINBRAS, and Forces, marching.

For. Go, captain, from me greet the Danish king;
Tell him, that, by his licence, Fortinbras
Craves the conveyance of a promis'd march
Over his kingdom. You know the rendezvous.

If that his majesty would aught with us,
We shall express our duty in his eye. †
And let him know so.

Cap. I will do't, my lord.

For. Go softly on.

[Exeunt FORTINBRAS and Forces.]

Enter HAMLET, ROSENCRANTZ, GUILDEN-
STERN, &c.

Ham. Good Sir, whose powers ‡ are these †

Cap. They are of Norway, Sir,

Ham. How purpos'd, Sir,
I pray you †

Cap. Against some part of Poland.

Ham. Who Commands them, Sir †

Cap. The nephew to old Norway, Fortinbras.

Ham. Goes it against the main of Poland, Sir,
Or for some frontier †

Cap. Truly to speak, Sir, and with no addition,

We go to gain a little patch of ground,
That hath in it no profit but the name.
To pay five ducats, five, I would not farm it;
Nor will it yield to Norway, or the Pole,
A ranker rate, should it be sold in fee.

Ham. Why, then the Polack § never will defend it.

Cap. Yes, 'tis already garrison'd.

Ham. Two thousand souls, and twenty thousand ducats,
Will not debate the question of this straw:
This is the imposthume of much wealth and
peace;

That inward breaks, and shows no cause without

Why the man dies.—I humbly thank you, Sir.

Cap. God be wi' you, Sir. [Exit CAPTAIN.]

Ros. Will't please you go, my lord †

Ham. I will be with you straight. Go a little before. [Exeunt Ros. and GUIL.]

How all occasions do inform against me,
And spur my dull revenge! What is a man,
If his chief good, and market † of his time,
Be but to sleep and feed † a beast, no more.
Sure he that made us with such large discourse, ¶

Looking before and after, gave us not
That capability and godlike reason
To fast  in us unus'd. Now, whether it be Bestial oblivion, or some craven †† scruple
Of thinking too precisely on the event,—
A thought, which, quarter'd, hath but one part wisdom,

And, ever, three parts coward,—I do not know
Why yet I live to say, This thing's to do;
Sith †† I have cause, and will, and strength, and means,

To do't. Examples, gross as earth, exhort me:
Witness, this army of such mass and charge,
Led by a delicate and tender prince;
Whose spirit with divine ambition puff'd,
Makes mouths at the invisible event;
Exposing what is mortal and unsure,
To all that fortune, death, and danger dare,
Even for an egg-shell. Rightly to be great,
Is not to stir without great argument;
But greatly to find quarrel in a straw,

When honour's at the stake. How stand I then,
That have a father kill'd, a mother stain'd,
Excitements of my reason and my blood,
And let all sleep † while, to my shame, I see
The imminent death of twenty thousand men,
That, for a fantasy, and trick of fame,
Go to their graves like beds; fight for a plot
Whereon the numbers cannot try the cause,
Which is not tomb enough, and continent,
To hide the slain †—Oh! from this time forth
My thoughts be bloody, or be nothing worth.

[Exit.]

SCENE V.—Elsinore.—A Room in the Castle.

Enter QUEEN and HORATIO.

Queen. —I will not speak with her.

Hor. She is importunate; indeed, distract;
Her mood will needs be pitted.

Queen. What would she have †

Hor. She speaks much of her father; says, she hears,
There's tricks i'the world; and hems, and beats
her heart;

Spurns enviously at straws; speaks things in doubt, [thing,

That carry but half sense: her speech is no.
Yet the unshaped use of it doth move

The hearers to collection; they aim * at it,
And botch the words up fit to their own
thoughts;

Which, as her winks, and nods, and gestures
yield them,

Indeed would make one think, there might be
thought,

Though nothing sure, yet much unhappily.

Queen. 'Twere good, she were spoken with;
for she may strew

Dangerous conjectures in ill-breeding minds:

Let her come in. [Exit HORATIO.]

To my sick soul, as sin's true nature is,
Each toy † seems prologue to some great amiss:
So full of artless jealousy is guilt,
It spills itself in fearing to be spilt.

Re-enter HORATIO, with OPHELIA.

Oph. Where is the beauteous majesty of Denmark †

Queen. How now, Ophelia †

Oph. How should I your true love know
From another one †

By his cockle hat and staff,
And his sandal shoon † † [Singing.

Queen. Alas, sweet lady, what imports this song †

Oph. Say you † nay, pray you, mark.

He is dead and gone;
At his head a grass-green turf,
At his heels a stone.

Oh! ho!

Queen. Nay, but Ophelia,—

Oph. Pray you, mark.

White his shroud as the mountain snow,

Enter KING.

Queen. Alas! look here, my lord.

Oph. Larded § all with sweet flowers;
Which bewept to the grave did go,
With true-love showers.

King. How do you, pretty lady †

Oph. Well, God'ield † you! They say, the owl was a baker's daughter. Lord, we know what we are, but know not what we may be.
God be at your table!

King. Conceit upon her father.

Oph. Pray, let us have no words of this ; but when they ask you what it means, say you this :

*Good morrow, 'tis Saint Valentine's day,
All in the morning betime,
And I a maid at your window,
To be your Valentine :*

*Then up he rose, and don'd * his clothes,
And dupp'd † the chamber door ;
Let in the maid, that out a maid
Never departed more.*

King. Pretty Ophelia !

Oph. Indeed, without an oath, I'll make an end on't :

*By Gis, ‡ and by Saint Charity,
Alack, and fie for shame !
Young men will do't, if they come to't ;
By cock, they are to blame.*

*Quoth she, before you tumbled me,
You promised me to wed :*

[He answers.]

*So would I ha' done, by yonder sun,
An thou hadst not come to my bed.*

King. How long hath she been thus ?

Oph. I hope, all will be well. We must be patient : but I cannot choose but weep, to think they should lay him i'the cold ground : My brother shall know of it, and so I thank you for your good counsel. Come, my coach ! Good night, ladies ; good night, sweet ladies : good night, good night. [Exit.]

King. Follow her close : give her good watch, I pray you. [Exit HORATIO.]

Oh ! this is the poison of deep grief ; it springs All from her father's death : And now behold, O Gertrude, Gertrude, When sorrows come, they come not single spies, But in battalions ! First, her father slain ; Next, your son gone ; and the most violent anthor Of his own just remove : The people muddled, Thick and unwholesome in their thoughts and whispers,

For good Polonius' death ; and we have done but greenly, §

In bugger-mugger ¶ to inter him : Poor Ophelia Divided from herself, and her fair judgment ; Without the which we are pictures, or mere beasts.

Last, and as much containing as all these, Her brother is in secret come from France : Feeds on his wonder, keeps himself in clouds, And wants not buzzers to infect his ear With pestilent speeches of his father's death ; Wherein necessity, of matter beggar'd, Will nothing stick our person to arraign In ear and ear. O my dear Gertrude, this, Like to a murdering piece, in many places Gives me superfluous death ! [A noise within.]

Queen. Alack ! what noise is this ?

Enter a GENTLEMAN.

King. Attend. [door : Where are my Switzers ? ¶ Let them guard the What is the matter ?

Gent. Save yourself, my lord ; The ocean, overpeering of his list,  Eats not the flats with more impetuous haste, Than young Laertes, in a riotous head, O'erbears your officers ! The rabble call him, lord ;

And, as the world were now but to begin, Antiquity forgot, custom not known, The ratifiers and props of every word, They cry, Choose we ; Laertes shall be king ! Caps, hands, and tongues, applaud it to the clouds, Laertes shall be king, Luertes king !

King. The doors are broke. [Noise within.]

Enter LAERTES, armed ; DANES following.

Laer. Where is this king ?—Sirs, stand you all without.

Dan. No, let's come in.

Laer. I pray you, give me leave.

Dan. We will, we will

[They retire without the door.]

Laer. I thank you :—keep the door.—O thou vile king,

Give me my father.

Queen. Calmly, good Laertes.

Laer. That drop of blood that's calm, proclaims me bastard ;

Cries cuckold to my father ; brands the harlot Even here, between the chaste unsmirched ‡ brow Of my true mother.

King. What is the cause, Laertes, That thy rebellion looks so giant-like ?— Let him go, Gertrude ; do not fear our person ; There's such divinity doth hedge a king, That treason can but peep to what it would, Acts little of his will.—Tell me, Laertes, Why thou art thus incens'd ;—Let him go, Ger- Speak, man. [trude ;—

Laer. Where is my father ?

King. Dead.

Queen. But not by him.

King. Let him demand his fill.

Laer. How came he dead ? I'll not be juggled with :

To hell, allegiance ! vows, to the blackest devil ! Conscience and grace to the profoundest pit ! I dare damnation : To this point I stand,— That both the worlds I give to negligence, Let come what comes ; only I'll be reveng'd Most thoroughly for my father.

King. Who shall stay you ?

Laer. My will, not all the world's : And, for my means, I'll husband them so well, They shall go far with little.

King. Good Laertes, If you desire to know the certainty Of your dear father's death, is't writ in your revenge,

That, sweepstake, you will draw both friend and foe, Winner and loser ?

Laer. None but his enemies.

King. Will you know them then ?

Laer. To his good friends thus wide I'll ope my arms ;

And, like the kind life-rend'ring pelican, Repeat them with my blood.

King. Why, now you speak

Like a good child, and a true gentleman. That I am guiltless of your father's death, And am most sensibly in grief for it, It shall as level to your judgment 'pear, § As day does to your eye.

Danes. [Within.] Let her come in.

Laer. How now ! what noise is that ?

Enter OPHELIA, fantastically dressed with Straws and Flowers.

O heat, dry up my brains ! tears seven times salt,

Burn out the sense and virtue of mine eye !— By heaven, thy madness shall be paid with weight,

Till our scale turn the beam. 'O rose of May ! Dear maid, kind sister, sweet Ophelia ! O heavens ! is't possible, a young maid's wita Should be as mortal as an old man's life ? Nature is fine ¶ in love : and, where 'tis fine, † Hounds run counter when they trace the scent backwards.

Scene VI. HAMLET, PRINCE OF DENMARK.

195

It sends some precious instance of itself
After the thing it loves.

Oph. They bore him barefac'd on the bier :
Hey no nonny, nonny hey nonny :
And in his grave rain'd many a tear ;—

Fare you well, my dove !

Laer. Hadst thou thy wits, and didst persuade revenge,

It could not move thus.

Oph. You must sing, Down-a-down, as you call him, a-down-a. Oh ! how the wheel * be comes it ! It is the false steward, that stole his master's daughter.

Laer. This nothing's more than matter.

Oph. There's rosemary, that's for remembrance ; pray you, love, remember : and there is pansies, that's for thoughts.

Laer. A document in madness ; thoughts and remembrance fitted.

Oph. There's fennel for you, and columbines :—there's rue for you ; and here's some for me :—we may call it, herb of grace o'Sundays :—you may wear your rue with a difference. † There's a daisy :—I would give you some violets ; but they withered all, when my father died :—They say, he made a good
end, —

For bonny sweet Robin is all my joy, —

[Sings.

Laer. Thought ‡ and affliction, passion, hell itself,
She turns to favour, and to prettiness.

Oph. And will he not come again ? [Sings.

And will he not come again ?

No, no, he is dead,

Go to thy death-bed,

He never will come again.

His beard was as white as snow,

All flaxen was his poll :

He is gone, he is gone,

And we cast away moan,

God 's mercy on his soul !

And of all Christian souls ! I pray God. God be wi' you !

[Exit OPHELIA.

Laer. Do you see this, O God !

King. Laertes, I must commune with your
grief,

Or you deny me right. Go but apart,
Make choice of whom your wisest friends you will,
And they shall hear and judge 'twixt you and
I by direct or by collateral hand [me :
They find us touch'd, we will our kingdom give,

Our crown, our life, and all that we call ours,
To you in satisfaction ; but, if not,
Be you content to lend your patience to us,
And we shall jointly labour with your soul
To give it due content.

Laer. Let this be so ;

His means of death, his obscure funeral, —
No trophy, sword, nor hatchment, o'er his
bones,

No noble rite, nor formal ostentation, —
Cry to be heard, as 'twere from heaven to earth,
That I must call't in question.

King. So you shall ;

And where the offence is, let the great axe fall.
I pray you, go with me. [Exit.

SCENE VI.—Another Room in the same.

Enter HORATIO, and a SERVANT.

Hor. What are they, that would speak with
me ?

Serv. Sailors, Sir ;

They say, they have letters for you.

Hor. Let them come in. — [Exit SERVANT.
I do not know from what part of the world
I should be greeted, if not from lord Hamlet.

Enter SAILORS.

1 Sail. God bless you, Sir.

Hor. Let him bless thee too.

1 Sail. He shall, Sir, an't please him. There's a letter for you, Sir ; it comes from the ambassador that was bound for England ; if your name be Horatio, as I am let to know it is.

Hor. [Reads.] Horatio, when thou shalt have overlooked this, give these fellows some means to the king ; they have letters for him. Ere we were two days old at sea, a pirate of very warlike appointment gave us chase :
Finding ourselves too slow of sail, we put on a compelled valour : and in the grapple I boarded them : on the instant, they got clear of our ship ; so I alone became their prisoner.
They have dealt with me like thieves of mercy ; but they knew what they did ; I am to do a good turn for them. Let the king have the letters I have sent ; and repair thou to me with as much haste as thou wouldst fly death. I have words to speak in thine ear, will make thee dumb ; yet are they much too light for the bore of the matter. These good fellows will bring thee where I am. Rosencrantz and Guildenstern hold their course for England : of them I have much to tell thee.
Farewell.

He that thou knowest thine, Hamlet.
Come, I will give you way for these your letters ;

And do't the speedier, that you may direct me
To him from whom you brought them.

[Exit.

SCENE VII.—Another Room in the same.

Enter KING and LAERTES.

King. Now must your conscience my acquit-
tance seal,

And you must put me in your heart for friend ;
Sith * you have heard, and with a knowing ear,
That he, which hath your noble father slain,
Pursu'd my life.

Laer. It well appears :—But tell me,
Why you proceeded not against these feats,
So crimeful and so capital in nature,
As by your safety, greatness, wisdom, all things
else,

You mainly were stirr'd up.

King. Oh ! for two special reasons ;
Which may to you, perhaps, seem much unseem'd, †

But yet to me they are strong. The queen his mother,

Lives almost by his looks ; and, for myself,
(My virtue, or my plague, be it either which,)
She is so conjunctive to my life and soul,
That, as the star moves not but in his sphere,
I could not but by her. The other motive,
Why to a public count I might not go,
Is, the great love the general gender ‡ bear him :
Who, dipping all his faults in their affection,
Work like the spring § that turneth wood to stone,

Converts his gyves ¶ to graces ; so that my
Too slightly timber'd for so loud a wind,
Would have reverted to my bow again,
And not where I had aim'd them.

Laer. And so have I a noble father lost ;
A sister driven into desperate terms ;
Whose worth, if praises may go back again,
Stood challenger on mount of all the age
For her perfections :—But my revenge will
come.

King. Break not your sleeps for that : you must not think,
That we are made of stuff so flat and dull,
That we can let our beard be shook with danger,

* Since.

† Deprived of strength.

‡ Common people.

§ Petrifying springs are common in many parts of England.

¶ Fetters.

* The burden.

† I. e. By its Sunday name,

‡ herb of grace ; † mine is merely rue, i. e. sorrow.

§ Melancholy.

And think it pastime. You shortly shall hear more :

I loved your father, and we love ourself ;
And that, I hope, will teach you to imagine,—
How now ? what news ?

Enter a MESSENGER.

Mess. Letters, my lord, from Hamlet :
This to your majesty ; this to the queen.

King. From Hamlet ! who brought them ?

Mess. Sailors, my lord, they say : I saw them not :
They were given me by Claudio, he receiv'd them
Of him that brought them.

King. Laertes, you shall hear them :—
Leave us. [Exit MESSENGER.]

[Reads.] *High and mighty, you shall know,
I am set naked on your kingdom. To-morrow shall I beg leave to see your kingly eyes ; when I shall, first asking your pardon thereunto, recount the occasion of my sudden and more strange return.* Hamlet.

What should this mean ! Are all the rest come back ?

Or is it some abuse, and no such thing ?

Laer. Know you the hand ?

King. 'Tis Hamlet's character. Naked,—
And in a postscript here, he says, alone :
Can you advise me ?

Laer. I am lost in it, my lord. But let him come ;

It warms the very sickness in my heart,
That I shall live and tell him to his teeth,
Thus diddest thou.

King. If it be so, Laertes,
As how should it be so ? how otherwise ?—
Will you be rul'd by me ?

Laer. Ay, my lord ;
So you will not o'errule me to a peace.

King. To thine own peace. If he be now return'd,—

As checking * at his voyage, and that he means
No more to undertake it,—I will work him
To an exploit, now ripe in my device,
Under the which he shall not choose but fall :
And for his death no wind of blame shall
breathe :

But even his mother shall uncharge the practice,
And call it, accident.

Laer. My lord, I will be rul'd ;
The rather, if you could devise it so.
That I might be the organ.

King. It falls right.
You have been talk'd of since your travel much,
And that in Hamlet's hearing, for a quality
Wherein, they say, you shine : your sum of parts

Did not together pluck such envy from him,
As did that one ; and that, in my regard,
Of the unworthiest siege. †

Laer. What part is that, my lord ?

King. A very ribband in the cap of youth,
Yet needful too ; for youth no less becomes
The light and careless livery that it wears,
Than settled age his sables, and his weeds,
Importing health and graveness.—Two months
since,

Here was a gentlemen of Normandy ;—
I have seen myself, and serv'd against the French,
And they can well on horseback : but this gallant

Had witchcraft in't ; he grew unto his seat ;
And to such wondrous doing brought his horse,
As he had been incorp'd and demi-natur'd
With the brave beast : so far he topp'd my
thought,

That I, in forgery of shapes and tricks,
Come short of what he did.

Laer. A Norman, was't ?

King. A Norman.

Laer. Upon my life, Lamord.

King. The very same.

Laer. I know him well, he is the brooch, * indred,

And gem of all the nation.

King. He made confession of you :
And gave you such a masterly report,
For art and exercise in your defence, †
And for your rapier most especial,
That he cried out, 'twould be a sight indeed,
If one could match you : the scrimers ‡ of their nation,

He swore had neither motion, guard, nor eye,
If you oppos'd them.—Sir, this report of his
Did Hamlet so envenom with his envy,
That he could nothing do, but wish and beg,
Your sudden coming o'er, to play with you.
Now, out of this,—

Laer. What out of this, my lord ?

King. Laertes, was your father dear to you ?
Or are you like the painting of a sorrow
A face without a heart ?

Laer. Why ask you this ?

King. Not that I think, you did not love your
father ;

But that I know, love is begun by time ;
And that I see, in passages of proof, §
Time qualifies the spark and fire of it.
There lives within the very flame of love
A kind of wick, or snuff, that will abate it ;
And nothing is at a like goodness still ;
For goodness, growing to a pleurisy,
Dies in his own too-much : That we would do,
We should do when we would ; for this would changes,

And hath abatements and delays as many,
As there are tongues, are hands, are accidents ;
And then this should is like a spendthrift sigh,
That hurts by easing. But, to the quick o'the ulcer :

Hamlet comes back ; What would you undertake,

To show yourself in deed your father's son
More than in words ?

Laer. To cut his throat i'the church.

King. No place, indeed, should murder sanc-tuarize ;

Revenge should have no bounds. But, good Laertes,

Will you do this, keep close within your chamber :
Hamlet, return'd, shall know you are come
home :

We'll put on those shall praise your excellence,
And set a double varnish on the fame
The Frenchman gave you ; bring you, in time,
together,

And wager o'er your heads : he, being remiss,
Most generous, and free from all contriving,
Will not peruse the foils ; so that, with ease,
Or with a little shuffling, you may choose
A sword unbated, ¶ and, in a pass of practice, ¶
Requite him for your father.

Laer. I will do't :

And, for the purpose, I'll anoint my sword.
I bought an unction of a mountebank, —
So mortal, that but dip a knife in it,
Where it draws blood, no cataplasm so rare,
Collected from all simples that have virtue
Under the moon, can save the thing from death,
That is but scratch'd withal : I'll touch my point

With this contagion ; that, if I gall him slightly,
It may be death.

King. Let's further think of this ;
Weigh what convenience, both of time and
means,
May fit us to our shape : if this should fall,
And that our drift look through our bad performance,

'Twere better not assay'd ; therefore this project

Should have a back, or second, that might hold,

* Ornament.

(As make your bouts more violent to that end,) And that he calls for drink, I'll have preferr'd ; him

A chalice for the nonce : ‡ whereon but sipping,
If he by chance escape your venom'd stuck, ¶
Our purpose may hold there. But stay, what noise ?

Enter QUEEN.

How now, sweet queen ?

Queen. One woe doth tread upon another's heel,

So fast they follow :—Your sister's drown'd, Laer. Drown'd ! Oh ! where ?

Queen. There is a willow grows ascant the brook,

That shows his hour leaves in the glassy stream ;
Therewith fantastic garlands did she make
Of crow-flowers, nettles, daisies, and long purples, ¶.

That liberal  shepherds give a grosser name,
But our cold maids do dead men's fingers call
them :

There on the pendent boughs her coronet weeds
Clambering to hang, an envious siver broke ;
When down her weedy trophies, and herself,
Fell in the weeping brook. Her clothes spread wide ;

And, mermaid-like, awhile they bore her up :
Which time, she chaunted snatches of old
As one incapable †† of her own distress, [tunes,
Or like a creature native and indu'd,
Unto that element : but long it could not be,
Till that her garments, heavy with their drink,
Pull'd the poor wretch from her melodious lay
To muddy death.

Laer. Alas then, she is drown'd ?

Queen. Drown'd, drown'd.

Laer. Too much of water hast thou, poor
Ophelia,

And therefore I forbid my tears : But yet
It is our trick ; nature her custom holds,
Let shame say what it will : when these are
gone,

The woman will be out. ‡—Adieu, my lord !
I have a speech of fire, that slain would blaze,
But that this folly drowns it. [Exit.

King. Let's follow, Gertrude :
How much I had to do to calm his rage !
Now fear I, this will give it start again ;
Therefore, let's follow. [Exeunt.

ACT V.

SCENE I.—A Church-Yard.

Enter Two CLOWNS, with Spades, &c.

1 Clo. Is she to be buried in Christian burial, that wilfully seeks her own salvation ?

2 Clo. I tell thee, she is ; therefore make her grave straight : §§ the crowner hath set on her,
and finds it Christian burial.

1 Clo. How can that be, unless she drowned herself in her own defence ?

2 Clo. Why 'tis found so.

1 Clo. It must be se offendendo ; it cannot be else. For here lies the point : If I drown myself wittingly, it argues an act : and an act hath three branches ; it is, to act, to do, and to perform ; argal, ¶ she drowned herself wittingly.

* As fire arms sometimes burst in proving their strength. † Skill. ‡ Presented.

§ A cup for the purpose. ¶ Thrust.

¶ Orchis morio mas.  Licentious.

†† Inconceivable. ‡‡ Tears will flow.

§§ Immediately. ¶¶ A blunder for ergo.

2 Clo. Nay, but hear you, Goodman deliver.

1 Clo. Give me leave. Here lies the water ;
good : here stands the man ; good : If the man go to this water, and drown himself, it is, will he, nill he, he goes ; mark you that : but if the water come to him, and drown him, he drowns not himself : argal, he, that is not guilty of his own death, shortens not his own life.

2 Clo. But is this law ?

1 Clo. Ay, marry is't ; crowner's-quest law.

2 Clo. Will you ha' the truth on't ? If this had not been a gentlewoman, she should have been buried out of Christian burial.

1 Clo. Why, there thou say'st : And the more pity ; that great folks shall have countenance in this world to drown or hang themselves, more than their even * Christian. Come, my spade.
There is no ancient gentlemen but gardeners,
ditchers, and grave-makers ; they hold up Adam's profession.

2 Clo. Was he a gentleman ?

1 Clo. He was the first that ever bore arms.

2 Clo. Why, he had none.

1 Clo. What, art a heathen ? How dost thou understand the scripture ? The scripture says,
Adam digged ; Could he dig without arms ?
I'll put another question to thee : If thou answerest me not to the purpose, confess thyself—

2 Clo. Go to.

1 Clo. What is he, that builds stronger than either the mason, the shipwright, or the carpenter ?

2 Clo. The gallows maker ; for that frame out-lives a thousand tenants.

1 Clo. I like thy wit well, in good faith ; the gallows does well : But how does it well ? It does well to those that do ill : now thou dost ill, so say the gallows is built stronger than the church ; argal, the gallows may do well to thee. To't again ; come.

2 Clo. Who builds stronger than a mason, a shipwright, or a carpenter ?

1 Clo. Ay, tell me that, and anyoak. †

2 Clo. Marry, now I can tell.

1 Clo. To't.

2 Clo. Mass, I cannot tell.

Enter HAMLET and HORATIO, at a distance

1 Clo. Cudgel thy brains no more about it ; for your dull ass will not mend his pace with beating : and, when you are asked this question next, say, a grave-maker ; the houses that he makes last till doomsday. Go, get thee to Yaughan, and fetch me a stoup of liquor.

Exit 2 CLOWN.

1 CLOWN digs, and sings.

In youth, when I did love, did love, ‡

Methought, it was very sweet,

To contract, O, the time, for, ah, my behove

O, methought, there was nothing meet.

Ham. Has this fellow no feeling of his business ? he sings at grave-making.

Hor. Custom hath made it in him a property of easiness.

Ham. 'Tis e'en so : the hand of little employment hath the dainfuler sense.

1 Clo. But age, with his stealing steps,

Hath claw'd me in his clutch,

And hath shipped me into the land,

As if I had never been such.

[Throws up a Skull.

Ham. That skull had a tongue in it, and could sing once : How the knave jowls it to the ground, as if it were Cain's jaw-bone, that did the first murder ! This might be the pate of a politician, which this ass now o'er-reaches :
one that would circumvent God, might it not ?

* Fellow.

† Give over.

‡ The song entire is printed in Percy's Reliques of Ancient English Poetry, Vol. 1. It was written by Lord Vaux.

Hor. It might, my lord.

Ham. Or of a courtier; which would say, Good-morrow, sweet lord! How dost thou, good lord? This might be my lord such-a-one, that praised my lord such-a-one's horse, when he meant to beg it; might it not?

Hor. Ay, my lord.

Ham. Why, e'en so; and now my lady Worm's; chapless, and knocked about the mazzard with a sexton's spade; Here's fine revolution, an we had the trick to see't. Did these bones cost no more the breeding, but to play at loggats* with them? mine ache to think on't.

1 Clo. *A pick-axe, and a spade, a spade, [Sings.
For—and a shrouding sheet;
O, a pit of clay for to be made
For such a guest is meet.*

[Throws up a Scull.

Ham. There's another; Why may not that be the scull of a lawyer? Where be his quiddits† now, his quilllets,‡ his cases, his tenures, and his tricks? why does he suffer this rude knave now to knock him about the sconce§ with a dirty shovel, and will not tell him of his action of battery? Humph! This fellow might be in's time a great buyer of land, with his statutes, his recognizances, his fines, his double vouchers, his recoveries: Is this the fine of his fines, and the recovery of his recoveries, to have his fine pate full of fine dirt? will his vouchers vouch him no more of his purchases, and double ones too, than the length and breadth of a pair of indentures? The very conveyances of his lands will hardly lie in this box; and must the inheritor himself have no more? ha?

Hor. Not a jot more, my lord.

Ham. Is not parchment made of sheep-skins?

Hor. Ay, my lord, and of calves-skins too.

Ham. They are sheep, and calves, which seek out assurance in that. I will speak to this fellow:—Whose grave's this, Sirrah?

1 Clo. Mine, Sir.—

*O, a pit of clay for to be made [Sings.
For such a guest is meet.*

Ham. I think it be thine, indeed; for thou liest in't.

1 Clo. You lie out on't, Sir, and therefore it is not yours: for my part, I do not lie in't, yet it is mine.

Ham. Thou dost lie in't, to be in't and say it is thine; 'tis for the dead, not for the quick; therefore thou liest.

1 Clo. 'Tis a quick lie, Sir; 'twill away again, from me to you.

Ham. What man dost thou dig it for?

1 Clo. For no man, Sir.

Ham. What woman then?

1 Clo. For none neither.

Ham. Who is to be buried in't?

1 Clo. One, that was a woman, Sir; but, rest her soul she's dead.

Ham. How absolute the knave is! we must speak by the card,|| or equivocation will undo us. By the Lord, Horatio, these three years I have taken note of it; the age is grown so picked,¶ that the toe of the peasant comes so near the heel of the courtier, he galls his kibe.—How long hast thou been a grave-maker?

1 Clo. Of all the days i'the year, I came to't that day that our last king Hamlet overcame Fortinbras.

Ham. How long's that since?

1 Clo. Cannot you tell that? every fool can tell that: It was that very day that young Hamlet was born: he that is mad, and sent into England.

Ham. Ay, marry, why was he sent into England?

1 Clo. Why, because he was mad: he shall recover his wits there: or, if he do not, tis no great matter there.

Ham. Why?

1 Clo. 'Twill not be seen in him there; there the men are as mad as he.

Ham. How came he mad?

1 Clo. Very strangely, they say.

Ham. How strangely?

1 Clo. 'Faith, e'en with losing his wits.

Ham. Upon what ground?

1 Clo. Why, here in Denmark; I have been sexton here, man and boy, thirty years.

Ham. How long will a man lie i'the earth ere he rot?

1 Clo. 'Faith, if he be not rotten before he die, (as we have many pocky corpses now-a-days, that will scarce hold the laying in,) he will last you some eight year, or nine year: a tanner will last you nine year.

Ham. Why he more than another?

1 Clo. Why, Sir, his hide is so tanned with his trade, that he will keep out water a great while; and your water is a sore decayer of your whorson dead body. Here's a scull now hath lain you i'the earth, three-and-twenty years.

Ham. Whose was it?

1 Clo. A whorson mad fellow's it was. Whose do you think it was?

Ham. Nay, I know not.

1 Clo. A pestilence on him for a mad rogue! he poured a flagon of Rhenish on my head once. This same scull, Sir, was Yorick's scull, the king's jester.

Ham. This?

[Takes the Scull.

1 Clo. E'en that.

Ham. Alas! poor Yorick!—I knew him, Horatio; a fellow of infinite jest, of most excellent fancy: he hath borne me on his back a thousand times; and now, how abhorred in my imagination it is! my gorge rises at it. Here hung those lips, that I have kissed I know not how oft. Where be your gibes now? your gambols? your songs? your flashes of merriment, that were wont to set the table on a roar? Not one now, to mock your own grinning? quite chap-fallen? Now get you to my lady's chamber, and tell her, let her paint an inch thick, to this favour* she must come; make her laugh at that.—Pr'ythee, Horatio, tell me one thing.

Hor. What's that, my lord?

Ham. Dost thou think, Alexander looked o'this fashion i'the earth?

Hor. E'en so.

Ham. And smelt so? pah!

[Throws down the Scull.

Hor. E'en so, my lord.

Ham. To what base uses we may return, Horatio! why may not imagination trace the noble dust of Alexander, till he find it stopping a bung-hole?

Hor. 'Twere to consider too curiously, to consider so.

Ham. No, faith, not a jot; but to follow him thither with modesty enough, and likelihoood to lead it: As thus; Alexander died, Alexander was buried, Alexander returneth to dust; the dust is earth; of earth we make loam: And why of that loam, whereto he was converted, might they not stop a beer-barrel?

Imperious† Cesar, dead, and turn'd to clay,

Might stop a hole to keep the wind away:

Oh! that the earth, which kept the world in awe,

Should patch a wall to expel the winter's flaw!‡

But soft! but soft! aside:—Here comes the king.

* An ancient game played as quoits are at present.

† Subtilties. ‡ Frivolous distinctions. § Head.

By the compass, or chart of direction.

¶ Spruce, affected.

* Countenance, complexion.

‡ Blast.

† Imperial.

Enter PRIESTS, &c. in Procession; the Corpse of OPHELIA; LAERTES; and Mourners following; KING, QUEEN, their Trains, &c.

The queen, the courtiers: who is this they follow?
And with such maimed rites! * This doth be-
The corse, they follow, did with desperate hand
Fordo† its own life. 'Twas of some estate: ‡
Couch we awhile, and mark.

[Retiring with HORATIO.]

Laer. What ceremony else?

Ham. That is Laertes,
A very noble youth: Mark.

Laer. What ceremony else?

‡ Priest. Her obsequies have been as far enlarg'd
As we have warranty: Her death was doubtful;
And, but that great command o'ersways the order,
She should in ground unsanctified have lodg'd,
Till the last trumpet: for charitable prayers,
Shards, § flints, and pebbles, should be thrown
on her:

Yet here she is allow'd her virgin crants, ¶
Her maiden strewments, and the bringing home
Of bell and burial.

Laer. Must there no more be done?

¶ Priest. No more be done!
We should profane the service of the dead,
To sing a requiem ¶ and such rest to her
As to peace-parted souls.

Laer. Lay her i'the earth;—
And from her fair and unpolliuted flesh,
May violets spring!—I tell thee, churlish priest,
A minist'ring angel shall my sister be,
When thou liest howling.

Ham. What, the fair Ophelia!

Queen. Sweets to the sweet: Farewell!

[Scattering Flowers.]

I hop'd, thou shouldst have been my Hamlet's
wife:
I thought thy bride-bed to have deck'd, sweet
maid,
And not have strew'd thy grave.

Laer. O treble woe
Fall ten times treble on that cursed head,
Whose wicked deed thy most ingenious sense
Depriv'd thee of!—Hold off the earth awhile,
Till I have caught her once more in mine arms;
[Leaps into the Grave.]

Now pile your dust upon the quick  and dead;
Till of this flat a mountain you have made
To o'ertop old Pellon, or the skyish head
Of blue Olympus.

Ham. [Advancing.] What is he, whose grief
Bears such an emphasis † whose phrase of sorrow
Conjures the wand'ring stars, and makes them
stand

Like wonder-wounded hearers? this is I,
Hamlet the Dane. [Leaps into the Grave.]

Laer. The devil take thy soul!

[Grappling with him.]

Ham. Thou pray'st not well.
I pr'ythee, take thy fingers from my throat;
For, though I am not splenetic and rash,
Yet have I in me something dangerous,
Which let thy wisdom fear: Hold off thy hand.

King. Pluck them asunder.

Queen. Hamlet, Hamlet!

All. Gentlemen,—

Hor. Good my lord, be quiet.

[The Attendants part them, and they come out of the Grave.]

Ham. Why, I will fight with him upon this
theme,
Until my eye-lids will no longer wag.

Queen. O my son! what theme?

Ham. I lov'd Ophelia: forty thousand brothers

Could not, with all their quantity of love,
Make up my sum.—What wilt thou do for her?
King. Oh! he is mad, Laertes.

Queen. For love of God, forbear him.

Ham. 'Zounds, show me what thou'lt do:
Woul't weep? woul't fight? woul't fast? woul't tear thyself?

Woul't drink up Eail? * eat a crocodile?
I'll do't.—Dost thou come here to whine?
To outface me with leaping in her grave?
Be buried quick with her, and so will I:
And, if thou prate of mountains, let them throw
Millions of acres on us; till our ground,
Singeing his pate against the burning zone,
Make Ossa like a wart! Nay, an thou'lt mouth,
I'll rant as well as thou.

Queen. This is mere madness:
And thus awhile the fit will work on him;
Anon, as patient as the female dove,
When that her golden complets are disclos'd, †
His silence will sit drooping.

Ham. Hear you, Sir;
What is the reason that you use me thus?
I lov'd you ever: But it is no matter;
Let Hercules himself do what he may,
The cat will mew, and dog will have his day.

[Exit.]

King. I pray thee, good Horatio, wait upon him.—[Exit HORATIO.]
Strengthen your patience in our last night's speech;
[To LAERTES.]
We'll put the matter to the present push.—
Good Gertrude, set some watch over your son.—
This grave shall have a living monument:
An hour of quiet shortly shall we see;
Till then, in patience our proceeding be.

[Exeunt.]

SCENE II.—A Hall in the Castle.

Enter HAMLET and HORATIO.

Ham. So much for this, Sir: now shall you see the other;—
You do remember all the circumstance?

Hor. Remember it, my lord!

Ham. Sir, in my heart there was a kind of fighting,
That would not let me sleep: methought, I lay
Worse than the mutines; ‡ in the bilboes. §
Rashly,

And prais'd be rashness for it,—Let us know,
Our indiscretion sometimes serves us well,
When our deep plots do pall: ¶ and that should teach us,

There's a divinity that shapes our ends,
Rough-hew them how we will.

Hor. That is most certain.

Ham. Up from my cabin,
My sea-gown scarf'd about me, in the dark
Grop'd I to find out them; had my desire;
Finger'd their packet; and, in fine, withdrew
To mine own room again; making so bold,
My fears forgetting manners, to unseal
Their grand commission; where I found, Horatio,

A royal knavery; an exact command,—
Larded ¶ with many several sorts of reasons,
Importing Denmark's health, and England's too,
With, ho! such bugs  and goblins in my
life,—

That, on the supervise, †† no leisure bated,
No, not to stay the grinding of the axe,
My head should be struck off.

Hor. Is't possible?

Ham. Here's the commission; read it at more leisure.

But wilt thou hear now how I did proceed?

Hor. Ay, beseech you.

Ham. Being thus benetted round with villanies,

* Imperfect obsequies. † Undo, destroy.
‡ High rank. § Broken pots, or tiles.
¶ A German term for garland.
¶ A mass for the dead.  Living.

* Eail is vinegar; but Mr. Steevens conjectures the word should be Wield, a river which falls into the Baltic ocean. † Hatched. ‡ Mutineers.
§ The ship's prison. ¶ Pail. ¶ Garnished.
 Bugbears. †† Looking over.

Or * I could make a prologue to my brains,
They had begun the play ;—I sat me down ;
Devis'd a new commission ; wrote it fair :
I once did hold it, as our statists † do,
A baseness to write fair, and labour'd much
How to forget that learning ; but, Sir, now
It did me yeoman's service : Wilt thou know
The effect of what I wrote ?

Hor. Ay, good my lord.

Ham. An earnest conjuration from the
king,—
As England was his faithful tributary ;
As love between them like the palm might
flourish ;
As peace should still her wheaten garland wear,
And stand a comma ‡ 'tween their amities ;
And many such like as's of great charge,—
That, on the view and knowing of these contents,
Without debatement further, more, or less,
He should the bearers put to sudden death,
Not shriving §-time allow'd.

Hor. How was this seal'd ?

Ham. Why, even in that was heaven ordinant ;
I had my father's signet in my purse,
Which was the model ¶ of that Danish seal :
Folded the writ up in form of the other ;
Subscrib'd it ; gave't the impression ; plac'd it safely,
The channelling never known : Now, the next day
Was our sea-fight ; and what to this was se-quent ¶

Thou know'st already.

Hor. So Guildenstern and Rosencrantz go to't.

Ham. Why, man, they did make love to this employment ;
They are not near my conscience ; their defeat
Does by their own insinuation grow :
'Tis dangerous, when the baser nature comes
Between the pass and fell incensed points
Of mighty opposites.

Hor. Why, what a king is this !

Ham. Does it not, think thee, stand me now upon ?
He that hath kill'd my king and whor'd my mother,
Popp'd in between the election and my hopes ;
Thrown out his angel for my proper life,
And with such cozenage ; is't not perfect conscience,
To quit  him with this arm ? and is't not to be damn'd,
To let this canker of our nature come
In further evil ?

Hor. It must be shortly known to him from England,
What is the issue of the business there.

Ham. It will be short ; the interim is mine ;
And a man's life no more than to say, one.
But I am very sorry, good Horatio,
That to Laertes I forgot myself ;
For, by the image of my cause, I see
The portraiture of his : I'll count †† his favours :
But, sure, the bravery of his grief did put me
Into a towering passion.

Hor. Peace ; who comes here ?

Enter Osr.

Osr. Your lordship is right welcome back to Denmark.

Ham. I humbly thank you, Sir.—Dost know this waterfly ††† ?

Hor. No, my good lord.

Ham. Thy state is the more gracious ; for
'tis a vice to know him : He hath much land, and fertile : let a beast be lord of beasts, and his crib shall stand at the king's mess : 'Tis a chough, §§ but, as I say, spacious in the possession of dirt.

Osr. Sweet lord, if your lordship were at leisure, I should impart a thing to you from his majesty.

Ham. I will receive it, Sir, with all diligence of spirit : Your bonnet to its right use ; 'tis for the head.

Osr. I thank your lordship, 'tis very hot.

Ham. No, believe me, 'tis very cold ; the wind is northerly.

Osr. It is indifferent cold, my lord, indeed.

Ham. But yet, methinks, it is very sultry and hot ; or my complexion—

Osr. Exceedingly, my lord ; it is very sultry,—as 'twere,—I cannot tell how—My lord, his majesty bade me signify to you, that he has laid a great wager on your head : Sir, this is the matter,—

Ham. I beseech you, remember—

[HAMLET moves him to put on his Hat.

Osr. Nay, good my lord ; for my ease, in good faith. * Sir, here is newly come to court, Laertes : believe me, an absolute gentleman, full of most excellent differences, † of very soft society, and great showing : Indeed, to speak feelingly of him, he is the card ‡ or calendar of gentry, for you shall find in him the continent § of what part a gentleman would see.

Ham. Sir, this disfigurement suffers no perdition in you ;—though, I know, to divide him inventorially, would dizzy the arithmetic of memory ;
and yet but raw neither, in respect of his quick sail. But, in the verity of extolment, I take him to be a soul of great article ; and his infusion of such dearth and rareness, as, to make true diction of him, his semblable is his mirror ;
and, who else would trace him, his umbrage,
nothing more. ¶

Osr. Your lordship speaks most infallibly of
him.

Ham. The concernancy, Sir ? why do we wrap the gentleman in our more rawer breath ?

Osr. Sir ?

Hor. Is't not possible to understand in another tongue ? You will do't, Sir, really.

Ham. What imports the nomination ¶ of this gentleman ?

Osr. Of Laertes ?

Hor. His purse is empty already ; all his golden words are spent.

Ham. Of him, Sir.

Osr. I know, you are not ignorant—

Ham. I would, you did, Sir ; yet, in faith, if you did, it would not much approve  me ;—
Well, Sir.

Osr. You are not ignorant of what excellence Laertes is—

Ham. I dare not confess that, lest I should compare with him in excellence ; but, to know a man well, were to know himself.

Osr. I mean, Sir, for his weapon ; but in the imputation laid on him by them, in his meed ††
he's unfellowed.

Ham. What's his weapon ?

Osr. Rapier and dagger.

Ham. That's two of his weapons : but, well.

Osr. The king, Sir, hath wagered with him six Barbary horses : against the which he has impawned, †† as I take it, six French rapiers and poniards, with their assigns, as girdle, hangers, §§ and so : Three of the carriages, in faith, are very dear to fancy, very responsive to the hills, most delicate carriages, and of very liberal conceit.

Ham. What call you the carriages ?

Hor. I knew, you must be edified by the margin, ||| ere you had done.

Osr. The carriages, Sir, are the hangers.

* The affected phrase of the time.

† Distinguishing excellencies. ‡ Compass or chart.

§ The country and pattern for imitation.

¶ This speech is a ridicule of the court jargon of that time. ¶ Mentioning.  Recommend.

†† Praise. †† Impawned, put down, staked.

§§ That part of the belt by which the sword was suspended. ||| Margin of a book which contains explanatory notes.

Ham. The phrase would be more german^{*} to the matter, if we could carry a cannon by our sides; I would, it might be hangers till then. But, on: Six Barbary horses against six French swords, their assigns, and three liberal conceited carriages; that's the French bet against the Danish: Why is this impawned, as you call it?

Osr. The king, Sir, hath laid, that in a dozen passes between yourself and him, he shall not exceed you three hits; he hath laid, on twelve for nine; and it would come to immediate trial, if your lordship would vouchsafe the answer.

Ham. How, if I answer, no?

Osr. I mean, my lord, the opposition of your person in trial.

Ham. Sir, I will walk here in the hall: If it please his majesty, it is the breathing time of day with me: let the foils be brought, the gentleman willing, and the king hold his purpose, I will win for him, if I can; if not, I will gain nothing but my shame, and the odd hits.

Osr. Shall I deliver you so?

Ham. To this effect, Sir; after what flourish your nature will.

Osr. I commend my duty to your lordship.

[Exit.

Ham. Yours, yours.—He does well to commend it himself; there are no tongues else for's turn.

Hor. This lapwing † runs away with the shell on his head.

Ham. He did comply ‡ with his dug, before he sucked it. Thus has he (and many more of the same breed, that, I know, the drossy § age dotes on,) only got the tune of the time, and outward habit of encounter; a kind of yesty ¶ collection, which carries them through and through the most fond ¶ and winnowed opinions; and do but blow them to their trial, the bubbles are out.

Enter a LORD.

Lord. My lord, his majesty commended him to you by young Osric, who brings back to him, that you attend him in the hall: He sends to know, if your pleasure hold to play with Laertes, or that you will take longer time.

Ham. I am constant to my purposes, they follow the king's pleasure: If his fitness speaks, mine is ready; now, or whensoever, provided I be so able as now.

Lord. The king, and queen, and all are coming down.

Ham. In happy time.

Lord. The queen desires you to use some gentle entertainment to Laertes, before you fall to play.

Ham. She well instructs me. [Exit LORD.

Hor. You will lose this wager, my lord.

Ham. I do not think so; since he went into France, I have been in continual practice; I shall win at the odds. But thou wouldst not think, how ill all's here about my heart: but it is no matter.

Hor. Nay, good my lord,—

Ham. It is but foolery; but it is such a kind of gain-giving,  as would, perhaps, trouble a woman.

Hor. If your mind dislike any thing, obey it: I will forestal †† their repair hither, and say, you are not fit.

Ham. Not a whit, we defy augury; there is a special providence in the fall of a sparrow. If it be now, 'tis not to come; if it be not to come, it will be now; if it be not now; yet it will come: the readiness is all: Since no man, of might be leaves, knows what is't to leave betimes? Let be.

Enter KING, QUEEN, LAERTES, LORDS, OSRIC, and Attendants, with Foils, &c.

King. Come, Hamlet, come, and take this hand from me.

[The KING puts the Hand of LAERTES into that of HAMLET.

Ham. Give me your pardon, Sir: I have done you wrong;

But pardon it, as you are a gentleman.

This presence^{*} knows, and you must needs have heard,

How I am punish'd with a sore distraction.

What I have done,

That might your nature, honour, and exception,

Roughly awake, I here proclaim was madness.

Was't Hamlet wrong'd Laertes? Never, Hamlet:

If Hamlet from himself be ta'en away,

And, when he is not himself, does wrong Laertes,

Then Hamlet does it not, Hamlet denies it.

Who does it then? His madness? If't be so,

Hamlet is of the faction that is wrong'd,

His madness is poor Hamlet's enemy.

Sir, in this audience,

Let my disclaiming from a purpos'd evil

Free me so far in your most generous thoughts,

That I have shot my arrow o'er the house,

And hurt my brother.

Laer. I am satisfied in nature,

Whose motive, in this case, should stir me most

To my revenge: but in my terms of honour,

I stand aloof; and will no reconciliation,

Till by some elder masters, of known honour,

I have a voice and precedent of peace,

To keep my name ungor'd: † But till that time,

I do receive your offer'd love like love,

And will not wrong it.

Ham. I embrace it freely;

And will this brother's wager frankly play.—

Give us the foils; come on.

Laer. Come, one for me.

Ham. I'll be your foil, Laertes; in mine ignorance

Your skill shall, like a star i'the darkest night,

Stick fiery off, indeed.

Laer. You mock me, Sir.

Ham. No, by this hand.

King. Give them the foils, young Osric.—
Cousin Hamlet,

You know the wager?

Ham. Very well, my lord;

Your grace hath laid the odds o'the weaker side.

King. I do not fear it: I have seen you both:—

But since he's better'd, we have therefore odds.

Laer. This is too heavy, let me see another.

Ham. This likes me well: These foils have all a length? [They prepare to play.

Osr. Ay, my good lord.

King. Set me the stoups ‡ of wine upon that table:—

If Hamlet gives the first or second hit,

Or quit in answer of the third exchange,

Let all the battlements their ordnance fire;

The king shall drink to Hamlet's better breath;

And in the cup an union § shall be throw,

Richer than that which four successive kings

In Denmark's crown have worn; Give me the cups;

And let the kettle to the trumpet speak,

The trumpet to the cannoneer without,

The cannons to the heavens, the heaven to earth,

Now the King drinks to Hamlet.—Come, begin;—

And you, the judges, bear a wary eye.

Ham. Come on, Sir.

Laer. Come, my lord.

[They play

Ham. One.

* A kin. † A bird which runs about immediately as it is hatched.
† Worthless. ‡ Compliment.
 Mingling. † For fond, fondness.
† Prevent.

* The king and queen's presence. † Unwounded.
‡ Large jug. § A precious pearl.

Laer. No.

Ham. Judgment.

Oss. A hit, a very palpable hit.

Laer. Well,—again.

King. Stay, give me drink; Hamlet, this pearl is thine;
Here's to thy health.—Give him the cup.

[Trumpets sound; and Cannon shot off within.]

Ham. I'll play this bout first, set it by awhile.

Come.—Another hit; What say you?

[They play.]

Laer. A touch, a touch, I do confess.

King. Our son shall win.

Queen. He's fat, and scant o'breath.—
Here, Hamlet, take my napkin,* rub thy brows:
The queen carouses† to thy fortune, Hamlet.

Ham. Good madam,—

King. Gertrude, do not drink.

Queen. I will, my lord; I pray you, pardon me.

King. It is the poison'd cup; it is too late.

Ham. I dare not drink yet, madam; by and by.

Queen. Come, let me wipe thy face.

Laer. My lord, I'll hit him now.

King. I do not think it.

Laer. And yet it is almost against my conscience.

Ham. Come, for the third, Laertes: You do but dally;

I pray you, pass with your best violence;
I am afeard you make a wanton‡ of me.

Laer. Say you so? come on.

[They play.]

Oss. Nothing neither way.

Laer. Have at you now.

[LAERTES wounds HAMLET; then, in scuffling, they change Rapiers, and HAMLET wounds LAERTES.]

King. Part them, they are incens'd.

Ham. Nay, come again. [The QUEEN falls.]

Oss. Look to the queen there, ho!

Hor. They bleed on both sides:—How is it, my lord?

Oss. How is't, Laertes?

Laer. Why, as a woodcock to my own springe,
Ossic;

I am justly kill'd with mine own treachery.

Ham. How does the queen?

King. She swoons to see them bleed.

Queen. No, no, the drink, the drink,—O my dear Hamlet!

The drink, the drink: I am poison'd! [Dies.]

Ham. O villainy!—Ho! let the door be lock'd:

Treachery! seek it out. [LAERTES falls.]

Laer. It is here, Hamlet: Hamlet, thou art slain;

No medicine in the world can do thee good,

In thee there is not half an hour's life;

The treacherous instrument is in thy hand,

Unbated‡ and envenom'd: the foul practice

Hath turn'd itself on me; lo, here I lie,

Never to rise again: Thy mother's poison'd;

I can no more; the king, the king's to blame.

Ham. The point

Envenom'd too!—Then, venom, to thy work.

[Stabs the King.]

Oss. & Lords. Treason! treason!

King. O yet defend me, friends, I am but hurt.

Ham. Here, thou incestuous, murd'rous, damned Dane,

Drink off this potion:—Is the union here?

Follow my mother. [KING dies.]

Laer. He is justly serv'd;

It is a poison temper'd‡ by himself.—

Exchange forgiveness with me, noble Hamlet:

Mine and my father's death come not upon thee;

Nor thine on me.

[Dies.]

Ham. Heaven make thee free of it! I follow thee.

I am dead, Horatio:—Wretched queen, adieu!

You that look pale and tremble at this chance,

That are but mutes or audience to this act,

Had I but time, (as this fell sergeant,* death,

Is strict in his arrest,) oh! I could tell you,—

But let it be:—Horatio, I am dead;

Thou liv'st; report me and my cause aright

To the unsatisfied.

Hor. Never believe it;

I am more an antique Roman than a Dane,

Here's yet some liquor left.

Ham. As thou'rt a man,—

Give me the cup; let go; by heaven I'll have it.—

O God!—Horatio, what a wounded name,

Things standing thus unknown, shall live behind me?

If thou didst ever hold me in thy heart,

Absent thee from felicity awhile,

And in this harsh world draw thy breath in pain,

To tell my story.—

[March afar off, and Shot within.]

What warlike noise is this?

Oss. Young Fortinbras, with conquest come from Poland,

To the ambassadors of England gives

This warlike volley.

Ham. O I die, Horatio;

The potent poison quite o'er-crows† my spirit;

I cannot live to hear the news from England:

But I do prophesy the election lights

On Fortinbras; he has my dying voice;

So tell him, with the occurrents‡ more or less,

Which have solicited,§—The rest is silence.

[Dies.]

Hor. Now cracks a noble heart;—Good night, sweet prince;

And flights of angels sing thee to thy rest!—

Why does the drum come hither?

[March within.]

Enter FORTINBRAS, the ENGLISH AMBASSADORS, and others.

Fort. Where is this sight?

Mor. What is it, you would see?

If aught of woe, or wonder, cease your search.

Fort. This quarry‡ cries on havoc!‡—O proud death!

What feast is toward in thine eternal cell,

That thou so many princes, at a shot,

So bloodily hast struck?

1 Amb. The sight is dismal:

And our affairs from England come too late;

The ears are senseless, that should give us hearing,

To tell him, his commandment is fulfill'd,

That Rosencrantz and Guildenstern are dead:

Where should we have our thanks?

Hor. Not from his mouth,

Had it the ability of life to thank you;

He never gave commandment for their death.

But since, so jump†† upon this bloody question,

You from the Polack‡‡ wars, and you from England,

Are here arriv'd; give order that these bodies

High on a stage be placed to the view;

And let me speak, to the yet unknowing world,

How these things come about: So shall you hear

Of carnal, bloody, and unnatural acts;

Of accidental judgments, casual slaughters;

Of deaths put on by cunning, and forc'd cause;

And, in this upshot, purposes mistook

Fall'n on the inventors' heads: all this can I

Truly deliver.

more :

But let this same be presently perform'd
Even while men's minds are wild ; lest more

Fort. Let four captains

Bear Hamlet, like a soldier, to the stage ;
For he was likely, had he been put on,
To have prov'd most royally : and, for his passage,

Becomes the field, but here shows much amiss.
Go, bid the soldiers shoot. [A dead march.

which, a Peal of Ordnance is shot off.*

In reply to an objection which was raised by an eminent critic, and has been repeated with considerable justice by all who have since written on the incidents of this play, viz. that "there appears no adequate cause for the feigned madness of Hamlet ; as he does nothing which he might not have done with the reputation of sanity ; playing the madman most when he treats Ophelia with so much rudeness, which seems to be useless and wanton cruelty,"—the following novel and satisfactory opinion, condensed from the remarks of a most intelligent and prize-worthy commentator, may be advantageously quoted :—Hamlet resolved to counterfeit madness that he might kill his uncle without being considered as a traitor and a murderer : this he must have been, having no proof against his father's assassin, except what was said by the ghost to himself alone ; and of course it would have no weight with any other person. Wishing for additional evidence, he had recourse to the play, which confirming the story of the ghost, he would instantly have gratified his vengeance by killing his uncle, but for the extraordinary circumstance of finding him on his knees at prayer ; and shortly afterwards he actually supposed he had done it, when he stabbed Polonius behind the arras, and, finding his mistake, solemnly conjured his mother to retain the secret of his madness being feigned. His treatment of "the young, the beautiful, the harmless, and the pious Ophelia" may be explained in the same way ; for if he behaved in such a frantic manner to her, who was the object of his tenderest regard, it is a certain consequence that not a doubt could be entertained by others of the reality of his distraction ; and thus the delusion was complete.—Bowdler versus Johnson.

OTHELLO, THE MOOR OF VENICE.

LITERARY AND HISTORICAL NOTICE.

THE story upon which this beautiful and instructive tragedy is founded, was taken, according to Mr. Pope, from Cynthio's novels. It was probably written in the year 1611. Mustapha, Selymus's general, invaded Cyprus in May 1570, and conquered it in the following year. His fleet first sailed towards that island; but immediately changing its course for Rhodes, formed a junction with another squadron, and then returned to the attack of Cyprus: thus the actual historical periods of the performance are satisfactorily determined. In addition to the admirable lesson set forth in this impressive tragedy, so well calculated to produce an excellent effect upon the human mind, by portraying that baneful passion, which, when once indulged, is the inevitable destroyer of conjugal happiness; it may justly be considered as one of the noblest efforts of dramatic genius that has appeared in any age, or in any language. "The fiery openness of Othello, (says Dr. Johnson) magnanimous, artless, and credulous; boundless in his confidence, ardent in his affection, inflexible in his resolution, and obdurate in his revenge—the soft simplicity of Desdemona, confident of merit, and conscious of innocence; her artless perseverance in her suit, and her slowness to suspect that she can be suspected—the cool malignity of Iago, silent in his resentment, subtle in his designs, and studious at once of his interest and his vengeance—are such proofs of Shakspeare's skill in human nature, as I suppose it is in vain to seek in any modern writer; whilst even the inferior characters would be very conspicuous in any other piece, not only for their justness, but their strength." In proportion to the enormity of such a crime as adultery, should be the caution with which a suspicion of it is permitted to be entertained; and our great dramatic moralist was no doubt desirous of enforcing this maxim, when he made it, as he has done, the subject of no less than four of his most finished productions.

ACT I.

SCENE I.—Venice.—A Street.

Enter RODERIGO and IAGO.

Rod. Tush, never tell me, I take it much unkindly,
That thou, Iago,—who hast had my purse,
As if the strings were thine,—shouldst know of this.

Iago. 'Sblood, but you will not hear me:—
If ever I did dream of such a matter,
Abhor me.

Rod. Thou told'st me, thou didst hold him in thy hate.

Iago. Despise me, if I do not. Three great ones of the city,
In personal suit to make me his lieutenant,
Oft capp'd* to him;—and, by the faith of man,
I know my price, I am worth no worse a place:

Othello, the Moor of Venice.

Oth. Methinks it should be now a huge eclipse
Of sun and moon; and that the affrighted globe
Should yawn at alteration.

Ossa. The senate hath sent about three several quests,
To search you out.

Oth. 'Tis well I am found by you;
I will but spend a word here in the house,
And go with you.

Act I. Scene II.

Oss. ————O, my soul's joy!
Let every tempest come such calms,
So the winds blow till they have waken'd death.

Act II. Scene I.

Oth. 'Tis not to make me jealous,
To say—my wife is fair, feeds well, loves company,
Is free of speech, sings, plays, and dances well:
Nor from mine own weak merits will I draw
The smallest fear, or doubt of her revolt,
For she had eyes, and chose me.

Act III. Scene III.

Des. To whom, my lord? with whom? how am I false?

Oth. O Deademons, away! away! away!

Des. Alas, the heavy day!—Why do you weep?

Act IV. Scene II.

Oth. She's like a Har, gone to burning hell;
'Twas I that killed her.

Emil. O, the more angel she,
And you the blacker devil!

Act V. Scene II.

And I, (God bless the mark!) his Moorship's ancient.

Rod. By heaven, I rather would have been his hangman.

Iago. But there's no remedy; 'tis the curse of service;
Preferment goes by letter and affection,
Not by the old gradation, where each second Stood heir to the first. Now, Sir, be judge
yourself,

Whether I in any just term am afflu'd^{*}
To love the Moor.

Rod. I would not follow him then.

Iago. O Sir, content you;
I follow him to serve my turn upon him:
We cannot all be masters, nor all masters
Cannot be truly follow'd. You shall mark
Many a duteous and knee-crooking knave,
That, doting on his own obsequious bondage,
Wears out his time, much like his master's ass,
For nought but provender; and, when he's old,
caskier'd;

Whip me such honest knaves: Others there are,
Who, trimm'd in forms and visages of duty,
Keep yet their hearts attending on themselves;
And, throwing but shows of service on their lords,
Do well thrive by them; and, when they have
lin'd their coats,
Do themselves homage: these fellows have some
soul;

And such a one do I profess myself.

For, Sir,
It is as sure as you are Roderigo,
Were I the Moor, I would not be Iago:
In following him, I follow but myself;
Heaven is my judge, not I for love and duty,
But seeming so, for my peculiar end;
For when my outward action doth demonstrate
The native act and figure of my heart
In compliment extorn, 'tis not long after
But I will wear my heart upon my sleeve
For daws to peck at: I am not what I am.

Rod. What a full fortune does the thick-lips
If he can carry't thus! [ows]

Iago. Call up her father,
Rouse him; make after him, poison his delight,
Proclaim him in the streets; incense her kin-
men,

And, though he in a fertile climate dwell,
Plague him with flies; though that his joy be joy,
Yet throw such changes of vexation on't,
As it may lose some colour.

Rod. Here is her father's house: I'll call aloud.

Iago. Do; with like timorous accent, and dire yell,

As when, by night and negligence, the fire
Is spied in populous cities.

Rod. What, ho! Brabantio! signior Braban-tio, ho!

Rod. Most grave Brabantio, will not serve God, if the devil bid you. Because we come to do you service, you think we are ruffians: You'll have your daughter covered with a Barbary horse; you'll have your nephews[†]

neigh to you: you'll have couriers for cousins, and gennets[‡] for Germans.

Bra. What profane wretch art thou?

Iago. I am one, Sir, that comes to tell you your daughter and the Moor are now making the beast with two backs.

Bra. Thou art a villain.

Iago. You are—a senator.

Bra. This thou shalt answer: I know thee
Roderigo.

Rod. Sir, I will answer any thing. But I be-

Belief of it oppresses me already:—
Light, I say! light! [Exit from above.

Iago. Farewell; for I must leave you:
It seems not meet, nor wholesome to my place,
To be produc'd (as, if I stay, I shall,)
Against the Moor: For, I do know, the state,
However this may gall him with some check,
Cannot with safety cast him; for he's embark'd
With such loud reason to the Cyprus wars, (Which even now stand in act,) that, for their souls,

Another of his fathom they have not,

Though I do hate him as I do hell pains,
Yet, for necessity of present life,
I must show out a flag and sign of love,
Which is indeed but sign. That you shall surely

And there will I be with him. So, farewell.

And what's to come of my despised time,

Rod. Yes, Sir ; I have indeed.

Where we may apprehend her and the Moor ?*

Rod. I think, I can discover him, if you please

Oth. 'Tis better as it is.

Iago. Nay, but he prated,

Against your honour,
That, with the little godliness I have,
I did full hard forbear him. But, I pray, Sir,
Are you fast married ? for be sure of this,—

And hath, in his effect, a voice potential
As double as the duke's ; he will divorce you ;
Or put upon you what restraint and grievance

Will give him cable.

Oth. Let him do his spite :

Cas. The duke does greet you, general ;
And he requires your haste-post-haste appearance,
Even on the instant.

Oth. What is the matter, think you ?

Cas. Something from Cyprus, as I may divine ;
It is a business of some heat : The galleys
Have sent a dozen sequent * messengers
This very night at one another's heels ;
And many of the consuls, rais'd, and met,
Are at the duke's already : You have been hotly

*Good signior, you shall more command with

Bra. O thou foul thief, where hast thou stow'd
my daughter ?

*Damn'd as thou art, thou hast enchanted her :
For I'll refer me to all things of sense,
If she in chains of magic were not bound,
Whether a maid so tender, fair and happy,
So opposite to marriage, that she shunn'd
The wealthy curled darlings of our nation,
Would every have, to incur a general mock,
Run from her guardage to the sooty bosom
Of such a thing as thou : to fear not to delight.
Judge me the world, if 'tis not gross in sense,
That thou hast practis'd on her with foul charms ;
Abus'd her delicate youth with drugs, or minerals,*

That waken motion : I'll have it disputed on ;

'Tis probable, and palpable to thinking.

I therefore apprehend and do attach thee,

For an abuser of the world, a practiser.

Of arts inhibited and out of warrant :—

Lay hold upon him ; if he do resist,

Subdue him at his peril.

Oth. Hold your hands,

Both you of my inclining, and the rest :

Were it my cue to fight, I should have known it

Without a prompter.—Where will you that I go

To answer this your charge ?

Bra. To prison : till fit time

Of law, and course of direct session,

Call thee to answer.

How may the duke be therewith satisfied ;

Whose messengers are here about my side,

Upon some present business of the state,

To bring me to him ?

Mine's not an idle cause: the duke himself,
Or any of my brothers of the state,
Cannot but feel this wrong as 'twere their own:

But though they jump not on a just account,
(As in these cases, where the aim reports,
'Tis oft with difference,) yet do they all confirm
A Turkish fleet, and bearing up to Cyprus.

But the main article I do approve,
In fearful sense.

Enter an OFFICER, with a SAILOR.

Off. A messenger from the gallies.

Duke. Now! the business?

Sailor. The Turkish preparation makes for Rhodes;
So was I bid report here to the state,
By signior Angelo.

Duke. How say you by this change?

1 Sen. This cannot be,
By no assay of reason; 'tis pageant,
To keep us in false gaze: When we consider
The importance of Cyprus to the Turk;
And let ourselves again but understand,
That, as it more concerns the Turk than Rhodes,
So may he with more facile question ‡ bear it,
For that it stands not in such warlike brace, §
But altogether lacks the abilities
That Rhodes is dress'd in:—If we make thought
of this,
We must not think the Turk is so unskillful,
To leave that latest which concerns him first;
Neglecting an attempt of ease and gain,
To wake; and wage a danger profitless.

Duke. Nay, in all confidence, he's not for Rhodes.

Off. Here is more news.

Enter a MESSENGER.

Mess. The Ottomites, reverend and gracious, Steering with due course toward the isle of Rhodes,
Have there enjoined them with an after fleet.

Your trusty and most valiant servitor,
With his free duty recommends you thus,
And prays you to believe him.

Duke. 'Tis certain then for Cyprus.—

Marcus Lacchesé, is he not in town?

1 Sen. He's now in Florence.

Duke. Write from us; wish him post-post-haste: despatch.

1 Sen. Here comes Brabantio, with the valiant
Moor.

* I. e. Our offices of state will be filled by the pagans and bond-slaves of Africa. † Concurrency.
‡ Less opposition. § State of defence

Enter BRABANTIO, OTHELLO, IAGO, RODERIGO and Officers.

Duke. Valiant Othello, we must straight employ you
Against the general enemy Ottoman.

I did not see you; welcome, gentle Signior;

[To BRABANTIO]
We lack'd your counsel and your help to-night.

Bra. So did I your's: Good your grace, pardon
me;

Neither my place, nor aught I heard of business,
Hath rais'd me from my bed; nor doth the general care

Take hold on me; for my particular grief
Is of so flood-gate and o'erbearing nature,
That it engulfs and swallows other sorrows,
And it is still itself.

Duke. Why, what's the matter?

Bra. My daughter! O my daughter!

Sen. Dead?

Bra. Ay, to me;

She is abus'd, stolen from me, and corrupted
By spells and medicines bought of mountebanks;
For nature so preposterously to err,
Being not deficient, blind, or lame of sense,
Sans* witchcraft could not—

Duke. Whoe'er he be, that in this foul proceeding,

Hath thus beguil'd your daughter of herself,
And you of her, the bloody book of law

You shall yourself read in the bitter letter,
After your own sense; yea, though our proper
son

Stood in your action. †

Bra. Humbly I thank your grace.

Here is the man, this Moor; whom now it seems,

Your special mandate, for the state affairs,
Hath hither brought.

Duke & Sen. We are very sorry for it.

Duke. What, in your own part, can you say to this? [To OTHELLO.

Bra. Nothing but this is so.

Oth. Most potent, grave, and reverend signiors,

My very noble and approv'd good masters,
That I have ta'en away this old man's daughter,
It is most true; true, I have married her;
The very head and front of my offending Hath this extent, no more. Rude am I in my speech.

And little bless'd with the set phrase of peace;
For since these arms of mine had seven years'
pith, [us'd

Till now some nine moons wasted, they have
Their dearest action ‡ in the tented field;
And little of this great world can I speak,
More than pertains to feats of broil and battle;
And therefore little shall I grace my cause,
In speaking for myself: Yet, by your gracious patience,

I will a round unvarnish'd tale deliver
Of my whole course of love; what drugs, what
charms,

What conjuration, and what mighty magic,
(For such proceeding I am charg'd withal,)
I won his daughter with.

Bra. A maiden never bold;

Of spirit so still and quiet, that her motion
Blush'd at herself; And she,—in spite of nature,

Of years, of country, credit, every thing.—
To fall in love with what she fear'd to look on †
It is a judgment maim'd and most imperfect,
That will confess—perfection so could could err
Against all rules of nature; and must be driven
To find out practices of cunning hell,
Why this should be. I therefore vouch again,
That with some mixtures powerful o'er th
blood,

Or with some dram conjur'd to this effect,
He wrought upon her.

Duke. To vouch this, is no proof;

* Without. † Accusation. ‡ Best exertion.

Without more certain and more overt-test,*
Than these thin habits, and poor likelihoods
Of modern seeming,† do prefer against him.

I Sen. But, Othello, speak;—
Did you by indirect and forced courses
Subdue and poison this young maid's affections‡

Or came it by request, and such fair question
As soul to soul affordeth‡

Oth. I do beseech you,
Send for the lady to the Sagittary,‡
And let her speak of me before her father:
If you do find me foul in her report,
The trust, the office, I do hold of you,
Not only take away, but let your sentence
Even fall upon my life.

Duke. Fetch Desdemona hither.

Oth. Ancient, conduct them; you best know the place.—

[Exeunt IAGO and Attendants.]

And, till she come, as truly as to heaven
I do confess the vices of my blood,
So justly to your grave ears I'll present
How I did thrive in this fair lady's love,
And she in mine.

Duke. Say it, Othello.

Oth. Her father lov'd me; oft invited me;
Still question'd me the story of my life,
From year to year: the battles, sieges, fortunes,
That I have pass'd.

I ran it through, even from my boyish days,
To the very moment that he bade me tell it.
Wherein I spoke of most disastrous chances,
Of moving accidents, by flood, and field;
Of hair-breadth scapes † the imminent deadly
Of being taken by the insolent foe, [breach;
And sold to slavery; of my redemption thence,
And portance § in my travel's history:
Wherein of antres || vast, and deserts idle,
Rough quarries, rocks, and hills whose heads
touch heaven,

It was my hint to speak, such was the process
And of the Cannibals that each other eat,
The Anthropophagi, and men whose heads
Do grow beneath their shoulders. ¶ These things to hear,

Would Desdemona seriously incline: [thence;
But still the house affairs would draw her
Which ever as she could with haste despatch,
She'd come again, and with a greedy ear
Devour up my discourse: Which I observing,
Took once a pliant hour, and found good
means

To draw from her a prayer of earnest heart,
That I would all my pilgrimage dilate,
Whereof by parcels she had something heard,
But not intentively:  I did consent;
And often did beguile her of her tears,
When I did speak of some distressful stroke,
That my youth suffer'd. My story being done,
She gave me for my pains a world of sighs;
She swore,—in faith, 'twas strange, 'twas passing strange;

'Twas pitiful, 'twas wondrous pitiful;
She wish'd she had not heard it; yet she wish'd

That heaven had made her such a man; she thank'd me;

And bade me if I had a friend that lov'd her,
I should but teach him how to tell my story,
And that would woo her. Upon this hint, I
She lov'd me for the dangers I had pass'd, [spake:
And I lov'd her that she did pity them.
This only is the witchcraft I have us'd;
Here comes the lady, let her witness it.

Enter DESDEMONA, IAGO, and Attendants.

Duke. I think this tale would win my daughter too.—

* Proof.

† Weak show.

‡ The sign of the fictitious creature so called.

§ My behaviour.

|| Caves.

¶ Mentioned

by Mandeville, and also by Sir Walter Raleigh.

 Attentively.

Good Brabantio,
Take up this mangled matter at the best:
Men do their broken weapons rather use,
Than their bare hands.

Bra. I pray you, hear her speak;
If she confess that she was half the wooer,
Destruction on my head, if my bail blame
Light on the man!—Come hither, gentle mistress;

Do you perceive in all this noble company,
Where most you owe obedience?

Des. My noble father,
I do perceive here a divided duty:
To you, I am bound for life and education;
My life and education both do learn me
How to respect you: you are the lord of duty,
I am hitherto your daughter: But here's my husband;

And so much duty as my mother show'd
To you, preferring you before her father,
So much I challenge that I may profess
Due to the Moor my lord.

Bra. God be with you!—I have done:—
Please it your grace, on to the state affairs;
I had rather to adopt a child, than get it.—
Come hither, Moor:

I here do give thee that with all my heart,
Which, but thou hast already, with all my heart [Jewel,

I would keep from thee.—For your sake,
I am glad at soul I have no other child;
For thy escape would teach me tyranny,
To hang clogs on them.—I have done, my lord.

Duke. Let me speak like yourself; * and lay a sentence, [lovers

Which as a grise, † or step, may help these into your favours.

When remedies are past, the griefs are ended,
By seeing the worst, which late on hopes dependent.

To mourn a mischief that is past and gone,
Is the next way to draw new mischief on.
What cannot be preserv'd when fortune takes,
Patience her injury a mockery makes.

The robb'd, that smiles, steals something from
the thief;

He robs himself, that spends a bootless grief.

Bra. So let the Turk of Cyprus us beguile;
We lose it not, so long as we can smile.

He bears the sentence well, that nothing bears
But the free comfort which from thence he hears:

But he bears both the sentence and the sorrow,
That, to pay grief, must of poor patience borrow.

These sentences, to sugar, or to gall,
Being strong on both sides, are equivocal:
But words are words; I never yet did hear,
That the bruise'd heart was pierced through the ear. ‡

I humbly beseech you, proceed to the affairs of state.

Duke. The Turk with a most mighty preparation makes for Cyprus:—Othello, the fortitude of the place is best known to you: And though we have there a substitute of most allowed sufficiency, yet opinion, a sovereign mistress of effects, throws a more safer voice on you: you must therefore be content to slubber § the gloss of your new fortunes with this more stubborn and boisterous expedition.

Oth. The tyrant custom, most grave senators,
Hath made the flinty and steel couch of war
My thrice-driven bed of down: I do agulze ¶
A natural and prompt alacrity,
I find in hardness; and do undertake
These present wars against the Ottomites.
Most humbly therefore bending to your state,
I crave fit disposition for my wife,
Due reference of place, and exhibition,

* As you yourself would speak. † Grief, from degrees
‡ I. e. That wounds of sorrow were ever cured by words of consolation.

§ Obscure.

¶ Acknowledge.

With such accommodation and besort,
As levels with her breeding.

Duke. If you please,
Be't at her father's.

Bra. I'll not have it so.

Oth. Nor I.

Des. Nor I; I would not there reside,
To put my father in impatient thoughts,
By being in his eye. Most gracious duke,
To my unfolding lend a gracious ear;
And let me find a charter in your voice,
To assist my simpleness.

Duke. What would you, Desdemona?

Des. That I did love the Moor to live with
him,
My downright violence and storm of fortunes
May trumpet to the world; my heart's subdued

Even to the very quality* of my lord:
I saw Othello's visage in his mind;
And to his honours, and his vallant parts,
Did I my soul and fortunes consecrate.
So that, dear lords, if I be left behind,
A moth of peace, and he go to the war,
The rights for which I love him, are bereft me,
And I a heavy interim shall support
By his dear absence: Let me go with him.

Oth. Your voices, lords:—"beseech you, let her will
Have a free way.

Vouch with me, heaven; I therefore beg it not
To please the palate of my appetite;
Nor to comply with heat, the young affects,
In my distinct and proper satisfaction;
But to be free and bounteous to her mind:
And heaven defend† your good souls, that you
think

I will your serious and great business scant,
For‡ she is with me: No, when light-wing'd toys

Of feather'd Cupid seel§ with wanton dulness
My speculative and active instruments,
That my disports corrupt and taint my business,
Let housewives make a skillet¶ of my helm,¶
And all indign and base adversities
Make head against my estimation!

Duke. Be it as you shall privately determine,
Either for her stay or going: the affair cries,
haste,
And speed must answer it: you must hence
to-night.

Des. To-night, my lord?

Duke. This night.

Oth. With all my heart.

Duke. At nine i'the morning here we'll meet
again.

Othello, leave some officer behind,
And he shall our commission bring to you;
With such things else of quality and respect,
As doth import you.

Oth. Please your grace, my ancient;
A man he is of honesty and trust:
To his conveyance I assign my wife, [think
With what else needful your good grace shall
To be sent after me.

Duke. Let it be so.—
Good night to every one.—And, noble Signior,
[To BRABANTIO.

If virtue no delighted beauty lack,
Your son-in-law is far more fair than black,
I Sen. Adieu, brave Moor! use Desdemona
well.

Bra. Look to her, Moor; have a quick eye to
see;
She has deceiv'd her father, and may thee.

[Exeunt DUKE, SENATORS, OFFICERS, &c.

Oth. My life upon her faith.—Honest Iago,
My Desdemona must I leave to thee;
I pry'thee, let thy wife attend on her;
And bring them after in the best advantage.—
Come, Desdemona; I have but an hour

Of love, of worldly matters, and direction,
To spend with thee, we must obey the time.

[Exeunt OTHELLO and DESDEMONA.

Rod. Iago.

Iago. What say'st thou, noble heart?

Rod. What will I do, thinkest thou?

Iago. Why, go to bed, and sleep.

Rod. I will incontinently* drown myself.

Iago. Well, if thou dost, I shall never love thee after it. Why, thou silly gentleman!

Rod. It is silliness to live, when to live is a torment: and then have we a prescription to die, when death is our physician.

Iago. O villainous! I have looked upon the world for four times seven years; and since I could distinguish between a benefit and an injury, I never found a man that knew how to love himself. Ere I would say, I would drown myself for the love of a Guinea-ben,† I would change my humanity with a baboon.

Rod. What should I do? I confess it is my shame to be so fond; but it is not in virtue to amend it.

Iago. Virtue? a fig! 'tis in ourselves, that we are thus, or thus. Our bodies are our gardens; to the which our wills are gardeners: so that if we will plant nettles, or sow lettuce; set hyssop, and weed up thyme: supply it with one gender of herbs, or distract it with many;
either to have it steril with idleness, or manured with industry; why, the power and cor-rigible authority of this lies in our wills. If the balance of our lives had not one scale of reason to poise another of sensuality, the blood and baseness of our natures would conduct us to most preposterous conclusions: But we have reason to cool our raging motions, our carnal stings, our unbitted‡ lusts: whereof I take this,
that you call—love, to be a sect,§ or acion.

Rod. It cannot be.

Iago. It is merely a lust of the blood, and a permission of the will. Come, be a man;
Drown thyself? drown cats and blind puppies.
I have professed me thy friend, and I confess me knit to thy deserving with cables of per-durable toughness; I could never better stead thee than now. Put money in thy purse; follow these wars; defeat thy favour with an unrurped beard;¶ I say, put money in thy purse. It cannot be, that Desdemona should long continue her love to the Moor,—put money in thy purse;—nor he his to her: it was a violent commencement, and thou shalt see an answerable sequestration;—put but money in thy purse.—These Moors are changeable in their wills;—fill thy purse with money: the food that to him now is as luscious as locusts, shall be to him shortly as bitter as coloquintida.
She must change for youth: when she is sated with his body, she will find the error of her choice.—She must have change, she must:
therefore put money in thy purse.—If thou wilt needs damn thyself, do it a more delicate way than drowning. Make all the money thou canst: If sanctimony and a frail vow, betwixt an erring¶ barbarian and a supersubtle Venetian, be not too hard for my wits, and all the tribe of hell, thou shalt enjoy her; therefore make money. A pox of drowning thyself! it is clean out of the way: seek thou rather to be hanged in compassing thy joy, than to be drowned and go without her.

Rod. Wilt thou be fast to my hopes, if I depend on the issue?

Iago. Thou art sure of me;—Go, make money:—I have told thee often, and I re-tell thee again and again, I hate the Moor: My cause is hearted: thine hath no less reason:
Let us be conjunctive in our revenge against him: if thou canst cuckold him, thou dost thyself a pleasure, and me a sport. There are many events in the womb of time, which will be delivered. Traverse; * go; provide thy money. We will have more of this to-morrow. Adieu.

Rod. Where shall we meet i'the morning?

Iago. At my lodging.

Rod. I'll be with thee betimes.

Iago. Go to; farewell. Do you hear, Roderigo?

Rod. What say you?

Iago. No more of drowning, do you hear.

Rod. I am changed. I'll sell all my land.

Iago. Go to; farewell: put money enough in your purse. [Exit RODRIGO.]

Thus do I ever make my fool my purse:

For I mine own gain'd knowledge should profane,

If I would time expend with such a snipe,
But for my sport and profit. I hate the Moor;
And it is thought abroad, that 'twixt my sheets
He has done my office: I know not if't be true;
But I, for mere suspicion in that kind,
Will do, as if for surety. He holds me well;
The better shall my purpose work on him.

Cassio's a proper man: Let me see now;

To get his place, and to plume up my will;

A double knavery,—How? how?—Let me see:—

After some time, to abuse Othello's ear,

That he is too familiar with his wife:—

He hath a person, and a smooth dispose,

To be suspected; frain'd to make woman false.

The Moor is of a free and open nature, [so;

That thinks men honest, that but seem to be

And will as tenderly be led by the nose,

As asses are.

I have't;—it is engender'd:—Hell and night

Must bring this monstrous birth to the world's light. [Exit.]

ACT II.

SCENE I.—A Sea-port Town in CYPRUS.— A Platform.

Enter MONTANO and Two GENTLEMEN.

Mon. What from the cape can you discern at sea?

1 Gent. Nothing at all: it is a high-wrought flood;

I cannot, 'twixt the heaven and the main,
Descry a sail.

Mon. Methinks, the wind hath spoke aloud at land:

A fuller blast ne'er shook our battlements:

If it hath ruffian'd so upon the sea,

What ribs of oak, when mountains melt on them,
Can hold the mortise? what shall we hear of this?

2 Gent. A segregation† of the Turkish fleet:
For do but stand upon the foaming shore,
The chiding billow seems to pelt the clouds;
The wind-shak'd surge, with high and monstrous main,

Seems to cast water on the burning bear‡
And quench the guards of the ever-fixed pole:
I never did like molestation view
On th' enchain'd flood.

Mon. If that the Turkish fleet
Be not inshelter'd and embay'd, they are drown'd;

It is impossible they bear it out.

Enter a third GENTLEMAN.

3 Gent. News, lords! our wars are done;
The desperate tempest hath so bang'd the Turks,
That their designment halts: A noble ship of Venice

Hath seen a grievous wreck and sufferance
On most part of their fleet.

Mon. How! is this true?

3 Gent. The ship is here put in,
A Veronesé; Michael Cassio,
Lieutenant to the warlike Moor, Othello,
Is come on shore: the Moor himself's at sea,
And is in full commission here for Cyprus.

Mon. I am glad on't; 'tis a worthy governor.

3 Gent. But this same Cassio, though he speak of comfort,

Touching the Turkish loss, yet he looks sadly,
And prays the Moor be safe; for they were parted

With foul and violent tempest.

Mon. 'Pray heaven he be;

For I have serv'd him, and the man commands
Like a full soldier. Let's to the sea-side, ho!

As well to see the vessel that's come in,

As throw out our eyes for brave Othello;

Even till we make the main, and the aerial blue,
An indistinct regard.

3 Gent. Come, let's do so;

For every minute is expectancy

Of more arrivance.

Enter CASSIO.

Cas. Thanks to the valiant of this warlike isle,

That so approve the Moor; O let the heavens

Give him defence against the elements,

For I have lost him on a dangerous sea!

Mon. Is he well shipp'd?

Cas. His bark is stoutly timber'd, and his pilot

Of very expert and approv'd allowance; †

Therefore my hopes, not surfeited to death,

Stand in bold cure.

[Within.] A sail, a sail, a sail!

Enter another GENTLEMAN.

Cas. What noise?

4 Gent. The town is empty: on the brow o'the sea

Stand ranks of people, and they cry—a sail.

Cas. My hopes do shape him for the governor.

2 Gent. They do discharge their shot of courtesy: [Guns heard.]

Our friends, at least.

Cas. I pray you, Sir, go forth,
And give us truth who 'tis that is arriv'd.

2 Gent. I shall. [Exit.]

Mon. But, good lieutenant, is your general wiv'd?

Cas. Most unfortunately: he hath achiev'd a maid

That paragon's description and wild fame:

One that excels the quirks of blazoning pens,

And in the essential vesture of creation,

Does bear all excellency.—How now? who has put in?

Re-enter second GENTLEMAN.

2 Gent. 'Tis one Iago, ancient to the general.

Cas. He has had most favourable and happy
speed:

Tempests themselves, high seas, and howling
winds,

The gutter'd rocks, and congregated sands,—

Traitors ensteep'd to clog the guiltless keel,—

As having sense of beauty, do omit

Their mortal † natures, letting go safely by

The divine Desdemona.

Mon. What is she?

Cas. She that I spake of, our great captain's captain,

Left in the conduct of the bold Iago;

Whose footing here anticipates our thoughts,

A se'enight's speed.—Great Jove, Othello guard,

And swell his sail with thine own powerful
breath;

That he may bless this bay with his tall ship,

Make love's quick pants in Desdemona's arms,

Give renew'd fire to our extincted spirits,
And bring all Cyprus comfort!—O behold,

*Enter DESDEMONA, EMILIA, IAGO, RODRIGO,
and Attendants.*

The riches of the ship is come on shore!
Ye men of Cyprus, let her have your knees;—
Hail to thee, lady! and the grace of heaven,
Before, behind thee, and on every hand,
Enwheel thee round.

Des. I thank you, valiant Cassio.
What tidings can you tell me of my lord?

Cas. He is not yet arriv'd; nor know I aught
But that he's well, and will be shortly here.

Des. O but I fear;—How lost you company?

Cas. The great contention of the sea and skies

Parted our fellowship: But, hark! a sail.

[Cry within, A sail, a sail! Then Guns heard.]

2 Gent. They give their greeting to the citadel:
This likewise is a friend.

Cas. See for the news. [Exit GENTLEMAN.]
Good ancient, you are welcome;—Welcome,
mistress:— [To EMILIA.]

Let it not gall your patience, good Iago,
That I extend my manners: 'tis my breeding
That gives me this bold show of courtesy.

[Kissing her.]

Iago. Sir, would she give you so much of her
lips,

As of her tongue she oft bestows on me,
You'd have enough.

Des. Alas! she has no speech.

Iago. In faith, too much;
I find it still, when I have list* to sleep:
Marry, before your ladyship, I grant
She puts her tongue a little in her heart,
And chides with thinking.

Emil. You have little cause to say so.

Iago. Come on, come on: you are pictures out of doors,

Bells in your parlours, wild cats in your kitchens,

Saints in your injuries, devils being offended, Players in your housewifery, and housewives in your beds.

Des. O fie upon thee, slanderer!

Iago. Nay, it is true, or else I am a Turk;
You rise to play, and go to bed to work.

Emil. You shall not write my praise.

Iago. No, let me not.

Des. What wouldst thou write of me, if thou shouldst praise me?

Iago. O gentle lady, do not put me to't:
For I am nothing, if not critical.†

Des. Come on, assay:—There's one gone to the harbour.

Iago. Ay, madam.

Des. I am not merry; but I do beguile
The thing-I am, by seeming otherwise.—

Come, how wouldst thou praise me?

Iago. I am about it; but, indeed, my invention [frize,

Comes from my pate, as birdlime does from
It plucks out brains and all: But my muse labours,

And thus she is deliver'd.

If she be fair and wise,—fairness and wit,—
The one's for use, the other useth it.

Des. Well prais'd! How if she be black and witty?

Iago. If she be black, and thereto have a
wit,

She'll find a white that shall her blackness fit.

Des. Worse and worse.

Emil. How, if fair and foolish?

Iago. She never yet was foolish that was fair;

For even her folly help'd her to an heir.

Des. These are old fond‡ paradoxes, to make fools laugh i'the alehouse. What miserable praise hast thou for her that's foul and foolish?

Iago. There's none so foul, and foolish there-unto, [do.]

But does foul pranks which fair and wise ones
Des. O heavy ignorance!—thou praisest the worst best. But what praise couldst thou bestow on a deserving woman indeed! one, that, in the authority of her merit, did justly put on the vouch of very malice itself?

Iago. She that was ever fair, and never proud;

Had tongue at will, and yet was never loud;

Never lack'd gold, and yet went never gay;

Fled from her wish, and yet said,—now I may;

She that, being anger'd, her revenge being nigh,

Bade her wrong stay, and her displeasure fly;

She, that in wisdom never was so frail,

To change the cod's head for the salmon's tail;

She that could think, and ne'er disclose her
mind,

See suitors following, and not look behind;

She was a wight,—if ever such wight were,—

Des. To do what?

Iago. To suckle fools, and chronicle small beer.

Des. O most lame and impotent conclusion!
—Do not learn of him, Emilia, though he be thy husband.—How say you, Cassio? is he not a most profane and liberal* counsellor?

Cas. He speaks home, madam; you may relish him more in the soldier, than in the scholar.

Iago. [Aside.] He takes her by the palm:
Ay, well said, whisper: with as little a web as this, will I ensnare as great a fly as Cassio. Ay, smile upon her, do; I will gyve† thee in thine own courtship. You say true; 'tis so indeed:
If such tricks as these strip you out of your lieutenantry, it had been better you had not kissed your three fingers so oft, which now again you are most apt to play the Sir in.‡ Very good;
well kissed! an excellent courtesy!|| 'tis so, indeed. Yet again your fingers to your lips? would they were clyster-pipes for your sake!—[Trumpet.] The Moor, I know his trumpet.

Cas. 'Tis truly so.

Des. Let's meet him, and receive him.

Cas. Lo, where he comes!

Enter OTHELLO, and Attendants.

Oth. O my fair warrior!

Des. My dear Othello!

Oth. It gives me wonder great as my content,

To see you here before me. O my soul's joy!

If after every tempest come such calms,

May the winds blow till they have waken'd
death!

And let the labouring bark climb hills of seas,

Olympus-high, and duck again as low

As hell's from heaven! If it were now to die,

'Twere now to be most happy; for, I fear,

My soul hath her content so absolute,

That not another comfort like to this

Succeeds in unknown fate.

Des. The heavens forbid,

But that our loves and comforts should increase,
Even as our days do grow!

Oth. Amen to that, sweet powers!—

I cannot speak enough of this content,

It stops me here; it is too much of joy:

And this, and this, the greatest discords be,

[Kissing her.]

That e'er our hearts shall make!

Iago. O you are well tun'd now!

But I'll set down the pegs that make this music,
As honest as I am. [Aside.]

Oth. Come, let's to the castle.—

News, friends: our wars are done, the Turks are drown'd.

* Gross and licentious.

† Shackle.

‡ To show your good breeding and gallantry.

§ Spoken when Cassio kisses his hand, and Desdemona curtsies.

* Desire.

† Censorious.

‡ Foolish.

How do our old acquaintances of this isle ?—
Honey, you shall be well desir'd * in Cyprus,
I have found great love amongst them. O my sweet,

I prattle out of fashion, † and I dote
In mine own comforts.—I pr'ythee, good Iago,
Go to the bay, and disembark my coffers :
Bring thou the Master to the citadel ;
He is a good one, and his worthiness
Does challenge much respect.—Come, Desde-
Once more well met at Cyprus. [mona,

[Exeunt OTHELLO, DESDEMONA, and Attendants.

Iago. Do thou meet me presently at the harbour. Come hither. If thou be'st valiant,—as (they say) base men, being in love, have then a nobility in their natures more than is nature to them,—list me. ‡ The lieutenant to-night watches on the court of guard : § First, I must tell thee this—Desdemona is directly in love
with him.

Rod. With him ? why, 'tis not possible.

Iago. Lay thy finger—thus, and let thy soul be instructed. Mark me with what violence she first loved the Moor, but for bragging, and telling her fantastical lies : And will she love him still for prating ? let not thy discreet heart think it.
Her eye must be fed ; and what delight shall she have to look on the devil ? When the blood is made dull with the act of sport, there should be,
—again to inflame it, and to give satiety a fresh appetite,—loveliness in favour ; sympathy in years, manners, and beauties ; all which the Moor is defective in : Now, for want of these required conveniences, her delicate tenderness will find itself abused, begin to heave the gorge, disrelish and abhor the Moor ; very nature will instruct her in it, and compel her to some second choice. Now, Sir, this granted, (as it is a most pregnant and unforced position,) who stands so eminently in the degree of this fortune, as Cassio does ? a knave very voluble ; no further conscionable than in putting on the mere form of civil and humane seeming, for the better compassing of his salt and most hidden loose affection ? why, none ; why, none : A slippery and subtle knave ; a sinder out of occasions ;
that has an eye can stamp and counterfeit advantages, though true advantage never present itself :
a devilish knave ! Besides, the knave is handsome, young, and hath all those requisites in him, that folly and green minds || look after :
A pestilent complete knave : and the woman hath found him already.

Rod. I cannot believe that in her ; she is full of most blessed condition. ¶

Iago. Blessed fig's end ! the wine she drinks is made of grapes : if she had been blessed, she would never have loved the Moor : Blessed pudding ! Didst thou not see her paddle with the palm of his hand ? didst not mark that ?

Rod. Yes, that I did ; but that was but courtesy.

Iago. Lechery, by this hand ; an index, and obscure prologue to the history of lust and foul thoughts. They met so near with their lips, that their breaths embraced together. Villainous thoughts, Roderigo, when these mutu-alities so marshal the way, hard at hand comes the master and main exercise, and incorporate conclusion : Pish !—But, Sir, be you ruled by me : I have brought you from Venice. Watch you to-night ; for the command, I'll lay't upon you : Cassio knows you not ;—I'll not be far from you : Do you find some occasion to anger Cassio, either by speaking too loud, or tainting * his discipline ; or from what other course you please, which the time shall more favourably minister.

Rod. Well.

Iago. Sir, he is rash, and very sudden in

* Much solicited by invitation. † Without method.
‡ Listen to me. § The place where the guard meets. ¶ Minds unripe. ¶ Qualities.
 Throwing a slur upon his discipline.

choler ; and, haply, * with his trancheon may strike at you : Provoke him, that he may : for, even out of that, will I cause these of Cyprus to mutiny ; whose qualification shall come into no true taste again, but by the displanting of Cassio. So shall you have a shorter journey to your desires, by the means I shall then have to prefer† them ; and the impediment most profitably removed, without the which there were no expectation of our prosperity.

Rod. I will do this, if I can bring it to any opportunity.

Iago. I warrant thee. Meet me by and by at the citadel : I must fetch his necessaries ashore.
Farewell.

Rod. Adieu.

[Exit.

Iago. That Cassio loves her, I do well believe it ;

That she loves him, 'tis apt, and of great credit :
The Moor—howbeit that I endure him not,—

Is of a constant, loving, noble nature ;

And, I dare think, he'll prove to Desdemona
A most dear husband. Now I do love her too ;
Not out of absolute lust, (though, peradventure,
I stand accountant for as great a sin,) But partly led to diet my revenge,

For that I do suspect the lusty Moor

Hath leap'd into my seat ; the thought whereof Doth, like a poisonous mineral, gnaw my inwards ;

And nothing can or shall content my soul,

Till I am even with him, wife for wife ;

Or, failing so, yet that I put the Moor

At least into a jealousy so strong

That judgment cannot cure. Which thing to do,—

If this poor trash of Venice, whom I trash ‡

For his quick hunting, stand the putting on,

I'll have our Michael Cassio on the hip ;

Abuse him to the Moor in the rank garb, §—

(For I fear Cassio with my night-cap too)

Make the Moor thank me, love me, and reward me,

For making him egregiously an ass,

And practising upon his peace and quiet

Even to madness. 'Tis here, but yet confus'd ;

Knavery's plain face is never seen, till us'd.

[Exit.

SCENE II.—A Street.

Enter a HERALD, with a Proclamation ;
People following.

Her. It is Othello's pleasure, our noble and valliant general, that, upon certain tidings now arrived, importing the mere || perdition of the Turkish fleet, every man put himself into triumph ; some to dance, some to make bonfires, each man to what sport and revel his addiction leads him ; for, besides these beneficial news, it is the celebration of his nuptials : So much was his pleasure should be proclaimed.
All offices ¶ are open ; and there is full liberty of feasting, from this present hour of five, till the bell hath told eleven. Heaven bless the isle of Cyprus, and our noble general, Othello !

[Exeunt.

SCENE III.—A Hall in the Castle.

Enter OTHELLO, DESDEMONA, CASSIO, and Attendants.

Oth. Good Michael, look you to the guard
to-night :

Let's teach ourselves that honourable stop,
Not to out-sport discretion.

Cas. Iago hath direction what to do ;
But, notwithstanding, with my personal eye
Will I look to't.

Oth. Iago is most honest,

* Perhaps.

† To advance them.

‡ To trash was to put a stone on a hound's neck to hinder him outstripping his companions.

§ In the grossest manner.

¶ Entire.

¶ Rooms in the ca tle.

Michael, good night: To-morrow, with our earliest,
Let me have speech with you.—Come, my dear love,
The purchase made, the fruits are to ensue;
[To DESDEMONA.
That profit's yet to come 'twixt me and you.—
Good night.

[Exit OTH. DES. and Attend.

Enter IAGO.

Cas. Welcome, Iago: We must to the watch.

Iago. Not this hour, lieutenant; 'tis not yet ten o'clock: Our general cast* us thus early, for the love of his Desdemona; whom let us not therefore blame; he hath not yet made wanton the night with her; and she is sport for Jove.

Cas. She's a most exquisite lady.

Iago. And, I'll warrant her, full of game.

Cas. Indeed, she is a most fresh and delicate creature.

Iago. What an eye she has! methinks it sounds a parley of provocation.

Cas. An inviting eye; and yet, methinks, right modest.

Iago. And, when she speaks, is it not an alarm to love?

Cas. She is, indeed, perfection.

Iago. Well, happiness to their sheets! Come, lieutenant, I have a stoup of wine; and here without are a brace of Cyprus gallants, that would fain have a measure to the health of the black Othello.

Cas. Not to-night, good Iago; I have very poor and unhappy brains for drinking: I could well wish courtesy would invent some other custom of entertainment.

Iago. O they are our friends; but one cup; I'll drink for you.

Cas. I have drunk but one cup to-night, and that was craftily qualified† too, and behold what innovation it makes here: I am unfortunate in the infirmity, and dare not task my weakness with any more.

Iago. What, man! 'tis a night of revels; the gallants desire it.

Cas. Where are they?

Iago. Here at the door; I pray you, call them in.

Cas. I'll do't; but it dislikes me.

[Exit CASSIO.

Iago. If I can fasten but one cup upon him, With that which he hath drunk to-night already,

He'll be as full of quarrel and offence As my young mistress' dog. Now, my sick fool, Roderigo,

Whom love has turn'd almost the wrong side outward,

To Desdemona hath to-night carous'd Potations pottle deep; and he's to watch: Three lads of Cyprus,—noble swelling spirits, That hold their honours in a wary distance, The very elements of this warlike isle, Have I to-night fluster'd with flowing cups, And they watch too. Now, 'mongst this flock of drunkards,

Am I to put our Cassio in some action That may offend the isle:—But here they come: If consequence do but approve my dream,† My boat sails freely, both with wind and stream.

Re-enter CASSIO, with him MONTANO and Gentlemen.

Cas. 'Fore heaven, they have given me a rouse‡ already.

Mon. Good faith, a little one; not past a pint, as I am a soldier.

Iago. Some wine, ho!

[Sings.
And let me the canakin clink clink,
And let me the canakin clink:
A soldier's a man;
A life's but a span;
Why then, let a soldier drink.

Some wine, boys! [Wine brought in.

Cas. 'Fore heaven, an excellent song.

Iago. I learned it in England, where, indeed, they are most potent in potting: your Dane, your German, and your swag-bellied Hollander,—Drink, ho!—are nothing to your English.

Cas. Is your Englishman so expert in his drinking?

Iago. Why, he drinks you, with facility, your Dane dead drunk; he sweats not to overthrow your Almain; he gives your Hollander a vomit ere the next pottle can be filled.

Cas. To the health of our general.

Mon. I am for it, lieutenant; and I'll do you justice.*

Iago. O sweet England!

King Stephen was a worthy peer,
His breeches cost him but a crown;
He held them sixpence all too dear,
With that he call'd the tailor—down.

He was a wight of high renown,
And thou art but of low degree:
'Tis pride that pulls the country down,
Then tak' thine auld cloak about thee.†

Some wine, ho!

Cas. Why, this is a more exquisite song than the other.

Iago. Will you hear it again?

Cas. No; for I hold him to be unworthy of his place, that does those things.—Well,—Heaven's above all: and there be souls that must be saved and there be souls must not be saved.

Iago. It's true, good lieutenant.

Cas. For mine own part,—no offence to the general, or any man of quality,—I hope to be saved.

Iago. And so do I too, lieutenant.

Cas. Ay, but, by your leave, not before me; the lieutenant is to be saved before the ancient. Let's have no more of this; let's to our affairs.—Forgive us our sins!—Gentlemen, let's look to our business. Do not think, gentlemen, I am drunk: this is my ancient;—this is my right hand, and this is my left hand:—I am not drunk now; I can stand well enough, and speak well enough.

All. Excellent well.

Cas. Why, very well, then: you must not think then that I am drunk. [Exit.

Mon. To the platform, masters; come, let's set the watch.

Iago. You see this fellow, that is gone before:—

He is a soldier, fit to stand by Cesar,
And give direction: and do but see his vice;
'Tis to his virtue a just equinox,
The one as long as the other: 'tis pity of him.
I fear, the trust Othello puts him in,
On some odd time of his infirmity
Will shake this island.

Mon. But is he often thus?

Iago. 'Tis evermore the prologue to his sleep: He'll watch the horologe a double set,‡ If drink rock not his cradle.

Mon. It were well,
The general were put in mind of it.
Perhaps, he sees it not; or his good nature
Prizes the virtue that appears in Cassio,
And looks not on his evils: Is not this true?

* Drink as much as you do.

† For the whole of this song, see Percy's Relics of Ancient Poetry.

‡ While the clock strikes two rounds, i. e. four-and-twenty hours.

* Dismissed.

† Stilly mixed with water.

‡ Any scheme existing only in the imagination may be called a dream.

§ More than enough.

Enter RODERIGO.

Iago. How now, Roderigo? [Aside.
I pray you, after the lieutenant; go.

[Exit RODERIGO.
Mon. And 'tis great pity, that the noble Moor
Should hazard such a place, as his own self,
With one of an ingraft* infirmity:
It were an honest action, to say
So to the Moor.

Iago. Not I, for this fair island:
I do love Cassio well; and would do much
To cure him of this evil. But hark! what noise?
[Cry within,—Help! help!

Re-enter CASSIO, driving in RODERIGO.

Cas. You rogue! you rascal!

Mon. What's the matter, lieutenant?

Cas. A knave!—teach me my duty!
I'll beat the knave into a twiggen† bottle.

Rod. Beat me!

Cas. Dost thou prate, rogue?

[Striking RODERIGO.
Mon. Nay, good lieutenant, [Staying him.
I pray you, Sir, hold your hand.

Cas. Let me go, Sir,
Or I'll knock you o'er the mazzard.

Mon. Come, come, you're drunk.

Cas. Drunk! [They fight.

Iago. Away, I say! go out, and cry—a mutiny! [Aside to Rod. who goes out.

Nay, good lieutenant,—alas, gentlemen,—
Help, ho! — Lieutenant, — Sir, — Montano, —
Sir;—

Help, masters!—Here's a goodly watch, indeed! [Bell rings.

Who's that that rings the bell?—Diablo, ho!
The town will rise, God's will, lieutenant! hold;
You will be sham'd for ever.

Enter OTHELLO, and Attendants.

Oth. What is the matter here?

Mon. I bleed still, I am hurt to the death;—
he dies.

Oth. Hold, for your lives.

Iago. Hold, hold, lieutenant, Sir, Montano,— gentlemen,—
Have you forgot all sense of place and duty?
Hold, hold! the general speaks to you; hold,
for shame!

Oth. Why, how now, ho! from whence ariseth
this?
Are we turn'd Turks; and to ourselves do that,
Which heaven hath forbid the Ottomites?
For Christian shame, put by this barbarous brawl:

He that stirs next to carve for his own rage,
Holds his soul light; he dies upon his motion.—
Silence that dreadful bell, it frights the isle
From her propriety.‡—What is the matter, masters?

Honest Iago, that look'st dead with grieving,
Speak, who began this? on thy love, I charge
thee.

Iago. I do not know;—friends all but now,
even now.

In quarter, and in terms like bride and groom
Devesting them for bed: and then, but now,
(As if some planet had unwitting men,)
Swords out, and tilting one at other's breast,
In opposition bloody. I cannot speak
Any beginning to this peevish odds;
And 'would in action glorious I had lost
These legs, that brought me to a part of it!

Oth. How comes it, Michael, you are thus forgot?

Cas. I pray you, pardon me, I cannot speak.

Oth. Worthy Montano, you were wont be civil;

The gravity and stilness of your youth
The world hath noted, and your name is great

* Rooted. † A wicker bottle.
‡ From her regular and proper state.
§ I. e. You have thus forgotten yourself.

In mouths of wisest censure: What's the matter
That you unlace your reputation thus,
And spend your rich opinion, for the name
Of a night-brawler? Give me answer to it.

Mon. Worthy Othello, I am hurt to danger;
Your officer, Iago, can inform you—
While I spare speech, which something now offends me;—

Of all that I do know: nor know I aught
By me that's said or done amiss this night;
Unless self-charity* be sometime a vice;
And to defend ourselves it be a sin,
When violence assails us.

Oth. Now, by heaven,
My blood begins my safer guides to rule;
Assays to lead the way: If once I stir†
And passion, having my best judgment collied,
Or do but lift this arm, the best of you Shall sink in my rebuke. Give me to know
How this foul rout began, who set it on;
And he that is approv'd‡ in this offence,
Though he had twinn'd with me, both at a birth,

Shall lose me.—What! in a town of war,
Yet wild, the people's hearts brimful of fear,
To manage private and domestic quarrel,
In night, and on the court and guard of safety!
'Tis monstrous.—Iago, who began it?

Mon. If partially affin'd, § or leagu'd in office,
Thou dost deliver more or less than truth,
Thou art no soldier.

Iago. Touch me not so near:
I had rather have this tongue cut from my mouth,

Than it should do offence to Michael Cassio;
Yet, I persuade myself, to speak the truth
Shall nothing wrong him.—Thus it is, general.
Montano and myself being in speech,
There comes a fellow, crying out for help;
And Cassio following him with determin'd
sword,

To execute upon him: Sir, this gentleman
Steps in to Cassio, and entreats his pause;
Myself the crying fellow did pursue,
Lest by his clamour, (as it so fell out,)
The town might fall in fright: he, swift of foot, Outran my purpose; and I return'd the rather
For that I heard the clink and fall of swords,
And Cassio high in oath; which, till to-night,
I ne'er might say before: when I came back,
For this was brief,) I found them close together,
At blow and thrust; even as again they were,
When you yourself did part them.

More of this matter can I not report:—
But men are men; the best sometimes forget:—
Though Cassio did some little wrong to him,—
As men in rage strike those that wish them best,—

Yet surely Cassio, I believe, receiv'd,
From him that fled, some strange indignity,
Which patience could not pass.

Oth. I know, Iago,
Thy honesty and love doth mince this matter,
Making it light to Cassio:—Cassio, I love thee;
But never more be officer of mine.—

Enter DESDEMONA, attended.

Look, if my gentle love be not rais'd up;—
I'll make thee an example.

Des. What's the matter, dear?

Oth. All's well now, sweeting; Come away to bed.

Sir, for your hurts,
Myself will be your surgeon: Lead him off.

[To MONTANO who is led off.
Iago, look with care about the town;
And silence those whom this vile brawl distracted.—

Come, Desdemona; 'tis the soldier's life,
To have their balmy slumbers wak'd with strife.

[Exit all but IAGO and CASSIO.
Iago. What, are you hurt, lieutenant?

* Care of one's self. † Darkened.
‡ Convicted by proof. § Related by nearness of office.

Cas. Ay, past all surgery.

Iago. Marry, heaven forbid!

Cas. Reputation, reputation, reputation! O I have lost my reputation! I have lost the immortal part, Sir, of myself; and what remains is bestial.—My reputation, Iago, my reputation.

Iago. As I am an honest man, I thought you had received some bodily wound; there is more offence in that, than in reputation. Reputation is an idle and most false imposition; oft got without merit, and lost without deserving: You have lost no reputation at all, unless you repute yourself such a loser. What, man! there are ways to recover the general again: You are but now cast in his mood; * a punishment more in policy than in malice; even so as one would beat his offenceless dog, to affright an imperious lion: sue to him again, and he's yours.

Cas. I will rather sue to be despis'd, than to deceive so good a commander, with so slight, so drunken, and so indiscreet an officer. Drunk? and speak parrot?† and squabble? swagger? swear? and discourse fustian with one's own shadow?—O thou invisible spirit of wine, if thou hast no name to be known by, let us call thee—devil!

Iago. What was he that you followed with your sword? What had he done to you?

Cas. I know not.

Iago. Is it possible?

Cas. I remember a mass of things, but nothing distinctly; a quarrel, but nothing wherefore.—O that men should put an enemy in their mouths, to steal away their brains! that we should with joy, revel, pleasure, and applause, transform ourselves into beasts!

Iago. Why, but you are now well enough: How came you thus recovered?

Cas. It hath pleased the devil, drunkenness, to give place to the devil, wrath: one unperfectness shows me another, to make me frankly despise myself.

Iago. Come, you are too severe a moralist: As the time, the place, and the condition of this country stands, I could heartily wish this had not befallen; but, since it is as it is, mend it for your own good.

Cas. I will ask him for my place again; he shall tell me, I am a drunkard! Had I as many mouths as Hydra, such an answer would stop them all. To be now a sensible man, by and by a fool, and presently a beast! O strange!—Every inordinate cup is unblessed, and the ingredient is a devil.

Iago. Come, come, good wine is a good familiar creature, if it be well used; exclaim no more against it. And, good lieutenant, I think you think I love you.

Cas. I have well approved it, Sir,—I drunk!

Iago. You, or any man living, may be drunk at some time, man. I'll tell you what you shall do. Our general's wife is now the general;—I may say so in this respect, for that he hath devoted and given up himself to the contemplation, mark, and demerment of her parts and graces:—confess yourself freely to her; importune her; she'll help to put you in your place again: she is of so free, so kind, so apt, so blessed a disposition, that she holds it a vice in her goodness, not to do more than she is requested: This broken joint between you and her husband, entreat her to splinter; and, my fortunes against any lay† worth naming, this crack of your love shall grow stronger than was before.

Cas. You advise me well.

Iago. I protest in the sincerity of love, and honest kindness.

Cas. I think it freely, and, betimes in the morning, I will beseech the virtuous Desdemona to undertake for me: I am desperate of my fortunes, if they check me here.

Iago. You are in the right. Good night, lieutenant; I must to the watch.

* Dismissed in anger. † Talk foolishly. ‡ Bet.

Cas. Good night honest Iago. [Exit Cassio.]

Iago. And what's he then, that says I play the villain?

When this advice is free I give, and honest, Probable to thinking, and (indeed) the course To win the Moor again? For 'tis most easy The inclining Desdemona to subdue In any honest suit; she's fram'd as fruitful * As the free elements. And then for her To win the Moor, were't to renounce his baptism,

All seals and symbols of redeemed sin, His soul is so enfeather'd to her love, That she may make, unmake, do what she list, Even as her appetite shall play the god With his weak function. How am I then a villain,

To counsel Cassio to this parallel † course, Directly to his good? Divinity of hell! When devils will their blackest sins put on, They do suggest ‡ at first with heavenly shows, As I do now: For while this honest fool Plies Desdemona to repair his fortunes, And she for him pleads strongly to the Moor, I'll pour this pestilence into his ear,— That she repeats § him for her body's lust; And by how much she strives to do him good, She shall undo her credit with the Moor. So will I turn her virtue into pitch; And out of her own goodness make the net, That shall enmesh them all.—How now, Rodrigo.

Enter RODRIGO.

Rod. I do follow here in the chase, not like a hound that hunts, but one that fills up the cry. My money is almost spent; I have been to-night exceedingly well cudgelled; and, I think, the issue will be—I shall have so much experience for my pains: and so, with no money at all, and a little more wit, return to Venice.

Iago. How poor are they, that have not patience!—

What wound did ever heal, but by degrees? Thou know'st we work by wit, and not by witchcraft;

And wit depends on dilatory time. Does't not go well? Cassio hath beaten thee, And thou, by that small hurt, hath cashier'd Cassio:

Though other things grow fair against the sun, Yet fruits that blossom first, will first be ripe: Content thyself awhile.—By the mass, 'tis morning;

Pleasure and action make the hours seem short. Retire thee; go where thou art billeted: Away, I say; thou shalt know more hereafter: Nay, get thee gone. [Exit Rod.] Two things are to be done,—

My wife must move for Cassio to her mistress; I'll set her on; Myself, the while, to draw the Moor apart, And bring him jump ¶ when he may Cassio find Soliciting his wife:—Ay, that's the way; Dull not device by coldness and delay. [Exit.]

ACT III.

SCENE I.—Before the Castle

Enter CASSIO, and some MUSICIANS.

Cas. Masters, play here, I will content your pains, Something that's brief; and bid—good-morrow, general. [Music.]

Enter CLOWN.

Clo. Why, masters, have your instruments been at Naples, that they speak i' the nose thus? ¶ Mus. How, Sir, how!

* Liberal. † Even. ‡ Tempt. § Recalls ¶ Just at the time.

Clo. Are these, I pray you, called wind instruments?

1 Mus. Ay, marry, are they, Sir.

Clo. Oh! thereby hangs a tale.

1 Mus. Whereby hangs a tale, Sir?

Clo. Marry, Sir, by many a wind instrument that I know. But, masters, here's money for you: and the general so likes your music, that he desires you, of all loves to make no more noise with it.

1 Mus. Well, Sir, we will not.

Clo. If you have any music that may not be heard, to't again: but, as they say, to hear music, the general does not greatly care.

1 Mus. We have none such, Sir.

Clo. Then put up your pipes in your bag, for I'll away: Go; vanish into air; away.

[Exeunt MUSICIANS.]

Cas. Dost thou hear, my honest friend?

Clo. No, I hear not your honest friend. I hear you.

Cas. Pr'ythee, keep up thy quilllets.* There's a poor piece of gold for thee: if the gentlewoman that attends the general's wife be stirring, tell her, there's one Cassio entreats her a little favour of speech: Wilt thou do this?

Clo. She is stirring, Sir: if she will stir hither, I shall seem to notify unto her. [Exit.]

Enter IAGO.

Cas. Do, good my friend.—In happy time, Iago.

Iago. You have not been a-bed then?

Cas. Why, no; the day had broke before we parted. I have made bold, Iago, to send in to your wife: My suit to her is, that she will to virtuous Desdemona procure me some access.

Iago. I'll send her to you presently; And I'll devise a mean to draw the Moor out of the way, that your converse and business

May be more free. [Exit.]

Cas. I humbly thank you for't. I never knew A Florentine more kind and honest.

Enter EMILIA.

Emil. Good morrow, good lieutenant: I am sorry for your displeasure!† but all will soon be well. The general and his wife are talking of it, And she speaks for you stoutly: The Moor replies,

That he you hurt is of great fame in Cyprus, And great affinity; and that, in wholesome wisdom,

He might not but refuse you: but, he protests he loves you;

And needs no other suitor, but his likings, To take the saf'st occasion by the front, To bring you in again.

Cas. Yet, I beseech you,— If you think fit, or that it may be done, Give me advantage of some brief discourse With Desdemona alone.

Emil. Pray you, come in; I will bestow you where you shall have time To speak your bosom freely.

Cas. I am much bound to you. [Exeunt.]

SCENE II.—A Room in the Castle.

Enter OTHELLO, IAGO, and GENTLEMEN.

Oth. These letters give, Iago, to the pilot; And, by him, do my duties to the state: That done, I will be walking on the works, Repair there to me.

Iago. Well, my good lord, I'll do't.

Oth. This fortification, gentlemen,—shall we see't?

Gent. We'll wait upon your lordship. [Exeunt.]

SCENE III.—Before the Castle.

Enter DESDEMONA, CASSIO, and EMILIA.

Des. Be thou assur'd, good Cassio, I will do All my abilities in thy behalf.

Emil. Good madam do; I know it grieves my husband, As if the case were his.

Des. O that's an honest fellow.—Do not doubt, Cassio,

But I will have my lord and you again

As friendly as you were.

Cas. Bounteous madam, Whatever shall become of Michael Cassio, He's never any thing but your true servant.

Des. O Sir, I thank you: You do love my lord:

You have known him long; and be you well assur'd,

He shall in strangeness stand no further off Than in a politic distance.

Cas. Ay, but, lady, That policy may either last so long, Or feed upon such nice and waterish diet, Or breed itself so out of circumstance, That, I being absent, and my place supplied, My general will forget my love and service.

Des. Do not doubt that; before Emilia here, I give thee warrant of thy place: assure thee, If I do vow a friendship, I'll perform it To the last article: my lord shall never rest; I'll watch him tame,* and talk him out of patience;

His bed shall seem a school, his board a shrift; I'll intermingle every thing he does With Cassio's suit: Therefore be merry, Cassio; For thy solicitor shall rather die, Than give thy cause away.

Enter OTHELLO, and IAGO, at a distance.

Emil. Madam, here comes My lord.

Cas. Madam, I'll take my leave.

Des. Why, stay, And hear me speak.

Cas. Madam, not now; I am very ill at ease, Unfit for mine own purposes.

Des. Well, well, Do your discretion. [Exit CASSIO.]

Iago. Ha! I like not that.

Oth. What dost thou say?

Iago. Nothing, my lord: or if—I know not what.

Oth. Was not that Cassio, parted from my wife?

Iago. Cassio, my lord? No, sure, I cannot think it,

That he would steal away so guilty-like, Seeing you coming.

Oth. I do believe 'twas he.

Des. How now, my lord?

I have been talking with a suitor here, A man that languishes in your displeasure.

Oth. Who is't you mean?

Des. Why, your lieutenant Cassio. Good my lord,

If I have any grace, or power to move you, His present reconciliation take;†

For, if he be not one that truly loves you, That errs in ignorance, and not in cunning, I have no judgment in an honest face:

I pr'ythee, call him back.

Oth. Went he hence now?

Des. Ay, sooth; so humbled, That he hath left part of his grief with me;

I suffer with him. Good love, call him back.

Oth. Not now, sweet Desdemona; some other time.

Des. But shall't be shortly?

Oth. The sooner, sweet, for you,

Des. Shall't be to-night at supper?

Oth. No, not to-night.

* Nice distinctions.

† The displeasure you have incurred from Othello.

* Hawks are tamed by keeping them from sleep.
† Accept his submission.

Des. To-morrow dinner then ?
Oth. I shall not dine at home ;
 I meet the captains at the citadel.
Des. Why then, to-morrow night ; or Tuesday morn ; [morn ;—
 Or Tuesday noon, or night ; or Wednesday
 I pray thee, name the time ; but let it not Exceed three days ; in faith, he's penitent ;
 And yet his trespass, in our common reason, (Save that, they say, the wars must make examples
 Out of their best *) is not almost a fault
 To incur a private check : When shall he come ?
 Tell me, Othello. I wonder in my soul,
 What you could ask me, that I should deny,
 Or stand so mammering † on. What ! Michael Cassio,
 That came a wooing with you ; and many a time,
 When I have spoke of you dispraisingly,
 Hath ta'en your part ; to have so much to do
 To bring him in ! Trust me, I could do much,— Oth. Prythee, no more : let him come when he will :
 I will deny thee nothing.
Des. Why, this is not a boon ;
 'Tis as I should entreat you wear your gloves,
 Or feed on nourishing dishes, or keep you warm ;
 Or sue to you to do peculiar profit
 To your own person : Nay, when I have a suit,
 Wherein I mean to touch your love indeed,
 It shall be full of poize ‡ and difficulty,
 And fearful to be granted.
Oth. I will deny thee nothing :
 Whereon, I do beseech thee, grant me this,
 To leave me but a little to myself.
Des. Shall I deny you ? no : Farewell, my
 lord.
Oth. Farewell, my Desdemona : I will come to thee straight.
Des. Emilia, come :—Be it as your fancies teach you ;
 Whate'er you be, I am obedient.
 [Exit, with EMILIA.
Oth. Excellent wretch ! Perdition catch my
 soul,
 But I do love thee ! and, when I love thee not,
 Chaos is come again.
Iago. My noble lord,—
Oth. What dost thou say, Iago ?
Iago. Did Michael Cassio, when you woo'd
 my lady,
 Know of your love ?
Oth. He did, from first to last : Why dost thou ask ?
Iago. But for a satisfaction of my thought ;
 No farther harm.
Oth. Why of thy thought, Iago ?
Iago. I did not think, he had been acquainted with her.
Oth. O yes ; and went between us very oft.
Iago. Indeed ?
Oth. Indeed ! ay, indeed :—Discern'st thou aught in that ?
 Is he not honest ?
Iago. Honest, my lord ?
Oth. Ay, honest.
Iago. My lord, for aught I know.
Oth. What dost thou think ?
Iago. Think, my lord ?
Oth. Think, my lord !
 By heaven, he echoes me,
 As if there were some monster in his thought Too hideous to be shown. Thou dost mean something :
 I heard thee say but now,—Thou lik'st not that,
 When Cassio left my wife.—What didst not
 like ?
 And, when I told thee he was of my counsel
 In my whole course of wooing, thou saidst,
 Indeed !
 And didst contract and purse thy brow together,

As if thou then had'st shut up in thy brain
 Some horrible conceit : If thou dost love me,
 Show me thy thought.
Iago. My lord, you know I love you.
Oth. I think, thou dost ;
 And,—for I know thou art full of love and honesty,
 And weigh'st thy words before thou giv'st them
 breath,— [more :
 Therefore these stops of thine fright me the
 For such things, in a false disloyal knave,
 Are tricks of custom ; but, in a man that's just,
 They are close denotements, working from the
 heart,
 That passion cannot rule.
Iago. For Michael Cassio,—
 I dare be sworn, I think that he is honest.
Oth. I think so too.
Iago. Men should be what they seem ;
 Or, those that be not, 'would they might seem
 none !
Oth. Certain, men should be what they seem.
Iago. Why, then,
 I think that Cassio is an honest man.
Oth. Nay, yet there's more in this :
 I pray thee, speak to me as to thy thinkings,
 As thou dost ruminate ; and give thy worst of thoughts
 The worst of words.
Iago. Good my lord, pardon me ;
 Though I am bound to every act of duty,
 I am not bound to that all slaves are free to.
 Utter my thoughts ? Why, say, they are vile and
 false ;
 As where's that palace, whereinto foul things
 Sometimes intrude not ? who has a breast so pure,
 But some uncleanly apprehensions
 Keep leets * and law-days, and in session sit
 With meditations lawful ?
Oth. Thou dost conspire against thy friend,
 Iago,
 If thou but think'st him wrong'd, and mak'st
 his ear
 A stranger to thy thoughts.
Iago. I do beseech you,—
 Though I, perchance, am vicious in my guess,
 As, I confess, it is my nature's plague
 To spy into abuses ; and, oft, my jealousy
 Shapes faults that are not,—I entreat you then,
 From one that so imperfectly conjects,† You'd take no notice ; nor build yourself a trouble
 Out of his scattering and unsure observance :—
 It were not for your quiet, nor your good,
 Nor for my manhood, honesty, or wisdom,
 To let you know my thoughts.
Oth. What dost thou mean ?
Iago. Good name, in man and woman, dear
 my lord,
 Is the immediate jewel of their souls :
 Who steals my purse, steals trash : 'tis something, nothing ;
 'Twas mine, 'tis his, and has been slave to thousands ;
 But he, that filches from me my good name,
 Robs me of that which not enriches him,
 And makes me poor indeed.
Oth. By heaven, I'll know thy thought.
Iago. You cannot, if my heart were in your
 hand ;
 Nor shall not, whilst 'tis in my custody.
Oth. Ha !
Iago. O beware, my lord, of jealousy ;
 It is the green-ey'd monster, which doth mock
 The meat it feeds on : That cuckold lives in bliss,
 Who, certain of his fate, loves not his wronger ;
 But oh ! what damned minutes tells he o'er,
 Who dotes, yet doubts ; suspects, yet strongly
 loves !
Oth. O misery !
Iago. Poor, and content, is rich, and rich enough ;

* Best men. † Hesitating.
 ‡ Weight.

* Courts of Enquiry. † Conjectures.
 2 F

But riches, flueless,* is as poor as winter,
To him that ever fears he shall be poor:—
Good heaven, the souls of all my tribe defend
From jealousy!

Oth. Why? why is this?
Think'st thou, I'd make a life of jealousy,
To follow still the changes of the moon
With fresh suspicions? No: to be once in doubt, [goat,
Is—once to be resolv'd: Exchange me for a
When I shall turn the business of my soul
To such exsufficate† and blown surmises,
Matching thy inference. 'Tis not to make me
jealous, [pany,
To say—my wife is fair, feeds well, loves com-
s free of speech, sings, plays, and dances well;
Where virtue is, these are more virtuous:
Nor from mine own weak merits will I draw
The smallest fear, or doubt of her revolt;
For she had eyes, and chose me: No, Iago;
I'll see, before I doubt; when I doubt, prove;
And, on the proof, there is no more but this,—
Away at once with love, or jealousy.

Iago. I am glad of this, for now I shall have reason
To show the love and duty that I bear you
With franker spirit: therefore, as I am bound,
Receive it from me:—I speak not yet of proof.
Look to your wife; observe her well with Cas-sio;

Wear your eye thus, not jealous, nor secure:
I would not have your free and noble nature,
Out of self-bounty, be abus'd; look to't:
I know our country disposition well;
In Venice they do let heaven see the pranks
They dare not show their husbands; their best conscience
Is—not to leave undone, but keep unknown.

Oth. Dost thou say so?
Iago. She did deceive her father, marrying
you;
'And, when she seem'd to shake, and fear your looks,
She lov'd them most.

Oth. And so she did.
Iago. Why, go to, then;
She that, so young, could give out such a seem-
ing,‡
To seal her father's eyes up, close as oak,—
He thought 'twas witchcraft:—But I am much to blame;
I humbly do beseech you of your pardon,
For too much loving you.

Oth. I am bound to thee for ever.
Iago. I see, this hath a little dash'd your spirits.

Oth. Not a jot, not a jot.
Iago. Trust me, I fear it has.
I hope, you will consider what is spoke Comes from my love;—But, I do see you are mov'd:—

I am to pray you, not to strain my speech
To grosser issues,§ nor to larger reach,
Than to suspicion.

Oth. I will not.
Iago. Should you do so, my lord,
My speech should fall into such vile success
As my thoughts aim not at. Cassio's my worthy
friend:—

My lord, I see you are mov'd.
Oth. No, not much mov'd:—
I do not think but Desdemona's honest.

Iago. Long live she so! and long live you to think so!

Oth. And yet, how nature erring from itself,—

Iago. Ay, there's the point: As, to be bold
with you,

Not to affect many proposed matches,
Of her own clime, complexion, and degree;
Whereto, we see, in all things nature tends:

Foh! one may smell, in such, a will most rank,
Foul disproportion, thoughts unnatural.—

But pardon me; I do not, in position,
Distinctly speak of her; though I may fear
Her will, recolling to her better judgment,
May fall to match you with her country forms,
And (happily) repent.

Oth. Farewell, farewell:
If more thou dost perceive, let me know more;
Set on thy wife to observe: Leave me, Iago.

Iago. My lord, I take my leave. [Going.

Oth. Why did I marry?—This honest creature, doubtless, [folda.

Sees and knows more, much more, than he un-Iago. My lord, I would I might entreat your honour

To scan this thing no further: leave it to time;
And though it be fit that Cassio have his place,
(For, sure, he fills it up with great ability,)
Yet if you please to hold him off awhile,
You shall by that perceive him and his means:
Note, if your lady strain his entertainment*
With any strong or vehement opportunity;
Much will be seen in that. In the meantime,
Let me be thought too busy in my fears
(As worthy cause I have to fear I am,)
And hold her free, I do beseech your honour.

Oth. Fear not my government.
Iago. I once more take my leave. [Exit.

Oth. This fellow's of exceeding honesty,
And knows all qualities, with a learned spirit,
Of human dealings: If I do prove her haggard,† Though that her jesses‡ were my dear heartstrings,

I'd whistle her off, and let her down the wind,
To prey at fortune. Haply, for I am black,
And have not those soft parts of conversation
That chamberers§ have;—Or, for I am de-clin'd

Into the vale of years:—yet that's not much;—
She's gone; I am abus'd; and my relief
Must be to loathe her. O curse of marriage,
That we can call these delicate creatures ours,
And not their appetites! I had rather be a toad,

And live upon the vapour of a dungeon,
Than keep a corner in the thing I love,
For others' uses. Yet, 'tis the plague of great ones;

Prerogativ'd are they less than the base;
'Tis destiny unshunnable, like death;
Even then this forked plague is fated to us,
When we do quicken.¶ Deademona comes:

Enter DESDEMONA, and EMILIA.

If she be false, O then heaven mocks itself!—
I'll not believe it.

Des. How now, my dear Othello?
Your dinner, and the generous islanders,
By you invited, do attend your presence.

Oth. I am to blame.
Des. Why is your speech so faint? are you not well?

Oth. I have a pain upon my forehead here.
Des. Faith, that's with watching; 'twill away
again:

Let me but blud it hard, within this hour
It will be well.

Oth. Your napkin¶ is too little;
[He puts the handkerchief from him and it drops.

Let it alone. Come, I'll go in with you.
Des. I am very sorry that you are not well.

[Exeunt OTH. and DES.

Emil. I am glad I have found this napkin;
This was her first remembrance from the Moor:
My wayward husband hath a hundred times
Woo'd me to steal it: but she so loves the token,

* Press hard his restoration to office.

† A term of reproach.

‡ Straps of leather by which a hawk is held on the fist.

§ Intriguers. ¶ When we began to live.

¶ In the north of England and in Scotland this term for a handkerchief is still used

* Endless. † Strained, or blown. ‡ Appearance.
§ An expression from falconry: to seal a hawk is to sew up his eye-lids. ¶ Conclusions.

(For he conjur'd her, she would ever keep it,) That she reserves it evermore about her, To kiss and talk to. I'll have the work ta'en out, And give it Iago : What he'll do with it, heaven knows, not I ; I nothing, but to please his fantasy.

Enter IAGO.

Iago. How now ! what do you here alone ?

Emil. Do not you chide ; I have a thing for you.

Iago. A thing for me ?—It is a common thing,—

Emil. Ha !

Iago. To have a foolish wife.

Emil. O is that all ? What will you give me now

For that same handkerchief ?

Iago. What handkerchief ?

Emil. What handkerchief ?

Why, that the Moor first gave to Desdemona ; That which you so often did bid me steal.

Iago. Hast stolen it from her ?

Emil. No, faith ; she let it drop by negligence ;

And, to the advantage, I being here, took't up. Look, here it is.

Iago. A good wench : give it me.

Emil. What will you do with it, that you have been so earnest

To have me filch it ?

Iago. Why, what's that to you ?

[Snatching it.]

Emil. If it be not for some purpose of import,

Give it me again : Poor lady ! she'll run mad, When she shall lack it.

Iago. Be not you known of't ; * I have use for it.

Go, leave me.

[Exit EMILIA.]

I will in Cassio's lodging lose this napkin, And let him find it : Trifles, light as air, Are, to the jealous, confirmation strong As proofs of holy writ. This may do something.

The Moor already changes with my poison :— Dangerous conceits are, in their natures, poisons, Which, at the first, are scarce found to distaste ; But, with a little act upon the blood, Burn like the mines of sulphur.—I did say so :—

Enter OTHELLO.

Look where he comes ! Not poppy, nor mandragora, †

Nor all the drowsy syrups of the world, Shall ever medicine thee to that sweet sleep Which thou ow'd'st ‡ yesterday.

Oth. Ha ! ha ! false to me ?

To me ?

Iago. Why, how now, general ? no more of that.

Oth. Avaunt ! begone ! thou hast set me on the rack :—

I swear, 'tis better to be much abus'd, Than but to know't a little.

Iago. How now, my lord ?

Oth. What sense had I of her stolen hours of lust ?

I saw it not, thought it not, it harm'd not me : I slept the next night well, was free and merry ;

I found not Cassio's kisses on her lips : He that is robb'd, not wanting what is stolen, Let him not know it, and he's not robb'd at all.

Iago. I am sorry to hear this.

Oth. I had been happy, if the general camp, Pioneers § and all, had tasted her sweet body, So I had nothing known : O now, for ever,

Farewell the tranquil mind ! farewell content ! Farewell the plumed troop, and the big wars, That make ambition virtue ! O farewell ! Farewell the neighing steed, and the shrill

trump,

The spirit-stirring drum, the ear-piercing fife, The royal banner ; and all quality, [war] Pride, pomp, and circumstance of glorious And, O you mortal engines, whose rude throats The immortal Jove's dread clamours counter-felt,

Farewell ! Othello's occupation's gone !

Iago. Is it possible !—My lord,—

Oth. Villain, be sure thou prove my love a

whore ;

Be sure of it ; give me the ocular proof ;

[Taking him by the Throat.]

Or, by the worth of mine eternal soul, Thou hadst been better have been born a dog,

Than answer my wak'd wrath.

Iago. Is it come to this ?

Oth. Make me to see it ; or (at the least) so prove it,

That the probation bear no hinge, nor loop, To hang a doubt on : or, woe upon thy life !

Iago. My noble lord,—

Oth. If thou dost slander her, and torture me, Never pray more : abandon all remorse ; *

On horror's head horrors accumulate : Do deeds to make heaven weep, all earth

amaz'd,

For nothing canst thou to damnation add, Greater than that.

Iago. O grace ! O heaven defend me !

Are you a man ? have you a soul, or sense ?— God be wi' you : take mine office.—O wretched

fool,

That liv'st to make thine honesty a vice !— O monstrous world ! Take note, take note, O

world,

To be direct and honest, is not safe.— I thank you for this profit ; and, from hence,

I'll love no friend, since love breeds such offence.

Oth. Nay, stay :—Thou shouldst be honest.

Iago. I should be wise ; for honesty's a fool, And loses that it works for.

Oth. By the world, [not,

I think my wife be honest, and think she is I think that thou art just, and think thou art

not ;

I'll have some proof : Her name, that was as As Dian's visage, is now begrim'd and black

As mine own face.—If there be cords, or knives,

Poison, or fire, or suffocating streams, I'll not endure it.—Would, I were satisfied !

Iago. I see, Sir, you are eaten up with pas-

I do repent me that I put it to you. [sion : You would be satisfied ?

Oth. Would ? nay, I will.

Iago. And may : but, how ? how satisfied, my lord ?

Would you, the supervisor, grossly gape on ? Behold her tupp'd ?

Oth. Death and damnation ! O !

Iago. It were a tedious difficulty, I think, To bring them to that prospect : Damn them

then,

If ever mortal eyes do see them bolster, More than their own ! What then ? how then ?

What shall I say ? Where's satisfaction ? It is impossible, you should see this,

Were they as prime as goats, as hot as monkeys, † As salt as wolves in pride, and fools as gross

As ignorance made drunk. But, yet, I say, If imputation and strong circumstances,

Which lead directly to the door of truth, Will give you satisfaction, you may have it.

* All pity.

† It were to be wished that this and many of the succeeding passages could be expunged ; but the facts which are adduced as proofs of adultery, are necessarily of such a nature as cannot be expressed in terms of perfect delicacy.

* Seem as if you knew nothing of the matter.

† The mandrake, or mandragora, was an opiate of the most powerful kind.

‡ Possessedst.

§ Pioneers were generally degraded soldiers.

Oth. Give me a living reason she's disloyal.

Iago. I do not like the office :

But, sith I am entered in this cause so far,— Pick'd to it by foolish honesty and love,—
I will go on. I lay with Cassio lately ;
And, being troubled with a raging tooth,
I could not sleep.

There are a kind of men so loose of soul,
That in their sleeps will mutter their affairs ;
One of this kind is Cassio :

In sleep I heard him say,—*Sweet Desdemona,
Let us be wary, let us hide our loves!* [hand,
And then, Sir, would he gripe, and wring my Cry,—O sweet creature; and then kiss me
As if he pluck'd up kisses by the roots, [hard,
That grew upon my lips : then laid his leg
Over my thigh, and sigh'd, and kiss'd ; and then

[Moor!
Cried,—Cursed fate! that gave thee to the

Oth. O monstrous ! monstrous !

Iago. Nay, this was but his dream.

Oth. But this denoted a foregone conclusion ;
'Tis a shrewd doubt, though it be but a dream.

Iago. And this may help to thicken other
That do demonstrate thinly. [proofs,

Oth. I'll tear her all to pieces.

Iago. Nay, but be wise : yet we see nothing
done :

She may be honest yet. Tell me but this,—
Have you not sometimes seen a handkerchief,
Spotted with strawberries, in your wife's hand ?

Oth. I gave her such a one ; 'twas my first gift.

Iago. I know not that : but such a handkerchief,

(I am sure it was your wife's,) did I to-day
See Cassio wipe his beard with.

Oth. If it be that,—

Iago. If it be that, or any that was her's,
It speaks against her with the other proofs.

Oth. O that the slave had forty thousand lives ;

O he is too poor, too weak for my revenge !
Now do I see 'tis true.—Look here, Iago ;
All my fond love thus I do blow to heaven :
'Tis gone.—

Arise, black vengeance, from thy hollow cell !
Yield up, O love, thy crown, and hearted throne ; [fraught,

To tyrannous hate! swell, bosom, with thy
For 'tis of aspic's tongues !

Iago. Pray, be content.

Oth. O blood, Iago, blood !

Iago. Patience, I say ; your mind, perhaps,
may change.

Oth. Never, Iago. Like to the Pontic sea,
Whose icy current and compulsive course
Ne'er feels retiring ebb, but keeps due on
To the Propontic and the Hellespont ;
Even so my bloody thoughts, with violent pace, [love,

Shall ne'er look back, ne'er ebb to humble
Till that a capable and wide revenge
Swallow them up.—Now, by yond' marble
heaven,

In the due reverence of a sacred vow [Kneels.
I here engage my words.

Iago. Do not rise yet.— [Kneels.

Witness, you ever-burning lights above !
You elements that clip * us round about !
Witness, that here Iago doth give up
The execution of his wit, hands, heart,
To wrong'd Othello's service! let him command,

And to obey shall be in me remorse, †
What bloody work soever.

Oth. I greet thy love,
Not with vain thanks, but with acceptance
bounteous,

And will upon the instant put thee to't :
Within these three days let me hear thee say
That Cassio's not alive.

* Embrace.

† How bloody soever the act, I will do it out of pity or remorse for him.

Iago. My friend is dead ; 'tis done, at your
But let her live. [request :

Oth. Damn her, lewd minx ! O damn her !
Come, go with me apart ; I will withdraw,
To furnish me with some swift means of death
For the fair devil. Now art thou my lieutenant-ant.

Iago. I am your own for ever. [Exeunt.

SCENE IV.—The same.

Enter DESDEMONA, EMILIA, and CLOWN.

Des. Do you know, Sirrah, where lieutenant Cassio lies ?

Clo. I dare not say, he lies any where.

Des. Why, man ?

Clo. He is a soldier ; and for me to say a soldier lies, is stabbing.

Des. Go to ; Where lodges he ?

Clo. To tell you where he lodges, is to tell you where I lie.

Des. Can any thing be made of this ?

Clo. I know not where he lodges ; and for me to devise a lodging, and say, he lies here, or he lies there, were to lie in my own throat.

Des. Can you inquire him out, and be edified by report ?

Clo. I will catechise the world for him ; that is, make questions, and by them answer.

Des. Seek him, bid him come hither : tell him I have moved my lord in his behalf, and hope all will be well.

Clo. To do this is within the compass of man's wit ; and therefore I will attempt the doing it. [Exit.

Des. Where should I lose that handkerchief,
Emilia ?

Emil. I know not, madam.

Des. Believe me, I had rather have lost my purse

Full of crusadoes. * And but my noble Moor
Is true of mind, and made of no such baseness
As jealous creatures are, it were enough
To put him to ill-thinking.

Emil. Is he not jealous ?

Des. Who, he ? I think the sun where he was born,
Drew all such humours from him.

Emil. Look, where he comes.

Des. I will not leave him now, till Cassio
Be call'd to him.—How is't with you, my lord ?

Enter OTHELLO.

Oth. Well, my good lady.—[Aside.] O, hardness to dissemble !—
How do you do, Desdemona ?

Des. Well, my good lord.

Oth. Give me your hand : This hand is moist,
my lady.

Des. It yet has felt no age, nor known no sorrow.

Oth. This argues fruitfulness, and liberal heart ;— [quires

Hot, hot, and moist : This hand of your's re-
A sequester from liberty, fasting and prayer,
Much castigation, † exercise devout ;
For here's a young and sweating devil here,
That commonly rebels. 'Tis a good hand,
A frank one.

Des. You may, indeed, say so ;

For 'twas that hand that gave away my heart.

Oth. A liberal hand : The hearts of old gave
hands ;

But our new heraldry is—hands, not hearts.

Des. I cannot speak of this, Come now, your promise.

Oth. What promise, chuck ?

Des. I have sent to bid Cassio come speak
with you.

Oth. I have a salt and sullen rheum offends
Lend me thy handkerchief. [unc.

Des. Here, my lord.

Oth. That which I gave you.

* A Portuguese coin, 3s.

† Penance, discipline.

Des. I have it not about me.

Oth. Not?

Des. No, indeed, my lord.

Oth. That is a fault:

That handkerchief

Did an Egyptian to my mother give;

She was a charmer,* and could almost read

The thoughts of people: she told her, while
she kept it, [ther

'Twould make her amiable, and subdue my fa-
Entirely to her love; but if she lost it,

Or made a gift of it, my father's eye [hunt

Should hold her loathly, and his spirits should
After new fancies: She, dying, gave it me;

And bid me, when my fate would have me
wive,

To give it her. I did so: and take heed of't,
Make it a darling like your precious eye;

To lose or give't away, were such perdition,
As nothing else could match.

Des. Is it possible?

Oth. 'Tis true, there's magic in the web of it:
A sibyl, that had number'd in the world

The sun to make two hundred compasses,

In her prophetic fury sew'd the work;

The worms were hallow'd, that did breed the
silk;

And it was died in mummy,† which the skilful
Conserv'd of maidens' hearts.

Des. Indeed! is't true?

Oth. Most veritable; therefore look to't well.

Des. Then 'would to heaven that I had never seen it.

Oth. Ha! wherefore?

Des. Why do you speak so startingly and rash?

Oth. Is't lost? is't gone? speak, is it out of the way?

Des. Heaven bless us!

Oth. Say you?

Des. It is not lost; But what an if it were?

Oth. Ha!

Des. I say, it is not lost.

Oth. Fetch't, let me see it.

Des. Why, so I can, Sir, but I will not now;
This is a trick, to put me from my suit;

I pray, let Cassio be receiv'd again.

Oth. Fetch me that handkerchief; my mind
misgives.

Des. Come, come;

You'll never meet a more sufficient man.

Oth. The handkerchief,—

Des. I pray, talk me of Cassio.

Oth. The handkerchief,—

Des. A man that, all his time,

Hath founded his good fortune on your love;

Shar'd dangers with you;—

Oth. The handkerchief,—

Des. In sooth,

You are to blame.

Oth. Away! [Exit OTHELLO.

Emil. Is not this man jealous?

Des. I ne'er saw this before.

Sure, there's some wonder in this handker-
chief:

I am most unhappy in the loss of it.

Emil. 'Tis not a year or two shows us a man:
They are all but stomachs, and we all but food;

They eat us hungerly, and when they are full,
They belch us. Look you! Cassio, and my husband.

Enter IAGO and CASSIO.

Iago. There is no other way; 'tis she must
do't;

And, lo, the happiness! go, and importune her.

Des. How now, good Cassio? what's the news
with you?

Cas. Madam, my former suit: I do beseech
you,

That, by your virtuous means, I may again

† The balsamic liquor offused from mummies, was formerly famous for its anti-epileptic qualities.

Exist, and be a member of his love,
Whom I, with all the duty of my heart,
Entirely honour; I would not be delay'd:
If my offence be of such mortal kind,
That neither service past, nor present sorrows,
Nor purpos'd merit in futurity,
Can ransom me into his love again,
But to know so must be my benefit;
So shall I clothe me in a forc'd content,
And shut myself up in some other course,
To fortune's aims.

Des. Alas! thrice-gentle Cassio,
My advocacy is not now in tune;
My lord is not my lord; nor should I know him,
Were he in favour,* as in humour, alter'd.
So help me, every spirit sanctified,
As I have spoken for you all my best;
And stood within the blank† of his displeasure,
For my free speech! You must awhile be patient:

What I can do, I will; and more I will,
Than for myself I dare: let that suffice you.

Iago. Is my lord angry?

Emil. He went hence but now,
And certainly in strange unquietness.

Iago. Can he be angry? I have seen the cannon,

When it hath blown his ranks into the air,

And, like the devil, from his very arm

Puff'd his own brother;—And can he be angry?

Something of moment, then: I will go meet
him;

There's matter in't indeed, if he be angry.

Des. I prythee, do so.—Something, sure, of state,— [Exit IAGO.

Either from Venice; or some unhatch'd practice,‡

Made demonstrable here in Cyprus to him,—

Hath puddled his clear spirit; and, in such cases,

Though great ones are their object. 'Tis even
For let our finger ache, and it endues [so;

Nor of them look for such observances [gods;

As fit the bridal. §—Beshrew me much, Emilia,

I was (unhandsome warrior as I am,)

Arraigning his unkindness with my soul;

But now I find, I had suborn'd the witness,

And he's indicted falsely.

Emil. Pray heaven, it be state matters, as
you think;

And no conception, nor no jealous toy,

Concerning you.

Des. Alas, the day! I never gave him cause.

Emil. But jealous souls will not be answered so;

They are not ever jealous for the cause,

But jealous for they are jealous: 'tis a monster,

Begot upon itself, born on itself.

Des. Heaven keep that monster from Othello's mind!

Emil. Lady, amen.

Des. I will go seek him.—Cassio walk here-
about:

If I do find him fit, I'll move your suit,

And seek to effect it to my uttermost.

Cas. I humbly thank your ladyship.

[Exit DESDEMONA and EMILIA.

Enter BIANCA.

Bian. Save you, friend Cassio!

Cas. What make you from home?

How is it with you, my most fair Bianca?

I'faith, sweet love, I was coming to your
house.

Bian. And I was going to your lodging,

Cassio. [nights?

What! keep a week away? seven days and

* In countenance.

‡ Treason.

† Within the shot of his anger.

§ The nuptial feast.

Eight score eight hours! and lovers' absent hours,
More edious than the dial eight score times!
O weary reckoning!

Cas. Pardon me, Bianca;
I have this while with leaden thoughts been press'd;

But I shall, in a more continue time,*
Strike off this score of absence. Sweet Bianca, [Giving her DESDEMONA'S Handkerchief.]
Take me this work out.†

Bian. O Cassio, whence came this?
This is some token from a newer friend.
To the felt absence now I feel a cause:
Is it come to this? Well, well.

Cas. Woman, go to!
Throw your vile guesses in the devil's teeth,
From whence you have them. You are jealous now,
That this is from some mistress, some remember, in good troth, Bianca.

Bian. Why, whose is it?

Cas. I know not, sweet: I found it in my chamber.

I like the work well; ere it be demanded,
(As like enough, it will,) I'd have it copied:
Take it, and do't; and leave me for this time.

Bian. Leave you! wherefore?

Cas. I do attend here on the general;
And think it no addition, nor my wish
To have him see me woman'd.

Bian. Why, I pray you?

Cas. Not that I love you not.

Bian. But that you do not love me,
I pray you, bring me on the way a little,
And say if I shall see you soon at night.

Cas. 'Tis but a little way that I can bring you,
For I attend here: but I'll see you soon.

Bian. 'Tis very good: I must be circumstanc'd.‡ [Exeunt.]

ACT IV.

SCENE I.—The same.

Enter OTHELLO and IAGO.

Iago. Will you think so?

Oth. Think so, Iago?

Iago. What,
To kiss in private?

Oth. An unauthoriz'd kiss.

Iago. Or to be naked with her friend abed,
An hour, or more, not meaning any harm?

Oth. Naked abed, Iago, and not mean harm?
It is hypocrisy against the devil:
They that mean virtuously, and yet do so,
The devil their virtue tempts, and they tempt heaven.

Iago. So they do nothing, 'tis a venial slip:
But if I give my wife a handkerchief,—

Oth. What then?

Iago. Why then, 'tis her's, my lord; and being her's,
She may, I think, bestow't on any man.

Oth. She is protectress of her honour too;
May she give that?

Iago. Her honour is an essence that's not seen;

They have it very oft, that have it not:
But, for the handkerchief,—

Oth. By heaven, I would most gladly have forgot it:—

Thou said'st,—O it comes o'er my memory,
As doth the raven o'er the infected house,
Boding to all,§ he had my handkerchief.

Iago. Ay, what of that?

Oth. That's not so good, now.

* Time less interrupted. ‡ The meaning is not, pick out of the work, but copy it in another handkerchief. § Give way to circumstances.
¶ The raven was thought to be a constant attendant on a house infected with the plague.

Iago. What, if I had said, I had seen him do you wrong?

Or heard him say,—As knaves be such abroad
Who having, by their own importunate suit,
Or voluntary dotage of some mistress,
Convinced or supplied* them, cannot choose
But they must blab—

Oth. Hath he said any thing?

Iago. He hath, my lord; but be you well
assur'd,

No more than he'll unsweat.

Oth. What hath he said?

Iago. 'Faith, that he did,—I know not what he did.

Oth. What? what?

Iago. Lie—

Oth. With her?

Iago. With her, on her; what you will.

Oth. Lie with her! lie on her!—We say, lie on her, when they belie her: Lie with her!
that's fulsome.—Handkerchief,—confessions,— handkerchief.—To confess, and be hanged for his labour.†—First to be hanged, and then to confess:—I tremble at it. Nature would not invest herself in such shadowing passion, without some instruction. It is not words, that shake me thus:
—Plish!—Noses, ears, and lips:—Is it possible?
—Confess!—Handkerchief!—O devil!—

[Falls in a Trance.]

Iago. Work on,
My medicine, work! Thus credulous fools are caught;
And many worthy and chaste dames, even thus,
All guiltless meet reproach.—What, ho! my
lord!

Enter CASSIO.

My lord, I say! Othello!—How now, Cassio?

Cas. What is the matter?

Iago. My lord is fallen into an epilepsy;
This is his second fit; he had one yesterday.

Cas. Rub him about the temples.

Iago. No, forbear:

The lethargy must have his quiet course:
If not, he foams at mouth: and, by and by,
Breaks out to savage madness. Look, he stirs:
Do you withdraw yourself a little while,
He will recover straight; when he is gone,
I would on great occasion speak with you.—

[Exit CASSIO.]

How is it general? have you not hurt your
head?

Oth. Dost thou mock me?

Iago. I mock you! no, by heaven:
'Would you would bear your fortunes like a man.

Oth. A horned man's a monster, and a beast.

Iago. There's many a beast then in a populous city,
And many a civil monster.

Oth. Did he confess it?

Iago. Good Sir, be a man;
Think every bearded fellow, that's but yok'd,
May draw with you: there's millions now alive,
That nightly lie in those unproper beds,
Which they dare swear peculiar; your case is better.

O 'tis the spite of hell, the fiend's arch-mock,
To lip a wanton in a secure conch,
And to suppose her chaste! No, let me know;
And, knowing what I am, I know what she shall be.

Oth. O thou art wise; 'tis certain.

Iago. Stand you awhile apart;
Confine yourself but in a patient list.‡
Whilst you were here, ere while mad with
your grief,

(A passion most unsuiting such a man.)
Cassio came hither: I shifted him away,
And laid good 'scuse upon your ecstasy;
Bade him anon return, and here speak with me; [self,

The which he promis'd. Do but encave § your.

† A proverbial saying.

‡ Within the bounds of patience.

§ Common.

¶ Hide.

And mark the sneers, the gibes, and notable
scorns,

That dwell in every region of his face :
For I will make him tell the tale anew,—
Where, how, how oft, how long ago, and when
He hath, and is again to cope your wife ;
I say, but mark his gesture. Marry, patience ;
Or I shall say, you are all in all in spleen,
And nothing of a man.

Oth. Dost thou hear, Iago ?
I will be found most cunning in my patience ;
But (dost thou hear ?) most bloody.

Iago. That's not amiss ;
But yet keep time in all. Will you withdraw ;
[OTHELLO withdraws.]

Now will I question Cassio of Bianca,
A housewife, that, by selling her desires,
Buys herself bread and clothes : it is a creature,
That dotes on Cassio,—as 'tis the strumpet's plague,

To beguile many, and be beguill'd by one ;
He, when he hears of her, cannot refrain
From the excess of laughter :—Here he comes :—

Re-enter CASSIO.

As he shall smile, Othello shall go mad ;
And his unbookish * jealousy must construe Poor Cassio's smiles, gestures, and light behaviour [tenant ?]

Quite in the wrong.—How do you now, lieu-
Cas. The worser, that you give me the addi-
Whose want even kills me. [tion ?]

Iago. Ply Desdemona well, and you are sure of't.

Now, if this suit lay in Bianca's power,
[Speaking lower.]

How quickly should you speed ?

Cas. Alas, poor caltiff !

Oth. Look, how he laughs already ! [Aside.]

Iago. I never knew a woman love man so.

Cas. Alas, poor rogue ! I think I'faith she loves me. [Aside.]

Oth. Now he denies it faintly, and laughs it out. [Aside.]

Iago. Do you hear, Cassio ?

Oth. Now he importunes him

To tell it o'er : Go to ; well said, well said.
[Aside.]

Iago. She gives it out, that you shall marry
Do you intend it ? [her :]

Cas. Ha, ha, ha !

Oth. Do you triumph, Roman ? do you triumph ? [Aside.]

Cas. I marry her !—what ? a customer ! † I pr'ythee bear some charity, to my wit ; do not think it so unwholesome. Ha, ha, ha !

Oth. So, so, so, so : They laugh that win.
[Aside.]

Iago. 'Faith, the cry goes that you shall marry her.

Cas. Pr'ythee say true.

Iago. I am a very villain else.

Oth. Have you scored me ? Well. [Aside.]

Cas. This is the monkey's own giving out :
she is persuaded I will marry her, out of her own love and flattery, not out of my promise.

Oth. Iago beckons me ; now he begins the story. [Aside.]

Cas. She was here even now ; she haunts me in every place. I was, the other day, talking on the sea-bank with certain Venetians ; and thither comes this bauble ; by this hand, she falls thus about my neck ;—

Oth. Crying, O dear Cassio ! as it were : his gesture imports it. [Aside.]

Cas. So hangs, and lolls, and weeps upon me ;
so hales and pulls me : ha, ha, ha !—

Oth. Now he tells, how she pluck'd him to my chamber : O I see that nose of yours, but not that dog I shall throw it to. [Aside.]

Cas. Well, I must leave her company.

* Ignorant. † Title of lieutenant.
‡ A common woman.

Iago. Before me ! look where she comes.

Enter BIANCA.

Cas. 'Tis such another fitchew !* marry, a perfumed one.—What do you mean by this haunting of me ?

Bian. Let the devil and his dam haunt you !
What did you mean by that same handkerchief you gave me even now ? I was a fine fool to take it. I must take out the whole work !—A likely piece of work, that you should find it in your chamber, and not know who left it there !
This is some minx's token, and I must take out the work ! There,—give it your hobby-horse :
wheresoever you had it, I'll take out no work on't.

Cas. How now, my sweet Bianca ? how now ?
how now ?

Oth. By heaven, that should be my handkerchief ! [Aside.]

Bian. And you'll come to supper to-night, you may : an you will not, come when you are next prepared for. [Exit.]

Iago. After her, after her.

Cas. 'Faith I must, she'll rail in the streets
else.

Iago. Will you sup there ?

Cas. 'Faith, I intend so.

Iago. Well, I may chance to see you ; for I would very fain speak with you.

Cas. Pr'ythee, come ; Will you ?

Iago. Go to : say no more. [Exit CASSIO.]

Oth. How shall I murder him, Iago ?

Iago. Did you perceive how he laughed at his vice ?

Oth. O Iago !

Iago. And did you see the handkerchief ?

Oth. Was that mine ?

Iago. Your's by this hand : and to see how he prizes the foolish woman, your wife ! she gave it to him, and he hath given it his whore.

Oth. I would have him nine years a killing :—A fine woman ! a fair woman ! a sweet woman !

Iago. Nay, you must forget that.

Oth. Ay, let her rot, and perish, and be damned to-night ; for she shall not live : No, my heart is turned to stone ; I strike it, and it hurts my hand. O the world hath not a sweeter creature ; she might lie by an emperor's side, and command him tasks.

Iago. Nay, that's not your way.

Oth. Hang her ! I do but say what she is :—
So delicate with her needle !—An admirable musician ! O she will sing the savageness out of a bear !—Of so high and plenteous wit and invention !

Iago. She's the worse for all this.

Oth. O a thousand, a thousand times :—And then, of so gentle a condition ! †

Iago. Ay, too gentle.

Oth. Nay, that's certain : But yet the pity of it, Iago !—O Iago, the pity of it, Iago !

Iago. If you are so fond over her iniquity, give her patent to offend ; for, if it touch not you,
it comes near nobody.

Oth. I will chop her into messes :—Cuckold
me !

Iago. O 'tis foul in her.

Oth. With mine officer !

Iago. That's fouler.

Oth. Get me some poison, Iago ; this night :
—I'll not expostulate with her, lest her body and beauty unprovide my mind again : this night,
Iago.

Iago. Do it not with poison, strangle her in her bed, even the bed she hath contaminated.

Oth. Good, good : the justice of it pleases ;
very good.

Iago. And for Cassio,—let me be his undertaker : You shall hear more by midnight.

[A Trumpet within.]

Oth. Excellent good.—What trumpet is that same ?

A pole-cat.

† Of so sweet a disposition.

Iago. Something from Venice, sure. 'Tis Lodovico,
Come from the duke: and, see, your wife is with him.

Enter LODOVICO, DESDEMONA, and Attendants.

Lod. 'Save you, worthy general!

Oth. With all my heart, Sir.

Lod. The duke and senators of Venice greet you. [Gives him a Packet.]

Oth. I kiss the instrument of their pleasures. [Opens the Packet and reads.]

Des. And what's the news, good cousin Lodovico?

Iago. I am very glad to see you, signior; Welcome to Cyprus.

Lod. I thank you: How does lieutenant Cassio?

Iago. Lives, Sir.

Des. Cousin, there's fallen between him and my lord

An unkind breach: but you shall make all well.

Oth. Are you sure of that?

Des. My lord?

Oth. This full you not to do, as you will—

Lod. He did not call; he's busy in the paper. [Reads.]
Is there division 'twixt my lord and Cassio?

Des. A most unhappy one! I would do much To atone* them, for the love I bear to Cassio.

Oth. Fire and brimstone!

Des. My lord?

Oth. Are you wise?

Des. What, is he angry?

Lod. May be, the letter mov'd him; For, as I think, they do command him home, Deputing Cassio in his government.

Des. By my troth, I am glad on't.

Oth. Indeed.

Des. My lord?

Oth. I am glad to see you mad.

Des. How, sweet Othello?

Oth. Devil. [Striking her.]

Des. I have not deserv'd this.

Lod. My lord, this would not be believ'd in Venice,

Though I should swear I saw it: 'Tis very much; Make her amends, she weeps.

Oth. O devil, devil!

If that the earth could teem with woman's tears, Each drop she falls would prove a crocodile:— Out of my sight!

Des. I will not stay to offend you. [Going.]

Lod. Truly, an obedient lady:— I do beseech your lordship, call her back.

Oth. Mistress,—

Des. My lord?

Oth. What would you with her, Sir?

Lod. Who, I, my lord?

Oth. Ay, you did wish, that I would make her turn:

Sir, she can turn and turn, and yet go on, And turn again: and she can weep, Sir, weep; And she's obedient, as you say,—obedient,— Very obedient;—Proceed you in your tears.— Concerning this, Sir,—O well-painted passion! I am commanded home:—Get you away; I'll send for you anon.—Sir, I obey the mandate,

And will return to Venice;—Hence;—avaunt!

[Exit DESDEMONA.]
Cassio shall have my place. And,—Sir, to-night,

I do entreat that we may sup together.

You are welcome, Sir, to Cyprus.—Goats, and monkeys! [Exit.]

Lod. Is this the noble Moor whom our full senate

Call all-in-all sufficient?—This the noble na-
Whom passion could not shake? whose solid virtue

The shot of accident, nor dart of chance,
Could neither graze nor pierce?

* Reconcile.

Iago. He is much chang'd.

Lod. Are his wits safe? is he not light of brain?

Iago. He is that he is; I may not breathe my censure.

What he might be, if what he might, he is not,— I would to heaven, he were.

Lod. What, strike his wife!

Iago. 'Faith, that was not so well; Yet 'would That stroke would prove the worst. [I knew,]

Lod. Is it his use?

Or did the letters work upon his blood,
And new-create this fault?

Iago. Alas, alas!

It is not honesty in me to speak

What I have seen and known. You shall observe him

And his own courses will denote him so,

That I may save my speech: Do but go after,
And mark how he continues.

Lod. I am sorry that I am deceiv'd in him.

[Exeunt.]

SCENE II.—A Room in the Castle.

Enter OTHELLO and EMILIA.

Oth. You have seen nothing then?

Emil. Nor ever heard; nor ever did suspect.

Oth. Yes, you have seen Cassio and she together.

Emil. But then I saw no harm, and then I heard. [them.]

Each syllable that breath made up between
Oth. What, did they never whisper?

Emil. Never, my lord.

Oth. Nor send you out o'the way?

Emil. Never.

Oth. To fetch her fan, her gloves, her mask, nor nothing?

Emil. Never, my lord.

Oth. That's strange.

Emil. I durst, my lord, to wager she is honest, [other,]
Lay down my soul at stake: if you think Remove your thought; it doth abuse your bosom.

If any wretch hath put this in your head,
Let heaven requite it with the serpent's curse!
For if she be not honest; chaste, and true,
There's no man happy; the purest of their is foul as slander. [wives]

Oth. Bid her come hither:—go—

[Exit EMILIA.]

She says enough:—yet she's a simple bawd,
That cannot say as much. This is a subtle
whore,
A closet-lock-and-key of villainous secrets:
And yet she'll kneel and pray; I have seen her do't.

Re-enter EMILIA with DESDEMONA.

Des. My lord, what is your will?

Oth. Pray, chuck, come hither.

Des. What is your pleasure?

Oth. Let me see your eyes;
Look in my face.

Des. What horrible fancy's this?

Oth. Some of your function, mistress;

[To EMILIA.]

Leave procreants alone, and shut the door;
Cough, or cry hem, if any body come:
Your mystery, your mystery;—nay, despatch.

[Exit EMILIA.]

Des. Upon my knees, what doth your speech import?

I understand a fury in your words,
But not the words.

Oth. Why, what art thou?

Des. Your wife, my lord; your true
And loyal wife.

Oth. Come, swear it, damn thyself;

Lest, being like one of heaven, the devils themselves

Should fear to seize thee: therefore be double-
Swear thou art honest. [damn'd,]

Des. Heaven doth truly know it.
Oth. Heaven truly knows, that thou art false as hell.
Des. To whom, my lord? with whom? How am I false?
Oth. O Desdemona!—away! away! away!
Des. Alas, the heavy day!—Why do you weep?
 Am I the occasion of these tears, my lord? If, haply, you my father do suspect, As instrument of this your calling back, Lay not your blame on me; if you have lost him, Why, I have lost him too.
Oth. Had it pleas'd heaven To try me with affliction; had he rain'd All kinds of sores and shames on my bare head; Steep'd me in poverty to the very lips; Given to captivity me and my utmost hopes; I should have found in some part of my soul A drop of patience: but (alas!) to make me A fixed figure for the hand of scorn To point his slow unmoving finger at,— O! O!
 Yet could I bear that too; well, very well: But there, where I have garner'd* up my heart, Where either I must live, or bear no life, The fountain from the which my current runs, Or else dries up; to be discarded thence! Or keep it as a cistern, for foul toads To knot and gender in!—turn thy complexion there! Patience, thou young and rose-lipp'd cherubim; Ay, there, look grim as hell!
Des. I hope, my noble lord esteems me honest.
Oth. O ay; as summer flies are in the shambles, That quicken even with blowing. O then weed, Who art so lovely fair, and smell'st so sweet, That the sense aches at thee.—'Would, thou had'st ne'er been born!
Des. Alas! what ignorant sin have I committed?
Oth. Was this fair paper, this most goodly book, Made to write whore upon? What committed! Committed!—O thou public commoner! I should make very forges of my cheeks, That would to cinders burn up modesty, Did I but speak thy deeds.—What committed! Heaven stops the nose at it, and the moon winks;
 The bawdy wind, that kisses all it meets, Is hush'd within the hollow mine of earth, And will not bear it: What committed!—Impudent strumpet!
Des. By heaven, you do me wrong.
Oth. Are not you a strumpet?
Des. No, as I am a Christian:
 If to preserve this vessel for my lord, From any other foul unlawful touch, Be—not to be a strumpet, I am none.
Oth. What, not a whore?
Des. No, as I shall be saved.
Oth. Is it possible?
Des. O heaven, forgive us!
Oth. I cry you mercy, then:
 I took you for that cunning whore of Venice, That married with Othello.—You, mistress,

Re-enter EMILIA.

That have the office opposite to Saint Peter, And keep the gate of hell; You! you! ay, you! We have done our course; there's money for your pains;
 I pray you turn the key, and keep our counsel. [Exit.]
Emil. Alas, what does this gentlemen conceive?
 How do you, madam? how do you, my good lady?
Des. 'Faith, half asleep.

* Treasured

Emil. Good madam, what's the matter with my lord?
Des. With who?
Emil. Why, with my lord, madam.
Des. Who is thy lord?
Emil. He that is your's, sweet lady.
Des. I have none: Do not talk to me, Emilia;
 I cannot weep; nor answer I have none, But what should go by water. Pr'ythee, to-night Lay on my bed my wedding sheets,—remember;— And call thy husband hither.
Emil. Here is a change, indeed! [Exit.]
Des. 'Tis meet I should be us'd so, very meet.
 How have I been behav'd, that he might stick The small'st opinion on my great'st abuse?

Re-enter EMILIA, with IAGO.

Iago. What is your pleasure, madam? How is it with you?
Des. I cannot tell. Those, that do teach young babes, Do it with gentle means and easy tasks: He might have chid me so; for, in good faith, I am a child to chiding.
Iago. What's the matter, lady?
Emil. Alas, Iago, my lord hath so bewhor'd her, Thrown such despite and heavy terms upon her, As true hearts cannot bear.
Des. Am I that name, Iago?
Iago. What name, fair lady?
Des. Such as, she says, my lord did say I was.
Emil. He call'd her, whore; a beggar, in his drink, Could not have laid such terms upon his callet.*
Iago. Why did he so?
Des. I do not know; I am sure I am none such.
Iago. Do not weep, do not weep; Alas, the day!
Emil. Has she forsook so many noble matches, Her father, and her country, and her friends, To be call'd—whore? would it not make one weep?
Des. It is my wretched fortune.
Iago. Beshrew him for it!
 How comes this trick upon him?
Des. Nay, heaven doth know.
Emil. I will be hang'd, if some eternal villain, Some busy and insinuating rogue, Some cogging cozening slave, to get some office, [else. Hath not devis'd this slander; I'll be hang'd Iago. Fie, there is no such man: it is impossible.
Des. If any such there be, heaven pardon him!
Emil. A halter pardon him! and hell gnaw his bones!
 Why should he call her, whore? who keeps her company?
 What place? what time? what form? what likelihood? [knave;
 The Moor's abus'd by some most villanous Some base notorious kuave, some scurvy fellow:— [unfold,
 O heaven, that such companions† thou'dst And put in every honest hand a whip, To lash the rascal naked through the world, Even from the east to the west!
Iago. Speak within door.
Emil. O lie upon him! some such squire he was,
 That turn'd your wit the seamy side‡ without, And made you to suspect me with the Moor.
Iago. You are a fool; go to.
Des. O good Iago,
 What shall I do to win my lord again?

* His drab.

† Fellows.

‡ Inside out.

Good friend, go to him ; for, by this light of heaven,

I know not how I lost him. Here I kneel :—
If e'er my will did trespass 'gainst his love,
Either in discourse of thought, or actual deed ;
Or that mine eyes, mine ears, or any sense,
Delighted them in any other form ;
Or that I do not yet, and ever did,
And ever will,—though he do shake me off
To beggarly divorcement,—love him dearly, Comfort forswear me ! Unkindness may do much ;

And his unkindness may defeat my life,
But never taunt my love. I cannot say, whore ;
I does abhor me, now I speak the word ;
To do the act that might the addition * earn,
Not the world's mass of vanity could make me.

Iago. I pray you, be content : 'tis but his humour ;

The business of the state does him offence,
And he does chide with you.

Des. If 'twere no other,—

Iago. It is but so, I warrant you.

[Trumpets.]

Hark, how these instruments summon to supper !

And the great messengers of Venice stay :

Go in, and weep not ; all things shall be well.

[Exeunt DESDEMONA and EMILIA.]

Enter RODERIGO.

How now, Roderigo ?

Rod. I do not find that thou deal'st justly with me ?

Iago. What in the contrary ?

Rod. Every day thou dost† me with some device, Iago : and rather (as it seems to me now) keep'st from me all conveniency, than suppliest me with the least advantage of hope. I will, indeed, no longer endure it : Nor am I yet persuaded to put up in peace what already I have foolishly suffered.

Iago. Will you hear me, Roderigo ?

Rod. 'Faith, I have heard too much ; for your words and performances are no kin together.

Iago. You charge me most unjustly.

Rod. With nought but truth. I have wasted myself out of my means. The jewels you have had from me, to deliver to Desdemona, would half have corrupted a votarist : You have told me—she has received them, and returned me expectations and comforts of sudden respect and acquittance,† but I find none.

Iago. Well ; go to ; very well.

Rod. Very well I go to ! I cannot go to man ; nor 'tis not very well : By this hand, I say it is very scurvy ; and begun to find myself fobbed in it.

Iago. Very well.

Rod. I tell you, 'tis not very well. I will make myself known to Desdemona : If she will return me my jewels, I will give over my suit, and repent my unlawful solicitation : if not, assure yourself, I will seek satisfaction of you.

Iago. You have said now.

Rod. Ay, and I have said nothing, but what I protest intendment of doing.

Iago. Why, now I see there's mettle in thee ; and even, from this instant, do build on thee a better opinion than ever before. Give me thy hand, Roderigo : Thou hast taken against me a most just exception ; but yet I protest I have dealt most directly in thy affair.

Rod. It hath not appeared.

Iago. I grant indeed, it hath not appeared ; and your suspicion is not without wit and judgment. But, Roderigo, if thou hast that within thee indeed, which I have greater reason to believe now than ever,—I mean, purpose, courage, and valour,—this might show it : If thou the next night following enjoyest not Desdemona, take me from this world with treachery, and devise engines for my life. *

Rod. Well, what is it ? is it within reason, and compass ?

Iago. Sir, there is especial commission come from Venice, to depute Cassio in Othello's place.

Rod. Is that true ? why, then Othello and Desdemona return again to Venice.

Iago. O no ; he goes into Mauritania, and takes away with him the fair Desdemona, unless his abode be lingered here by some accident ; wherein none can be so determinate, as the removing of Cassio.

Rod. How do you mean—removing of him ?

Iago. Why, by making him incapable of Othello's place ; knocking out his brains.

Rod. And that you would have me do ?

Iago. Ay ; if you dare do yourself a profit, and a right. He sups to-night with a barlot, and thither will I go to him ;—he knows not yet of his honourable fortune : if you will watch his going thence, (which I will fashion to fall out between twelve and one,) you may take him at your pleasure : I will be near to second your attempt, and he shall fall between us. Come, stand not amazed at it, but go along with me ; I will show you such a necessity in his death, that you shall think yourself bound to put it on him. It is now high supper-time, and the night grows to waste ; about it.

Rod. I will hear further reason for this.

Iago. And you shall be satisfied. [Exeunt.]

SCENE III.—Another Room in the Castle.

Enter OTHELLO, LODOVICO, DESDEMONA, EMILIA, and Attendants.

Lod. I do beseech you, Sir, trouble yourself no further.

Oth. O pardon me ; 'twill do me good to walk.

Lod. Madam, good night ; I humbly thank your ladyship.

Des. Your honour is most welcome.

Oth. Will you walk, Sir ?—

Oh !—Desdemona,—

Des. My lord ?

Oth. Get you to bed on the instant, I will be returned forthwith : dismiss your attendant there : look, it be done.

Des. I will, my lord.

[Exeunt OTHELLO, LODOVICO, and Attendants.]

Emil. How goes it now ? he looks gentler than he did.

Des. He says, he will return incontinent ;† He hath commanded me to go to bed, And bade me to dismiss you.

Emil. Dismiss me !

Des. It was his bidding ; therefore, good Emilia,

Give me my nightly wearing, and adieu : We must not now displease him.

Emil. I would, you had never seen him !

Des. So would not I : my love doth so approve him, [frowns—
That even his stubbornness, his checks, and (Pr'ythee unpin me)—have grace and favour in them.

Emil. I have laid those sheets you bade me on the bed.

Des. All's one :—Good father ! how foolish are our minds !—

If I do die before thee, pr'ythee shroud me in one of those same sheets.

Emil. Come, come, you talk.

Des. My mother had a maid called Barbara ; She was in love ; and he she lov'd prov'd mad,† And did forsake her : she had a song of—willow, An old thing 'twas, but it express'd her fortune,

* Title.

† Put'st me off.

‡ Requital.

* Contrive means to destroy me.

† Immediately.

‡ Instantaneous.

And she died singing it : That song, to-night,
Will not go from my mind ; I have much to do,
But to go hang my head all at one side,
And sing it like poor Barbara. Pr'ythee despatch.

Emil. Shall I go fetch your night-gown ?

Des. No, napin me here.—

This Lodovico is a proper man.

Emil. A very handsome man.

Des. And he speaks well.

Emil. I know a lady in Venice, who would have walked barefoot to Palestine, for a touch of his nether lip.

I.

Des. The poor soul sat sighing by a sycamore tree,
Sing all a green willow ;

Her hand on her bosom, her head on her knee,
Sing willow, willow, willow :

The fresh streams ran by her, and mur-mur'd her moans ;

Sing willow, &c.

Her salt tears fell from her, and soften'd
the stones ;

Lay by these :

Sing willow, willow, willow ;

Pr'yther, hie thee ; he'll come anon.—

Sing all a green willow must be my garland.

II.

Let nobody blame him, his scorn I approve,—

Nay, that's not next.—Hark ! who is it that knocks ?

Emil. It is the wind.

Des. I call'd my love, false love ; but what said he then ?

Sing willow, &c.

If I court mo^e women, you'll couch with mo men.

So, get thee gone ; good night. Mine eyes do doth that bode weeping ?

Emil. 'Tis neither here nor there.

Des. I have heard it said so.—O these men,
these men !

Doest thou in conscience think,—tell me, Emi-
That there be women who abuse their husbands in such gross kind ?

Emil. There be some such, no question.

Des. Wouldst thou do such a deed for all the
world ?

Emil. Why, would not you ?

Des. No, by this heavenly light !

Emil. Nor I neither by this heavenly light ;
I might do't as well i'the dark.

Des. Wouldst thou do such a deed for all the
world ?

Emil. The world is a huge thing : 'Tis a for a small vice.

Des. Good troth, I think thou wouldst not.

Emil. By my troth, I think I should ; and undo't, when I had done. Marry, I would not do such a thing for a joint-ring ; nor for measures of lawn ; nor for gowns, petticoats, nor caps, nor any petty exhibition : but, for the whole world,—Why, who would not make her husband a cuckold, to make him a monarch ? I should venture purgatory for't.

Des. Beshrew me, if I would do such a wrong for the whole world.

Emil. Why, the wrong is but a wrong i'the world ; and, having the world for your labour,
'tis a wrong in your own world, and you might quickly make it right.

Des. I do not think there is any such woman.

• Mo for more.

Emil. Yes, a dozen ; and as many
To the vantage, as would store the world they play'd for.

But, I do think, it is their husbands' faults,
If wives do fall : Say, that they slack their duties,

And pour our treasures into foreign laps ;
Or else break out in peevish jealousies, Throwing restraint upon us ; or, say, they strike us,

Or scant our former having^e in despite :
Why, we have galls ; and, though we have some
grace,

Yet we have some revenge. Let husbands know,
Their wives have sense[†] like them : they see,
and smell,

And have their palates both for sweet and sour,
As husbands have. What is it that they do
When they change us for others ? Is it sport ?

I think it is ; And doth affection breed it ?
I think, it doth. Is't frailty, that thus errs ?
It is so too : And have not we affection ?

Desires for sport ? and frailty, as men have ?
Then, let them use us well : else, let them
know,

The illa we do, their illa instruct us to.

Des. Good night, good night : Heaven me such usage send,

Not to pick bad from bad ; but, by bad, mend !
[Exeunt.]

ACT V.

SCENE I.—A Street.

Enter IAGO and RODERIGO.

Iago. Here, stand behind this bulk ; straight will he come :

Wear thy good rapier bare,† and put it home ;
Quick, quick ; fear nothing ; I'll be at thy elbow :

It makes us, or it mars us ; think on that,
And fix most firm thy resolution.

Rod. Be near at hand ; I may miscarry in't.

Iago. Here, at thy hand ; be bold, and take thy sword.

[Retires to a little distance.]

Rod. I have no great devotion to the deed ;
And yet he has given me satisfying reasons :—
'Tis but a man gone :—forth, my sword ; he dies.

[Goes to his stand.]

Iago. I have rubb'd this young quat almost to the sense,§

And he grows angry. Now, whether he kill Cas-
Or Cassio him, or each do kill the other, [alo,
Every way makes my gain : Live Roderigo,
He calls me to a restitution large

Of gold and jewels, that I bobb'd|| from him,
As gifts to Desdemona ;

It must not be. If Cassio do remain,
He hath a daily beauty in his life,
That makes me ugly ; and, besides, the Moor
May unfold me to him ; there stand I in much
peril :

No, he must die :—But so, I hear him coming.

Enter CASSIO.

Rod. I know his gait, 'tis he ;—Villain, thou dilest.

[Rushes from his post, and makes a pass
at CASSIO.]

Cas. That thrust had been mine enemy indeed,

But that my coat is better than thou think'st ;
I will make proof of thine.

[Draws, and wounds RODERIGO.]

Rod. O I am slain !

[IAGO rushes from his post, cuts CASSIO behind in the Leg,¶ and exit.]

^e Abridge our pin-money in a pet. [†] Sensation.
[‡] Unsheathed. [§] To the quick. ^{||} Fished.
[¶] Because he hears him say he has armour under his coat.

Cas. I am maim'd for ever :—Help, ho ! murder ! murder ! [Falls.]

Enter OTHELLO, at a distance.

Oth. The voice of Cassio :—Iago keeps his word.

Rod. O villain that I am !

Oth. Hark ! 'tis even so.

Cas. O help ! ho ! light ! a surgeon !

Oth. 'Tis he :—O brave Iago, honest, and just, That hast such noble sense of thy friend's wrong !

Thou teachest me,—Minion, your dear lies dead, And your fate hies apace :—Strumpet, I come : Forth,* of my heart those charms, thine eyes, are blotted ;

Thy bed, lust-stain'd, shall with lust's blood be spotted. [Exit OTHELLO.]

Enter LODOVICO and GRATIANO, at a distance.

Cas. What, ho ! no watch ! no passage ! murder ! murder !

Gra. 'Tis some mischance ; the cry is very direful.

Cas. O help !

Lod. Hark !

Rod. O wretched villain !

Lod. Two or three groans ;—it is a heavy † night :

These may be counterfeits ; let's think't unsafe To come in to the cry, without more help.

Rod. No body come ! then shall I bleed to death.

Enter IAGO, with a Light.

Lod. Hark !

Gra. Here's one comes in his shirt, with light and weapons.

Iago. Who's there ? whose noise is this, that cries on murder ?

Lod. We do not know.

Iago. Did you not hear a cry ?

Cas. Here, here ; for heaven's sake, help me.

Iago. What's the matter ?

Gra. This is Othello's ancient, as I take it.

Lod. The same, indeed ; a very valiant fellow.

Iago. What are you here that cry so grievously ?

Cas. Iago ? O I am spoil'd, undone by villains ! Give me some help.

Iago. O me, lieutenant ! what villains have done this ?

Cas. I think, that one of them is hereabout, And cannot make away.

Iago. O treacherous villains !—

What are you there ? come in, and give some help. [To LODOVICO and GRATIANO.]

Rod. O help me here.

Cas. That's one of them.

Iago. O murderous slave ! O villain !

[IAGO stabs RODERIGO.]

Rod. O damn'd Iago ! O inhuman dog !—
O ! O ! O !

Iago. Kill men i'the dark ?—Where be these bloody thieves !

How silent is this town !—Ho ! murder ! murder ! What may you be ? are you of good, or evil ?

Lod. As you shall prove us, praise us.

Iago. Signior Lodovico ?

Lod. He, Sir.

Iago. I cry you mercy ; Here's Cassio hurt By villains.

Gra. Cassio ?

Iago. How is it, bother ?

Cas. My leg is cut in two.

Iago. Marry, heaven forbid !—

Light, gentlemen ; I'll bind it with my shirt.

Enter BIANCA.

Bian. What is the matter, ho ? who is't that cried ?

Iago. Who is't that cried ?

Bian. O my dear Cassio ! my sweet Cassio ! O Cassio ! Cassio ! Cassio !

Iago. O notable strumpet !—Cassio, may you suspect

Who they should be, that have thus mangled you ? Cas. No.

Gra. I am sorry to find you thus : I have been to seek you.

Iago. Lend me a garter : So.—O for a chair, To bear him easily hence !

Bian. Alas, he faints :—O Cassio ! Cassio Cassio !

Iago. Gentlemen all, I do suspect this trash To be a party in this injury.—

Patience awhile, good Cassio.—Come, come ; Lend me a light.—Know we this face, or no

Alas ! my friend, and my dear countryman, Roderigo ? no :—Yes, sure : O heaven, Roderigo.

Gra. What, of Venice ?

Iago. Even he, Sir ; did you know him ?

Gra. Know him ? ay.

Iago. Signior Gratiano ? I cry you gentle pardon ; [Here,

These bloody accidents must excuse my man- That so neglected you.

Gra. I am glad to see you.

Iago. How do you, Cassio ?—O a chair, a chair !

Gra. Roderigo !

Iago. He, he, 'tis he :—O that's well said ;— the chair :— [A Chair brought in.]

Some good man bear him carefully from hence ; I'll fetch the general's surgeon.—For you, mistress, [To BIANCA.]

Save you your labour. He that lies slain here, Cassio,

Was my dear friend : What malice was between you ?

Cas. None in the world ; nor do I know the man.

Iago. [To BIAN.] What, look you pale ?— O bear him out o'the air.

[CAS. and ROD. are borne off.]

Stay you, good gentlemen :—Look you pale, mistress ?

Do you perceive the greatness of her eye ?—

Nay, if you stare, we shall hear more anon :—

Behold her well ; I pray you, look upon her ;

Do you see, gentlemen ? nay, guiltiness will Though tongues were out of use. [Speak,

Enter EMILIA.

Emil. 'Las, what's the matter ; what's the matter, husband ?

Iago. Cassio hath here been set on in the dark,

By Roderigo, and fellows that are scap'd ; He's almost slain, and Roderigo dead.

Emil. Alas, good gentleman ! alas, good Cassio !

Iago. This is the fruit of whoring.—Pr'ythee, Emilia,

Go know of Cassio where he supp'd to- night :—

What, do you shake at that ?

Bian. He supp'd at my house, but I there- fore shake not.

Iago. O did he so ? I charge you, go with me.

Emil. Phe, fie upon thee, strumpet !

Bian. I am no strumpet ; but of life as honest, As you that thus abuse me.

Emil. As I ? foh ! fie upon thee !

Iago. Kind gentlemen, let's go see poor Cas- sio dress'd :—

Come, mistress, you must tell us another tale,— Emilia, run you to the citadel,

And tell my lord and lady what has happ'd,—

Will you go on, I pray ?—This is the night, [Aside.]

That either makes me, or fordoes* me quite. [Exeunt.]

* Out. † No passengers. ‡ Thick, cloudy.

* Undoes.

Scene II. OTHELLO, THE MOOR OF VENICE.

229

SCENE II.—A Bedchamber: DESDEMONA in Bed asleep.—A Light burning.

Enter OTHELLO.

Oth. It is the cause, it is the cause, my soul,—
Let me not name it to you, you chaste stars!—
It is the cause. Yet I'll not shed her blood;
Nor scar that whiter skin of her's than snow,
And smooth as monumental alabaster,
[Takes off his Sword.]
Yet she must die, else she'll betray more men.
Put out the light, and then put out the light: *
If I quench thee, thou flaming minister,
I can again thy former light restore,
Should I repent me:—but once put out thine,
Thou cunning'st pattern of excelling nature,
I know not where is that Promethean heat,
That can thy light relume. When I have pluck'd thy rose,
I cannot give it vital life again,
It needs must wither: I'll smell it on the tree.— [Kissing her.]
O balmy breath, that dost almost persuade Justice to break her sword!—One more, one
more.—
Be thus when thou art dead, and I will kill
thee,
And love thee after:—One more, and this the
last:
So sweet was ne'er so fatal. I must weep,
But they are cruel tears: This sorrow's heavenly;
It strikes, where it doth love.—She wakes—
Des. Who's there? Othello?
Oth. Ay, Desdemona.
Des. Will you come to bed, my lord?
Oth. Have you pray'd to-night, Desdemona?
Des. Ay, my lord.
Oth. If you bethink yourself of any crime,
Unreconcil'd as yet to heaven and grace,
Solicit for it straight.
Des. Alas, my lord, what may you mean by
that?
Oth. Well, do it, and be brief; I will walk
by:
I would not kill thy unprepared spirit:
No,—Heaven forbid!† I would not kill thy
soul.
Des. Talk you of killing?
Oth. Ay, I do.
Des. Then, heaven
Have mercy on me!
Oth. Amen, with all my heart!
Des. If you say so, I hope you will not kill
me.
Oth. Humph!
Des. And yet I fear you: for you are fatal
then,
When your eyes roll so: Why I should fear, I
know not,
Since guiltiness I know not; but yet, I feel
I fear.
Oth. Think on thy sins.
Des. They are loves I bear to you.
Oth. Ay, and for that thou diest.
Des. That death's unnatural, that kills for loving.—
Alas, why gnaw you so your nether lip?
Some bloody passion shakes your very frame:
These are portents; but yet I hope, I hope,
They do not point on me.
Oth. Peace and be still!
Des. I will so: What's the matter?
Oth. That handkerchief, which I so lov'd, and gave thee,
Thou gav'st to Cassio.
Des. No, by my life and soul;
Send for the man, and ask him.
Oth. Sweet soul, take heed, [bed.]
Take heed of perjury; thou'rt on thy death.
Des. Ay, but not yet to die.
Oth. Yes, presently:

* I. e. The light of life.

† Forbid.

Therefore confess thee freely of thy sin;
For to deny each article with oath, [tion,
Cannot remove, nor choke, the strong concep-
That I do grow withal. Thou art to die.

Des. Then, Lord have mercy on me!

Oth. I say, amen.

Des. And have you mercy too!—I never did
Offend you in my life; never lov'd Cassio,
But with such general warranty of heaven
As I might love: I never gave him token.

Oth. By heaven, I saw my handkerchief in his hand.

O perjur'd woman! thou dost stone my heart,
And mak'st me call, what I intend to do,
A murder which I thought a sacrifice: *
I saw the handkerchief.

Des. He found it then;
I never gave it him:—Send for him hither,
And let him confess a truth.

Oth. He hath confess'd.

Des. What, my lord?

Oth. That he hath—us'd thee

Des. How? unlawfully?

Oth. Ay.

Des. He'll not say so.

Oth. No, his mouth is stopp'd;
Honest Iago hath ta'en order for't. †

Des. My fear interprets then,—What, is he
dead?

Oth. Had all his hairs been lives, my great revenge
Had stomach for them all.

Des. Alas! he is betray'd, and I undone.

Oth. Out, strumpet! Weep'st thou for him to my face?

Des. O banish me, my lord, but kill me
not.

Oth. Down, strumpet!

Des. Kill me to-morrow, let me live to-night.

Oth. Nay, if you strive,—

Des. But half an hour.

Oth. Being done,

There is no pause.

Des. But while I say one prayer.

Oth. It is too late. ‡ [He smother's her.]

Emil. [Within.] My lord, my lord! what, ho! my lord! my lord!

Oth. What noise is this?—Not dead! not yet quite dead?

I, that am cruel, and yet merciful;
I would not have thee linger in thy pain.—

So, so. §

Emil. [Within.] What ho! my lord, my
lord!

Oth. Who's there?

Emil. [Within.] O good my lord, I would speak a word with you.

Oth. Yes;—'tis Emilia:—by and by.—She's
dead.

'Tis like she comes to speak of Cassio's death:
The noise was high.—Ha! no more moving?
Still as the grave. Shall she come in? Were't
good?

I think she stirs again:—No.—What's the
best?

If she come in, she'll sure speak to my wife:
My wife! my wife! what wife?—I have no
wife:

O insupportable! O heavy hour!
Methinks it should be now a huge eclipse
Of sun and moon; and that the affrighted globe
Should yawn at alteration.

* A sacrifice atoning for thy crime.

† Has taken measures.

‡ In the old copies, after this speech, there is an invocation from Desdemona, consisting only of the sacred name thrice repeated; omitted in consequence of the Stat. 3. James I. c. 21, imposing a penalty on the profane use of God's name in stage-plays, &c. It is a passage of supererogatory horror, being uttered whilst she is struggling with death.

§ It is supposed that some theatrical direction has been omitted, and that when Othello says, "So, so," he then stabs her. After the repetition of wounds, Desdemona might speak again with propriety, and yet very soon expire.

Emil. [Within.] I do beseech you I may speak with you,
O good my lord!

Oth. I had forgot thee: O come in, Emilia:—

Soft,—by and by:—Let me the curtains draw.—
Where art thou? What's the matter with thee now?
[Unlocks the door.]

Enter EMILIA.

Emil. O good my lord, yonder's foul murder done.

Oth. What? now?

Emil. But now, my lord.

Oth. It is the very error of the moon;
She comes more near the earth than she was
And makes men mad. [wont;

Emil. Cassio, my lord, has kill'd a young Venetian, Call'd—Roderigo.

Oth. Roderigo kill'd!
And Cassio kill'd!

Emil. No, Cassio is not kill'd.

Oth. Not Cassio kill'd? Then murder's out of tune,
And sweet revenge grows harsh.

Des. O falsely, falsely murder'd!

Emil. Alas! what cry is that?

Oth. That! what?

Emil. Out, and alas! that was my lady's voice:—

Help! help, ho! help!—O lady, speak again!
Sweet Deedemonia! O sweet mistress, speak!

Des. A guiltless death I die.

Emil. O who hath done this deed?

Des. Nobody; I myself; farewell:
Commend me to my kind lord; O farewell.

[Dies.]

Oth. Why, how should she be murder'd?

Emil. Alas, who knows?

Oth. You heard her say herself, it was not I,

Emil. She said so; I must needs report the truth.

Oth. She's like a liar, gone to burning hell;
'Twas I 'that kill'd her.

Emil. O the more angel she,
And you the blacker devil?

Oth. She turn'd to folly, and she was a whore.

Emil. Thou dost belie her, and thou art a devil.

Oth. She was false as water.

Emil. Thou art rash as fire to say
That she was false; O she was heavenly true!

Oth. Cassio did tup her; ask thy husband else.
O I were damn'd beneath all depth in hell,
But that I did proceed upon just grounds
To this extremity: Thy husband knew it all.

Emil. My husband?

Oth. Thy husband.

Emil. That she was false to wedlock?

Oth. Ay, with Cassio.

Nay, had she been true,
If heaven would make me such another world
Of one entire and perfect chrysolite,*
I'd not have sold her for it.

Emil. My husband?

Oth. Ay, 'twas he that told me first;
An honest man he is, and hates the slime
That sticks on filthy deeds.

Emil. My husband?

Oth. What needs this iteration,† woman? I say, thy husband.

Emil. O mistress, villany hath made mocks with love!—
My husband say, that she was false?

Oth. He, woman;
I say, thy husband: Dost understand the word?
My friend, thy husband, honest Iago.

Emil. If he say so, may his pernicious soul
Rot half a grain a day! he lies to the heart;
She was too fond of her most filthy bargain.

Oth. Ha!

Emil. Do thy worst:

This deed of thine is no more worthy heaven,
Than thou wast worthy her.

Oth. Peace, you were best.

Emil. Thou hast not half the power to do me harm,
As I have to be hurt. O gull! O dolt!
As ignorant as dirt! thou hast done a deed,—
I care not for thy sword; I'll make thee known,
Though I lost twenty lives:—Help! help, ho! help!
The Moor has kill'd my mistress; Murder! murder!

Enter MONTANO, GRATIANO, and IAGO.

Mon. What is the matter?—How now, general?

Emil. O are you come, Iago? you have done well,
That men must lay their murders on your neck.

Gra. What is the matter?

Emil. Disprove this villain, if thou be'st a man:

He says, thou told'st him that his wife was false:

I know thou did'st not, thou'rt not such a villain;
Speak, for my heart is full. [lain;

Iago. I told him what I thought; and told no more Than what he found himself was apt and true.

Emil. But did you ever tell him, she was false?

Iago. I did.

Emil. You told a lie; an odious, damned lie;
Upon my soul, a lie; a wicked lie:—

She false with Cassio!—Did you say, with Cassio?

Iago. With Cassio, mistress; Go to, charm your tongue.

Emil. I will not charm my tongue; I am bound to speak;

My mistress here lies murder'd in her bed.

All. O heavens forfend!*

Emil. And your reports have set the murder on Oth. Nay, stare not, masters; it is true, indeed.

Gra. 'Tis a strange truth.

Mon. O monstrous act!

Emil. Villany, villany, villany!—
I think upon't,—I think,—I smell't;—O villany!

I thought so then;—I'll kill myself for grief.—
O villany, villany!

Iago. What, are you mad? I charge you, get you home.

Emil. Good gentlemen, let me have leave to speak;

'Tis proper I obey him, but not now:—
Perchance, Iago, I will ne'er go home.

Oth. O! O! O! [Hanging over his wife.]

Emil. Nay, lay thee down, and roar;
For thou hast kill'd the sweetest innocent,
That e'er did lift up eye.

Oth. O she was foul! [Rising.]
I scarce did know you, uncle: there lies your niece,
Whose breath, indeed, these hands have newly stopp'd:

I know, this act shows horrible and grim.

Gra. Poor Deedemonia! I am glad thy father's dead;

Thy match was mortal to him, and pure grief
Shore his old thread in twain: did he live now
This sight would make him do a desperate turn,
Yea, curse his better angel from his side,
And fall to reprobation.

Oth. 'Tis pitiful: But yet Iago knows,
That she with Cassio hath the act of shame
A thousand times committed; Cassio confess'd it:

* A precious stone.

† Repetition.

* Forbid.

† Freely

Des. I have it not about me.

Oth. Not?

Des. No, indeed, my lord.

Oth. That is a fault:

That handkerchief

Did an Egyptian to my mother give;

She was a charmer,* and could almost read

The thoughts of people: she told her, while
she kept it, [ther

'Twould make her amiable, and subdue my fa-
Entirely to her love; but if she lost it,

Or made a gift of it, my father's eye [hunt

Should hold her loathly, and his spirits should
After new fancies: She, dying, gave it me;

And bid me, when my fate would have me
wife,

To give it her. I did so: and take heed of't,
Make it a darling like your precious eye;

To lose or give't away, were such perdition,
As nothing else could match.

Des. Is it possible?

Oth. 'Tis true, there's magic in the web of it:
A sibyl, that had number'd in the world

The sun to make two hundred compasses,

In her prophetic fury sew'd the work;

The worms were hallow'd, that did breed the
silk;

And it was died in mummy,† which the skilful
Conserv'd of maidens' hearts.

Des. Indeed! is't true?

Oth. Most veritable; therefore look to't well.

Des. Then 'would to heaven that I had never seen it.

Oth. Ha! wherefore?

Des. Why do you speak so startlingly and rash?

Oth. Is't lost? Is't gone? speak, is it out of the way?

Des. Heaven bless us!

Oth. Say you?

Des. It is not lost; But what an if it were?

Oth. Ha!

Des. I say, it is not lost.

Oth. Fetch't, let me see it.

Des. Why, so I can, Sir, but I will not now;
This is a trick, to put me from my suit;

I pray, let Cassio be receiv'd again.

Oth. Fetch me that handkerchief; my mind
misgives.

Des. Come, come;

You'll never meet a more sufficient man.

Oth. The handkerchief,—

Des. I pray, talk me of Cassio.

Oth. The handkerchief,—

Des. A man that, all his time,
Hath founded his good fortune on your love;

Shar'd dangers with you;—

Oth. The handkerchief,—

Des. In sooth,
You are to blame.

Oth. Away! [Exit OTHELLO.

Emil. Is not this man jealous?

Des. I ne'er saw this before.

Sure, there's some wonder in this handker-
chief:

I am most unhappy in the loss of it.

Emil. 'Tis not a year or two shows us a man:
They are all but stomachs, and we all but food;
They eat us hungerly, and when they are full,
They belch us. Look you! Cassio, and my husband.

Enter IAGO and CASSIO.

Iago. There is no other way; 'tis she must
do't;

And, lo, the happiness! go, and impòrtune her.

Des. How now, good Cassio? what's the news
with you?

Cas. Madam, my former suit: I do beseech
you,

That, by your virtuous means, I may again

Exist, and be a member of his love,
Whom I, with all the duty of my heart,
Entirely honour; I would not be delay'd:
If my offence be of such mortal kind,
That neither service past, nor present sorrows,
Nor purpos'd merit in futurity,
Can ransom me into his love again,
But to know so must be my benefit;
So shall I clothe me in a forc'd content,
And shut myself up in some other course,
To fortune's aims.

Des. Alas! thrice-gentle Cassio,
My advocacy is not now in tune;
My lord is not my lord; nor should I know him,
Were he in favour,* as in humour, alter'd.
So help me, every spirit sanctified,
As I have spoken for you all my best;
And stood within the blank† of his displeasure,
For my free speech! You must awhile be
patient:

What I can do, I will; and more I will,
Than for myself I dare: let that suffice you.

Iago. Is my lord angry?

Emil. He went hence but now,
And certainly in strange unquietness.

Iago. Can he be angry? I have seen the can-
non,

When it hath blown his ranks into the air,
And, like the devil, from his very arm
Puff'd his own brother;—And can he be angry?

Something of moment, then: I will go meet
him;

There's matter in't indeed, if he be angry.

Des. I prythee, do so.—Something, sure, of
state,— [Exit IAGO.

But now I find, I had suborn'd the witness,
And he's indited falsely.

Emil. Pray heaven, it be state matters, as
you think;

And no conception, nor no jealous toy,
Concerning you.

Des. Alas, the day! I never gave him cause.

Emil. But jealous souls will not be answered so;

They are not ever jealous for the cause,
But jealous for they are jealous: 'tis a monster,
Begot upon itself, born on itself.

Des. Heaven keep that monster from Othel-
lo's mind!

Emil. Lady, amen.

Des. I will go seek him.—Cassio walk here-
about:

If I do find him fit, I'll move your suit,
And seek to effect it to my uttermost.

Cas. I humbly thank your ladyship.

[Exeunt DESDEMONA and EMILIA.

Enter BIANCA.

Bian. Save you, friend Cassio!

Cas. What make you from home?
How is it with you, my most fair Bianca?

house.

Bian. And I was going to your lodging,

I have done the state some service, and they know it ;

No more of that :—I pray you, in your letters,
When you shall these unlucky deeds relate,
Speak of me as I am ; nothing extenuate,
Nor set down aught in malice : then must you
speak

Of one that lov'd not wisely, but too well ;
Of one, not easily jealous, but, being wrought,
Perplex'd in the extreme ; of one, whose hand,
Like the base Judean, threw a pearl away,
Richer than all his tribe ; of one, whose subdu'd
eyes,

Drop tears as fast as the Arabian trees

And say, besides,—that in Aleppo once,
Where a malignant and a turban'd Turk

I took by the throat the circumcised dog,

Lod. O bloody period !

Gra. All, that's spoke, is marr'd.

Oth. I kiss'd thee, ere I kill'd thee ;—No way but this,

[Falling upon DESDEMONA.]

Killing myself, to die upon a kiss.

Cas. This did I fear, but thought he had no weapon ;

For he was great of heart.

Look on the tragic loading of this bed ;

nor,

The time, the place, the torture,—O enforce it !
Myself will straight aboard ; and, to the state,
This heavy act with heavy heart relate.

* Sentence.

THE reader will frequently be at a loss to reconcile the order and passages of Othello, as given in the present edition, with their accustomed delivery on the stage ; but it is considered a trifling inconvenience, when counteracted by the pleasure of possessing (as nearly as the most authentic resources can afford them,) the actual language and construction of the drama, as given by Shakspeare. In the authorized copies of the prompters' books, and in many editions reprinted from them, the beauty of the original has been somewhat obscured by green-room critics, of conflicting taste, and obsequious managers, more penny-wise than poetical. The scene with the musicians, which introduces Act II.—that incongruous nuisance, the clown—and that equally troublesome excrescence, Bianca the prostitute—are however, with real judgment, omitted in the representation ; and many of the less important passages, such as occur in the scene before the senate—in the colloquies of Iago—in the dialogues between Montano and a gentleman of Cyprus, on the tempest of the preceding night, and between Desdemona and Emilia, on the temptations to adultery, are very considerably abridged. The order of the scenes is also perpetually varied ; each theatrical copartnership retaining its peculiar programme of Richard or Othello, in common with its wardrobe, thunder, side-scenes, and mould-candles.

ROMEO AND JULIET.

LITERARY AND HISTORICAL NOTICE.

MS. B. 1. 1. Mr. Arthur Brooke published a poem on "The Tragical Historie of Romens and Juliott;" the materials for which he chiefly obtained from a French translation (by Boistoun) of an Italian novel by Luigi da Porto, a Venetian gentleman, who died in 1529. A prose translation of Boistoun's work was also published 1576, by Faister, in his Palace of Pleasure, vol. II.; and upon the incidents of these two works, especially of the poem, Malone decides that Shakspeare constructed his entertaining tragedy. Dr. Johnson has declared this play to be "one of the most pleasing of Shakspeare's performances;" but it contains some breaches of irregularity—many superfluities, tumid conceits, and bombastic ideas, inexcusable even in a lover; with a continued recurrence of jingling periods and trifling quibbles, which obscure the sense, or disgust the reader. Several of the characters are, however, charmingly designed, and not less happily executed; the catastrophe is intensely affecting; the incidents varied and expressive; and as the passion which it delineates is one of universal acceptance in the catalogue of human wishes, the tender-like character of the lady, and the notable constancy of the gentleman, are forgotten in the dangers and the calamities of both. The numerous rhymes which occur, are probably seedlings from Arthur Brooke's stock plant. "The nurse (says Dr. Johnson) is one of the characters in which Shakspeare delighted: he has, with great subtilty of distinction, drawn her at once loquacious and secret, obsequious and insolent, trusty and dishonest."

PROLOGUE.

Two households, both alike in dignity,
In fair Verona, where we lay our scene,
From ancient grudge break to new mutiny,
Where civil blood makes civil hands unclean.
From forth the fatal loins of these two foes
A pair of star-cross'd lovers take their life;
Whose misadventur'd piteous overthrows
Do, with their death, bury their parents' strife.

The fearful passage of their death-mark'd love,
And the continuance of their parents' rage,
Which, but their children's end, nought could remove,
Is now the two hours' traffic of our stage;
The which if you with patient ears attend
What here shall miss, our toil shall strive to mend.

ACT I.

SCENE I.—A public Place.

Enter SAMPSON and GREGORY, armed with Swords and Bucklers.

Sam. Gregory, o'my word, we'll not carry coals.*

Gre. No, for then we should be colliers.

Sam. I mean, an we be in choler, we'll draw.

* A phrase formerly in use to signify the bearing in jars.

Gre. Ay, while you live, draw your neck out of the collar.

Sam. I strike quickly, being moved.

Gre. But thou art not quickly moved to strike.

Sam. A dog of the house of Montague moves me.

Gre. To move, is—to stir; and to be valiant, is—to stand to it: therefore, if thou art mov'd, thou run'st away.

Sam. A dog of that house shall move me to stand: I will take the wall of any man or maid of Montague's.

Gre. That shows thee a weak slave; for the weakest goes to the wall.

Sam. True; and therefore women, being the weaker vessels, are ever thrust to the wall:—therefore I will push Montague's men from the wall, and thrust his maids to the wall.

Gre. The quarrel is between our masters, and us their men.

Sam. 'Tis all one, I will show myself a tyrant: when I have fought with the men, I will be cruel with the maids; I will cut off their heads.

Gre. The heads of the maids?

Sam. Ay, the heads of the maids, or their maidenheads; take it in what sense thou wilt.

Gre. They must take it in sense, that feel it.

Sam. Me they shall feel, while I am able to stand: and 'tis known I am a pretty piece of flesh.

Gre. 'Tis well, thou art not fish: if thou hadst, thou hadst been poor John.* Draw thy tool; here comes two† of the house of the Montagues.

Enter ABRAM and BALTHAZAR.

Sam. My naked weapon is out; quarrel, I will back thee.

Gre. How? turn thy back, and run?

Sam. Fear me not.

Gre. No, marry: I fear thee!

Sam. Let us take the law of our sides; let them begin.

Gre. I will frown as I pass by: and let them take it as they list.

Sam. Nay, as they dare. I will bite my thumb at them; which is a disgrace to them, if they bear it.

Abr. Do you bite your thumb at us, Sir?

Sam. I do bite my thumb, Sir.

Abr. Do you bite your thumb at us, Sir?

Sam. Is the law on our side, if I say,—ay?

Gre. No.

Sam. No, Sir, I do not bite my thumb at you, Sir; but I bite my thumb, Sir.

Gre. Do you quarrel, Sir?

Abr. Quarrel, Sir? no, Sir.

Sam. If you do, Sir, I am for you; I serve as good a man as you.

Abr. No better.

Sam. Well, Sir

Enter BENVOLIO, at a Distance.

Gre. Say—better; here comes one of my master's kinsmen.

Sam. Yes, better, Sir.

Abr. You lie.

Sam. Draw, if you be men.—Gregory, remember thy smashing blow.

[They fight.]

Ben. Part, fools; put up your swords; you know not what you do.

[Beats down their Swords.]

Enter TYBALT.

Tyb. What, art thou drawn among these heartless hinds?

Turn thee, Benvolio, look upon thy death.

Ben. I do but keep the peace; put up thy sword,

Or manage it to part these men with me.

Tyb. What, drawn, and talk of peace? I hate the word,

As I hate hell, all Montagues, and thee: Have at thee, coward.

[They fight.]

Enter several Partizans of both Houses, who join the Fray: then enter CITIZENS with Clubs.

1 Cit. Clubs,† bills, and partizans! strike! beat them down!

* Poor John is hake, dried and salted.

† The disregard of concord is in character.

• Clubs! was equivalent to the modern cry of Watch!

Down with the Capulets! down with the Montagues!

Enter CAPULET, in his Gown; and LADY CAPULET.

Cap. What noise is this?—Give me my long sword, ho!

La. Cap. A crutch, a crutch!—Why call you for a sword?

Cap. My sword, I say!—Old Montague is come

And flourishes his blade in spite of me.

Enter MONTAGUE, and LADY MONTAGUE.

Mon. Thou villain, Capulet,—Hold me not, let me go.

La. Mon. Thou shalt not stir one foot to seek a foe.

Enter PRINCE, with Attendants.

Prin. Rebellious subjects, enemies to peace, Profaners of this neighbour-stained steel,—Will they not hear?—what ho! you men, you beasts,—

That quench the fire of your pernicious rage With purple fountains issuing from your veins, On pain of torture, from those bloody hands Throw your mistemper'd weapons to the ground,

And hear the sentence of your moved prince.—

Three civil brawls, bred of an airy word,

By thee, old Capulet and Montague,

Have thrice disturb'd the quiet of our streets;

And made Verona's ancient citizens

Cast by their grave besecming ornaments,

To wield old partizans, in hands as old,

Canker'd with peace to part your canker'd hate:

If ever you disturb our streets again,

Your lives shall pay the forfeit of the peace.

For this time, all the rest depart away:

You, Capulet, shall go along with me;

And, Montague, come you this afternoon,

To know our further pleasure in this case,

To old Free-town, our common judgment-place.

Once more, on pain of death, all men depart.

[Exit PRINCE and Attendants; CAPULET, LADY CAPULET, TYBALT, CITIZENS, and Servants.]

Mon. Who set this ancient quarrel new abroad?

Speak, nephew, were you by when it began?

Ben. Here were the servants of your adversary,

And your's, close fighting ere I did approach:

I drew to part them; in the instant came

The fiery Tybalt, with his sword prepar'd;

Which, as he breath'd defiance to my ears,

He swung about his head, and cut the winds,

Who, nothing hurt withal, hiss'd him in scorn:

While we were interchanging thrusts and blows

Came more and more and fought on part and part,

Till the prince came, who parted either part.

La. Mon. O where is Romeo?—saw you him to-day?

Right glad I am, he was not at his fray.

Ben. Madam, an hour before the worshipp'd sun,

Peer'd through the golden window of the east,

A troubled mind drove me to walk abroad;

Where,—underneath the grove of sycamore,

That westward rooteth from the city's side,—

So early walking did I see your son:

Towards him I made; but he was 'ware of me,

And stole into the covert of the wood:

I, measuring his affections by my own,

That most are busied when they are most alone,

Pursu'd my humour, not pursuing his,

And gladly shunn'd who gladly fled from me.

Mon. Many a morning bath he there been seen,

With tears augmenting the fresh morning's dew—Adding to clouds more clouds with his deep sighs:

• Angry.

But all so soon as the all-cheering sun
Should in the furthest east begin to draw
The shady curtains from Aurora's bed,
Away from light steals home my heavy son,
And private in his chamber pens himself;
Shuts up his windows, locks fair day-light out,
And makes himself an artificial night:
Black and portentous must this humour prove,
Unless good counsel may the cause remove.

Ben. My noble uncle, do you know the cause?

Mon. I neither know it, nor can learn of him.

Ben. Have you importun'd him by any means?

Mon. Both by myself, and many other friends:
But he, his own affections' counsellor,
Is to himself—I will not say, how true,—
But to himself so secret and so close,
So far from sounding and discovery,
As is the bud bit with an envious worm,
Ere he can spread his sweet leaves to the air,
Or dedicate his beauty to the sun.
Could we but learn from whence his sorrows
grow,
We would as willingly give cure, as know.

Enter ROMEO, at a distance.

Ben. See, where he comes: So please you,
step aside:

I'll know his grievance, or be much denied.

Mon. I would thou wert so happy by thy stay,
To hear true shrift.—Come, madam, let's away.

[Exeunt MONTAGUE and LADY.]

Ben. Good morrow, cousin.

Rom. Is the day so young?

Ben. But new struck nine.

Rom. Ah me! sad hours seem long.

Was that my father that went hence so fast?

Ben. It was:—What sadness lengthens Romeo's hours?

Rom. Not having that, which having, makes them short.

Ben. In love?

Rom. Out—

Ben. Of love?

Rom. Out of her favour, where I am in love.

Ben. Alas, that love, so gentle in his view,
Should be so tyrannous and rough in proof!

Rom. Alas, that love, whose view is muffled still,
Should, without eyes, see pathways to his will!
Where shall we dine?—O me!—What fray
was here?

Yet tell not, for I have heard it all. [love:—
Here's much to do with hate, but more with Why, then, O brawling love! O loving hate!
O any thing, of nothing first create!
O heavy lightness! serious vanity!
Mis-shapen chaos of well-seeming forms!
Feather of lead, bright smoke, cold fire, sick
health!

Still-waking sleep, that is not what it is!—

This love feel I, that feel no love in this.

Dost thou not laugh?

Ben. No, coz, I rather weep.

Rom. Good heart, at what?

Ben. At thy good heart's oppression.

Rom. Why, such is love's transgression.—
Griefs of mine own lie heavy in my breast;
Which thou wilt propagate, to have it press'd
With more of thine: this love, that thou hast shown,

Doth add more grief to too much of mine own.
Love is a smoke rais'd with the fume of sighs;
Being purg'd, a fire sparkling in a lover's eyes;
Being vex'd, a sea nourish'd with lovers' tears:
What is it else? a madness most discreet,
A choking gall, and a preserving sweet.

Farewell, my coz.

[Going.]

Ben. Soft, I will go along;

And if you leave me so, you do me wrong.

Rom. Tut, I have lost myself; I am not
here;

This is not Romeo, he's some other where.

Ben. Tell me in sadners,* who she is you
love.

* In seriousness.

Rom. What, shall I groan, and tell thee?

Ben. Groan? why, no;

But sadly tell me, who.

Rom. Did a sick man in sadness make this will:—

Ah word ill urg'd to one that is so ill!—

In sadness, cousin, I do love a woman.

Ben. I aim'd so near, when I suppos'd you
lov'd.

Rom. A right good marksman!—And she's fair I love.

Ben. A right fair mark, fair coz, is soonest hit.

Rom. Well, in that hit, you miss: she'll not be hit

With Cupid's arrow, she hath Dian's wit;
And, in strong proof of chastity well arm'd,
From love's weak childish bow she lives un-harm'd.*

She will not stay the siege of loving terms,
Nor bide th' encounter of assailing eyes,
Nor ope her lap to saint-seducing gold:

O she is rich in beauty; only poor,

That, when she dies, with beauty dies her store.

Ben. Then she hath sworn, that she will still live chaste?

Rom. She hath, and in that sparing makes huge waste;

For beauty, starv'd with her severity,
Cuts beauty off from all posterity.

She is too fair, too wise; wisely too fair,

To merit bliss by making me despair:

She hath forsworn to love; and, in that vow,

Do I live dead, that live to tell it now.

Ben. Be rul'd by me, forget to think of her.

Rom. O teach me how I should forget to think.

Ben. By giving liberty unto thine eyes:
Examine other beauties.

Rom. 'Tis the way

To call her's exquisite, in question more:

These happy masks, that kiss fair ladies' brows,
Being black, put us in mind they hide the
fair;

He, that is stricken blind, cannot forget

The precious treasure of his eyesight lost:

Show me a mistress that is passing fair,

What doth her beauty serve, but as a note

Where I may read, who pass'd that passing fair?

Farewell; thou canst not teach me to forget.

Ben. I'll pay that doctrine, or else die in debt. [Exeunt.]

SCENE II.—A Street.

Enter CAPULET, PARIS, and SERVANT.

Cap. And Montague is bound as well as I,
In penalty alike; and 'tis not hard, I think,
For men so old as we to keep the peace.

Par. Of honourable reckoning are you both;
And pity 'tis, you liv'd at odds so long.

But now, my lord, what say you to my suit?

Cap. But saying o'er what I have said before:

My child is yet a stranger in the world,
She hath not seen the change of fourteen years;
Let two more summers wither in their pride,
Ere we may think her ripe to be a bride.

Par. Younger than she are happy mothers
made.

Cap. And too soon marr'd are those so early made.

The earth hath swallow'd all my hopes but she;
She is the hopeful lady of my earth:

But woo her, gentle Paris, get her heart,

My will to her consent is but a part;

And she agree, within her scope of choice

Lies my consent, and fair according voice.

This night I hold an old accustom'd feast,
Whereto I have invited many a guest,

* A compliment to Queen Elizabeth, in whose reign the play was first represented.

Such as I love ; and you, among the store, [more.
Once more, most welcome, makes my number
At my poor house, look to behold this night
Earth-treading stars, that make dark heaven
light :

Such comfort, as do lusty young men feel
When well-apparell'd April on the heel
Of limping winter treads, even such delight
Among fresh female buds shall you this night
Inherit* at my house ; here all, all see,
And like her most, whose merit most shall be :
Such, amongst view of many, mine being one,
May stand in number, though in reckoning†
none.

Come, go with me ;—Go, Sirrah, trudge about
Through fair Verona ; find those persons out, Whose names are written there, [Gives a Paper.]
and to them say,
My house and welcome on their pleasure stay.

[Exeunt CAPULET and PARIS.]

Serv. Find them out, whose names are written here ? It is written—that the shoemaker should meddle with his yard, and the tailor with his last, the fisher with his pencil, and the painter with his nets ; but I am sent to find those persons, whose names are here writ, and can never find what names the writing person hath here writ. I must to the learned :—In good time.

Enter BENVOLIO and ROMEO.

Ben. Tut, man ! one fire burns out another's burning,

One pain is lessen'd by another's anguish ;
Turn giddy, and be bold by backward turning :
One desperate grief cures with another's languish :

Take thou some new infection to thy eye,
And the rank poison of th' old will die.

Rom. Your plaintain leaf is excellent for that.

Ben. For what, I pray thee ?

Rom. For your broken shin.

Ben. Why, Romeo, art thou mad ?

Rom. Not mad, but bound more than a mad-man is ;

Shut up in prison, kept without my food,
Whipp'd, and tormented, and—Good-e'en, good fellow.

Serv. God gi' good e'en.—I pray, Sir, can you read ?

Rom. Ay, mine own fortune in my misery.

Serv. Perhaps you have learn'd it without book :

But I pray, can you read any thing you see ?

Rom. Ay, if I know the letters, and the language.

Serv. Ye say honestly ; Rest you merry !

Rom. Stay, fellow ; I can read. [Reads.]

Signior Martino, and his wife and daughters ;
County Anselme, and his beautiful sisters ;
The lady widow of Vitrurio ; Signior Placentio, and his lovely nieces ; Mercutio, and his brother Valentine ;
Mine uncle Capulet, his wife, and daughters ;
My fair niece Rosaline ; Livia ; Signior Valentio, and his cousin Tybalt ; Lucio, and the lively Helena.

A fair assembly ; [Gives back the Note.] Whither should they come ?

Serv. Up.

Rom. Whither ?

Serv. To supper ; to our house.

Rom. Whose house ?

Serv. My master's.

Rom. Indeed, I should have asked you that before.

Serv. Now I'll tell you without asking : My master is the great rich Capulet ; and if you be

* To inherit, in the language of Shakspeare is to possess.

† Estimation.

not of the house of Montagues, I pray, come and crush a cup of wine. * Rest you merry !
[Exit.]

Ben. At this same ancient feast of Capulet's Sups the fair Rosaline, whom thou so lov'st ;
With all the admired beauties of Verona :
Go thither ; and, with unattainted eye,
Compare her face with some that I shall show,
And I will make thee think thy swan a crow.

Rom. When the devout religion of mine eye Maintains such falsehood, then turn tears to fires !

And these,—who often drown'd could never die,—
Transparent heretics, be burn'd for liars !
One fairer than my love ! th' all-seeing sun
Ne'er saw her match, since first the world began.

Ben. Tut ! you saw her fair, none else being by,

Herself pois'd† with herself in either eye :
But in those crystal scales let there be weigh'd
Your lady's love against some other maid
That I will show you, shining at this feast,
And she shall scant‡ show well, that now shows
best.

Rom. Ill go along, no such sight to be shown.
But to rejoice in splendour of mine own.

[Exeunt.]

SCENE III.—A Room in CAPULET'S House.

Enter Lady CAPULET and NURSE.

La. Cap. Nurse, where's my daughter ? call her forth to me.

Nurse. Now, by my maidenhead, at twelve year old,—

[bird !—
I bade her come.—What, lamb ! what, lady—
God forbid !—where's this girl ?—what, Juliet !

Enter JULIET.

Jul. How now, who calls ?

Nurse. Your mother.

Jul. Madam, I am here,
What is your will ?

La. Cap. This is the matter :—Nurse, give leave awhile,

We must talk in secret.—Nurse, come back again ;
I have remember'd me, thou shalt hear our counsel.

Thou know'st, my daughter's of a pretty age.

Nurse. 'Faith, I can tell her age unto an hour.

La. Cap. She's not fourteen.

Nurse. I'll lay fourteen of my teeth,
And yet, to my teen§ be it spoken, I have but four,—

She is not fourteen : How long is it now

To Lammas tide ?

La. Cap. A fortnight, and odd days.

Nurse. Even or odd, of all days in the year,
Come Lammas-eve at night, shall she be fourteen.

Susan and she,—God rest all Christian souls !—
Were of an age.—Well, Susan is with God ;

She was too good for me : But, as I said,
On Lammas-eve at night shall she be fourteen ;
That shall she, marry ; I remember it well.

'Tis since the earthquake now eleven years ;
And she was wean'd,—I never shall forget
it,—

Of all the days of the year, upon that day :

For I had then laid wormwood to my dug,

Sitting in the sun under the dove-house wall,
My lord and you were then at Mantua :—

Nay, I do bear a brain : ¶—but, as I said,

When it did taste the wormwood on the nipple

Of my dug, and felt it bitter, pretty fool !

To see it tetchy, and fall out with the dug.

Shake, quoth the dove-house : 'twas no need,
I trow,

To bid me trudge.

* To crack a bottle, is still a cant phrase.

† Weighed.

‡ Scarcely.

§ To my sorrow.

¶ I. e. I have a perfect recollection.

And since that time it is eleven years :
For then she could stand alone ; nay, by the root *

She could have run and waddled all about.
For even the day before, she broke her brow :
And then my husband—God be with his soul !
'A was a merry man ;—took up the child :
Yea, quoth he, dost thou fall upon thy face ?
Thou wilt fall backward, when thou hast more
wit ;

Wilt thou not, Jule ? and by my holy dam, †
The pretty wretch left crying, and said—Ay :
To see now, how a jest shall come about !
I warrant, an I should live a thousand years,
I never should forget it ; Wilt thou not, Jule ?
quoth he :

And, pretty fool, it stinted, ‡ and said—Ay.

La. Cap. Enough of this ; I pray thee, hold thy peace.

Nurse. Yes, madam ; Yet I cannot choose but laugh,

To think it should leave crying, and say—Ay :

And yet, I warrant, it had upon its brow
A bump as big as a young cockrel's stone ;
A parious knock ; and it cried blitherly.

Yea, quoth my husband, fall'st upon thy face ?
Thou wilt fall backward, when thou com'st
to age ;

Wilt thou not, Jule ? It stinted, and said—Ay.

Jul. And stint thou too, I pray thee, nurse, say I.

Nurse. Peace, I have done. God mark thee to his grace ! §

Thou wast the prettiest babe that e'er I nurs'd :
An I might live to see thee married once,
I have my wish.

La. Cap. Marry, that marry is the very
theme

I came to talk of :—Tell me, daughter Juliet,
How stands your disposition to be married ?

Jul. It is an honour that I dream not of.

Nurse. An honour ! were not I thine only nurse,
I'd say, thou hadst suck'd wisdom from thy teat.

La. Cap. Well, think of marriage now ;
younger than you,

Here in Verona, ladies of esteem,
Are made already mothers : by my count,
I was your mother much upon these years
That you are now a maid. Thus then, in brief ;—

The valiant Paris seeks you for his love.

Nurse. A man, young lady ! lady, such a
man,

As all the world—why, he's a man of wax. ¶

La. Cap. Verona's summer hath not such a flower,

Nurse. Nay, he's a flower ; in faith, a very flower.

La. Cap. What say you ? can you love the gentleman ?

This night you shall behold him at our feast :
Read o'er the volume of young Paris' face,
And find delight writ there with beauty's pen ;
Examine every married lineament,
And see how one another lends content ;
And what obscur'd in this fair volume lies,
Find written in the margin of his eyes. ¶
This precious book of love, this unbound lover,
To beautify him, only lacks a cover :
The fish lives in the sea ;  and 'tis much pride,

For fair without the fair within to hide :
That book in many's eyes doth share the glory,
That in gold clasps locks in the golden story ;
So shall you share all that he doth possess,
By having him, making yourself no less.

Nurse. No less ? nay, bigger ; women grow by
men.

* The crow. ‡ Holy dame, i. e. the blessed virgin.
§ It stopped crying. ¶ Favour.

¶ As well made as if he had been modelled in wax.
¶ The comments on ancient books were always printed in the margin.

 I. e. is not yet caught, whose skin was wanted to bait him.

La. Cap. Speak briefly, can you like of Paris'
love ?

Jul. I'll look to like, if looking liking move :
But no more deep will I endart mine eye,
Than your consent gives strength to make it fly.

Enter a SERVANT.

Serv. Madam, the guests are come, supper served up, you called, my young lady asked for, the nurse cursed in the pantry, and every thing in extremity. I must hence to wait ; I beseech you, follow straight.

La. Cap. We follow thee.—Juliet, the county stays.

Nurse. Go, girl, seek happy nights to happy days. [Exeunt.]

SCENE IV.—A Street.

Enter ROMEO, MERCUTIO, BENVOLIO, with five or six Maskers, Torch-bearers, and others.

Rom. What, shall this speech be spoke for our excuse ?

Or shall we on without apology ?

Ben. The date is out of such prolixity : *
We'll have no Cupid hood-wink'd with a scarf,
Bearing a Tartar's painted bow of lath,
Scaring the ladies like a crow-keeper ; †
Nor no without-book prologue, faintly spoke
After the prompter, for our entrance :

But, let them measure us by what they will,
We'll measure them a measure, ‡ and be gone.

Rom. Give me a torch, §—I am not for this ambling ;

Being but heavy, I will bear the light.

Mer. Nay, gentle Romeo, we must have you dance.

Rom. Not I, believe me : you have dancing shoes,

With nimble soles : I have a soul of lead
So stakes me to the ground, I cannot move.

Mer. You are a lover ; borrow Cupid's wings,
And soar with them above a common bound.

Rom. I am too sore enpierced with his shaft,
To soar with his light feathers ; and so bound,
I cannot bound a pitch above dull woe :
Under love's heavy burden do I sink.

Mer. And, to sink in it, should you burden
love ;

Too great oppression for a tender thing.

Rom. Is love a tender thing ? it is too rough,
Too rude, too boisterous ; and it pricks like thorn.

Mer. If love be rough with you, be rough with love ; [down.—]

Prick love for pricking, and you beat love
Give me a case to put my visage in :

[Putting on a Mask.]

A visor for a visor !—what care I,
What curious eye doth quote ¶ deformities ?

Here are the beetle-brows, shall blush for me.

Ben. Come, knock, and enter ; and no sooner
But every man betake him to his legs. [In.]

Rom. A torch for me : let wantons, light of
heart,

Tickle the senseless rushes ¶ with their heels ;
For I am proverb'd with a grandsire phrase,— I'll be a candle-holder, and look on,—

The game was ne'er so fair, and I am done. **

Mer. Tut ! dun's the mouse, the constable's own word :

If thou art dun, we'll draw thee from the mire
Of this (save reverence) love, wherein thou stick'st

Up to the ears.—Come, we burn day-light, ho.

* I. e. Long speeches are out of fashion.

† A scare-crow, a figure made up to frighten crows.

‡ A dance.

§ A torch-bearer was a constant appendage to every troop of masters. ¶ Observe.

¶ Even in the reign of Charles, the floors of the best houses were strewed with rushes.

 This is equivalent to phrases in common use —I am done for, it is over with me.

Rom. Nay, that's not so.

Mer. I mean, Sir, in delay
We waste our lights in vain, like lamps by day.
Take our good meaning; for our judgment sits
Five times in that, ere once in our five wits.

Rom. And we mean well, in going to this mask;
But 'tis no wit to go.

Mer. Why, may one ask?

Rom. I dreamt a dream to-night.

Mer. And so did I.

Rom. Well, what was yours?

Mer. That dreamers often lie.

Rom. In bed, asleep, while they do dream things true.

Mer. O then, I see, queen Mab hath been with
you.

She is the fairies' midwife; and she comes
In shape no bigger than an agate-stone
On the fore-finger of an alderman,
Drawn with a team of little atomies*
Athwart men's noses as they lie asleep:
Her waggon-spokes made of long spinners' legs;
The cover, of the wings of grasshoppers;
The traces, of the smallest spider's web;
The collars, of the moonshine's wat'ry beams:
Her whip, of cricket's bone; the lash of film:
Her waggoner, a small grey-coated gnat,
Not half so big as a round little worm
Prick'd from the lazy finger of a maid:
Her chariot is an empty hazel-nut,
Made by the joiner squirrel, or old grub,
Time out of mind the fairies' coach-makers.
And in this state she gallops night by night
Through lovers' brains, and then they dream
of love:

On courtiers' knees, that dream on court'sies
straight:

O'er lawyers' fingers, who straight dream on fees:

O'er ladies' lips, who straight on kisses dream,
Which oft the angry Mab with blisters plagues,
Because their breaths with sweetmeats tainted
are.

Sometime she gallops o'er a courtier's nose,
And then dreams he of smelling out a suit:†
And sometimes comes she with a tithe-pig's tail,

Tickling a parson's nose as 'a lies asleep,
Then dreams he of another benefice:
Sometime she driveth o'er a soldier's neck,
And then dreams he of cutting foreign throats,
Of breaches, ambuscadoes, Spanish blades,
Of healths five fathom deep; and then anon Drums in his ear; at which he starts, and wakes,

And, being thus frightened, swears a prayer or two,
And sleeps again. This is that very Mab,
That plats the manes of horses in the night,
And bakes the elf-locks‡ in foul sluggish hairs,
Which, once untangled, much misfortune bodes.
This is the hag, when maids lie on their backs,
That presses them, and learns them first to
bear,

Making them women of good carriage.
This, this is she—

Rom. Peace, peace, Mercutio, peace;
Thou talk'st of nothing.

Mer. True, I talk of dreams;
Which are the children of an idle brain,
Begot of nothing but vain fantasy;
Which is as thin of substance as the air;
And more inconstant than the wind, who woos
Even now the frozen bosom of the north,
And, being anger'd, puffs away from thence,
Turning his face to the dew-dropping south.

Ben. This wind you talk of blows us from ourselves;

Supper is done, and we shall come too late.

Rom. I fear, too early: for my mind mis-gives
Some consequence, yet hanging in the stars,

Shall bitterly begin his fearful date
With this night's revels; and expire the term
Of a despised life, clos'd in my breast,
By some vile forfeit of untimely death:
But He, that hath the steering of my course,
Direct my sail!—On, lusty gentlemen.

Ben. Strike, drum.

[Exeunt.]

SCENE V.—A Hall in CAPULET'S House.

Musicians waiting. Enter SERVANTS.

1 Serv. Where's Potpan, that he helps not to take away? he shift a trencher! he scrape a trencher!

2 Serv. When good manners shall lie all in one or two men's hands, and they unwashed too,
'tis a foul thing.

1 Serv. Away with the joint-stools, remove the court-cupboard,* look to the plate:—good thou, save me a piece of marchpane:† and, as thou lovest me, let the porter let in Susan Grindstone and Nell.—Antony! and Potpan!

2 Serv. Ay, boy; ready.

1 Serv. You are looked for, and called for,
asked for, and sought for, in the great chamber.

2 Serv. We cannot be here and there too.—
Cheerly, boys; be brisk a while, and the longer liver take all. [They retire behind.]

Enter CAPULET, &c. with the Guests and the Maskers.

Cap. Gentlemen, welcome! ladies, that have their toes

[you:—

Unplagu'd with corns, will have a bout with Ah ha! my mistresses! which of you all

Will now deny to dance? she that makes dainty,
she,

I'll swear, hath corns; Am I come near you now?
You are welcome, gentlemen! I have seen the
day,

That I have worn a visor, and could tell
A whispering tale in a fair lady's ear,
Such as would please;—'tis gone, 'tis gone, 'tis
gone:

[play.

You are welcome, gentlemen!—Come, musicians,
A hall! a hall!‡ give room, and foot it, girls.

[Music plays, and they dance.

More light, ye knaves; and turn the tables up,
And quench the fire, the room is grown too hot.—

Ah! Sirrah, this unlook'd-for sport comes well.

Nay, sit, nay, sit, good cousin Capulet;

For you and I are past our dancing days:

How long is't now, since last yourself and I

Were in a mask?

2 Cap. By'r lady, thirty years.

1 Cap. What, man! 'tis not so much; 'tis not so much:

'Tis since the nuptial of Lucentio,
Come pentecost as quickly as it will,
Some five and twenty years; and then we mask'd.

2 Cap. 'Tis more, 'tis more: his son is elder,
His son is thirty. [Sir:

1 Cap. Will you tell me that?

His son was but a ward two years ago.

Rom. What lady's that, which doth enrich the
hand

Of yonder knight?

Serv. I know not, Sir.

Rom. O she doth teach the torches to burn bright!

Her beauty hangs upon the cheek of night

Like a rich jewel in an Ethiop's§ ear:

Beauty too rich for use, for earth too dear!

So shows a snowy dove trooping with crows,

As yonder lady o'er her fellows shows.

The measure|| done, I'll watch her place of
stand,

And, touching her's, make happy my rude hand.

* A cupboard set in a corner like a banquet on which the plate was placed.

† Almond-cake.

‡ A clear hall, or make room.

§ An Ethiopian.

|| The dance.

* Atoms. † A place in court.
‡ L. c. Fairy-locks, locks of hair clogged and tangled in the night.

Did my heart love till now? forswear it, sight!
For I ne'er saw true beauty till this night.

Tyb. This, by his voice, should be a Montague:—

Fetch me my rapier, boy:—What! dares the Come hither, cover'd with an antic face,
To peer and scorn at our solemnity?
Now, by the stock and honour of my kin,
To strike him dead I hold it not a sin.

1 Cap. Why, how now kinsman? wherefore storm you so?

Tyb. Uncle, this is a Montague, our foe;
A villain, that is hither come in spite,
To scorn at our solemnity this night.

1 Cap. Young Romeo is't?

Tyb. 'Tis he, that villain Romeo.

1 Cap. Content thee, gentle coz, let him alone,
He bears him like a portly gentleman;
And, to say truth, Verona brags of him,
To be a virtuous and well-govern'd youth:
I would not, for the wealth of all this town,
Here in my house do him disparagement:
Therefore be patient, take no note of him,
It is my will; the which if thou respect,
Show a fair presence, and put off these frowns,
And ill-beseeming semblance for a feast.

Tyb. It fits, when such a villain is a guest;
I'll not endure him.

1 Cap. He shall be endur'd: [to;—
What, Goodman boy!—I say, he shall;—Go
Am I the master here, or you? go to. [soul—
You'll not endure him!—God shall mend my You'll make a mutiny among my guests!
You will set cock-a-hoop! you'll be the man!

Tyb. Why, uncle, 'tis a shame.

1 Cap. Go to, go to,
You are saucy, boy;—Is't so, indeed?— [what.
This trick may chance to scath * you;—I know
You must contrary me! marry, 'tis time—
Well said, my hearts:—You are a princ Cox; †
go:—

Be quiet, or—More light, more light, for shame!—
I'll make you quiet; What!—Cheerly, my hearts.

Tyb. Patience perforce with wilful choler meeting, [ing.
Makes my flesh tremble in their different greet-
I will withdraw: but this intrusion shall,
Now seeming sweet, convert to bitter gall.

Rom. If I profane with my unworthy hand

This holy shrine, the gentle fine is this,—
My lips, two blushing pilgrims, ready stand
To smooth that rough touch with a tender
kiss.

Jul. Good pilgrim, you do wrong your hand
too much,

Which mannerly devotion shows in this;
For saints have hands that pilgrims' hands do
touch,
And palm to palm is holy palmers' kiss.

Rom. Have not saints lips, and holy palmers
too?

Jul. Ay, pilgrim, lips that they must use in prayer.

Rom. O then, dear saint, let lips do what hands do;

They pray, grant thou, lest faith turn to de-pair.

Jul. Saints do not move, though grant for prayers' sake.

Rom. Then move not, while my prayer's effect I take.
Thus from my lips, by yours, my sin is purg'd.

Jul. Then have my lips the sin that they have took.

Rom. Sin from my lips? O trespass sweetly
Give me my sin again.

Jul. You kiss by the book.

Nurse. Madam, your mother craves a word
with you.

Rom. What is her mother?

Nurse. Marry, bachelor,

Her mother is the lady of the house,
And a good lady, and a wise, and virtuous:
I nurs'd her daughter, that you talk'd withal;
I tell you,—he, that can lay hold of her,
Shall have the chinks.

Rom. Is she a Capulet?

O dear account! my life is my foe's debt.

Ben. Away, begone; the sport is at the best.

Rom. Ay, so I fear; the more is my unrest.

1 Cap. Nay, gentlemen, prepare not to be gone;

We have a trifling foolish banquet * towards.—
Is it e'en so? Why, then I thank you all;
I thank you, honest gentlemen; good night:—
More torches here!—Come on, then let's to bed. [late;

Ah, Sirrah, [To 2 CAP.] by my fay, † it waxes
I'll to my rest.

[Exeunt all but JULIET and NURSE.]

Jul. Come hither, nurse: What is your gentleman?

Nurse. The son and heir of old Tiberio.

Jul. What's he, that now is going out of door?

Nurse. Marry, that, I think, be young Petruchio.

Jul. What's he, that follows there, that would not dance?

Nurse. I know not.

Jul. Go, ask his name:—If he be married,
My grave is like to be my wedding bed.

Nurse. His name is Romeo, and a Montague;
The only son of your great enemy.

Jul. My only love sprung from my only hate!

Too early seen unknown, and known too late!
Prodigious birth of love it is to me,
That I must love a loathed enemy.

Nurse. What's this? what's this?

Jul. A rhyme I learn'd even now
Of one I danc'd withal.

[One calls within, Juliet!]

Nurse. Anon, anon:—
Come, let's away; the strangers all are gone.

[Exeunt.]

Enter CHORUS.

Now old desire doth in his death-bed lie,
And young affection gapes to be his heir;
That fair, which love groan'd for, and would die
With tender Juliet match'd, is now not fair.
Now Romeo is belov'd, and loves again,
Allike bewitched by the charm of looks;
But to his foe suppos'd he must complain,
And she steals love's sweet bait from fearful hooks:
Being held a foe, he may not have access
To breathe such vows as lovers use to swear;
And she as much in love, her means much less
To meet her new-beloved any where:
But passion lends them power, time means to meet,
Temp'ring extremities with extreme sweet.

[Exit.]

ACT II.

SCENE I.—An open Place, adjoining CAPULET'S Garden.

Enter ROMEO.

Rom. Can I go forward, when my heart is
here?

Turn back, dull earth, † and find thy centre out.
[He climbs the Wall, and leaps down within it.]

* Do not an injury. † A conceit.
† In our poet's time, a salute in a public assembly might not be esteemed indecorous.

* A collation of fruit, wine, &c. † Faith.
‡ I. e. Himself.

Enter BENVOLIO, and MERCUTIO.

Ben. Romeo! my cousin Romeo!

Mer. He is wise;

And, on my life, hath stolen him home to bed.

Ben. He ran this way, and leap'd this orchard wall;

Call, good Mercutio.

Mer. Nay, I'll conjure too.—

Romeo! humours! madman! passion! lover!

Appear thou in the likeness of a sigh,

Speak but one rhyme, and I am satisfied;

Cry but—Ah me! couple but—love and dove;

Speak to my gossip Venus one fair word,

One nick-name for her purblind son and heir,

Young Adam Cupid, he that shot so trim,

When king Cophetua lov'd the beggarmaid.*—

He heareth not, stirreth not, be moveth not;

The ape† is dead, and I must conjure him.—

I conjure thee by Rosaline's bright eyes,

By her high forehead, and her scarlet lip,

By her fine foot, straight leg, and quivering thigh,

And the demesnes that there adjacent lie,

That in thy likeness thou appear to us.

Ben. An if he hear thee, thou wilt anger

him.

Mer. This cannot anger him: 'twould anger

To raise a spirit in his mistress' circle [him

Of some strange nature, letting it there stand

Till she had laid it, and conjur'd it down;

That were some spite: my invocation

Is fair and honest, and, in his mistress' name,

I conjure only but to raise up him.

Ben. Come, he hath hid himself among those trees,

To be consort'd with the humorous‡ night:

Blind is his love, and best befits the dark.

Mer. If love be blind, love cannot hit the mark.

Now will he sit under a medlar tree,

And wish his mistress were that kind of fruit,

As maids call medlars, when they laugh alone.—

Romeo, good night;—I'll to my truckle-bed;

This field-bed is too cold for me to sleep:

Come, shall we go?

Ben. Go, then; for 'tis in vain

To seek him here, that means not to be found.

[Exeunt.

SCENE II.—CAPULET'S Garden.

Enter ROMEO.

Rom. He jests at scars, that never felt a wound.—

[JULIET appears above at a Window.

But, soft! what light through yonder window breaks!

It is the east, and Juliet is the sun!—

Arise, fair sun, and kill the envious moon,

Who is already sick and pale with grief,

That thou her maid art far more fair than she:

Be not her maid,‡ since she is envious;

Her vestal livery is but sick and green,

And none but fools do wear it; cast it off.—

It is my lady; O it is my love:

O that she knew she were!—

She speaks, yet she says nothing; What of that?

Her eye discourses, I will answer it.—

I am too bold, 'tis not to me she speaks:

Two of the fairest stars in all the heaven,

Having some business, do entreat her eyes

To twinkle in their spheres till they return.

What if her eyes were there, they in her head

The brightness of her cheek would shame those stars,

As daylight doth a lamp; her eye in heaven

Would through the airy region stream so bright,

That birds would sing, and think it were not

night.

See, how she leans her cheek upon her hand!

O that I were a glove upon that hand,

That I might touch that cheek!

That I might touch that cheek!

Jul. Ah me!

Rom. She speaks:—

O speak again, bright angel! for thou art

As glorious to this night, being o'er my head,

As is a winged messenger of heaven

Unto the white-upturned wond'ring eyes

Of mortals, that fall back to gaze on him,

When he bestrides the lazy-pacing clouds,

And sails upon the bosom of the air.

Jul. O Romeo, Romeo! wherefore art thou

Romeo?

Deny thy father, and refuse thy name:

Or, if thou wilt not, be but sworn my love,

And I'll no longer be a Capulet.

Rom. Shall I hear more, or shall I speak at this? [Aside.

Jul. 'Tis but thy name, that is my enemy;—

Thou art thyself though, not a Montague.

What's Montague? it is nor hand, nor foot,

Nor arm, nor face, nor any other part

Belonging to a man. O be some other name!

What's in a name? that which we call a rose,

By any other name would smell as sweet:

So Romeo would, were he not Romeo call'd:

Retain that dear perfection which he owes,*

Without that title:—Romeo, doff† thy name;

And for that name, which is no part of thee,

Take all myself.

Rom. I take thee at thy word:

Call me but love, and I'll be new baptiz'd:

Henceforth I never will be Romeo.

Jul. What man art thou, that, thus bescreen'd in night,

So stumblest on my counsel?

Rom. By a name

I know not how to tell thee who I am;

My name, dear saint, is hateful to myself,

Because it is an enemy to thee;

Had I it written, I would tear the word.

Jul. My ears have not yet drunk a hundred

words

Of that tongue's utterance, yet I know the sound:

Art thou not Romeo, and a Montague?

Rom. Neither, fair saint, if either thee dislike.

Jul. How cam'st thou hither, tell me? and wherefore?

The orchard walls are high, and hard to climb;

And the place death, considering who thou art,

If any of my kinsmen find thee here.

Rom. With love's light wings did I o'erperch

these walls;

For stony limits cannot hold love out:

And what love can do, that dares love attempt;

Therefore thy kinsmen are no let‡ to me.

Jul. If they do see thee, they will murder

thee.

Rom. Alack! there lies more peril in thine eye, [sweet,

Than twenty of their swords: look thou but

And I am proof against their enmity.

Jul. I would not, for the world, they saw thee

here.

Rom. I have night's cloak to hide me from their sight;

And, but thou love me,‡ let them find me here:

My life were better ended by their hate,

Than death prorogued, wanting of thy love.

Jul. By whose direction found'st thou out this place?

Rom. By love, who first did prompt me to inquire;

He lent me counsel, and I lent him eyes.

I am no pilot: yet, wert thou as far

As that vast shore wash'd with the furthest sea,

I would adventure for such merchandise.

Jul. Thou know'st the mask of night is on my

face;

Else would a maiden blush bepaint my cheek,

* Alluding to the old ballad of the King and the Beggar.
† This phrase in Shakespeare's time was used as an expression of tenderness.

‡ A votary to the moon, to Diana.

* Ours.
‡ Hindrance.

† Lay aside.
‡ Unless thou love me.

For that which thou hast heard me speak to-night.

Fain would I dwell on form; fain, fain deny
What I have spoke; But farewell compliment!
Dost thou love me? I know thou wilt say
Ay;

And I will take thy word: yet, if thou swear'st,
Thou may'st prove false; at lovers' perjurica,
They say Jove laughs. O gentle Romeo,
If thou dost love, pronounce it faithfully:
Or if thou think'st I am too quickly won,
I'll frown and be perverse, and say thee nay,
So thou wilt woo: but, else, not for the world.
In truth, fair Montague, I am too fond;
And therefore thou may'st think my behaviour
light:

But trust me, gentleman, I'll prove more true
Than those that have more cunning to be strange.* [fess,

I should have been more strange, I must confess,
But that thou over-heard'st, ere I was ware,
My true love's passion: therefore pardon me;
And not impute this yielding to light love,
Which the dark night hath so discovered.

Rom. Lady, by yonder blessed moon I swear,
That tips with silver all these fruit-tree tops,—

Jul. O swear not by the moon, the inconstant moon,

That monthly changes in her circled orb,
Lest that thy love prove likewise variable.

Rom. What shall I swear by?

Jul. Do not swear at all;

Or, if thou wilt, swear by thy gracious self,
Which is the god of my idolatry,
And I'll believe thee.

Rom. If my heart's dear love—

Jul. Well, do not swear: although I joy in
thee,

I have no joy of this contract to-night:
It is too rash, too unadvised, too sudden;
Too like the lightning, which doth cease to be,
Ere one can say—It lightens. Sweet, good
night!

This bud of love, by summer's ripening breath,
May prove a beauteous flower when next we
meet.

Good night, good night! as sweet repose and
rest

Come to thy heart, as that within my breast!

Rom. O wilt thou leave me so unsatisfied?

Jul. What satisfaction canst thou have tonight?

Rom. The exchange of thy love's faithful vow for mine.

Jul. I gave thee mine before thou didst request it;

And yet I would it were to give again.

Rom. Wouldst thou withdraw it? for what purpose, love?

Jul. But to be frank,† and give it thee again.

And yet I wish but for the thing I have:

My bounty is as boundless as the sea,
My love as deep; the more I give to thee,
The more I have, for both are infinite.

[Nurse calls within.

I hear some noise within; Dear love, adieu!

Anon, good nurse!—Sweet Montague, be true.
Stay but a little, I will come again. [Exit.

Rom. O blessed blessed night! I am afeard,
Being in night, all this is but a dream,
Too flattering-sweet to be substantial.

Re-enter JULIET, above.

Jul. Three words, dear Romeo, and good night indeed.

If that thy bent‡ of love be honourable,
Thy purpose marriage, send me word to-morrow,
By one that I'll procure to come to thee,
Where and what time thou wilt perform the rite;
And all my fortunes at thy foot I'll lay,
And follow thee, my lord, throughout the
world:

* J. e. More artfully assume coldness.
† Free. ‡ Inclination.

Nurse. [Within.] Madam.

Jul. I come, anon:—But if thou mean'st not
I do beseech thee,— [well,

Nurse. [Within.] Madam.

Jul. By and by, I come:—

To cease thy suit, and leave me to my grief:
To-morrow will I send.

Rom. So thrive my soul,—

Jul. A thousand times good night! [Exit.

Rom. A thousand times the worse to want thy light.—

Love goes toward love, as schoolboys from their books;

But love from love, toward school with heavy looks. [Retiring slowly.

Re-enter JULIET, above.

Jul. Hist! Romeo, hist!—O for a falconer's
voice,

To lure this tassel-gentle* back again!

Bondage is hoarse, and may not speak aloud;

Else would I tear the cave where Echo lies,
And make her airy tongue more hoarse than
mine

With repetition of my Romeo's name.

Rom. It is my soul, that calls upon my name:
How silver-sweet sound lovers' tongues by night,
Like softest music to attending ears!

Jul. Romeo!

Rom. My sweet!

Jul. At what o'clock to-morrow
Shall I send to thee?

Rom. At the hour of nine.

Jul. I will not fail; 'tis twenty years till
then.

I have forgot why I did call thee back.

Rom. Let me stand here till thou remember
it.

Jul. I shall forget, to have thee still stand
there,

Rememb'ring how I love thy company.

Rom. And I'll still stay, to have thee still forget

Forgetting any other home but this.

Jul. 'Tis almost morning, I would have thee
gone:

And yet no further than a wanton's bird;
Who lets it hop a little from her hand,
Like a poor prisoner in his twisted gyves,†
And with a silk thread plucks it black again,
So loving-jealous of his liberty.

Rom. I would I were thy bird.

Jul. Sweet, so would I:

Yet I should kill thee with much cherishing.

Good night, good night! Parting is such sweet
sorrow,

That I shall say—good night, till it be morrow.

[Exit.

Rom. Sleep dwell upon thine eyes, peace in thy breast!—

'Would I were sleep and peace, so sweet to rest!
Hence will I to my ghostly father's cell:

His help to crave, and my dear hap‡ to tell.

[Exit.

SCENE III.—Friar LAURENCE's Cell.

Enter Friar LAURENCE, with a Basket.

Fri. The grey-ey'd morn smiles on the frowning night, [light;

Checking the eastern clouds with streaks of
And flecked‡ darkness like a drunkard reels
From forth day's path-way, made by Titan's‡ wheels:

Now ere the sun advance his burning eye,
The day to cheer, and night's dank dew to dry,
I must fill up this osier cage of ours,
With baleful weeds, and precious-juiced flowers.
The earth, that's nature's mother, is her tomb;
What is her burying grave, that is her womb:
And from her womb children of divers kind
We sucking on her natural bosom find;

* The male of the goshawk.
† Chance. ‡ Spotted, streaked.

‡ Fetters.
‡ The sun.
21

Many for many virtues excellent,
None but for some, and yet all different.
O mickle is the powerful grace* that lies
In herbs, plants, stones, and their true qualities;
For nought so vile that on the earth doth live,
But to the earth some special good doth give;
Nor aught so good, but strain'd from that fair
use,

Revolts from true birth, stumbling on abuse:
Virtue itself turns vice, being misapplied;
And vice sometime's by action dignified.
Within the infant rind of this small flower
Poison hath residence, and medicine power:
For this, being smelt, with that part cheers
each part;
Being tasted, slays all senses with the heart.
Two such opposed foes encamp them still
In man as well as herbs—grace and rude will;
And, where the worser is predominant,
Full soon the canker death eats up that plant.

Enter ROMEO.

Rom. Good morrow, father;

Fri. Benedicite!

What early tongue so sweet saluteth me?—
Young son, it argues a distemper'd head,
So soon to bid good morrow to thy bed;
Care keeps his watch in every old man's eye,
And where care lodges, sleep will never lie;
But where unbruised youth with unstuff'd brain
Doth couch his limbs, there golden sleep doth reign:

Therefore thy earliness doth me assure,
Thou art up-rous'd by some distemp'rature;
Or, if not so, then here I hit it right—
Our Romeo hath not been in bed to night.

Rom. That last is true, the sweeter rest was
mine.

Fri. God pardon sin! wast thou with Rosa-line?

Rom. With Rosaline, my ghostly father? no;
I have forgot that name, and that name's woe.

Fri. That's my good son: But where hast thou been then?

Rom. I'll tell thee, ere thou ask it me again.
I have been feasting with mine enemy;
Where, on a sudden, one hath wounded me,
That's by me wounded; both our remedies
Within thy help and holy physic lies:
I bear no hatred, blessed man; for, lo,
My intercession likewise steads my foe.

Fri. Be plain, good son, and homely in thy drift;

Riddling confession finds but riddling shrift.

Rom. Then plainly know, my heart's dear love is set

On the fair daughter of rich Capulet:
As mine on her's, so her's is set on mine;
And all combin'd save what thou must combine

By holy marriage: When, and where, and how,
We met, we woo'd, and made exchange of vow,
I'll tell thee as we pass; but this I pray,
That thou consent to marry us this day.

Fri. Holy Saint Francis! what a change is
here!

Is Rosaline, whom thou didst love so dear,
So soon forsaken? young men's love then lies
Not truly in their hearts, but in their eyes.
Jesu Maria! what a deal of brine
Hath wash'd thy sallow cheeks for Rosaline!
How much salt water thrown away in waste,
To season love, that of it doth not taste!
The sun not yet thy sighs from heaven clears,
Thy old groans ring yet in my ancient ears;
Lo, here upon thy cheek the stain doth sit
Of an old tear that is not wash'd off yet:
If e'er thou wast thyself, and these woes thine,
Thou and these woes were all for Rosaline;
And art thou chang'd? pronounce this sentence
then—

Women may fall, when there's no strength in

* Virtue.

Rom. Thou chid'st me oft for loving Rosaline.

Fri. For doting, not for loving, pupil mine.

Rom. And had'st me bury love.

Fri. Not in a grave,

To lay one in, another out to have.

Rom. I pray thee, chide not: she, whom I love now,

Doth grace for grace, and love for love allow;
The other did not so.

Fri. O she knew well,

Thy love did read by rote, and could not spell.

But come, young waverer, come go with me,

In one respect I'll thy assistant be;

For this alliance may so happy prove,

To turn your households' rancour to pure love.

Rom. O let us hence; I stand on sudden haste.*

Fri. Wisely and slow; they stumble that run fast. [Exeunt.]

SCENE IV.—A Street.

Enter BENVOLIO and MERCUTIO.

Mer. Where the devil should this Romeo be?
—Came he not home to-night?

Ben. Not to his father's; I spoke with his
man.

Mer. Ah! that same pale hard-hearted wench,
that Rosaline,

Torments him so, that he will sure run mad.

Ben. Tybalt, the kinsman of old Capulet,
Hath sent a letter to his father's house.

Mer. A challenge, on my life.

Ben. Romeo will answer it.

Mer. Any man, that can write, may answer a letter.

Ben. Nay, he will answer the letter's master, how he dares, being dared.

Mer. Alas, poor Romeo, he is already dead;
stabbed with a white wench's black eye; shot thorough the ear with a love-song; the very pin of his heart cleft with the blind bow-boy's butt-shaft:† And is he a man to encounter Tybalt?

Ben. Why, what is Tybalt?

Mer. More than prince of cats;‡ I can tell you. O he is the courageous captain of compliments. He fights as you sing prick-song,§ keeps time, distance, and proportion; rests me his minim rest, one, two, and the third in your bosom: the very butcher of a silk button, a duellist, a duellist; a gentleman of the very first house,—of the first and second cause: Ah, the immortal passado! the punto reverso! the hay!||

Ben. The what?

Mer. The pox of such antic, lisping, affecting, fantasticoes; these new tuners of accents!—By Jesu, a very good blade!—a very tall man!— a very good whore!—Why, is not this a lamentable thing, grandsire, that we should be thus afflicted with these strange flies, these fashionmongers, these pardonnez-moys, who stand so much on the new form, that they can sit at ease on the old bench? O their bons, their bons!¶

Enter ROMEO.

Ben. Here comes Romeo, here comes Romeo.

Mer. Without his roe, like a dried herring:
—O flesh, flesh, how art thou fishified!—Now is he for the numbers that Petrarch flow'd in:
Laura, to his lady, was but a kitchen-wench;
—marry, she had a better love to be-rhyme her:
Dido, a dowdy; Cleopatra, a gipsy; Helen and Hero, biddings and harlots; Thisbe, a grey eye or so, but not to the purpose.—Signior Romeo, bon jour! there's a French salutation to your French slop. You gave us the counterfeit fairly last night.

* I.e. It is of the utmost consequence for me to be hasty.
† Arrow. ‡ See the story of Reynard the Fox.

§ By notes pricked down. ¶ Terms of the fence-ing school.  In ridicule of Frenchified expressions.

¶ Trowsers or pantaloons, a French fashion in Shakespeare's time.

Rom. Good-morrow to you both. What counterfeit did I give you?

Mer. The slip, Sir, the slip; * Can you not conceive?

Rom. Pardon, good Mercutio, my business was great; and in such a case as mine, a man may strain courtesy.

Mer. That's as much as to say—such a case as your's constrains a man to bow in the hams.

Rom. Meaning—to court'sy.

Mer. Thou hast most kindly hit it.

Rom. A most courteous exposition.

Mer. Nay, I am the very pink of courtesy.

Rom. Pink for flower.

Mer. Right.

Rom. Why, then, is my pump † well-flowered.

Mer. Well said: Follow me this jest now, till thou hast worn out thy pump; that, when the single sole of it is worn, the jest may remain, after the wearing, solely singular.

Rom. O single-soled ‡ jest, solely singular for the singleness!

Mer. Come between us, good Benvolio; my wits fail.

Rom. Switch and spurs, switch and spurs; or I'll cry a match.

Mer. Nay, if thy wits run the wild-goose chase, § I have done; for thou hast more of the wild-goose in one of thy wits, than, I am sure, I have in my whole five: Was I with you there for the goose?

Rom. Thou wast never with me for any thing, when thou wast not there for the goose.

Mer. I will bite thee by the ear for that jest.

Rom. Nay, good goose, bite not.

Mer. Thy wit is a very bitter sweetening; ¶ it is a most sharp sauce.

Rom. And is it not well served in to a sweet goose?

Mer. O here's a wit of cheverel, ¶ that stretches from an inch narrow to an ell broad!

Rom. I stretch it out for that word—broad; which added to the goose, proves thee far and wide a broad goose.

Mer. Why, is not this better now than groaning for love? now art thou sociable, now art thou Romeo; now art thou what thou art, by art as well as by nature: for this drivelling love is like a great natural, that runs lolling up and down to hide his bauble in a hole.

Ben. Stop there, stop there.

Mer. Thou desirest me to stop in my tale against the hair.

Ben. Thou wouldst else have made thy tale large.

Mer. O thou art deceived, I would have made it short: for I was come to the whole depth of my tale; and meant, indeed, to occupy the argument no longer.

Rom. Here's goodly geer!

Enter NURSE and PETER.

Mer. A sail, a sail, a sail!

Ben. Two, two; a shirt and a smock.

Nurse. Peter!

Peter. Anon!

Nurse. My fan, Peter. **

Mer. Pr'ythee, do, good Peter, to hide her face; for her fan's the fairer of the two.

Nurse. God ye good-morrow, gentlemen.

Mer. God ye good den, †† fair gentlewoman.

Nurse. Is it good den?

Mer. 'Tis no less, I tell you; for the bawdy hand of the dial is now upon the prick †† of noon.

Nurse. Out upon you! what a man are you?

Rom. One, gentlewoman, that God hath made himself to mar.

Nurse. By my troth, it is well said;—For himself to mar, quoth'a?—Gentlemen, can any of you tell me where I may find the young Romeo?

* A pun on counterfeit money called slips.

† Shoe. ‡ Slight, thin.

§ A horse race in any direction the leader chooses to take.

¶ An apple.

¶ Soft stretching leather.

 This was formerly the practice, though ridiculous to modern ideas.

†† Good even.

‡‡ Point.

Rom. I can tell you; but young Romeo will be older when you have found him, than he was when you sought him: I am the youngest of that name, for 'fault of a worse.

Nurse. You say well.

Mer. Yea, is the worst well? very well took, i'faith; wisely, wisely.

Nurse. If you be he, Sir, I desire some confidence with you.

Ben. She will indite him to some supper.

Mer. A bawd, a bawd, a bawd! So ho!

Rom. What hast thou found?

Mer. No hare, Sir; unless a hare, Sir, in a leuten pie, that is something stale and hoar ere it be spent.

*An old hare hoar, **

And an old hare hoar,

Is very good meat in lent:

But a hare that is hoar,

Is too much for a score,

When it hoars ere it be spent.—

Romeo, will you come to your father's? we'll to dinner thither.

Rom. I will follow you.

Mer. Farewell, ancient lady; farewell, lady, lady, † lady.

[Exeunt MERCUTIO and BENVOLIO.]

Nurse. Marry farewell!—I pray you, Sir, what saucy merchant ‡ was this, that was so full of his ropery? §

Rom. A gentleman, nurse, that loves to hear himself talk: and will speak more in a minute, than he will stand to in a month.

Nurse. An 'a speak any thing against me, I'll take him down an 'a were lustier than he is, and twenty such Jacks; and if I cannot, I'll find those that shall. Scurvy knave! I am none of his flirt-gills; I am none of his skainsmates: ¶ —And thou must stand by too, and suffer every knave to use me at his pleasure?

Pet. I saw no man use you at his pleasure; if I had, my weapon should quickly have been out, I warrant you: I dare draw as soon as another man, if I see occasion in a good quarrel, and the law on my side.

Nurse. Now, afore God, I am so vexed, that every part about me quivers. Scurvy knave!—Pray you, Sir, a word; and, as I told you, my young lady bade me inquire you out; what she bade me say, I will keep to myself: but first let me tell ye, if ye should lead her into a fool's paradise, as they say, it were a very gross kind of behaviour, as they say: for the gentlewoman, is young; and, therefore, if you should deal double with her, truly, it were an ill thing to be offered to any gentlewoman, and very weak dealing.

Rom. Nurse, commend me to thy lady and mistress. I protest unto thee,— Nurse. Good heart! and i'faith, I will tell her as much: Lord, lord, she will be a joyful woman.

Rom. What wilt thou tell her, nurse? thou dost not mark me.

Nurse. I will tell her, Sir,—that you do protest; which, as I take it, is a gentlemanlike offer.

Rom. Bid her devise some means to come This afternoon; [to shrift ¶

And there she shall, at friar Laurence's cell, Be shriv'd and married. Here is for thy pains.

Nurse. No, truly, Sir; not a penny.

Rom. Go to; I say you shall.

Nurse. This afternoon, Sir? well, she shall be there.

Rom. And stay, good nurse, behind the abbey-wall:

Within this hour my man shall be with thee; And bring thee cords made like a tackled stair; Which to the high top-gallant  of my joy Must be my convoy in the secret night.

* Hoary, mouldy.

† The burden of an old song.

‡ A term in contradistinction to gentleman.

§ Roguery.

¶ Not one of those that wore a skain

or short sword

¶ Confession.

 The highest extremity of a ship's mast.

Farewell!—Be trusty, and I'll quit * thy pains.
Farewell!—Commend me to thy mistress.

Nurse. Now God in heaven bless thee!—Hark you, Sir.

Rom. What say'st thou, my dear nurse?

Nurse. Is your man secret? Did you ne'er hear say—

Two may keep counsel, putting one away?

Rom. I warrant thee; my man's as true as steel.

Nurse. Well, Sir; my mistress is the sweetest lady—Lord, lord!—when 'twas a little prating thing,—O,—there's a nobleman in town, one Paris, that would fain lay knife aboard; but she, good soul, had as lieve see a toad, a very toad, as see him. I anger her sometimes, and tell her that Paris is the properer man; but I'll warrant you, when I say so, she looks as pale as any clout in the varshal world. Doth not rosemary and Romeo begin both with a letter?

Rom. Ay, nurse; What of that? both with an R.

Nurse. Ah, mocker! that's the dog's name. R is for the dog. No; I know it begins with some other letter: and she hath the prettiest sententious of it, of you and rosemary, that it would do you good to hear it.

Rom. Commend me to thy lady. [Exit.]

Nurse. Ay, a thousand times.—Peter!

Pet. Anon.

Nurse. Peter, take my fan, and go before.

[Exeunt.]

SCENE V.—CAPULET'S Garden.

Enter JULIET.

Jul. The clock struck nine, when I did send the nurse;

In half an hour she promis'd to return.

Perchance, she cannot meet him: that's not so.—

O she is lame! love's heralds should be thoughts,
Which ten times faster glide than the sun's beams,

Driving back shadows over low'ring hills:
Therefore do nimble-pinion'd doves draw love,
And therefore hath the wind swift Cupid wings.
Now is the sun upon the highmost hill
Of this day's journey; and from nine till twelve

Is three long hours,—yet she is not come.
Had she affections, and warm youthful blood,
She'd be as swift in motion as a ball;
My words would bandy† her to my sweet love,
And his to me:

But old folks, many feign as they were dead;
Unwieldy, slow, heavy, and pale as lead.

Enter NURSE and PETER.

O God, she comes!—O honey nurse, what news?

Hast thou met with him? Send thy man away.

Nurse. Peter, stay at the gate.

[Exit PETER.]

Jul. Now, good sweet nurse,—O lord! why look'st thou sad?

Though news be sad, yet tell them merrily;
If good, thou sham'st the music of sweet news,
By playing it to me with so sour a face.

Nurse. I am weary, give me leave a while;—
Fie, how my bones ache! What a jaunt have I had!

Jul. I would thou hadst my bones, and I thy news:

Nay, come, I pray thee, speak;—good, good nurse, speak.

Nurse. Jesu! What haste! can you not stay awhile?

Do you not see, that I am out of breath?

Jul. How art thou out of breath, when thou hast breath

To say to me that thou art out of breath?
The excuse that thou dost make in this delay,
Is longer than the tale thou dost excuse.
Is thy news good or bad? answer to that;
Say either, and I'll stay the circumstance
Let me be satisfied, I'at good or bad?

Nurse. Well, you have made a simple choice;
you know not how to choose a man: Romeo!
no, not he; though his face be better than any man's, yet his leg excels all men's; and for a hand, and a foot, and a body,—though they be not to be talked on, yet they are past compare: He is not the flower of courtesy,—but, I'll warrant him, as gentle as a lamb.—Go thy ways, wench; serve God.—What, have you dined at home?

Jul. No, no: But all this did I know before;
What says he to our marriage? what of that?

Nurse. Lord, how my head aches! what a head have I!

It beats as it would fall in twenty pieces.

My back o't'other side,—O my back, my back!—
Besrew* your heart, for sending me about,
To catch my death with jaunting up and down!

Jul. I'faith, I am sorry that thou art not well:

Sweet, sweet, sweet nurse, tell me, what says my love?

Nurse. Your love says like an honest gentleman,

And a courteous and a kind, and a handsome,
And, I warrant, a virtuous:—Where is your mother?

Jul. Where is my mother?—why, she is within;

Where should she be? How oddly thou reply'st!

*Your love says like an honest gentleman,—
Where is your mother?*

Nurse. O God's lady dear!

Are you so hot? Marry, come up, I trow;

Is this the poultice for my aching bones?

Henceforward do your messages yourself.

Jul. Here's such a coil,†—come, what says Romeo?

Nurse. Have you got leave to go to shift to-day?

Jul. I have.

Nurse. Then hie you hence to friar Lawrence's cell.

There stays a husband to make you a wife:

Now comes the wanton blood up in your cheeks,

They'll be in scarlet straight at any news.

Hie you to church: I must another way,

To fetch a ladder, by the which your love

Must climb a bird's nest soon when it is dark:

I am the drudge, and toil in your delight;

But you shall bear the burden soon at night.

Go, I'll to dinner; hie you to the cell.

Jul. Hie to high fortune! honest nurse, fare-
well.

[Exeunt.]

SCENE VI.—Friar LAURENCE'S Cell.

Enter Friar LAURENCE and ROMEO.

Fri. So smile the heavens upon this holy act,
That after-hours with sorrow chide us not!

Rom. Amen, amen! but come what sorrow can,

It cannot countervail the exchange of joy
That one short minute gives me in her sight:
Do thou but close our hands with holy words,
Then love-devouring death do what he dare,
It is enough I may but call her mine.

Fri. These violent delights have violent ends,
And in their triumph die; like fire and powder,
Which, as they kiss, consume: the sweetest honey

Is loathsome in his own deliciousness,

And in the taste confounds the appetite:

Therefore, love moderately; long love doth so;
Too swift arrives as tardy as too slow.

* Requite.

† Drives her, as a ball struck with a bandy or battledore.

* Ill betide.

† A pet, or disturbance.

Enter JULIET.

Here comes the lady :—O so light a foot
Will ne'er wear out the everlasting flint : *
A lover may bestride the gossamers †
That idle in the wanton summer air,
And yet not fall ; so light is vanity.

Jul. Good even to my ghostly confessor.

Fri. Romeo shall thank thee, daughter, for us both.

Jul. As much to him, else are his thanks too much.

Rom. Ah ! Juliet, if the measure of thy joy
Be heap'd like mine, and that thy skill be more

To blazon ‡ it, then sweeten with thy breath
This neighbour air, and let rich music's tongue
Unfold the imagined happiness that both
Receive in either by this dear encounter.

Jul. Conceit, † more rich in matter than in words,
Brag of his substance, not of ornament :
They are but beggars that can count their worth ;

But my true love is grown to such excess,
I cannot sum up half my sum of wealth.

Fri. Come, come with me, and we will make short work ;

For, by your leaves, you shall not stay alone,
Till holy church incorporate two in one.

[Exeunt.]

ACT III.

SCENE I.—A Public Place.

Enter MERCUTIO, BENVOLIO, Page, and Servants.

Ben. I pray you, good Mercutio, let's retire ;
The day is hot, the Capulets abroad,
And, if we meet, we shall not 'scape a brawl ;
For now, these hot days, is the mad blood stirring.

Mer. Thou art like one of those fellows, that, when he enters the confines of a tavern,
claps me his sword upon the table, and says,
God send me no need of thee ! and, by the operation of the second cup, draws it on the drawer, when, indeed, there is no need.

Ben. Am I like such a fellow ?

Mer. Come, come, thou art as hot a Jack in thy mood as any in Italy ; and as soon moved to be moody, and as soon moody to be moved.

Ben. And what to ?

Mer. Nay, and there were too such, we should have none shortly, for one would kill the other. Thou ! why thou wilt quarrel with a man that hath a hair more or a hair less in his beard than thou hast. Thou wilt quarrel with a man for cracking nuts, having no other reason but because thou hast hazel eyes ; What eye, but such an eye, would spy out such a quarrel ? Thy head is as full of quarrels, as an egg is full of meat ; and yet thy head hath been beaten as addled as an egg, for quarrelling. Thou hast quarrelled with a man for coughing in the street, because he hath wakened thy dog that hath lain asleep in the sun. Didst thou not fall out with a tailor for wearing his new doublet before Easter ? with another, for tying his new shoes with old ribband ? and yet thou wilt tutor me from quarrelling !

Ben. An I were so apt to quarrel as thou art, any man should buy the fee-simple of my life for an hour and a quarter.

Mer. The fee-simple ? O simple !

Enter TYBALT, and others.

Ben. By my head here come the Capulets

Mer. By my heel, I care not.

* How everlasting flint could be worn out, is doubtful.

† The long white filament which flies in the air.

‡ Paint, display.

§ Imagination.

Tyb. Follow me close, for I will speak to them.—Gentlemen, good den : a word with one of you.

Mer. And but one word with one of us ! Couple it with something ; make it a word and a blow.

Tyb. You will find me apt enough to that, Sir, if you will give me occasion.

Mer. Could you not take some occasion without giving ?

Tyb. Mercutio, thou consortest with Romeo,—

Mer. Consort ? what, dost thou make us minstrels ? an thou make minstrels of us, look to hear nothing but discords : here's my fiddlestick ; here's that shall make you dance. 'Zounds, consort !

Ben. We talk here in the public haunt of men :

Either withdraw into some private place,

Or reason coldly of your grievances,

Or else depart ; here all eyes gaze on us.

Mer. Men's eyes were made to look, and let them gaze ;

I will not budge for no man's pleasure, I.

Enter ROMEO.

Tyb. Well, peace be with you, Sir ! here comes my man.

Mer. But I'll be hanged, Sir, if he wear your livery :

Marry, go before to field, he'll be your follower ; Your worship, in that sense, may call him—man.

Tyb. Romeo, the hate I bear thee can afford

No better term than this—Thou art a villain.

Rom. Tybalt, the reason that I have to love
Doth much excuse the appertaining rage [thee
To such a greeting :—Villain am I none ; [not.
Therefore farewell ; I see, thou know'st me

Tyb. Boy, this shall not excuse the injuries
That thou hast done me ; therefore turn, and draw.

Rom. I do protest I never injur'd thee ;
But love thee better than thou canst devise,
Till thou shalt know the reason of my love :
And so, good Capulet,—which name I tender
As dearly as mine own,—be satisfied.

Mer. O calm, dishonourable, vile submission !

A la stoccata * carries it away. [Draws.

Tybalt, you rat-catcher, will you walk ?

Tyb. What wouldst thou have with me ?

Mer. Good king of cats, nothing but one of your nine lives ; that I mean to make bold withal, and, as you shall use me hereafter, dry-beat the rest of the eight. Will you pluck your sword out of his pilcher † by the ears ? make haste, lest mine be about your ears ere it be out.

Tyb. I am for you. [Drawing.

Rom. Gentle Mercutio, put thy rapier up.

Tyb. Come, Sir, your passado. [They fight.

Rom. Draw, Benvolio ; [shame

Beat down their weapons :—Gentlemen, for Forbear this outrage ;—Tybalt—Mercutio—
The prince expressly hath forbid this bandying
In Verona streets :—hold, Tybalt ;—good Mercutio.

[Exeunt TYBALT and his Partizans.]

Mer. I am hurt :—

A plague o'both the houses !—I am sped :—
Is he gone, and hath nothing ?

Ben. What, art thou hurt ?

Mer. Ay, ay, a scratch, a scratch ; marry, 'tis enough.— [geon.

Where is my page ?—go, villain, fetch a sur-
[Exit Page.

Rom. Courage, man : the hurt cannot be much.

Mer. No, 'tis not so deep as a well, nor so

* The Italian term for a thrust or stab with a rapier.

† Case or scabbard.

wide as a church door; but 'tis enough, 'twill serve: ask for me to-morrow, and you shall find me a grave man. I am peppered, I warrant, for this world:—A plague o'both your houses!—Zounds, a dog, a rat, a mouse, cat, to scratch a man to death! a braggart, a rogue, a villain, that fights by the book of arithmetic!—Why the devil came you between us? I was hurt under your arm.

Rom. I thought all for the best.

Mer. Help me into some house, Benvolio, Or I shall faint.—A plague o'both your houses! They have made worm's meat of me: I have it, and soundly too:—Your houses!

[Exeunt MERCUTIO and BENVOLIO.]

Rom. This gentleman, the prince's near ally, My very friend, hath got his mortal hurt In my behalf; my reputation stain'd With Tybalt's slander, Tybalt, that an hour Hath been my kinsman: O sweet Juliet, Thy beauty hath made me effeminate, And in my temper soften'd valour's steel.

Re-enter BENVOLIO.

Ben. O Romeo, Romeo, brave Mercutio's dead; That gallant spirit hath aspir'd the clouds, Which too untimely here did scorn the earth.

Rom. This day's black fate on more days doth depend; This but begins the woe, others must end.

Re-enter TYBALT.

Ben. Here comes the furious Tybalt back again.

Rom. Alive! in triumph! and Mercutio slain! Away to heaven, respective^{*} lenity, And fire-ey'd fury be my conduct† now!—Now, Tybalt, take the villain back again, That late thou gav'st me; for Mercutio's soul is but a little way above our heads, Staying for thine to keep him company; Either thou, or I, or both, must go with him.

Tyb. Thou, wretched boy, that didst consort‡ him here, Shalt with him hence.

Rom. This shall determine that.

[They fight; TYBALT falls.]

Ben. Romeo, away, be gone! The citizens are up, and Tybalt slain: [death, Stand not amaz'd:—the prince will doom thee If thou art taken:—hence!—be gone!—away!]

Rom. O! I am fortune's fool!

Ben. Why dost thou stay? [Exit ROMEO.]

Enter CITIZENS, &c.

1 Cit. Which way ran he, that kill'd Mercutio?

Tybalt, that murderer, which way ran he?

Ben. There lies that Tybalt.

1 Cit. Up, Sir, go with me; I charge thee in the prince's name, obey.

Enter PRINCE, attended; MONTAGUE, CAPULET, their Wives and others,

Prin. Where are the vile beginners of this fray?

Ben. O noble prince, I can discover all The unlucky manage of this fatal brawl: There lies the man slain by young Romeo, That slew thy kinsman, brave Mercutio.

La. Cap. Tybalt, my cousin!—O my brother's child! Unhappy sight! ah me, the blood is spill'd Of my dear kinsman!—Prince, as thou art true,‡ For blood of ours shed blood of Montague.—O cousin, cousin!

Prin. Benvolio, who began this bloody fray?

Ben. Tybalt, here slain, whom Romeo's hand did slay;

Romeo that spoke him fair, bade him bethink How nice^{*} the quarrel was, and urg'd withal Your high displeasure:—All this—uttered With gentle breath, calm look, knees humbly bow'd,—

Could not take truce with the unruly spleen Of Tybalt deaf to peace, but that he tilts With piercing steel at bold Mercutio's breast; Who, all as hot, turns deadly point to point, And, with a martial scorn, with one hand beats Cold death aside, and with the other sends It back to Tybalt, whose dexterity Retorts it: Romeo he cries aloud, Hold, friends! friends, part! and, swifter than his tongue,

His agile arm beats down their fatal points, And 'twixt them rushes; underneath whose arm

An envious thrust from Tybalt hit the life Of stout Mercutio, and then Tybalt fled: But by and by comes back to Romeo, Who had but newly entertain'd revenge, And to't they go like lightning; for, ere I Could draw to part them, was stout Tybalt slain;

And, as he fell, did Romeo turn and fly: This is the truth, or let Benvolio die.

La. Cap. He is a kinsman to the Montague, Affection makes him false, he speaks not true: Some twenty of them fought in this black strife, And all those twenty could but kill one life: I beg for justice, which thou, prince, must give;

Romeo slew Tybalt, Romeo must not live.

Prin. Romeo slew him, he slew Mercutio; Who now the price of his dear blood doth owe?

Mon. Not Romeo, prince, he was Mercutio's friend; [end, His fault concludes but what the law should The life of Tybalt.

Prin. And, for that offence, Immediately we do exile him hence: I have an interest in your hates' proceeding, My blood for your rude brawls doth lie a bleeding;

But I'll amerce you with so strong a fine, That you shall all repent the loss of mine: I will be deaf to pleading and excuses: Nor tears, nor prayers, shall purchase out abuses;

Therefore use none: let Romeo hence in haste, Else, when he's found, that hour is his last. Bear hence this body and attend our will: Mercy but murders, pardoning those that kill.

[Exeunt.]

SCENE II.—A Room in CAPULET'S House.

Enter JULIET.

Jul. Gallop space, you fiery-footed steeds, Towards Phoebus' mansion! such a waggoner As Phaeton would whip you to the west, And bring in cloudy night immediately.—Spread thy close curtain, love-performing night!

That run-away's eyes may wink; and Romeo Leap to these arms, untalk'd of, and unseen!—Lovers can see to do their armorous rites By their own beauties; or, if love be blind, It best agrees with night.—Come, civil† night, Thou sober-suited matron, all in black, And learn me how to lose a winning match, Play'd for a pair of stainless maidenhoods: Hood my unmann'd blood bating in my cheeks,‡ With thy black mantle; till strange love, grown bold, Think true love acted, simple modesty. Come, night!—Come, Romeo! come, thou day in night!

For thou wilt lie upon the wings of night Whiter than new snow on a raven's back.—

* Cool, considerate gentleness.

† Conduct for conductor.

‡ Accompany.

§ Just and upright.

* Slight, unimportant.

† Grave, solemn.

‡ These are terms of falconry.

Come, gentle night; come, loving, black-brow'd night,
Give me my Romeo: and, when he shall die,
Take him and cut him out in little stars,
And he will make the face of heaven so fine,
That all the world will be in love with night,
And pay no worship to the garish^{*} sun.—
O I have bought the mansion of a love,
But not possess'd it; and, though I am sold,
Not yet enjoy'd: So tedious is this day,
As is the night before some festival
To an impatient child, that hath new robes,
And may not wear them. O here comes my nurse,

Enter Nurse, with Cords.

And she brings news; and every tongue, that speaks [quence.—
But Romeo's name, speaks heavenly elo-
Now, nurse, what news? What hast thou there, the cords
That Romeo bade thee fetch?

Nurse. Ay, ay, the cords.

[Throws them down.

Jul. Ah me! what news? why dost thou wring thy hands?

Nurse. Ah well-a-day! he's dead, he's dead,
he's dead!

We are undone, lady, we are undone!—

Alack the day!—he's gone, he's kill'd, he's
dead!

Jul. Can heaven be so envious?

Nurse. Romeo can,

Though heaven cannot:—O Romeo! Romeo!—
Who ever would have thought it?—Romeo!

Jul. What devil art thou, that dost torment me thus?

This torture should be roar'd in dismal hell.
Hath Romeo slain himself? say thou but I,†

And that bare vowel I shall poison more
Than the death-darting eye of cockatrice:

I am not I, if there be such an I;

Or those eyes shut, that make thee answer, I.

If he be slain, say—I; or if not, no:

Brief sounds determine of my weal or woe,

Nurse. I saw the wound, I saw it with mine
eyes,—

God save the mark!—here on his manly breast:
A piteous corse, a bloody piteous corse;

Pale, pale as ashes, all bedawb'd in blood,
All in gore blood; I swooned at the sight.

Jul. O break, my heart!—poor bankrupt, break at once!

To prison, eyes! ne'er look on liberty!

Vile earth, to earth resign: end motion here:

And thou and Romeo press one heavy bier!

Nurse. O Tybalt, Tybalt, the best friend
I had!

O courteous Tybalt! honest gentleman!

That ever I should live to see thee dead!

Jul. What storm is this, that blows so contrary?

Is Romeo slaughter'd; and is Tybalt dead?

My dear-lov'd cousin, and my dearer lord?

Then, dreadful trumpet, sound the general doom!

For who is living, if those two are gone?

Nurse. Tybalt is gone, and Romeo banished;
Romeo, that kill'd him, he is banished.

Jul. O God!—did Romeo's hand shed Tybalt's
blood?

Nurse. It did, it did; alas the day! it did.

Jul. O serpent heart, hid with a flow'ring
face!

Did ever dragon keep so fair a cave?

Beautiful tyrant! fiend angelical!

Dove-feather'd raven! wolfish-ravens lamb!

Despised substance of divinest show!

Just opposite to what thou justly seem'st,

A damned saint, an honourable villain!—

O nature! what hadst thou to do in hell,

When thou didst bower the spirit of a fiend
In mortal paradise of such sweet flesh?

Was ever book, containing such vile matter,
So fairly bound? Oh! that deceit should dwell
In such a gorgeous palace!

Nurse. There's no trust,

No faith, no honesty in men; all perjur'd,

All forsworn, all naught, all dissemblers.—

Ah! where's my man? give me some aquavita:—

These griefs, these woes, these sorrows make me shame come to Romeo!

Jul. Blister'd be thy tongue,

For such a wish! he was not born to shame:

Upon his brow shame is asham'd to sit;

For 'tis a throne where honour may be crown'd

Sole monarch of the universal earth.

O what a beast was I to chide at him!

Nurse. Will you speak well of him that kill'd your cousin?

Jul. Shall I speak ill of him that is my husband?

Ah! poor my lord, what tongue shall smooth^{*}
thy name,

When I, thy three-hours wife, have mangled
it?—

But, wherefore, villain, didst thou kill my cousin?

That villain cousin would have kill'd my husband:

Back, foolish tears, back to your native spring;

Your tributary drops belong to woe,

Which you, mistaking, offer up to joy

My husband lives, that Tybalt would have slain;

And Tybalt's dead, that would have slain my
husband:

All this is comfort: Wherefore weep I then?

Some word there was, worse than Tybalt's
death,

That murder'd me: I would forget it fain:

But oh! it presses to my memory,

Like damned guilty deeds to sinners' minds

Tybalt is dead, and Romeo—banished;

That—banished, that one word—banished,

Hath slain ten thousand Tybalts.† Tybalt's
death

Was woe enough, if it had ended there:

Or,—if sour woe delights in fellowship,

And needly will be rank'd with other griefs,—

Why follow'd not, when she said Tybalt's dead,

Thy father, or thy mother, nay, or both,

Which modern‡ lamentation might have mov'd?

But, with a rear-ward following Tybalt's death,

Romeo is banished,—to speak that word,

Is father, mother, Tybalt, Romeo, Juliet,

All slain, all dead:—Romeo is banished,—

There is no end, no limit, measure, bound,

In that word's death; no words can that woe
sound,—

Where is my father, and my mother, nurse?

Nurse. Weeping and wailing over Tybalt's corse;

Will you go to them: I will bring you thither.

Jul. Wash they his wounds with tears? mine shall be spent,

When their's are dry, for Romeo's banishment.

Take up those cords:—Poor ropes, you are be-guil'd;

Both you and I, for Romeo is exil'd:

He made you for a highway to my bed;

But I, a maid, die maiden-widowed.

Come, cords; come, nurse; I'll to my wedding bed:

And death, not Romeo, take my maidenhead!

Nurse. Hie to your chamber: I'll find Romeo

To comfort you:—I wot§ well where he is.

Hark ye, your Romeo will be here at night;

I'll to him; he is hid at Laurence's cell.

Jul. O find him! give this ring to my true

knight,

And bid him come to take his last farewell.

[Exeunt,

* Gandy, shewy. † In Shakespeare's time the affirmative particle ay was usually written I, and here it is necessary to retain the old spelling.

* To smooth, in ancient language, is to stroke, to caress.
† I. e. is worse than the loss of ten thousand Tybalts.

SCENE III.—Friar LAURENCE's Cell.

Enter Friar LAURENCE and ROMEO.

Fri. Romeo, come forth; come forth, thou fearful man;
Affliction is enamour'd of thy parts,
And thou art wedded to calamity.

Rom. Father, what news? what is the prince's doom?

What sorrow craves acquaintance at my hand,
That I yet know not?

Fri. Too familiar
Is my dear son with such sour company:
I bring thee tidings of the prince's doom.

Rom. What less than doomsday is the prince's doom?

Fri. A gentler judgment vanish'd from his lips,
Not body's death, but body's banishment.

Rom. Ha! banishment? be merciful, say—
death:

For exile hath more terror in his look,
Much more than death: do not say—banish-
ment.

Fri. Hence from Verona art thou banished:
Be patient, for the world is broad and wide.

Rom. There is no world without Verona
walls,

But purgatory, torture, hell itself.
Hence-banished is banish'd from the world,
And world's exile is death:—then banishment
Is death in term'd: calling death banishment,
Thou cut'st my head off with a golden axe,
And smil'st upon the stroke that murders me.

Fri. O deadly sin! O rude unthankfulness!
Thy fault our law calls death; but the kind prince,

Taking thy part, hath rush'd aside the law,
And turn'd that black word death to banish-
ment:

'This is dear mercy, and thou seest it not.

Rom. 'Tis torture, and not mercy: heaven is
here,

Where Juliet lives; and every cat, and dog,
And little mouse, every unworthy thing,
Live here in heaven, and may look on her,
But Romeo may not.—More validity,*
More honourable state, more courtship lives
In carrion flies, than Romeo: they may seize
On the white wonder of dear Juliet's hand,
And steal immortal blessing from her lips;
Who, even in pure and vestal modesty,
Still blush, as thinking their own kisses sin;
But Romeo may not; he is banished:

Flies may do this, when I from this must fly;
They are free men, but I am banished.

And say'st thou yet, that exile is not death?
Hadst thou no poison mix'd, no sharp-ground
knife,

No sudden mean of death, though ne'er so mean,
But—banished—to kill me: banished?

O friar, the damned use that word in hell;
Howlings attend it: How hast thou the heart,
Being a divine, a ghostly confessor,
A sin-absolver, and my friend profess'd,
To mangle me, with that word—banishment?

Fri. Thou fond mad man, hear me but speak a word.

Rom. O thou wilt speak again of banish-
ment.

Fri. I'll give thee armour to keep of that word!

Adversity's sweet milk, philosophy,
To comfort thee, though thou art banished.

Rom. Yet banished?—Hang up philosophy!
Unless philosophy can make a Juliet,
Displant a town, reverse a prince's doom;
It helps not, it prevails not—talk no more.

Fri. O then I see that madmen have no
ears.

Rom. How should they, when that wise men have no eyes?

Fri. Let me dispute with thee of thy estate.

* Worth value.

Rom. Thou canst not speak of what thou dost not feel:

Wert thou as young as I, Juliet thy love,
An hour but married, Tybalt murdered,
Doting like me, and like me banished,
Then might'st thou speak, then might'st thou tear
thy hair,

And fall upon the ground, as I do now,
Taking the measure of an unmade grave

Fri. Arise; one knocks; good Romeo, hide thyself. [Knocking within.]

Rom. Not I, unless the breath of heart-sick groans,
Mist-like, infold me from the search of eyes.

[Knocking.]
Fri. Hark, how they knock!—Who's there?—
Romeo, arise;

Thou wilt be taken:—Stay a while: stand up;
[Knocking.]

Run to my study:—By and by:—God's will!
What wilfulness is this?—I come, I come.

[Knocking.]
Who knocks so hard? whence come you? what's your will?

Nurse. [Within.] Let me come in, and you shall know my errand;

I come from lady Juliet.

Fri. Welcome then.

Enter NURSE.

Nurse. O holy friar, O tell me, holy friar,
Where is my lady's lord, where's Romeo?

Fri. There on the ground, with his own tears made drunk.

Nurse. O he is even in my mistress' case,
Just in her case!

Fri. O woeful sympathy!
Piteous predicament!

Nurse. Even so lies she,
Blubbering and weeping, weeping and blubber-
ing:—

Stand up, stand up: stand, an you be a man:
For Juliet's sake, for her sake, rise and stand;
Why should you fall into so deep an O?

Rom. Nurse!

Nurse. Ah Sir! ah Sir!—Well, death's the end of all.

Rom. Spak'st thou of Juliet? how is it with
her?

Doth she not think me an old murderer.
Now I have stain'd the childhood of our joy
With blood removed but little from her own?
Where is she? and how doth she? and what says
My conceal'd lady to our cancell'd love?

Nurse. O she says nothing, Sir, but weeps and weeps;

And now falls on her bed; and then starts up,
And Tybalt calls; and then on Romeo cries,
And then down falls again.

Rom. As if that name,
Shot from the deadly level of a gun,
Did murder her; as that name's cursed hand
Murder'd her kinsman.—O tell me, friar, tell me,
In what vile part of this anatomy
Doth my name lodge? tell me, that I may sack
The hateful mansion. [Drawing his sword.]

Fri. Hold thy desperate hand:
Art thou a man? thy form cries out thou art;
Thy tears are womanish: thy wild acts denote
The unreasonable fury of a beast:

Unseemly woman, in a seeming man!
Or ill-beseeming beast, in seeming both!
Thou hast amaz'd me: by my holy order,
I thought thy disposition better temper'd.

Hast thou slain Tybalt? wilt thou slay thyself?
And slay thy lady too that lives in thee,
By doing damned hate upon thyself?

Why rail'st thou on thy birth, the heaven, and earth?

Since birth, and heaven, and earth, all three do
meet

In thee at once; which thou at once wouldst lose.
Fie, fie! thou sham'st thy shape, thy love, thy
wit;

Which, like an usurer, abound'st in all,

And usest none in that true use indeed
Which should bedeck thy shape, thy love, thy wit.

Thy noble shape is but a form of wax,
Digressing from the valour of a man :
Thy dear love, sworn, but hollow purjury, Killing that love which thou hast vow'd to cherish :

Thy wit, that ornament to shape and love,
Mis-shapen in the conduct of them both,
Like powder in a skill-less soldier's flask,
Is set on fire by thine own ignorance,
And thou dismember'd with thine own defence. *
What, rouse thee, man ! thy Juliet is alive,
For whose dear sake thou wast but lately dead ;
There art thou happy : Tybalt would kill thee,
But thou slew'st Tybalt ; there art thou happy
too :

The law, that threaten'd death, becomes thy friend,
And turns it to exile ; there art thou happy :
A pack of blessings lights upon thy back ;
Happiness courts thee in her best array ;
But, like a mis-behav'd and sullen wench,
Thou pou'st upon thy fortune and thy love :
Take heed, take heed, for such die miserable.
Go, get thee to thy love, as was decreed,
Ascend her chamber, hence and comfort her ;
But look thou stay not till the watch be set,
For then thou canst not pass to Mantua ;
Where thou shalt live, till we can find a time
To blame your marriage, reconcile your friends,
Beg pardon of the prince, and call thee back
With twenty hundred thousand times more joy
Than thou went'st forth in lamentation.—
Go before, nurse : commend me to thy lady ;
And bid her hasten all the house to bed,
Which heavy sorrow makes them apt unto :
Romeo is coming.

Nurse. O Lord, I could have staid here all the night,
To hear good counsel : Oh ! what learning is !—
My lord, I'll tell my lady you will come.

Rom. Do so, and bid my sweet prepare to chide.

Nurse. Here, Sir, a ring she bid me give you,
Sir :

Hie you, make haste, for it grows very late.

[Exit Nurse.]

Rom. How well my comfort is reviv'd by
this !

Fri. Go hence : Good night ; and here stands
all your state ; †

Either be gone before the watch be set,
Or by the break of day disguis'd from hence :
Sojourn in Mantua ; I'll find out your man,
And he shall signify, from time to time,
Every good hap to you that chances here :
Give me thy hand ; 'tis late : farewell ; good
night.

Rom. But that a joy past joy calls out on me,
It were a grief, so brief to part with thee :
Farewell. [Exit Fri.]

SCENE IV.—A Room in CAPULET'S House.

Enter CAPULET, Lady CAPULET, and PARIS.

Cap. Things have fallen out, Sir, so unluckily,
That we have had no time to move our daughter :

Look you, she lov'd her kinsman Tybalt dearly,
And so did I ;—Well, we were born to die.—
'Tis very late, she'll not come down to-night :
I promise you, but for your company,
I would have been a-bed an hour ago.

Par. These times of woe afford no time to woo :

Madam, good night : commend me to your
daughter.

La. Cap. I will, and know her mind early tomorrow ;

To-night she's mew'd ‡ up to her heaviness.

* Torn to pieces with thine own weapons.

† The whole of your fortune depends on this.

‡ Shut up.

Cap. Sir Paris, I will make a desperate * tender

Of my child's love : I think, she will be rul'd
In all respects by me ; nay more, I doubt it not.
Wife, go you to her ere you go to bed ;
Acquaint her here of my son Paris' love ;
And bid her, mark you me, on Wednesday next—

But, soft ; What day is this ?

Par. Monday, my lord.

Cap. Monday ? ha ! ha ! Well, Wednesday is too soon,

O'Thursday let it be ;—O'Thursday, tell her,
She shall be married to this noble earl :—
Will you be ready ? do you like this haste ?
We'll keep no great ado ;—a friend, or two :—
For hark you, Tybalt being slain so late,
It may be thought we held him carelessly,
Being our kinsman, if we revel much :
Therefore we'll have some half a dozen friends,
And there an end. But what say you to Thursday ?

Par. My lord, I would that Thursday were tomorrow.

Cap. Well, get you gone :—O'Thursday be it
then :—

Go you to Juliet ere you go to bed,
Prepare her, wife, against this wedding day.—
Farewell, my lord.—Light to my chamber, ho !
Afore me, it is so very late, that we
May call it early by and by :—Good night.

[Exit Cap.]

SCENE V.—JULIET'S Chamber.

Enter ROMEO and JULIET.

Jul. Wilt thou be gone ? It is not yet near
day :

It was the nightingale, and not the lark,
That pierc'd the fearful hollow of thine ear :
Nightly she sings on yon pomegranate-tree :
Believe me, love, it was the nightingale.

Rom. It was the lark, the herald of the morn,
No nightingale : look, love, what envious streaks
Do lace the severing clouds in yonder east :
Night's candles are burnt out, and jocund day
Stands tiptoe on the misty mountain-tops :
I must be gone and live, or stay and die.

Jul. Yon light is not daylight, I know it, I :
It is some meteor that the sun exhales,
To be to thee this night a torch-bearer,
And light thee on thy way to Mantua :
Therefore stay yet, thou need'st not to be gone

Rom. Let me be ta'en, let me be put to death ;
I am content, so thou wilt have it so.

I'll say, yon grey is not the morning's eye,
'Tis but the pale reflex of Cynthia's brow ; †
Nor that is not the lark, whose notes do beat
The vaulty heaven so high above our heads :
I have more care ‡ to stay, than will to go ;—
Come, death, and welcome ! Juliet wills it
so.—

How is't, my soul ? let's talk, it is not day.

Jul. It is, it is, hie hence, be gone, away ;
It is the lark that sings so out of tune,
Straining harsh discords, and unpleasing sharps.
Some say, the lark makes sweet division ; §
This doth not so, for she divideth us :
Some say, the lark and loathed toad change
eyes ;

O now I would they had chang'd voices too !
Since arm from arm that voice doth us affray,
Hunting thee hence with hunts-up ¶ to the day.
O now be gone ; more light and light it grows.

Rom. More light and light ?—more dark and dark out woes.

Enter NURSE.

Nurse. Madam !

Jul. Nurse ?

* Bold.

† Inclination.

‡ Reflection of the moon.

§ Division was the technical phrase for musical composition.

¶ A tune played to wake hunters, also a morning song to a woman the day after marriage.

Nurse. Your lady mother's coming to your chamber :
The day is broke ; be wary, look about.

[Exit Nurse.]

Jul. Then, window, let day in, and let life out.

Rom. Farewell, farewell ! one kiss, and I'll descend.

[Romeo descends.]

Jul. Art thou gone so ? my love ! my lord ! my friend !

I must hear from thee every day i'the hour,
For in a minute there are many days :
Oh ! by this count I shall be much in years,
Ere I again behold my Romeo.

Rom. Farewell ! I will omit no opportunity
That may convey my greetings, love, to thee.

Jul. O think'st thou we shall ever meet again ?

Rom. I doubt it not ; and all these woes shall serve

For sweet discourses in our time to come.

Jul. O God ! I have an ill-divining soul :
Methinks I see thee, now thou art below,
As one dead in the bottom of a tomb :
Either my eye-sight fails, or thou look'st pale.

Rom. And trust me, love, in my eye so do you :

Dry sorrow drinks our blood. Adieu ! adieu !

[Exit Romeo.]

Jul. O fortune, fortune ! all men call thee fickle :

If thou art fickle, what dost thou with him
That is renown'd for faith ? Be fickle, fortune ;
For then, I hope, thou wilt not keep him long,
But send him back.

La. Cap. [Within.] Ho, daughter ! are you up ?

Jul. Who is't that calls ? is it my lady mother ?

Is she not down so late, or up so early ?
What unaccustom'd cause procures * her hither ?

Enter Lady Capulet.

La. Cap. Why, how now, Juliet ?

Jul. Madam, I am not well.

La. Cap. Evermore weeping for your cousin's death ?

[tears.]

What, wilt thou wash him from his grave with
An if thou couldst, thou couldst not make him live ;

Therefore, have done : Some grief shows much
of love ;

But much of grief shows still some want of wit.

Jul. Yet let me weep for such a feeling loss.

La. Cap. So shall you feel the loss, but not the friend

Which you weep for.

Jul. Feeling so the loss,
I cannot choose but ever weep the friend.

La. Cap. Well, girl, thou weep'st at not so much for his death,

As that the villain lives which slaughter'd him.

Jul. What villain, madam ?

La. Cap. That same villain, Romeo.

Jul. Villain and he are many miles asunder.
God pardon him ! I do, with all my heart ;

And yet no man like he doth grieve my heart ;

La. Cap. That is, because the traitor murderer lives.

Jul. Ay, madam, from the reach of these my hands.

[death.]

*Would, none but I might venge my cousin's

La. Cap. We will have vengeance for it, fear thou not :

[thou.]

Then weep no more. I'll send to one in Mantua
Where that same banish'd runagate doth live,—

That shall bestow on him so sure a draught,
That he shall soon keep Tybalt company :

And then, I hope, thou wilt be satisfied.

Jul. Indeed I never shall be satisfied
With Romeo, till I behold him—dead—
Is my poor heart so for a kinsman vex'd :—

* Brings.

Madam, if you could find out but a man
To bear a poison, I would temper it,
That Romeo should, upon receipt thereof,
Soon sleep in quiet.—O, how my heart abhors
To hear him nam'd,—and cannot come to him,—

To wreak the love I bore my cousin Tybalt
Upon his body that hath slaughter'd him !

La. Cap. Find thou the means, and I'll find such a man.

But now I'll tell thee joyful tidings, girl.

Jul. And joy comes well in such a needful
time :

What are they, I beseech your ladyship ?

La. Cap. Well, well, thou hast a careful father, child ;

One, who, to put thee from thy heaviness,
Hath sorted out a sudden day of joy,

That thou expect'st not, nor I look'd not for.

Jul. Madam, in happy time what day is
that ?

La. Cap. Marry, my child, early next Thursday morn,

The gallant, young, and noble gentleman,
The county Paris, at Saint Peter's church,

Shall happily make thee there a joyful bride.

Jul. Now, by Saint Peter's church, and Peter
too,

He shall not make me there a joyful bride.

I wonder at this haste ; that I must wed
Ere he, that should be husband, comes to woo.

I pray you, tell my lord and father, madam,
I will not marry yet ; and, when I do, I swear

It shall be Romeo, whom you know I hate,
Rather than Paris :—These are news indeed !

La. Cap. Here comes your father : tell him so yourself.

And see how he will take it at your hands.

Enter Capulet and Nurse.

Cap. When the sun sets, the air doth drizzle
But for the sunset of my brother's son, [dew ;
It rains downright.—

How now ? a conduit, girl ? what, still in tears ?
Evermore showering ? In one little body

Thou counterfeit'st a bark, a sea, a wind :

For still thy eyes, which I may call the sea,
Do ebb and flow with tears ; the bark thy body is

Sailing in this salt flood ; the winds, thy sighs ;
Who,—raging with thy tears, and they with

them,—

Without a sudden calm, will overset
Thy tempest-toasted body.—How now, wife ?

Have you delivered to her our decree ?

La. Cap. Ay, Sir ; but she will none, she gives you thanks.

I would, the fool were married to her grave !

Cap. Soft, take me with you, take me with you, wife.

How ! will she none ? doth she not give us
thanks ?

Is she not proud ? doth she not count her
bless'd,

Unworthy as she is, that we have wrought

So worthy a gentleman to be her bridegroom ?

Jul. Not proud, you have ; but thankful, that you have :

Proud can I never be of what I hate ;

But thankful even for hate, that is meant love.

Cap. How now ! how now, chop-logic ! What is this ?

Proud,—and, I thank you,—and, I thank you
not ;—

And yet not proud ;—Mistress minion, you,
Thank me no thankings, nor proud me no

prouds,

But settle your fine joints 'gainst Thursday next,
To go with Paris to Saint Peter's church,

Or I will drag thee on a hurdle thither.

Out, you green-sickness carrion ! out, you baggage,
You tallow-face !

La. Cap. Fie, fie ! what, are you mad ?

Jul. Good father, I beseech you on my
knees,

Hear me with patience but to speak a word.

Cap. Hang thee, young baggage! disobedient wretch!

I tell thee what,—get thee to church o' Thurs-
Or never after look me in the face:
Speak not, reply not, do not answer me:
My fingers itch.—Wife, we scarce thought us
bless'd,

That God had sent us but this only child;
But now I see this one is one too much,
And that we have a curse in having her:
Out on her, bilding!

Nurse. God in heaven bless her!—
You are to blame, my lord, to rate her so.

Cap. And why, my lady wisdom! hold your tongue,

Good prudence; smatter with your gossips, go.

Nurse. I speak no treason.

Cap. O! God ye good den!

Nurse. May not one speak?

Cap. Peace, you mumbling fool!
Utter your gravity o'er a gossip's bowl,
For here we need it not.

La. Cap. You are too hot.

Cap. God's bread! it makes me mad: Day, night, late, early,
At home, abroad, alone, in company,
Waking, or sleeping, still my care hath been
To have her match'd: and having now provided

A gentleman of princely parentage,
Of fair demesnes, youthful, and nobly train'd,
Stuff'd (as they say,) with honourable parts,
Proportion'd as one's heart could wish a man,—
And then to have a wretched pulling fool,
A whining mammet, in her fortune's tender,
To answer—*I'll not wed, I cannot love,
I am too young, I pray you, pardon me*;
—But, as you will not wed, I'll pardon you:
Graze where you will, you shall not house with
me;

Look to't, think on't, I do not use to jest.
Thursday is near; lay hand on heart, advise:
As you be mine, I'll give you to my friend;
As you be not, hang, beg, starve, die i'the
streets,
For, by my soul, I'll ne'er acknowledge thee,
Nor what is mine shall never do thee good:
Trust to't, bethink you, I'll not be forsworn.

[Exit.]

Jul. Is there no pity sitting in the clouds,
That sees into the bottom of my grief?
O sweet my mother, cast me not away!
Delay this marriage for a month, a week;
Or, if you do not, make the bridal bed
In that dim monument where Tybalt lies.

La. Cap. Talk not to me, for I'll not speak a
word;
Do as thou wilt, for I have done with thee.

[Exit.]

Jul. O God!—O nurse! how shall this be prevented?
My husband is on earth, my faith in heaven;
How shall that faith return again to earth,
Unless that husband send it me from heaven
By leaving earth?—Comfort me, counsel me.—
Alack, alack, that heaven should practise stratagems

Upon so soft a subject as myself!—
What say'st thou? hast thou not a word of joy?
Some comfort, nurse.

Nurse. 'Faith, here 'tis: Romeo is banished; and all the world to nothing,
That he dares ne'er come back to challenge
you;

Or, if he do, it needs must be by stealth.
Then, since the case so stands as now it doth,
I think it best you married with the county.
Oh! he's a lovely gentleman!
Romeo's a dishclout to him; an eagle, madam,
Hath not so green, so quick, so fair an eye,
As Paris hath. Beahrew my very heart,
I think you happy in this second match,
For it exceeds your first; or if it did not,

* Base woman.

Your first is dead; or 'twere as good he were,
As living here and you no use of him.

Jul. Speakest thou from thy heart?

Nurse. From my soul too;
Or else beshrew them both.

Jul. Amen!

Nurse. To what?

Jul. Well, thou hast comforted me marvellous much.

Go in; and tell my lady I am gone,
Having dispos'd my father, to Laurence's cell,
To make confession, and to be absolv'd.

Nurse. Marry, I will; and this is wisely done.
[Exit.]

Jul. Ancient damnation! O most wicked
fiend!

Is it more sin to wish me thus forsworn,
Or to dispraise my lord with that same tongue
Which she hath prais'd him with above compare

So many thousand times?—Go, counsellor;
Thou and my bosom henceforth shall be twain.—

I'll to the friar, to know his remedy;
If all else fail, myself have power to die.

[Exit.]

ACT IV.

SCENE I.—Friar LAURENCE's Cell.

Enter Friar LAURENCE, and PARIS.

Fri. On Thursday, Sir! the time is very short.

Par. My father Capulet will have it so;
And I am nothing slow, to slack his haste.

Fri. You say you do not know the lady's
mind;

Uneven is the course, I like it not.

Par. Immoderately she weeps for Tybalt's
death,

And therefore have I little talk'd of love;
For Venus smiles not in a house of tears.
Now, Sir, her father counts it dangerous,
That she doth give her sorrow so much away;
And, in his wisdom hastes our marriage,
To stop the inundation of her tears;
Which, too much minded by herself alone,
May be put from her by society:
Now do you know the reason of this haste.

Fri. I would I knew not why it should be slow'd. [Aside.]

Look, Sir, here comes the lady towards my cell.

Enter JULIET.

Par. Happily met, my lady, and my wife!

Jul. That may be, Sir, when I may be a
wife.

Par. That may be, must be, love, on Thursday next.

Jul. What must be shall be.

Fri. That's a certain text.

Par. Come you to make confession to this father?

Jul. To answer that, were to confess to you.

Par. Do not deny to him, that you love me.

Jul. I will confess to you, that I love him.

Par. So will you, I am sure, that you love
me.

Jul. If I do so, it will be of more price, Being spoke behind your back, than to your
face.

Par. Poor soul, thy face is much abus'd with
tears.

Jul. The tears have got small victory by
that;

For it was bad enough, before their spite.

Par. Thou wrong'st it, more than tears, with that report.

Jul. That is no slander, Sir, that is a truth;
And what I spake, I spake it to my face.

Par. Thy face is mine, and thou hast slan-der'd it.

Jul. It may be so, for it is not mine own.—
Are you at leisure, holy father, now;
Or shall I come to you at evening mass?

Fri. My leisure serves me, pensive daughter,
now:—

My lord, we must entreat the time alone.

Par. God shield, I should disturb devotion!—

Juliet, on Thursday early will I rouse you:
Till then, adieu! and keep this holy kiss.

[Exit PARIS.]

Jul. O shut the door! and when thou hast done so,
Come weep with me; Past hope, past cure,
past help!

Fri. Ah! Juliet, I already know thy grief;
It strains me past the compass of my wits:
I hear thou must, and nothing must prorogue it,
On Thursday next be married to this county.

Jul. Tell me not, friar, that thou hear'st of
this,

Unless thou tell me how I may prevent it:
If, in thy wisdom, thou canst give no help,
Do thou but call my resolution wise,
And with this knife I'll help it presently.

God join'd my heart and Romeo's, thou our hands:

And ere this hand, by thee to Romeo seal'd,
Shall be the label to another deed,
Or my true heart with treacherous revolt
Turn to another, this shall slay them both:
Therefore, out of thy long-experienc'd time,
Give me some present counsel; or, behold,
'Twixt my extremes and me this bloody knife
Shall play the umpire; * arbitrating that
Which the commission † of thy years and art
Could to no issue of true honour bring.
Be not so long to speak; I long to die,
If what thou speak'st speak not of remedy.

Fri. Hold, daughter; I do spy a kind of
Which craves as desperate an execution [hope,
As that is desperate which we would prevent.
If, rather than to marry county Paris,
Thou hadst the strength of will to slay thyself;
Then is it likely, thou wilt undertake
A thing like death to chide away this shame,
That cop'st with death himself to scape from it;
And, if thou dar'st, I'll give thee remedy.

Jul. O bid me leap, rather than marry Paris,
From off the battlements of yonder tower;
Or walk in thievish ways; or bid me lurk
Where serpents are; chain me with roaring
Or shut me nightly in a charnel-house, [bears;
O'er-cover'd quite with dead men's rattling
bones,

With reeky shanks, and yellow chapless skulls;
Or bid me go into a new-made grave,
And hide me with a dead man in his shroud;
Things that, to hear them told, have made me
tremble:

And I will do it without fear or doubt,
To live an unstain'd wife to my sweet love.

Fri. Hold, then; go home, be merry, give consent

To marry Paris; Wednesday is to-morrow;
To-morrow night look that thou lie alone,
Let not thy nurse lie with thee in thy chamber:
Take thou this phial, being then in bed,
And this distilled liquor drink thou off:
When, presently, through all thy veins shall run
A cold and drowsy humour, which shall seize Each vital spirit; for no pulse shall keep
His natural progress, but surcease to beat:
No warmth, no breath, shall testify thou liv'st;
The roses in thy lips and cheeks shall fade
To pale ashes; thy eyes' windows fall,
Like death when he shuts up the day of life;
Each part, depriv'd of supple government,
Shall stiff, and stark, and cold appear like
death:

And in this borrow'd likeness of shrunk death
Thou shalt remain full two and forty hours,

* Decide the struggle between me and my distresses.
† Authority or power.

And then awake as from a pleasant sleep.

Now when the bridegroom in the morning comes [dead:

To rouse thee from thy bed, there art thou
Then (as the manner of our country is,)
In thy best robes uncover'd on the bier,
Thou shalt be borne to that same ancient vault,
Where all the kindred of the Capulets lie.
In the meantime, against thou shalt awake,
Shall Romeo by my letters know our drift;
And hither shall he come: and he and I
Will watch thy waking, and that very night
Shall Romeo bear thee hence to Mantua.
And this shall free thee from this present shame;
If no unconstant toy, nor womanish fear,
Abate thy valour in the acting it.

Jul. Give me, O give me I tell me not of fear.

Fri. Hold; get you gone, be strong and prosperous

In this resolve: I'll send a friar with speed
To Mantua, with my letters to thy lord.

Jul. Love, give me strength! and strength shall help afford.

Farewell, dear father. [Exeunt.]

SCENE II.—A Room in CAPULET'S House.

Enter CAPULET, LADY CAPULET, NURSE, and SERVANTS.

Cap. So many guests invite as here are writ.— [Exit SERVANT.]

Sirrah, go hire me twenty cunning cooks.

2 Serv. You shall have none ill, Sir; for I'll try if they can lick their fingers.

Cap. How canst thou try them so?

2 Serv. Marry, Sir, 'tis an ill cook that can not lick his own fingers: therefore he that cannot lick his fingers goes not with me.

Cap. Go, begone.— [Exit SERVANT.]

We shall be much unfurnish'd for this time.—
What is my daughter gone to friar Laurence?

Nurse. Ay, forsooth.

Cap. Well, he may chance to do some good
on her:

A prevish self-will'd harlotry it is.

Enter JULIET.

Nurse. See, where she comes from shrift * with merry look.

Cap. How now, my headstrong? where have you been gadding?

Jul. Where I have learn'd me to repent the
Of disobedient opposition [sin
To you and your behests; † and am enjoin'd
By holy Laurence to fall prostrate here,

And beg your pardon:—Pardon, I beseech
Henceforward I am ever rul'd by you. [you!

Cap. Send for the county; go tell him of this; [ing.

I'll have this knot knit up to-morrow morn.

Jul. I met the youthful lord at Laurence's cell;

And gave him what becom'd ‡ love I might,
Not stepping o'er the bounds of modesty.

Cap. Why, I am glad on't; this is well,—
stand up:

This is as't should be.—Let me see the county;
Ay, marry, go, I say, and fetch him hither.—

Now, afore God, this reverend holy friar,
All our whole city is much bound to him.

Jul. Nurse, will you go with me into my closet,

To help me sort such needful ornaments
As you think fit to furnish me to-morrow?

La. Cap. No, not till Thursday; there is time enough.

Cap. Go, nurse, go with her:—We'll to church to-morrow.

[Exeunt JULIET and NURSE.]

La. Cap. We shall be short in our provision;
'Tis now near night.

Cap. Tush! I will stir about, [wife:
And all things shall be well, I warrant thee

* Confession. † Commands. ‡ Becoming.

Go thou to Juliet, help to deck up her ;
 I'll not to bed to-night ;—let me alone ; [he l—
 I'll play the housewife for this once.—What,
 They are all forth : well, I will walk myself
 To county Paris, to prepare him up [light,
 Against to-morrow : my heart is wondrous
 Since this same wayward girl is so reclaim'd.
 [Exeunt.

SCENE III.—JULIET'S Chamber.

Enter JULIET and NURSE.

Jul. Ay, those attires are best :—But, gentle nurse,
 I pray thee, leave me to myself to-night ;
 For I have need of many orisons *
 To move the heavens to smile upon my state,
 Which, well thou know'st, is cross and full of sin.

Enter LADY CAPULET.

La. Cap. What, are you busy ? do you need my help ?

Jul. No, madam ; we have cull'd such necessities

As are behoveful for our state to-morrow :
 So please you, let me now be left alone,
 And let the nurse this night sit up with you ;
 For, I am sure, you have your hands full all
 In this so sudden business.

La. Cap. Good night !

Get thee to bed, and rest ; for thou hast need.

[Exeunt Lady CAPULET and NURSE.

Jul. Farewell !—God knows, when we shall meet again.

I have a faint cold fear thrills through my veins,

That almost freezes up the heat of life :

I'll call them back again to comfort me :—

Nurse !—What should she do here ?

My dismal scene I needs must act alone.—

Come phial.—

What if this mixture do not work at all ?

Must I of force be married to the county ?—

No, no ;—this shall forbid it :—lie thou there.—

[Laying down a Dagger.

What if it be a poison, which the friar

Subtly hath minister'd to have me dead,

Lest in this marriage he should be dishonour'd,

Because he married me before to Romeo ?

I fear, it is : and yet methinks it should not,

For he hath still been tried a holy man :

I will not entertain so bad a thought.—

How if, when I am laid into the tomb,

I wake before the time that Romeo

Come to redeem me ? there's a fearful point !

Shall I not then be stifled in the vault,

To whose foul mouth no healthsome air breathes in,

And there die strangled ere my Romeo comes ?

Or, if I live, is it not very like

The horrible conceit of death and night,

Together with the terror of the place,—

As in a vault, and ancient receptacle,

Where, for these many hundred years, the

bones

Of all my buried ancestors are pack'd ;

Where bloody Tybalt, yet but green in earth,

Lies fest'ring in his shroud ; where, as they

say,

At some hours in the night spirits resort ;—

Alack, alack ! is it not like that I,

So early waking,—what with loathsome smells ;

And shrieks like mandrakes' torn out of the

earth,

That living mortals, hearing them, run mad ; †—

Oh ! if I wake, shall I not be distraught, ‡

Environed with all these hideous fears ?

And madly play with my forefathers' joints ?

* Prayers.

† The fabulous accounts of the plant called a mandrake give it a degree of animal life, and when it is torn from the ground it groans, which is fatal to him that pulls it up.

‡ Distracted

And pluck the mangled Tybalt from his shroud ?
 And, in this rage, with some great kinsman's bone,
 As with a club, dash out my desperate brains !
 O look ! methinks, I see my cousin's ghost
 Seeking out Romeo, that did spit his body
 Upon a rapier's point :—Stay, Tybalt, stay !—
 Romeo, I come ! this do I drink to thee.

[She throws herself on the Bed

SCENE IV.—CAPULET'S Hall.

Enter Lady CAPULET and NURSE.

La. Cap. Hold, take these keys, and fetch more spices, nurse.

Nurse. They call for dates and quinces in the pastry. *

Enter CAPULET.

Cap. Come, stir, stir, stir ! the second cock bath crow'd,

The curfew bell hath rung, 'tis three o'clock :—

Look to the bak'd meats, good Angelica :

Spare not for cost.

Nurse. Go, go, you cot-quean, go,
 Get you to bed ; 'faith, you'll be sick to-morrow
 For this night's watching.

Cap. No, not a whit ; What ! I have watch'd ere now

All night for lesser cause, and ne'er been sick.

La. Cap. Ay, you have been a mouse hunt †
 in your time :

But I will watch you from such watching—now,

[Exeunt Lady CAPULET and NURSE.

Cap. A jealous-hood, a jealous-hood !—Now, fellow,

What's there ?

Enter SERVANTS with Spits, Logs, and Baskets.

1 Serv. Things for the cook, Sir ; but I know not what.

Cap. Make haste, make haste. [Exit 1 SERV.]

Sirrah, fetch drier logs ;

Call Peter, he will shew thee where they are.

2 Serv. I have a head, Sir, that will find out logs,

And never trouble Peter for the matter.

[Exit.

Cap. 'Mass, and well said ; a merry whorson ! ha,

Thou shalt be logger-head.—Good faith 'tis day :

The county will be hear with music straight,

[Music within.

For so he said he would. I hear him near :—

Nurse !—Wife ! what, ho !—what, Nurse, I say !

Enter NURSE.

Go, waken Juliet, go, and trim her up ;

I'll go and chat with Paris :—Hie, make haste,

Make haste ! the bridegroom he is come already :

Make haste, I say !

[Exeunt.

SCENE V.—JULIET'S Chamber ; JULIET on the Bed.

Enter NURSE.

Nurse. Mistress !—what, mistress !—Juliet !—
 —fast, I warrant her, she :—

Why, lamb !—why, lady !—fie, you slug-a-bed !—

Why, love, I say !—madam ! sweet-heart !—

why, bride !

What, not a word ?—you take your pennyworths

now ;

[rant,

Sleep for a week :—for the next night, I war-

The county Paris hath set up his rest,

That you shall rest but little.—God forgive me,

(Marry and amen !) how sound is she asleep !

I needs must wake her :—Madam, madam,

madam !

Ay, let the county, take you in your bed ;

* The room where pies were made.

† Mouse was a term of endearment to a woman.

He'll fright you up, I'faith.—Will it not be ?
What, dress'd ! and in your clothes ! and down
again !

I must needs wake you : Lady ! lady ! lady !
Alas ! alas !—Help ! help ! my lady's dead !—
O well-a-day, that ever I was born !—
Some aqua-vitæ, ho !—my lord !—my lady !

Enter Lady CAPULET.

La. Cap. What noise is here ?

Nurse. O lamentable day !

La. Cap. What is the matter ?

Nurse. Look, look ! O heavy day !

La. Cap. O me, O me ! my child, my only
life,

Revive, look up, or I will die with thee !—
Help, help !—call help.

Enter CAPULET.

Cap. For shame, bring Juliet forth ; her lord is come.

Nurse. She's dead, deceas'd, she's dead ;
alack the day !

La. Cap. Alack the day ! she's dead, she's dead, she's dead.

Cap. Ha ! let me see her :—Out, alas ! she's cold ;

Her blood is settled ; and her joints are stiff ;
Life and these lips have long been separated :
Death lies on her like an untimely frost
Upon the sweetest flower of all the field.
Accursed time ! unfortunate old man !

Nurse. O lamentable day !

La. Cap. O woeful time !

Cap. Death, that hath ta'en her hence to make me wail,
Ties up my tongue, and will not let me speak.

Enter Friar LAURENCE and PARIS, with MU-SICIANS.

Fri. Come, is the bride ready to go to church ?

Cap. Ready to go, but never to return :
O son, the night before thy wedding-day
Hath death lain with thy bride :—See, there she lies,

Flower as she was, deflowered by him.
Death is my son-in-law, death is my heir ;
My daughter he hath wedded ! I will die,
And leave him all ; life leaving, all is death's.

Par. Have I thought long to see this morn-ing's face,
And doth it give me such a sight as this ?

La. Cap. Accurs'd, unhappy, wretched, hateful day !

Most miserable hour, that e'er time saw
In lasting labour of his pilgrimage !
But one, poor one, one poor and loving child,
But one thing to rejoice and solace in,
And cruel death hath catch'd it from my sight.

Nurse. O woe ! O woeful, woeful, woeful
day !

Most lamentable day ! most woeful day,
That ever ever I did yet behold !
O day ! O day ! O day ! O hateful day !
Never was seen so black a day as this :
O woeful day, O woeful day !

Par. Beguil'd, divorced, wronged, spited, slain !

Most detestable death, by thee beguil'd,
By cruel cruel thee quite overthrown !—
O love ! O life !—not life, but love in death !

Cap. Despis'd, distressed, hated, martyr'd,
kill'd !—

Uncomfortable time ! why cam'st thou now
To murder murder our solemnity ?—
O child ! O child !—my soul, and not my child !—

Dead art thou, dead !—alack ! my child is dead ;
And, with my child, my joys are buried !

Fri. Peace, ho, for shame ! confusion's cure lives not

In these confusions. Heaven and yourself
Had part in this fair maid ; now heaven hath all,

And all the better is it for the maid :
Your part in her you could not keep from death ;
But heaven keeps his part in eternal life.
The most you sought was—her promotion ;
For 'twas your heaven, she should be advanc'd :
And weep ye now, seeing she is advanc'd,
Above the clouds, as high as heaven itself ?
Oh ! in this love, you love your child so ill,
That you run mad, seeing that she is well :
She's not well married, that lives married long ;
But she's best married, that dies married young.

Dry up your tears, and stick your rosemary
On this fair corse ; and as the custom is,
In all her best array bear her to church :
For though fond nature bids us all lament,
Yet nature's tears are reason's merriment.

Cap. All things, that we ordained festival,
Turn from their office to black funeral :
Our instruments, to melancholy bells ;
Our wedding cheer, to a sad burial feast ;
Our solemn hymns to sullen dirges change ;
Our bridal flowers serve for a buried corse,
And all things change them to the contrary.

Fri. Sir, you go in,—and, madam, go with
him ;—

And go, Sir Paris ;—every one prepare
To follow this fair corse unto her grave :
The heavens do low'r upon you, for some ill ;
Move them no more, by crossing their high will.

[Exeunt CAPULET, Lady CAPU-LET, PARIS, and FRIAR.

1 Mus. 'Faith, we may put up our pipes, and
be gone.

Nurse. Honest good fellows, ah ! put up ;
put up ;
For, well you know, this is a pitiful case.

[Exit NURSE.

1 Mus. Ay, by my troth, the case may be amended.

Enter PETER.

Pet. Musicians, O musicians, Heart's ease, heart's ease ; O an you will have me live, play
—heart's ease.

1 Mus. Why heart's ease ?

Pet. O musicians, because my heart itself plays—My heart is full of woe : O play me some merry dump* to comfort me.

2 Mus. Not a dump we ; 'tis no time to play now.

Pet. You will not then ?

2 Mus. No.

Pet. I will then give it you soundly.

1 Mus. What will you give us ?

Pet. No money, on my faith, but the gleeck : †
I will give you the minstrel.

1 Mus. Then will I give you the serving-creature.

Pet. Then will I lay the serving-creature's dagger on your pate. I will carry no crotchets :
I'll re you, I'll fa you : Do you note me ?

1 Mus. An you re us, and fa us, you note us.

2 Mus. Pray you, put up your dagger, and put out your wit.

Pet. Then have at you with my wit ; I will dry-beat you with an iron wit, and put up my iron dagger :—Answer me like men :

*When griping grief the heart doth wound,
And doleful dumps the mind oppress,
Then music, with her silver sound ;*

Why, silver sound ? why music with her silver sound ?

What say you, Simon Cattling ?

1 Mus. Marry, Sir, because silver hath a sweet sound.

Pet. Pretty ! What say you, Hugh Rebeck ? :

2 Mus. I say—silver sound, because musicians sound for silver.

* Dumps were heavy mournful tunes.

† To gleeck is to scoff, and a gleeckman signified a minstrel.
‡ "And the jocund rebeck's sound."—William.

Pet. Pretty too!—What say you, James Soundpost?

3 Mus. 'Faith, I know not what to say.

Pet. O I cry you mercy! you are the singer: I will say for you. It is music with her silver sound, because such fellows as you have seldom gold for sounding:—

*Then music, with her silver sound,
With speedy help doth lend redress.*

[Exit singing.]

1 Mus. What a pestilent knave is this same?

2 Mus. Hang him, Jack! Come, we'll in here; tarry for the mourners, and stay dinner.

[Exeunt.]

ACT V. *

SCENE I.—Mantua.—A Street.

Enter ROMEO.

Rom. If I may trust the flattering eye of sleep,

My dreams presage some joyful news at hand:
My bosom's lord † sits lightly in his throne;

And, all this day, an unaccustom'd spirit
Lifts me above the ground with cheerful thoughts.

I dreamt my lady came and found me dead;
(Strange dream! that gives a dead man leave to think.)

And breath'd such life with kisses in my lips,
That I reviv'd, and was an emperor.

Ah me! how sweet is love itself possess'd,
When but love's shadows are so rich in joy!

Enter BALTHAZAR.

News from Verona!—How now, Balthazar?
Dost thou not bring me letters from the friar?
How doth my lady? Is my father well?
How fares my Juliet? That I ask again;
For nothing can be ill, if she be well.

Bal. Then she is well, and nothing can be ill;

Her body sleeps in Capel's monument,
And her immortal part with angels lives;
I saw her laid low in her kindred's vault,
And presently took post to tell it you:
O pardon me for bringing these ill news,
Since you did leave it for my office, Sir.

Rom. Is it even so? then I defy you, stars!—
Thou know'st my lodging: get me ink and paper,

And hire post-horses; I will hence to-night.

Bal. Pardon me, Sir, I will not leave you thus:

Your looks are pale and wild, and do import
Some misadventure.

Rom. Tush, thou art deceiv'd;
Leave me, and do the thing I bid thee do:
Hast thou no letters to me from the friar?

Bal. No, my good lord.

Rom. No matter: get thee gone,
And hire those horses; I'll be with thee straight.

[Exit BALTHAZAR.]

Well, Juliet, I will lie with thee to-night.

Let's see for means: O mischief, thou art swift

To enter in the thoughts of desperate men!
I do remember an apothecary,—

And hereabouts he dwells,—whom late I noted
In tatter'd weeds, with overwhelming brows,
Culling of simples; ‡ meager were his looks,
Sharp misery had worn him to the bones:
And in his needy shop a tortoise hung,
An alligator stuff'd, and other skins
Of ill-shap'd fishes; and about his shelves

A beggarly account of empty boxes,
Green earthen pots, bladders, and musty seeds,
Remnants of packthread, and old cakes of roses
Were thinly scatter'd, to make up a show.
Noting this penury, to myself I said—
And if a man did need a poison now,
Whose sale is present death in Mantua,
Here lives a caitiff wretch would sell it him.
O this same thought did but forerun my need;

And this same needy man must sell it me.
As I remember, this should be the house:
Being holiday, the beggar's shop is shut.—
What, ho! apothecary!

Enter APOTHECARY.

Ap. Who calls so loud?

Rom. Come hither, man.—I see that thou art poor;

Hold, there is forty ducats: let me have
A dram of poison; such soon-speeding geer *
As will disperse itself through all the veins,
That the life-weary taker may fall dead,
And that the trunk may be discharg'd of
breath

As violently, as hasty powder fir'd
Doth hurry from the fatal cannon's womb.

Ap. Such mortal drugs I have; but Mantua's law

Is death, to any he that utters them.

Rom. Art thou so bare, and full of wretchedness,

And fear'st to die? famine is in thy cheeks,
Need and oppression starveth in thy eyes,

Upon thy back hangs ragged misery,
The world is not thy friend, nor the world's
law:

The world affords no law to make thee rich;
Then be not poor but break it, and take
this.

Ap. My poverty, but not my will, consents.

Rom. I pay thy poverty, and not thy will.

Ap. Put this in any liquid thing you will.
And drink it off; and, if you had the strength
Of twenty men, it would despatch you straight.

Rom. There is thy gold: worse poison to men's souls,
Doing more murders in this loathsome world,
Than these poor compounds that thou may'st
not sell:

I sell thee poison, thou hast sold me none.
Farewell; buy food and get thyself in flesh.—
Come, cordial, and not poison; go with me
To Juliet's grave, for there must I use thee.

[Exeunt.]

SCENE II.—Friar LAURENCE's Cell.

Enter Friar JOHN.

John. Holy Franciscan friar! brother, ho!

Enter Friar LAURENCE.

Law. This same should be the voice of friar John.—

Welcome from Mantua: What says Romeo?
Or, if his mind be writ, give me his letter.

John. Going to find a barefoot brother out,
One of our order to associate me,
Here in this city visiting the sick,
And finding him, the searchers of the town,
Suspecting that we both were in a house
Where the infectious pestilence did reign, Seal'd up the doors, and would not let us
forth;

So that my speed to Mantua there was stay'd.

Law. Who bare my letter then to Romeo?

John. I could not send it,—here it is
again,—

* This act is now introduced by a solemn dirge, and a funeral service

† I. e. Love.

‡ Herbs.

Nor get a messenger to bring it thee,
So fearful were they of infection.

Lau. Unhappy fortune! by my brotherhood,
The letter was not nice,* but full of charge,
Of dear import; and the neglecting it
May do much danger: Friar John, go hence;
Get me an iron crow, and bring it straight
Unto my cell.

John. Brother, I'll go and bring't thee. [Exit.]

Lau. Now must I to the monument alone;
Within this three hours will fair Juliet wake;
She will beshrew me much, that Romeo
Hath had no notice of these accidents:
But I will write again to Mantua,
And keep her at my cell till Romeo come;
Poor living corse, clos'd in a dead man's tomb!
[Exit.]

SCENE III.—A Church-Yard; in it, a Monument belonging to the CAPULETS.

Enter PARIS, and his PAGE bearing Flowers and a Torch.

Par. Give me thy torch, boy: Hence and stand aloof;—
Yet put it out, for I would not be seen.
Under yon yew-trees lay thee all along,
Holding thine ear close to the hollow ground;
So shall no foot upon the church-yard tread,
(Being loose, unfirm, with digging up of graves,)
But thou shalt hear it: whistle thou to me,
As signal that thou hear'st something approach.
Give me those flowers. Do as I bid thee, go.

Page. I am almost afraid to stand alone
Here in the church-yard; yet I will adventure.

Par. Sweet flower, with flowers I strew thy bridal bed:
Sweet tomb, that in thy circuit dost contain
The perfect model of eternity;
Fair Juliet, that with angels dost remain,
Accept this latest favour at my hands;
That living honour'd thee, and, being dead,
With funeral praises do adorn thy tomb!
[The boy whistles.]

The boy gives warning, something doth approach.

What cursed foot wanders this way to-night,
To cross my obsequies, and true-love's rites?
What, with a torch!—muffle me, night, a while.
[Retires.]

Enter ROMEO and BALTHAZAR with a Torch, Mattock, &c.

Rom. Give me that mattock, and the wrenching iron.
Hold, take this letter; early in the morning
See thou deliver it to my lord and father.
Give me the light: Upon thy life I charge thee,
Whate'er thou hear'st or seest, stand all aloof,
And do not interrupt me in my course.
Why I descend into this bed of death,
Is partly, to behold my lady's face:
But, chiefly, to take hence from her dead finger
A precious ring; a ring that I must use
In dear employment:† therefore hence, be-
But if thou, jealous, dost return to pry [gone:—
In what I further shall intend to do,
By heaven, I will tear thee joint by joint,
And strew this hungry church-yard with thy limbs:

The time and my intents are savage-wild;
More fierce, and more inexorable far,
Than empty tigers, or the roaring sea.

Bal. I will be gone, Sir, and not trouble you.

Rom. So shalt thou show me friendship.—
Take thou that:

Live and be prosperous, and farewell, good fellow.

Bal. For all this same, I'll hide me hereabout;

* I. e. On a trivial or idle subject.
† I. e. Action of importance.

His looks I fear, and his intents I doubt.

[Retires.]
Rom. Thou detestable maw, thou womb of death

Gorg'd with the dearest morsel of the earth,
Thus I enforce thy rotten jaws to open.

[Breaking open the Door of the Monument.]
And, in despite, I'll cram thee with more food!

Par. This is that banish'd haughty Montague,
That murder'd my love's cousin;—with which grief,

It is supposed the fair creature died,—
And here is come to do some villanous shame
To the dead bodies: I will apprehend him.—
[Advances.]

Stop thy unhallow'd toll, vile Montague;
Can vengeance be pursu'd farther than death?
Condemned villain, I do apprehend thee:
Obey, and go with me; for thou must die.

Rom. I must, indeed; and therefore came I hither.—

Good gentle youth, tempt not a desperate man,
Fly hence and leave me;—think upon these gone;

Let them affright thee.—I beseech thee, youth,
Heap not another sin upon my head,
By urging me to fury:—O be gone!
By heaven, I love thee better than myself:
For I come hither arm'd against myself:
Stay not, begone;—live, and hereafter say—
A madman's mercy bade thee run away.

Par. I do defy thy conjurations,*
And do attach thee as a felon here.

Rom. Wilt thou provoke me? then have at thee, boy.
[They fight.]

Page. O lord! they fight: I will go call the watch.
[Exit PAGE.]

Par. O I am slain! [Falls.—] If thou be merciful,

Open the tomb, lay me with Juliet. [Dies.]
Rom. In faith, I will:—Let me peruse this face;—

Mercutio's kinsman, noble county Paris:—
What said my man, when my betossed soul
Did not attend him as we rode? I think,
He told me Paris should have married Juliet:
Said he not so? or did I dream it so?
Or am I mad, hearing him talk of Juliet,
To think it was so?—O give me thy hand,
One writ with me in sour misfortune's book!
I'll bury thee in a triumphant grave,—
A grave? O no; a lantern,† slaughter'd youth,
For here lies Juliet, and her beauty makes
This vault a feasting presence‡ full of light.
Death, lie thou there, by a dead man interr'd.

[Laying PARIS in the Monument.]
How oft when men are at the point of death
Have they been merry? which their keepers call

A lightning before death: Oh! how may I
Call this a lightning?—O my love! my wife!
Death, that hath suck'd the honey of thy breath,
Hath had no power yet upon thy beauty:
Thou art not conquer'd; beauty's ensign yet
Is crimson in thy lips, and in thy cheeks,
And death's pale flag is not advanced there.—
Tybalt, liest thou there in thy bloody sheet?
Oh! what more favour can I do to thee,
Than with that hand that cut thy youth in twain,

To sunder his that was thine enemy?
Forgive me, cousin!—Ah! dear Juliet,
Why art thou yet so fair? Shall I believe
That unsubstantial Death is amorous;
And that the lean abhorred monster keeps
Thee here in dark to be his paramour?
For fear of that, I will still stay with thee;
And never from this palace of dim night
Depart again; here, here will I remain
With worms that are thy chambermaids; O here

* I refuse to do as thou conjured me to do, i. e. depart.
† The allusion is to a louvre or turret full of windows by means of which ancient halls, &c. are illuminated.
‡ Presence chamber.

Will I set up my everlasting rest ;
And shake the yoke of inauspicious stars
From this world-wearied flesh.—Eyes, look your last !

Arms, take your last embrace ! and lips, O you
The doors of breath, seal with a righteous kiss
A dateless bargain to engrossing death !—
Come, bitter conduct, * come, unseemly guide !
Thou desperate pilot, now at once run on
The dashing rocks thy sea-sick weary bark !
Here's to my love !—[Drinks.] O true apothecary !

Thy drugs are quick.—Thus with a kiss I die.
[Dies.]

Enter at the other end of the Church-Yard, Friar LAURENCE, with a Lantern, Crow, and Spade.

Fri. Saint Francis be my speed ! how oft to-
night
Have my old feet stumbled at graves ?—Who's
there ?

Who is it that consorts, so late, the dead ?

Bal. Here's one, a friend, and one that knows you well.

Fri. Bliss be upon you ! Tell me, good my friend,
What torch is yond', that vainly lends his light
To grubs and eyeless skulls ? as I discern,
It burneth in the Capels' monument.

Bal. It doth so, holy Sir ; and there's my
master,
One that you love.

Fri. Who is it ?

Bal. Romeo.

Fri. How long hath he been there ?

Bal. Full half an hour.

Fri. Go with me to the vault.

Bal. I dare not, Sir :

My master knows not, but I am gone hence ;
And fearfully did menace me with death,
If I did stay to look on his intents.

Fri. Stay then, I'll go alone :—Fear comes upon me :

O much I fear some ill unlucky thing.

Bal. As I did sleep under this yew-tree here,
I dreamt my master and another fought,
And that my master slew him.

Fri. Romeo ? [Advances.]
Alack, alack, what blood is this, which stains
The stony entrance of this sepulchre ?—
What mean these masterless and gory swords
To lie discolour'd by this place of peace ?

[Enters the Monument.]
Romeo ! oh ! pale !—Who else ? what, Paris
too ?

And steep'd in blood !—Ah ! what an unkind hour
Is guilty of this lamentable chance !—
The lady stirs. [JULIET wakes and stirs.]

Jul. O comfortable friar ! where's my lord ?
I do remember well where I should be,
And there I am :—Where is my Romeo ?

[Noise within.]
Fri. I hear some noise.—Lady, come from that nest

Of death, contagion, and unnatural sleep ;
A greater power than we can contradict
Hath thwarted our intents ; come, come away ;
Thy husband in thy bosom there lies dead ;
And Paris too :—come, I'll dispose of thee
Among a sisterhood of holy nuns :
Stay not to question, for the watch is coming ;
Come, go, good Juliet,—[Noise again.] I dare stay no longer. [Exit.]

Jul. Go, get thee hence, for I will not
away,—

What's here ? a cup, clos'd in my true love's
hand ?

Poison, I see, hath been his timeless end :—
O churl ! drink all ; and leave no friendly drop,
To help me after ?—I will kiss thy lips ;
Haply, some poison yet doth hang on them,

To make me die with a restorative.

[Kisses him.]

Thy lips are warm !

1 Watch. [Within.] Lead, boy :—Which
way ?

Jul. Yea, noise ?—then I'll be brief.—O happy dagger !

[Snatching ROMEO's Dagger.]
This is thy sheath ; [Stabs herself.] there rust, and let me die.

[Falls on ROMEO's Body, and dies.]

Enter WATCH, with the PAGE of PARIS.

Page. This is the place ; there, where the torch doth burn.

1 Watch. The ground is bloody ; Search about the church-yard :

Go, some of you, whoever you find, attach.

[Exit some.]

Pitiful sight ; here lies the county slain ;—
And Juliet bleeding ; warm, and newly dead,
Who here hath lain these two days buried.—
Go, tell the prince,—run to the Capulets,— Raise up the Montagues,—some others search ;—

[Exit other WATCHMEN.]
We see the ground whereon these woes do lie ;
But the true ground of all these piteous woes,
We cannot without circumstance descry.

Enter some of the WATCH, with BALTHAZAR.

2 Watch. Here's Romeo's man, we found him in the church-yard.

1 Watch. Hold him in safety, till the prince come hither.

Enter another WATCHMAN, with Friar LAURENCE.

3 Watch. Here is a friar, that trembles, sighs, and weeps :—
We took this mattock and this spade from him,
As he was coming from this church-yard side.

1 Watch. A great suspicion ; Stay the friar
too.

Enter the PRINCE and Attendants.

Prince. What misadventure is so early up,
That calls our person from our morning's rest ?

Enter CAPULET, Lady CAPULET, and others.

Cap. What should it be, that they so shriek abroad ?

La. Cap. The people in the street cry—
Romeo,
Some—Juliet, and some—Paris ; and all run,
With open outcry toward our monument.

Prince. What fear is this, which startles in our ears ?

1 Watch. Sovereign, here lies the county
Paris slain ;
And Romeo dead ; and Juliet, dead before,
Warm and new kill'd.

Prince. Search, seek, and know how this foul murder comes.

1 Watch. Here is a friar, and slaughter'd Romeo's man ;
With instruments upon them, fit to open
These dead men's tombs.

Cap. O heavens ! O wife ! look how our daughter bleeds !
This dagger hath mista'en,—for lo ! his house *
Is empty on the back of Montague,—
And is mis-sheathed in my daughter's bosom.

La. Cap. O me ! this sight of death is as a bell,
That warns my old age to a sepulchre.

Enter MONTAGUE and others.

Prince. Come, Montague ; for thou art early
up,
To see thy son and heir more early down.

Mon. Alas, my liege, my wife is dead to-
night.

Grief of my son's exile hath stopp'd her breath :
What further woe conspires against mine age ?

Prince. Look, and thou shalt see.

Mon. O thou untaught ! what manners is in this,
To press before thy father to a grave ?

Prince. Seal up the mouth of outrage for a while,
'Till we can clear these ambiguities,
And know their spring, their head, their true descent ;

And then will I be general of your woes,
And lead you even to death : Meantime forbear,
And let mischance be slave to patience.—
Bring forth the parties of suspicion.

Fri. I am the greatest, able to do least,
Yet most suspected, as the time and place
Doth make against me, of this direful murder ;

And here I stand, both to impeach and purge
Myself condemned and myself accus'd.

Prince. Then say at once what thou dost know in this.

Fri. I will be brief, for my short date of breath
Is not so long as is a tedious tale.

Romeo, there dead, was husband to that Juliet ;

And she, there dead, that Romeo's faithful wife :

I married them ; and their stolen-marriage-day

Was Tybalt's doomsday, whose untimely death
Banish'd the new-made bridegroom from this city ;

For whom, and not for Tybalt, Juliet plin'd.
You—to remove that siege * of grief from her,—
Betroth'd, and would have married her perforce,

To county Paris :—Then comes she to me ;
And, with wild looks, bid me devise some means

To rid her from this second marriage,
Or, in my cell there would she kill herself.
Then gave I her, so tutor'd by my art,
A sleeping potion ; which so took effect
As I intended, for it wrought on her
The form of death : meantime I writ to Romeo,
That he should hither come as this dire night,
To help to take her from her borrow'd grave,
Being the time the potion's force should cease.

But he which bore my letter, friar John,
Was staid by accident ; and yesternight
Return'd my letter back : Then all alone,
At the prefixed hour of her waking,
Came I to take her from her kindred's vault ;
Meaning to keep her closely at my cell,
Till I conveniently could send to Romeo :
But when I came, (some minute ere the time
Of her awakening,) here untimely lay
The noble Paris, and true Romeo, dead.
She wakes ; and I entreated her come forth,
And bear this work of heaven with patience :
But then a noise did scare me from the tomb ;
And she too desperate, would not go with me,
But (as it seems,) did violence on herself.

* Seal.

All this I know ; and to the marriage
Her nurse is privy : And, if aught in this Miscarried by my fault, let my old life
Be sacrific'd some hour before his time,
Unto the rigour of severest law.

Prince. We still have known thee for a holy man.—

Where's Romeo's man ? what can he say in this ?

Bal. I brought my master news of Juliet's death ;

And then in post he came from Mantua,
To this same place, to this same monument.
This letter he early bid me give his father ;
And threaten'd me with death, going in the vault,

If I departed not, and left him there.

Prince. Give me the letter, I will look on it.—

Where is the county's page, that rais'd the watch ?—

Sirrah, what made your master in this place ?

Page. He came with flowers to strew his lady's grave ;

And bid me stand aloof, and so I did :
Anon, comes one with light to ope the tomb ;
And, by and by, my master drew on him ;
And then I ran away to call the watch.

Prince. This letter doth make good the friar's words,

Their course of love, the tidings of her death :
And here he writes—that he did buy a poison
Of a poor 'pothecary, and therewithal
Came to this vault to die, and lie with Juliet.—

Where be these enemies ? Capulet ! Montague !—

See what a scourge is laid upon your hate,
That heaven finds means to kill your joys with love !

And I, for winking at your discords too,
Have lost a brace of kinsmen : * all are punish'd.

Cap. O brother Montague, give me thy hand :

This is my daughter's jointure, for no more
Can I demand.

Mon. But I can give thee more :
For I will raise her statue in pure gold ;
That, while Verona by that name is known,
There shall no figure at such rate be set,
As that of true and faithful Juliet.

Cap. As rich shall Romeo by his lady lie ;
Poor sacrifices of our enmity !

Prince. A glooming peace this morning with it brings ;

The sun for sorrow will not show his head :
Go hence, to have more talk of these sad things ;

Some shall be pardon'd, and some punished : †

For never was a story of more woe,
Than this of Juliet and her Romeo.

[Exeunt.]

* Mercutio and Paris.

† In the original story (to which this line refers) the prince tortures and hangs the apothecary ; banishes the old nurse ; pardons Romeo's servant ; and allows Friar Laurence to retire to a hermitage in the vicinity of Verona.

AS a piece for dramatic exhibition, this tragedy has been essentially improved by the celebrated Mr. Garrick : not only in the style and language, by which the jingle and quibble of many of its passages are expunged, but also by the transposition of several scenes, and by the following essential deviation from the original plot : As amended by him, and represented at present, no mention is made of Rosaline, and the sudden and unnatural change of Romeo's affection from her to Juliet is thereby avoided : Juliet also revives from her death-like slumber before the potion has fully operated upon the frame of Romeo, and he dies in her arms, after attempting to carry her from the tomb. By this most judicious alteration, the pathos of the scene is heightened to its highest pitch ; for nothing can be more melting than the incidents and expressions which so highly-wrought a catastrophe affords. In the Italian story upon which the play is founded, such was actually the development of the plot ; but Shakspeare had certainly recourse to the English or French translation ; in which this addition to the tale was upon some account omitted.

Cymbeline.

Jack. 'Tis mine; and this will witness outwardly,
As strongly as the conscience does within,
To the madding of her lord.

Jms. Away! I do condemn wine cars, that have
So long attended thee.

CYMBELINE.

LITERARY AND HISTORICAL NOTICE.

MALONE supposes that Shakspeare wrote Cymbeline in the year 1605. The main incidents upon which the plot turns, occur in a novel of Boccaccio's; but our poet obtained them in a different shape, from an old story-book entitled Westward for Smelts. Cymbeline, who gives name to the play, but is a cipher of royalty, began to reign over Britain in the 19th year of Augustus Cæsar. He filled the throne during thirty-five years, leaving two sons, Guiderius and Arviragus. The play commences in the 16th year of the Christian era, which was the 24th year of Cymbeline's reign, and the 42nd of Augustus's. The subject of the piece is disjointed and much too diffuse: it exhibits some monstrous breaches of dramatic unity, and several very languid and make-shift scenes. But the part of Imogen is most delicately and delightfully drawn; her ideas are remarkably luxuriant, yet restrained; and the natural warmth of her affections is, in many instances, most beautifully expressed. Cloten is an incongruous animal, with some strong points about him; and a fine contrast to Posthumus, who is sketched with great judgment, feeling, and consistency. The Queen is an unfinished character, desirous of producing mischief, but possessing neither energy nor ability to accomplish her schemes; and though Iachimo's cunning is portrayed with uncommon skill in his first attempt upon Imogen's virtue, yet his subsequent penitence and candour (however conducive to the moral) are not consistent with the usual hardihood of so thorough-paced a villain. Notwithstanding its fine passages and affecting incidents, this play was lost to the stage until Garrick undertook to revise it, by the abridgment of some scenes, and the transposition of others, it was reduced within the compass of a night's performance; and has since continued a periodical favourite with the public. Dr. Johnson decides the merits of this historical drama in the following summary manner: "To remark the folly of the fiction, the absurdity of the conduct, the confusion of the names and manners of different times, and the impossibility of the events in any system of life, were to waste criticism upon unresisting imbecility, upon faults too evident for detection, and too gross for aggravation." No one can deny the elegance or point of the Doctor's critical sentences, nor their murderous efficiency when meant to despatch an adversary at a single blow; but the greatest fault of our poet consists in his having christened some characters of the first century with names which belonged to the fifteenth; and in his having seasoned their antique Roman honesty with a smattering of modern Italian villany.

ACT I.

SCENE I.—Britain.—The Garden behind CYMBELINE'S Palace.

Enter two GENTLEMEN.

1 Gent. You do not meet a man, but frowns: our bloods *

No more obey the heavens, than our courtiers; still seem, as does the king's. †

2 Gent. But what's the matter?

* Inclinations.

† Many pages of controversy have been wasted upon this passage, which is very obscure, and must ever remain so.

1 Gent. His daughter, and the heir of his kingdom, whom He purpos'd to his wife's sole son, (a widow, That late he married,) hath referr'd herself Unto a poor but worthy gentleman: She's wedded; Her husband banish'd; she imprison'd: all is outward sorrow; though, I think, the king Be touch'd at very heart.

2 Gent. None but the king?

1 Gent. He, that hath lost her, too: so is the queen, [tier, That most desir'd the match: But not a courtier. Although they wear their faces to the bent Of the king's looks, hath a heart that is not Glad at the thing they scowl at.

2 Gent. And why so?

1 Gent. He that hath miss'd the princess, is a thing

Too bad for bad report: and he that hath her, (I mean, that married her, alack, good man! And therefore banish'd) is a creature such As, to seek through the regions of the earth For one his like, there would be something failing

In him that should compare. I do not think So fair an outward, and such stuff within, Endows a man but he.

2 Gent. You speak him far.*

1 Gent. I do extend him, Sir, within himself; Crush him together, rather than unfold His measure duly.

2 Gent. What's his name, and birth?

1 Gent. I cannot delve him to the root: His father

Was call'd Sicilius, who did join his honour Against the Romans, with Cassibelan; But had his titles by Tennantius,† whom He serv'd with glory and admir'd success; So gain'd the sur-addition, Leonatus: And had, besides this gentleman in question, Two other sons, who, in the wars o'the time, Died with their swords in hand; for which their father

(Then old and fond of issue,) took such sorrow, That he quit being; and his gentle lady, Big of this gentleman, our theme, deceas'd As he was born. The king, he takes the babe To his protection; calls him Posthumus; Breeds him, and makes him of his bed-chamber: Puts him to all the learnings that his time Could make him the receiver of; which he took,

As we do air, fast as 'twas minister'd; and In his spring became a harvest: Liv'd in court, (Which rare it is to do,) most prais'd, most lov'd:‡

A sample to the youngest; to the more ma- A glass that seated§ them; and to the graver, A child that guided dotards: to his mistress, For whom he now is banish'd,—her own price Proclaims how she esteem'd him and his virtue; By her election may be truly read, What kind of man he is.

2 Gent. I honour him

Even out of your report. But, pray you, tell me, Is she sole child to the king?

1 Gent. His only child.

He had two sons, (if this be worth your hearing, Mark it,) the eldest of them at three years old, I'the swathing clothes the other, from their nursery

Were stolen: and, to this hour, no guess in Which way they went.

2 Gent. How long is this ago?

1 Gent. Some twenty years.

2 Gent. That a king's children should be so convey'd!

So slackly guarded! And the search so slow, That could not trace them!

1 Gent. Howsoever 'tis strange, Or that the negligence may well be laugh'd at, Yet is it true, Sir.

2 Gent. I do well believe you.

1 Gent. We must forbear: Here come the queen and princess. Exeunt.

SCENE II.—The same.

Enter the QUEEN, POSTHUMUS, and IMOGEN.

Queen. No, be assur'd, you shall not find me, daughter, After the slander of most step-mothers, Evil-ey'd unto you: you are my prisoner, but Your jailer shall deliver you the keys [mus, That lock up your restraint. For you, Posthu-

* You are lavish in your encomiums.

† The father of Cymbeline.

‡ To be at once loved and praised, is truly rare.

§ Formed their manners.

So soon as I can win the offended king, I will be known your advocate: marry, yet The fire of rage is in him; and 'twere good You lean'd unto his sentence, with what patience

Your wisdom may inform you.

Post. Please your highness, I will from hence to-day.

Queen. You know the peril:— I'll fetch a turn about the garden, pitying The pangs of barr'd affections; though the king Hath charg'd you should not speak together. [Exit QUEEN.]

Imo. O

Dissembling courtesy! How fine this tyrant Can tickle where she wounds!—My dearest husband,

I something fear my father's wrath; but no— (Always reserv'd my holy duty,) what His rage can do on me: You must be gone; And I shall here abide the hourly shot Of angry eyes; nor comforted to live, But that there is this jewel in this world, That I may see again.

Post. My queen! my mistress! O lady, weep no more; lest I give cause To be suspected of more tenderness Than doth become a man! I will remain The loyal'st husband that did e'er plight troth. My residence in Rome at one Philario's; Who to my father was a friend, to me Known but by letter: thither write, my queen, And with mine eyes I'll drink the words you send, Though ink be made of gall.

Re-enter QUEEN.

Queen. Be brief, I pray you: If the king come, I shall incur I know not How much of his displeasure:—Yet I'll move him

To walk this way: I never do him wrong, But he does buy my injuries, to be friends; Pays dear for my offences. [Exit.]

Post. Should we be taking leave As long a term as yet we have to live, The loathness to depart would grow: Adieu!

Imo. Nay, stay a little: Were you but riding forth to air yourself, Such parting were too petty. Look here, love; This diamond was my mother's: take it, heart; But keep it till you woo another wife, When Imogen is dead.

Post. How! how! another?— You gentle gods give me but this I have, And sear up* my embracements from a next With bonds of death!—Remain thou here

While sense† can keep it on! And sweetest, fairest,

As I my poor self did exchange for you, To your so infinite loss; so, in our trifles I still win of you: For my sake, wear this; It is a manacle of love: I'll place it Upon this fairest prisoner.

[Putting a Bracelet on her Arm.]

Imo. O the gods! When shall we see again?

Enter CYMBELINE and LORDS.

Post. Alack, the king!

Cym. Thou basest thing, avoid! hence, from my sight!

If, after this command, thou fraught‡ the court With thy unworthiness, thou diest: Away! Thou art poison to my blood.

Post. The gods protect you! And bless the good remainders of the court! I am gone. [Exit]

Imo. There cannot be a plach in death More sharp than this is.

Cym. O disloyal thing,

* Close up.

† Sensation.

‡ Fl.

That should'st repair my youth ; thou heapest
A year's age on me !

Imo. I beseech you, Sir,
Harm not yourself with your vexation ; I Am senseless of your wrath ; a touch more rage *

Subdues all pangs, all fears.

Cym. Past grace ? obedience

Imo. Past hope, and in despair : that way, past grace.

Cym. That might'st have had the sole son of
my queen !

Imo. O bless'd, that I might not ! I chose an eagle,
And did avoid a puttock. †

Cym. Thou took'st a beggar ; would'st have made my throne

A seat for baseness.

Imo. No ; I rather added
A lustre to it.

Cym. O thou vile one !

Imo. Sir,
It is your fault that I have lov'd Posthumus :
You bred him as my playfellow ; and he is
A man, worth any woman ; overbuys me
Almost the sum he pays.

Cym. What !—art thou mad ?

Imo. Almost, Sir : Heaven restore me !—
'Would I were
A neat-herd's ‡ daughter ! and my Leonatus
Our neighbour shepherd's son !

Re-enter QUEEN.

Cym. Thou foolish thing !—
They were again together : you have done
Not after our command. Away with her,
And pen her up. [To the QUEEN.]

QUEEN. 'Beseech your patience :—Peace,
Dear lady daughter, peace ;—Sweet sovereign,
Leave us to ourselves ; and make yourself some comfort
Out of your best advice.

Cym. Nay, let her languish
A drop of blood a day ; and, being aged,
Die of this folly !

[Exit.]

Enter PISANIO.

QUEEN. Fle !—you must give way :
Here is your servant.—How now, Sir ? What news ?

Pis. My lord, your son drew on my master.

QUEEN. Ha !
No harm, I trust, is done ?

Pis. There might have been,
But that my master rather play'd than fought,
And had no help of anger : they were parted
By gentlemen at hand.

QUEEN. I am very glad on't.

Imo. Your son's my father's friend ; he takes his part.—

To draw upon an exile !—O brave Sir !—
I would they were in Afric both together ;
Myself by with a needle, that I might prick
The goer back.—Why came you from your
master ?

Pis. On his command : He would not suffer
me

To bring him to the haven : left these notes
Of what commands I should be subject to,
When it pleas'd you to employ me.

QUEEN. This hath been
Your faithful servant : I dare lay mine honour,
He will remain so.

Pis. I humbly thank your highness.

QUEEN. Pray, walk awhile.

Imo. About some half hour hence,
I pray you speak with me : you shall, at least,
Go see my lord aboard : for this time leave
me.

[Exit.]

* A more exquisite feeling.

† Cattle-keeper.

‡ A kite.

SCENE III.—A Public Place.

Enter CLOTEN, and two Lords.

1 Lord. Sir, I would advise you to shift a shirt ; the violence of action hath made you reek as a sacrifice : Where air comes out, air comes in : there's none abroad so wholesome as that you vent.

Clo. If my shirt were bloody, then to shift it —Have I hurt him ?

2 Lord. No, faith ; not so much as his patience. [Aside.]

1 Lord. Hurt him ? his body's a passable carcase, if he be not hurt : it is a thoroughfare for steel if it be not hurt.

2 Lord. His steel was in debt ; it went o'the backside the town. [Aside.]

Clo. The villain would not stand me.

2 Lord. No ; but he fled forward still, toward your face. [Aside.]

1 Lord. Stand you ! You had land enough of your own : but he added to your having ; gave you some ground.

2 Lord. As many inches as you have oceans :
Puppies ! [Aside.]

Clo. I would, they had not come between us.

2 Lord. So would I, till you had measured how long a fool you were upon the ground. [Aside.]

Clo. And that she should love this fellow, and refuse me !

2 Lord. If it be a sin to make a true election, she is damned. [Aside.]

1 Lord. Sir, as I told you always, her beauty and her brain go not together : * She's a good sign, but I have seen small reflection of her wit. †

2 Lord. She shines not upon fools, lest the reflection should hurt her. [Aside.]

Clo. Come, I'll to my chamber : 'Would there had been some hurt done !

2 Lord. I wish not so ; unless it had been the fall of an ass, which is no great hurt. [Aside.]

Clo. You'll go with us ?

1 Lord. I'll attend your lordship.

Clo. Nay, come, let's go together.

2 Lord. Well, my lord. [Exeunt.]

SCENE IV.—A Room in CYMBELINE'S Palace.

Enter IMOGEN and PISANO.

Imo. I would thou grew'st unto the shores o'the haven.

And question'dst every sail : If he should write,
And I not have it, 'twere a paper lost
As offered mercy is. What was the last
That he spake to thee ?

Pis. 'Twas, His queen, his queen !

Imo. Then wav'd his handkerchief ?

Pis. And kiss'd it, madam.

Imo. Senseless linen ! happier therein than
And that was all ? [Exit.]

Pis. No, madam ; for so long
As he could make me with this eye or ear
Distinguish him from others, he did keep
The deck, with glove, or hat, or handkerchief,
Still waving, as the fits and starts of his mind
Could best express how slow his soul sail'd on,
How swift his ship.

Imo. Thou should'st have made him
As little as a crow, or less, ere left
To after-eye him.

Pis. Madam, so I did.

Imo. I would have broke mine eye-strings ;
crack'd them, but

To look upon him ; till the diminution
Of space had pointed him sharp as my needle :
Nay, follow'd him, till he had melted from
The smallness of a gnat to air ; and then

* Her beauty and her sense are not equal.

† Anciently a most every sign had some attempt at a witticism underneath it.

Have turn'd mine eye, and wept.—But, good Pisanio,

When shall we hear from him?

Pis. Be assur'd, madam,
With his next vantage.*

Imo. I did not take my leave of him, but had most pretty things to say: ere I could tell him, how I would think on him, at certain hours, such thoughts, and such; or I could make him swear

The shes of Italy should not betray
Mine interest, and his honour; or have charg'd him,

At the sixth hour of morn, at noon, at mid-
To encounter me with orisons,† for then I am in heaven for him: or ere I could give him that parting kiss, which I had set betwixt two charming words, comes in my father,

And, like the tyrannous breathing of the north,
Shakes all our buds from growing.

Enter a LADY.

Lady. The queen, madam,
Desires your highness' company.

Imo. Those things I bid you do, get them despatch'd.—

I will attend the queen.

Pis. Madam, I shall.

[Exeunt.]

SCENE V.—Rome.—An Apartment in PHILARIO'S House.

Enter PHILARIO, IACHIMO, a FRENCHMAN, a DUTCHMAN, and a SPANIARD.†

Iach. Believe it, Sir, I have seen him in Britain: he was then of a crescent note,§ expected to prove so worthy, as since he hath been allowed the name of: but I could then have looked on him without the help of admiration; though the catalogue of his endowments had been tabled by his side, and I to peruse him by items.

Phi. You speak of him when he was less furnished,|| than now he is, with that which makes him both without and within.

French. I have seen him in France: we had very many there, could behold the sun with as firm eyes as he.

Iach. This matter of marrying his king's daughter, (wherein he must be weighed, rather by her value than his own,) words him, I doubt not, a great deal from the matter.

French. And then his banishment:—

Iach. Ay, and the approbation of those that weep this lamentable divorce, under her colours, are wonderfully to extend¶ him: be it but to fortify her judgment, which else an easy battery might lay flat, for taking a beggar without more quality. But how comes it, he is to sojourn with you? How creeps acquaintance?

Phi. His father and I were soldiers together; to whom I have been often bound for no less than my life:—

Enter POSTHUMUS.

Here comes the Briton: Let him be so entertained amongst you, as suits, with gentlemen of your knowing, to a stranger of quality.—I beseech you all, be better known to this gentleman; whom I commend to you as a noble friend of mine: How worthy he is, I will leave to appear hereafter, rather than story him in his own hearing.

French. Sir, we have known together in Orleans.

Post. Since when I have been debtor to you

* Opportunity.

† Meet me with reciprocal prayers.
‡ Shakespeare has peopled Rome with modern Italians! Mynheer and the Don are mute characters.
§ Increasing in fame.
|| Praise him.

for courtesies, which I will be ever to pay, and yet pay still.

French. Sir, you o'er-rate my poor kindness: I was glad I did atone* my countryman and you; it had been pity you should have been put together with so mortal a purpose as then each bore, upon importance of so slight and trivial a nature.

Post. By your pardon, Sir, I was then a young traveller: rather shunned to go even with what I heard, than in my every action to be guided by others' experiences: but, upon my mended judgment, (if I offend not to say it is mended,) my quarrel was not altogether slight.

French. Faith, yes, to be put to the arbitrement of swords; and by such two, that would, by all likelihood, have confounded† one the other, or have fallen both.

Iach. Can we, with manners, ask what was the difference?

French. Safely, I think: 'twas a contention in public, which may, without contradiction, suffer the report. It was much like an argument that fell out last night, where each of us fell in praise of our country mistresses: This gentleman at that time vouching, (and upon warrant of bloody affirmation,) his to be more fair, virtuous, wise, chaste, constant-qualified, and less attemptible, than any the rarest of our ladies in France.

Iach. That lady is not now living; or this gentleman's opinion by this worn out.

Post. She holds her virtue still, and I my mind.

Iach. You must not so far prefer her 'fore our's of Italy.

Post. Being so far provoked as I was in France, I would abate her nothing: though I profess myself her adorer, not her friend.

Iach. As fair and as good (a kind of hand-in-hand comparison,) had been something too fair and too good for any lady in Britain. If she went before others I have seen, as that diamond of your's outlustres many I have beheld, I could not but believe she excelled many: but I have not seen the most precious diamond that is, nor you the lady.

Post. I praised her, as I rated her: so do I my stone.

Iach. What do you esteem it at?

Post. More than the world enjoys.

Iach. Either your unparagoned mistress is dead, or she's outpriz'd by a trifle.

Post. You are mistaken: the one may be sold, or given; if there were wealth enough for the purchase, or merit for the gift: the other is not a thing for sale, and only the gift of the gods.

Iach. Which the gods have given you?

Post. Which by their graces, I will keep.

Iach. You may wear her in title your's: but, you know, strange sowl light upon neighbouring ponds. Your ring may be stolen too: so, of your brace of unprizable estimations, the one is but frail, and the other casual; a cunning thief, or a that-way accomplished courtier, would hazard the winning both of first and last.

Post. Your Italy contains none so accomplished a courtier, to convince‡ the honour of my mistress; if, in the holding or loss of that, you term her frail. I do nothing doubt you have store of thieves; notwithstanding I fear not my ring.

Phi. Let us leave here, gentlemen.

Post. Sir, with all heart. This worthy squire, I thank him, makes no stranger of me; we are familiar at first.

Iach. With five times so much conversation, I should get ground of your fair mistress; make

* Reconcile.

† Destroyed.

‡ Overcome.

her go back, even to the yielding; had I admittance, and opportunity to friend.

Post. No, no.

Iach. I dare, thereon, pawn the moiety of my estate to your ring; which, in my opinion, e'er-values it something; But I make my wager rather against your confidence, than her reputation: and, to bar your offence herein too, I dare attempt it against any lady in the world.

Post. You are a great deal abused* in too bold a persuasion; and I doubt not you sustain what you're worthy of, by your attempt.

Iach. What's that?

Post. A repulse: Though your attempt, as you call it, deserve more—a punishment too.

Phi. Gentlemen, enough of this: It came in too suddenly; let it die as it was born, and, I pray you, be better acquainted.

Iach. 'Would I had put my estate and my neighbour's on the approbation† of what I have spoke.

Post. What lady would you choose to assail?

Iach. Your's; whom in constancy, you think, stands so safe. I will lay you ten thousand ducats to your ring, that, commend me to the court where your lady is, with no more advantage than the opportunity of a second conference, and I will bring from thence that honour of her's, which you imagine so reserved.

Post. I will wage against your gold, gold to it: my ring I hold dear as my finger; 'tis part of it.

Iach. You are a friend,‡ and therein the wiser. If you buy ladies' flesh at a million a dram, you cannot preserve it from tainting: But, I see, you have some religion in you, that you fear.

Post. This is but a custom in your tongue; you bear a graver purpose, I hope.

Iach. I am the master of my speeches; and would undergo what's spoken, I swear.

Post. Will you?—I shall but lend my diamond till your return:—Let there be covenants drawn between us: My mistress exceeds in goodness the hugeness of your unworthy thinking: I dare you to this match: here's my ring.

Phi. I will have it no lay.

Iach. By the gods it is one:—If I bring you no sufficient testimony that I have enjoyed the dearest bodily part of your mistress, my ten thousand ducats are your's; so is your diamond too. If I come off, and leave her in such honour as you have trust in, she your jewel, this your jewel, and my gold are your's:—provided I have your commendation,§ for my more free entertainment.

Post. I embrace these conditions; let us have articles betwixt us:—only, thus far you shall answer. If you make your voyage upon her, and give me directly to understand you have prevailed, I am no further your enemy, she is not worth our debate: If she remain unseated, (you not making it appear otherwise,) for your ill opinion, and the assault you have made to her chastity, you shall answer me with your sword.

Iach. Your hand; a covenant: We will have these things set down by lawful counsel, and straight away for Britain, lest the bargain should catch cold, and starve: I will fetch my gold, and have two wagers recorded.

Post. Agreed.

[Exeunt POSTHUMUS and IACHIMO.]

French. Will this hold, think you?

Phi. Signior Iachimo will not from it. Pray, let us follow 'em.

[Exeunt.]

SCENE VI.—Britain.—A Room in CYMBELINE'S Palace.

Enter QUEEN, LADIES, and CORNELIUS.

Queen. Whiles yet the dew's on ground, gather those flowers;

Make haste: Who has the note of them?

Lady. I, madam.

Queen. Despatch.—

[Exeunt LADIES.]

Now, master doctor; have you brought those drugs?

Cor. Pleaseth your highness, ay: here they are, madam:

[Presenting a small Box.]

But I beseech your grace, (without offence; My conscience bids me ask;) wherefore you have

Commanded of me these most poisonous compounds,

Which are the movers of a languishing death; But, though slow, deadly?

Queen. I do wonder, doctor, Thou ask'st me such a question: Have I not been Thy pupil long? Hast thou not learn'd me how To make perfumes? distil? preserve? 'ca, so, That our great king himself doth woo me oft For my confections? Having thus far proceeded,

(Unless thou think'st me devilish,) is't not meet That I did amplify my judgment in Other conclusions? I will try the forces Of these thy compounds on such creatures as We count not worth the hanging, (but none human,)

To try the vigour of them, and apply Allayments to their act; and by them gather Their several virtues and effects.

Cor. Your highness

Shall from this practice but make hard your heart:

Besides, the seeing these effects will be Both noisome and infectious.

Queen. O content thee.—

Enter PISANIO.

Here comes a flattering rascal; upon him Will I first work: he's for his master,

[Aside.]

And enemy to my son.—How now, Pisanio?—

Doctor, your service for this time is ended;

Take your own way.

Cor. I do suspect you, madam;

But you shall do no harm.

[Aside.]

Queen. Hark thee, a word.— [To PISANIO.]

Cor. [Aside.] I do not like her. She doth think she has

Strange lingering poisons: I do know her spirit, And will not trust one of her malice with A drug of such damn'd nature: Those, she has, Will stupify and dull the sense awhile: Which first, perchance, she'll prove on cats and dogs;

Then afterward up higher; but there is No danger in what show of death it makes, More than the locking up the spirits a time, To be more fresh, reviving. She is fool'd With a most false effect; and I the truer, So to be false with her.

Queen. No further service, doctor, Until I send for thee.

Cor. I humbly take my leave.

[Exit.]

Queen. Weeps she still, say'st thou? Dost thou think, in time

She will not quench;† and let instructions enter Where folly now possesses? Do thou work; When thou shalt bring me word she loves my son,

I'll tell thee, on the instant, thou art then As great as is thy master: greater; for His fortunes all lie speechless, and his name Is at last gasp: Return he cannot, nor Continue where he is: to shift his being,‡ Is to exchange one misery with another; And every day that comes, comes to decay A day's work in him: What shalt thou expect, To be depend on a thing that leans?

* Deceiv'd.

† Proof.

‡ A lover.

§ Recommendation.

* Experiments.

† Grew cool.

‡ To change his abode.

Who cannot be new built ; nor has no friends,
[The QUEEN drops a box : PISANIO takes it up.]

So much as but to prop him ?—Thou tak'st up Thou know'st not what ; but take it for thy labour :

It is a thing I made, which hath the king
 Five times redeem'd from death : I do not
 know

What is more cordial :—Nay, I pr'ythee, take it ;
 It is an earnest of a further good
 That I mean to thee. Tell thy mistress how
 The case stands with her ; do't, as from thyself.
 Think what a chance thou changest on ; but
 think

Thou hast thy mistress still ; to boot, my son,
 Who shall take notice of thee : I'll move the
 To any shape of thy preferment, such [king]
 As thou'lt desire ; and then myself, I chiefly,
 That set thee on to this desert, am bound
 To load thy merit richly. Call my women :
 Think on my words. [Exit PISA.]—A sly and constant knave ;

Not to be shak'd : the agent for his master ;
 And the remembrancer of her, to hold
 The hand fast to her lord.—I have given him
 that,

Which, if he take, shall quite unpeople her
 Of liegers* for her sweet ; and which she, after,

Except she bend her humour, shall be assur'd

Re-enter PISANIO, and LADIES.

To taste of too.—So, so ;—well done, well done :
 The violets, cowslips, and the primroses,
 Bear to my closet ;—Fare thee well, Pisanio ;
 Think on my words.

[Exeunt QUEEN and LADIES.]

Pis. And shall do :
 But when to my good lord I prove untrue,
 I'll choke myself : there's all I'll do for you.
[Exit.]

SCENE VII.—Another Room in the same.

Enter IMOGEN.

Imo. A father cruel, and a step-dame false ;
 A foolish suitor to a wedded lady, [band !]
 That hath her husband banish'd—O that hus-
 My supreme crown of grief ! and those repeated
 Vexations of it ! Had I been thief-stolen,
 As my two brothers, happy ! but most miserable
 Is the desire that's glorious : Blessed be those,
 How mean soe'er, that have their honest wills,
 Which seasons comfort.—Who may this be ?
 Fle !

Enter PISANIO and IACHIMO.

Pis. Madam, a noble gentleman of Rome
 Comes from my lord with letters.

Iach. Change you, madam ?
 The worthy Leonatus is in safety,
 And greets your highness dearly.

[Presents a Letter.]

Imo. Thanks, good Sir :
 You are kindly welcome.

Iach. All of her, that is out of door, most rich ! [Aside.]

If she be furnish'd with a mind so rare,
 She is alone the Arabian bird ; and I
 Have lost the wager. Boldness be my friend !
 Arm me, audacity, from head to foot !
 Or, like the Parthian, I shall flying fight ;
 Rather, directly fly.

Imo. [Reads.]—*He is one of the noblest note, to whose kindness I am most infinitely tied.
 Reflect upon him accordingly, as you value your truest*

LEONATUS.

So far I read aloud :
 But even the very middle of my heart

Is warm'd by the rest, and takes it thankfully.—
 You are as welcome, worthy Sir, as I
 Have words to bid you ; and shall find it so
 In all that I can do.

Iach. Thanks, fairest lady.—

What ! are men mad ? Hath nature given them
 eyes

To see this vaulted arch, and the rich crop
 Of sea and land, which can distinguish 'twixt
 The fiery orbs above, and the twin'd stones
 Upon the number'd beach ? and can we not Partition make with spectacles so precious 'Twixt fair and foul ?

Imo. What makes your admiration ?

Iach. It cannot be i'the eye ; for apes and monkeys,

'Twixt two such shes, would chatter this way, and Contemn with mews* the other : Nor i'the
 judgment ;

For idiots, in this case of favour, would
 Be wisely definite : Nor i'the appetite ;
 Sluttish, to such neat excellence oppos'd,
 Should make desire vomit emptiness,
 Not so allur'd to feed.

Imo. What is the matter, trow ?

Iach. The cloyed will,
*(That satiate yet unsatisfied desire,
 That tub both fill'd and running,)* ravens first
 The lamb, longs after for the garbage.

Imo. What, dear Sir,

Thus raps you ? Are you well ?

Iach. Thanks, madam ; well :—'Beseech you,
 Sir, desire [To PISANIO.]

My man's abode where I did leave him : he Is strange and peevish. †

Pis. I was going, Sir,

To give him welcome. [Exit PISANIO.]

Imo. Continues well my lord ? His health,
 'beseech you ?

Iach. Well, madam.

Imo. Is he dispos'd to mirth ? I hope he is.

Iach. Exceeding pleasant ; none a stranger
 there

So merry and so gamesome : he is call'd
 The Briton reveller.

Imo. When he was here,

He did incline to sadness ; and oft-times
 Not knowing why.

Iach. I never saw him sad.

There is a Frenchman his companion, one
 An eminent monsieur, that, it seems, much
 loves

A Gallian girl at home : he furnaces
 The thick sighs from him ; whilst the jolly
 Briton

(Your lord, I mean,) laughs from's face lungs, cries, O !

Can my sides hold, to think, that man,—who knows

By history, report, or his own proof,

What woman is, yea, what she cannot choose
 But must be,—will his free hours languish
 for

Assured bondage ?

Imo. Will my lord say so ?

Iach. Ay, madam ! with his eyes in good with laughter.

It is a recreation to be by,
 And hear him mock the Frenchman : But heavens know,

Some men are much to blame.

Imo. Not he, I hope.

Iach. Not he : But yet heaven's bounty towards him might

Be us'd more thankfully. In himself, 'tis
 much ;

In you,—which I count his—beyond all talents,

Whilst I am bound to wonder, I am bound
 To pity too.

Imo. What do you pity, Sir ?

Iach. Two creatures, heartily.

Imo. Am I one, Sir ?

* Ambassadors.

* Making mouths. † Shy and foolish.

You look on me: What wreck discern you in
me,

Deserves your pity?

Iach. Lamentable! What!
To hide me from the radiant sun, and solace
I'the dungeon by a snuff?

Imo. I pray you, Sir,
Deliver with more openness your answers
To my demands. Why do you pity me?

Iach. That others do,
I was about to say, enjoy your——But
It is an office of the gods to venge it,
Not mine to speak on't.

Imo. You do seem to know Something of me, or what concerns me: 'Pray
you,

(Since doubting things go ill, often hurts more
Than to be sure they do: for certainties
Either are past remedies; or, timely knowing,
The remedy then born,) discover to me
What both you spar and stop.*

Iach. Had I this cheek
To bathe my lips upon; this hand, whose touch, Whose every touch, would force the feeler's
soul

To the oath of loyalty; this object, which Takes prisoner the wild motion of mine eye,
Fixing it only here: should I (damn'd then,) Slaver with lips as common as the stairs
That mount the Capitol; join gripes with hands Made hard with hourly falsehood (falsehood, as
With labour;) then lie peeping in an eye,
Base and unlustrous as the smoky light
That's fed with stinking tallow; it were fit,
That all the plagues of hell should at one time
Encounter such revolt.

Imo. My lord, I fear,
Has forgot Britain.

Iach. And himself. Not I,
Inclin'd to this intelligence, pronounce
The beggary of his change; but 'tis your graces
That, from my muteest conscience, to my tongue,
Charms this report out.

Imo. Let me hear no more.

Iach. O dearest soul! your cause doth strike
my heart

With pity, that doth make me sick. A lady
So fair, and fasten'd to an empery,† Would make the great'st king double! to be partner'd

With tomboys,‡ hir'd with that self-exhibition §
Which your own coffers yield! with diseas'd ventures,

That play with all infirmities for gold
Which rottenness can lend nature! such boll'd
stuff,

As well might poison poison! Be reveng'd;
Or she that bore you was no queen, and you
Recall from your great stock.

Imo. Reveng'd!

How should I be reveng'd? If this be true,
(As I have such a heart, that both mine ears Must not in haste abuse,) if it be true,
How should I be reveng'd?

Iach. Should he make me
Live like Diana's priest, betwixt cold sheets;
Whilst he is vaulting variable ramps,
In your despite, upon your purse? Revenge it.
I dedicate myself to your sweet pleasure;
More noble than that runagate to your bed;
And will continue fast to your affection,
Still close, as sure,

Imo. What ho, Pisanio!

Iach. Let me my service tender on your lips.

Imo. Away!—I do condemn mine ears, that have
So long attended thee.—If thou wert honourable,
Thou would'st have told this tale for virtue, not
For such an end thou seek'st; as base as strange.

* What you seem anxious to utter, and yet withhold.
† Sovereign command.
‡ Allowance, pension.
§ Wantons.

Thou wrong'st a gentleman, who is as far
From thy report, as thou from honour; and Solicit'st here a lady, that disdains
Thee and the devil alike.—What ho, Pisanio!—
The king my father shall be made acquainted
Of thy assault: if he shall think it fit,
A saucy stranger, in his court, to mart
As in a Romish stew, and to exponund
His beastly mind to us; he hath a court
He little cares for, and a daughter whom
He not respects at all.—What ho, Pisanio!—

Iach. O happy Leonatus! I may say:
The credit, that thy lady hath of thee,
Deserves thy trust; and thy most perfect good-
ness

Her assur'd credit!—Blessed live you long!
A lady to the worthiest Sir, that ever
Country call'd his! and you his mistress, only For the most worthiest fit! Give me your pardon.

I have spoke this, to know if your alliance
Were deeply rooted; and shall make your lord,
That which he is, new o'er: And he is one
The truest manner'd; such a holy witch,
That he enchants societies unto him:
Half all men's hearts are his.

Imo. You make amends.

Iach. He sits 'mongst men, like a descended god:

He hath a kind of honour sets him off,
More than a mortal seeming. Be not angry,
Most mighty princess, that I have adventur'd
To try your taking of a false report; which hath Honour'd with confirmation your great judgment

In the election of a Sir so rare,
Which you know, cannot err: The love I bear
him

Made me to fan* you thus; but the gods made
you,

Unlike all others, chaffless. Pray, your pardon.

Imo. All's well, Sir: Take my power i'the court for your's.

Iach. My humble thanks. I had almost forgot
To entreat your grace but in a small request,
And yet of moment too, for it concerns
Your lord: myself, and other noble friends,
Are partners in the business.

Imo. Pray, what is't?

Iach. Some dozen Romans of us, and your
lord,
(The best feather of our wing) have mingled sums,

To buy a present for the emperor;
Which I, the factor for the rest have done
In France: 'Tis plate of rare device; and
jewels,

Of rich and exquisite form; their value's great;
And I am something curious, being strange,†
To have them in safe stowage: May it please you
To take them in protection?

Imo. Willingly;

And pawn mine honour for their safety: since
My lord hath interest in them, I will keep them
In my bed-chamber.

Iach. They are in a trunk,
Attended by my men: I will make bold
To send them to you, only for this night;
I must aboard to-morrow.

Imo. O no, no.

Iach. Yes, I beseech; or I shall short my
word,

By length'ning my return. From Gallia
I cross'd the seas on purpose, and on promise
To see your grace.

Imo. I thank you for your pains;
But not away to-morrow?

Iach. O I must, madam:
Therefore, I shall beseech you, if you please
To greet your lord with writing, do't to-night:
I have outstood my time; which is material
To the tender of our present.

Imo. I will write.

* To fan, is to winnow.

† A stranger.
2 M

Send your trunk to me ; it shall safe be kept,
And truly yielded you : You are very welcome,
[Exeunt.]

ACT II.

SCENE I.—Court before CYMBELINE'S Palace.

Enter CLOTEN and two LORDS.

Clo. Was there ever man had such luck ! when I kissed the jack upon an up-cast,* to be hit away ! I had a hundred pound on't : And then a whoreson jackanapes must take me up for swearing ; as if I borrowed mine oaths of him, and might not spend them at my pleasure.

1 Lord. What got he by that ? You have broke his pate with your bowl.

2 Lord. If his wit had been like him that broke it, it would have ran all out. [Aside.]

Clo. When a gentleman is disposed to swear, it is not for any standers-by to curtail his oaths : Ha ?

2 Lord. No, my lord ; nor [Aside.] crop the ears of them.

Clo. Whoreson dog ! I give him satisfaction ? 'Would he had been one of my rank !

2 Lord. To have smelt like a fool. [Aside.]

Clo. I am not more vexed at any thing in the earth,—A pox on't ! I had rather not be so noble as I am ; they dare not fight with me, because of the queen my mother : every jack-slave hath his belly full of fighting, and I must go up and down like a cock that nobody can match.

2 Lord. You are a cock and capon too ; and you crow, cock, with your comb on. [Aside.]

Clo. Sayest thou ?

1 Lord. It is not fit your lordship should undertake every companion † that you give offence to.

Clo. No, I know that : but it is fit I should commit offence to my inferiors.

2 Lord. Ay, it is fit for your lordship only.

Clo. Why, so I say.

1 Lord. Did you hear of a stranger that's come to court to-night ?

Clo. A stranger ! and I know not on't !

2 Lord. He's a strange fellow himself, and knows it not. [Aside.]

1 Lord. There's an Italian come ; and, 'tis thought, one of Leonatus' friends.

Clo. Leonatus ! a banished rascal : and he's another, whatsoever he be. Who told you of this stranger ?

1 Lord. One of your lordship's pages.

Clo. Is it fit I went to look upon him ? Is there no derogation in't ?

1 Lord. You cannot derogate, ‡ my lord.

Clo. Not easily, I think.

2 Lord. You are a fool granted ; therefore your issues being foolish, do not derogate.

Clo. Come, I'll go see this Italian : What I have lost to-day at bowls, I'll win to night of him. Come, go.

2 Lord. I'll attend your lordship.

[Exeunt CLOTEN and first LORD.]

That such a crafty devil as is his mother
Should yield the world this ass ! a woman, that Bears all down with her brain : and this her
son

Cannot take two from twenty for his heart,
And leave eighteen. Alas, poor princes,
Thou divine Imogen, what thou endur'st !
Betwixt a father by thy step-dame govern'd ;
A mother hourly coining plots ; a wooer
More hateful than the foul expulsion is

* He is describing his fate at bowls, the jack is the small bowl at which the others are aimed. † Fellow.
‡ Degrade yourself.

Of thy dear husband, than that horrid act
Of the divorce he'd make ! The heavens hold firm

The walls of thy dear honour ; keep unshak'd
That temple, thy fair mind ; that thou may'st
stand,

To enjoy thy banish'd lord, and this great land !
[Exit.]

SCENE II.—A Bed-chamber ; in one part of it a Trunk.

IMOGEN reading in her Bed ; a LADY attending.

Imo. Who's there ? my woman Helen ?

Lady. Please you, madam.

Imo. What hour is it ?

Lady. Almost midnight, madam.

Imo. I have read three hours then : mine eyes are weak :—

Fold down the leaf where I have left : To bed :
Take not away the taper, leave it burning ;
And if thou can'st awake by four o'clock,
I pr'ythee call me. Sleep hath seiz'd me wholly.

[Exit LADY.]

To your protection I commend me, gods !
From fairies, and the tempters of the night,
Guard me, beseech ye !

[Sleeps. IACHIMO, from the Trunk.]

Iach. The crickets sing, and man's o'er-labour'd sense

Repairs itself by rest : Our Tarquin thus
Did softly press the rushes,* ere he waken'd
The chastity he wounded.—Cytherea,
How bravely thou becom'st thy bed ! fresh lily !
And whiter than the sheets ! That I might touch !

But kiss ; one kiss !—Rubrics unparagon'd,
How dearly they do't !—'Tis her breathing that Perfumes the chamber thus : The flame o'the taper

Bows toward her ; and would under-peep her lids,

To see the enclosed lights, now canopied
Under these windows : White and azure, lac'd
With blue of heaven's own tinct.†—But my design ?

To note the chamber :—I will write all down :—
Such and such pictures :—There the window :—Such

The adornment of her bed ;—The arras, ‡ figures,

[story,—

Why, such and such :—And the contents o'the
Ab, but some natural notes about her body,
Above ten thousand meaner moveables
Would testify, to enrich mine inventory :
O sleep, thou ape of death, lie dull upon her !
And be her sense but as a monument,
Thus in a chapel lying !—Come off, come off ;—

[Taking off her Bracelet.]

As slippery, as the Gordian knot was hard !
'Tis mine ; and this will witness outwardly,
As strongly as the conscience does within,
To the madding of her lord. On her left breast

A mole cinque-spotted, like the crimson drops
I'the bottom of a cowslip : Here's a voucher, Stronger than ever law could make : this secret

[ta'en

Will force him think I have pick'd the lock, and The treasure of her honour. No more.—To what end ?

Why should I write this down, that's rivetted, Screw'd to my memory ? She hath been reading late

[down,

The tale of Terens ; here the leaf's turn'd
Where Philomel gave up ;—I have enough :

To the trunk again, and shut the spring of it.
Swift, swift, you dragons of the night !—that dawdling

May bare the raven's eye : I lodge in fear ;

* It was anciently the custom to strew chambers with rushes. † I. e. The white skin laced with blue veins.
‡ Tapestry.

Though this a heavenly angel, hell is here.
 [Clock strikes.
 One, two, three,—Time, time! *
 [Goes into the Trunk. The Scene closes.

SCENE III.—An Antechamber adjoining IMOGEN'S Apartment.

Enter CLOTEN and LORDS.

1 Lord. Your lordship is the most patient man in loss, the most coldest that ever turned up ace.

Clo. It would make any man cold to lose.

1 Lord. But not every man patient, after the noble temper of your lordship; you are most hot and furious when you win.

Clo. Winning would put any man into courage; if I could get this foolish Imogen, I should have gold enough: It's almost morning, is't not?

1 Lord. Day, my lord.

Clo. I would this music would come: I am advised to give her music o' mornings; they say, it will penetrate.

Enter MUSICIANS.

Come on; tune: If you can penetrate her with your fingering, so; we'll try with tongue too:
 If none will do, let her remain; but I'll never give o'er. First a very excellent good-concitted thing; after a wonderful sweet air, with admirable rich words to it,—and then let her consider.

SONG.

*Hark! hark! the lark at heaven's gate
 And Phœbus 'gins arise, [sings,
 His steeds to water at those springs
 On chalic'd flowers that lies;
 And wrinking Mary-buds begin
 To ope their golden eyes;
 With every thing that pretty bin;
 My lady sweet, arise;
 Arise, arise.*

So, get you gone: If this penetrate, I will consider your music the better: † If it do not, it is a vice in her ears, which horse-hairs, and cat-guts, nor the voice of unpaved eunuch to boot, can never amend. [Exit MUSICIANS.

Enter CYMBELINE and QUEEN.

2 Lord. Here comes the king.

Clo. I am glad I was up so late; for that's the reason I was up so early: He cannot choose but take this service I have done, fatherly.—Good morrow to your majesty, and to my gracious mother.

Cym. Attend you here the door of our stern
 Will she not forth? [daughter?

Clo. I have assailed her with music, but she vouchsafes no notice.

Cym. The exile of her minion is too new;
 She hath not yet forgot him; some more time
 Must wear the print of his remembrance out,
 And then she's your's.

Queen. You are most bound to the king;
 Who lets go by no vantages, that may
 Prefer you to his daughter: Frame yourself
 To orderly solicits; and be friended
 With aptness of the season: ‡ make denials Increase your services: so seem, as if You were inspired to do those duties which
 You tender to her: that you in all obey her,
 Save when command to your dismissal tends,
 And therein you are senseless.

Clo. Senseless? Not so.

Enter a MESSENGER.

Mess. So like you, Sir, ambassadors from
 Rome;
 The one is Caius Lucius.

* Imogen's maid has just told her mistress that it is twelve o'clock, so that three hours are dispatched 'a a twinkling!

† Will pay you more for it.

‡ With solicitations not only proper but well-timed.

Cym. A worthy fellow,
 Albeit he comes on angry purpose now;
 But that's no fault of his: We must receive
 him
 According to the honour of his sender;
 And towards himself his goodness forespent
 on us
 We must extend our notice.—Our dear son,
 When you have given good morning to your
 mistress,
 Attend the queen and us; we shall have need
 To employ you towards this Roman.—Come our queen.

[Exit Cym. QUEEN, LORDS, and MESS.

Clo. If she be up, I'll speak with her; if not,
 Let her lie still, and dream.—By your leave ho!— [Knocks.

I know her women are about her; What
 If I do line one of their hands? 'Tis gold Which buys admittance; oft it doth; yea, and makes

Diana's rangers false themselves, yield up
 Their deer to the stand of the stealer; and 'tis gold
 Which makes the true man kill'd, and saves
 the thief;

Nay, sometime, hangs both thief and true man:
 What

Can it not do, and undo? I will make
 One of her women lawyer, to me; for
 I yet not understand the case myself.

By your leave. [Knocks.

Enter a LADY.

Lady. Who's there, that knocks?

Clo. A gentleman.

Lady. No more?

Clo. Yes, and a gentlewoman's son.

Lady. That's more

Than some, whose are tailors as dear as your's,
 Can justly boast of: What's your lordship's pleasure?

Clo. Your lady's person: Is she ready?

Lady. Ay,

To keep her chamber.

Clo. There's gold for you: sell me your good report.

Lady. How! my good name? or to report of
 you

What I shall think is good?—The princess—

Enter IMOGEN.

Clo. Good-morrow, fairest sister: Your sweet
 hand.

Imo. Good-morrow, Sir: You lay out too much pains

For purchasing but trouble: the thanks I give,
 Is telling you that I am poor of thanks
 And scarce can spare them.

Clo. Still, I swear I love you.

Imo. If you but said so, 'twere as deep with
 me:

If you swear still, your recompense is still
 That I regard it not.

Clo. This is no answer.

Imo. But that you shall not say I yield being silent,

I would not speak. I pray you, spare me:
 I'faith,

I shall unfold equal discourtesy
 To your best kindness; one of your great knowing

Should learn, being taught, forbearance.

Clo. To leave you in your madness, 'twere
 my sin:

I will not.

Imo. Fools are not mad folks.

Clo. Do you call me fool?

Imo. As I am mad, I do:

If you'll be patient, I'll no more be mad;
 That cures us both. I am much sorry, Sir

You put me to forget a lady's manners,
 By being so verbal: * and learn now, for all,

* No verbose.

That I, which know my heart, do here pronounce,
By the very truth of it, I care not for you;
And am so near the lack of charity,
(To accuse myself) I hate you: which I had rather
You felt, than make't my boast.

Clo. You sin against Obedience, which you owe your father. For
The contract you pretend with that base wretch,
(One, bred of alms, and foster'd with cold dishes,
With scraps o'the court,) it is no contract, none:
And though it be allow'd in meaner parties, (Yet who, than he, more mean?) to knit their souls

(On whom there is no more dependency
But brats and beggary) in self-tigur'd knot;*
Yet you are curb'd from that enlargement by
The consequence o'the crown; and must not sell
The precious note of it with a base slave,
A bidding† for a livery, a squire's cloth,
A pantler, not so eminent.

Imo. Profane fellow!

Wert thou the son of Jupiter, and no more
But what thou art, besides, thou wert too base
To be his groom: thou wert dignified enough,
Even to the point of envy, if 'twere made
Comparative for your virtues, to be styl'd
The under-hangman of his kingdom; and hated
For being preferr'd so well.

Clo. The south-fog rot him!

Imo. He never can meet more mischance, than come

To be but nam'd of thee. His meanest garment,
That ever hath but clipp'd his body, is dearer,
In my respect, than all the hairs above thee,
Were they all made such men.—How now,
Pisanio?

Enter PISANIO.

Clo. His garment? Now, the devil—

Imo. To Dorothy my woman hie thee presently:—

Clo. His garment?

Imo. I am sprighted† with a fool;
Frighted, and anger'd worse:—Go, bid by my woman

Search for a jewel, that too casually Hath left mine arm; it was thy master's:
'shrew me,

If I would lose it for a revenue
Of any king's in Europe. I do think,
I saw't this morning: confident I am,
Last night 'twas on my arm; I kiss'd it:
I hope it be not gone, to tell my lord
That I kiss aught but he.

Pis. 'Twill not be lost.

Imo. I hope so: go and search.

[Exit Pis.]

Clo. You have abus'd me:—

His meanest garment?

Imo. Ay; I said so, Sir.

If you will mak't an action, call witness to't.

Io. I will inform your father.

Imo. Your mother too:

She's my good lady; and will conceive, I hope,
But the worst of me. So I leave you, Sir,
To the worst of discontent.

[Exit.]

Clo. I'll be reveng'd:—

His meanest garment?—Well.

[Exit.]

SCENE. IV.—Rome—An Apartment in PHILARIO'S House.

Enter POSTRUMUS and PHILARIO.

Post. Fear it not, Sir; I would I were so
sure
To win the king, as I am bold her honour
Will remain her's.

Phi. What means do you make to him?

* In knots of their own tying.

† A low fellow only fit to wear a livery.
‡ Haunted.

Post. Not any; but abide the change of
time;

Quake in the present winter's state, and wish
That warmer days would come: In these fear'd hopes,

I barely gratify your love; they failing,
I must die much your debtor.

Phi. Your very goodness, and your company,
O'er pays all I can do. By this, your king
Hath heard of great Augustus: Caius Lucius
Will do his commission thoroughly: and, I
think,

He'll grant the tribute, send the arrarges,
Or look upon our Romans, whose remembrance
Is yet fresh in their grief.

Post. I do believe,
(Statist* though I am none, nor like to be,)
That this will prove a war; and you shall hear
The legions now in Gallia, sooner landed
In our not-fearing Britain, than have tidings
Of any penny tribute paid. Our countrymen
Are men more ordered, than when Julius Cæsar Smil'd at their lack of skill, but found their courage

Worthy his frowning at: Their discipline
(Now mingled with their courages) will make known

To their approvers† they are people, such
That mend upon the world.

Enter IACHIMO.

Phi. See! Iachimo?

Post. The swiftest harts have posted you by land:

And winds of all the corners kiss'd your sails,
To make your vessel nimble.

Phi. Welcome, Sir.

Post. I hope the briefness of your answer made
The speediness of your return.

Iach. Your lady
Is one the fairest that I have look'd upon.

Post. And, therewithal, the best; or let her beauty

Look through a casement to allure false hearts,
And be false with them.

Iach. Here are letters for you.

Post. Their tenour good, I trust.

Iach. 'Tis very like.

Phi. Was Caius Lucius in the Britain court,
When you were there;

Iach. He was expected then,
But not approach'd.

Post. All is well yet.—
Sparkles this stone as it was wont? or is't not Too dull for your good wearing?

Iach. If I have lost it,
I should have lost the worth of it in gold.
I'll make a journey twice as far to enjoy
A second night of such sweet shortness, which
Was mine in Britain; for the ring is won.

Post. The stone's too hard to come by.

Iach. Not a whit,
Your lady being so easy.

Post. Make not, Sir,
Your loss your sport: I hope you know that we Must not continue friends.

Iach. Good Sir, we must,
If you keep covenant: Had I not brought
The knowledge of your mistress home, I grant
We were to question further: but I now
Profess myself the winner of her honour,
Together with your ring; and not the wronger
Of her, or you, having proceeded but
By both your wills.

Post. If you can make't apparent
That you have tasted her in bed, my hand,
And ring, is your's: If not, the foul opinion
You had of her pure honour, gains, or loses,
Your sword or mine; or masterless leaves both
To who shall find them.

Iach. Sir, my circumstances,
Being so near the truth, as I will make them,
Must first induce you to believe: whose strength

* Statesman.

† To those who try them.

I will confirm with oath ; which, I doubt not,
You'll give me leave to spare, when you shall
And
You need it not.

Post. Proceed.

Jack. First, her bed-chamber,
(Where, I confess, I slept not ; but, profess, Had that was well worth watching,) it was hang'd

With tapestry of silk and silver ; the story
Proud Cleopatra, when she met her Roman,
And Cydnus swell'd above the banks, or for
The press of boats, or pride : A piece of work
So bravely done, so rich, that it did strive
In workmanship and value ; which, I wonder'd,
Could be so rarely and exactly wrought,
Since the true life on't was—

Post. This is true ;
And this you might have heard of here, by me,
Or by some other.

Jack. More particulars
Must justify my knowledge.

Post. So they must,
Or do your honour injury.

Jack. The chimney
Is south the chamber ; and the chimney-piece,
Chaste Dian bathing : never saw I figures
So likely to report themselves : the catter
Was as another nature, dumb ; outwent her,
Motion and breath left out.

Post. This is a thing,
Which you might from relation likewise reap ;
Being, as it is, much spoke of.

Jack. The roof o'the chamber With golden cherubims is fretted : Her audirons *

(I had forgot them,) were two winking Cupids
Of silver, each on one foot standing, nicely
Depending on their brands. †

Post. This is her honour !—
Let it be granted, you have seen all this, (and praise

Be given to your remembrance,) the description
Of what is in her chamber, nothing saves
The wager you have laid.

Jack. Then if you can,
[Pulling out the Bracelet.
Be pale ; I beg but leave to air this jewel :
See !—

And now 'tis up again : It must be married
To that your diamond ; I'll keep them.

Post. Jove !—
Once more let me behold it : Is it that
Which I left with her ?

Jack. Sir, (I thank her,) that :
She stripp'd it from her arm ; I see her yet ;
Her pretty action did outsell her gift,
And yet enrich'd it too : She gave it me, and
said,
She priz'd it once.

Post. May be, she pluck'd it off,
To send it me.

Jack. She writes so to you ? doth she ?

Post. O no, no, no ; 'tis true. Here, take this too ; [Gives the Ring.

It is a basilisk unto mine eye,
Kills me to look on't :—Let there be no honour,
Where there is beauty ; truth, where semblance ; love

Where there's another man : The vows of
women

Of no more bondage be, to where they are made,
Than they are to their virtues ; which is nothing :—

O above measure false !

Phil. Have patience, Sir,
And take your ring again ; 'tis not yet won ;
It may be probable, she lost it ; or,
Who knows if one of her women, being corrupted,

Hath stolen it from her,

Post. Very true ;

And so, I hope, he came by't :—Back my ring ;—

Render to me some corporal sign about her,
More evident than this ; for this was stolen.

Jack. By Jupiter, I had it from her arm.

Post. Hark you, he swears ; by Jupiter he swears.

'Tis true ;—nay, keep the ring—'tis true : I am
sure,

She would not lose it : her attendants are All sworn and honourable :—They induc'd to steal it !

And by a stranger ?—No, he hath enjoy'd her :
The cognizance * of her incontinency
Is this,—she hath bought the name of whore
thus dearly.—

There, take thy hire : and all the fiends of hell
Divide themselves between you !

Phil. Sir, be patient :
This is not strong enough to be believ'd
Of one persuaded well of—

Post. Never talk on't ;
She hath been coited by him.

Jack. If you seek
For further satisfying, under her breast
(Worthy the pressing,) lies a mole, right proud
Of that most delicate lodging : By my life,
I kiss'd it ; and it gave me present hunger
To feed again, though full. You do remember
This stain upon her ?

Post. Ay, and it doth confirm Another stain, as big as hell can hold,
Were there no more but it.

Jack. Will you hear more ?

Post. Spare your arithmetic : never count the Once, and a million ! [turns ;

Jack. I'll be sworn,—

Post. No swearing.
If you will swear you have not done't, you lie ;
And I will kill thee, if thou dost deny
Thou hast made me cuckold.

Jack. I will deny nothing.

Post. O that I had her here, to tear her limb-meal !

I will go there, and do't ; i'the court ; before
Her father :—I'll do something— [Exit.

Phil. Quite besides
The government of patience !—You have won :
Let's follow him, and pervert the present wrath
He hath against himself.

Jack. With all my heart. [Exeunt.

SCENE V.—The same.—Another Room in the same.

Enter POSTHUMUS.

Post. Is there no way for men to be, but women

Must be half-workers ? We are bastards all ;
And that most venerable man, which I Did call my father, was I know not where When I was stamp'd ; some coiner with his tools

Made me a counterfeit : Yet my mother seem'd
The Dian of that time : so doth my wife
The nonpareil of this.—O vengeance, vengeance !

Me of my lawful pleasure she restrain'd,
And pray'd me, oft, forbearance : did it with
A pudency † so rosy, the sweet view on't Might well have warm'd old Saturn ; that I thought her [devils !—

As chaste as unsum'd snow :—O all the
This yellow lachimo, in an hour,—was't not ?—
Or less,—at first : Perchance he spoke not ;
but,

Like a full-acorn'd boar, a German one,
Cried oh ! and mounted : found no opposition
But what he look'd for should oppose, and she Should from encounter guard. Could I find out [tion

The woman's part in me ! For there's no mo-
That tends to vice in man, but I affirm

* Ornamented iron bars which support wood burned chimneys. † Torches in the hands of Cupids.

* The token.

† Modesty.

It is the woman's part: Be it lying, note it,
The woman's; flattering, her's; deceiving, her's;
Ambitions, covetings, change of prides, disdain,
Nice longings, slanders, mutability, [knows,
All faults that may be nam'd, nay, that hell
Why her's in part, or all; but rather all:
For even to vice
They are not constant, but are changing still
One vice, but of a minute old, for one
Not half so old as that. I'll write against them,
Detest them, curse them:—Yet 'tis greater skill
In a true hate, to pray they have their will:
The very devils cannot plague them better.

[Exit.

ACT III.

SCENE I.—Britain.—A Room of State in CYMBELINE'S Palace.

Enter CYMBELINE, QUEEN, CLOTEN, and LORDS, at one Door; and at another, CAIUS LUCIUS, and Attendants.

Cym. Now say, what would Augustus Cesar with us?

Luc. When Julius Cesar (whose remembrance yet Lives in men's eyes, and will to ears and tongues,
Be theme and hearing ever,) was in this Britain,
And conquer'd it, Cassibelan, thine uncle,
(Famous in Cesar's praises, no whit less Than in his feats deserving it,) for him,
And his succession, granted Rome a tribute,
Yearly three thousand pounds; which by thee
Is left untender'd. [lately

Queen. And, to kill the marvel,
Shall be so ever.

Clo. There be many Cesars,
Ere such another Julius. Britain is
A world by itself; and we will nothing pay,
For wearing our own noses.

Queen. That opportunity [same
Which then they had to take from us, to re-
We have again.—Remember, Sir, my liege,
The kings your ancestors: together with
The natural bravery of your isle; which stands
As Neptune's park, ribbed and paled in
With rocks unscalable, and roaring waters;
With sands, that will not bear your enemies'
boats, [conquest

But suck them up to the top-mast. A kind of Cesar made here; but made not here his brag
Of came, and saw, and overcame: with shame
(The first that ever touch'd him,) he was carried [ping,
From off our coast, twice beaten; and his ship-
(Poor ignorant baubles!) on our terrible seas,
Like egg-shells mov'd upon their surges, crack'd
As easily 'gainst our rocks: for joy whereof,
The fam'd Cassibelan, who was once at point
(O giglot* fortune!) to master Cesar's sword,
Made Lud's town with rejoicing fires bright,
And Britons strut with courage.

Clo. Come, there's no more tribute to be paid:
Our kingdom is stronger than it was at that time; and, as I said, there is no more such Cesars: other of them may have crooked noses;
but, to owe such straight arms, none.

Cym. Son, let your mother end.

Clo. We have yet many among us can gripe as hard as Cassibelan: I do not say, I am one;
but I have a hand.—Why tribute? why should we pay tribute? If Cesar can hide the sun from us with a blanket, or put the moon in his pocket, we will pay him tribute for light; else,
Sir, no more tribute, pray you now.

Cym. You must know,
Till the injurious Romans did extort
This tribute from us, we were free: Cesar's ambition,

* Strumpet.

(Which swell'd so much, that it did almost stretch

The sides o'the world,) against all colour, here
Did put the yoke upon us; which, to shake off,
Becomes a warlike people, whom we reckon
Ourselves to be. We do say then to Cesar,
Our ancestor was that Mulmutius, which Ordain'd our laws; (whose use the sword of
Cesar
Hath too much mangled; whose repair and franchise,
Shall, by the power we hold, be our good deed,
Though Rome be therefore angry;) Mulmutius,
Who was the first of Britain, which did put
His brows within a golden crown, and call'd
Himself a king.

Luc. I am sorry, Cymbeline,
That I am to pronounce Augustus Cesar (Cesar, that hath more kings his servants, than Thyself domestic officers,) thine enemy:
Receive it from me, then:—War and confusion.
In Cesar's name pronounce I 'gainst thee: look
For fury not to be resisted:—Thus defied,
I thank thee for myself.

Cym. Thou art welcome, Caius.
Thy Cesar knighted me; my youth I spent Much under him;† of him I gather'd honour;
Which he, to seek of me again, perforce,
Behoves me keep at utterance;‡ I am perfect,§
That the Pannonians and Dalmatians, for Their liberties, are now in arms: a precedent
Which, not to read, would show the Britons
cold:

So Cesar shall not find them.

Luc. Let proof speak.

Clo. His majesty bids you welcome. Make pastime with us a day or two longer: If you seek us afterwards in other terms, you shall find us in our salt-water girdle: If you beat us out of it, it is your's; if you fall in the adventure, our crows shall fare the better for you;
and there's an end.

Luc. So, Sir.

Cym. I know your 'master's pleasure, and be
mine:
All the remain is, welcome. [Exeunt.

SCENE II.—Another Room in the same.

Enter PISANIO.

Pis. How! of adultery? Wherefore write you not
What monster's her accuser?—Leonatus!
O master! what a strange infection
Is fallen into thy ear? What false Italian § (As poisonous tongu'd as banded,) hath prevail'd

On thy too ready hearing?—Disloyal? No:
She's punish'd for her truth; and undergoes,
More goddess-like than wife-like, such assaults
As would take in ¶ some virtue.—O my master!
Thy mind to her is now as low, as were Thy fortunes.—How! that I should murder
her?

Upon the love and truth and vows, which I Have made to thy command!—I, her?—her
blood?

If it be so to do good service, never Let me counted servicable. How look I,
That I should seem to lack humanity,
So much as this fact comes to? Do't: The letter [Reading.

*That I have sent her, by her own command
Shall give thee opportunity.*—O damn'd paper!
Black as the ink that's on thee! Senseless bauble.

Art thou a feodary for this act, and look'st
So virgin-like without? Lo, here she comes.

* "Kymbeline (says Hollinshed) was brought up at Rome, and there made knight by Augustus Cesar."

† At the extremity of defiance. ‡ Well-informed.

§ About Shakespeare's time, poisoning was a very common practice in Italy.

¶ To take in a town, is to conquer it.

 Confederate.

Enter IMOGEN.

I am ignorant in what I am commanded.

Imo. How now, Pisanio?

Pis. Madam, here is a letter from my lord.

Imo. Who? thy lord? that is my lord? Leonatus?

O learn'd indeed were that astronomer,
That knew the stars, as I his characters;
He'd lay the future open.—You good gods,
Let what is here contain'd relish of love,
Of my lord's health, of his content,—yet not,
That we two are asunder, let that grieve him,— (Some griefs are med'cinable;) that is one of
them,

For it doth physic love;—of his content,
All but in that!—Good wax, thy leave:—

Bless'd be

[Lovers,

You bees, that make these locks of counsel!
And men in dangerous bonds pray not alike;
Though forfeiters you cast in prison, yet
You clasp young Cupid's tables. Good news, gods!

[Reads.

Justice, and your father's wrath, should he take me in his dominion, could not be so cruel to me, as you, O the dearest of creatures, would not even renew me with your eyes.
Take notice, that I am in Cumbria, at Milford-Haven. What your own love will out of this advise you, follow. So, he wishes you all happiness, that remains loyal to his vow, and your, increasing in love,

LEONATUS POSTHUMUS.

O for a horse with wings!—Hear'st thou,
Pisanio?

He is at Milford-Haven: Read, and tell me
How far 'tis thither. If one of mean affairs
May plod it in a week, why may not I
Glide thither in a day?—Then, true Pisanio, (Who long'st, like me, to see thy lord; who long'st,—

O let me 'bate,—but not like me:—yet long'st,—
But in a fainter kind:—O not like me;
For mine's beyond, beyond,) say and speak thick,*

(Love's counsellor should fill the bores of hear-
To the smothering of the sense,) how far it is
To this same blessed Milford: And, by the way,
Tell me how Wales was made so happy, as
To inherit such a haven: But, first of all,
How we may steal from hence; and, for the gap

That we shall make in time, from our hence-
And our return, to excuse:—but first, how get
hence:

Why should excuse be born or e'er begot?
We'll talk of that hereafter. Pr'ythee, speak,
How many score of miles may we well ride
'Twixt hour and hour?

Pis. One score, 'twixt sun and sun,
Madam's enough for you; and too much too.

Imo. Why, one that rode to his execution,
man,
Could never go so slow: I have heard of riding
wagers,

Where horses have been nimbler than the sands
That run i'the clock's behalf:—But this is foolery:—

Go, bid my woman feign a sickness; say,
She'll home to her father; and provide me,
presently,

A riding suit; no costlier than would fit
A franklin's† housewife.

Pis. Madam, you're best consider.

Imo. I see before me, man, nor here, nor
here,

Nor what ensues; but have a fog in them,
That I cannot look through. Away, I pr'ythee;
Do as I bid thee: There's no more to say;
Accessible is none but Milford way. [Exeunt.

* Crowd one word on another, as fast as possible.
† A freholder.

SCENE III.—Wales.—A mountainous Country, with a Cave.

Enter BELARIUS, GUIDERIUS, and ARVIRAGUS.

Bel. A goodly day not to keep house, with such

Whose roof's as low as ours! Stoop, boys:
This gate

Instructs you how to adore the heavens; and bows you

To morning's holy office: The gates of monarchs
Are arch'd so high, that giants may jet* through
And keep their impious turbands on, without Good morrow to the sun.—Hail, thou fair heaven!

We house i'the rock, yet use thee not so hardly
As prouder livers do.

Gui. Hail, heaven!

Arv. Hail, heaven!

Bel. Now, for our mountain sport: Up to yon hill,

Your legs are young; I'll tread these flats.
Consider,

When you above perceive me like a crow,
That it is place which lessens, and sets off.
And you may then revolve what tales I have told you,

Of courts, of princes, of the tricks in war:
This service is not service, so being done,
But being so allow'd: To apprehend thus,
Draws us a profit from all things we see:
And often, to our comfort, shall we find
The sharded† beetle in a safer hold
Than is the full-wing'd eagle. O this life
Is nobler, than attending for a check;
Richer, than doing nothing for a babe;
Prouder, than rustling in unpaid-for silk:
Such gain the cap of him, that makes them
fine,

Yet keeps his book uncross'd: no life to ours.‡

Gui. Out of your proof you speak: we, poor
unfledg'd,
Have never wing'd from view o'the nest: nor
know not

What air's from home. Haply, this life is best,
If quiet life be best; sweeter to you,
That have a sharper known; well corresponding
With your stiff age; but, unto us, it is
A cell of ignorance; travelling abed;
A prison for a debtor, that not dares
To stride a limit. §

Arv. What should we speak of,
When we are old as you? when we shall hear
The rain and wind beat dark December, how,
In this our pinching cave, shall we discourse
The freezing hours away? We have seen nothing:

We are beastly; subtle as the fox, for prey;
Like warlike as the wolf, for what we eat:
Our valour is, to chase what flies; our cage
We make a quire, as doth the prison bird,
And sing our bondage freely.

Bel. How you speak!
Did you but know the city's usuries,
And felt them knowingly; the art o'the court,
As hard to leave as keep; whose top to climb
Is certain falling, or so slippery, that
The fear's as bad as falling; the toil of the war
A pain that only seems to seek out danger
I'the name of fame and honour, which dies i'the
search,

And hath as oft a slanderous epitaph,
As record of fair act; nay, many times,
Doth ill deserve by doing well; what's worse,
Must court'sey at the censure:—O boys, this story

The world may read in me: My body's mark'd
With Roman swords: and my report was once
First with the best of note: Cymbeline lov'd
me;

And when a soldier was the theme, my name
Was not far off: Then was I as a tree,

* Walk proudly. † Scaly-winged.
‡ I e. Compared with ours. § To overpass his bounds

Whose boughs did bend with fruit: but in one night,
A storm, or robbery, call it what you will,
Snook down my mellow hangings, nay, my leaves,
And left me bare to weather.

Gui. Uncertain favour!

Bel. My fault being nothing (as I have told you oft,)

But that two villains, whose false oaths prevail'd

Before my perfect honour, swore to Cymbeline,
I was confederate with the Romans: so,
Follow'd my banishment; and, this twenty years,

This rock, and these demesnes, have been my world:

Where I have liv'd at honest freedom; paid
More pious debts to heaven, than in all
The fore-end of my time.—But, up to the mountains;

This is not hunters' language:—He, that strikes
The venison first, shall be the lord o'the feast,
To him the other two shall minister;
And we will fear no poison, which attends
In place of greater state. I'll meet you in the valleys. [Exeunt Gui. and Arv.]

How hard it is, to hide the sparks of nature!
These boys know little, they are sons to the king;

Nor Cymbeline dreams that they are alive.
They think they are mine: and, though train'd up thus meanly

I'the cave wherein they bow, their thoughts do
The roofs of palaces; and nature prompts them,
In simple and low things to prince it, much
Beyond the trick of others. This Polydore,—
The heir of Cymbeline and Britain, whom
The king his father call'd Guiderius,—Jove!
When on my three-foot stool I sit, and tell
The warlike feats I have done, his spirits fly out

Into my story: say,—*Thus mine enemy fell;
And thus I set my foot on his neck;* even then

The princely blood flows in his cheek, he sweats,
Strains his young nerves, and puts himself in posture

That acts my words. The younger brother, Cad-(Once, Arviragus,) in as like a figure,
Strikes life into my speech, and shows much more

His own conceiving. Hark! the game is rous'd!—
O Cymbeline! heaven, and my conscience, knows,

Thou didst unjustly banish me: whereon,
At three and two years old, I stole these babes;
Thinking to bar thee of succession, as
Thou rest'st me of my lands. Euriphile,
Thou wast their nurse; they took thee for their mother,

And every day do honour to her grave:
Myself, Belarius, that am Morgan call'd,
They take for natural father. The game is up.

[Exit.]

SCENE IV.—Near Milford-Haven.

Enter PISANIO and IMOGEN.

Imo. Thou told'st me, when we came from horse, the place
Was near at hand: Ne'er long'd my mother so
To see me first, as I have now:—Pisanio! Man!

Where is Posthumus? What is in thy mind,
That makes thee stare thus? Wherefore breaks that sigh

From the inward of thee? One, but painted thus,
Would be interpreted a thing perplex'd
Beyond self-explication: Put thyself
Into a 'haviour* of less fear, ere wildness
Vanquish my staid senses. What's the matter?

* For behaviour.

Why tender'st thou that paper to me, with
A look untender? If it be summer news,
Smile to't before: If winterly, thou need'st
But keep that countenance still.—My husband's hand!

That drug-damn'd Italy hath out-craftied him,
And he's at some hard point.—Speak, man; thy tongue

May take off some extremity, which to read
Would be even mortal to me.

Pis. Please you, read;
And you shall find me, wretched man, a thing
The most disdain'd of fortune.

Imo. [Reads.] Thy mistress, Pisanio, hath played the strumpet in my bed; the testimonies whereof lie bleeding in me. I speak not out of weak surmises; from proof as strong as my grief, and as certain as I expect my revenge. That part, thou Pisanio, must act for me, if thy faith be not tainted with the breach of hers. Let thine own hands take away her life: I shall give thee opportunities at Milford-Haven: she hath my letter for the purpose: Where, if thou fear to strike, and to make me certain it is done, thou art the pander to her dishonour, and equally to me disloyal.

Pis. What shall I need to draw my sword? the paper

Hath cut her throat already.—No, 'tis slander;
Whose edge is sharper than the sword; whose tongue

Outvenoms all the worms of Nile; whose Rides on the posting winds, and doth belie
All corners of the world: kings, queens, and states,

Maids, matrons, nay, the secrets of the grave
This viperous slander enters.—What cheer, madam?

Imo. False to his bed! What is it, to be false?
To lie in watch there, and to think on him?
To weep 'twixt clock and clock? If sleep charge nature,

To break it with a fearful dream of him,
And cry myself awake? that's false to his bed? Is it?

Pis. Alas, good lady!

Imo. I false? Thy conscience witness:—Iachimo,

Thou didst accuse him of incontinency;
Thou then look'dst like a villain; now, methinks,

Thy favour's good enough.—Some jay* of Italy,
Whose mother was her painting,† hath betray'd him:

Poor I am stale, a garment out of fashion:
And, for I am richer than to hang by the walls,
I must be ripp'd:—to pieces with me!—Oh!
Men's vows are women's traitors! All good seeming,

By thy revolt, O husband, shall be thought
Put on for villany; not born, where't grows;
But worn, a bait for ladies.

Pis. Good madam, hear me.

Imo. True honest men being heard, like false
Æneas, [weeping]
Were, in his time, thought false: and Sinon's
Did scandal many a holy tear; took pity
From most true wretchedness: so thou, Posthumus,

Wilt lay the leaven on all proper men;
Goodly, and gallant, shall be false and perjur'd,
From thy great fall.—Come, fellow, be thou honest: [him,]

Do thou thy master's bidding: when thou see'st
A little witness my obedience: Look!
I draw the sword myself: take it; and hit
The innocent mansion of my love, my heart:
Fear not; 'tis empty of all things, but grief:
Thy master is not there; who was, indeed,
The riches of it: Do his bidding; strike.
Thou mayst be valiant in a better cause;
But now thou seem'st a coward.

* Puffe, in Italian, signifies both a jay and a whoop.
† Likeness.

Pis. Hence, vile instrument!
Thou shalt not damn my hand.

Imo. Why, I must die:
And if I do not by thy hand, thou art
No servant of thy master's: Against self-
slaughter

There is a prohibition so divine,
That cravens* my weak hand. Come, here's
my heart;

Something's afore't:—Soft, soft; we'll no defence;

Obedient as the scabbard.—What is here?
The scriptures† of the loyal Leonatus,
All turn'd to heresy? Away, away,
Corrupters of my faith! you shall no more
Be stomachers to my heart! Thus may poor
fools

Believe false teachers: Though those that are betray'd

Do feel the treason sharply, yet the traitor
Stands in worse case of woe.

And thou, Posthumus, thou that didst set up
My disobedience 'gainst the king my father,
And make me put into contempt the suits
Of princely fellows, shalt hereafter find
It is no act of common passage, but
A strain of rareness: and I grieve myself,
To think, when thou shalt be diseng'd by her
That now thou tir'st‡ on, how thy memory
Will then be pang'd by me.—Pr'ythee, despatch:

The lamb entreats the butcher: Where's thy
knife?

Thou art too slow to do thy master's bidding,
When I desire it too.

Pis. O gracious lady,
Since I receiv'd command to do this business,
I have not slept one wink.

Imo. Do't, and to bed then.

Pis. I'll wake mine eye-balls blind first.

Imo. Wherefore then
Didst undertake it? Why hast thou abus'd
So many miles with a pretence? this place?
Mine action, and thine own? our horses' labour?

The time inviting thee? the perturb'd court,
For my being absent: whereunto I never Purpose return? Why hast thou gone so far,
To be absent when thou hast ta'en thy stand,
The elected deer before thee?

Pis. But to win time
To lose so bad employment in the which
I have consider'd of a course: Good lady,
Hear me with patience.

Imo. Talk thy tongue weary; speak:
I have heard I am a strumpet; and mine ear,
Therein false struck, can take no greater
wound,

Nor tent to bottom that. But speak.

Pis. Then, madam,
I thought you would not back again.

Imo. Most like;
Bringing me here to kill me.

Pis. Not so, neither:
But if I were as wise as honest, then
My purpose would prove well. It cannot be,
But that my master is abus'd:
Some villain, ay, and singular in his art,
Hath done you both this cursed injury.

Imo. Some Roman courtesan.

Pis. No, on my life.
I'll give but notice you are dead, and send
him

Some bloody sign of it; for 'tis commanded
I should do so: You shall be miss'd at court,
And that will well confirm it.

Imo. Why, good fellow,
What shall I do the while? Where hide? How
live?

Or in my life what comfort, when I am
Dead to my husband?

Pis. If you'll back to the court,—

Imo. No court, no father; nor no more ado
With that harsh, noble, simple, nothing:
That Cloten, whose love-suit hath been to me
As fearful as a siege.

Pis. If not at court,
Then not in Britain must you bide.

Imo. Where then?
Hath Britain all the sun that shines? Day
night,
Are they not but in Britain? I'the world's volume

Our Britain seems as of it, but not in it;
In a great pool, a swan's nest; Pr'ythee, think There's livers out of Britain.

Pis. I am most glad
You think of other place. The ambassador,
Lucius the Roman, comes to Milford-Haven
To-morrow: Now, if you could wear a mind
Dark as your fortune is; and but disguise
That, which, to appear itself, must not yet be,
But by self-danger; you should tread a course
Pretty, and full of view: yea, haply, near
The residence of Posthumus; so nigh, at least,
That though his actions were not visible, yet
Report should render him hourly to your ear,
As truly as he moves.

Imo. O for such means!
Though peril to my modesty, not death on't,
I would adventure.

Pis. Well then, here's the point:
You must forget to be a woman; change
Command into obedience; fear and niceness,
(The handmaids of all women, or, more truly,
Woman it's pretty self,) to a waggish courage;
Ready in gibes, quick-answer'd, saucy, and
As quarrelous as the weasel: nay, you must Forget that rarest treasure of your cheek,
Exposing it (but, oh! the harder heart!
Alack no remedy!) to the greedy touch
Of common-kissing Titan;* and forget
Your laboursome and dainty trims, wherein
You made great Juno angry.

Imo. Nay, be brief:
I see into thy end, and am almost
A man already.

Pis. First, make yourself but like one.
Fore-thinking this, I have already fit,
(Tis in my cloak-bag,) doublet, hat, hose, all That answer to them: Would you, in their serving,

And with what imitation you can borrow
From youth of such a season, fore noble Lucius

Present yourself, desire his service, tell him Wherein you are happy,† (which you'll make him know,

If that his head have ear in music,) doubtless,
With joy he will embrace you: for he's honourable,

And, doubling that, most holy. Your means abroad

You have me‡ rich; and I will never fail
Beginning, nor suppyment.

Imo. Thou art all the comfort
The gods will diet me with. Pr'ythee, away:
There's more to be consider'd; but we'll even
All that good time will give us: This attempt I'm soldier to,§ and will abide it with
A prince's courage. Away, I pr'ythee.

Pis. Well, madam, we must take a short fare-
well:

Lest, being miss'd, I be suspected of Your carriage from the court. My noble mistress,

Here is a box; I had it from the queen;
What's in't is precious; if you are sick at sea,
Or stomach-qualm'd at land, a dram of this
Will drive away distemper.—To some shade,
And fit you to your manhood:—May the gods
Direct you to the best!

Imo. Amen: I thank thee. [Exit.

SCENE V.—A Room in CYMBELINE'S Palace.

Enter CYMBELINE, QUEEN, CLOTEN, LUCIUS, and LORDS.

Cym. Thus far ; and so farewell.

Luc. Thanks, royal Sir.
My emperor hath wrote, I must from hence ;
And am right sorry, that I must report ye
My master's enemy.

Cym. Our subjects, Sir,
Will not endure his yoke ; and for ourself
To show less sovereignty than they, must needs
Appear unkinglike.

Luc. So, Sir, I desire of you
A conduct over land, to Milford-Haven.—
Madam, all joy befall your grace, and you !

Cym. My lords, you are appointed for that office ;
The due of honour in no point omit :—
So, farewell, noble Lucius.

Luc. Your hand, my lord.

Clo. Receive it friendly : but from this time
forth
I wear it as your enemy.

Luc. Sir, the event
Is yet to name the winner ; Fare you well.

Cym. Leave not the worthy Lucius, good my
lords,
Till he have cross'd the Severn.—Happiness !

[Exit LUCIUS and LORDS.
Queen. He goes hence frowning : but it honours us,
That we have given him cause.

Clo. 'Tis all the better ;
Your vallant Britons have their wishes in it.

Cym. Lucius hath wrote already to the emperor
How it goes here. It fits us therefore, ripely,
Our chariots and our horsemen be in readi-
ness :

The powers that he already hath in Gallia
Will soon be drawn to head, from whence he moves
His war for Britain.

Queen. 'Tis not sleepy business ;
But must be look'd to speedily and strongly.

Cym. Our expectation that it would be thus,
Hath made us forward. But, my gentle
queen,

Where is our daughter ? She hath not appear'd
Before the Roman, nor to us hath tender'd
The duty of the day : She looks us like
A thing more made of malice than of duty :
We have noted it.—Call her before us ; for
We have been too slight in sufferance.

[Exit an ATTENDANT.

Queen. Royal Sir,
Since the exile of Posthumus, most retir'd Hath her life been ; the cure whereof, my
lord,
'Tis time must do. 'Beseech your majesty,
Forbear sharp speeches to her : she's a lady
So tender of rebukes, that words are strokes,
And strokes death to her.

Re-enter an ATTENDANT.

Cym. Where is she, Sir ? How
Can her contempt be answer'd ?

Atten. Please you, Sir,
Her chambers are all lock'd ; and there's no
answer
That will be given to the loud'st of noise we make.

Queen. My lord, when last I went to visit
her,
She pray'd me to excuse her keeping close ;
Whereto constrain'd by her infirmity,
She should that duty leave unpaid to you,
Which daily she was bound to proffer : this
She wish'd me to make known ; but our great court
Made me to blame in memory.

Cym. Her doors lock'd ?

Not seen of late ? Grant, heavens, that which fear

Prove false !

Queen. Son, I say, follow the king.

Clo. That man of her's, Pisanio, her old
servant,

I have not seen these two days.

Queen. Go, look after.—

[Exit CLOTEN.

Pisanio, thou that stand'st so for Posthumus !—
He hath a drug of mine . I pray his absence
Proceed by swallowing that ; for he believes
It is a thing most precious. But for her,
Where is she gone ? Haply, despair hath seiz'd her ;

Or, wing'd with fervour of her love, she's flown
To her desir'd Posthumus : Gone she is
To death, or to dishonour ; and my end
Can make good use of either : She being down,
I have the placing of the British crown.

Re-enter CLOTEN.

How now, my son ?

Clo. 'Tis certain she is fled :

Go in, and cheer the king ; he rages ; none
Dare come about him.

Queen. All the better : May
This night forestall him of the coming day !

[Exit QUEEN.

Clo. I love, and hate her ; for she's fair and royal :

And that she hath all courtly parts more exquisite

Than lady, ladies, woman : * from every one
The best she hath, and she, of all compounded, Outsells them all ; I love her therefore ; But,
Disdaining me, and throwing favours on
The low Posthumus, slanders so her judgment,
That what's else rare, is chok'd ; and in that
point,

I will conclude to hate her, nay, indeed,
To be reveng'd upon her. For, when fools

Enter PISANIO,

Shall—Who is here ? What ! are you packing, Sirrah ?

Come hither : Ah ! you precious pander ! Vilvain,

Where is thy lady ? In a word ; or else
Thou art straightway with the fends.

Pis. O good my lord !

Clo. Where is thy lady ? or, by Jupiter,
I will not ask again. Close villain,
I'll have this secret from thy heart, or rip
Thy heart to find it. Is she with Posthumus ?
From whose so many weights of baseness can
A dram of worth be drawn.

Pis. Alas, my lord,

How can she be with him ? When was she
He is in Rome.

Clo. Where is she, Sir ? Come nearer ;
No further halting : satisfy me home,
What is become of her ?

Pis. O my all-worthy lord !

Clo. All-worthy villain !
Discover where thy mistress is, at once,
At the next word,—No more of worthy lord,— Speak, or thy silence on the instant is Thy condemnation and thy death.

Pis. Then, Sir,

This paper is the history of my knowledge
Touching her flight.

[Presenting a Letter.

Clo. Let's see't :—I will pursue her
Even to Augustus' throne.

Pis. Or this, or perish. [by this, }
She's far enough ; and what he learns }
May prove his travel, not her danger. }
[Aside.

Clo. Humph !

Pis. I'll write to my lord she's dead. O
Imogen

Safe may'st thou wander, safe return again !

[Aside.

* Than any lady, than all ladies, than all womankind

Clo. Sirrah, is this letter true?

Pis. Sir, as I think.

Clo. It is Posthumus' hand; I know't.—Sirrah, if thou would'st not be a villain, but do me true service; undergo those employments, wherein I should have cause to use thee, with a serious industry,—that is, what villainy so'er I bid thee do, to perform it, directly and truly,—I would think thee an honest man: thou should'st neither want my means for thy relief, nor my voice for thy preferment.

Pis. Well, my good lord.

Clo. Wilt thou serve me? For since patiently and constantly thou hast stuck to the bare fortune of that beggar Posthumus, thou canst not in the course of gratitude but be a diligent follower of mine. Wilt thou serve me?

Pis. Sir, I will.

Clo. Give me thy hand, here's my purse. Hast thou any of thy late master's garments in thy possession?

Pis. I have, my lord, at my lodging, the same suit he wore when he took leave of my lady and mistress.

Clo. The first service thou dost me, fetch that suit hither: let it be thy first service; go.

Pis. I shall, my lord. [Exit.]

Clo. Meet thee at Milford-Haven:—I forgot to ask him one thing; I'll remember't anon:—Even there thou villain, Posthumus, wilt I kill thee.—I would these garments were come. She said upon a time, (the bitterness of it I now belch from my heart,) that she held the very garment of Posthumus in more respect than my noble and natural person, together with the adornment of my qualities. With that suit upon my back, will I ravish her: First kill him, and in her eyes; there shall she see my valour, which will then be a torment to her contempt. He on the ground, my speech of insultment ended on his dead body,—and when my lust hath dined, (which, as I say, to vex her, I will execute in the clothes that she so praised,) to the court I'll knock her back, foot her home again. She hath despised me rejoicingly, and I'll be merry in my revenge.

Re-enter PISANIO, with the Clothes.

Be those the garments?

Pis. Ay, my noble lord.

Clo. How long is't since she went to Milford-Haven?

Pis. She can scarce be there yet.

Clo. Bring this apparel to my chamber; that is the second thing that I have commanded thee: the third is, that thou shalt be a voluntary mute to my design. Be but dutious, and true preferment shall tender itself to thee.—My revenge is now at Milford: 'Would I had wings to follow it!—Come, and be true. [Exit.]

Pis. Thou bidd'st me to my loss: for, true to thee, Were to prove false: which I will never be, To him that is most true. To Milford go, And find not her whom thou pursu'st. Flow, flow, You heavenly blessings, on her! This fool's Be cross'd with slowness; labour be his need! [Exit.]

SCENE VI.—Before the Cave of BELARIUS.

Enter IMOGEN, in Boy's Clothes.

Imo. I see a man's life is a tedious one: I have tir'd myself; and for two nights together Have made the ground my bed. I should be sick, But that my resolution helps me.—Milford, When from the mountain-top Pisanio show'd thee, Thou wast within a-ben: O Jove! I think Foundations fly the wretched: such, I mean, Where they should be reliev'd. Two beggars told me, I could not miss my way: Will poor folks lie,

That have afflictions on them; knowing 'tis A punishment or trial? Yes; no wonder, When rich ones scarce tell true; To lapse in fulness is sorer, than to lie for need; and falsehood is worse in kings than beggars.—My dear lord! Thou art one o'the false ones: Now I think on thee,

My hunger's gone; but even before, I was At point to sink for food.—But what is this? Here is a path to it: 'Tis some savage hold: I were best not call; I dare not call: yet famine,

Ere clean it o'erthrow nature, makes it valliant. Plenty and peace breeds cowards; hardness ever

Of hardness is mother.—Ho! who's here? If any thing that's civil, speak; if savage, Take, or lend.—Ho!—No answer? then I'll enter.

Best draw my sword; and if mine enemy But fear the sword like me, he'll scarcely look Such a foe, good heavens! [Exit.] [She goes into the Cave.]

Enter BELARIUS, GUIDERIUS, and ANVIRAGUS.

Bel. You, Polydore, have prov'd best woodman,* and

Are master of the feast: Cadwal and I Will play the cook and servant; 'tis our match:† The sweat of industry would dry and die, But for the end it works to. Come; our stomachs

Will make what's homely, savoury: Weariness Can snore upon the flint, when restive sloth Finds the down pillow hard.—Now, peace be Poor house, that keep'st thyself! [here,]

Gui. I am thoroughly weary.

Arv. I am weak with toil, yet strong in appetite.

Gui. There's cold meat i'the cave; we'll browse on that,

Whilst what we have kill'd be cook'd.

Bel. Stay; come not in: [Looking in.] But that it eats our victuals, I should think Here were a fairy.

Gui. What's the matter, Sir?

Bel. By Jupiter, an angel! or, if not, An earthly paragon!—Behold divineness No elder than a boy!

Enter IMOGEN.

Imo. Good masters, harm me not: Before I enter'd here, I call'd; and thought To have begg'd, or bought, what I have took: Good troth,

I have stolen nought; nor would not, though I had found [meat:]

Gold strew'd o'the floor. Here's money for my I would have left it on the board, so soon As I had made my meal; and parted With prayers for the provider.

Gui. Money, youth?

Arv. All gold and silver rather turn to dirt! As 'tis no better reckon'd, but of those Who worship dirty gods.

Imo. I see you are angry: Know, if you kill me for my fault, I should Have died, had I not made it.

Bel. Whither bound?

Imo. To Milford-Haven, Sir.

Bel. What is your name?

Imo. Fidele, Sir: I have a kinsman, who is bound for Italy: he embark'd at Milford; To whom being going, almost spent with hunger, I am fallen in; this offence.

Bel. Pr'ythee, fair youth, Think us no churls; nor measure our good minds [ter'd:]

By this rude place we live in. Well encount' 'Tis almost night: you shall have better cheer Ere you depart; and thanks to stay and eat Boys, bid him welcome. [Exit.]

* Best hunter. † Agreement. ‡ In, for into.

Gui. Were you a woman, youth, [honesty, I should woo hard, but be your groom.—Imo I bid for you, as I'd buy.

Arr. I'll make't my comfort,
He is a man; I'll love him as my brother:—
And such a welcome as I'd give to him,
After long absence, such as your's:—Most welcome!

Be sprightly, for you fall 'mongst friends.

Imo. 'Mongst friends!
If brothers!—'Would it had been so, that they Had been my father's sons! then had my prize
Been less; and so more equal ballasting
To thee, Posthumus. [Aside.]

Bel. He wrings at some distress.

Gui. 'Would, I could free't!

Arr. Or I; whate'er it be,
What pain it cost, what danger! Gods!

Bel. Hark, boys.

Imo. Great men,

That had a court no bigger than this cave,
That did attend themselves, and had the virtue Which their own conscience seal'd them, (laying by

That nothing gift of differing* multitudes,
Could not out-peer these twain. Pardon me,
Gods!

I'd change my sex to be companion with them,
Since Leonatus's false.

Bel. It shall be so:

Boys, we'll go dress our hunt.—Fair youth,
come in: [supp'd,

Discourse is heavy, fasting; when we have
We'll manfully demand thee of thy story,
So far as thou wilt speak it.

Gui. Pray, draw near.

Arr. The night to the owl, and morn to the lark, less welcome.

Imo. Thanks, Sir.

Arr. I pray, draw near.

[Exeunt.]

SCENE VII.—Rome.

Enter two SENATORS and TRIBUNES.

1 Sen. This is the tenour of the emperor's writ;

That since the common men are now in action
'Gainst the Pannonians and Dalmatians;
And that the legions now in Gallia are Full weak to undertake our wars against
The fallen-off Britons; that we do incite
The gentry to this business: He creates
Lucius pro-consul: and to you the tribunes,
For this immediate levy, he commands
His absolute commission. Long live Cesar!

Tri. Is Lucius general of the forces?

2 Sen. Ay.

Tri. Remaining now in Gallia?

1 Sen. With those legions

Which I have spoke of, whereunto your levy Must be suppliant: The words of your commission

Will tie you to the numbers, and the time
Of their despatch.

Tri. We will discharge our duty. [Exeunt.]

ACT IV.

SCENE I.—The Forest, near the Cave.

Enter CLOTEN.

Clo. I am near to the place where they should meet, if Pisanio have mapped it truly.
How fit his garments serve me! Why should his mistress, who was made by him that made the tailor, not be fit too? the rather (saving reverence of the word) for 'tis said, a woman's fitness comes by fits. Therein I must play the workman. I dare speak it to myself, (for it is

* Unsteady.

† I e. Because.

not vain glory, for a man and his glass to confer; in his own chamber, I mean,) the hairs of my body are as well drawn as his; no less young, more strong, not beneath him in fortunes, beyond him in the advantage of the time, above him in birth, alike conversant in general services, and more remarkable in single oppositions: yet this imperseverant thing loves him in my despite. What mortality is! Posthumus, thy head, which is now growing upon thy shoulders, shall within this hour be off; thy mistress enforced; thy garments cut to pieces before thy face: and all this done, spurn her home to her father; who may, haply, be a little angry for my so rough usage; but my mother, having power of his testiness, shall turn all into my commendations. My horse is tied up safe:
Out, sword, and to a sore purpose! Fortune, put them into my hand! This is the very description of their meeting-place; and the fellow dares not deceive me. [Exit.]

SCENE II.—Before the Cave.

Enter, from the Cave, BELARIUS, GUIDERIUS, ARVIRAGUS, and IMOGEN.

Bel. You are not well: [To IMOGEN.] remain here in the cave;

We'll come to you after hunting.

Arr. Brother, stay here:

[To IMOGEN.]

Are we not brothers?

Imo. So man and man should be;

But clay and clay differs in dignity,

Whose dust is both alike. I am very sick.

Gui. Go you to hunting, I'll abide with him.

Imo. So sick I am not;—yet I am not well:

But not so citizen a wanton, as

To seem to die, ere sick: So please you leave me; Stick to your journal† course: the breach of custom

Is breach of all. I am ill; but your being by me
Can not amend me: Society is no comfort

To one not sociable: I'm not very sick, [here:]
Since I can reason of it. Pray you, trust me
I'll rob none but myself; and let me die,
Stealing so poorly.

Gui. I love thee; I have spoke it:

How much the quantity, the weight as much,
As I do love my father.

Bel. What? how? how?

Arr. If it be sin to say so, Sir, I yoke me
In my good brother's fault: I know not why
I love this youth; and I have heard you say, Love's reason's without reason; the hter at
door,

And a demand who is't shall die, I'd say
My father, not this youth.

Bel. O noble strain!

O worthiness of nature! breed of greatness!
Cowards father cowards, and base things are base:

Nature hath meal and bran: contempt and
grace.

I am not their father; yet who this should be,
Doth miracle itself, lov'd before me.— [Aside.]
'Tis the ninth hour of the morn.

Arr. Brother, farewell.

Imo. I wish ye sport.

Arr. You health.—So please you, Sir.

Imo. [Aside.] These are kind creatures.
Gods, what has I have heard!

Our courtiers say, all's savage but at court:
Experience, oh! thou disprov'st report!

The imperious† seas breed monsters; for the fish,
Poor tributary rivers as sweet fish.

I am sick still; heart-sick:—Pisanio,
I'll now taste of thy drug.

Gui. I could not stir him:

He said he was gentle,‡ but unfortunate;
Dishonestly afflicted, but yet honest.

Arr. Thus did he answer me: yet said here—
I might know more. [after]

* In single combat.
† Imperial.

‡ Keep your daily course.
§ Well-born.

Bel. To the field, to the field :—
We'll leave you for this time ; go in, and rest.

Arr. We'll not be long away.

Bel. Pray, be not sick,
For you must be our housewife.

Imo. Well, or ill,
I am bound to you.

Bel. And so shalt be ever. [Exit IMOGEN.
This youth, howe'er distress'd, appears he hath Good ancestors. [had

Arr. How angel-like he sings !

Gai. But his next cookery : He cut our roots in characters ;
And sate'd our broths, as Juno had been sick,
And he her diet.

Arr. Nobly he yokes
A smiling with a sigh ; as if the sigh
Was that it was, for not being such a smile ;
The smile mocking the sigh, that it would fly
From so divine a temple, to commix
With winds that sailors rail at.

Gai. I do note,
That grief and patience, rooted in him both,
Mingle their spurs* together.

Arr. Grow, patience !
And let the stinking elder, grief, untwine
His perishing root, with the increasing vine !

Bel. It is great morning. Come ; away.—
Who's there ?

Enter CLOTEN.

Clo. I cannot find those runagates ; that villain mock'd me :—I am faint. [lain

Bel. Those runagates !
Means he not us ? I partly know him ; 'tis Cloten, the son o'the queen. I fear some ambush.

I saw him not these many years, and yet
I know 'tis he :—We are held as outlaws :—
Hence.

Gai. He is but one : You and my brother
search
What companies are near : pray you, away ;
Let me alone with him.

[Exit BELARIUS and ARVIRAGUS.

Clo. Soft ! What are you
That fly me thus ? some villain mountaineers ?
I have heard of such.—What slave art thou ?

Gai. A thing
More slavish did I ne'er, than answering
A slave, without a knock.

Clo. Thou art a robber,
A law-breaker, a villain : Yield thee, thief.

Gai. To who ? to thee ? What art thou ? Have not I

An arm as big as thine ? a heart as big ?
Thy words, I grant, are bigger ; for I wear not My dagger in my mouth. Say, what thou art ;
Why I should yield to thee ?

Clo. Thou villain base,
Know'st me not by my clothes ?

Gai. No, nor thy tailor, rascal,
Who is thy grandfather : he made those clothes,
Which, as it seems make thee.

Clo. Thou precious varlet,
My tailor made them not.

Gai. Hence then, and thank [fool ;
The man that gave them thee. Thou art some
I am loath to beat thee.

Clo. Thou injurious thief,
Hear but my name, and tremble.

Gai. What's thy name ?

Clo. Cloten, thou villain.

Gai. Cloten, thou double villain, be thy
name ;
I cannot tremble at it ; were't toad, or adder,
'Twould move me sooner.

Clo. To thy further fear,
Nay, to thy mere confusion, thou shalt know
I'm son to the queen.

Gai. I'm sorry for't ; not seeming
So worthy as thy birth.

Clo. Art not afraid ?

Gai. Those that I reverence those I fear ;
the wise :

At fools I laugh, not fear them.

Clo. Die the death :

When I have slain thee with my proper hand,
I'll follow those that even now fled hence,
And on the gates of Lud's town set your heads :
Yield, rustic mountaineer. [Exeunt, fighting.

Enter BELARIUS and ARVIRAGUS.

Bel. No company's abroad.

Arr. None in the world : You did mistake him, sure.

Bel. I cannot tell : Long is it since I saw him, [favour
But time hath nothing blurr'd those lines of
Which then he wore ; the snatches in his voice,
And burst of speaking, were as his : I am absolute,

'Twas very Cloten.

Arr. In this place we left them :
I wish my brother make good time with him,
You say he is so fell.

Bel. Being scarce made up,
I mean, to man, he had not apprehension
Of roaring terrors ; for the effect of judgment
Is oft the cause of fear : But see, thy brother.

Re-enter GUIDERIUS, with CLOTEN's Head.

Gai. This Cloten was a fool ; an empty purse,
There was no money in't : not Hercules
Could have knock'd out his brains, for he had
none :

Yet I not doing this, the fool had borne
My head, as I do his.

Bel. What hast thou done ?

Gai. I am perfect, † what : cut off one Cloten's
head,

Son to the queen, after his own report ;
Who call'd me traitor, mountaineer ; and swore,
With his own single hand he'd take us in, ‡ Displace our heads, where (thank the gods) they grow,

And set them on Lud's town.

Bel. We are all undone.

Gai. Why, worry father, what have we to lose,
But, that he swore, to take our lives ? The law Protects not us : Then, why should we be tender,

To let an arrogant piece of flesh threat us :
Play judge, and executioner, all himself ;
For § we do fear the law ? What company
Discover you abroad ?

Bel. No single soul

Can we set eye on, but, in all safe reason,
He must have some attendants. Though his humour

Was nothing but mutation ; ¶ ay, and that
From one bad thing to worse ; not frenzy, not Absolute madness could so far have rav'd
To bring him here alone : Although, perhaps,
It may be heard at court, that such as we
Cave here, hunt here, are outlaws, and in time
May make some stronger head : the which he hearing,

(As it is like him,) might break out, and swear
He'd fetch us in ; yet is't not probable
To come alone, either he so undertaking,
Or they so suffering : then on the ground we
If we do fear this body hath a tail [fear,
More perilous than the head.

Arr. Let ordinance

Come as the gods foresay it : howsoe'er,
My brother hath done well.

Bel. I had no mind

To hunt this day : the boy Fidele's sickness
Did make my way long forth. ¶

Gai. With his own sword, ['t'en
Which he did wave against my throat, I have
His head from him : I'll throw't into the creek

* Countenance.

‡ Conquer, subdue.

¶ Change, alteration.

† I am well-informed what.

‡ Because.

¶ Did make my walk tedious.

* Spurs are the roots of trees.

Behind our rock, and let it to the sea,
And tell the fishes, he's the queen's son, Cloten :
That's all I reck. * [Exit.]

Bel. I fear 'twill be reveng'd :
'Would, Polydore, thou had'st not done't !
though valour
Becomes thee well enough.

Arr. 'Would I had done't,
So the revenge alone pursued me !—Polydore,
I love thee brotherly ; but envy much,
Thou hast robb'd me of this deed : I would revenges,
That possible strength might meet, would seek us through,
And put us to our answer.

Bel. Well, 'tis done :—
We'll hunt no more to-day, nor seek for danger
Where there's no profit. I prythee to our rock ;
You and Fidele play the cooks : I'll stay
Till hasty Polydore return, and bring him
To dinner presently.

Arr. Poor sick Fidele !
I'll willingly to him : To gain † his colour,
I'd let a parish of such Cloten's blood,
And praise myself for charity. [Exit.]

Bel. O thou goddess,
Thou divine Nature, how thyself thou blazon'st
In these two princely boys ! They are as gentle
As zephyrs, blowing below the violet,
Not wagging his sweet head : and yet as rough,
Their royal blood encha'd, as the rud'st wind,
That by the top doth take the mountain pine,
And make him stoop to the vale. 'Tis wonderful,

That an invisible instinct should frame them
To royalty unlearn'd ; honour untaught ;
Civility not seen from other ; valour,
That wildly grows in them, but yields a crop
As if it had been sow'd ! Yet still it's strange
What Cloten's being here to us portends ;
Or what his death will bring us.

Re-enter GUIDERIUS.

Gui. Where's my brother ?
I have sent Cloten's cloipoll down the stream,
In embassy to his mother ; his body's hostage
For his return. [Solemn Music.]

Bel. My ingenious instrument !
Hark, Polydore, it sounds ! But what occasion
Hath Cadwal now to give it motion ? Hark !

Gui. Is he at home ?

Bel. He went hence even now.

Gui. What does he mean ? since death of my dear'st mother
It did not speak before. All solemn things
Should answer solemn accidents. The matter ?
Triumphs for nothing, and lamenting toys, ‡
Is jollity for apes, and grief for boys.
Is Cadwal mad ?

Re-enter ARVIRAGUS, bearing IMOGEN, as dead in his arms.

Bel. Look, here he comes,
And brings the dire occasion in his arms,
Of what we blame him for !

Arr. The bird is dead,
That we have made so much on. I had rather
Have skip'd from sixteen years of age to sixty,
To have turn'd my leaping time into a crutch,
Than have seen this.

Gui. O sweetest, fairest lily !
My brother wears thee not the one half so well,
As when thou grew'st thyself.

Bel. O melancholy !
Who ever yet could sound thy bottom ? find
The ooze, to show what coast thy sluggish crare §
Might easiliest harbour in ?—Thou blessed thing !
Jove knows what man thou might'st have made !
but I,
Thou didst a most rare boy of melancholy !—
How found you him ?

* Care.
† Trifles.

‡ Regain, restore.
§ A slow-sailing unwieldy vessel.

Arr. Stark, * as you see :
Thus smiling, as some fly had tickled slumber,
Not as death's dart, being laugh'd at : his right cheek

Reposing on a cushion.

Gui. Where ?

Arr. O'the floor ;
His arms thus leagu'd : I thought he slept ; and put

My clouted brogues † from off my feet, whose rudeness

Answer'd my steps too loud.

Gui. Why, he but sleeps :
If he be gone, he'll make his grave a bed ;
With female fairies will his tomb be haunted,
And worms will not come to thee.

Arr. With fairest flowers,
Whilst summer lasts, and I live here, Fidele,
I'll sweeten thy sad grave : Thou shalt not lack
The flower that's like thy face, pale primrose ;
nor

The azur'd hare-bell, like thy veins ; no, nor
The leaf of eglantine, whom not to slander,
Out-sweeten'd not thy breath : the ruddock ‡
would,

With charitable bill (O bill, sore-shaming
Those rich-left heirs, that let their fathers lie
Without a monument !) bring thee all this ;
Yea, and furr'd moss besides, when flowers are none

To winter-ground § thy corse.

Gui. Prythee, have done ;
And do not play in wench-like words with that
Which is so serious. Let us bury him,
And not protract with admiration what
Is now due debt.—To the grave.

Arr. Say, where shall's lay him ?

Gui. By good Euriphile, our mother.

Arr. Be't so :

And let us, Polydore, though now our voices
Have got the mannish crack, sing him to the ground,

As once our mother ; use like note and words,
Save that Euriphile must be Fidele.

Gui. Cadwal,
I cannot sing : I'll weep, and word it with thee :
For notes of sorrow, out of tune, are worse
Than priests and fauns that lie.

Arr. We'll speak it then.

Bel. Great griefs, I see, medicine the less : for Cloten
Is quite forgot. He was a queen's son, boys :
And, though he came our enemy, remember,
He was paid ¶ for that : Though mean and mighty rotting

Together have one dust ; yet reverence,
(That angel of the world,) doth make distinction Of place 'tween high and low. Our foe was princely ;

And though you took his life, as being our foe,
Yet bury him as a prince.

Gui. Pray you, fetch him hither.
Therites' body is as good as Ajax,
When neither are alive.

Arr. If you'll go fetch him
We'll say our song the whilst.—Brother, begin.
[Exit BELARIUS.]

Gui. Nay, Cadwal, we must lay his head to the east ;
My father hath a reason for't.

Arr. 'Tis true.

Gui. Come on then, and remove him.

Arr. So,—begin.

SONG.

Gui. Fear no more the heat o'the sun,
Nor the furious winter's rages ;
Thou thy worldly task hast done,
Home art gone, and ta'en thy wages :
Golden lads and girls all must,
As chimney-sweepers, come to dust.

* Stiff. † Shoes plated with iron
‡ The red-breast. § Probably a corrupt reading, for, wither round thy corse. ¶ Furnished

Arr. Fear no more the frown o'the great,
Thou art past the tyrant's stroke;
Care no more to clothe, and eat;
To thee the reed is as the oak:
The sceptre, learning, physic, must
All follow this, and come to dust.

Gai. Fear no more the lightning-flash,
Arr. Nor the all-dreaded thunder-stone;

Gai. Fear not slander, censure^{*} rash;

Arr. Thou hast finish'd joy and moan:

Both. All lovers young, all lovers must Consign[†] to thee and come to dust.

Gai. No exorciser harm thee!

Arr. Nor witchcraft charm thee.

Gai. Ghost unlaid forbear thee!

Arr. Nothing ill come near thee!

Both. Quiet consummation have;
And renowned be thy grave!

Re-enter BELARIUS, with the Body of CLOTEN.

Gai. We have done our obsequies; Come, lay him down.

Bel. Here's a few flowers, but about midnight more: [night,

The herbs, that have on them cold dew o'the
Are strewings fitt'at for graves.—Upon their faces:—

You were as flowers, now wither'd: even so
These herb'lets shall, which we upon you strew.—

Come on, away: apart upon our knees.
The ground that gave them first, has them again;

Their pleasures here are past, so is their pain.
[Exeunt BELARIUS, GUIDERIUS, and ARVIRAGUS.

Imo. [Awaking.] Yes, Sir, to Milford-Haven;
Which is the way?—

I thank you.—By you bush?—Pray, how far thither?

'Ods pittikins! †—can it be six miles yet?
I have gone all night:—Faith, I'll lie down and sleep.

But, soft! no bedfellow:—O gods and goddesses!

[Seeing the Body.

These flowers are like the pleasures of the world;

This bloody man, the care on't.—I hope, I dream:

For, so, I thought I was a cave-keeper,
And cook to honest creatures: But 'tis not so;
'Twas but a bolt of nothing, shot at nothing,
Which the brain makes of fumes: Our very eyes

Are sometimes like our judgments, blind. Good faith,

I tremble still with fear: But if there be
Yet left in heaven as small a drop of pity
As a wren's eye, fear'd gods, a part of it!
The dream's here still: even when I wake, it is Without me as within me; not imagin'd, felt.
A headless man!—The garments of Posthumus!

I know the shape of his leg: this is his hand;
His foot Mercurial; his Martial thigh;
The brawns of Hercules: but his Jovial face—
Murder in heaven?—How?—'Tis gone.—Pisanio,
All curses madd'd Hecuba gave the Greeks,
And mine to boot, be darted on thee! Thou,
Conspir'd with that irregular & devil, Cloten,
Hast here cut off my lord.—To write and read,
Be henceforth treacherous!—Damn'd Pisanio
Hath with his forged letters, damn'd Pisanio—
From this most bravest vessel of the world
Struck the main-top!—O Posthumus! alas,
Where is thy head? where's that? Ah me!
where's that?

Pisanio might have kill'd thee at the heart,

And left this head on.—How should this be?
Pisanio!

'Tis he and Cloten: malice and lucre in them
Have laid this woe here. O 'tis pregnant, pregnant! *

The drug he gave me, which, he said, was precious

And cordial to me, have I not found it
Murd'rous to the senses! That confirms it home:

This is Pisanio's deed, and Cloten's: O!—
Give colour to my pale cheek with thy blood,
That we the horrid may seem to those
Which chance to find us: O my lord, my lord!

Enter LUCIUS, a CAPTAIN, and other OFFICERS, and a SOOTHSAYER.

Cap. To them the legions garrison'd in Gallia
After your will, have cross'd the sea attending
You here at Milford-Haven, with your ships:
They are here in readiness.

Luc. But what from Rome?

Cap. The senate hath stirr'd up the confiners,
And gentlemen of Italy; most willing spirits,
That promise noble service: and they come
Under the conduct of bold Iachimo,
Sienna's brother.

Luc. When expect you them?

Cap. With the next benefit o'the wind.

Luc. This forwardness
Makes our hopes fair. Command our present numbers

[Sir,
Be muster'd; bid the captains look to't.—Now,
What have you dream'd, of late, of this war's purpose?

Sooth. Last night the very gods show'd me a vision:

[I fast, and pray'd for their intelligence,
'Thus:—

I saw Jove's bird, the Roman eagle, wing'd
From the spongy south to this part of the west,
There vanish'd in the sunbeams: which portends,

[Unless my sins abuse my divination,
Success to the Roman host.

Luc. Dream often so,
And never false.—Soft, ho! what trunk is here,
Without his top? The ruin speaks, that some-time

It was a worthy building.—How! a page!—
Or dead, or sleeping on him? But dead, rather:
For nature doth abhor to make his bed
With the defunct, or sleep upon the dead.—
Let's see the boy's face.

Cap. He is alive, my lord.

Luc. He'll then instruct us of this body.—
Young one,

Inform us of thy fortunes; for, it seems,
They crave to be demanded: Who is this,
Thou mak'st thy bloody pillow? Or who was he
That, otherwise than noble nature did,
Hath alter'd that good picture? What's thy interest

In this sad wreck? How came it? Who is it?
What art thou?

Imo. I am nothing: or if not,
Nothing to be were better. This was my mas
A very vallant Briton, and a good, [ter,
That here by mountaineers lies slain:—Alas!
There are no more such masters: I may wander
From east to occident, † cry out for service,
'Try many, all good, serve truly, never Find such another master.

Luc. 'Lack, good youth!
Thou mov'st no less with thy complaining,

than
Thy master in bleeding: Say his name, good friend.

Imo. Richard du Champ.—If I do lie, and do
No harm by it, though the gods hear, I hope

[Aside.
They'll pardon it.—Say you, Sir?

* Judgment. † Seal the same contract.
‡ This diminutive adjuration is derived from God's my pity. † An arrow. ‡ A face like Jove's. † Lawless, licentious.

* I. e. 'Tis a ready, apposite conclusion.
† The west. ‡ Her fingers.

Luc. Thy name ?

Imo. Fidele.

Luc. Thou dost approve thyself the very same :
Thy name well fits thy faith ; thy faith, thy name.

Wilt take thy chance with me ? I will not say,
Thou shalt be so well master'd ; but be sure,
No less belov'd. The Roman emperor's letters,
Sent by a consul to me, should not sooner
Than thine own worth prefer thee : Go with me.

Imo. I'll follow, Sir. But first, an't please
the gods,
I'll hide my master from the flies, as deep
As these poor pickaxes * can dig : and when
With wild wood-leaves and weeds I have strew'd his grave,
And on it said a century of prayers,
Such as I can, twice o'er, I'll weep and sigh ;
And, leaving so his service, follow you,
So please you entertain me.

Luc. Ay, good youth ;
And rather father thee, than master thee.—
My friends,
The boy hath taught us manly duties : Let us
Find out the prettiest daisied plot we can,
And make him with our pikes and partizans
A grave : Come, arm him.—Boy, he is pre-ferr'd
By thee to us ; and he shall be interr'd,
As soldiers can. Be cheerful ; wipe thine eyes :
Some falls are means the happier to arise.

[Exeunt.]

SCENE III.—A Room in CYMBELINE'S Palace.

Enter CYMBELINE, LORDS, and PISANIO.

Cym. Again ; and bring me word how 'tis
with her.
A fever with the absence of her son ;
A madness, of which her life's in danger :—
Heavens,
How deeply you at once do touch me ! Imogen,
The great part of my comfort, gone ; my queen
Upon a desperate bed ; and in a time
When fearful wars point at me, her son gone,
So needful for this present : It strikes me,
past
The hope of comfort.—But for thee, fellow,
Who needs must know of her departure, and Dost seem so ignorant, we'll enforce it from
thee
By a sharp torture.

Pis. Sir, my life is your's,
I humbly set it at your will : But, for my mistress,
I nothing know where she remains, why gone,
Nor when she purposes return. Beseech your highness,
Hold me your loyal servant.

1 Lord. Good my liege,
The day that she was missing, he was here :
I dare be bound he's true, and shall perform
All parts of his subjection loyally.
For Cloten,—

There wants no diligence in seeking him,
And will no doubt, be found.

Cym. The time's troublesome :
We'll slip you for a season ; but our jealousy
Does yet depend. [To PISANIO.]

1 Lord. So please your majesty,
The Roman legions, all from Gallia drawn,
Are landed on your coast with a supply
Of Roman gentlemen, by the senate sent.

Cym. Now for the counsel of my son and queen !—

I am amaz'd with matter. †

1 Lord. Good my liege,
Your preparation can affront ‡ no less Than what you hear of : come more, for more you're ready :

* Her fingers.
business.

† Confounded by a variety of ‡ Encounter.

The want is, but to put those powers * in motion,
That long to move.

Cym. I thank you : Let's withdraw :
And meet the time as it seeks us. We fear not What can from Italy annoy us ; but
We grieve at chances here.—Away : [Exeunt.]

Pis. I heard no letter from my master, since
I wrote him, Imogen was slain : 'Tis strange :
Nor hear I from my mistress, who did promise
To yield me often tidings ; Neither know I
What is betid to Cloten ; but remain
Perplex'd in all. The heavens still must work :
Wherein I am false, I am honest ; not true, to be true.

These present wars shall find I love my country,
Even to the note † o'the king, or I'll fall in
them.

All other doubts, by time let them be clear'd :
Fortune brings in some boats, that are not steer'd. [Exit.]

SCENE IV.—Before the Cave.

Enter BELARIUS, GUIDERIUS, and ARVIRAGUS.

Gui. The noise is round about us.

Bel. Let us from it.

Arv. What pleasure, Sir, find we in life, to lock it
From action and adventure ?

Gui. Nay, what hope
Have we in hiding us ? this way, the Romans
Must or for Britons slay us, or receive us
For barbarous and unnatural revolts ‡
During their use, and slay us after.

Bel. Sons,
We'll higher to the mountains ; there secure us.
To the king's party there's no going ; newness Of Cloten's death (we being not known, not master'd
Among the bands) may drive us to a render §
Where we have liv'd ; and so extort from us
That which we have done, whose answer would be death

Drawn on with torture.

Gui. This is, Sir, a doubt,
In such a time, nothing becoming you,
Nor satisfying us.

Arv. It is not likely,
That when they hear the Roman horses neigh,
Behold their quarter'd fires, have both their eyes
And ears so cloy'd importantly as now,
That they will waste their time upon our note, ¶
To know from whence we are.

Bel. O I am known
Of many in the army : many years,
Though Cloten then but young, you see, not wore him

From my remembrance. And, besides, the king
Hath not deserv'd my service, nor your loves ;
Who find in my exile the want of breeding,
The certainty of this hard life ; aye hopeless
To have the courtesy your cradle promis'd,
But to be still hot summer's tanlings, and
The shrinking slaves of winter.

Gui. Than be so,
Better to cause to be. Pray, Sir, to the army :
I and my brother are not known ; yourself,
So out of thought, and thereto so o'ergrown,
Cannot be question'd.

Arv. By this sun that shines,
I'll thither : What thing is it, that I never Did see man die ? scarce ever look'd on blood,
But that of coward hares, hot goats, and veni-
son ?

Never bestrid a horse, save one that had
A rider like myself, who ne'er wore rowel
Nor iron on his heel ? I am asham'd
To look upon the holy sun, to have
The benefit of his bless'd beams remaining
So long a poor unknown.

Gui. By heavens, I'll go :

* Forces.

† Notice.

‡ Revolters.

§ An account.

¶ Noticing us.

If you will bless me, Sir, and give me leave,
I'll take the better care; but if you will not,
The hazard therefore due fall on me, by
The hands of Romans!

Arv. So say I; Amen.

Bel. No reason I, since on your lives you set
So slight a valuation, should reserve
My crack'd one to more care. Have with you,
boys:

If in your country wars you chance to die,
That is my bed too, lads, and there I'll lie:
Lead, lead.—The time seems long; their blood thinks scorn, [Aside.]

Till it fly out, and show them princes born.
[Exeunt.]

ACT V.

SCENE I.—A Field between the British and Roman Camps.

Enter POSTHUMUS, with a bloody Handkerchief.

Post. Yea, bloody cloth, I'll keep thee; for
I wish'd [ones]
Thou should'st be colour'd thus. You married
If each of you would take this course, how many [selves]
Must murder wives much better than them-
For wrying* but a little!—O Pisanio!
Every good servant does not all commands:
No bond, but to do just ones.—Gods! if you Should have ta'en vengeance on my faults, I never

Had liv'd to put on† this: so had you sav'd
The noble Imogen to repent; and struck Me wretch, more worth your vengeance. But,
alack,

You snatch some hence for little faults; that's
To have them fall no more: you some permit
To second ills with ills, each elder worse;
And make them dread it to the doer's thrift.
But Imogen is your own: Do your best wills,
And make me bless'd to obey!—I am brought
hither

Among the Italian gentry, and to fight Against my lady's kingdom: 'Tis enough
That, Britain, I have kill'd thy mistress; peace!
I'll give no wound to thee. Therefore, good
heavens,

Hear patiently my purpose: I'll disrobe me
Of these Italian weeds, and suit myself
As does a Briton peasant: so I'll fight Against the part I come in; so I'll die
For thee, O Imogen, even for whom my life
Is, every breath, a death: and thus, unknown,
Pitied nor hated, to the face of peril
Myself I'll dedicate. Let me make men know
More valour in me, than my habits show.
Gods, put the strength o'the Leonati in me!
To shame the guise o'the world, I will begin
The fashion, less without, and more within.

[Exit.]

SCENE II.—The same.

Enter at one side, LUCIUS, IACHIMO, and the Roman Army; at the other side, the British Army; LEONATUS POSTHUMUS following it, like a poor Soldier. They march over, and go out. Alarms. Then enter again in skirmish, IACHIMO, and POSTHUMUS: he conquisheth and disarmeth IACHIMO, and then leaves him.

Iach. This heaviness and guilt within my bosom
Takes off my manhood: I have belied a lady,
The princess of this country and the air on't
Revengeably enfeebles me: Or could this carl,†
A very drudge of nature's, have subdu'd me,

* Deviating from the right way. † Incite, instigate.
‡ Clown.

In my profession! Knighthoods and honours borne

As I wear mine, are titles but of scorn.
If that thy gentry, Britain, go before
This lout, as he exceeds our lords, the odds
Is, that we scarce are men, and you are gods.

[Exit.]

The Battle continues; the Britons fly; CYMBELINE is taken: then enter to his rescue, BELARIUS, GUIDERIUS, and AR VIRAGUS.

Bel. Stand, stand! We have the advantage of the ground;

The lane is guarded, nothing routs us, but
The villany of our fears.

God. Arv. Stand, stand, and fight!

Enter POSTHUMUS, and seconds the Britons: They rescue CYMBELINE, and exeunt. Then, enter LUCIUS, IACHIMO, and IMOGEN.

Luc. Away, boy, from the troops, and save
thyself:

For friends kill friends, and the disorder's such
As war were hood-wink'd.

Iach. 'Tis their fresh supplies.

Luc. It is a day turn'd strangely: or betimes
Let's re-enforce or fly. [Exeunt.]

SCENE III.—Another Part of the Field.

Enter POSTHUMUS and a British Lord.

Lord. Cam'st thou from where they made the stand?

Post. I did:

Though you, it seems, come from the fliers.

Lord. I did.

Post. No blame be to you, Sir: for all was lost

But that the heavens fought: The king himself
Of his wings destitute, the army broken,
And but the backs of Britons seen, all flying
Through a strait lane; the enemy full-hearted, Lolling the tongue with slaughtering, having
work

More plentiful than tools to do't, struck down
Some mortally, some slightly touch'd, some falling [danc'd]

Merely through fear: that the strait pass was
With dead men, hurt behind, and cowards living
To die with lengthen'd shame:

Lord. Where was this lane?

Post. Close by the battle, ditch'd, and wall'd with turf;

Which gave advantage to an ancient soldier,—
An honest one, I warrant; who deserved
So long a breeding, as his white beard came to,
In doing this for his country;—athwart the lane,

He with two striplings, (lads more like to run
The country base,† than to commit such slaughter;

With faces fit for masks, or rather fairer
Than those for preservation cas'd, or shame,)
Made good the passage; cry'd to those that fled,
Our Britain's hearts die flying, not our men:
To darkness fleet, souls that fly backwards!
Stand;

Or we are Romans, and will give you that Like beasts, which you shun beastly; and may save,

But to look back in frown: stand, stand.—
These three,

Three thousand confident, in act as many,
(For three performers are the file, when all
The rest do nothing,) with this word, stand,
stand,

Accommodated by the place, more charming,
With their own nobleness, (which could have turn'd

A distaff to a lance,) gilded pale looks,
Part, shame, part, spirit renew'd; that some,
turn'd coward

* Blocked up.

† A country game called prison-bars, vulgarly prison-base.

But by example (O a sin in war, Damn'd in the first beginners!) 'gan to look
The way that they did, and to grin like lions
Upon the pikes o'the hunters. Then began
A stop i'the chaser, a retire; anon,
A rout, confusion thick: Forthwith they fly
Chickens, the way which they stoop'd eagles;
The strides they victors made: and now our 'Like fragments in hard voyages,) became
The life o'the need; having found the back-door
Of the unguarded hearts, Heavens, how they
Some, slain before; some, dying; some, their O'erborne i'the former wave: ten, chas'd by one.
Are now each one the slaughter-man of twenty:
Those, that would die or ere resist, are grown
The mortal bugs* o'the field.

Lord. This was strange chance:

A narrow lane! an old man, and two boys!

Post. Nay, do not wonder at it: You are

Rather to wonder at the things you hear,
Than to work any. Will you rhyme upon't,
And vent it for a mockery? Here is one:
*Two boys, an old man, twice a boy, a lane,
Preserv'd the Britons, was the Romans' bane.*

Lord. Nay, be not angry, Sir.

Post. 'Lack, to what end?

Who dares not stand his foe, I'll be his friend:
For if he'll do, as he is made to do,
I know, he'll quickly fly my friendship too.
You have put me into rhyme.

Lord. Farewell, you are angry. [Exit.]

Post. Still going?—This is a lord! O noble

To be the i'the field, and ask, what news, of me!
To-day, how many would have given their honours

To have sav'd their carcasses? took heel to do't,
And yet died too! I, in mine own woe charm'd,
Could not find death, where I did hear him
groan;

Nor feel him where he struck: Being an ugly monster.

'Tis strange, he hides him in fresh cups, soft Sweet words; or hath more ministers than we
That draw his knives i'the war.—Well, I will find him:

For being now a favourer to the Roman,
No more a Briton, I have resum'd again
The part I came in: Fight I will no more,
But yield me to the veriest hind, that shall Once touch my shoulder. Great the slaughter is Here made by the Roman; great the answer be Britons must take; for me my ransom's death;
On either side I come to spend my breath,
Which neither here I'll keep, nor bear again,
But end it by some means for Imogen.

Enter two British CAPTAINS, and Soldiers.

1 Cap. Great Jupiter be prais'd! Lucius is taken;

'Tis thought, the old man and his sons were

2 Cap. There was a fourth man, in a silly
That gave the affront† with them.

1 Cap. So 'tis reported:
But none of them can be found.—Stand! who is
there?

Post. A Roman;
Who had not now been drooping here, if se-
Had answer'd him.

2 Cap. Lay hands on him; a dog!
A leg of Rome shall not return to tell What crows have peck'd them here: He brags his service

As if he were of note: bring him to the king.

Enter CYMBELINE, attended; BELARIUS, GUI-DERIUS, ARVIRAGUS, PISANIO, and ROMAN CAPTIVES. The CAPTAINS present POSTHU-

* Terrors.

† Encounter.

MUS to CYMBELINE, who delivers him over to a JAILER: after which, all go out.

SCENE IV.—A Prison.

Enter POSTHUMUS, and two JAILERS.

1 Jail. You shall not now be stolen, you have looks upon you;

So graze as you find pasture.

2 Jail. Ay, or a stomach. [Exeunt JAILERS.]

Post. Most welcome, bondage! for thou art a
way,

I think to liberty: Yet am I better Than one that's sick o'the gout: since he had rather

Groan so in perpetuity, than be cur'd
By the sure physcian, death; who is the key
To unbar these locks. My conscience! thou art fetter'd

More than my shanks and wrists: You good gods, give me

The penitent instrument, to pick that bolt,
Then, free for ever! Is't enough, I am sorry?
So children temporal fathers do appease;
Gods are more full of mercy. Must I repent?

I cannot do it better than in gyves,*
Desir'd, more than constrain'd: to satisfy,
If of my freedom 'tis the main part, take
No stricter render of me, than my all.

I know you are more clement than vile men
Who of their broken debtors take a third,
A sixth, a tenth, letting them thrive again
On their abatement; that's not my desire:
For Imogen's dear life, take mine; and though
'Tis not so dear, yet 'tis a life; you coin'd it:
'Tween man and man, they weigh not every stamp;

Though light, take pieces for the figure's sake:
You rather mine, being your's: And so great powers,

If you will take this audit, take this life,
And cancel these cold bonds. O Imogen!
I'll speak to thee in silence. [He sleeps.]

Solemn music.† Enter, as an Apparition, SICILIUS LEONATUS, Father to POSTHUMUS, an old Man, attired like a Warrior; leading in his hand an ancient Matron, his Wife, and Mother to POSTHUMUS, with music before them. Then, after other music, follow the two young LEONATI, Brothers to POSTHUMUS, with Wounds, as they died in the Wars. They circle POSTHUMUS round, as he lies sleeping.

Sici. No more, thou thunder master show
Thy spite on mortal flies:
With Mars fall out, with Juno chide,
That thy adulteries
Rates and revenges.

Hath my poor boy done aught but well,
Whose face I never saw?
I died, whilst in the womb he stay'd
Attending Nature's law.

Whose father then (as men report,
Thou orphans' father art,)
Thou should'st have been, and shielded him
From this earth-vexing smart.

Moth. Lucina lent not me her aid,
But took me in my throes;
That from me was Posthumus ript,
Came crying 'mongst his foes,
A thing of pity!

Sici. Great nature, like his ancestry,
Moulded the stuff so fair,
That he deserv'd the praise o' the world
As great Sicilius' heir.

1 Bro. When once he was mature for man,
In Britain where was he

* Fetters.

† Shakespeare, who has conducted this fifth act with such matchless skill, could never have interrupted the fable by this contemptible nonsense: the unjustifiable interpolation of some monastical blockhead.

That could stand up his parallel;
Or fruitful object be
In eye of Imogen, that best
Could deem his dignity?

Moth. With marriage wherefore was he
To be exil'd and thrown [mock'd
From Leonati's seat, and cast
From her his-dearest one,
Sweet Imogen?

Sici. Why did you suffer Iachimo,
Slight thing of Italy,
To taint his nobler heart and brain
With needless jealousy;
And to become the geck* and scorn
O' the other's villany?

2 Bro. For this, from stiller seats we came,
Our parents, and us twain,
That, striking in our country's cause,
Fell bravely, and were slain;
Our fealty, and Tenantius' right,
With honour to maintain.

1 Bro. Like hardiment Posthumus hath
To Cymbeline perform'd:
Then Jupiter, thou king of gods,
Why hast thou thus adjourn'd
The graces for his merits due;
Being all to dolours turn'd?

Sici. Thy crystal window ope; look out;
No longer exercise,
Upon a valliant race, thy harsh
And potent injuries:

Moth. Since, Jupiter, our son is good,
Take off his miseries.

Sici. Peep through thy marble mansion; help!
Or we poor ghosts will cry
To the shining synod of the rest,
Against thy deity.

2 Bro. Help, Jupiter; or we appeal,
And from thy justice fly.

JUPITER descends in Thunder and Lightning, sitting upon an eagle; he throws a Thunder-bolt. The Ghosts fall on their knees.

Jup. No more, you petty spirits of region
low, [ghosts,
Offend our hearing; hush!—How dare you
Accuse the thunderer, whose bolt you know,
Sky-planted, batters all rebelling coasts?
Poor shadows of Elysium, hence; and rest
Upon your never-withering banks of flowers:
Be not with mortal accidents oppress'd;
No cure of your's it is, you know, 'tis our's.
Whom best I love, I cross; to make my gift,
The more delay'd, delighted. Be content;
Your low-laid son our godhead will uplift:
His comforts thrive, his trials well are spent.
Our jovial star reign'd at his birth, and in
Our temple was he married.—Rise, and fade!—
He shall be lord of lady Imogen,
And happier much by his affliction made.
This tablet lay upon his breast; wherein
Our pleasure his full fortune doth confine;
And so, away: no further with your din
Express impatience, lest you stir up mine.—
Mount, eagle, to my palace crystalline.

[Ascends.
Sici. He came in thunder; his celestial
breath
Was sulphurous to smell: the holy eagle
Sleop'd as to foot us: his ascension is More sweet than our bless'd fields: his royal bird
Prunes the immortal wing, and cloyes his beak,
As when his god is pleas'd.

All. Thanks, Jupiter!

Sici. The marble pavement closes, he is enter'd
His radiant roof:—Away! and, to be blest,
Let us with care perform his great behest.

[Ghosts vanish.

Post. [Waking.] Sleep, thou hast been a grandsire, and begot

* The fool.

A father to me: and thou hast created
A mother and two brothers: But (O scorn!)
Gone! they went hence so soon as they were born. [pend

And so I am awake.—Poor wretches that de-
On greatness' favour, dream as I have done;
Wake, and find nothing.—but, alas, I swerve:
Many dream not to find, neither deserve,
And yet are steep'd in favours; so am I,
That have this golden chance, and know not why.

What furies haunt this ground? A book! O,
rare one!

Be not, as is our fangled world, a garment
Nobler than that it covers: let thy effects
So follow, to be most unlike our courtiers,
As good as promise.

[Reads.] *When as a lion's whelp shall, to himself unknown, without seeking find,
and be embraced by a piece of tender air;
and when from a stately cedar shall be lopped branches, which, being dead many years, shall after revive, be jointed to the old stock, and freshly grow; then shall Posthumus end his miseries, Britain be fortunate, and flourish in peace and plenty.*

'Tis still a dream; or else such stuff as madmen
Tongue, and brain not: either both, or nothing:
Or senseless speaking, or a speaking such
As sense cannot untie. Be what it is,
The action of my life is like it, which
I'll keep, if but for sympathy.

Re-enter JAILERS.

Jail. Come, Sir, are you ready for death?

Post. Over-roasted rather: ready long ago.

Jail. Hanging is the word Sir; if you be ready for that, you are well cooked.

Post. So, if I prove a good repast to the spectators, the dish pays the shot.

Jail. A heavy reckoning for you, Sir: But the comfort is, you shall be called to no more payments, fear no more tavern bills: which are often the sadness of parting, as the procuring of mirth: you come in faint for want of meat, depart reeling with too much drink; sorry that you have paid too much, and sorry that you are paid too much; purse and brain both empty:
the brain the heavier for being too light, the purse too light, being drawn of heaviness: Oh!
of this contradiction you shall now be quit.—Oh!
the charity of a penny cord! it sums up thousands in a trice: you have no true debtor and creditor but it; of what's past is, and to come,
the discharge:—Your neck, Sir, is pen, book,
and counters; so the acquittance follows.

Post. I am merrier to die, than thou art to live.

Jail. Indeed, Sir, he that sleeps feels not the tooth-ache: But a man that were to sleep your sleep, and a hangman to help him to bed, I think he would change places with his officer:
for look you, Sir, you know not which way you shall go.

Post. Yes indeed do I, fellow.

Jail. Your death has eyes in's head then; I have not seen him so pictured: you must either be directed by some that take upon them to know; or take upon yourself that, which I am sure you do not know; or jump* the after-inquiry on your own peril: and how you shall speed in your own journey's end, I think you'll never return to tell me.

Post. I tell thee, fellow, there are none want eyes to direct them the way I am going, but such as wink, and will not use them.

Jail. What an infinite mock is this, that a man should have the best use of eyes, to see the way of blindness! I am sure, hanging's the way of winking.

* Hazard.

Enter a MESSENGER.

Mess. Knock off his manacles; bring your prisoner to the king.

Post. Thou bringest good news—I am called to be made free.

Jail. I'll be hang'd them.

Post. Thou shalt be then freer than a jailer; no bolts for the dead.

[Exeunt POSTHUMUS and MESSENGER.]

Jail. Unless a man would marry a gallows, and beget young gibbets, I never saw one so prone.* Yet, on my conscience, there are verier knaves desire to live, for all he be a Roman: and there be some of them too, that die against their wills; so should I, if I were one. I would we were all of one mind, and one mind good; Oh! there were desolation of jailers, and gallowses! I speak against my present profit; but my wish hath a preferment in't. [Exeunt.]

SCENE V.—CYMBELINE'S TENT.

Enter CYMBELINE, BELARIUS, GUIDERIUS, ARVIRAGUS, PISANIO, Lords, Officers, and Attendants.

Cym. Stand by my side, you whom the gods have made Preservers of my throne. Woe is my heart, That the poor soldier, that so richly fought, Whose rags sham'd gilded arms, whose naked breast Stepp'd before targe† of proof, cannot be found: He shall be happy that can find him, if Our grace can make him so.

Bel. I never saw Such noble fury in so poor a thing; Such precious deeds in one that promis'd nought But beggary and poor looks.

Cym. No tidings of him?

Pis. He hath been search'd among the dead and living, But no trace of him.

Cym. To my grief, I am The heir of his reward; which I will add To you the liver, heart and brain of Britain, [To BELARIUS, GUIDERIUS, and ARVIRAGUS.] By whom, I grant, she lives; 'Tis now the time To ask of whence you are:—report it.

Bel. Sir, In Cambria are we born, and gentlemen: Farther to boast, were neither true nor modest, Unless I add, we are honest.

Cym. Bow your knees: Arise my knights o'the battle: I create you Companions to our person, and will fit you With dignities becoming your estates.

Enter CORNELIUS and LADIES.

There's business in these faces:—Why so sadly Greet you our victory? You look like Romans, And not o'the court of Britain.

Cor. Hail, great king! To sour your happiness, I must report The queen is dead.

Cym. Whom worse than a physician Would this report become? But I consider, By medicine life may be prolong'd, yet death Will seize the doctor too.—How ended she?

Cor. With horror, madly dying, like her life; Which, being cruel to the world, concluded Most cruel to herself. What she confess'd, I will report, so please you: These her women Can trip me if I err: who, with wet cheeks, Were present when she finish'd.

Cym. Pry'thee, say.

Cor. First she confess'd she never lov'd you; only Affected greatness got by you, not you: Married your royalty, was wise to your place; Abhorr'd your person.

Cym. She alone new this:

And, but she spoke it dying, I would not Believe her lips in opening it. Proceed.

Cor. Your daughter, whom she bore in hand to love

With such integrity, she did confess Was as a scorpion to her sight; whose life, But that her flight prevented it, she had Ta'en off by poison.

Cym. O most delicate fiend! Who is't can read a woman?—Is there more?

Cor. More, Sir, and worse. She did confess, she had

For you a mortal mineral; which, being took, Should by the minute feed on life, and, ling'ring, By inches waste you: In which time she pur-

pos'd By watching, weeping, tendance, kissing, to O'ercome you with her show; yea, and in time, (When she had fitted you with her craft,) to work

Her son into the adoption of the crown. But failing of her end by his strange absence, Grew shameless desperate: open'd, in despite Of heaven and men, her purposes; repented The evils she hatch'd were not effected; so, Despairing, died.

Cym. Heard you all this, her women?

Lady. We did so, please your highness.

Cym. Mine eyes Were not in fault, for she was beautiful; Mine ears, that heard her flattery; nor my heart, That thought her like her seeming; it had been vicious,

To have mistrusted her: yet, O my daughter! That, it was folly in me, thou may'st say, And prove it in thy feeling. Heaven mend all!

Enter LUCIUS, IACHIMO, the SOOTHSAYER, and other Roman Prisoners, guarded; POSTHUMUS behind, and IMOGEN.

Thou com'st not, Caius, now for tribute; that The Britons have raz'd out, though with the loss

Of many a bold one; whose kinsmen have made suit, [slaughter]

That their good souls may be appeas'd with Of you their captives, which ourself have So, think of your estate. [granted:]

Luc. Consider, Sir, the chance of war: the day

Was your's by accident; had it gone with us, We should not, when the blood was cool, have threaten'd [gods]

Our prisoners with the sword. But since the Will have it thus, that nothing but our lives May be call'd ransom, let it come: suffoeth, A Roman with a Roman's heart can suffer: Augustus lives to think on't: And so much For my peculiar care. This one thing only I will entreat: My boy, a Briton born, Let him be ransom'd; never master had A page so kind, so dutious, diligent, So tender over his occasions, true, So feat,* so nurse-like: let his virtue join With my request, which, I'll make bold, your highness Cannot deny; he hath done no Briton harm, Though he have serv'd a Roman: save him, Sir, And spare no blood beside.

Cym. I have surely seen him: His favour† is familiar to me.— Boy, thou hast look'd thyself into my grace, And art mine own.—I know not why, nor wherefore,

To say, live, boy: ne'er thank thy master; live: And ask of Cymbeline what boon thou wilt, Fitting my bounty, and thy state, I'll give it; Yea, though thou do demand a prisoner, The noblest ta'en.

Imo. I humbly thank your highness.

Luc. I do not bid thee beg my life, good lad; And yet, I know, thou wilt.

* Forward.

† Target, shield.

* Dextrous.

† Countenance.

Imo. No, no : alack,
There's other work in hand : I see a thing
Bitter to me as death : your life, good master,
Must shuffle for itself.

Luc. The boy deceiv's me,
He leaves me, soorns me : Briefly die their joys,
That place them on the truth of girls and boys.—

Why stands he so perplex'd ?

Cym. What would'st thou, boy ?
I love thee more and more ; think more and
more

What's best to ask. Know'st him thou look'st on ? speak,

Wilt have him live ? Is he thy kin ? thy friend ?

Imo. He is a Roman ; no more kin to me,
Than I to your highness ; who, being born your Am something nearer. [vassal,

Cym. Wherefore ey'st him so ?

Imo. I'll tell you, Sir, in private, if you please
To give me hearing.

Cym. Ay, with all my heart,
And lend my best attention. What's thy name ?

Imo. Fidele, Sir.

Cym. Thou art my good youth, my page ;
I'll be thy master : Walk with me ; speak freely.

[CYMBELINE and IMOGEN converse apart.

Bel. Is not this boy reviv'd from death ?

Arr. One and another

Not more resembles : That sweet rosy lad,
Who died, and was Fidele :—What think you ?

Gul. The same dead thing alive.

Bel. Peace, peace ! see further ; he eyes us not ; forbear ;

Creatures may be alike : were't he, I am sure
He would have spoke to us.

Gul. But we saw him dead.

Bel. Be silent ; let's see further.

Pis. It is my mistress : [Aside.
Since she is living, let the time run on,
To good, or bad.

[CYMBELINE and IMOGEN come forward.

Cym. Come, stand thou by our side :
Make thy demand aloud.—Sir, [To IACH.] step
you forth ;

Give answer to this boy, and do it freely ;
Or, by our greatness, and the grace of it,
Which is our honour, bitter torture shall Winnow the truth from falsehood.—On, speak
to him

Imo. My boon is, that this gentleman may render
Of whom he had this ring.

Post. What's that to him ? [Aside.

Cym. That diamond upon your finger, say,
How came it yours ?

Iach. Thou'lt torture me to leave unspoken
that

Which, to be spoke, would torture thee.

Cym. How ! me ?

Iach. I am glad to be constrain'd to utter that which

Torments me to conceal. By villany
I got this ring ; 'twas Leonatus' jewel :
Whom thou didst banish ; and (which more may grieve thee,

As it doth me,) a nobler Sir ne'er liv'd
'Twixt sky and ground. Wilt thou hear more,
my lord ?

Cym. All that belongs to this.

Iach. That paragon, thy daughter,—
For whom my heart drops blood, and my false
spirits

Quail to remember,—Give me leave ; I faint.

Cym. My daughter ! what of her ? Renew thy strength :

I had rather thou should'st live while nature
will,

Than die ere I hear more : strive man, and
speak.

Iach. Upon a time, (unhappy was the clock
That struck the hour !) it was in Rome, (accurs'd

The mansion where ! 'twas at a feast, (O 'would
Our viands had been poison'd ! or at least,
Those which I heav'd to head !) the good Post-
humus,

(What should I say ! he was too good to be
Where ill men were ; and was the best of all Amongst the rar'st of good ones,) sitting sadly,
Hearing us praise our loves of Italy

For beauty that made barren the swell'd boast
Of him that best could speak : for feature, tam-
ing

The shrine of Venus, or straight-pight Min-
Postures beyond brief nature ; for condition,
A shop of all the qualities that man

Loves woman for ; besides, that hook of wiv-
ing,

Fairness which strikes the eye :—

Cym. I stand on fire :

Come to the matter.

Iach. All too soon I shall,
Unless thou would'st grieve quickly.—This Post-
humus,

Most like a noble lord in love, and one
That had a royal lover,) took his hint ;

And, not dispraising whom he prais'd, (therein
He was as calm as virtue) he began

His mistress' picture ; which by his tongue being made,

And then a mind put in't, either our brags
Were crack'd of kitchen trails, or his description
Prov'd us unspeaking sots.

Cym. Nay, nay, to the purpose.

Iach. Your daughter's chastity—there it begins.

He spoke of her as Dian had hot dreams,
And she alone were cold : Whereat, I, wretch !
Made scruple of his praise ; and wager'd with

him

Pieces of gold, 'gainst this which then he wore
Upon his honour'd finger, to attain

In suit the place of his bed, and win this ring
By her's and mine adultery : he, true knight,

No lesser of her honour confident

Than I did truly find her, stakes this ring ;

And would so, had it been a carbuncle

Of Phœbus' wheel ; and might so safely, had it

Been all the worth of his car. Away to Britain

Post I in this design : Well may you, Sir,

Remember me at court, where I was taught

Of your chaste daughter the wide difference

'Twixt amorous and villainous. Being thus quench'd

Of hope, not longing, mine Italian brain

'Gan in your duller Britain operate

Most vilely ; for my vantage, excellent ;

And, to be brief, my practice so prevail'd,

That I return'd with simular * proof enough

To make the noble Leonatus mad,

By wounding his belief in her renown

With tokens thus and thus : averring notes

Of chamber-hanging, pictures, this her bracelet,

(O cunning, how I got it !) say, some marks

Of secret on her person, that he could not

But think her bond of chastity quite crack'd,

I having ta'en the forfeit. Whereupon,—

Methinks, I see him now,—

Post. Ay, so thou dost, [Coming forward.

Italian fiend !—Ah ! me, most credulous fool,

Egregious murderer, thief, any thing

That's due to all the villains past, in being,

To come !—O give me cord, or knife, or poison,

Some upright justice ! Thou king, send out

For torturers ingenious : it is I

That all the abhorred things o'the earth amend

By being worse than they. I am Posthumus,

That kill'd thy daughter :—villain like, I lie ;

That caus'd a lesser villain than myself,

A sacrilegious, thief, to do't :—the temple

Of virtue was she ; yea, and she herself. †

Spit, and throw stones, cast mire upon me, set

* Apparent.

† Not only the temple of virtue, but virtue herself.

* Sink into dejection.

The dogs o'the street to bay me : every villain
Be call'd Posthumus Leonatus ; and
Be villany less than 'twas ! O Imogen,
My queen, my life, my wife ! O Imogen,
Imogen, Imogen !

Imo. Peace, my lord ; hear, hear—

Post. Shall's have a play of this ? Thou scornful page,
There lie thy part. [Striking her : she falls.]

Pis. O gentlemen, help, help Mine, and your mistress :—O my lord Post-
humus !

You ne'er kill'd Imogen till now ;—Help, help !—

Mine honour'd lady !

Cym. Does the world go round ?

Post. How come these staggers on me ?

Pis. Wake, my mistress ?

Cym. If this be so, the gods do mean to strike me

To death with mortal joy

Pis. How fares my mistress ?

Imo. O get thee from my sight ;
Thou gav'st me poison : dangerous fellow, hence !
Breathe not where princes are.

Cym. The tune of Imogen !

Pis. Lady.

The gods throw stones of sulphur on me, if
That box I gave you was not thought by me
A precious thing : I had it from the queen.

Cym. New matter still ?

Imo. It poison'd me.

Cor. O gods !—

I left out one thing which the queen confess'd,
Which must approve thee honest : If Pisanio
Have, said she, given his mistress that consec-
tion

Which I gave him for a cordial, she is serv'd
As I would serve a rat.

Cym. What's this, Coruellus ?

Cor. The queen, Sir, very oft importun'd me
The temper * poisons for her ; still pretending
The satisfaction of her knowledge, only
In killing creatures vile, as cats and dogs
Of no esteem : I, dreading that her purpose
Was of more danger, did compound for her
A certain stuff, which, being ta'en, would cease

The present power of life ; but, in short time,
All offices of nature should again
Do their due functions.—Have you ta'en of it ?

Imo. Most like I did, for I was dead.

Bel. My boys,
There was our error.

Gul. This is sure, Fidele.

Imo. Why did you throw your wedded lady from you ?

Think, that you are upon a rock and now
Throw me again. [Embracing him.]

Post. Hang there like fruit, my soul,
Till the tree die !

Cym. How now, my flesh, my child ?
What, mak'st thou me a dullard in this act ?
Wilt thou not speak to me ?

Imo. Your blessing, Sir. [Kneeling.]

Bel. Though you did love this youth, I blame ye not ;

You had a motive for't.

[To GUIDERIUS and ARVIRAGUS.]

Cym. My tears that fall,
Prove holy water on thee ! Imogen,
Thy mother's dead.

Imo. I am sorry for't, my lord.

Cym. Oh ! she was naught ; and 'long of her it was,

That we meet here so strangely : But her son
Is gone, we know not how, nor where.

Pis. My lord,
Now fear is from me, I'll speak truth. Lord
Cloten,
Upon my lady's missing, came to me
With his sword drawn ; foam'd at the mouth, and swore.

* Mix, compound.

If I discover'd not which way she was gone,
It was my instant death : By accident,
I had a feigned letter of my master's
Then in my pocket ; which directed him
To seek her on the mountains near to Milford.
Where, in a frenzy, in my master's garments,
Which he inforc'd from me, away he posts
With unchaste purpose, and with oath to violate

My lady's honour : what became of him,
I further know not.

Gul. Let me end the story :

I slew him there.

Cym. Marry, the gods forfend ! *

I would not thy good deeds should from my lips

Pluck a hard sentence : pr'ythee, valiant youth,
Deny't again.

Gul. I have spoke it, and I did it.

Cym. He was a prince.

Gul. A most uncivil one : The wrongs he did
me

Were nothing prince-like ; for he did provoke
me

With language that would make me spurn the
sea,

If it could roar so to me : I cut off's head ;
And am right glad, he is not standing here
To tell this tale of mine.

Cym. I am sorry for thee :

By thine own tongue thou art condemn'd, and must

Endure our law : Thou art dead.

Imo. That headless man
I thought had been my lord.

Cym. Bind the offender,
And take him from our presence.

Bel. Stay, Sir king :

This man is better than the man he slew,
As well descended as thyself ; and hath
More of thee merited, than a band of Clotens
Had ever scar for. Let his arms alone ;

[To the Guards.]

They were not born for bondage.

Cym. Why, old soldier,
Wilt thou undo the worth thou art unpaid for
By tasting of our wrath ? How of descent
As good as we ?

Arv. In that he spake too far.

Cym. And thou shalt die for't.

Bel. We will die all three,

But I will prove that two of us are as good
As I have given out him.—My sons, I must,
For mine own part, unfold a dangerous speech,
Though, haply, well for you.

Arv. Your danger is

Our's.

Gul. And our good his.

Bel. Have at it then.—

[who
By leave ;—Thou had'st, great king, a subject,
Was call'd Belarius.

Cym. What of him ? he is
A banish'd traitor.

Bel. He it is, that hath
Assum'd this age : indeed, a banish'd man ;
I know not how, a traitor.

Cym. Take him hence ;

The whole world shall not save him.

Bel. Not too hot :

First pay me for the nursing of thy sons ;
And let it be confiscate all, so soon
As I have receiv'd it.

Cym. Nursing of my sons ?

Bel. I am too blunt and saucy : Here's my
knee ;

Ere I arise I will prefer my sons ;

Then, spare not the old father. Mighty Sir,

These two young gentlemen, that call me fa-
ther,

And think they are my sons, are none of mine ;
They are the issue of your loins, my liege,
And blood of your begetting.

Cym. How ! my issue ?

* Forbid.

Bel. So sure as you your father's. I, old Morgan,
Am that Belarius whom you sometime banish'd :
Your pleasure was my mere offence, my punishment

Myself, and all my treason ; that I suffer'd,
Was all the harm I did. These gentle princes
(For such, and so they are,) these twenty years

Have I train'd up : those arts they have, as I Could put into them ; my breeding was, Sir,

as
Your highness knows. Their nurse, Euriphile,
Whom for the theft I wedded, stole these children

Upon my banishment ; I mov'd her to't ;
Having receiv'd the punishment before,
'or that which I did then : Beaten for loyalty
Excited me to treason : Their dear loss,
The more of you 'twas felt, the more it shap'd
Unto my end of stealing them. But, gracious Sir,

Here are your sons again ; and I must lose
Two of the sweet'st companions in the world :—
The benediction of these covering heavens
Fall on their heads like dew ! for they are worthy

To ink heaven with stars.

Cym. Thou weep'st, and speak'st.
The service, that you three have done, is more
Unlike than this thou tell'st : I lost my children :

If these be they, I know not how to wish
A pair of worthier sons.

Bel. Be pleas'd a while.—

This gentleman, whom I call Polydore,
Most worthy prince, as your's, is true, Guiderius ;

This gentleman, my Cadwal, Arviragus,
Your younger princely son ; he, Sir, was lapp'd
In a most curious mantle wrought by the hand

Of his queen mother, which, for more probation,
I can with ease produce.

Cym. Guiderius had
Upon his neck a mole, a sanguine star ;
It was a mark of wonder.

Bel. This is he ;
Who hath upon him still that natural stamp ;
It was wise nature's end in the donation,
To be his evidence now.

Cym. O what am I
A mother to the birth of three ! Ne'er mother
Rejoic'd deliverance more : Bless'd may you be,

That after this strange starting from your orbs,
You may reign in them now !—O Imogen,
Thou hast lost by this a kingdom.

Imo. No, my lord ;
I have got two worlds' by't.—O my gentle brothers,

Have we thus met ! O never say hereafter,
But I am truest speaker : you call'd me brother,
When I was but your sister ; I you brothers,
When you were so indeed.

Cym. Did you e'er meet ?

Arv. Ay, my good lord.

Gui. And at first meeting lov'd ;
Continued so, until we thought he died.

Cor. By the queen's dram she swallow'd.

Cym. O rare instinct !
When shall I hear all through ? This fierce abridgment

Hath to it circumstantial branches, which Distinction should be rich in.—Where ? how liv'd you ?

And when came you to serve our Roman captive ?

How parted with your brothers ? how first met
them ?

Why led you from the court ! and whither ?
These,

And your three motives to the battle, with
I know not how much more, should be demanded ;

And all the other by-dependencies.

From chance to chance ; but nor the time, nor
place,

Will serve our long intergatories. See,

Posthumus anchors upon Imogen ;
And she like harmless lightning, throws her eye
On him, her brothers, me, her master ; hitting
Each object with a joy ; the counterchange
Is severally in all. Let's quit this ground,
And smoke the temple with our sacrifices.—
Thou art my brother ; so we'll hold thee ever.

[To BELARIUS.]

Imo. You are my father too : and did relieve me,

To see this gracious season.

Cym. All overjoy'd,
Save these in bonds : let them be joyful too,
For they shall taste our comfort.

Imo. My good master,

[Kneeling.]

Luc. Happy be you !

Cym. The forlorn soldier, that so nobly fought,
He would have well becom'd this place, and grac'd

The thankings of a king.

Post. I am, Sir,
The soldier that did company these three
In poor beseeching ; 'twas a fitment for
The purpose I then follow'd ;—That I was he,
Speak, Iachimo : I had you down, and might Have made you flinch.

I will yet do you service.

Jack. I am down again :
But now my heavy conscience sinks my knee,
As then your force did. Take that life, 'beseech you,

Which I so often owe : but, your ring first :
And here the bracelet of the truest princess,
That ever swore her faith.

Post. Kneel not to me :
The power that I have on you, is to spare you,
The malice towards you, to forgive you : Live,
And deal with others better.

Cym. Nobly doom'd :
We'll learn our freeness of a son-in-law ;
Pardon's the word to all.

Arv. You help us, Sir,
As you did mean indeed to be our brother ;
Joy'd are we, that you are.

Post. Your servant, princes.—Good my lord of Rome,
Call forth your soothsayer : As I slept, me-
thought,

Great Jupiter, upon his eagle back,
Appear'd to me, with other spritely shows *
Of mine own kindred : when I wak'd, I found
This label on my bosom ; whose containing
Is so from sense in hardness, that I can Make no collection of it ; let him show
His skill in the construction.

Luc. Philharmonus,—

Sooth. Here, my good lord.

Luc. Read : and declare the meaning.

Sooth. [Reads.] *When as a lion's whelp shall, to himself unknown, without seeking
And, and be embraced by a piece of tender air ; and when from a stately cedar shall be lopped branches, which, being dead many years, shall after revive, be jointed to the old stock, and freshly grow ; then shall Posthumus end his miseries, Britain be fortunate, and flourish in peace and plenty.*

Thou, Leonatus, art the lion's whelp ;
The fit and apt construction of thy name,
Being Leo-natus, doth import so much :
The piece of tender air, thy virtuous daughter,

[To CYMBELINE.]

Which we call mollis aer ; and mollis aer

* Vehement, rapid.

† I.e. Which ought to be rendered distinct in an ample narrative.

* Ghostly appearances.

We term it mulier : which mulier, I divine,
Is this most constant wife : who, even now,
Answering the letter of the oracle,
Unknown to you, unsought, were clipp'd about
With this most tender air.

Cym. This hath some seeming.

Sooth. The lofty cedar, royal Cymbeline, Personates thee : and thy lopp'd branches
point

Thy two sons forth : who, by Belarius stolen,
For many years thought dead, are now reviv'd,
To the majestic cedar join'd ; whose issue
Promises Britain peace and plenty.

Cym. Well,
By peace we will begin :—And, Caius Lucius,
Although the victor, we submit to Cesar,
And to the Roman empire ; promising
To pay our wonted tribute, from the which
We were dissuaded by our wicked queen ; Whom heavens, in justice, (both on her and her's)

Have laid most heavy hand.

Sooth. The fingers of the powers above do
tune

The harmony of this peace. The vision
Which I made known to Lucius, ere the stroke
Of this yet scarce-cold battle, at this instant
Is full accomplish'd : For the Roman eagle,
From south to west on wing soaring aloft,
Lessen'd herself, and in the beams o'the sun
So vanish'd ; which foreshow'd our princely
eagle,

The imperial Cesar, should again unite
His favour with the radiant Cymbeline,
Which shines here in the west.

Cym. Laud we the gods ;
And let our crooked smokes climb* to their nostrils

From our bless'd altars ! Publish we this peace
To all our subjects. Set we forward : Let
A Roman and a British ensign wave

* Rise.

Friendly together : so through Lud's town
march :

And in the temple of great Jupiter
Our peace we'll ratify ; seal it with feasts.—
Set on there :— Never was a war did cease, Ere bloody hands were wash'd, with such a peace. [Exeunt

A SONG,

Sung by Guiderius and Arviragus over Fidele, supposed to be dead.

BY WILLIAM COLLINS.

To fair Fidele's grassy tomb,
Soft maids and village hinds shall bring
Each opening sweet, of earliest bloom,
And rife all the breathing spring.

No waiting ghost shall dare appear
To vex with shrieks this quiet grove ;
But shepherd lads assemble here,
And melting virgins own their love.

No wither'd witch shall here be seen,
No goblins lead their nightly crew :
The female fays shall haunt the green,
And dress thy grave with pearly dew.

The red-breast oft at evening hours
Shall kindly lend his little aid,
With hoary moss, and gather'd flowers,
To deck the ground where thou art laid.

When howling winds and beating rain.
In tempests shake the sylvan cell :
Or midst the chase on every plain,
The tender thought on thee shall dwell.

Each lonely scene shall thee restore ;
For thee the tear be duly shed :
Belov'd, till life could charm no more ;
And mourn'd, till pity's self be dead.

KING LEAR.

LITERARY AND HISTORICAL NOTICE.

THE subject of this interesting tragedy, which was probably written in 1605, is derived from an old historical ballad, founded on a story in Holinshed's Chronicles, and originally told by Geoffrey of Monmouth. "Lear (says the Welsh historian) was the eldest son of Bladud, nobly governed his country for sixty years, and died about 800 years before Christ." Camden tells a similar story of Iser, king of the West Saxons, and his three daughters.—The episode of Gloucester and his sons is taken from Sidney's Arcadia. Tate, the laureat, greatly altered, and in a degree polished this play, inserting new scenes or passages, and transposing or omitting others: in particular, he avoided its original heart-rending catastrophe, by which the virtue of Cordelia was suffered to perish in a just cause, contrary to the natural ideas of justice, to the hope of the reader, and to the facts of the ancient narrative. He also introduced Edgar to the audience as the suitor of Cordelia, cancelling the excellent scene in which, after being rejected as dowerless, by Burgundy, her misfortunes and her goodness recommend her to the love of the king of France. Yet the restoration of the king, and the final happiness of Cordelia, have been censured (in the Spectator especially) as at variance with true tragic feeling and poetical beauty: although it may fairly be presumed, since mankind naturally love justice, that an attention to its dictates will never make a play worse, and that an audience will generally rise more satisfied where persecuted virtue is rewarded and triumphant. Lear's struggles against his accumulated injuries, and his own strong feelings of sorrow and indignation, are exquisitely drawn. The daughters severally working him up to madness, and his finally falling a martyr to that malady, is a more deep and skilful combination of dramatic portraiture than can be found in any other writer. "There is no play (says Dr. Johnson,) which keeps the attention so constantly fixed; which so much agitates our passions and interests our curiosity." The celebrated Dr. Warton, who minutely criticised this play in the Adventurer, objected to the instances of cruelty, as too savage and too shocking. But Johnson observes, that the barbarity of the daughters is an historical fact, to which Shakspeare has added little, although he cannot so readily apologize for the extrusion of Gloucester's eyes, which is too horrid an act for dramatic exhibition, and such as must always compel the mind to relieve its distresses by incredulity. Colman, as well as Tate, re-modelled this celebrated Drama, but it is acted, with trifling variations, on the original plan of the latter.

ACT I.

SCENE I.—A Room of State in King LEAR's Palace.

Enter KENT, GLOSTER, and EDMUND.

Kent. I thought the king had more affected the duke of Albany than Cornwall.

Glo. It did always seem so to us: but now, in the division of the kingdom, it appears not which of the dukes he values most; for equalities are so weigh'd, that curiosity* in neither can make choice of either's moiety.†

* Exactest scrutiny.

† Part or division

Kent. Is not this your son, my lord?
Glo. His breeding, Sir, hath been at my charge: I have so often blush'd to acknowledge him, that now I am brazed to it.

Kent. I cannot conceive you.

Glo. Sir, this young fellow's mother could: whereupon she grew round-wombed; and had, indeed, Sir, a son for her cradle, ere she had a husband for her bed. Do you smell a fault?

Kent. I cannot wish the fault undone, the issue of it being so proper.*

Glo. But I have, Sir, a son, by order of law, some year elder than this, who yet is no dearer

* Handsome.

in my account: though this knave came somewhat saucily into the world before he was sent for, yet his mother was fair; there was good sport at his making, and the whoreson must be acknowledged.—Do you know this noble gentleman, Edmund?

Edm. No, my lord.

Glo. My lord of Kent: remember him hereafter as my honourable friend.

Edm. My services to your lordship.

Kent. I must love you, and sue to know you better.

Edm. Sir, I shall study deserving.

Glo. He hath been out nine years, and away he shall again:—The king is coming.

[Trumpets sound within.]

Enter LEAR, CORNWALL, ALBANY, GONERIL, REGAN, CORDELIA, and Attendants.

Lear. Attend the lords of France and Burgundy.

Glo. I shall, my liege.

[Exit GLOSTER and EDMUND.]

Lear. Meantime we shall express our darker purpose.

Give me the map there.—Know, that we have divided,

In three, our kingdom: and 'tis our fast intent
To shake all cares and business from our age;
Conferring them on younger strengths, while we Unburden'd crawl toward death.—Our son of Cornwall,

And you, our no less loving son of Albany,
We have this hour a constant will to publish
Our daughter's several dowers, that future strife

May be prevented now. The princes, France and Burgundy,

Great rivals in our youngest daughter's love,
Long in our court have made their amorous sojourn,

And here are to be answer'd.—Tell me, my (Since now we will divest us, both of rule, Interest of territory, cares of state,)

Which of you, shall we say, doth love us most?
That we our largest bounty may extend
Where merit doth most challenge it.—Goneril,
Our eldest-born, speak first.

Gon. Sir, I

Do love you more than words can wield the Dearer than eye-sight, space and liberty;
Beyond what can be valued, rich or rare;
No less than life, with grace, health, beauty,
honour:

As much as child e'er lov'd, or father found:
A love that makes breath poor, and speech unable;

Beyond all manner of so much I love you.

Cor. What shall Cordelia do? Love, and be silent.

Lear. Of all these bounds, even from this line to this,

With shadowy forests and with champains
rich'd,

With plenteous rivers and wide-skirted meads,
We make thee lady: To thine and Albany's
issue

Be this perpetual.—What says our second
Our dearest Regan, wife to Cornwall? Speak.

Reg. I am made of that self metal as my sister,

And prize me at her worth. In my true heart,
I find she names my very deed of love;
Only she comes too short,—that I profess

Myself an enemy to all other joys, [senses;
Which the most precious square† of sense pos-
And find I am alone felicitate‡
In your dear highness' love.

Cor. Then poor Cordelia!

And yet not so; since, I am sure, my love's
More richer than my tongue.

Lear. To thee and thine hereditary ever
Remain this ample third of our fair kingdom;

No less in space, validity,* and pleasure,
Than that confirm'd on Goneril.—Now, our joy,
Although the last, not least; to whose young
love

The vines of France, and milk of Burgundy, Strive to be interest'd:† what can you say, to draw

A third more opulent than your sisters? Speak.

Cor. Nothing, my lord.

Lear. Nothing?

Cor. Nothing.

Lear. Nothing can come of nothing: speak
again.

Cor. Unhappy that I am, I cannot beave
My heart into my mouth: I love your majesty
According to my bond; nor more, nor less.

Lear. How, how, Cordelia? mend your speech a little,

Lest it may mar your fortunes.

Cor. Good my lord,

You have begot me, bred me, lov'd me: I
Return those duties back as are right fit,
Obey you, love you, and most honour you.
Why have my sisters husbands, if they say,
They love you all? Haply, when I shall wed,
That lord, whose hand must take my plight, shall carry

Half my love with him, half my care, and duty:
Sure, I shall never marry like my sisters,
To love my father all?

Lear. But goes this with thy heart?

Cor. Ay, good my lord.

Lear. So young, and so untender?

Cor. So young, my lord, and true.

Lear. Let it be so.—Thy truth then be thy dower:

For, by the sacred radiance of the sun;
The mysteries of Hecate, and the night;
By all the operations of the orbs,
From whom we do exist, and cease to be;
Here I disclaim all my paternal care,
Propinquity‡ and property of blood,
And as a stranger to my heart and me
Hold thee, from this,§ for ever. The barbarous Scythian,

Or he that makes his generation‖ messes
To gorge his appetite, shall to my bosom
Be as well neighbour'd, pitied, and reliev'd,
As thou my sometime daughter.

Kent. Good my liege,—

Lear. Peace, Kent!

Come not between the dragon and his wrath:
I lov'd her most, and thought to set my rest
On her kind nursery.—Hence, and avoid my sight!— [To CORDELIA.

So be my grave my peace, as here I give
Her father's heart from her!—Call France;—
Who stirs?

Call Burgundy,—Cornwall and Albany,
With my two daughter's dowers digest this third:

Let pride, which she calls plainness, marry her.
I do invest you jointly with my power,
Pre-eminence, and all the large effects
That troop with majesty.—Ourself, by monthly
course,

With reservation of a hundred knights,
By you to be sustain'd, shall our abode [retain Make with you by due turns. Only we still
The name, and all the additions¶ to a king;

The sway,
Revenue, execution of the rest,
Beloved sons, be your's: which to confirm,
This coronet part between you.

[Giving the Crown.]

Kent. Royal Lear,
Whom I have ever honour'd as my king,
Lov'd as my father, as my master follow'd,
As my great patron thought on in my prayers,—

Lear. The bow is bent and drawn, make from the shaft.

Kent. Let it fall rather, though the fork invade
The region of my heart : be Kent unmannerly,
When Lear is mad. What wouldst thou do, old man ?
Think'st thou that duty shall have dread to When power to flattery bows ? To plainness honour's bound,
When majesty stoops to folly. Reverse thy
And, in thy best consideration, check
This hideous rashness : answer my life, my judgment,
Thy youngest daughter does not love thee least ;
Nor are those empty-hearted, whose low sound
Reverberates * no hollowness.

Lear. Kent, on thy life, no more.

Kent. My life I never held but as a pawn
To wage against thine enemies ; nor fear to lose it,
Thy safety being the motive.

Lear. Out of my sight !

Kent. See better, Lear ; and let me still re-
The true blank † of thine eye.

Lear. Now, by Apollo,—

Kent. Now, by Apollo, king,
Thou swear'st thy gods in vain.

Lear. O vassal miscreant !

[Laying his Hand upon his Sword.

Alb. Corn. Dear Sir, forbear.

Kent. Do :

Kill thy physician, and the fee bestow
Upon the foul disease. Revoke thy gift ;
Or, whilst I can vent clamour from my throat,
I'll tell thee, thou dost evil.

Lear. Hear me, recreant !

On thine allegiance hear me !—
Since thou hast sought to make us break our
vow,

(Which we durst never yet,) and, with strain'd
To come betwixt our sentence and our power ;
(Which nor our nature nor our place can bear,)
Our potency make good, take thy reward.

Five days we do allot thee, for provision
To shield thee from diseases of the world ;
And, on the sixth, to turn thy hated back Upon our kingdom : if, on the tenth day following,

Thy banish'd trunk be found in our dominions,
The moment is thy death : Away ! By Jupiter,
This shall not be revok'd.

Kent. Fare thee well, king : since thus thou wilt appear,

Freedom lives hence, and banishment is here.—
The gods to their dear shelter take thee, maid,

That justly think'st, and has most rightly said !—
And your large speeches may your deeds approve,

That good effects may spring from words of
love.—

Thus Kent, O princes, bids you all adieu ;
He'll shape his old course ‡ in a country new.

[Exit.

Re-enter GLOSTER ; with FRANCE, BURGUNDY,
and Attendants.

Glo. Here's France and Burgundy, my noble
lord.

Lear. My lord of Burgundy,
We first address towards you, who with this
king

Hath rivall'd for our daughter ; What, in the
Will you require in present dower with her,
Or cease your quest of love ? §

Bur. Most royal majesty,
I crave no more than bath your highness offer'd,
Nor will you tender less.

Lear. Right noble Burgundy,
When she was dear to us, we did hold her so ;
But now her price is fall'n : Sir, there she stands ;

If aught within that little seeming * substance,
Or all of it, with our displeasure piec'd,
And nothing more, may fitly like your grace,
She's there, and she is yours.

Bur. I know no answer.

Lear. Sir,

Will you, with those infirmities she owes, †
Unfriended, new adopted to our hate, Dower'd with our curse, and stranger'd with our oath,

Take her, or leave her ?

Bur. Pardon me, royal Sir ;

Election makes not up ‡ on such conditions.

Lear. Then leave her, Sir ; for, by the power that made me,

I tell you all her wealth.—For you, great king,
[To FRANCE.

I would not from your love make such a stray,
To match you where I hate ; therefore beseech
you

To avert § your liking a more worthier way,
Than on a wretch whom nature is ashamed
Almost to acknowledge hers.

France. This is most strange !

That she, that even but now was your best object,
The argument of your praise, balm of your age,
Most best, most dearest, should in this trice of
time

Commit a thing so monstrous, to dismantle
So many folds of favour ! Sure, her offence
Must be of such unnatural degree,
That monsters it, or your fore-vouch'd ¶ affection

To speak and purpose not : since what I well
I'll do't before I speak, that you make known
It is no vicious blot, murder, or foulness,
No unchaste action, or dishonour'd step,
That hath depriv'd me of your grace and favour :
But even for want of that, for which I am richer—

A still-schiding eye, and such a-tongue
That I am glad I have not, though not to have it,
Hath lost me in your liking.

Lear. Better thou

Hadst not been born, than not to have pleas'd me better.

France. Is it but this ? a tardiness in nature,
Which often leaves the history unspoke,
That it intends to do ?—My lord of Burgundy,
What say you to the lady ? Love is not love,
When it is mingled with respects, that stand
Aloof from the entire point. †† Will you have
She is herself a dowry.

Bur. Royal Lear,

Give but that portion which yourself propos'd,
And here I take Cordelia by the hand,
Duchess of Burgundy.

Lear. Nothing : I have sworn : I am firm.

Bur. I am sorry, then, you have so lost a
That you must lose a husband.

Cor. Peace be with Burgundy !

Since that respects of fortune are his love,
I shall not be his wife.

France. Fairest Cordelia, thou art most rich, being poor ;

Most choice, forsaken ; and most lov'd, despis'd :
Thee and thy virtues here I seize upon :

Be it lawful, I take up what's cast away.
Gods, gods ! 'tis strange, that from their cold'st neglect

My love should kindle to inflam'd respect.—

Thy dowerless daughter, king, thrown to my chance,

Is queen of us, of our's, and our fair France :

Not all the dukes of wat'rish Burgundy

Shall buy this unpriz'd precious maid of me.—

And, like a sister, am most loath to call Your faults as they are nam'd. Use well our

To your professed bosoms I commit him :

But yet, alas ! stood I within his grace,
I would prefer him to a better place.

So farewell to you both.

Gon. Prescribe not us our duties.

Gon. Sister, it is not a little I have to say, of what most nearly appertains to us both. I think our father will hence to-night.

Reg. That's most certain, and with you ; next month with us.

Gon. You see how full of changes his age is ;
the observation we have made of it hath not been little : he always loved our sister most ;
and with what poor judgment he hath now cast her off, appears too grossly.

Reg. 'Tis the infirmity of his age : yet he hath ever but slenderly known himself.

Gon. The best and soundest of his time hath been but rash ; then must we look to receive from his age, not alone the imperfections of long-engrafted condition, § but, therewithal, the unruly waywardness that infirm and choleric years bring with them.

Reg. Such unconstant starts are we like to have from him, as this of Kent's banishment.

Gon. There is further compliment of leave-taking between France and him. Pray you, let us hit together : If our father carry authority with such dispositions as he bears, this last surrender of his will but offend us.

Reg. We shall further think of it.

Gon. We must do something, and i'the heat. ¶

Castle.

Enter EDMUND, with a Letter.

Edm. Thou, nature, art my goddess ; to thy
law

My services are bound : Wherefore should I
Stand in the plague ¶ of custom ; and permit
The curiosity  of nations to deprive me,
For that I am some twelve or fourteen moon-shines

When my dimensions are as well compact,
My mind as generous, and my shape as true,
As honest madman's issue ? Why brand they us
With base † with baseness ? bastardy ‡ base,

Our father's love is to the bastard Edmund,
As to the legitimate : Fine word,—legitimate !
Well, my legitimate, if this letter speed,
And my invention thrive, Edmund the base
Shall top the legitimate. I grow ; I prosper :—
Now, gods, stand up for bastards !

And the king gone to-night ! subscrib'd * his Confin'd to exhibition ! † All this done [power !
Upon the gad ! ‡—Edmund ! How now, what news ?

Edm. So please your lordship, none.

[Putting up the Letter.]

Glo. Why so earnestly seek you to put up that letter ?

Edm. I know no news, my lord.

Glo. What paper were you reading ?

Edm. Nothing, my lord.

Glo. No ? What needed then that terrible despatch of it into your pocket ? the quality of nothing hath not such need to hide itself.
Let's see : Come, if it be nothing, I shall not need spectacles.

Edm. I beseech you, Sir, pardon me : it is a letter from my brother, that I have not all o'er-read ; for so much as I have perused, I find it not fit for your over-looking.

Glo. Give me the letter, Sir.

Edm. I shall offend, either to detain or give
it. The contents, as in part : understand them, are to blame.

Glo. Let's see, let's see.

Edm. I hope, for my brother's justification, he wrote this but as an essay § or taste of my virtue.

Glo. [Reads.] *This policy and reverence of age makes the world bitter to the best of our times, keeps our fortunes from us till our oldness cannot relish them. I begin to find an idle and fond ¶ bondage in the oppression of aged tyranny ; who sways, not as it hath power, but as it is suffered. Come to me, that of this I may speak more. If our father would sleep till I waked him, you should enjoy half his revenue for ever, and live the beloved of your brother, Edgar.—
Humph—Conspiracy !—Sleep till I waked him
—you should enjoy half his revenue,—My son Edgar ! Had he a hand to write this ? a heart and brain to breed it in ?—When came this to you ?
Who brought it ?*

Edm. It was not brought me, my lord, there's the cunning of it ; I found it thrown in at the casement of my closet.

Glo. You know the character to be your brother's ?

Edm. If the matter were good, my lord, I durst swear it were his ; but, in respect of that,
I would fain think it were not.

Glo. It is his.

Edm. It is his hand, my lord ; but, I hope his heart is not in the contents.

Glo. Hath he never heretofore sounded you in this business ?

Edm. Never, my lord : But I have often heard him maintain ¶ it to be fit, that, sons at perfect age, and fathers declining, the father should be as ward to the son, and the son manage his revenue.

Glo. O villain, villain !—His very opinion in the letter !—Abhorred villain ! Unnatural, de-testated, brutish villain ! worse than brutish !—Go sirrah, seek him ; I'll apprehend him :—Abominable villain !—Where is he ?

I dare pawn down my life for him, that he hath writ this to seal my affection to your honour† and to no other pretence‡ of danger.

Glo. Think you so?

Edm. If your honour judge it meet, I will place you where you shall hear us confer of this, and by an auricular assurance have your satisfaction; and that without any further delay than this very evening.

Glo. He cannot be such a monster.

Edm. Nor is not, sure.

Glo. To his father, that so tenderly and entirely loves him.—Heaven and earth!—Edmund, seek him out: wind me into him, I pray you: frame the business after your own wisdom: I would unstate myself, to be in a due resolution. §

Edm. I will seek him, Sir, presently; convey || the business as I shall find means, and acquaint you withal.

Glo. These late eclipses in the sun and moon portend no good to us: Though the wisdom of nature can reason it thus and thus, yet nature finds itself scourged by the sequent ¶ effects: love cools, friendship falls off, brothers divide: in cities, mutinies; in countries, discord; in palaces, treason; and the bond cracked between son and father. This villain of mine comes under the prediction; there's son against father: the king falls from bias of nature; there's father against child. We have seen the best of our time: Machinations, hollownness, treachery, and all ruinous disorders, follow us disquietly to our graves!—Find out this villain, Edmund, it shall lose thee nothing; do it carefully:—And the noble and true hearted Kent banished! his offence, honesty!—Strange! strange! [Exit.]

Edm. This is the excellent soppery of the world! that, when we are sick in fortune, (often the surfelt of our own behaviour,) we make guilty of our disasters, the sun, the moon, and the stars; as if we were villains by necessity: fools, by heavenly compulsion; knaves, thieves, and treachers,  by spherical predominance; drunkards, liars, and adulterers, by an enforced obedience of planetary influence: and all that we are evil in, by a divine thrusting on: An admirable evasion of whoremaster man, to lay his goatish disposition to the charge of a star! My father compounded with my mother under the dragon's tail; and my nativity was under ursa major; †† so that it follows, I am rough and lecherous.—Tut, I should have been that I am, had the maidenliest star in the firmament twinkled on my bastardizing. and pat he comes, like the catastrophe of the old comedy: My cue is villanous melancholy, with a sigh like Tom o'Bedlam.—O these eclipses do portend these divisions! Fa, sol, la, mi. ‡‡

Edg. How now, brother Edmund? What serious contemplation are you in?

Edm. I am thinking, brother, of a prediction I read this other day, what should follow these eclipses.

Edg. Do you busy yourself with that?

Edm. I promise you, the effects he writes of succeed unhappily; as of unnaturalness between the child and the parent; death, dearth, dissolu-

tions of ancient amities; divisions in state, menaces and imaledictions against king and nobles; needless diffidences, banishment of friends, dissipation of cohorts, § nuptial breaches, and I know not what.

Edg. How long have you been a sectary astronomical?

Edm. Come, come, when saw you my father last?

Edg. Why, the night gone by.

Edm. Spake you with him?

Edg. Ay, two hours together.

Edm. Parted you in good terms? Found you no displeasure in him, by word or countenance?

Edg. None at all.

Edm. Bethink yourself, wherein you may have offended him; and at my entreaty, forbear his presence, till some little time hath qualified the heat of his displeasure; which at this instant so rageth in him, that with the mischief of your person it would scarcely allay.

Edg. Some villain hath done me wrong.

Edm. That's my fear. I pray you, have a continent† forbearance, till the speed of his rage goes slower; and, as I say, retire with me to my lodging, from whence I will fitly bring you to hear my lord speak: Pray you, go; there's my key:—If you do stir abroad, go armed.

Edg. Armed, brother?

Edm. Brother, I advise you to the best: go armed; I am no honest man, if there be any good meaning towards you: I have told you what I have seen and heard, but faintly; nothing like the image and horror of it: Pray you, away.

Edg. Shall I hear from you anon?

Edm. I do serve you in this business.—

[Exit EDMUND.]

Whose nature is so far from doing harms,
That he suspects none: on whose foolish honesty

My practices ride easy!—I see the business.—

SCENE III.—A Room in the Duke of ALBANY'S Palace.

Enter GONERIL and STEWARD.

Gon. Did my father strike my gentleman for chiding of his fool?

Stew. Ay, madam.

Gon. By day and night! he wrongs me; every hour

That sets us all at odds: I'll not endure it:

Not to be over-rul'd. Idle old man,

With checks, as flatteries,—when they are seen

Remember what I have said. [abus'd.]

Kent. If but as well I other accents borrow,

For which I raz'd† my likeness.—Now, banish'd
Kent,
If thou canst serve where thou dost stand

Shall find thee full of labours.

Horns within. Enter LEAR, KNIGHTS, and Attendants.

Lear. Let me not stay a jot for dinner: go, get it ready. [Exit an Attendant.] How now,
what art thou?

Kent. A man, Sir.

Lear. What dost thou profess? What wouldst thou with us?

Kent. I do profess to be no less than I seem;
to serve him truly, that will put me in trust;
to love him that is honest; to converse‡ with him that is wise, and says little; to fear judgment; to fight, when I cannot choose; and to eat no fish.

Lear. What art thou?

Kent. A very honest-hearted fellow, and as poor as the king.

Lear. If thou be as poor for a subject, as he is for a king, thou art poor enough. What would'st thou?

Kent. Service.

Lear. Who wouldst thou serve?

Kent. You.

Lear. Dost thou know me, fellow?

Kent. No, Sir; but you have that in your countenance, which I would fain call master.

Lear. What's that?

Kent. Authority.

Lear. What services canst thou do?

Kent. I can keep honest counsel, ride, run, mar a curious tale in telling it, and deliver a plain message bluntly: that which ordinary men are fit for, I am qualify'd in; and the best of me is diligence.

Lear. How old art thou?

Kent. Not so young, Sir, to love a woman for singing; nor so old, to dote on her for any thing: I have years on my back forty-eight.

Lear. Follow me: thou shalt serve me; if I like thee no worse after dinner, I will not part from thee yet.—Dinner, ho, dinner!—Where's my knave? my fool? Go you, and call my fool
hither:

Enter STEWARD.

You, you, Sirrah, where's my daughter?

Stew. So please you,—

Lear. What says the fellow there? Call the clotpoll back.—Where's my fool, ho!—I think the world's asleep.—How now? where's that mongrel?

Knight. He says, my lord, your daughter is not well.

Lear. Why came not the slave back to me, when I call'd him?

Knight. Sir, he answer'd me in the roundest manner, he would not.

Lear. He would not!

Knight. My lord, I know not what the matter is; but, to my judgment, your highness is not entertain'd with that ceremonious affection as you were wont; there's a great abatement of kindness appears, as well in the general depedants, as in the duke himself also, and your daughter.

Lear. Ha! say'st thou so?

Knight. I beseech you, pardon me, my lord, if I be mistaken; for my duty cannot be silent
when I think your highness is wrong'd.

Lear. Thou but remember'st me of mine own conception; I have perceived a most faint neglect of late; which I have rather blamed a mine own jealous curiosity,* than as a very pretence† and purpose of unkindness: I will look further into't.—But where's my fool?
have not seen him these two days.

Knight. Since my young lady's going into France, Sir, the fool hath much pined away.

Lear. No more of that; I have noted it well.
—Go you, and tell my daughter I would speak with her.—Go you, call hither my fool.—

Re-enter STEWARD.

O you Sir, you Sir, come you hither: Who am
I, Sir?

Stew. My lady's father.

Lear. My lady's father? my lord's knave: you whoresom dog! you slave! you cur!

Stew. I am none of this, my lord; I beseech you, pardon me.

Lear. Do you bandy looks with me, you rascal? [Striking him.]

Stew. I'll not be struck, my lord.

Kent. Nor tripped neither; you base football player. [Tripping up his Heels.]

Lear. I thank thee, fellow; thou servest me, and I'll love thee.

Kent. Come, Sir, arise, away; I'll teach you differences; away, away: If you will measure your lubber's length again, tarry: but away: go to; Have you wisdom? so.

[Pushes the STEWARD out.]

Lear. Now, my friendly knave, I thank thee:
there's earnest of thy service.

[Giving KENT Money.]

Fool. Let me hire him too;—Here's my cox-comb. [Giving KENT his Cap.]

Lear. How now, my pretty knave? how dost
thou?

Fool. Sirrah, you were best take my cox-comb.

Kent. Why, fool?

Fool. Why? For taking one's part that is out of favour: Nay, an thou canst not smile as the wind sits, thou'lt catch cold shortly: There, take my coxcomb: Why, this fellow has ban-ish'd two of his daughters, and did the third a blessing against his will; if thou follow him, thou must needs wear my coxcomb.—How now, nuncle? 'Would I had two coxcombs, and two daughters!

Lear. Why, my boy?

Fool. If I gave them all my living,‡ I'd keep my coxcombs myself: There's mine; beg another of thy daughters.

Lear. Take heed, Sirrah; the whip.

Fool. Truth's a dog that must to kennel; he must be whipp'd out, when Lady, the brach,§ may stand by the fire and stink.

Lear. A pestilent gail to me!

Fool. Mark it, nuncle:—

Lear. Why, no, boy; nothing can be made out of nothing.

Fool. Pr'ythee, tell him, so much the rent of his land comes to; he will not believe a fool.

[To KENT.]

Lear. A bitter fool!

Fool. Dost thou know the difference, my boy, between a bitter fool and a sweet fool?

Lear. No, lad; teach me.

Fool. That lord, that counsel'd thee

To give away thy land,
Come place him here by me,
Or do thou for him stand:

The sweet and bitter fool

Will presently appear;

The one in motley here,

The other sound out there.

Lear. Dost thou call me fool, boy?

Fool. All thy other titles thou hast given away; that thou wast born with.

Kent. This is not altogether fool, my lord.

Fool. No, 'faith, lords and great men will not let me; if I had a monopoly out, they would have part on't: and ladies too, they will not let me have all fool to myself; they'll be snatching.—Give me an egg, nuncle, and I'll give thee two crowns.

Lear. What two crowns shall they be?

Fool. Why, after I have cut the egg i'the middle, and eat up the meat, the two crowns of the egg. When thou clovest thy crown i'the middle, and gavest away both parts, thou bor-est thine ass on thy back over the dirt: Thou hadst little wit in thy bald crown, when thou gavest thy golden one away. If I speak like myself in this, let him be whipp'd that first finds it so.

[Singing.]

Fools had ne'er less grace in a year;*

For wise men are grown foppish;

And know not how their wits to wear,

Their manners are so apish.

Lear. When were you wout to be so full of songs, Sirrah?

Fool. I have used it, nuncle, ever since thou madest thy daughters thy mother: for when thou gavest them the rod, and put'st down thine own breeches,

Then they for sudden joy did weep, [Singing.]

And I for sorrow sung,

That such a king should play bo-peep.

And go the fools among.

Pr'ythee, nuncle, keep a schoolmaster that can teach thy fool to lie; I would fain learn to lie.

Lear. If you lie, Sirrah, we'll have you whipp'd.

Fool. I marvel, what kin thou and thy daughters are: they'll have me whipp'd for speaking true, thou'lt have me whipp'd for lying; and, sometimes, I am whipp'd for holding my peace. I had rather be any kind of thing, than a fool: and yet I would not be thee, nuncle; thou hast pared thy wit o'both sides,
and left nothing in the middle: Here comes

In rank and not-to-be-endured riots. Sir,
I had thought, by making this well known un-

To have found a safe redress; but now grow

By what yourself too late have spoke and done,

That you protect this course, and put it on

By your allowance;† which if you should, the not Lear: does Lear walk thus? speak thus?

Where are his eyes? Either his notion weakens, or his discernings are lethargied.—Sleeping or waking?—Ha! sure, 'tis not so.—Who is it that can tell me who I am?—Lear's shadow? I would learn that; for by the marks of sovereignty, knowledge, and reason, I should be false persuaded I had daughters.—

Fool. Which they will make an obedient father.

Of other your new pranks. I do beseech you

To understand my purposes aright:

As you are old and reverend, you should be wise:

Here do you keep a hundred knights and
squires;

Men so disordered, so debauch'd, and bold,

That this our court, infected with their manners,

Shows like a riotous inn; epicurism and lust

Make it more like a tavern or a brothel,

nature

From the fix'd place; drew from my heart all
And added to the gall. O Lear, Lear, Lear!

Beat at this gate that let thy folly in,

[Striking his Head.

And thy dear judgment out!—Go, go, my
people.

ALB. My lord, I am guiltless, as I am igno-
Of what hath mov'd you:

Lear. It may be so, my lord.—Hear, nature,
hear;

Dear goddess, hear! Suspend thy purpose, if Thou didst intend to make this creature fruitful!
Into her womb convey sterility!

Dry up in her the organs of increase;

And from her derogate† body never spring

A babe to honour her! If she must teem,

Create her child of spleen; that it may live,

And be a thwart disnatur'd torment to her!

Let it stamp wrinkles 'n her brow of youth!

With cadent‡ tears fret channels in her cheeks;

Turn all her mother's pains and benefits

To laughter and contempt; that she may feel

How sharper than a serpent's tooth it is

To have a thankless child!—Away, away!

[Exit.

ALB. Now, gods that we adore, whereof comes
this?

Gon. Never afflict yourself to know the cause;
But let his disposition have that scope
That dotage gives it.

Re-enter LEAR.

Lear. What, fifty of my followers, at a clap!
Within a fortnight?

ALB. What's the matter, Sir?

Lear. I'll tell thee;—Life and death! I am asham'd

That thou hast power to shake my manhood
thus:

That these hot tears, which break from me
perforce,

Should make thee worth them.—Blasts and fogs
upon thee!

The untented§ woundings of a father's curse
Pierce every sense about thee!—Old fond eyes,

Beweep this cause again, I'll pluck you out;

And cast you, with the waters that you lose,

To temper clay.—Ha! is it come to this?

Let it be so:—Yet have I left a daughter,

Who, I am sure, is kind and comfortable;

When she shall hear this of thee, with her nails

She'll flay thy wolfish visage. Thou shalt find,

That I'll resume the shape which thou dost
think

I have cast off for ever; thou shalt, I warrant
thee.

[Exeunt LEAR, KENT, and Attendants.

Gon. Do you mark that, my lord?

ALB. I cannot be so partial, Goneril,
To the great love I bear you,—

Gon. Pray you, content.—What, Oswald, ho!
You, Sir, more knave than fool, after your master.

[To the Fool.

Fool. Nuncle Lear, 'nuncle Lear, tarry, and take the fool with thee.

* The rack.

† Degraded.
‡ Undressed.

§ Falling.

A fox, when one has caught her,
And such a daughter,
Should sure to the slaughter,
If my cap would buy a halter;
So the fool follows after.

[Exit

Gon. This man hath had good counsel:—A hundred knights!

'Tis politic and safe to let him keep

At point,* a hundred knights! Yes, that on every dream,

Each buz, each fancy, each complaint, dislike,
He may enguard his dotage with their powers,
And hold our lives in mercy.—Oswald, I say!

ALB. Well, you may fear too far.

Gon. Safer than trust:

Let me still take away the harms I fear,

Not fear still to be taken. I know his heart:

What he hath utter'd, I have writ my sister;

If she sustain'd him and his hundred knights,

When I have show'd the unfitness—How now, Oswald?

Enter STEWARD.

What, have you writ that letter to my sister?

Stew. Ay, madam.

Gon. Take you some company, and away to horse:

Inform her full of my particular fear;

And thereto add such reasons of your own,

As may compact it more. Get you gone;

And hasten your return. [Exit STEWARD.] No, no,
my lord,

This milky gentleness, and course of your's,
Though I condemn it not, yet, under pardon,
You are much more attack'd‡ for want of wis-
Than prais'd for harmful mildness.

[dom,

ALB. How far your eyes may pierce, I cannot tell;

Striving to better, oft we mar what's well.

Gon. Nay, then—

ALB. Well, well; the event.

[Exeunt

SCENE V.—Court before the same.

Enter LEAR, KENT, and FOOL.

Lear. Go you before to Gloster with these letters: acquaint my daughter no further with any thing you know, than comes from her demand out of the letter: If your diligence be not speedy,
I shall be there before you.

Kent. I will not sleep, my lord, till I have delivered your letter.

[Exit.

Fool. If a man's brains were in his heels, wer't not in danger of kibes?

Lear. Ay, boy.

Fool. Then I pr'ythee, be merry; thy wit shall not go slipshod.

Lear. Ha, ha, ha!

Fool. Shalt see, thy other daughter will use thee kindly: for though she's as like this as a crab is like an apple, yet I can tell what I can tell.

Lear. Why, what canst thou tell, my boy?

Fool. She will taste as like this, as a crab does to a crab. Thou canst tell, why one's nose stands i'the middle of his face?

Lear. No.

Fool. Why, to keep his eyes on either side his nose; that what a man cannot smell out, he may spy into.

Lear. I did her wrong:—

Fool. Canst tell how an oyster makes his shell?

Lear. No.

Fool. Nor I neither; but I can tell why a snail has a house.

Lear. Why?

Fool. Why, to put his head in; not to give it away to his daughters, and leave his horns without a case.

Lear. I will forget my nature.—So kind a father!—Be my horses ready?

Fool. Thy asses are gone about 'em. The reason why the seven stars are no more than seven, is a pretty reason.

Lear. Because they are not eight?

Fool. Yes, indeed: Thou wouldst make a good fool.

Lear. To take it again perforce!—Monster ingratitude!

Fool. If thou wert my fool, nuncle, I'd have thee beaten for being old before thy time.

Lear. How's that?

Fool. Thou shouldst not have been old, before thou hadst been wise.

Lear. O let me not be mad, not mad, sweet heaven!

Keep me in temper; I would not be mad!—

Enter GENTLEMAN.

How now! Are the horses ready?

Gent. Ready, my lord.

Lear. Come, boy.

Fool. She that is maid now, and laughs at my departure,
Shall not be a maid long, unless things be cut shorter. [Exeunt.]

ACT II.

SCENE I.—A Court within the Castle of the Earl of GLOSTER.

Enter EDMUND and CURAN, meeting.

Edm. Save thee, Curan.

Cur. And you, Sir. I have been with your father; and given him notice, that the duke of Cornwall, and Regan his duchess, will be here with him to-night.

Edm. How comes that?

Cur. Nay, I know not: You have heard of the news abroad: I mean, the whispered ones, for they are yet but ear-kissing arguments?

Edm. Not I: 'Pray you, what are they?

Cur. Have you heard of no likely wars toward, 'twixt the dukes of Cornwall and Albany?

Edm. Not a word.

Cur. You may then, in time. Fare you well, Sir. [Exit.]

Edm. The duke be here to-night? The better! Best!

This weaves itself perforce into my business! My father hath set guard to take my brother; And I have one thing, of a queasy* question, Which I must act:—Briefness, and fortune, work!—

Brother, a word; descend:—Brother, I say;

Enter EDGAR.

My father watches: O Sir, fly this place; Intelligence is given where you are hid; You have now the good advantage of the night:—

Have you not spoken 'gainst the duke of Cornwall?

He's coming hither; now, i'the night, i'the haste,

And Regan with him; Have you nothing said Upon his party 'gainst the duke of Albany? Advise† yourself.

Edg. I am sure on't, not a word.

Edm. I hear my father coming,—Pardon me.—

In cunning, I must draw my sword upon you:—Draw: Seem to defend yourself: Now quit you well.

Yield:—come before my father;—Light, ho, here!—

Fly, brother;—Torches! torches!—So, farewell.— [Exit EDGAR.]

Some blood drawn on me would beget opinion [Wounds his Arm.]

Delicate.

† Consider, recollect yourself.

Of my more fierce* endeavour: I have seen drunkards

Do more than this in sport.—Father! father! Stop, stop! No help?

Enter GLOSTER, and Servants with Torches.

Glo. Now, Edmund, where's the villain?

Edm. Here stood he in the dark, his sharp sword out,

Mumbling of wicked charms, conjuring the moon

To stand his auspicious mistress:—

Glo. But where is he?

Edm. Look, Sir, I bleed.

Glo. Where is the villain, Edmund?

Edm. Fled this way, Sir. When by no means he could—

Glo. Pursue him, ho!—Go after.—[Exit Servant.] By no means,—what?

Edm. Persuade me to the murder of your lordship;

But that I told him, the revenging gods 'Gainst parricides did all their thunders bend; Spoke, with how manifold and strong a bond The child was bound to the father;—Sir, in fine,

Seeing how loathly opposite I stood To his unnatural purpose, in fell motion, With his prepared sword, he charges home My unprovided body, lanc'd mine arm: But when he saw my best alarm'd spirits, Bold in the quarrel's right, rous'd to the encounter,

Or whether gasted* by the noise I made, Full suddenly he fled.

Glo. Let him fly far:

Not in this land shall he remain uncaught; And found—Despatch.—The noble duke my master,

My worthy arch† and patron, comes to-night: By his authority I will proclaim it, That he, which finds him, shall deserve our thanks,

Bringing the murd'rous coward to the stake; He, that conceals him, death.

Edm. When I dissuaded him from his intent, And found him plighted‡ to do it, with curst§ speech

I threaten'd to discover him: He replied, Thou unpossessing bastard! dost thou think, If I would stand against thee, would the reposal

Of any trust, virtue, or worth, in thee Make thy words faith'd? No: what I should deny,

(As this I would; ay, though thou didst produce

My very character ¶) I'd turn it all To thy suggestion, plot, and damned practice:

And thou must make a dullard of the world, If they not thought the profits of my death Were very pregnant and potential spurs To make thee seek it.

Glo. Strong and fasten'd villain!

Would he deny his letter?—I never got him.

[Trumpets within.]

Hark, the duke's trumpets! I know not why he comes:—

All ports I'll bar; the villain shall not 'scape; The duke must grant me that: besides, his picture

I will send far and near, that all the kingdom May have due note of him; and of my land, Loyal and natural boy, I'll work the means To make thee capable. ¶

Enter CORNWALL, REGAN, and Attendants.

Corn. How now, my noble friend? since I came hither,

* Frighted.

† Pitched, fixe l.

‡ Chief.

§ Severe, harsh.

¶ Handwriting.

¶ I.e. Capable of succeeding to my land.

(Which I can call but now,) I have heard strange news,

Reg. If it be true, all vengeance comes too short,
Which can pursue the offender. How dost, my lord?

Glo. O madam, my old heart is crack'd, is crack'd!

Reg. What, did my father's godson seek your life?

He whom my father nam'd? your Edgar?

Glo. O lady, lady, shame would have it bid!

Reg. Was he not companion with the riotous knights

That tend upon my father?

Glo. I know not, madam:

It is too bad, too bad.—

Edm. Yes, madam, he was.

Reg. No marvel then, though he were ill affected;

'Tis they have put him on the old man's death,
To have the waste and spoil of his revenues.

I have this present evening from my sister
Been well inform'd of them; and with such cautions,

That, if they come to sojourn at my house,
I'll not be there.

Corn. Nor I, assure thee, Regan.—

Edmund, I hear that you have shown your father

A child-like office.

Edm. 'Twas my duty, Sir.

Glo. He did bewray^{*} his practice; † and re-
ceiv'd

This hurt you see, striving to apprehend him.

Corn. Is he pursued?

Glo. Ay, my good lord, he is.

Corn. If he be taken, he shall never more
Be fear'd of doing harm: make your own purpose,

How in my strength you please.—For you, Edmund,

Whose virtue and obedience doth this instant
So much commend itself, you shall be our's;
Natures of such deep trust we shall much need;
You we first seize on.

Edm. I shall serve you, Sir,
Truly, however else.

Glo. For him I thank your grace.

Corn. You know not why we came to visit
you,—

Reg. Thus out of season; threading dark-ey'd
night.

Occasions noble Gloster, of some poize, ‡
Wherein we must have use of your advice:—

Our father he hath writ, so hath our sister,
Of differences, which I best thought it fit
To answer from our home; the several messengers

From hence attend despatch. Our good old
friend,

Lay comforts to your bosom; and bestow

Your needful counsel to our business,

Which craves the instant use.

Glo. I serve you, madam:

Your graces are right welcome. [Exeunt.]

SCENE II.—Before GLOSTER's Castle.

Enter KENT and STEWARD, severally.

Stew. Good dawning to thee, friend: Art of the house?

Kent. Ay.

Stew. Where may we set our horses?

Kent. I'the mire.

Stew. Pr'ythee, if thou love me, tell me.

Kent. I love thee not.

Stew. Why, then I care not for thee.

Kent. If I had thee in Lipsbury pinfold, I would make thee care for me.

Stew. Why dost thou use me thus? I know thee not.

Kent. Fellow, I know thee.

Stew. What dost thou know me for?

Kent. A knave, a rascal, an eater of broken meats; a base, proud, shallow, beggarly, three-suited, hundred-pound, filthy worsted-stocking knave; a lily-liver'd, action-taking knave; a whoreson, glass-gazing, superserviceable, flinical rogue; one-trunk-inheriting slave; one that wouldst be a bawd, in way of good-service, and art nothing but the composition of a knave, beggar, coward, pandar, and the son and heir of a mongrel bitch: one whom I will beat into clamorous whining, if thou deny'st the least syllable of thy addition.*

Stew. Why, what a monstrous fellow art thou, thus to rail on one, that is neither known of thee
nor knows thee!

Kent. What a brazen-fac'd varlet art thou, to deny thou know'st me! Is it two days ago, since I tripp'd up thy heels, and beat thee, before the king? Draw, you rogue; for, though it be night, the moon shines; I'll make a sop i'the moor-shine of you: Draw, you whoreson cullionly barber-monger, draw.

[Drawing his Sword.]

Stew. Away; I have nothing to do with thee.

Kent. Draw, you rascal: you come with letters against the king: and take vanity † the puppet's part, against the royalty of her father: Draw, you rogue, or I'll so carbadoe your shanks:—draw, you rascal; come your ways.

Stew. Help, ho! murder! help!

Kent. Strike, you slave; stand, rogue, stand;
you neat slave, strike.

[Beating him.]

Stew. Help, ho! murder! murder!

Enter EDMUND, CORNWALL, REGAN, GLOSTER, and Servants.

Edm. How now? What's the matter? Part.

Kent. With you, Goodman boy, if you please;
come, I'll flesh you; come on, young master.

Glo. Weapons! arms! What's the matter
here?

Corn. Keep peace, upon your lives;
He dies, that strikes again: What is the matter?

Reg. The messengers from our sister and the
king.

Corn. What is your difference? speak.

Stew. I am scarce in breath, my lord.

Kent. No marvel, you have so bestirr'd your valour. You cowardly rascal, nature disclaims in thee; a tailor made thee.

Corn. Thou art a strange fellow: a tailor make a man?

Kent. Ay, a tailor, Sir; a stone-cutter or a painter could not have made him so ill, though they had been but two hours at the trade.

Corn. Speak yet, how grew your quarrel?

Stew. This ancient ruffian, Sir, whose life I have spar'd,

At suit of his grey bread,—

Kent. Thou whoreson zed! thou unnecessary letter!—My lord, if you will give me leave, I will tread this unbolted ‡ villain into mortar, and dash the wall of a jakes § with him.—Spare my grey beard, you wagtail!

Corn. Peace, Sirrah!

You beastly knave, know you no reverence?

Kent. Yes, Sir; but anger has a privilege.

Corn. Why art thou angry?

Kent. That such a slave as this should wear a sword,

Who wears no honesty. Such smiling rogues as these,

Like rats, oft bite the holy cords atwain
Which are too intrinse † t'unloose: smooth every

passion
That in the natures of their lords rebels:
Bring oil to fire, snow to their colder moods;

‡ Privy.

§ Perplexed.

With every gale and vary of their masters,
As knowing nought, like dogs, but following.—
A plague upon your epileptic visage!
Smile you my speeches, as I were a fool?
Goose, if I had you upon Sarum plain,
I'd drive ye cackling home to Camelot.‡

Corn. What, art thou mad, old fellow?

Glo. How fell you out?

Say that.

Kent. No contraries hold more antipathy,
Than I and such a knave.

Corn. Why dost thou call him knave? What's his offence?

Kent. His countenance likes me not. §

Corn. No more, perchance, does mine, or his, or her's.

Kent. Sir, 'tis my occupation to be plain;
I have seen better faces in my time,
Than stands on any shoulder that I see
Before me at this instant.

Corn. This is some fellow, [affect
Who, having been prais'd for bluntness, doth
A mazy roughness; and constrains the garb,
Quite from his nature: He cannot flatter, he!—
An honest mind and plain,—he must speak
truth:

And they will take it, so; if not, he's plain.
These kind of knaves I know, which in this plainness

Harbour more craft, and more corrupter ends,
Than twenty silly § ducking observants,
That stretch their duties nicely.

Kent. Sir, in good sooth, in sincere verity,
Under the allowance of your grand aspect,
Whose influence, like the wreath of radiant fire
On flickering Phœbus' front,—

Corn. What mean'st by this?

Kent. To go out of my dialect, which you dis-commend so much. I know, Sir, I am no flatterer: he that beguiled you in a plain accent, was a plain knave; which, for my part, I will not be, though I should win your displeasure to entreat me to it.

Corn. What was the offence you gave him?

Ste'r. Never any:

It pleas'd the king his master, very late,
To strike at me, upon his misconstruction;
When he, conjunct, and flattering his displea-
sure,

Tripp'd me behind; being down, insulted, rail'd,
And put upon him such a deal of man,
That worthy'd him, got praises of the king
For him attempting who was self-subdu'd;
And, in the fleshment of this dread exploit,
Drew on me here.

Kent. None of these rogues, and cowards,
But Ajax is their fool. ¶

Corn. Fetch forth the stocks, ho! [gart,
You stubborn ancient knave, you reverend brag-
We'll teach you—

Kent. Sir, I am too old to learn:
Call not your stocks for me: I serve the king;
On whose employment I was sent to you:
You shall do small respect, show too bold malice
Against the grace and person of my master,
Stocking his messenger.

Corn. Fetch forth the stocks:
As I've life and honour, there shall he sit till noon.

Reg. Till noon! till night, my lord; and all night too.

Kent. Why, madam, if I were your father's
You should not use me so. [dog,

Reg. Sir, being his knave, I will.

[Stocks brought out.
Corn. This is a fellow of the self-same colour

* Disown.

¶ Simple or rustic.

¶ I. e. Ajax is a fool to them.

Our sister speaks of:—Come, bring away the stocks.

Glo. Let me beseech your grace not to do so:
His fault is much, and the good king his master
Will check him for't: your purpos'd low correction

Is such, as basest and contemned'st wretches,
For pilferings and most common trespasses,
Are punish'd with: the king must take it ill,
That he's so slightly valued in his messenger,
Should have him thus restrain'd.

Corn. I'll answer that.

Reg. My sister may receive it much more worse,

To have her gentleman abus'd, assaulted,
For following her affairs.—Put in his legs.—

[KENT is put in the Stocks.

Come, my good lord; away.

[Exeunt REGAN and CORNWALL.

Glo. I am sorry for thee, friend; 'tis the duke's pleasure,
Whose disposition, all the world well knows,
Will not be rubb'd nor stopp'd: I'll entreat for
thee.

Kent. Pray, do not, Sir: I have watch'd, and travell'd hard;

Some time I shall sleep out, the rest I'll whistle.
A good man's fortune may grow out at heels:
Give you good morrow!

Glo. The duke's to blame in this; 'twill be ill taken. [Exit.

Kent. Good king, that must approve the common saw! *

Thou out of heaven's benediction com'st
To the warm sun!

Approach, thou beacon to this under globe,
That by thy comfortable beams I may Peruse this letter!—Nothing almost seems mira-
cles,

But misery;—I know 'tis from Cordelia;
Who hath most fortunately been inform'd
Of my obscured course; and shall find time
From this enormous state,—seeking to give Losses their remedies:—All weary and o'er-
watch'd,

Take vantage, heavy eyes, not to behold
This shameful lodging.

Fortune, good night: smile once more; turn thy wheel! † [He sleeps.

SCENE III.—A part of the Heath.

Enter EDGAR.

Edg. I heard myself proclaim'd;
And, by the happy hollow of a tree,
Escap'd the hunt. No port is free; no place,
That guard, and most unusual vigilance,
Does not attend my taking. While I may escape,

I will preserve myself; and am bethought
To take the basest and most poorest shape,
That every penury, in contempt of man,
Brought near to beast: my face I'll grime with filth;

Blanket my loins; elf § all my hair in knots;
And with presented nakedness outface
The winds and persecutions of the sky.
The country gives me proof and precedent
Of Bedlam beggars, who, with roaring voices,
Strike in their numb'd and mortified bare arms,
Pins, wooden pricks, nails, sprigs of rosemary:

And with this horrible object, from low farms,
Poor pelting villages, sheep cotes and mills,
Sometime with lunatic bans § sometime with
prayers,
Enforce their charity,—Poor Turligood! poor
Tom!

That's something yet:—Edgar I nothing am.

[Exit

SCENE IV. Before GLOSTER's Castle.

Enter LEAR, FOOL, and GENTLEMAN.

Lear. 'Tis strange, that they should so depart from home,
And not send back my messenger.

Gent. As I learn'd,
The night before there was no purpose in them
Of this remove.

Kent. Hail to thee, noble master!

Lear. How!

Mak'st thou this shame thy pastime?

Kent. No, my lord.

Fool. Ha, ha; look! he wears cruel^a garters!
Horses are tied by the heads; dogs and bears by the neck; monkeys by the loins, and men by the legs: when a man is over-lusty at legs, then he wears wooden nether-stocks.[†]

Lear. What's he, that hath so much thy place mistook
To set thee here?

Kent. It is both he and she,
Your son and daughter.

Lear. No.

Kent. Yes.

Lear. No, I say.

Kent. I say, yea.

Lear. No, no; they would not.

Kent. Yes, they have.

Lear. By Jupiter, I swear, no.

Kent. By Juno, I swear, ay.

Lear. They durst not do't:

They could not, would not do't; 'tis worse than
murder,

To do upon respect such violent outrage:
Resolve me, with all modest haste, which way
Thou might'st deserve, or they impose, this Coming from us. [usage,

Kent. My lord, when at their home
I did commend your highness' letters to them,
Ere I was risen from the place that show'd
My duty kneeling, came there a reeking post,
Stew'd in his haste, half breathless, panting
forth

From Goneril his mistress, salutations;
Deliver'd letters, spite of intermission,
Which presently they read: on whose contents,
They summon'd up their meiny,[‡] straight took
horse;

Commanded me to follow, and attend [looks:
The leisure of their answer; gave me cold
And meeting here the other messenger,
Whose welcome, I perceiv'd, had poison'd mine,
(Being the very fellow that of late Display'd so saucily against your highness,)
Having more man than wit about me, drew;
He rais'd the house with loud and coward
cries:

Your son and daughter found this trespass
worth

The shame which here it suffers.

Fool. Winter's not gone yet, if the wild geese fly that way.

Fathers, that wear rags,
Do make their children blind;
But fathers, that bear bags,
Shall see their children kind.
Fortune, that arrant whore,
Ne'er turns the key to the poor.—

But, for all this, thou shalt have as many dolours[§] for thy daughters, as thou canst tell in a year.

Lear. O how this mother^{||} swells up toward
my heart!

Hysterica passio! down, thou climbing sorrow,
Thy element's below!—Where is this daughter?

Kent. With the earl, Sir, here within.

Lear. Follow me not;
Stay here.

Exit.

Gent. Made you no more offence than what you speak of?

Kent. None.

How chance the king comes with so small a train?

Fool. An thou hadst been set i'the stocks for that question, thou hadst well deserv'd it.

Kent. Why, fool?

Fool. We'll set thee to school to an ant, to teach thee there's no labouring in the winter.
All that follow their noses are led by their eyes, but blind men; and there's not a nose among twenty, but can smell him that's stinking. Let go thy hold when a great wheel runs down a hill, lest it break thy neck with following it;
but the great one that goes up the hill, let him draw thee after. When a wise man gives thee better counsel, give me mine again: I would have none but knaves follow it, since a fool gives it.

That, Sir, which serves and seeks for gain,

And follows but for form,

Will pack, when it begins to rain,

And leave thee in the storm.

But I will tarry, the fool will stay,

And let the wise man fly:

The knave turns fool, that runs away;

The fool no knave, perdy.

Kent. Where learned you this, fool?

Fool. Not i'the stocks, fool.

Re-enter LEAR, with GLOSTER.

Lear. Deny to speak with me? They are sick? they are weary?

They have travell'd hard to-night? Mere fetches;

The images of revolt and flying off!

Fetch me a better answer.

Glo. My dear lord,

You know the fiery quality of the duke;

How unremoveable and fix'd he is

In his own course.

Lear. Vengeance! plague! death! confusion!

Fiery? what quality? Why Gloster, Gloster, I'd speak with the duke of Cornwall, and his
wife.

Glo. Well, my good lord, I have inform'd them so.

Lear. Inform'd them! Dost thou understand me, man?

Glo. Ay, my good lord.

Lear. The king would speak with Cornwall;
the dear father

Would with his daughter speak, commands her
service:

Are they inform'd of this?—My breath and
blood!

Enter CORNWALL, REGAN, GLOSTER, and Servants.

Lear. Good morrow to you both.

Corn. Hall to your grace!

[KENT is set at Liberty.]

Reg. I am glad to see your highness.

Lear. Regan, I think you are; I know what reason

I have to think so: If thou shouldst not be glad, I would divorce me from thy mother's tomb, Sepulchring an adulteress.—Oh! are you free?

[To KENT.]

Some other time for that.—Beloved Regan, Thy sister's naught: O Regan, she hath tied Sharp-tooth'd unkindness, like a vulture here;

I can scarce speak to thee; thou'lt not believe, Of how deprav'd a quality—O Regan!

Reg. I pray you, Sir, take patience; I have hope,

You less know how to value her desert, Than she to scant* her duty.

Lear. Say, how is that?

Reg. I cannot think my sister, in the least, Would fail her obligation: If, Sir, perchance, She have restrain'd the riots of your followers, 'Tis on such ground, and to such wholesome end,

As clears her from all blame.

Lear. My curses on her!

Reg. O Sir, you are old; Nature in you stands on the very verge Of her confine: you should be rul'd, and led By some discretion, that discerns your state Better than you yourself: Therefore, I pray you,

That to our sister you do make return; Say, you have wrong'd her, Sir.

Lear. Ask her forgiveness?

Do you but mark how this becomes the house †
Dear daughter, I confess that I am old;
Age is unnecessary: on my knees I beg,

[Kneeling.]

That you'll vouchsafe me raiment, bed, and food.

Reg. Good Sir, no more; these are unsightly tricks:

Return you to my sister.

Lear. Never, Regan:

She hath abated me of half my train; Look'd black upon me; struck me with her tongue,

Most serpent-like, upon the very heart:—

All the stor'd vengeance of heaven fall On her ingrateful top! Strike her young bones, You taking airs, with lameness!

Corn. Phe, phe, phe!

Lear. You nimble lightnings, dart your blinding flames

Into her scornful eyes! Infect her beauty, You fen-suck'd fogs, drawn by the powerful sun, To fall and blast her pride!

Reg. O the bless'd gods!

So will you wish on me, when the rash mood's on.

Lear. No, Regan, thou shalt never have my curse:

Lear. Who put my man i'the stocks?

Corn. What trumpet's that?

Enter STEWARD.

Reg. I know't, my sister's: this approves her letter, [come!]

That she would soon be here.—Is your lady

Lear. This is a slave whose easy-borrow'd pride

Dwells in the fickle grace of her he follows:— Out, varlet, from my sight!

Corn. What means your grace?

Lear. Who stock'd my servant? Regan, I have good hope Thou didst not know o't.—Who comes here? O heavens,

Enter GONERIL.

If you do love old men, if your sweet sway

Allow* obedience, if yourselves are old,

Make it your cause: send down, and take my part!—

Art not asham'd to look upon this beard?—

[To GONERIL.]

O Regan, wilt thou take her by the hand?

Gon. Why not by the hand, Sir? How have I offended?

All's not offence that indiscretion finds, And dotage terms so.

Lear. O sides, you are to tough!

Will you yet hold?—How came my man i'the stocks?

Corn. I set him there, Sir: but his own disorders

Deserv'd much less advancement.

Lear. You! did you?

Reg. I pray you, father, being weak, seem so. If, till the expiration of your month, You will return and sojourn with my sister, Dismissing half your va'n, come then to me; I am now from home, and out of that provision

Which shall be needful for your entertainment.

Lear. Return to her, and fifty men dismiss'd? No, rather I abjure all roofs, and choose

I will not trouble thee, my child; farewell:

We'll no more meet, no more see one another:—

But yet thou art my flesh, my blood, my daughter;

Or, rather, a disease that's in my flesh,

Which I must needs call mine: thou art a boll, A plague-sore, an embossed § carbuncle,

In my corrupted blood. But I'll not chide thee;

Let shame come when it will, I do not call it:

I do not bid the thunder-bearer shoot,

Nor tell tales of thee to high-judging Jove:

Mend, when thou canst; be better, at thy leisure:

I can be patient; I can stay with Regan,

I, and my hundred knights.

We could control them: If you will come to
me,

(For now I spy a danger,) I entreat you

Will I give place or notice.

Lear. I gave you all—

Reg. And in good time you gave it.

Lear. Made you my guardians, my deposi-taries:

But kept a reservation to be follow'd

With such a number: What, must I come to

And thou art twice her love.

Gon. Hear me, my lord:

What need you five and twenty, ten, or five,
To follow in a house, where twice so many
Have a command to tend you?

Reg. What need one?

Lear. Oh! reason not the need: our basest beggars

Are in the poorest thing superfluous:

Allow not nature more than nature needs,
Man's life is cheap as beast's: thou art a lady;
If only to go warm were gorgeous,
Why, nature needs not what thou gorgeous wear'st,

Which scarcely keeps thee warm.—But, for true need,—

You heavens, give me that patience, patience
I need!

You see me here, you gods, a poor old man,
As full of grief as age; wretched in both!
If it be you that stir these daughters' hearts
Against their father, fool me not so much
To bear it tamely; touch me with noble anger!
O let not women's weapons, water-drops,
Stain my man's cheeks!—No, you unnatural
hags,

I will have such revenges on you both,
That all the world shall—I will do such things,—
What they are, yet I know not; but they shall be

The terrors of the earth. You think I'll weep;
No, I'll not weep:—

I have full cause of weeping; but this heart
Shall break into a hundred thousand flaws,
Or ere I'll weep:—O fool, I shall go mad!

[Exeunt LEAR, GLOSTER, KENT, and FOOL.

Corn. Let us withdraw, 'twill be a storm.

[Storm heard at a distance.

Reg. This house
Is little; the old man and his people cannot
Be well bestow'd.

† Finish.

Gon. 'Tis his own blame; he hath put Himself from rest, and must needs taste his folly.

Reg. For his particular, I'll receive him
But not one follower. [gladly,

Gon. So am I purpos'd.
Where is my lord of Gloster?

Re-enter GLOSTER.

Corn. Follow'd the old man forth:—he is return'd.

Glo. The king is in high rage.

Corn. Whither is he going?

Glo. He calls to horse; but will I know not whither.

Corn. 'Tis best to give him way; he leads himself.

Gon. My lord, entreat him by no means to stay.

Glo. Alack, the night comes on, and the bleak winds

Do sorely ruffle; for many miles about
There's scarce a bush.

Reg. O Sir, to wilful men,
The injuries that they themselves procure,
Must be their schoolmasters: Shut up your doors;

He is attended with a desperate train;
And what they may incense^{*} him to, being apt
To have his ear abus'd, wisdom bids fear.

Corn. Shut up your doors, my lord; 'tis a wild night;

My Regan counsels well: come out o'the storm.

ACT III.

SCENE I.—A Heath.—A Storm is heard, with Thunder and Lightning.

Enter KENT, and a GENTLEMAN, meeting,

Kent. Who's here, beside foul weather?

Gent. One minded like the weather, most unquietly.

Kent. I know you; Where's the king?

Gent. Contending with the fretful element:
Bids the wind blow the earth into the sea,
Or swell the curled waters 'bove the main,
That things might change, or cease: tears his white hair;

Which the impetuous blasts, with eyeless rage,
Catch in their fury, and make nothing of:
Strives in his little world of man to outscorn
The to-and-fro-conflicting wind and rain.
This night, wherein the cub-drawn bear[†] would
The lion and the belly-pinched wolf [couch,
Keep their fur dry, unbounted he runs,
And bids what will take all.

Kent. But who is with him?

Gent. None but the fool; who labours to outjest
His heart-struck injuries.

Kent. Sir, I do know you;
And dare, upon the warrant of my art,† Commend a dear thing to you. There is division,

And, from some knowledge and assurance, offer
This office to you.]

Gent. I will talk further with you.

Kent. No, do not.

For confirmation that I am much more
Than my out wall, open this purse, and take
What it contains: If you shall see Cordelia,
(As fear not but you shall,) show her this ring;
And she will tell you who your fellow† is
That yet you do not know. Face on this storm!
I will go seek the king.

Lear. No, I will be the pattern of all patience;
I will say nothing.

Kent. Who's there?

Fool. Marry, here's grace, and a cod-piece;
that's a wise man, and a fool.

Kent. Alas, Sir, are you here? things that love night,

Love not such nights as these; the wrathful
Gallow* the very wanderers of the dark,

And make them keep their caves: Since I was
man,

Such sheets of fire, such bursts of horrid thun-
Such groans of roaring wind and rain, I never Remember to have heard; man's nature cannot carry

The affliction, nor the fear.

Lear. Let the great gods,
That keep this dreadful pother† o'er our heads,
Find out their enemies now. Tremble, thou

wretch,
That hast within thee undivulged crimes,
Unwhipp'd of justice: Hide thee, thou bloody

hand;

man,
More sinn'd against than sinning.

Kent. Alack, bare-headed!
Gracious my lord, hard by here is a hovel;
Some friendship will it lend you 'gainst the tempest;

Repose you there: while I to this hard house,
(More hard than is the stone whereof 'tis rais'd;
Which even but now, demanding¶ after you,
Denied me to come in,) return, and force
Their scanted courtesy.

Lear. My wits begin to turn.—
Come on, my boy: How dost, my boy? Art
cold?

I am cold myself.—Where is this straw, my fellow?

The art of our necessities is strange,
That can make vile things precious. Come,
your hovel.

Poor fool and knave, I have one part in my
That's sorry yet for thee.

Fool. He that has a little tiny wit,— With heigh, ho, the wind and the rain,—

Must make content with his fortunes fit;

For the ruin it raineth every day.

Lear. True, my good boy.—Come, bring us to this hovel. [Exeunt LEAR and KENT.

Fool. This is a brave night to cool a courte-zan.—I'll speak a prophecy ere I go;

When priests are more in word than matter;
When brewers mar their malt with water;
When nobles are their tailor's tutors;
No heretics burn'd, but wenches' suitors:
When every case in law is right;
No squire in debt, nor no poor knight;
When slanders do not live in tongues;
Nor cutpurses come not to throngs;
When usurers tell their gold i'the field;
And bawds and whores do churches build:—
Then shall the realm of Albion
Come to great confusion.
Then comes the time, who lives to see't,
That going shall be us'd with feet.
This prophecy Merlin shall make; for I live before his time. [Exit.

SCENE III.—A Room in GLOSTER'S Castle.

Enter GLOSTER and EDMUND.

Glo. Alack, alack, Edmund. I like not this unnatural dealing: When I desired their leave that I might pity him, they took from me the use of mine own house; charged me, on pain of their perpetual displeasure, neither to speak of him, entreat for him, nor any way sustain him.

Edm. Most savage, and unnatural!

Glo. Go to; say you nothing: There is division between the dukes; and a worse matter than that: I have received a letter this night;—'tis dangerous to be spoken;—I have locked the letter in my closet: these injuries the king now bears will be revenged at home; there is part of a power already footed: * we must incline to the king. I will seek him, and privily relieve him: go you, and maintain talk with the duke, that my charity be not of him perceived: If he ask for me, I am ill, and gone to bed. If I die for it, as no less is threatened me, the king my old master must be relieved. There is some strange thing toward, Edmund; pray you, be careful.

Exit.

Edm. This courtesy, forbid thee, shall the duke

Instantly know; and of that letter too:—This seems a fair deserving, and must draw me That which my father loses; no less than all: The younger rises, when the old doth fall.

SCENE IV.—A Part of the Heath, with a Hovel.

Enter LEAR, KENT, and FOOL.

Kent. Here is the place, my lord; good, my lord, enter: The tyranny of the open night's too rough For nature to endure. [Storm still.]

Lear. Let me alone.

Kent. Good my lord, enter here.

Lear. Wilt break my heart?

Kent. I'd rather break mine own: Good my lord, enter.

Lear. Thou think'st 'tis much, that this contentious storm
Invades us to the skin: so 'tis to thee;
But where the greater malady is fix'd,
The lesser is scarce felt. Thou'dst shun a bear:
But if thy flight lay toward the raging sea, Thou'dst meet the bear i'the mouth. When the mind's free,
The body's delicate: the tempest in my mind
Doth from my senses take all feeling else,
Save what beats there.—Filial ingratitude!
Is it not as this mouth should tear this hand,
For lifting food to't?—But I will punish home:—
No, I will weep no more.—In such a night
To shut me out!—Pour on; I will endure:—
In such a night as this! O Regan, Goneril!—
Your old kind father, whose frank heart gave
all,—

Oh! that way madness lies: let me shun that;
No more of that,—

Kent. Good my lord, enter here.

Lear. Pr'ythee, go in thyself; seek thine own case:
This tempest will not give me leave to ponder
On things would hurt me more.—But I'll go in:
In, boy; go first.—[To the FOOL.] You houseless poverty,—

Nay, get thee in. I'll pray, and then I'll sleep.—
[FOOL goes in.]

Poor naked wretches, wheresoe'er you are,
That bide the pelting of this pitiless storm,
How shall your houseless heads, and unfed
sides,
Your loop'd and window'd raggedness, defend
you

* A force already landed.

From seasons such as these? Oh! I have ta'en
Too little care of this! Take physic, pomp!
Expose thyself to feel what wretches feel;
That thou may'st shake the superflux to them,
And show the heavens more just.

Edg. [Within.] Fathom and half, fathom and half! Poor Tom!

[The FOOL runs out from the Hovel.]

Fool. Come not in here, nuncle, here's a spirit.

Help me, help me!

Kent. Give me thy hand.—Who's there?

Fool. A spirit, a spirit; he says his name's poor Tom.

Kent. What art thou that dost grumble there i'the straw?

Come forth.

Enter EDGAR, disguised as a Madman.

Edg. Away! the foul fiend follows me!—
Through the sharp hawthorn blows the cold wind.—

Humph! I go to thy cold bed, and warm thee.

Lear. Hast thou given all to thy two daughters? And art thou come to this?

Edg. Who gives any thing to poor Tom?
whom the foul fiend hath led through fire and though flame, through ford and whirlpool, over bog and quagmire; that hath laid knives under his pillow, and halters in his pew; set ratsbane by his porridge; made him proud of heart, to ride on a bay trotting-horse over four-inched bridges, to curse his own shadow for a traitor:
—Bless thy five wits! Tom's a-cold. O, do de, do de, do de.—Bless thee from whirlwinds, star-blasting, and taking! * Do poor Tom some charity, whom the foul fiend vexes: There could I have him now,—and there,—and there,—and there again, and there.

[Storm continues.]

Lear. What, have his daughters brought him to this pass?—

Couldst thou save nothing? Didst thou give them all?

Fool. Nay, he reserved a blanket, else we had been all asham'd.

Lear. Now, all the plagues that in the pendulous air

Hang fated o'er men's faults, light on thy daughters!

Kent. He hath no daughters, Sir.

Lear. Death, traitor! nothing could have sub-du'd nature

To such a lowness, but his unkind daughters.—
Is it the fashion, that discarded fathers
Should have thus little mercy on their flesh?
Judicious punishment! 'twas this flesh begot
Those pelican daughters.

Edg. Pillicock sat on pillicock's-hill;—
Halloo, halloo, loo, loo!

Fool. This cold night will turn us all to fools and madmen.

Edg. Take heed o'the foul field: Obey thy parents; keep thy word justly; swear not;
commit not with man's sworn spouse; set not thy sweet heart on proud array: Tom's a-cold.

Lear. What hast thou been?

Edg. A serving-man, proud in heart and mind; that curled my hair; wore gloves in my cap,† served the lust of my mistress' heart, and did the act of darkness with her; swore as many oaths as I spake words, and broke them in the sweet face of heaven: one, that slept in the contriving of lust, and waked to do it: Wine loved I deeply; dice dearly; and in woman, out-paramoured the Turk: False of heart, light of ear, bloody of hand; Hog in sloth, fox in stealth, wolf in greediness, dog in madness, lion in prey. Let not the creaking of shoes, nor the rustling of silks, betray thy poor heart to women:
Keep thy foot out of brothels, thy hand out of plackets, thy pen from leaders' books, and defy the foul fiend.—Still through the hawthorn blows the cold wind: Says suum, man, ha no nonny, dolphin my boy, my boy, sessa; let him trot by.

[Storm still continues.]

Lear. Why, thou wert better in thy grave, than to answer with thy uncovered body this extremity of the skies.—Is man no more than this? Consider him well: Thou owest the worm no silk, the beast no hide, the sheep no wool, the cat no perfume:—Ha! here's three of us are sophisticated!—Thou art the thing itself; unaccommodated man is no more but such a poor, bare, forked animal as thou art.—Off, off, you lendings:—Come; unbutton here.*

[Tearing off his clothes.]

Fool. Prythee, nuncle, be contented; this is a naughty night to swim in.—Now a little fire in a wild field were like an old lecher's heart; a small spark, all the rest of his body cold.—Look, here comes a walking fire.

Edg. This is the foul fiend Flibbertigibbet: he begins at curfew, and walks till the first cock; he gives the web and the pin,† squints the eye, and makes the bare-lip; mildews the white wheat, and hurts the poor creature of earth.

*Saint Withold† footed thrice the wold, &
He met the night-mare, and her nine-fold;
Bid her alight,
And her troth plight,
And, aroint thee, witch, aroint thee!*

Kent. How fares your grace?

Enter GLOSTER, with a Torch.

Lear. What's he?

Kent. Who's there? What is't you seek?

Glo. What are you there? Your names?

Edg. Poor Tom; that eats the swimming frog, the toad, the tadpole, the wall-newt, and the water;‡ that in the fury of his heart, when the foul fiend rages, eats cow-dung for sallots; swallows the old rat, and the ditch-dog; drinks the green mantle of the standing pool; who is whipped from tything to tything, and stocked, punished, and imprisoned; who hath had three suits to his back, six shirts to his body, horse to ride, and weapon to wear,—

*But mice, and rats, and such small deer,
Have been Tom's food for seven long year.*

Beware my follower:—Peace, Smolkin;†† peace, thou fiend!

Glo. What, hath your grace no better company?

Edg. The prince of darkness is a gentleman; Mado he's call'd, and Mahu.‡‡

Glo. Our flesh and blood, my lord, is grown so vile,
That it doth hate what gets it.

Edg. Poor Tom's a-cold.

Glo. Go in with me; my duty cannot suffer To obey in all your daughter's hard commands: Though their injunction be to bar my doors, And let this tyrannous night take hold upon you;

Yet have I ventur'd to come seek you out, And bring you where both fire and food is ready.

Lear. First let me talk with this philosopher:—

What is the cause of thunder?

Kent. Good, my lord, take his offer; Go into the house.

* The words unbutton here, are probably only a marginal direction crept into the matter.

Lear. I'll talk a word with this same learned Theban:—

What is your study?

Edg. How to prevent the fiend, and to kill vermin.

Lear. Let me ask you one word in private.

Kent. Impertune him once more to go, my lord,

His wits begin to unsettle.

Glo. Canst thou blame him?

His daughters seek his death:—Ah! that good Kent!—

He said it would be thus:—Poor banish'd man!—

Thou say'st the king grows mad; I'll tell thee, friend,

I am almost mad myself: I had a son, Now outlaw'd from my blood; he sought my life,

But lately, very late; I lov'd him, friend,—

No father his son dearer: true to tell thee,

The grief hath craz'd my wits. What a night's this!

I do beseech your grace,—

Lear. Oh! cry you mercy,
Noble philosopher, your company.

Edg. Tom's a-cold.

Glo. In, fellow, there, to the bovel, keep thee warm.

Lear. Come, let's in all.

Kent. This way, my lord.

Lear. With him;

I will keep still with my philosopher.

Kent. Good, my lord, sooth him; let him take the fellow.

Glo. Take him you on.

Kent. Sirrah, come on; go along with us.

Lear. Come, good Athenian.

Glo. No words, no words;

Hush.

Edg. Child Howiana to the dark tower came*

*His word was still,—Fie, feh, and fum,
I smell the blood of a British man.*

[Exeunt.]

SCENE V.—A Room in GLOSTER's Castle.

Enter CORNWALL and EDMUND.

Corn. I will have my revenge, ere I depart his house.

Edm. How, my lord, I may be censured, that nature thus gives way to loyalty: something fears me to think of.

Corn. I now perceive it was not altogether your brother's evil disposition made him seek his death: but a provoking merit, set a-work by a reproveable badness in himself.

Edm. How malicious is my fortune, that I must repent to be just! This is the letter he spoke of, which approves him an intelligent party to the advantages of France. O heavens! that this treason were not, or not I the detector!

Corn. Go with me to the duchess.

Edm. If the matter of this paper be certain, you have mighty business in hand.

Corn. True, or false, it hath made thee earl of Gloster. Seek out where thy father is, that he may be ready for our apprehension.

Edm. [Aside.] If I find him comforting the king, it will stuff his suspicion more fully.—I will persevere in my course of loyalty, though the conflict be sore between that and my blood.

Corn. I will lay trust upon thee; and thou shalt find a dearer father in my love.

[Exeunt.]

* Child is an old term for knight.

SCENE VI.—A Chamber in a Farm-House, adjoining the Castle.

Enter GLOSTER, LEAR, KENT, FOOL, and EDGAR.

Glo. Here is better than the open air : take it thankfully : I will piece out the comfort with what addition I can : I will not be long from you.

Kent. All the power of his wits has given way to his impatience :—The gods reward your kindness ! [Exit GLOSTER.]

Edg. Frateretto calls me ; and tells me, Nero is an angler in the lake of darkness. Pray, innocent,* and beware the foul fiend.

Fool. Prythee, nuncle, tell me, whether a madman be a gentleman, or a yeoman ?

Lear. A king, a king !

Fool. No ; he's a yeoman, that has a gentleman to his son : for he's a mad yeoman, that sees his son a gentleman before him.

Lear. To have a thousand with red burning spits
Come hissing in upon them :—

Edg. The foul fiend bites my back.

Fool. He's mad, that trusts in the tameness of a wolf, a horse's health, a boy's love, or a whore's oath.

Lear. It shall be done, I will arraign them straight :—

Come, sit thou here, most learned justicer :— [To EDGAR.]

Thou, sapient Sir, sit here. [To the FOOL.]—

Now, you she foxes !—

Edg. Look, where he stands and glares ! †—
Wantest thou eyes at trial, madam ?

Come o'er the bourn, ‡ Bessy, to me :

Fool. Her boat hath a leak,
And she must not speak

Why she dares not come over to thee.

Edg. The foul fiend haunts poor Tom in the voice of a nightingale. Hopdance cries in Tom's belly for two white herrings. Croak not, black angel ; I have no food for thee.

Kent. How do you, Sir ? Stand you not so amar'd :

Will you lie down and rest upon the cushions ?
Lear. I'll see their trial first :—Bring in the evidence.—

Thou robbed man of justice, take thy place ; [To EDGAR.]

And thou, his yoke-fellow of equity, [To the FOOL.]

Bench by his side :—You are of the commission, sit you too. [To KENT.]

Edg. Let us deal justly.

Sleepest, or wakest thou, jolly shepherd ?

Thy sheep be in the corn ;

And for one † last of thy minikin mouth,

Thy sheep shall take no harm.

Pur ! the cat is grey.

Lear. Arraign her first ; 'tis Goneril. I here take my oath before this honourable assembly, she kicked the poor king her father.

Fool. Come hither, mistress ; Is your name Goneril ?

Lear. She cannot deny it.

Fool. Cry you mercy, I took you for a joint-stool.

Lear. And here's another, whose warp'd looks proclaim

What store her heart is made of.—Stop her there !
Arms, arms, sword, fire !—Corruption in the place !

False justicer, why hast thou let her 'scape ?
Edg. Bless thy five wits !

Kent. O pity !—Sir, where is the patience now,
That you so oft have boasted to retain ?

Edg. My tears begin to take his part so much.
They'll mar my counterfeiting. [Aside.]

* Addressed to the Fool, who were anciently called innocents.

† Edgar is speaking in the character of a madman, who thinks he sees the fiend.

‡ Brook or rivulet.

Lear. The little dogs and all, [me.]
Tray, Blanch, and Sweet-heart, see, they bark at Edg. Tom will throw his head at them :—
Avaunt, you curs !

Be thy mouth or black or white,
Tooth that poisons if it bite ;
Mastiff, grey-hound, mongrel grim,
Hound, or spaniel, brach, or lym ; *
Or bobtail tike, or trundle-tail ;
Tom will make them weep and wail :
For, with throwing thus my head,
Dogs leap the hatch, and all are fled.

Do de, de de. Sessa. Come, march to wakes and fairs, and market towns :—Poor Tom, thy horn is dry.

Lear. Then let them anatomize Regan ; see what breeds about her heart : Is there any cause in nature, that makes these hard hearts ?—You,
Sir, I entertain you for one of my hundred ;
only, I do not like the fashion of your garments :
you will say, they are Persian attire ; but let them be changed. [To EDGAR.]

Kent. Now, good my lord, lie here, and rest awhile.

Lear. Make no noise, make no noise ; draw the curtains : So, so, so : We'll go to supper i'the morning : So, so, so.

Fool. And I'll go to bed at noon.

Re-enter GLOSTER.

Glo. Come hither, friend : Where is the king
my master ?

Kent. Here, Sir : but trouble him not, his wits are gone.

Glo. Good friend, I prythee take him in thy arms ;

I have o'er-heard a plot of death upon him :
There is a litter ready ; lay him in't,

And drive towards Dover, friend, where thou shalt meet [ter,

Both welcome and protection. Take up thy man-
If thou shouldst dally half an hour, his life,

With thine, and all that offer to defend him,
Stand in assured loss : Take up, take up ;

And follow me, that will to some provision
Give thee quick conduct.

Kent. Oppress'd nature sleeps :—
This rest might yet have bakn'd thy broken senses,

Which, if convenience will not allow,
Stand in hard cure.—Come, help to bear thy
master ;

Thou must not stay behind. [To the FOOL.]

Glo. Come, come, away.

[Exit KENT, GLOSTER and the FOOL,

bearing of the King.

Edg. When we our betters see bearing our
woes,

We scarcely think our miseries our foes,
Who alone suffers, suffers most i'the mind ;

Leaving free things, and happy shows, behind :
But then the mind much sufferance doth o'erskip,

When grief hath mates, and bearing fellowship.
How light and portable my pain seems now,

When that, which makes me bend, makes the king bow !

He childed, as I father'd !—Tom, away :
Mark the high noises ; † and thyself bewray, ‡

When false opinion, whose wrong thought denies
thee,

In thy just proof, repeals, and reconciles thee.
What will hap more to-night, safe scape the
king !

Lark, lark. [Exit.]

SCENE VII.—A Room in GLOSTER's Castle.

Enter CORNWALL, REGAN, GONERIL, EDMUND,

and Servants.

Corn. Post speedily to my lord your husband ;

* A blood-hound.
† The great events that are approaching.
‡ Betray, discover.

show him this letter:—the army of France is landed:—Seek out the villain Gloucester.

[Exeunt some of the Servants.]

Reg. Hang him instantly.

Gon. Pluck out his eyes.

Corn. Leave him to my displeasure.—Edmund, keep you our sister company; the revenges we are bound to take upon your traitorous father, are not fit for your beholding. Advise the duke (where you are going) to a most festinate preparation; we are bound to the like. Our posts shall be swift, and intelligent betwixt us. Farewell, dear sister;—farewell, my lord of Gloucester.*

Enter STEWARD.

How now? Where's the king?

Stew. My lord of Gloucester hath convey'd him hence:

Some five or six and thirty of his knights, Hot questrists† after him, met him at the gate; Who, with some other of the lord's dependants, Are gone with him towards Dover: where they boast

To have well-armed friends.

Corn. Get horses for your mistress.

Gon. Farewell, sweet lord, and sister.

[Exeunt GONNIEL and EDMUND.]

Corn. Edmund, farewell.—Go, seek the traitor Gloucester,

Pinion him like a thief, bring him before us:

[Exeunt other Servants.]

Though well we may not pass upon his life Without the form of justice; yet our power Shall do a courtesy‡ to our wrath, which men May blame, but not control. Who's there? The traitor?

Re-enter SERVANTS, with GLOSTER.

Reg. Ingrateful fox! 'tis he.

Corn. Bind fast his corky§ arms.

Glo. What mean your graces?—Good my friends, consider

You are my guests: do me no foul play, friends.

Corn. Bind him, I say.

[Servants bind him.]

Reg. Hard, hard:—O filthy traitor!

Glo. Unmerciful lady as you are, I am none.

Corn. To this chair bind him:—Villain, thou shalt find—

[REGAN plucks his Beard.]

Glo. By the kind gods, 'tis most ignobly done, To pluck me by the beard.

Reg. So white, and such a traitor!

Glo. Naughty lady,

These hairs, which thou dost ravish from my chin,

Will quicken,|| and accuse thee: I am your host; With robbers' hands, my hospitable favours¶

You should not ruffle thus. What will you do?

Corn. Come, Sir, what letters had you late from France?

Reg. Be simple-answer'd, for we know the truth.

Corn. And what confederacy have you with the traitors

Late footed in the kingdom?

Reg. To whose hands have you sent the lunatic king?

Speak.

Glo. I have a letter guessingly set down, Which came from one that's of a neutral heart, And not from one oppos'd.

Corn. Canning,

Reg. And false.

Corn. Where hast thou sent the king?

Glo. To Dover.

Reg. Wherefore

To Dover? Wast thou not charg'd at thy peril—

Corn. Wherefore to Dover? Let him first answer that.

Glo. I am tied to the stake, and I must stand the course.

Reg. Wherefore to Dover?

Glo. Because I would not see thy cruel nails Pluck out his poor old eyes; nor thy fierce sister In his anointed flesh stick boarish fangs.

The sea, with such a storm as his bare head In hell-black night endur'd, would have buoy'd up,

And quench'd the stelled* fires: yet, poor old He help the heavens to rain.

If wolves had at thy gate howl'd that stern time, Thou shouldst have said, Good porter, turn the key;

All cruels else subscrib'd:†—But I shall see The winged vengeance overtake such children.

Corn. See it shalt thou never:—Fellows, hold the chair:

Upon these eyes of thine I'll set my foot.

[GLOSTER is held down in the Chair while CORNWALL plucks out one of his Eyes, and sets his Foot on it.]

Glo. He, that will think to live till he be old Give me some help:—O cruel! O ye gods!

Reg. One side will mock another; the other too.

Corn. If you see vengeance,—

Serv. Hold your hand, my lord:

I have serv'd you ever since I was a child; But better service have I never done you, Than now to bid you hold.

Reg. How now, you dog?

Serv. If you did wear a beard upon your chin,

I'd shake it on this quarrel: What do you mean?

Corn. My villain!

[Draws, and runs at him.]

Serv. Nay, then come on, and take the chance of anger.

[Draws. They fight. CORNWALL is wounded.]

Reg. Give me thy sword.—[To another Serv.]

A peasant stand up thus!

[Snatches a Sword, comes behind, and stabs him.]

Serv. Oh! I am slain!—My lord, you have one eye left

To see some mischief on him:—O! [Dies.]

Corn. Lest it see more, prevent it:—Out, vile jelly!

Where is thy lustre now?

[Tears out GLOSTER's other Eye, and throws it on the ground.]

Glo. All dark and comfortless.—Where's my son Edmund?

Edmund, enkindle all the sparks of nature, To quit‡ this horrid act.

Reg. Out, treacherous villain!

Thou call'st on him that hates thee: it was he That made the overture§ of thy treasons to us; Who is too good to pity thee.

Glo. O my foilles!

Then Edgar was abus'd.—

Kind gods, forgive me that, and prosper him!

Reg. Go, thrust him out at gates, and let him smell

His way to Dover.—How is't, my lord? How look you?

Corn. I have receiv'd a hurt:—Follow me, lady.—

Turn out that eyeless villain;—throw this slave Upon the dunghill.—Regan, I bleed apace:

Untimely comes this hurt: Give me your arm.

[Exit CORNWALL, led by REGAN;—Servants unbind GLOSTER, and lead him out.]

1 Serv. I'll never care what wickedness I do, If this man comes to good.

2 Serv. If she live long, And, in the end, meet the whole course of death, Women will all turn monsters.

ACT IV.

SCENE I.—The Heath.

Enter EDGAR.

Edg. Yet better thus, and known to be con-temn'd * [worst,
Than still contemn'd and flatter'd.† To be
The lowest and most dejected thing of fortune,
Stands still in esperance,‡ lives not in fear:
The lamentable change is from the best;
The worst returns to laughter. Welcome then,
Thou unsubstantial air, that I embrace!
The wretch, that thou hast blown unto the worst, [here?—
Owes nothing to thy blasts. But who comes

Enter GLOSTER, led by an OLD MAN.

My father, poorly led?—World, world, O world!
But that thy strange mutations § make us hate
thee,
Life would not yield to age.

Old Man. O my good lord, I have been your tenant, and your father's tenant, these fourscore years.

Glo. Away, get thee away; good friend, be-
Thy comforts can do me no good at all, [gone:
Thee they may hurt.

Old Man. Alack, Sir, you cannot see your way.

Glo. I have no way, and therefore want no
eyes;
I stumbled when I saw: Full oft 'tis seen,
Our mean secures us; and our mere defects
Prove our commodities.—Ah! dear son Edgar,
The food of thy abused father's wrath!
Might I but live to see thee in my touch,
I'd say, I had eyes again!

Old Man. How now? Who's there?

Edg. [Aside.] O gods! Who is't can say, I am at the worst?

I am worse than e'er I was.

Old Man. 'Tis poor mad Tom.

Edg. [Aside.] And worse I may be yet: The worst is not,

So long as we can say, This is the worst.

Old Man. Fellow, where goest?

Glo. Is it a beggar-man?

Old Man. Madman and beggar too.

Glo. He has some reason, else he could not beg.

I'the last night's storm I such a fellow saw;
Which made me think a man a worm: My son
Came then into my mind; and yet my mind
Was then scarce friends with him: I have heard more since:

As flies to wanton boys, are we to the gods;
They kill us for their sport.

Edg. How should this be?

Bad is the trade must play the fool to sorrow,
Ang'ring itself and others. [Aside.]—Bless thee, master!

Glo. Is that the naked fellow?

Old Man. Ay, my lord.

Glo. Then, prythee, get thee gone: If, for my sake,
Thou wilt o'ertake us, hence a mile or twain,
I'the way to Dover, do it for ancient love;
And bring some covering for this naked soul,

* Madman.

† I. e. It is better to be thus contemned and know it, than to be flattered by those who secretly condemn us.
‡ In hope. § Changes.

Whom I'll entreat to lead me.

Old Man. Alack, Sir, he's mad.

Glo. 'Tis the time's plague, when madmen lead the blind.

Do as I bid thee, or rather do thy pleasure;
Above the rest be gone.

Old Man. I'll bring him the best 'parcel' that I have,

Come on't what will. [Exit.

Glo. Sirrah, naked fellow.

Edg. Poor Tom's a-cold—I cannot dumb * it further. [Aside.

Glo. Come hither, fellow.

Edg. [Aside.] And yet I must.—Bless thy sweet eyes, they bleed.

Glo. Know'st thou the way to Dover?

Edg. Both stile and gate, horse-way and footpath. Poor Tom has been scared out of his good wits: Bless the good man from the foul fiend!
[Five fiends have been in poor Tom at once;
of lust, as Obidicut; Hebbididence, prince of dumbness; Mahus, of stealing; Mado of murder; and Flibbertigibbet, of mopping and mowing; who since possesses chamber-maids and waiting-women. So, bless thee, master!]

Glo. Here, take this purse, thou whom the heaven's plagues

Have humbled to all strokes: that I am wretched, Makes thee the happier:—Heavens, deal so
still!

Let the superfluous, and lust-dieted man,
That slaves your ordinance,† that will not see Because he doth not feel, feel your power quickly;

So distribution should undo excess, {Dover?
And each man have enough.—Dost thou know

Edg. Ay, master.

Glo. There is a cliff, whose high and bending head

Looks fearfully in the confined deep:

Bring me but to the very brim of it,

And I'll repair the misery thou dost bear,

With something rich above me: from that place
I shall no leading need.

Edg. Give me thy arm;

Poor Tom shall lead thee. [Exeunt

SCENE II.—Before the Duke of ALBANY'S Palace.

Enter GONERIL and EDMUND; STEWARD meeting them.

Gon. Welcome, my lord: I marvel, our mild husband [master?
Not met us on the way:—Now, where's your Stew. Madam, within; but never man so

chang'd,

I told him of the army that was landed;

He smil'd at it: I told him, you were coming;

His answer was, The worse: of Gloucester's imagery,

And of the loyal service of his son,

When I inform'd him, then he call'd me out;

And told me, I had turn'd the wrong side
out:—

What most he should dislike seems pleasant
What like, offensive. [To him;

Gon. Then shall you go no further

[To EDMUND.

It is the cowardly terror of his spirit,

That dares not undertake: he'll not seal
wrong,

Which tie him to an answer: Our wishes, on the way [ther;

May prove effects.† Back, Edmund, to my bro-
Hasten his musters, and conduct his powers:

I must change arms at home, and give the distaff

Into my husband's hands. This trusty servant

Shall pass between us: ere long you are like to
hear,

instead of acting in obedience to it. ‡ I. e. On

If you dare venture in your own behalf,
A mistress' command. Wear this; spare speech;
[Giving a Favour.]

Decline your head: this kiss, if it durst speak,
Would stretch thy spirits up into the air;—
Conceive, and fare thee well.

Edm. Your's in the ranks of death.

Gen. My most dear Gloster!

[Exit EDMUND.]

O, the difference of man, and man! To thee,
A woman's services are due; my fool
Usurps my bed.

Stew. Madam, here comes my lord.

[Exit STEWARD.]

Enter ALBANY.

Gen. I have been worth the whistle.*

Alb. O Goneril!

You are not worth the dust which the rude
wind

Blows in your face.—I fear your disposition:
That nature, which contemns its origin,
Cannot be border'd certain in itself;
She that herself will sliver† and disbranch
From her material sap, perforce must wither,
And come to deadly use.

Gen. No more; the text is foolish.

Alb. Wisdom and goodness to the vile seem vile:

filths savour but themselves. What have you
[done]

Tigers, not daughters, what have you perform'd?

A father, and a gracious aged man,
Whose reverence the head-lugg'd bear would lick,

Most barbarous, most degenerate! have you maddened.

Could my good brother suffer you to do it?
A man, a prince, by him so benefited?
If that the heavens do not their visible spirits,
Send quickly down to tame these vile offences,
'Twill come,

Humanity must perforce prey on itself,
Like monsters of the deep.

Gen. Milk-liver'd man!

That bear'st a cheek for blows, a head for wrongs;

Who hast not in thy brows an eye discerning Thine honour from thy suffering; that not know'st,

Fools do those villains pity, who are punish'd
Ere they have done their mischief. Where's thy drum?

France spreads his banners in our noiseless
land;

With plumed helm thy slayer begins threats;
Whilst thou, a moral fool, sit'st still, and cry'st,
Alack! why does he so?

Alb. See thyself, a devil!

Proper deformity seems not in the head
So horrid, as in woman.

Gen. O vain fool!

Alb. Thou changed and self-cover'd thing,
for shame,

Be-monster not thy feature. Were it my fitness
To let these hands obey my blood,†

They are apt enough to dislocate and tear
Thy flesh and bones:—Howe'er thou art a fiend,
A woman's shape doth shield thee.

Gen. Marry, your manhood now!

Enter a MESSENGER.

Alb. What news?

Mess. O my good lord, the Duke of Corn-wall's dead;

Slain by his servant, going to put out
The other eye of Gloster.

Alb. Gloster's eyes!

Mess. A servant that he bred, thrill'd with remorse,

Oppos'd against the act, bending his sword
To his great master, who, therewith enrag'd,
Flaw on him, and amongst them fell'd him
dead:

But not without that harmful stroke, which
since

Hath pluck'd him after.

Alb. This shows you are above,
You justicers, that these our nether crimes
So speedily can venge!—But, O poor Gloster!
Lost he his other eye?

Mess. Both, both, my lord.—

This letter, madam, craves a speedy answer;
'Tis from your sister.

Gen. [Aside.] One way I like this well;
But being widow, and my Gloster with her,
May all the building in my fancy pluck
Upon my hateful life: Another way,
The news is not so tart.—I'll read and answer:
[Exit.]

Alb. Where was his son, when they did take his eyes?

Mess. Come with my lady hither.

Alb. He is not here.

Mess. No, my good lord; I met him back
again.

Alb. Knows he the wickedness?

Mess. Ay, my good lord; 'twas he inform'd against him;

And quit the house on purpose, that their punishment

Might have the freer course.

Alb. Gloster, I live

To thank thee for the love thou show'dst the
king,

And to revenge thine eyes.—Come hither,
friend;

Tell me what more thou knowest. [Exeunt.]

SCENE III.—The French Camp near Dover.

Enter KENT and a GENTLEMAN.

Kent. Why the king of France is so suddenly gone back know you the reason?

Gent. Something he left imperfect in the state,
Which since his coming forth is thought of;
which

Imports to the kingdom so much fear and danger,

That his personal return was most requir'd,
And necessary.

Kent. Who hath he left behind him general?

Gent. The Mareschal of France, Monsieur le Fer.

Kent. Did your letters pierce the queen to any demonstration of grief?

Gent. Ay, Sir; she took them, read them in my presence;

And now and then an ample tear trill'd down
Her delicate cheek: it seem'd, she was a queen
Over her passion; who, most rebel-like
Sought to be king o'er her.

Kent. Oh! then it mov'd her.

Gent. Not to a rage: patience and sorrow strove

Who should express her goodliest. You have Sunshine and rain at once: her smiles and
tears

Were like a better day: Those happy smiles,
That play'd on her ripe lip, seem'd not to know
What guests were in her eyes; which parted
thence,

As pearls from diamonds dropp'd.—In brief,
sorrow

Would be a rarity most below'd, if all
Could so become it.

Gent. Made she no verbal question?

Kent. 'Faith, once, or twice, she heav'd the name of father

Pantingly forth, as if it press'd her heart;
Cried, Sisters! sisters!—Shame of ladies!
sisters!

Kent! father! sisters! What? 't' the storm?
't' the night?

* Worth calling for.

† Inclination

† Tear off.

* Discourse, conversation.

*Let pity not be believed!—There she shook
The holy water from her heavenly eyes,
And clamour moisten'd: then away she started
To deal with grief alone.

Kent. It is the stars,
The stars above us, govern our conditions; †
Else one self mate and mate could not beget
Such different issues. You spoke not with her since ‡

Gent. No.

Kent. Was this before the king return'd †

Gent. No, since.

Kent. Well, Sir: The poor distress'd Lear is i'the town:

Who sometime, in his better tune, remembers
What we are come about, and by no means
Will yield to see his daughter.

Gent. Why, good Sir †

Kent. A sovereign shame so elbows him: his own unkindness,
That stripp'd her from his benediction, turn'd
her

To foreign casualties, gave her dear rights
To his dog-hearted daughters,—these things sting

His mind so venomously, that burning shame
Detains him from Cordelia.

Gent. Alack, poor gentleman!

Kent. Of Albany's and Cornwall's powers † you heard not ‡

Gent. 'Tis so; they are afoot.

Kent. Well, Sir, I'll bring you to our master
Lear,

And leave you to attend him: some dear cause §
Will in concealment wrap me up awhile;
When I am known aright, you shall not grieve
Lending me this acquaintance. I pray you, go Along with me. [Exeunt.]

SCENE IV.—The same.—A Tent.

Enter CORDELIA, PHYSICIAN, and SOLDIERS.

Cor. Alack, 'tis he; why, he was met even
now

As mad as the vex'd sea: singing aloud;
Crown'd, with rank fumiter, ¶ and furrow weeds,
With harlocks, ¶ hemlock, nettles, cuckoo-
flowers,

Dandel, and all the idle weeds that grow
In our sustaining corn.—A century send forth;
Search every acre in the high grown field,
And bring him to our eye.

[Exit an OFFICER.]

What can man's wisdom do,
In the restoring his bereaved sense †
He, that helps him, take all my outward worth.

Phy. There is means, madam:
Our foster-nurse of nature is repose,
The which he lacks; that to provoke in him,
Are many simples operative, whose power
Will close the eye of anguish.

Cor. All bless'd secrets,
All you unpublish'd virtues of the earth,
Spring with my tears! be aidant, and remediate,
In the good man's distress!—Seek, seek for
him;

Lest his ungovern'd rage dissolve the life
That wants the means to lead it. **

Enter a MESSENGER.

Mess. Madam, news;
The British powers are marching hitherward.

Cor. 'Tis known before; our preparation
stands

In expectation of them.—O dear father,
It is thy business that I go about;

Therefore great France

My mourning, and important †† tears, hath pittled.

* I. e. Let not pity be supposed to exist.
† Dispositions. ‡ Forces.
§ Important business. ¶ Fumitory.
¶ Charlocks.
 I. e. The reason which should guide it.
†† Important.

No blown* ambition doth our arms incite,
But love, dear love, and our ag'd father's right:
Soon may I hear and see him. [Exeunt.]

SCENE V.—A Room in GLOSTER's Castle.

Enter REGAN and STEWARD.

Reg. But are my brother's powers set forth †

Stew. Ay, madam.

Reg. Himself

In person there †

Stew. Madam, with much ado:

Your sister is the better soldier.

Reg. Lord Edmund spake not with your lord
at home †

Stew. No, madam.

Reg. What might import my sister's letter to
him †

Stew. I know not, lady.

Reg. 'Faith, he is posted hence on serious
matter.

It was great ignorance, Gloster's eyes being
out,

To let him live; where he arrives, he moves

All hearts against us: Edmund, I think, is
gone,

In pity of his misery, to despatch

His nighted life; † moreover, to decry

The strength o'the enemy.

Stew. I must needs after him, madam, with my letter.

Reg. Our troops set forth to-morrow; stay with us;

The ways are dangerous.

Stew. I may not, madam;

My lady charg'd my duty in this business.

Reg. Why should she write to Edmund?
Might not you

Transport her purposes by word † Belike,

Something—I know not what:—I'll love thee
much,

Let me unseal the letter.

Stew. Madam, I had rather—

Reg. I know your lady does not love her husband;

I am sure of that: and, at her late being here,
She gave strange orillade, † and most speaking looks

To noble Edmund: I know you are of her besom.

Stew. I, madam †

Reg. I speak in understanding; you are, I
know it:

Therefore, I do advise you take this note: §

My lord is dead; Edmund and I have talk'd;

And more convenient is he for my hand,

Than for your lady's:—You may gather more. ¶

If you do find him, pray you, give him this;

And when your mistress hears thus much from
you,

I pray, desire her call her wisdom to her.

So, fare you well.

If you do chance to hear of that blind traitor,
Preferment falls on him that cuts him off.

Stew. 'Would I could meet him, madam! I would show

What party I do follow.

Reg. Fare thee well.

[Exeunt.]

SCENE VI.—The Country near Dover.

Enter GLOSTER, and EDGAR, dressed like a Peasant.

Glo. When shall we come to the top of that same hill?

Edg. You do climb up it now: look, how we labour.

Glo. Methinks, the ground is even.

Edg. Horrible steep:

Hark, do you hear the sea?

Glo. No, truly.

* Inflated, swelling.

† I. e. His life made dark as night.

‡ A cast, or significant glance of the eye.

§ Observe what I am saying.

¶ Infer more.

Edg. Why, then your other senses grow imperfect
By your eyes' anguish.

Glo. So may it be, indeed :
Methinks thy voice is alter'd ; and thou
speak'st
In better phrase, and matter, than thou didst.

Edg. You are much deceiv'd ; in nothing am
I chang'd,
But in my garments.

Glo. Methinks, you are better spoken.

Edg. Come on, Sir ; here's the place :—stand still.—How fearful
And dizzy 'tis, to cast one's eyes so low !
The crows, and choughs,* that wing the midway air,
Show scarce so gross as beetles : Half way
down
Hangs one that gathers samphire ; † dreadful trade !

Methinks he seems no bigger than his head :
The fishermen that walk upon the beach,
Appear like mice : and you' tall anchoring
bark,
Diminish'd to her cock ! ‡ her cock, a buoy
Almost too small for sight : The murmuring surge,
That on the unnumber'd idle pebbles chafes,
Cannot be heard so high :—I'll look no more ;
Lest my brain turn, and the deficient sight
Topple § down headlong.

Glo. Set me where you stand.

Edg. Give me your hand : You are now within a foot
Of the extreme verge : for all beneath the moon
Would I not leap upright.

Glo. Let go my hand.
Here, friend, is another purse ; in it a jewel
Well worth a poor man's taking ; Fairies, and
gods,
Prosper it with thee ! Go thou further off ;
Bid me farewell, and let me hear thee going.

Edg. Now fare you well, good Sir.

[Seems to go.]

Glo. With all my heart.

Edg. Why I do trifle thus with his despair,
Is done to cure it.

Glo. O you mighty gods !
This world I do renounce ; and, in your sights,
Shake patiently my great affliction off :
If I could bear it longer, and not fall
To quarrel with your great opposeless wills,
My snuff, and loathed part of nature, should Burn itself out. If Edgar live, O bless him !—
Now, fellow, fare thee well.

[He leaps and falls along.]

Edg. Gone, Sir ? farewell.—
And yet I know not how conceit may rob
The treasury of life, when life itself Yields to the theft : Had he been where he
thought,
By this, had thought been past.—Alive, or
dead ?

Ho, you Sir ! friend !—Hear you, Sir ?—speak !
Thus might he pass indeed : ¶—Yet he revives :
What are you, Sir ?

Glo. Away, and let me die.

Edg. Hadst thou been aught but gossamer, feathers, air,
So many fathom down precipitating,
Thou hadst shiver'd like an egg : but thou dost
breathe ;
Hast heavy substance : bleed'st not ; speak'st ;
art sound.

Ten masts at each make not the altitude,
Which thou hast perpendicularly fell ;
Thy life's a miracle : Speak yet again.

Glo. But have I fallen, or no ?

Edg. From the dread summit of this chalky bourn : ¶

Look up a-height ;—the shrill-gorg'd* lark so far

Cannot be seen or heard : do but look up.

Glo. Alack, I have no eyes.—

Is wretchedness depriv'd that benefit,
To end itself by death ? 'Twas yet some comfort,
When misery could beguile the tyrant's rage,
And frustrate his proud will.

Edg. Give me your arm :

Up :—So ;—How is't ? Feel you your legs ? You
stand.

Glo. Too well, too well.

Edg. This is above all strangeness.
Upon the crown o'the cliff, what thing was that
Which parted from you ?

Glo. A poor unfortunate beggar.

Edg. As I stood here below, methought, his
eyes
Were two full moons ; he had a thousand noses, Horns whelk'd † and wav'd like the curldged
sea ;

It was some fiend : Therefore, thou happy father,
Think that the clearest ‡ gods, who make them
honours
Of men's impossibilities, have preserv'd thee.

Glo. I do remember now : henceforth I'll
bear

Affliction, till it do cry out itself, Enough, enough, and, die. That thing you speak of,

I took it for a man ; often 'twould say,

The fiend, the fiend : he led me to that place.

Edg. Bear free and patient thoughts.—But who comes here ?

Enter LEAR, fantastically dressed up with Flowers.

The safer sense will ne'er accommodate
His master thus.

Lear. No, they cannot touch me for coining ;
I am the king himself.

Edg. O thou side-piercing sight !

Lear. Nature's above art in that respect.—
There's your press-money. That fellow handles his bow like a crow-keeper : draw me a clothier's yard. §—Look, look, a mouse ! Peace, peace ;—this piece of toasted cheese will do't.
—There's my gauntlet ; I'll prove it on a giant.
—Bring up the brown billa. ¶—O, well down, bird !—i'the clout, i'the clout : ¶ hewgh !—Give the word. **

Edg. Sweet marjoram.

Lear. Pass.

Glo. I know that voice.

Lear. Ha ! Goneril !—with a white beard !—
They flatter'd me like a dog ; and told me I had white hairs in my beard, ere the black ones were there. To say aye and no to every that I said aye and no to, was no good divinity. When the rain came to wet me once, and the wind to make me chatter ; when the thunder would not peace at my bidding ; there I found them, there I smelt them out. Go to, they are not men o'their words : they told me I was every thing ; 'tis a lie : I am not ague-proof.

Glo. The trick †† of that voice I do well remember :
Is't not the king ?

Lear. Ay, every inch a king :
When I do stare, see, how the subject quakes.
I pardon that man's life : what was thy cause ?—
Adultery.—

Thou shalt not die : Die for adultery ! No :
The wren goes to't, and the small gilded fly
Does lecher in my sight.

Let copulation thrive, for Gloster's bastard son
Was kinder to his father, than my daughters
Got 'tween the lawful sheets.

* Daws. † A vegetable gathered for pickling.
‡ Her cock-boat. § Tumble.
¶ Thus might he die in reality.
¶ I. e. This chalky boundary of England.

* Shrill-throated.
† Twisted, convolved. ‡ The purest.
§ An arrow of a cloth yard long. ¶ Battle-axes.
¶ The white mark for archers to aim at.
 The watchword. †† Likeness, manner

To't, luxury, pell-mell, for I lack soldiers.—
Behold yon' slumbering dame,
Whose face between her forks presageth snow;
That minces virtue, and does shake the head
To hear of pleasure's name;
The fitchew, nor the soiled horse, goes to't
With a more riotous appetite.
Down from the waist they are centaurs,
Though women all above:
But * to the girdle do the gods inherit,† Beneath is all the fiends'; there's hell, there's darkness,
There is the sulphurous pit, burning, scalding, stench, consumption;—Fie, fie, fie! pah; pah!
Give me an ounce of civet, good apothecary,
to sweeten my imagination: there's money for thee.

Glo. O, let me kiss that hand!

Lear. Let me wipe it first; it smells of mortality.

Glo. O ruin'd piece of nature! This great world
[me?]
Shall so wear out to nought.—Dost thou know

Lear. I remember thine eyes well enough.
Dost thou squiny? at me? No, do thy worst, blind Cupid; I'll not love.—Read thou this challenge; mark but the penning of it.

Glo. Were all the letters suns, I could not see one.

Edg. I would not take this from report;—it is,
And my heart breaks at it.

Lear. Read.

Glo. What, with the case of eyes?

Lear. O, ho, are you there with me? No eyes in your head, nor no money in your purse?
Your eyes are in a heavy case, your purse in a light: Yet you see how this world goes.

Glo. I see it feelingly.

Lear. What, art mad? A man may see how this world goes, with no eyes. Look with thine ears: see how yon' justice ralls upon yon simple thief. Hark, in thine ear: Change places; and, handy-dandy, which is the justice, which is the thief?—Thou hast seen a farmer's dog bark at a beggar?

Glo. Ay, sir.

Lear. And the creature run from the cur?
There thou might'st behold the great image of authority: a dog's obeyed in office.

Thou rascal beadle, hold thy bloody hand:
Why dost thou lash that whore? Strip thine own
back;

Thou hotly lust'st to use her in that kind
For which thou whipp'st her. The usurer hangs the cozener.

Through tatter'd clothes small vices do appear;
Robes, and farr'd gowns, hide all. Plate sin with gold,

And the strong lance of justice hurtless breaks:
Arm it in rags, a pigmy's straw doth pierce it.
None does offend; none, I say, none; I'll able 'em:

Take that of me, my friend, who have the power
To seal the accuser's lips. Get thee glass eyes;
And, like a scurvy politician, seem
To see the things thou dost not.—Now, now,
now, now:

Pull off my boots:—harder, harder; so.

Edg. O, matter and impertinency mix'd!
Reason in madness!

Lear. If thou wilt weep my fortunes take my eyes.

I know thee well enough; thy name is Gloucester:
Thou must be patient; we came crying hither.
Thou know'st, the first time that we smell the air,
[me.]
We wawl, and cry:—I will preach to thee; mark

Glo. Alack, alack the day!

Lear. When we are born, we cry, that we are come

To this great stage of fools;—This a good block!‡

* Only. † Possess. ‡ Look asquint.
§ Block anciently signified the head part of a hat.

It were a delicate stratagem to shoe
A troop of horse with felt: I'll put it in proof;
And when I have stolen upon these sons-in-law,
Then, kill, kill, kill, kill, kill, kill.

Enter a GENTLEMAN, with Attendants.

Gent. O here he is, lay hand upon him,—Sir
Your most dear daughter—

Lear. No rescue? What, a prisoner? I am even

The natural fool of fortune.—Use me well;
You shall have ransom. Let me have a surgeon,
I am cut to the brains.

Gent. You shall have any thing.

Lear. No seconds? all myself?

Why, this would make a man, a man of salt,*
To use his eyes for garden water-pots,
Ay, and for laying autumn's dust.

Gent. Good Sir,—

Lear. I will die bravely, like a bridegroom:
What?

I will be jovial; come, come; I am a king.
My masters, know you that?

Gent. You are a royal one, and we obey you.

Lear. Then there's life in it. Nay, as you get it, you shall get it by running. Sa, sa, sa,
sa. [Exit, running; Attendants follow.]

Gent. A sight most pitiful in the meanest
wretch;

Past speaking of in a king!—Thou hast one
daughter,

Who redeems nature from the general curse
Which twain have brought her to.

Edg. Hail, gentle Sir.

Gent. Sir, speed you: What's your will?

Edg. Do you hear aught, Sir, of a battle to ward?

Gent. Most sure, and vulgar: every one hears
that,

Which can distinguish sound.

Edg. But, by your favour,

How near's the other army?

Gent. Near, and on speedy foot; the main descry

Stands on the hourly thought.†

Edg. I thank you, Sir: that's all.

Gent. Though that the queen on special cause is here,

Her army is mov'd on.

Edg. I thank you, Sir.

[Exit GENT.]

Glo. You ever-gentle gods, take my breath from me;

Let not my worsen spirit‡ tempt me again
To die before you please!

Edg. Well pray you, father.

Glo. Now, good Sir, what are you?

Edg. A most poor man, made tame by fortune's blows;

Who, by the art of known and feeling sorrows,
Am pregnant to good pity. Give me your hand,
I'll lead you to some biding.

Glo. Hearty thanks:

The bounty and the benison§ of heaven
To boot, and boot!¶

Enter STEWARD.

Stew. A proclaim'd prize! Most happy!
That eyeless head of thine was first fram'd flesh

To raise my fortunes.—Thou old unhappy trait-
tor,

Briefly‖ thyself remember:—The sword is out
That must destroy thee.

Glo. Now let thy friendly hand

Put strength enough to it. [EDGAR opposes.]

Stew. Wherefore, bold peasant,
Dar'st thou support a publish'd traitor? Hence;
Lest that the infection of his fortune take
Like hold on thee. Let go his arm.

* I. e. A man of tears.

† The main body is expected to be despatched every hour.

‡ Evil genius.

§ Bleeding.

¶ Reward, recompence.

‖ Quickly recollect the offences of thy life.

Edg. Ch'ill not let go, Zlr, without vurther 'caslon.

Stew. Let go, slave, or thou diest.

Edg. Good gentleman, go your gait,* and let poor volk pass. And ch'ud ha' been swag-ger'd out of my life, 'twould not ha' been so long as 'tis by a vortnight. Nay, come not near the old man; keep out, che vor'ye, or ise try whether your costard† or my bat‡ be the harder: Ch'ill be plain with you.

Stew. Out, dunghill!

Edg. Ch'ill pick your teeth, Zlr: Come; no matter vor your fols. §

[They fight; and EDGAR knocks him down.]

Stew. Slave, thou hast slain me:—Villain, take my purse;
If ever thou wilt thrive, bury my body;
And give the letters, which thou find'st about me,
To Edmund earl of Gloster; seek him out
Upon the British party:—O untimely death!

[Dies.]

Edg. I know thee well: A serviceable vil-lain;
As duteous to the vices of thy mistress,
As badness would desire.

Glo. What, is he dead?

Edg. Sit you down, father; rest you.—
Let's see his pockets: these letters; that he speaks of, [sorry]
May be my friends.—He's dead; I am only
He had no other death's-man.—Let us see:—
Leave, gentle wax; and, manners, blame us
not:

To know our enemies' minds, we'd rip their
hearts;
Their papers, is more lawful. ||

[Reads.] Let our reciprocal vows be remem-bered. You have many opportunities to cut him off: if your will want not, time and place will be fruitfully offered. There is nothing done, if he return the conqueror: Then am I the prisoner, and his bed my jail; from the loathed warmth whereof deliver me, and sup-ply the place for your labour.

Your wife, (so I would say,) and your affectionate servant,

GONERIL.

O undistinguish'd space of woman's will!—
A plot upon her virtuous husband's life;
And the exchange, my brother!—Here, in the sands,
Thee I'll rake up, & the post unsanctified
Of murderous lechers: and, in the mature time,
With this ungracious paper strike the sight
Of the death-practis'd duke: For him 'tis well,
That of thy death and business I can tell.

[Exit EDGAR, dragging out the Body.]

Glo. The king is mad: How stiff is my vile
sense,
That I stand up, and have ingenious feeling
Of my huge sorrows! Better I were distract:
So should my thoughts be sever'd from my griefs;
And woes, by wrong imaginations, lose
The knowledge of themselves.

Re-enter EDGAR.

Edg. Give me your hand:
Far off, methinks I hear the beaten drum.
Come, father, I'll bestow you with a friend.

[Exeunt.]

SCENE VII.—A Tent in the French Camp.—
LEAR on a Bed, asleep: PHYSICIAN, GENTLEMAN, and others, attending.

Enter CORDELIA and KENT.

Cor. O thou good Kent, how shall I live and
work,

To match thy goodness? My life will be too short,

And every measure fail me.

Kent. To be acknowledg'd, madam, is o'er-paid.

All my reports go with the modest truth;
Nor more, nor clipp'd, but so.

Cor. Be better-suited: *

These weeds are memories† of those worsen hours;

I prythee, put them off.

Kent. Pardon me, dear madam;

Yet to be known, shortens my made intent: ‡
My boon I make it, that you know me not,
Till time and I think meet.

Cor. Then be it so, my good lord.—How does the king? [To the PHYSICIAN.]

Phys. Madam, sleeps still.

Cor. O you kind gods,
Cure this great breach in his abused nature!
The untun'd and jarring senses, O wind up
Of this child-changed father!

Phys. So please your majesty,
That we may wake the king? he hath slept long.

Cor. Be govern'd by your knowledge, and proceed

I'the sway of your own will. Is he array'd?

Gent. Ay, madam: in the heaviness of his sleep,

We put fresh garments on him.

Phys. Be by, good madam, when we do awake him;

I doubt not of his temperance.

Cor. Very well.

Phys. Please you, draw near.—Louder the music there.

Cor. O my dear father! Restoration, hang
Thy medicine on my lips; and let this kiss
Repair those violent harms, that my two sisters
Have in thy reverence made!

Kent. Kind and dear princess!

Cor. Had you not been their father, these white flakes

Had challeng'd pity of them. Was this a face
To be expos'd against the warring winds?
To stand against the deep dread-bolted thunder?
In the most terrible and nimble stroke
Of quick, cross lightning? to watch, (poor perdu!) §

With this thin helm? || Mine enemy's dog,
Though he had bit me, should have stood that
night

Against my fire: And wast thou fain, poor
father,

To bovel thee with swine, and rogues forlorn,
In short and musty straw? Alack, alack!

'Tis wonder, that thy life and wits at once
Had not concluded all.—He wakes; speak to
him.

Phys. Madam, do you: 'tis fittest.

Cor. How does my royal lord? How fares your majesty?

Lear. You do me wrong, to take me out o'the
grave:—

Thou art a soul in bliss; but I am bound
Upon a wheel of fire, that mine own tears
Do scald like molten lead.

Cor. Sir, do you know me?

Lear. You are a spirit, I know; When did you die?

Cor. Still, still, far wide!

Phys. He's scarce awake; let him alone
awhile.

Lear. Where have I been?—Where am I?—
Fair day-light?—

I am mightily abus'd.—I should even die with
pity,

To see another thus.—I know not what to say.—
I will not swear, these are my hands:—let's
see;

* Go your way. † Head. ‡ Club.
Thrusts. § To rip their papers is more lawful.
¶ I'll cover thee (the dead steward) in the sands

* Dressed. † Memorials. ‡ Intent formed.
§ The allusion is to the forlorn-hope in an army, called in French enfans perdus.
|| Thin covering of hair.

I feel this pin prick. 'Would I were assur'd
Of my condition.

Cor. O look upon me, Sir,
And hold your hands in benediction o'er me :—
No, Sir, you must not kneel.

Lear. Pray, do not mock me :
I am a very foolish fond old man,
Fourscore and upward ; and, to deal plainly,
I fear I am not in my perfect mind.
Methinks I should know you, and know this
man :

Yet I am doubtful : for I am mainly ignorant
What place this is ; and all the skill I have Remembers not these garments ; nor I know
not
Where I did lodge last night : Do not laugh at
me ;

For as I am a man, I think this lady
To be my child Cordelia.

Cor. And so I am, I am.

Lear. Be your tears wet ? Yes, 'faith. I pray, weep not :

If you have poison for me, I will drink it.
I know, you do not love me ; for your sisters
Have, as I do remember, done me wrong,
You have some cause, they have not.

Cor. No cause, no cause.

Lear. Am I in France ?

Kent. In your own kingdom, Sir.

Lear. Do not abuse me.

Phys. Be comforted, good madam : the great rage,
You see is cur'd in him : and yet it is danger
To make him even * o'er the time he has lost.
Desire him to go in ; trou'le him no more,
'Till further settling.

Cor. Will't please your highness walk ?

Lear. You must bear with me :
Pray now, forget and forgive : I am old and foolish.

[Exeunt LEAR, CORDELIA, PHYSICIAN,
and Attendants.]

Gent. Holds it true, Sir,
That the duke of Cornwall was so slain ?

Kent. Most certain, Sir.

Gent. Who is conductor of his people ?

Kent. As 'tis said,
The bastard son of Gloster.

Gent. They say, Edgar,
His banish'd son, is with the earl of Kent
in Germany.

Kent. Report is changeable.

* 'Tis time to look about ; the powers † o' the kingdom
Approach apace.

Kent. The arbitrement ‡ is like to be a bloody.
Fare you well, Sir. [Exit.]

Kent. My point and period will be thoroughly wrought,
Or well, or ill, as this day's battle's fought.
[Exit.]

ACT V.

SCENE I.—The Camp of the British Forces, near Dover.

Enter, with Drums, and Colours, EDMUND, REGAN, Officers, Soldiers, and others.

Edm. Know of the duke, if his last purpose hold ;

Or, whether since he is advis'd by aught
To change the course : He's full of alteration,
And self-reproving : bring his constant pleasure. §
[To an Officer, who goes out.]

Reg. Our sister's man is certainly miscarried.

Edm. 'Tis to be doubted, madam.

Reg. Now, sweet lord,
You know the goodness I intend upon you :

* To reconcile it to his apprehension.
† Forces. ‡ Decision.
§ His settled resolution.

Tell me,—but truly,—but then speak the truth,
Do you not love my sister ?

Edm. In honour'd love.

Reg. But have you never found my brother's
way

To the forefended * place ?

Edm. That thought abuses † you.

Reg. I am doubtful that you have been con-
- junct

And bosom'd with her, as far as we call hers.

Edm. No, by mine honour, madam.

Reg. I never shall endure her : Dear my lord,
Be not familiar with her.

Edm. Fear me not :—

She, and the duke her husband,—

Enter ALBANY, GONERIL, and Soldiers.

Gon. I had rather lose the cattle than that sister

Should loosen him and me.

[Aside.]

Alb. Our very loving sister, well be met.— Sir, this I hear,—The king is come to his
daughter,

With others, whom the rigour of our state
Forc'd to cry out. Where I could not be honest,
I never yet was valiant : for this business,
It touches us as France invades our land,
Not bolds ‡ the king ; with others, whom, I
fear,

Most just and heavy causes make oppose. §

Edm. Sir, you speak nobly.

Reg. Why is this reason'd ?

Gon. Combine together 'gainst the enemy :
For these domestic and particular broils
Art not to question here.

Alb. Let us then determine

With the ancient of war on our proceedings.

Edm. I shall attend you presently at your tent.

Reg. Sister, you'll go with us ?

Gon. No.

Reg. 'Tis most convenient ; pray you, go
with us.

Gon. O, ho, I know the riddle : [Aside.] I will go.

As they are going out, enter EDGAR disguised.

Edg. If e'er your grace had speech with man
so poor,

Hear me one word.

Alb. I'll overtake you.—Speak.

[Exeunt EDMUND, REGAN, GONERIL, Off-
- cers, Soldiers, and Attendants.]

Edg. Before you fight the battle, ope this letter.

If you have victory, let the trumpet sound
For him that brought it : wretched though I seem,

I can produce a champion, that will prove
What is avouched there : If you miscarry,
Your business of the world hath so an end,
And machination ceases. ¶ Fortune love you !

Alb. Stay till I have read the letter.

Edg. I was forbid it.

When time shall serve, let but the herald cry,
And I'll appear again. [Exit.]

Alb. Why, fare thee well ; I will o'erlook thy paper.

Re-enter EDMUND.

Edm. The enemy's in view ; draw up your powers

Here is the guess of their true strength and
forces

By diligent discovery ;—but your haste
Is now urg'd on you.

Alb. We will greet the time. ¶

[Exit.]

Edm. To both these sisters have I sworn my love ;

* Forbidden

† Imposes on you.

‡ I. e. Emboldens him.

§ Opposition.

¶ I. e. All designs against your life will have an end.
¶ Be ready to meet the occasion.

Each jealous of the other, as the stung
Are of the adder. Which of them shall I take?
Both? one? or neither? Neither can be enjoy'd,
If both remain alive: To take the widow,
Exasperates, makes mad her sister Goneril;
And hardly shall I carry out my side,*
Her husband being alive. Now then, we'll use His countenance for the battle; which being
done,

Let her, who would be rid of him, devise
His speedy taking off. As for the mercy
Which he intends to Lear, and to Cordelia,—
The battle done, and they within our power,
Shall never see his pardon: for my state
Stands on me to defend, not to debate. [Exit.

SCENE II.—A Field between the Two Camps.

Alarums within.—Enter, with Drum and Colours, LEAR, CORDELIA, and their Forces; and Exit.

Enter EDGAR and GLOSTER.

Edg. Here, father, take the shadow of this tree
For your good host; pray that the right may thrive:

If ever I return to you again,
I'll bring you comfort.

Glo. Grace go with you, Sir! [Exit EDGAR.

Alarums; afterwards a Retreat.—Re-enter EDGAR.

Edg. Away, old man, give me thy hand, away;
King Lear hath lost, he and his daughter ta'en:
Give me thy hand, come on.

Glo. No further, Sir; a man may rot even here.

Edg. What, in ill thoughts again? Men must endure
Their going hence, even as their coming hither:
Ripeness is all: † Come on.

Glo. And that's true too. [Exit.

SCENE III.—The British Camp near Dover.

Enter, in Conquest, with Drum and Colours, EDMUND; LEAR and CORDELIA, as Prisoners; Officers, Soldiers, &c.

Edm. Some officers take them away: good guard;
Until their greater pleasures first be known
That are to censure ‡ them.

Cor. We are not the first,
Who, with best meaning, have incurr'd the worst.

For thee, oppressed king, am I cast down;
Myself could else out-frown false fortune's frown.—

Shall we not see these daughters, and these sisters?

Lear. No, no, no, no! Come, let's away to prison:

We two alone will sing like birds i' the cage:
When thou dost ask my blessing, I'll kneel down,

And ask of thee forgiveness: So we'll live,
And pray, and sing, and tell old tales, and laugh

At gilded butterflies, and hear poor rogues
Talk of court news: and we'll talk with them too,—

Who loses and who wins; who's in, who's out;—

And take upon us the mystery of things,
As if we were God's spies: And we'll wear out,
In a wall'd prison, packs and sects of great ones,

That ebb and flow by the moon.

* I. e. Make my party good.

† I. e. To be ready prepared, is all.

‡ Pass judgment on them.

Edm. Take them away.

Lear. Upon such sacrifices, my Cordelia,
The gods themselves throw incense. Have I caught thee?

He that parts us shall bring a brand from heaven,

And fire us hence, like foxes. Wipe thine eyes;
The gonzers* shall devour them, flesh, and fell, †

Ere they shall make us weep: we'll see them starve first.

Come.

[Exit LEAR, and CORDELIA guarded.

Edm. Come hither, captain; hark.

Take thou this note; [Giving a Paper.] go, follow them to prison:

One step I have advanc'd thee; if thou dost
As this instructs thee, thou dost make thy way
To noble fortunes: Know thou this,—that men
Are as the time is: to be tender-minded

Does not become a sword:—Thy great employment

Will not bear question; ‡ either say, thou'lt do't,

Or thrive by other means.

Off. I'll do't, my lord.

Edm. About it; and write happy, when thou hast done.

Mark,—I say, instantly; and carry it so,
As I have set it down.

Off. I cannot draw a cart, nor eat dried oats;
If it be man's work, I will do it.

[Exit OFFICER.

Flourish. Enter ALBANY, GONERIL, REGAN, OFFICERS, and Attendants.

Alb. Sir, you have shown to-day your valiant strain,
And fortune led you well: You have the captives

Who were the opposites of this day's strife:
We do require them of you; so to use them,
As we shall find their merits and our safety
May equally determine.

Edm. Sir, I thought it fit

To send the old and miserable king
To some retention, and appointed guard;
Whose age has charms in it, whose title more,
To pluck the common bosom on his side,
And turn our impress'd lances in our eyes
Which do command them. With him I sent the queen;

My reason all the same; and they are ready
To-morrow, or at further space to appear
Where you shall hold your session. At this time,

We sweat, and bleed: the friend hath lost his friend;

And the best quarrels, in the heat, are curs'd
By those that feel their sharpness:—
The question of Cordelia, and her father,
Requires a sitter place. §

Alb. Sir, by your patience,
I hold you but a subject of this war,
Not as a brother.

Reg. That's as we list to grace him.
Methinks our pleasure might have been demanded,

Ere you had spoke so far. He led our powers;
Bore the commission of my place and person;
The which immediacy ¶ may well stand up,
And call itself your brother.

Gon. Not so hot:

In his own grace he doth exalt himself,
More than in your advancement.

Reg. In my rights,

By me invested, he compeers the best.

Gon. That were the most, if he should husband you.

Reg. Jesters do oft prove prophets.

* The French disease.

† Skin.

‡ Admit of debate.

§ To be discours'd of in greater privacy.

¶ Authority to act on his own judgment.

Gon. Holloa, holloa !
That eye that told you so, look'd but a-squint. *
Reg. Lady, I am not well ; else I should answer
From a full-flowing stomach.—General,
Take thou my soldiers, prisoners, patrimony ;
Dispose of them, of me ; the walls are thine :
Witness the world, that I create thee here
My lord and master.

Gon. Mean you to enjoy him ?

Alb. The let-alone † lies not in your good will.

Edm. Nor in thine, lord.

Alb. Half-blooded fellow, yes.

Reg. Let the drum strike, and prove my title thine. [To EDMUND.]

Alb. Stay yet ; hear reason :—Edmund, I arrest thee

On capital treason ; and, in thy arrest,
This gilded serpent : [Pointing to GON.]—for your claim, fair sister,

I bar it in the interest of my wife ;

'Tis she is sub-contracted to this lord,

And I, her husband, contradict your bans.

If you will marry, make your love to me,

My lady is bespoken.

Gon. An interlude !

Alb. Thou art arm'd, Gloster :—Let the trumpet sound :

If none appear to prove upon thy person,

Thy heinous, manifest, and many treasons,

There is my pledge ; [Throwing down a Glove.]

I'll prove it on thy heart,

Ere I taste bread, thou art in nothing less

Than I have here proclaim'd thee.

Reg. Sick, O, sick !

Gon. If not, I'll ne'er trust poison. [Aside.]

Edm. There's my exchange : [Throwing down a Glove.] what in the world he is

That names me traitor, villain-like he lies :

Call by thy trumpet : he that dares approach,

On him, on you, (who not ?) I will maintain

My truth and honour firmly.

Alb. A herald, ho !

Edm. A herald, ho, a herald !

Alb. Trust to thy single virtue ! ‡ for thy soldiers,

All levied in my name, have in my name
Took their discharge.

Reg. This sickness grows upon me.

Enter a HERALD.

Alb. She is not well ; convey her to my tent.

[Exit REGAN, led.]

Come hither, herald,—Let the trumpet sound,—
And read out this.

Off. Sound, trumpet. [A Trumpet sounds.]

HERALD reads.

If any man of quality or degree, within the lists of the army, will maintain upon EDMUND, supposed earl of GLOSTER, that he is a manifold traitor, let him appear at the third sound of the trumpet : He is bold in his defence.

Edm. Sound.

Her. Again.

Her. Again.

[1 Trumpet.]

[2 Trumpet.]

[3 Trumpet.]

[Trumpet answers within.]

Enter EDGAR, armed, preceded by a Trumpet.

Alb. Ask him his purposes, why he appears
Upon this call o'the trumpet.

Her. What are you ?

Your name, your quality ? and why you answer
This present summons ?

Edg. Know, my name is lost ;
By treason's tooth bare-gnawn, and cankerbit :
Yet am I noble, as the adversary
I come to cope withal.

Alb. Which is that adversary ?

* Alluding to the proverb : "Love being jealous makes a good eye look a-squint."

† The hinderance.

‡ I. e. Valour.

Edg. What's he, that speaks for Edmund earl of Gloster ?

Edm. Himself ;—What say'st thou to him ?

Edg. Draw thy sword ;

That, if my speech offend a noble heart,
Thy arm may do thee justice : here is mine.
Behold it is the privilege of mine honours,
My oath and my profession : I protest,— Mangre * thy strength, youth, place, and eminence,

Despite thy victor sword, and fire-new fortune
Thy valour, and thy heart,—thou art a traitor :
False to thy gods, thy brother, and thy father ;
Conspirant 'gainst this high illustrious prince ;
And, from the extremest upward of thy head,
To the descent and dust beneath thy feet,
A most leas-spotted traitor. Say thou, No,
This sword, this arm, and my best spirits, are best

To prove upon thy heart, whereto I speak
Thou liest.

Edm. In wisdom I should ask thy name : †

But, since thy outside looks so fair and warlike, [breathes,

And that thy tongue some 'say† of breeding
What safe and nicely I might well delay

By rule of knighthood, I disdain and spurn :

Back do I toss these treasons to thy head ;

With the hell-hated lie o'erwhelm thy heart ;

Which, (for they yet glance by, and scarcely bruise,) [way,

This sword of mine shall give them instant
Where they shall rest for ever.—Trumpets,
speak.

[Alarums.—They fight.—EDMUND falls.]

Alb. O save him, save him !

Gon. This is mere practice, ‡ Gloster :

By the law of arms, thou wast not bound to answer

An unknown opposite : thou art not vanquish'd,
But cozen'd and beguil'd.

Alb. Shut your mouth, dame,

Or with this paper shall I stop it :—Hold, Sir :—
Thou worse than any name, read thine own evil :—

No tearing, lady ; I perceive, you know it.

[Gives the Letter to EDMUND.]

Gon. Say, if I do ; the laws are mine, not
Who shall arraign me for't ? [thine :

Alb. Most monstrous !

Know'st thou this paper ?

Gon. Ask me not what I know.

[Exit GONERIL.]

Alb. Go after her : she's desperate ; govern
her. [To an OFFICER, who goes out.]

Edm. What you have charg'd me with, that have I done ; [out ;

And more, much more : the time will bring it
'Tis past, and so am I : But what art thou,
That hast this fortune on me ? If thou art noble,
I do forgive thee.

Edg. Let's exchange charity.

I am no less in blood than thou art, Edmund ;
If more, the more thou hast wrong'd me.

My name is Edgar, and thy father's son.

The gods are just, and of our pleasant vices

Make instruments to scourge us :

The dark and vicious place where thee he got,

Cost him his eyes.

Edm. Thou hast spoken right, 'tis true ;

The wheel is come full circle : I am here.

Alb. Methought, thy very gait did prophesy

A royal nobleness :—I must embrace thee ;

Let sorrow split my heart, if ever I

Did hate thee, or thy father !

Edg. Worthy prince,

I know it well.

Alb. Where have you hid yourself ? [thet ?

How have you known the miseries of your fa-

Edg. By nursing them, my lord.—List ‡ a brief tale ;—

* Notwithstanding.

† Because if his adversary was not of equal rank, Edmund might have declined the combat.

§ Stratagem.

|| Hear.

And, when 'tis told, O that my heart would durst!—

The bloody proclamation to escape,
That follow'd me so near, (O our lives' sweetness!)

That with the pain of death we'd hourly die,
Rather than die at once!) taught me to shift into a madman's rags; to assume a semblance

That very dogs disdain'd: and in this habit
Met I my father with his bleeding rings,
Their precious stones new lost; became his guide, [despair:

Led him, begg'd for him, sav'd him from
Never (O fault!) reveal'd myself unto him,
Until some half hour past, when I was arm'd,
Not sure, though hoping, of this good success,
I ask'd his blessing, and from first to last
Told him my pilgrimage: But his flaw'd
heart,

(Alack, too weak the conflict to support!)
'Twixt two extremes of passion, joy and grief,
Burst smilingly.

Edm. This speech of your's hath mov'd me,
And shall, perchance, do good: but speak
you on;

You look as you had something more to say.

Alb. If there be more, more woeful, hold it
in;

For I am almost ready to dissolve,
Hearing of this.

Edg. This would have seem'd a period
To such as love not sorrow; but another,
To amplify too much, would make much more,
And top extremity. [man,
Whilst I was big in clamour, came there a
Who having seen me in my worst estate,
Shunn'd my abhor'd society: but then, finding
Who 'twas that so endar'd, with his strong
arms

He fasten'd on my neck, and bellow'd out
As he'd burst heaven; threw him on my father;

Told the most piteous tale of Lear and him,
That ever ear receiv'd: which in recounting
His grief grew puissant, and the strings of life Began to crack: Twice then the trumpet
sounded,

And there I left him tranc'd.

Alb. But who was this?

Edg. Kent, Sir, the banish'd Kent: who in disguise
Follow'd his enemy king, and did him service
!mproper for a slave.

Enter a GENTLEMAN hastily, with a bloody Knife.

Gent. Help! help! O help!

Edg. What kind of help?

Alb. Speak, man.

Edg. What means that bloody knife?

Gent. 'Tis hot, it smokes;
It came even from the heart of—

Alb. Who, man? speak.

Gent. Your lady, Sir, your lady: and her
By her is poison'd; she confesses it. [sister

Edm. I was contracted to them both; all
Now marry in an instant. [three

Alb. Produce their bodies, be they alive or
dead!—

This judgment of the heavens, that makes us
tremble,

Touches us not with pity. [Exit GENTLEMAN.

Enter KENT.

Edg. Here comes Kent, Sir.

Alb. O it is he.

The time will not allow the compliment,
Which very manners urges.

Kent. I am come
To bid my king and master aye a good night;
Is he not here?

Alb. Great thing of us forgot!—

* For ever.

Speak, Edmund, where's the king? and where's Cordelia?—

See'st thou this object, Kent?

[The Bodies of GONERIL and REGAN are brought in.

Kent. Alack, why thus?

Edm. Yet Edmund was belov'd:

The one the other poison'd for my sake,
And after slew herself.

Alb. Even so.—Cover their faces.

Edm. I pant for life:—Some good I mean to
do,

Despite of mine own nature. Quickly send,—

Be brief in it,—to the castle; for my writ

Is on the life of Lear, and on Cordelia;—

Nay, send in time.

Alb. Run, run, O run—

Edg. To who, my lord?—Who has the office?
send

Thy token of reprieve.

Edm. Well thought on; take my sword,
Give it the captain.

Alb. Haste thee, for thy life. [Exit EDMUND.

Edm. He hath commission from thy wife and me

To hang Cordelia in the prison, and
To lay the blame upon her own despair,
That she fordid herself.*

Alb. The gods defend her! Bear him hence awhile. [EDMUND is borne off.

Enter LEAR, with CORDELIA dead in his Arms; EDGAR, OFFICER, and others.

Lear. Howl, howl, howl, howl!—O you are men of stones;

Had I your tongues and eyes, I'd use them so That heaven's vault should crack:—O she is gone for ever!—

I know when one is dead, and when one lives;
She's dead as earth;—Lend me a looking-glass;
If that her breath will mist or stain the stone,
Why, then she lives.

Kent. Is this the promis'd end?†

Edg. Or image of that horror?‡

Alb. Fall, and cease!‡

Lear. This feather stirs: she lives! If it be so,
It is a chance that does redeem all sorrows
That ever I have felt.

Kent. O my good master! [Kneeling.

Lear. Prythee, away..

Edg. 'Tis noble Kent, your friend.

Lear. A plague upon you, murderers, traitors all! [ever!—

I might have sav'd her; now she's gone for Cordelia, Cordelia, stay a little. Ha!

What is't thou say'st?—Her voice was ever soft, [man:—

Gentle, and low; an excellent thing in wo-
I kill'd the slave that was a hanging thee.

Off. 'Tis true, my lords, he did.

Lear. Did I not, fellow? [chion

I have seen the day, with my good biting faul-
I would have made them skip: I am old now,

And these same crosses spoil me.—Who are you? [straight.

Mine eyes are none o'the best:—I'll tell you Kent. If fortune brag of two she lov'd and
One of them we behold. [hated,

Lear. This is a dall sight: Are you not
Kent?

Kent. The same: [Calus?

Your servant Kent: Where is your servant
Lear. He's a good fellow, I can tell you that; [rotten.

He'll strike, and quickly too:—He's dead and Kent. No, my good lord; I am the very man;—

Lear. I'll see that straight.

Kent. That, from your first of difference and
Have follow'd your sad steps. [decay,

Lear. You are welcome hither.

* Destroyed herself.

† The end of the world, or the horrible circumstances preceding it?

‡ I. e. Die; Albany speaks to Lear.

Kent. Nor no man else, all's cheerless, dark, and deadly.—
Your eldest daughters have fore-doom'd themselves,
And desperately are dead.

Lear. Ay, so I think.

Alb. He knows not what he says; and vain
That we present us to him. [it is

Edg. Very bootless. *

Enter an OFFICER.

Off. Edmund is dead, my lord.

Alb. That's but a trifle here.—

You lords, and noble friends, know our intent.
What comfort to this great decay † may come,
Shall be applied: For us, we will resign,
During the life of this old majesty,
To him our absolute power:—You, to your rights; [To EDGAR and KENT.

Have more than merited.—All friends shall taste

The wages of their virtue, and all foes

The cup of their deservings.—O see, see!

Do you see this? Look on her,—look,—her lips,—

Look there, look there!—

[He dies

Edg. He faints!—My lord, my lord,—

Kent. Break, heart; I prythee, break!

Edg. Look up, my lord.

Kent. Vex not his ghost: O let him pass. *
he hates him,

That would upon the rack of this tough world
Stretch him out longer.

Edg. O he is gone, indeed.

Kent. The wonder is, he hath endur'd so long:
He but usurp'd his life.

Alb. Bear them from hence.—Our present
business

Is general woe. Friends of my soul, you twain
[To KENT and EDGAR.

Rule in this realm, and the good state sustain.

Kent. I have a journey, Sir, shortly to go;
My master calls, and I must not say, no.

Alb. The weight of this sad time we must obey;
Speak what we feel, not what we ought to say.
The oldest hath borne most: we, that are young,
Shall never see so much, nor live so long.

[Exeunt, with a dead March.

* Die.

Act V. 1

MACBETH.

LITERARY AND HISTORICAL NOTICE.

IN this much adored tragedy Shakespeare has closely adhered to historical fact, excepting that Banquo, out of compliment to his descendant James I. is excluded from all participation in the murder of Duncan. In the reign of Charles II. the songs of the witches were set to music by the celebrated Matthew Lock, and the play regarded as a semi-opera. The ghosts and witches, though admirably portrayed, have been censured as an insult to common sense; and cautions have been held out to the young and uninformed against imbibing the absurd principles of fatalism which are seemingly countenanced in many parts of this piece. But in the time of Shakespeare, the doctrine of witchcraft was at once established by law and by fashion, and it became not only unpolite, but criminal, to doubt it.—King James himself in his dialogues of Demonologie, re-printed in London soon after his succession, has speculated deeply on the illusions of spirits, the compact of witches, &c.; and our dramatist only turned to his advantage a system universally admitted. In representation, some uninteresting scenes are omitted; many of the witches' dialogues adapted to beautiful music, and a song or two, probably written by Sir W. Davenant, added to the parts. Betterton, amidst many bad alterations, hit upon the plan of making the witches deliver all the prophecies, by which a deal of the trap-work is avoided, and Garrick substituted some excellent passages to be uttered by Macbeth, whilst expiring, in lieu of the disgusting exposure of his head by Macduff. The neatest criticism upon the play, and the most concise record of its historical facts, are contained in the following extract from a standard publication: "Macbeth flourished in Scotland about the middle of the tenth century. At this period Duncan was king, a mild and humane prince, but not at all possessed of the genius requisite for governing a country so turbulent, and so infested by the intrigues and animosities of the great Macbeth, a powerful nobleman, and nearly allied to the crown. Not contented with curbing the king's authority, carried still further his mad ambition; he murdered Duncan at Inverness, and then seized upon the throne. Fearing lest his ill-gotten power should be stripped from him, he chased Malcolm Kenmore, the son and heir, into England, and put to death Mac Gill and Banquo, the two most powerful men in his dominions. Macduff next becoming the object of his suspicion, he escaped into England; but the inhuman usurper wreaked his vengeance on his wife and children, whom he caused to be cruelly butchered. Siward, whose daughter was married to Duncan, embraced, by Edward's orders, the protection of his distressed family. He marched an army into Scotland, and having defeated and killed Macbeth in battle, he restored Malcolm to the throne of his ancestors. The tragedy founded upon the history of Macbeth, though contrary to the rules of the drama, contains an infinity of beauties with respect to language, character, passion, and incident; and is thought to be one of the very best pieces of the very best masters in this kind of writing that the world ever produced. The danger of ambition is well described, and the passions are directed to their true ends, so that it is not only admirable as a poem, but one of the most moral pieces existing."

In thunder, lightning, or in rain?

When the battle's lost and won:

Hover through the fog and filthy air.

[WITCHES vanish.]

SCENE II.—A Camp near Fores.

Alarm within. Enter King DUNCAN, MALCOLM, DONALBAIN, LENOX, with ATTENDANTS, meeting a bleeding SOLDIER.

Dun. What bloody man is that? He can report,
As seemeth by his plight, of the revolt
The newest state.

Mal. This is the sergeant,
Who, like a good and hardy soldier, fought
'Gainst my captivity:—Hail, brave friend!
Say to the king the knowledge of the broil,
As thou didst leave it.

Sold. Doubtfully it stood;
As two spent swimmers, that do cling together,
And choke their art. The merciless Macdon-wald

(Worthy to be a rebel; for to that
The multiplying villanies of nature
Do swarm upon him,) from the western isles,
Of kernes and gallowglasses is supplied;
And fortune, on his damned quarrel† smiling,
Show'd like a rebel's whore: But all's too weak:
For brave Macbeth, (well he deserves that
name,)

Disdaining fortune, with his brandish'd steel,
Which smok'd with bloody execution,
Like valour's minion
Carv'd out his passage, till he fac'd the slave;
And ne'er shook hands, nor bade farewell to
him,

Till he unseam'd him from the nave to the chaps,
And fix'd his head upon our battlements.

Dun. O valiant cousin! worthy gentleman!

Sold. As whence the sun 'gins his reflection
Shipwrecking storms and direful thunders break;
So from that spring, whence comfort seem'd to
come,

Discomfort‡ swells. Mark, king of Scotland,
mark:

No sooner justice had, with valour arm'd, Compell'd these skipping kernes to trust their beels;

But the Norweyan lord, surveying vantage,
With furbish'd arms and new supplies of men,
Began a fresh assault.

Dun. Dismay'd not this
Our captains, Macbeth and Banquo?

Sold. Yes;

As sparrows, eagles; or the hare, the lion.
If I say sooth, § I must report they were
As cannons ¶ overcharg'd with double cracks;
So they

Doubly redoubled strokes upon the foe:
Except they meant to bathe in reeking wounds,
Or memorize another Golgotha, ¶
I cannot tell:—

But I am faint, my gashes cry for help.

Dun. So well thy words become thee, as thy wounds;

They smack of honour both:—Go, get him surgeons. [Exit SOLDIER, attended.]

Enter ROSSE.

Who comes here?

Mal. The worthythane of Rosse.

Len. What a haste looks through his eyes!
So should he look,
That seems to speak things strange.

Rosse. God save the king!

Dun. Whence cam'st thou, worthythane?

Rosse. From Fife, great king,
Where the Norweyan banners flout  the sky,
And fan our people cold.
Norway himself, with terrible numbers,
Assisted by that most disloyal traitor
Thethane of Cawdor, 'gan a dismal conflict:
Till that Bellona's bridegroom,†† lapp'd in proof,††

* They were light and heavy armed troops.

† Cause. ‡ The opposite to comfort. § Truth.
¶ Cannons were not invented until some centuries
after this period.

‡‡ Defended by armour of proof.

Confronted him with self-comparisons,
Point against point rebellious, arm 'gainst arm,
Curbing his lavish spirit: And, to conclude,
The victory fell on us;—

Dun. Great happiness!

Rosse. That now

Sweno, the Norways' king, craves composition;
Nor would we deign him burial of his men,
Till he disburs'd, at Saint Colmes' inch,*
Ten thousand dollars to our general use.

Dun. No more thatthane of Cawdor shall deceive

Our bosom interest:—Go, pronounce his death,
And with his former title greet Macbeth.

Rosse. I'll see it done.

Dun. What he hath lost, noble Macbeth hath won. [Exeunt.]

SCENE III.—A Heath.—Thunder.

Enter the three WITCHES.

1 Witch. Where hast thou been, sister?

2 Witch. Killing swine.

3 Witch. Sister, where thou?

1 Witch. A Sailor's wife had chestnuts in her lap,

And mounch'd, and mounch'd, and mounch'd:—

Give us, quoth I:

Against thee,† witch! the rump-fed ronyon‡
cries.

Her husband's to Aleppo gone, master o'the
But in a sieve I'll thither sail, [Tiger:

And, like a rat without a tail,

I'll do, I'll do, I'll do.

2 Witch. I'll give thee a wind.

1 Witch. Thou art kind.

3 Witch. And I another.

1 Witch. I myself have all the other;
And the very ports they blow,

All the quarters that they know

I'the shipman's card. §

I will drain him dry as hay:

Sleep shall, neither night nor day,

Hang upon his pent-house lid;

He shall live a man forbid: ¶

Weary sev'n-nights, nine times nine,

Shall he dwindle, peak, and pine:

Though his bark cannot be lost,

Yet it shall be tempest-toas'd.

Look what I have.

2 Witch. Show me, show me.

1 Witch. Here I have a pilot's thumb,
Wreck'd, as homeward he did come.

[Drum within.]

3 Witch. A drum, a drum;
Macbeth doth come.

All. The weird sisters, ¶ hand in hand,

Posters of the sea and land,

Thus do go about, about;

Thrice to thine, and thrice to mine,

And thrice again, to make up nine:

Peace!—the charm's wound up.

Enter MACBETH and BANQUO.

Macb. So foul and fair a day I have not seen.

Ban. How far is't call'd to Fores?—What are these,

So wither'd and so wild in their attire:

That look not like the inhabitants o'the earth,

And yet are on't? Live you? or are you aught

That man may question? You seem to understand me,

By each at once her choppy finger laying

Upon her skinny lips:—You should be women,

And yet your beards forbid me to interpret

That you are so.

Macb. Speak, if you can;—What are you?

1 Witch. All hail, Macbeth! hail to thee,
thane of Glamis!

* A small island in the Frith of Edinburgh.

† Arrant, begone.

‡ A scabby woman.

§ Sailor's chart.

¶ Accursed.

¶ Prophetic sisters: the fates of the northern nations,
the three hand-maids of Odin.

2 Witch. All hail, Macbeth! hail to thee,
thane of Cawdor!

3 Witch. All hail, Macbeth! that shalt be king hereafter.

Ban. Good Sir, why do you start, and seem to fear

Things that do sound so fair?—I'the name of truth,

Are ye fantastical * or that indeed
Which outwardly ye show? My noble partner
You greet with present grace, and great prediction

Of noble having, † and of royal hope, [not :
That he seems rapt ‡ withal; to me you speak
If you can look into the seeds of time,
And say which grain will grow, and which will
not;

Speak then to me, who neither beg nor fear
Your favours nor your hate.

1 Witch. Hail!

2 Witch. Hail!

3 Witch. Hail!

1 Witch. Lesser than Macbeth, and greater.

2 Witch. Not so happy, yet much happier.

3 Witch. Thou shalt get kings, though thou be none :

So, all hail, Macbeth and Banquo!

1 Witch. Banquo and Macbeth, all hail!

Macb. Stay, you imperfect speakers, tell me
more :

By Sinel's death § I know I amthane of Glamis ;
But how of Cawdor? the thane of Cawdor lives,
A prosperous gentleman ; and, to be king,
Stands not within the prospect of belief,
No more than to be Cawdor. Say, from whence
You owe this strange intelligence? or why
Upon this blasted heath you stop our way
With such prophetic greeting?—Speak, I charge
you. [WITCHES vanish.]

Ban. The earth hath bubbles, as the water has, [misch'd?]

And these are of them :—Whither are they va-

Macb. Into the air; and what seem'd corporal melted

As breath into the wind.—'Would they had staid!

Ban. Were such things here, as we do speak
about;

Or have we eaten of the insane root, †

That takes the reason prisoner?

Macb. Your children shall be kings.

Ban. You shall be king.

Macb. Andthane of Cawdor too; went it not so? [here?]

Ban. To the self-same tune and words. Who's Enter Ross and Angus.

Rosse. The king hath happily receiv'd, Macbeth,

The news of thy success; and when he reads
Thy personal venture in the rebels' fight,
His wonders and his praises do contend,
Which should be thine, or his: Silenc'd with
that,

In viewing o'er the rest o'the self-same day,
He finds thee in the stout Norweyan ranks,
Nothing afraid of what thyself didst make,
Strange images of death. As thick as tale, ¶
Came post with post; and every one did bear
Thy praises in his kingdom's great defence,
And pour'd them down before him.

Ang. We are sent,

To give thee, from our royal master, thanks;
To herald thee into his sight, not pay thee.

Rosse. And, for an earnest of a greater honour,

He bade me, from him, call thee thane of Cawdor :

In which addition, * hail, most worthy thane!
For it is thine.

Ban. What, can the devil speak true?

Macb. The thane of Cawdor lives: Why do you dress me

In borrow'd robes?

Ang. Who was the thane, lives yet;

But under heavy judgment bears that life

Which he deserves to lose. Whether he was Combin'd with Norway; or did line the rebel

With hidden help and vantage; or that with both

He labour'd in his country's wreck, I know not;

But treasons capital, confess'd and prov'd,

Have overthrown him.

Macb. Glamis and thane of Cawdor :

The greatest is behind.—Thanks for your pains.—

Do you not hope your children shall be kings,
When those that gave the thane of Cawdor to Promis'd no less to them? [me,

Ban. That trusted home,

Might yet enkindle † you unto the crown,

Besides the thane of Cawdor. But 'tis strange :

And oftentimes, to win us to our harm,

The instruments of darkness tell us truths;

Win us with honest trifles, to betray us

In deepest consequence.—

Cousins, a word, I pray you.

Macb. Two truths are told,

As happy prologues to the swelling act

Of the imperial theme.—I thank you, gentle-
This supernatural soliciting † [men.—

Cannot be ill; cannot be good:—If ill,

Why hath it given me earnest of success,

Commencing in a truth? I amthane of Caw-dor :

If good, why do I yield to that suggestion?]

Whose horrid image doth unfix my hair,

And make my seated † heart knock at my ribs,

Against the use of nature? Present fears

Are less than horrible imaginings : [tical,

My thought, whose murder yet is but fantas-

Shakes so my single state of man, that function

Is smother'd in surmise;  and nothing is,

But what is not.

Ban. Look, how our partner's rapt.

Macb. If chance will have me king, why, chance may crown me,

Without my stir.

Ban. New honours come upon him

Like our strange garments; cleave not to the mould,

But with the aid of use.

Macb. Come what come may;

Time and the hour †† runs through the roughest
day.

Ban. Worthy Macbeth, we stay upon your leisure.

Macb. Give me your favour : ††—my dull brain was wrought [pains

With things forgotten. Kind gentlemen, your

Are register'd where every day I turn

The leaf to read them.—Let us toward the king; [time,

Think upon what hath chanc'd; and, at more

The interim having weigh'd it, let us speak

Our free hearts each to other.

Ban. Very gladly.

Macb. Till then, enough.—Come, friends.

[Exeunt.]

SCENE IV.—Fores.—A Room in the Palace.

Flourish. Enter DUNCAN, MALCOLM, DONAL-
BAIN, LENOX, and ATTENDANTS.

Dun. Is execution done on Cawdor? Are
not

These in commission yet return'd?

* Supernatural, spiritual.

† Estate.

‡ Rapturously affected.

§ Sinel was Macbeth's father.

¶ The root which makes insane.

‡ As fast as they could be counted

* Title.

† Stimulate.

‡ Excitement.

§ Glamis is still standing, and is the magnificent residence of Earl Strathmore.

¶ Temptation.

¶ Firmly fixed.

 The powers of action are oppressed by conjecture.

†† Time and oppor-

tnuity.

‡† Pardon.

Mal. My liege,
They are not yet come back. But I have spoke
With one that saw him die; who did report,
That very frankly he confess'd his treasons;
Implor'd your highness' pardon; and set forth
A deep repentance: nothing in his life
Became him, like the leaving it; he died
As one that had been studied in his death,
To throw away the dearest thing he ow'd,*
As 'twere a careless trifle.

Dun. There's no art,
To find the mind's construction in the face: †
He was a gentleman on whom I built
An absolute trust.—O worthiest cousin!

Enter MACBETH, BANQUO, ROSSE, and ANGUS.
The sin of my ingratitude even now
Was heavy on me: Thou art so far before,
That swiftest wing of recompense is slow
To overtake thee. 'Would thou hadst less de-
serv'd;

That the proportion both of thanks and payment
Might have been mine! only I have left to say,
More is thy due than more than all can pay.

Mach. The service and the loyalty I owe,
In doing it, pays itself. Your highness' part
Is to receive our duties; and our duties
Are to your throne and state, children, and
servants,
Which do but what they should, by doing every thing

Safe toward your love and honour.

Dun. Welcome hither:
I have begun to plant thee, and will labour
To make thee full of growing. ‡—Noble Banquo,
That hast no less deserv'd, nor must be known
No less to have done so, let me infold thee,
And hold thee to my heart.

Ban. There if I grow,
The harvest is your own.

Dun. My plenteous joys,
Wanton in fulness, seek to hide themselves
In drops of sorrow.—Sons, kinsmen, thanes,
And you whose places are the nearest, know,
We will establish our estate upon [after,
Our eldest Malcolm; whom we name here—
The prince of Cumberland: which honour must
Not, unaccompanied, invest him only,
But signs of nobleness, like stars, shall shine
On all deservers.—From hence to Inverness, §
And bind us further to you.

Mach. The rest is labour, which is not us'd for you:

I'll be myself the harbinger, and make joyful
The hearing of my wife with your approach;
So, humbly take my leave.

Dun. My worthy Cawdor!

Mach. The prince of Cumberland!—That is a step,
On which I must fall down, or else o'er-leap,

[Aside.
For in my way it lies. Stars, hide your fires!
Let not light see my black and deep desires:
The eye wink at the hand! yet let that be,
Which the eye fears, when it is done, to see.

[Exit.
Dun. True, worthy Banquo; he is full so
valiant; ||

And in his commendations, I am fed;
It is a banquet to me. Let us after him,
Whose care is gone before to bid us welcome:
It is a peerless kinsman. [Flourish. Exeunt.

SCENE V.—Inverness.—A Room in MACBETH'S Castle.

Enter Lady MACBETH, reading a letter.

Lady M. They met me in the day of success; and I have learned by the perfectest report,* they have more in them than mortal knowledge. When I burned in desire to question them further, they made themselves —air, into which they vanished. Whiles I stood rapt in the wonder of it, came missives † from the king, who all-hailed me, Thane of Cawdor; by which title, before, these weird sisters saluted me, and referred me to the coming on of time, with Hail king that shalt be! This have I thought good to deliver thee, my dearest partner of greatness; that thou mightest not lose the dues of rejoicing, by being ignorant of what greatness is promised thee. Lay it to thy heart, and farewell.

Glamis thou art, and Cawdor; and shalt be What thou art promis'd:—Yet do I fear thy
nature;

It is too full o'the milk of human kindness,
To catch the nearest way: Thou would'st be great;

Art not without ambition; but without
The illness should attend it. What thou would'st highly, [false,

That would'st thou holily; would'st not play
And yet would'st wrongly win: thou'd'st have great Glamis, [have it;

That which cries, *Thus thou must do, if thou
And that which rather thou dost fear to do,
Than wishest should be undone.* Hie thee
hither,

That I may pour my spirits in thine ear;
And chastise with the valour of my tongue
All that impedes thee from the golden round, ‡
Which fate and metaphysical § aid doth seem To have thee crown'd withal.—What is your tidings?

Enter an ATTENDANT.

Attend. The King comes here to-night.

Lady M. Thou'rt mad to say it:
Is not thy master with him? who, wer't so,
Would have inform'd for preparation.

Attend. So please you, it is true; our thane is coming:

One of my fellows had the speed of him;
Who, almost dead for breath, had scarcely
more

That would make up his message.

Lady M. Give him tending,
He brings great news. The raven himself is hoarse, [Exit ATTENDANT.

That croaks the fatal entrance of Duncan
Under my battlements. Come, come, you spirits

That tend on mortal || thought, unsex me here;
And fill me, from the crown to the toe, top-full
Of direst cruelty! make thick my blood,
Stop up the access and passage to remorse, ¶
That no compunctious visitings of nature
Shake my fell purpose, nor keep peace between
The effect and it! Come to my woman's breasts,
And take my milk for gall, you murdering ministers,

Wherever in your sightless substances
You wait on nature's mischief! Come, thick
night,

And pall  thee in the dunest smoke of hell!
That my keen knife †† see not the wound it
makes;

Nor heaven peep through the blanket of the dark, Cawdor!
To cry, Hold, Hold!—Great Glamis! worthy

Thy letters have transported me beyond
This ignorant present, ‡‡ and I feel now
The future in the instant.

¶ Murderous.

¶ Pity.

meant a sword or dagger.

present time, which is according to the process of nature ignorant of the future.

† We cannot construe the disposition of the mind by the lineaments of the face.

‡ Exuberant.

§ The walls of Macbeth's Castle at Inverness, are yet standing.

¶ Full as valiant as described.

Macb. My dearest love,
Duncan comes here to-night.

Lady M. And when goes hence?

Macb. To-morrow,—as he purposes.

Lady M. Oh! never

Shall sun that morrow see!

Your face, my thane, is as a book, where men
May read strange matters:—To beguile the
time,

Look like the time; bear welcome in your eye,
Your hand, your tongue: look like the innocent
flower,

But be the serpent under it. He that's coming Must be provided for: and you shall put
This night's great business into my despatch;
Which shall to all our nights and days to come
Give solely sovereign sway and masterdom.

Macb. We will speak further.

Lady M. Only look up clear;
To alter favour* ever is to fear:
Leave all the rest to me.

[Exeunt.]

SCENE IV.—The same.—Before the Castle.

Hautboys.—Servants of MACBETH attending.

Enter DUNCAN, MALCOLM, DONALBAIN, BAN-QUO, LENOX, MACDUFF, ROSSE, ANGUS, and Attendants.

Dun. This castle hath a pleasant seat; the air
Nimbly and sweetly recommends itself
Unto our gentle senses.

Ban. This guest of summer,
The temple-haunting martlet, does approve,
By his lov'd mansionry, that the heaven's
breath

Smells woefully here: no jutty, frieze, buttress,
Nor coigne of vantage,† but this bird hath
made

His pendent bed, and procreant cradle: Where they

Most breed and haunt, I have observ'd, the air
Is delicate.

Enter Lady MACBETH.

Dun. See, see! our honour'd hostess:
The love that follows us, sometime is our trouble,
Which still we thank as love. Herein I teach
you,

How you shall bid God yield‡ us for your
pains,
And thank us for your trouble.

Lady M. All our service
Is every point twice done, and then done double,

Were poor and single business, to contend Against those honours deep and broad, where-
with

Your majesty loads our house: For those of old,
And the late dignities heap'd up to them,
We rest your hermits. §

Dun. Where's the thane of Cawdor?
We cours'd him at the heels, and had a purpose
To be his purveyor: but he rides well;
And his great love, sharp as his spur, hath holp
him

To his home before us: Fair and noble hostess,
We are your guest to-night.

Lady M. Your servants ever Have their's, themselves, and what is their's, in compt, ||

To make their audit at your highness' pleasure,
Still to return your own.

Dun. Give me your hand:
Conduct me to mine host; we love him highly,
And shall continue our graces towards him.
By your leave, hostess.

[Exeunt.]

* Look, countenance.

† Convenient corner.

‡ Reward.

§ I. e. We as hermits shall ever pray for you.

|| Subject to account.

SCENE VII.—The same.—A Room in the Castle.

Hautboys and torches. Enter, and pass over the stage, a Sewer, and divers Servant: with dishes and service. Then enter
MACBETH.*

Macb. If it were done, when 'tis done, then
'twere well

It were done quickly: If the assassination
Could trammel up the consequence, and catch,
With his surcease, success; that but this blow
Might be the be-all and the end-all here,
But here, upon, this bank and shoal of time,
We'd jump the life to come.—But, in these cases,

We still have judgment here; that we but teach
Bloody instructions, which, being taught, return
To plague the inventor: This even-handed justice

Commends the ingredients of our poison'd chalice

To our own lips. He's here in double trust:

First, as I am his kinsman and his subject,
Strong both against the deed; then, as his host,
Who should against his murderer shut the door,
Not bear the knife myself. Besides, this Duncan

Hath borne his faculties so meek, hath been
So clear in his great office, that his virtues
Will plead like angels, trumpet-tongued, against
The deep damnation of his taking-off:

And pity, like a naked new-born babe,
Striding the blast, or heaven's cherubim, hors'd
Upon the sightless couriers † of the air,
Shall blow the horrid deed in every eye,
That tears shall drown the wind.—I have no spur

To prick the sides of my intent, but only
Vaulting ambition, which o'er-leaps itself,
And falls on the other.—How now, what news?

Enter Lady MACBETH.

Lady M. He has almost supp'd; Why have you left the chamber?

Macb. Hath he ask'd for me?

Lady M. Know you not, he has?

Macb. We will proceed no further in this business:

He hath honour'd me of late; and I have bought
Golden opinions from all sorts of people,
Which would be worn now in their newest gloss,
Not cast aside so soon.

Lady M. Was the hope drunk,
Wherein you dress'd yourself? hath it slept
since?

And wakes it now, to look so green and pale
At what it did so freely? From this time,
Such I account thy love. Art thou afeard
To be the same in thine own act and valour,
As thou art in desire? Would'st thou have
that

Which thou esteem'st the ornament of life,
And live a coward in thine own esteem;
Letting I dare not wait upon I would,
Like the poor cat i'the adage?

Macb. Pr'ythee, peace:

I dare do all that may become a man;
Who dares do more, is none.

Lady M. What beast was it then,
That made you break this enterprize to me?
When you durst do it, then you were a man;
And, to be more than what you were, you would [place,

Be so much more the man. Nor time, nor Did then adhere, ‡ and yet you would make both:

They have made themselves, and that their fitness now [know

Does unmake you. I have given suck; and

* An officer so called from his placing the dishes on the table.

† Winds; sightless is invisible.

‡ In the same sense as coherent.

How tender 'tis to love the babe that milks me :
I would, while it was smiling in my face,
Have pluck'd my nipple from his boneless
gums,
And dash'd the brains out, had I so sworn, as
you
Have done to this.

Macb. If we should fail,—

Lady M. We fail!

But screw your courage to the sticking-place,
And we'll not fail. When Duncan is asleep, (Whereto the rather shall his day's hard journey

Soundly invite him,) his two chamberlains
Will I with wine and wassel* so convince, †
That memory, the warder ‡ of the brain,
Shall be a fume, and the receipt of reason
A limbeck only: When in swinish sleep
Their drenched natures lie, as in a death,
What cannot you and I perform upon
'The unguarded Duncan? what not put upon
His spongy officers; who shall bear the guilt
Of our great quell? §

Macb. Bring forth men-children only!
For thy undaunted mettle should compose
Nothing but males. Will it not be receiv'd,
When we have mark'd with blood those sleepy two

Of his own chamber, and us'd their very daggers,

That they have don't?

Lady M. Who dares receive it other,
As we shall make our griefs and clamour roar
Upon his death?

Macb. I am settled, and bend up
Each corporal agent to this terrible feat.
Away, and mock the time with fairest show:
False face must hide what the false heart doth know. [Exeunt.]

ACT II.

SCENE I.—The same.—Court within the Castle.

Enter BANQUO and FLEANCE, and a Servant, with a torch before them.

Ban. How goes the night, boy?

Fle. The moon is down; I have not heard the clock.

Ban. And she goes down at twelve.

Fle. I take't, 'tis later, Sir.

Ban. Hold, take my sword:—There's husbandry ¶ in heaven,
Their candles are all out.—Take thee that too.
A heavy summons lies like lead upon me,
And yet I would not sleep: Merciful powers!
Restrain in me the cursed thoughts, that nature
Gives way to in repose!—Give me my sword;—

Enter MACBETH, and a Servant with a Torch.

Who's there?

Macb. A friend.

Ban. What, Sir, not yet at rest? The king's a-bed:

He hath been in unusual pleasure, and
Sent forth great largess ¶ to your offices;
This diamond he greets your wife withal,
By the name of most kind hostess; and shut up
In measureless content.

Macb. Being unprepar'd,
Our will became the servant to defect;
Which else should free have wrought.

Ban. All's well.

I dreamt last night of the three weird sisters:
To you they have show'd some truth.

Macb. I think not of them:
Yet, when we can entreat an hour to serve,

Would spend it in some words upon that land
ness,

If you would grant the time.

Ban. At your kind'st leisure.

Macb. If you shall cleave to my consent,— when 'tis,

It shall make honour for you.

Ban. So I lose none,

In seeking to augment it, but still keep
My bosom franchis'd and allegiance clear,
I shall be counsel'd.

Macb. Good repose, the while!

Ban. Thanks, Sir; The like to you!

[Exit BANQUO.]

Macb. Go, bid thy mistress, when my drink is ready,

She strike upon the bell. Get thee to bed.

[Exit Servant.]

Is this a dagger, which I see before me,
The handle toward my hand? Come, let me clutch thee:—

I have thee not, and yet I see thee still.

Art thou not, fatal vision, sensible

To feeling as to sight? or art thou but

A dagger of the mind; a false creation,

Proceeding from the heat-oppressed brain?

I see thee yet, in form as palpable

As this which now I draw.

Thou marshal'st me the way that I was going;

And such an instrument I was to use.

Mine eyes are made the fools o'the other senses,

Or else worth all the rest: I see thee still;

And on thy blade and dudgeon,* gouts of blood,
Which was not so before.—There's no such thing;

It is the bloody business, which informs

Thus to mine eyes.—Now o'er the one half
world

Nature seems dead, and wicked dreams abuse

The curtain'd sleep; now witchcraft celebrates

Pale Hecate's offerings; and wither'd murder,

Alarm'd by his sentinel, the wolf,

Whose howl's his watch, thus with his stealthy pace

With Tarquin's ravishing strides, towards his design

Moves like a ghost.—Thou sure and arm-set
earth,

Hear not my steps, which way they walk, for
fear

Thy very stones prate of my where-about,

And take the present horror from the time,

Which now sulks with it.—Whiles I threat, he
lives;

Words to the heat of deeds too cold breath gives. [A bell rings.]

I go, and it is done! the bell invites me.

Hear it not, Duncan; for it is a knell

That summons thee to heaven or to hell.

[Exit.]

SCENE II.—The same.

Enter Lady MACBETH.

Lady M. That which hath made them drunk, hath made me bold:

What hath quench'd them hath given me fire:
—Hark!—Peace!

It was the owl that shriek'd, the fatal bellman,
Which gives the stern'st good-night. He is about it:

The doors are open; and the surfeited grooms
Do mock their charge with snorts: I have drugg'd their possets,

That death and nature do contend about them,
Whether they live, or die.

Macb. [Within.] Who's there?—what, ho!

Lady M. Alack! I am afraid they have awak'd,

And 'tis not done;—the attempt, and not the
deed,

Confounds us:—Hark!—I laid their daggers
ready,

* Haft.

† Overpower. * Intemperance. ‡ Sentinel.
§ Murder. ¶ Bounty. § Thrift.

He could not miss them.—Had he not remembered
My father as he slept, I had done't.—My husband!

Enter MACBETH.

Macb. I have done the deed :—Didst thou not hear a noise?

Lady M. I heard the owl scream, and the crickets cry.

Did not you speak?

Macb. When?

Lady M. Now.

Macb. As I descended?

Lady M. Ay,

Macb. Hark!—

Who lies i'the second chamber?

Lady M. Donalbain.

Macb. This is a sorry sight.

[Looking on his hands.]

Lady M. A foolish thought, to say a sorry sight.

Macb. There's one did laugh in his sleep, and one cried, murder!

That they did wake each other; I stood and heard them:

But they did say their prayers, and address'd them

Again to sleep.

Lady M. There are two lodg'd together.

Macb. One cried, God bless us! and Amen, the other;

As if they had seen me, with these hangman's hands,

Listening their fear—I could not say, Amen, When they did say, God bless us.

Lady M. Consider it not so deeply.

Macb. But wherefore could not I pronounce Amen?

I had most need of blessing, and Amen Stuck in my throat.

Lady M. These deeds must not be thought After these ways; so, it will make us mad.

Macb. Methought, I heard a voice cry, Sleep no more.

Macbeth does murder sleep, the innocent sleep;

Sleep, that knits up the ravel'd sleeve† of care,

The death of each day's life, sore labour's bath,

Balm of hurt minds, great nature's second course,

Chief nourisher in life's feast;—

Lady M. What do you mean?

Macb. Still it cried, Sleep no more! to all the house:

Glamis hath murder'd sleep; and therefore Cawdor

Shall sleep no more. Macbeth shall sleep no more!

Lady M. Who was it that thus cried? Why, worthythane,

You do unbend your noble strength, to think So brainsickly of things :—Go, get some water,

And wash this filthy witness from your hand.—Why did you bring these daggers from the place?

They must lie there: Go, carry them; and smear

The sleepy grooms with blood.

Macb. I'll go no more:

I am afraid to think what I have done;

Look on't again, I dare not.

Lady M. Infirm of purpose!

Give me the daggers: The sleeping and the dead

Are but as pictures: 'tis the eye of childhood,

That fears a painted devil. If he do bleed,

I'll gild the faces of the grooms withal,

For it must seem their guilt.

[Exit. Knocking within.]

Macb. Whence is that knocking?

* As if.

† Sleeve is unwrought silk.

How is't with me, when every noise appals me? What hands are here? Ha! they pluck out mine eyes!

Will all great Neptune's ocean wash this blood Clean from my hand? No; this my hand will rather

The multitudinous seas incarnadine, Making the green—one red.

Re-enter Lady MACBETH.

Lady M. My hands are of your colour; but I shame

[knocking]

To wear a heart so white. [Knock.] I hear a

At the south entry :—retire we to our chamber: A little water clears us of this deed:

How easy is it then? Your constancy Hath left you unattended.—[Knocking] Hark!

more knocking: Get on your nightgown, lest occasion call us, And show us to be watchers :—Be not lost

So poorly in your thoughts.

Macb. To know my deed,—'twere best not know myself. [Knock.]

Wake Duncan with thy knocking! Ay, 'would thou could'st! [Cries.]

SCENE III.—The same.

Enter a PORTER.—[Knocking within.]

Port. Here's a knocking, indeed! If a man were porter of hell-gate, he should have old* turning the key. [Knocking.] Knock, knock, knock: Who's there, i'the name of Belzebub?

Here's a farmer, that hanged himself on the expectation of plenty: Come in time; have napkins† enough about you; here you'll sweat for't. [Knocking.] Knock, knock: Who's there, i'the devil's name? 'Faith, here's an equivocator, that could swear in both the scales against either scale; who committed treason enough for God's sake, yet could not equivocate to heaven:

O come in, equivocator. [Knocking.] Knock, knock, knock: Who's there? 'Faith here's an English tailor come hither for stealing out of a French hose: Come in, tailor; here you may roast your goose. [Knocking.] Knock, knock: Never at quiet! What are you?—But this place is too cold for hell. I'll devil-porter it no further: I had thought to have let in some of all professions, that go the primrose way to the everlasting bonfire. [Knocking.] Anon, anon; I pray you, remember the porter.

[Opens the gate.]

Enter MACDUFF and LENOX.

Macd. Was it so late, friend, ere you went That you do lie so late? [to bed,]

Port. 'Faith, Sir, we were carousing till the second cock:† and drink, Sir, is a great provoker of three things.

Macd. What three things does drink especially provoke?

Port. Marry, Sir, nose-painting, sleep, and urine. Lechery, Sir, it provokes and unprovokes: it provokes the desire, but it takes away the performance: Therefore, much drink may be said to be an equivocator with lechery: it makes him, and it mars him; it sets him on, and it takes him off; it persuades him, and disheartens him; it makes him stand to, and not stand to: in conclusion, equivocates him in a sleep, and, giving him the lie, leaves him.

Macd. I believe, drink gave thee the lie last night.

Port. That it did, Sir, i'the very throat o' me: But I requited him for his lie; and, I think, being too strong for him, though he took up my legs sometime, yet I made a shift to cast

him.

Macd. Is thy master stirring?—Our knocking has awak'd him; here he comes.

* Frequent.

† Handkerchiefs.

‡ Cockcrowing.

Enter MACBETH.

Len. Good-morrow, noble Sir!

Macb. Good-morrow, both!

Macd. Is the king stirring, worthy thane?

Macb. Not yet.

Macd. He did command me to call timely on him;

I have almost slipp'd the hour.

Macb. I'll bring you to him.

Macd. I know, this is a joyful trouble to you: But yet 'tis one.

Macb. The labour we delight in, physics pain.

This is the door.

Macd. I'll make so bold to call,
For 'tis my limited service.*

[Exit MACDUFF.]

Len. Goes the king
From hence to-day?

Macb. He does:—He did appoint it so.

Len. The night has been unruly: Where we lay,
Our chimneys were blown down: and, as they say,

Lamentings heard i'the air; strange screams of death;

And prophesying, with accents terrible,
Of dire combustion and confus'd events,

New hatch'd to the woeful time. The obscure bird

Clamour'd the livelong night: some say, the earth

Was feverous, and did shake.

Macb. 'Twas a rough night.

Len. My young remembrance cannot parallel
A fellow to it.

Re-enter MACDUFF.

Macd. O horror! horror! horror! Tongue,
nor heart,

Cannot conceive, nor name thee!†

Macb. Len. What's the matter?

Macd. Confusion now hath made his masterpiece!

Most sacrilegious murder hath broke ope
The Lord's anointed temple, and stole thence
The life o'the building.

Macb. What is't you say? the life?

Len. Mean you his majesty?

Macd. Approach the chamber, and destroy your sight

With a new Gorgon:—Do not bid me speak;

See, and then speak yourselves.—Awake!
awake!

[Exeunt MACBETH and LENOX.]

Ring the alarm-bell:—Murder! and treason!

Banquo, and Donalbain! Malcolm! awake!

Shake off this downy sleep, death's counterfeit,
And look on death itself!—up, up, and see

The great doom's image!—Malcolm! Banquo!

As from your graves rise up, and walk like sprites,

To countenance this horror!

[Bell rings.]

Enter Lady MACBETH.

Lady M. What's the business,

That such a hideous trumpet calls to parley

The sleepers of the house? speak, speak,—

Macd. O gentle lady,

'Tis not for you to hear what I can speak:

The repetition in a woman's ear,

Would murder as it fell.—O Banquo! Banquo!

Enter BANQUO.

Our royal master's murder'd!

Lady M. Woe, alas!

What, in our house?

Ban. Too cruel any where.—

* Appointed service.

† The use of two negatives, not to make an affirmative, but to deny more strongly, is common in our literature.

Dear Duff, I prythee, contradict thyself,
And say, it is not so.

Re-enter MACBETH and LENOX.

Macb. Had I but died an hour before this chance,
I had liv'd a blessed time; for, from this instant,

There's nothing serious in mortality:

All is but toys: renown, and grace, is dead;

The wine of life is drawn, and the meer lees

Is left this vault to brag of.

Enter MALCOLM and DONALBAIN.

Don. What is amiss?

Macb. You are, and do not know it:

The spring, the head, the fountain of your
blood

Is stopp'd; the very source of it is stopp'd.

Macd. Your royal father's murder'd.

Mal. Oh! by whom?

Len. Those of his chamber, as it seem'd, had done't: [blood,

Their hands and faces were all badg'd with
So were their daggers, which, unwip'd, we found

Upon their pillows:

They star'd, and were distracted; no man's life
Was to be trusted with them.

Macb. O yet I do repent me of my fury,

That I did kill them.

Macd. Wherefore did you so?

Macb. Who can be wise, amar'd, temperate and furious,

Loyal and neutral, in a moment? No man:

The expedition of my violent love

Out-ran the pauser reason.—Here lay Duncan,

His silver skin lac'd with his golden blood;

And his gash'd stubs look'd like a breach in
nature,

For ruin's wasteful entrance: there, the murderers,

Steep'd in the colours of their trade, their daggers [refrain,

Unmannerly breech'd with gore: * Who could

That had a heart to love, and in that heart

Courage, to make his love known?

Lady M. Help me hence, ho!

Macd. Look to the lady.

Mal. Why do we hold our tongues,

That most may claim this argument for ours?

Don. What should be spoken here,

Where our fate, hid within an augre-hole,

May rush and seize us? Let's away; our tears

Are not yet brew'd.

Mal. Nor our strong sorrow on

The foot of motion.

Ban. Look to the lady:—

[Lady MACBETH is carried out.]

And when we have our naked frailties hid,

That suffer in exposure, let us meet,

And question this most bloody piece of work,

To know it further. Fears and scruples shake

us:

In the great hand† of God I stand; and, thence

Against the undivulg'd pretence‡ I fight

Of treasonous malice.

Macb. And so do I.

All. So all.

Macb. Let's briefly put on manly readiness,

And meet i'the hall together.

All. Well contented.

[Exeunt all but MAL. and DON.]

Mal. What will you do? Let's not consort with them:

To show an unfelt sorrow, is an office

Which the false man does easy: I'll to England.

Don. To Ireland, I; our separated fortune

Shall keep us both the safer: where we are,

* Covered with blood to their hilt.

† Power.

‡ Intention.

There's daggers in men's smiles: the near in blood,
The nearer bloody.

Mal. This murderous shaft that's shot,
Hath not yet lighted; and our safest way
Is, to avoid the aim. Therefore, to horse;
And let us not be dainty of leave-taking,
But shift away: There's warrant in that theft
Which steals itself, when there's no mercy left.
[Exeunt.]

SCENE IV.—Without the Castle.

Enter ROSS and an Old Man.

Old Man. Threescore and ten I can remember well:
Within the volume of which time, I have seen
Hours dreadful and things strange; but this sore night
Hath trifled former knowings.

Rosse. Ah! good father, [act,
Thou see'st, the heavens, as troubled with man's Threaten his bloody stage: by the clock, 'tis day,
And yet dark night strangles the travelling lamp:

Is it night's predominance, or the day's shame,
That darkness does the face of earth entomb,
When living light should kiss it?

Old Man. 'Tis unnatural,
Even like the deed that's done. On Tuesday
last,

A falcon, tow'ring in her pride of place,
Was by a mousing owl hawk'd at, and kill'd.

Rosse. And Duncan's horses, (a thing most strange and certain,) Beauteous and swift, the minions of their race, [out,
Turn'd wild in nature, broke their stalls, flung Contending 'gainst obedience, as they would make
War with mankind.

Old Man. 'Tis said, they eat each other.

Rosse. They did so; to the amazement of mine eyes,
That look'd upon't. Here comes the good Macduff:—

Enter MACDUFF.

How goes the world Sir, now?

Macd. Why, see you not?

Rosse. Is't known who did this more than bloody deed?

Macd. Those that Macbeth hath slain.

Rosse. Alas, the day!

What good could they pretend?

Macd. They were suborn'd:
Malcolm, and Donalbain, the king's two sons,
Are stol'n away and fled; which puts upon
them
Suspicion of the deed.

Rosse. 'Gainst nature still:
Thrifless ambition, that will ravin up
Thine own life's means!—Then 'tis most like,
The sovereignty will fall upon Macbeth.

Macd. He is already nam'd; and gone to Scone,
To be invested.

Rosse. Where is Duncan's body?

Macd. Carried to Colmes-hill;†
The sacred storehouse of his predecessors,
And guardian of their bones.

Rosse. Will you to Scone?

Macd. No, cousin, I'll to Fife.

Rosse. Well, I will thither.

Macd. Well, may you see things well done
there;—adieu!—

Lest our old robes sit easier than our new!

Rosse. Father, farewell.

Old Man. God's benison go with you: and with those
That would make good of bad, and friends of
foes!

[Exeunt.]

* Intend to themselves.

† Colm-hill is the famous Iona, one of the west.

ACT III.

SCENE I.—Fores.—A Room in the Palace.

Enter BANQUO.

Ban. Thou hast it now—King, Cawdor, Glamis, all,
As the weird women promis'd; and, I fear,
Thou play'st most foully for't: yet it was said,
It should not stand in thy posterity;
But that myself should be the root and father
Of many kings. If there come truth from
them,

(As upon thee, Macbeth, their speeches shine,)
Why, by the verities on thee made good,
May they not be my oracles as well,
And set me up in hope? But hush; no more.

*Snets sounded. Enter MACBETH, as King;
Lady MACBETH, as Queen; LENOX, ROSS, Lords, Ladies, and Attendants.*

Macb. Here's our chief guest.

Lady M. If he had been forgotten,
It had been as a gap in our great feast,
And all things unbecomin.

Macb. To night we hold a solemn supper, Sir,
And I'll request your presence.

Ban. Let your highness
Command upon me; to the which, my duties
Are with a most indissoluble tie
For ever knit.

Macb. Ride you this afternoon?

Ban. Ay, my good lord.

Macb. We should have else desir'd your good advice [rous,
(Which still hath been both grave and prosper-in this day's council; but we'll take to-morrow.
Is't far you ride?

Ban. As far, my lord, as will fill up the time
'Twixt this and supper: go not my horse the
better,
I must become a borrower of the night.
For a dark hour or twain.

Macb. Fail not our feast.

Ban. My lord, I will not.

Macb. We hear our bloody cousins are bestow'd
In England and in Ireland; not confessing
Their cruel parricide, filling their hearers
With strange invention: But of that to-morrow;
When, therewithal, we shall have cause of state,
Craving us jointly. Hie you to horse: Adieu, Till you return at night. Goes Fleance with
you?

Ban. Ay, my good lord: our time does call upon us.

Macb. I wish your horses swift and sure of foot;

And so I do commend * you to their backs.

Farewell— [Exit BANQUO.

Let every man be master of his time
Till seven at night; to make society
The sweeter welcome, we will keep ourself Till supper-time alone: while then, God be with
you.

[*Exeunt Lady MACBETH, Lords,
Ladies, &c.*]

Sirrah, a word: Attend those men our pleasure?

Atten. They are, my lord, without the palace
gate.

Macb. Bring them before us.—[Exit ATTEN.]
To be thus, is nothing;

But to be safely thus:—Our fears in Banquo
Stick deep; and in his royalty† of nature
Reigns that, which would be fear'd: 'Tis much he dares;

And, to that dauntless temper of his mind,
He hath a wisdom that doth guide his valour
To act in safety. There is none but he Whose being I do fear: and under him,
My genius is rebuk'd; as, it is said,

* Commit.

† Nobleness.

Mark Antony's was by Cesar. He chid the sisters,
When first they put the name of king upon me,
And bade them speak to him; then prophet-like,
'They hail'd him father to a line of kings:
Upon my head they plac'd a fruitless crown,
And put a barren sceptre in my gripe,
Thence to be wrench'd with an unlineal hand,
No son of mine succeeding. If it be so,
For Banquo's issue have I fil'd * my mind;
For them the gracious Duncan have I murder'd;
Put rancours in the vessel of my peace
Only for them; and mine eternal jewel
Given to the common enemy of man,
To make them kings, the seed of Banquo kings!
Rather than so, come, fate, into the list,
And champion me to the utterance! †—Who's there?—

Re-enter ATTENDANT, with two MURDERERS.
Now to the door, and stay there till we call.

[Exit ATTENDANT.]

Was it not yesterday we spoke together?

1 Mur. It was so, please your highness.

Macb. Well then, now

Have you consider'd of my speeches? Know,
That it was he, in the times past, which held you

So under fortune; which, you thought, had been
Our innocent self: this I made good to you
In our last conference; pass'd in probation ‡
with you,

How you were born in hand; § how cross'd; the instruments;

Who wrought with them; and all things else,
that might,

To half a soul, and a notion craz'd,

Say, Thus did Banquo.

1 Mur. You made it known to us.

Macb. I did so; and went further, which is
now

Our point of second meeting. Do you find
Your patience so predominant in your nature,
That you can let this go? Are you so gospell'd, ||

To pray for that good man and for his issue,
Whose heavy hand hath bow'd you to the grave,
And beggar'd yours for ever?

1 Mur. We are men, my liege.

Macb. Ay, in the catalogue ye go for men;
As hounds, and greyhounds, mongrels, spaniels,
curs,

Shoughs, ¶ water-rugs, and demi-wolves, are cleped **

All by the name of dogs: the valued file
Distinguishes the swift, the slow, the subtle,
The house-keeper, the hunter, every one
According to the gift which bounteous nature
Hath in him clos'd; whereby he does receive Particular addition, †† from the bill
That writes them all alike: and so of men.
Now, if you have a station in the file,
And not in the worst rank of manhood, say it;
And I will put that business in your bosoms,
Whose execution takes your enemy off;
Grapples you to the heart and love of us,
Who wear our health but sickly in his life,
Which in his death were perfect.

2 Mur. I am one, my liege,
Whom the vile blows and buffets of the world
Have so incens'd, that I am reckless ‡‡ what I do, to spite the world.

1 Mur. And I another,
So weary with disasters, tugg'd §§ with fortune,
That I would set my life on any chance,
To mend it or be rid on't.

* For defiled.

† Challenge me to extremities.

‡ Proved.

§ Deluded.

|| Are you so obedient to the precepts of the Gospel.

¶ Wolf-dogs.

 Called.

†† Fille.

‡‡ Careless.

§§ Worried.

Macb. Both of you
Know, Banquo was your enemy.

2 Mur. True, my lord.

Macb. So is he mine; and in such bloody distance, *

That every minute of his being thrusts
Against my near'st of life: And though I could With bare-fac'd power sweep him from my sight,

And bid my will avouch it; yet I must not,
For † certain friends that are both his and
mine,

Whose loves I may not drop, but wall his fall
Whom I myself struck down: and thence it is,
That I to your assistance do make love;
Masking the business from the common eye,
For sundry weighty reasons.

2 Mur. We shall, my lord,

Perform what you command us.

1 Mur. Though our lives—

Macb. Your spirits shine through you. Within this hour, at most,

I will advise you where to plant yourselves.
Acquaint you with the perfect spy o' the time,
The moment on't; for't must be done to-night,
And something from the palace; always thought,
That I require a clearness: And with him,
(To leave no rubs, nor botches, in the work,) I
Pleance his son, that keeps him company,
Whose absence is no less material to me
Than is his father's, must embrace the fate
Of that dark hour. Resolve yourselves apart;
I'll come to you anon.

2 Mur. We are resolv'd my lord.

Macb. I'll call upon you straight: abide within.

It is concluded:—Banquo, thy soul's flight,
If it find heaven, must find it out to-night.

[Exeunt.]

SCENE II.—The same.—Another Room.

Enter Lady MACBETH, and a SERVANT.

Lady M. Is Banquo gone from court?

Serv. Ay, madam, but returns again to-night.

Lady M. Say to the king, I would attend his leisure

For a few words.

Serv. Madam, I will.

[Exit.]

Lady M. Nought's had, all's spent,
Where our desire is got without content:
'Tis safer to be that which we destroy,
Than, by destruction, dwell in doubtful joy.

Enter MACBETH.

How now, my lord? why do you keep alone,
Of sorriest fancies your companions making?
Using those thoughts, which should indeed have died

With them they think on! Things without remedy,

Should be without regard: what's done, is done.

Macb. We have scotch'd the snake, not kill'd it; [malice]

She'll close, and be herself; whilst our poor
Remains in danger of her former tooth.

But let

The frame of things disjoint, both the worlds suffer,

Ere we will eat our meal in fear, and sleep

In the affliction of these terrible dreams,

That shake us nightly: Better be with the
dead,

Whom we, to gain our place, have sent to
peace,

Than on the torture of the mind to lie

In restless ecstasy. § Duncan is in his grave;

After life's fitful fever he sleeps well;

Treason has done his worst: nor steel, nor poison,

Malice domestic, foreign levy, nothing,

Can touch him further!

* Mortal enmity.

† Most melancholy

‡ Because of.

§ Agony.

Lady M. Come on ;
Gentle my lord, sleek o'er your rugged looks ;
Be bright and jovial 'mong your guests to-night.

Macb. So shall I, love ; and so, I pray, be you :

Let your remembrance apply to Banquo ;
Present him eminence,* both with eye and
Unsafe the while, that we [tongue :
Must have our honours in these muttering streams ;

And make our faces vizards to our hearts,
Disguising what they are.

Lady M. You must leave this.

Macb. O full of scorpions is my mind, dear wife !

Thou know'st that Banquo and his Fleance, lives.

Lady M. But in them nature's copy's not eterne.

Macb. there's comfort yet ; they are assailable ;

Then be thou jocund : Ere the bat hath flown
His cloister'd flight ; ere, to black Hecat's summons, [humans,

The shard-borne beetle,† with his drowy
Hath rung night's yawning peal, there shall be
A deed of dreadful note. [done

Lady M. What's to be done ?

Macb. Be innocent of the knowledge, dearest chuck,‡ [night

Till thou applaud the deed. Come, seeling§
Sharf up the tender eye of pitifol day ;
And, with thy bloody and invisible hand,
Cancel and tear to pieces that great bond
Which keeps me pale !—Light thickens ; and the crow

Makes wing to the rooky wood :
Good things of day begin to droop and drowse ;
Whiles night's black agents to their prey do rouse [still ;

Thou marv'lest at my words ; but hold thee Things, bad begun, make strong themselves by ill :

So prythee go with me. [Exeunt.

SCENE III.—The same.—A Park or Lawn, with a Gate leading to the Palace.

Enter three MURDERERS.

1 Mur. But who did bid thee join with us ?

2 Mur. Macbeth.

3 Mur. He needs not our mistrust ; since he delivers

Our offices, and what we have to do,
To the direction just.

1 Mur. Then stand with us.

The west yet glimmers with some streaks of
day :

Now spurs the lated traveller apace,
To gain the timely inn ; and near approaches
The subject of our watch.

3 Mur. Hark ! I hear horses.

Ban. [Within.] Give us a light there, ho !

2 Mur. Then it is he ; the rest

That are within the note of expectation,||
Already are i'the court.

1 Mur. His horses go about.

3 Mur. Almost a mile : but he does usually,
So all men do, from hence to the palace gate
Make it their walk.

Enter BANQUO and FLEANCE, a Servant with a torch preceding them.

2 Mur. A light, a light !

3 Mur. 'Tis he.

1 Mur. Stand to't.

Ban. It will be rain to-night.

1 Mur. Let it come down.

[Assaults BANQUO.

Ban. O treachery ! Fly, good Fleance, fly, fly,
Thou may'st revenge. O slave ! [fly :

[Dies. FLEANCE* and Servant escape.

3 Mur. Who did strike out the light ?

1 Mur. Was't not the way ?

3 Mur. There's but one down ; the son is fled

2 Mur. We have lost best half of our affair.

1 Mur. Well, let's away, and say how much is done. [Exeunt.

SCENE IV.—A Room of State in the Palace.

*A Banquet prepared. Enter MACBETH, Lady
MACBETH, ROSS, LENOX, LORDS, and AT-TENDANTS.*

Macb. You know your own degrees, sit down :
at first

And last, the hearty welcome.

Lords. Thanks to your majesty.

Macb. Ourself will mingle with society,
And play the humble host.

Our hostess keeps her state ; † but in best time,
We will require her welcome.

Lady M. Pronounce it for me, Sir, to all our
friends ;

For my heart speaks, they are welcome.

Enter first MURDERER, to the door

Macb. See, they encounter thee with their hearts' thanks :—

Both sides are even : Here I'll sit i'the midst :
Be large in mirth ; anon, we'll drink a measure
The table round.—There's blood upon thy face.

Mur. 'Tis Banquo's then.

Macb. 'Tis better thee without, than he within.
Is he despatch'd ?

Mur. My lord, his throat is cut ; that I did for him.

Macb. Thou art the best o'the cut-throats :
Yet he's good

That did the like for Fleance : if thou didst it,
Thou art the nonpareil.

Mur. Most royal Sir,
Fleance is 'scap'd.

Macb. Then comes my fit again : I had else been perfect ;

Whole as the marble, founded as the rock ;
As broad and general as the casing air : [in
But now, I am cabin'd, cribb'd, confin'd, bound
To saucy doubts and fears. But Banquo's safe ?

Mur. Ay, my good lord : safe in a ditch he bides,

With twenty trenched gashes on his head ;
The least a death to nature.

Macb. Thanks for that :— [fled,

There the grown serpent lies ; the worm, that's Hath nature that in time will venom breed,
No teeth for the present.—Get thee gone ; tomorrow

We'll hear, ourselves again. [Exit MURDERER.

Lady M. My royal lord,

You do not give the cheer : the feast is sold,
That is not often vouch'd, while 'tis a making,
'Tis given with welcome : To feed, were best
at home ;

From thence, the sance to meat is ceremony ;
Meeting were bare without it.

Macb. Sweet remembrancer !—

Now good digestion wait on appetite,
And health on both !

Len. May it please your highness sit ?

[The Ghost of BANQUO rises, and sits in MACBETH'S place.

Macb. Here had we now our country's honour roof'd,

Were the grac'd person of our Banquo present ;
Who may I rather challenge for unkindness,
Than pity for mischance !

Rosse. His absence, Sir, [highness Lays blame upon his promise. Please it your
To grace us with your royal company ?

Macb. The table's full.

* James I. was descended in a direct line from this son of Banquo, by a daughter of the prince of Wales.

† Continues in her chair of state.

* Do him the highest honours.

† The beetle borne in the air by its shanks or scaly wings. ‡ A term of endearment. § Blinding.

|| I. e. They who are set down in the list of guests, and expected to supper.

Len. Here's a place reserv'd, Sir.

Macb. Where?

Len. Here my lord. What is't that moves your highness?

Macb. Which of you have done this?

Lords. What, my good lord?

Macb. Thou can'st not say I did it: never Thy gory locks at me. [shake Rosse. Gentlemen, rise; his highness is not well.

Lady M. Sit, worthy friends:—my lord is often thus, [seat;

And hath been from his youth: 'pray you, keep The fit is momentary; upon a thought*

He will again be well: If much you note him, You shall offend him and extend his passion; † Feed, and regard him not.—Are you a man?

Macb. Ay, and a bold one that dare look on Which might appal the devil. [that Lady M. O proper stuff!

This is the very painting of your fear:

This is the air-drawn dagger, which, you said, Led you to Duncan. O these flaws ‡ and starts (Impostors to true fear,) would well become A woman's story at a winter's fire, Authoriz'd by her grandam. Shame itself!

Why do you make such faces? When all's done, You look but on a stool.

Macb. Pr'ythee, see there! behold! look! lo! how say you?— [too.—

Why, what care I? If thou canst nod, speak If charnel-houses and our graves must send Those that we bury, back, our monuments Shall be the maws of kites. [Ghost disappears.

Lady M. What! quite unmann'd in folly?

Macb. If I stand here, I saw him.

Lady M. Fle, for shame!

Macb. Blood hath been shed ere now †the olden time,

Ere human statute purg'd the gentle weal;

Ay, and since too, murders have been perform'd

Too terrible for the ear: the times have been, That, when the brains were out, the man would die,

And there an end: but now, they rise again, With twenty mortal murders on their crowns, And push us from our stools: This is more Than such a murder is. [strange Lady M. My worthy lord, Your noble friends do lack you.

Macb. I do forget:—

Do not muse ‡ at me, my most worthy friends; I have a strange infirmity, which is nothing To those that know me. Come, love and health to all;

Then I'll sit down:—Give me some wine, All full:—

I drink to the general joy of the whole table,

Ghost rises.

And to our dear friend Banquo, whom we miss;

Would he were here! to all and him, we thirst, And all to all. ¶

Lords. Our duties, and the pledge.

Macb. Avaunt! and quit my sight! Let the earth hide thee!

Thy bones are marrowless, thy blood is cold; Thou hast no speculation in those eyes Which thou dost glare with!

Lady M. Think of this, good peers, But as a thing of custom; 'tis no other; Only it spoils the pleasure of the time.

Macb. What man dare, I dare:

Approach thou like the rugged Russian bear, The arm'd rhinoceros, or the Hyrcan Tiger, Take any shape but that, and my firm nerves Shall never tremble: Or, be alive again, And dare me to the desert with thy sword;

If trembling I inhibit* thee, protest me

The baby of a girl. Hence, horrible shadow! [Ghost disappears.

Unreal mockery, hence!—Why, so;—being gone,

I am a man again. Pray you, sit still.

Lady M. You have displac'd the mirth, broke the good meeting,

With most admir'd disorder.

Macb. Can such things be,

And overcome † us like a summer's cloud,

Without our special wonder? You make me strange

Even to the disposition that I owe, ‡

When now I think you can behold such sights,

And keep the natural ruby of your cheeks,

When mine are blanch'd with fear.

Rosse. What sights, my lord?

Lady M. I pray you, speak not; he grows worse and worse;

Question enrages him: at once, good night:—

Stand not upon the order of your going,

But go at once.

Len. Good night, and better health

Attend his majesty!

Lady M. A kind good night to all!

[Exeunt LORDS and ATTENDANTS.

Macb. It will have blood; they say, blood will have blood:

Stones have been known to move, and trees to speak:

Augurs, and understood relations, have

By magot-pies, § and choughs, and rooks, brought forth

The secret'st man of blood.—What is the night?

Lady M. Almost at odds with morning, which is which.

Macb. How say'st thou, that Macduff denies this person,

At our great bidding?

Lady M. Did you send to him, Sir?

Macb. I hear it by the way; but I will send: There's not a one ¶ of them, but in his house

I keep a servant sec'd. I will to-morrow,

(Betimes I will,) unto the weird sisters: More shall they speak; for now I am bent to know, [good, By the worst means, the worst: for mine own

All causes shall give way; I am in blood Stepped in so far, that, should I wade no more,

Returning were as tedious as go o'er:

Strange things I have in head, that will to hand;

Which must be acted, ere they may be scann'd. §

Lady M. You lack the season of all natures, sleep.

Macb. Come, we'll to sleep: my strange and self-abuse

Is the initiate fear that wants hard use:—

We are yet but young in deed. [Exeunt.

SCENE V.—The Heath.

Thunder. Enter HECATE, meeting the three WITCHES.

1 Witch. Why, how now, Hecate? you look angrily.

Hec. Have I not reason, beldams as you are,

Saucy, and overbold? How did you dare

To trade and traffic with Macbeth,

In riddles and affairs of death;

And I, the mistress of your charms,

The close contriver of all harms,

Was never call'd to bear my part,

Or show the glory of our art?

And, which is worse, all you have done

Hath been but for a wayward son.

Spiteful and wrathful; who, as others do,

Loves for his own ends, not for you.

But make amends now: Get you gone,

And at the pit of Acheron,

* As quick as thought.

† Prolong his suffering.

‡ Sudden gusts.

§ Wonder.

¶ I. e. All good wishes to all.

* Forbid.

† Possess.

‡ An individual.

† Pass over.

§ Magician.

¶ Examined nicely.

Meet me i'the morning : thither he
Will come to know his destiny.
Your vessels and your spells provide,
Your charms and every thing beside :
I am for the air ; this night I'll spend
Unto a dismal-fatal end.
Great business must be wrought ere noon :
Upon the corner of the moon
There hangs a vaporous drop profound : *
I'll catch it ere it come to ground :
And that, distill'd by magic slights
Shall raise such artificial sprights,
As, by the strength of their illusion
Shall draw him on to his confusion :
He shall spurn fate, scorn death, and bear
His hopes 'bove wisdom, grace, and fear :
And you all know, security
Is mortal's chiefest enemy.

Song. [Within.] Come away, come away, &c.
Hark, I am call'd ; my little spirit, see,
Sits in a foggy cloud, and stays for me.

[Exit.]
1 Witch. Come, let's make haste ; she'll soon be back again.

[Exeunt.]

SCENE VI.—Fores.—A Room in the Palace.

Enter LENOX and another LORD.

Len. My former speeches have but hit your thoughts,
Which can interpret further : only, I say,
Things have been strangely borne : The gracious
Duncan
Was pitied of Macbeth :—marry, he was dead :—
And the right-valliant Banquo walk'd too late ;
Whom, you may say, if it please you, Fleance
kill'd,
For Fleance fled. Men must not walk too late.
Who cannot want the thought, how monstrous
It was for Malcolm, and for Donalbain,
To kill their gracious father ? damned fact !
How it did grieve Macbeth ! did he not straight,
In pious rage, the two delinquents tear,
That were the slaves of drink, and thralls of
sleep ?
Was not that nobly done ? Ay, and wisely too ;
For 'twould have anger'd any heart alive,
To hear the men deny it. So that, I say,
He has borne all things well : and I do think,
That, had he Duncan's sons under his key,
(As, an't please heaven, he shall not,) they should find
What 'twere to kill a father ; so should Fleance.
But, peace !—for from broad words, and cause
he fail'd
His presence at the tyrant's feast, I hear,
Macduff lives in disgrace : Sir, can you tell
Where he bestows himself ?

Lord. The son of Duncan,
From whom this tyrant holds the due of birth
Lives in the English court ; and is receiv'd
Of the most pious Edward with such grace,
That the malevolence of fortune nothing
Takes from his high respect : Thither Macduff
Is gone to pray the holy king, on his aid
To wake Northumberland and warlike Siward :
That, by the help of these, (with Him above
To ratify the work,) we may again
Give to our tables meat, sleep to our nights ;
Free from our feasts and banquets bloody
knives ;
Do faithful homage, and receive free honours, †
All which we pine for now : And this report
Hath so exasperate ‡ the king, that he Prepares for some attempt of war.

Len. Sent he to Macduff ?

Lord. He did : and with an absolute, Sir,
not I,
The cloudy messenger turns me his back,

L.c. A drop that has deep or hidden qualities.
† Honours freely bestowed.
‡ For exasperated.

And hums, as who should say, *You'll rue the
time*

That clogs me with this answer.

Len. And that well might Advise him to a caution, to hold what distance
His wisdom can provide. Some holy angel
Fly to the court of England, and unfold
His message ere he come ; that a swift blessing
May soon return to this our suffering country
Under a hand accurs'd !

Lord. My prayers with him ! [Exeunt.]

ACT IV.

SCENE I.—A dark Cave.—In the middle, a
Cauldron boiling.

Thunder. Enter the three WITCHES.

1 Witch. Thrice the brinded cat hath mew'd.

2 Witch. Thrice ; and once the hedge-pig whin'd.

3 Witch. Harper cries :—'Tis time, 'tis time.

1 Witch. Round about the cauldron go ;

In the poison'd entrails throw.—

Toad, that under coldest stone,

Days and nights hast thirty-one

Swelter'd * venom sleeping got,

Boil thou first i'the charmed pot !

All. Double, double toil and trouble ;

Fire, burn ; and, cauldron, bubble.

2 Witch. Fillet of a fenny snake,

In the cauldron boil and bake :

Eye of newt, and toe of frog,

Wool of bat, and tongue of dog,

Adder's fork, and blind-worm's sting,

Lizard's leg, and owlet's wing,

For a charm of powerful trouble,

Like a hell-broth boil and bubble.

All. Double, double toil and trouble ;

Fire, burn ; and, cauldron, bubble.

3 Witch. Scale of dragon, tooth of wolf ;

Witches' mummy ; maw and gulf, †

Of the ravin'd ‡ salt-sea shark ;

Root of hemlock, digg'd i'the dark ;

Liver of blaspheming Jew ;

Gall of goat and slips of yew,

Silver'd in the moon's eclipse ;

Nose of Turk, and Tartar's lips ;

Finger of birth-strangled babe,

Ditch-deliver'd by a drab,

Make the gruel thick and slab :

Add thereto a tiger's chandron, §

For the ingredients of our cauldron.

All. Double, double toil and trouble ;

Fire, burn ; and, cauldron, bubble.

2 Witch. Cool it with a baboon's blood,

Then the charm is firm and good.

Enter HECATE, and the other three WITCHES.

Hec. Oh ! well done ! I commend your
pains ;

And every one shall share i'the gains.

And now about the cauldron sing,

Like elves and fairies in a ring,

Enchanting all that you put in.

SONG.

Black spirits and white,

Red spirits and grey ;

Mingle, mingle, mingle,

You that mingle may.

2 Witch. By the pricking of my thumbs,
Something wicked this way comes :—
Open, locks, whoever knocks.

* This word is employed to signify that the animal was hot and sweating with venom, although sleeping under a cold stone.

† The throat.

‡ Ravenous.

§ Entrails.

Enter MACBETH.

Macb. How now, you secret, black, and midnight hags?
What is't you do?

All. A deed without a name.

Macb. I conjure you, by that which you profess, (Howe'er you come to know it,) answer me:
Though you untie the winds, and let them fight Against the churches; though the yesty^{*} waves
Confound and swallow navigation up;
Though bladed corn be lodg'd,† and trees blown
down;
Though castles topple‡ on their warders'
heads;
Though palaces and pyramids do slope
Their heads to their foundations; though the treasure
Of nature's germins § tumble all together,
Even till destruction sicken, answer me
To what I ask you.

1 Witch. Speak.

2 Witch. Demand.

3 Witch. We'll answer.

1 Witch. Say, if thou'd'st rather hear it from our mouths,
Or from our masters'?

Macb. Call them, let me see them.

1 Witch. Pour in sow's blood, that hath eaten

Her nine farrow; grease, that's sweaten
From the murderer's gibbet, throw
Into the flame.

All. Come, high, or low;
Thyself, and office, desfly || show.

Thunder. An APPARITION of an Armed
Head rises.

Macb. Tell me, thou unknown power,—

1 Witch. He knows thy thought;
Hear his speech, but say thou nought.

App. Macbeth! Macbeth! Macbeth! beware
Macduff;
Beware the thane of Fife.—Dismiss me:—Enough.

[Descends.]

Macb. Whate'er thou art, for thy good caution, thanks;
Thou hast harp'd ¶ my fear aright:—But one word more:

1 Witch. He will not be commanded: Here's another,
More potent than the first.

Thunder.—An APPARITION of a Bloody Child rises.

App. Macbeth! Macbeth! Macbeth!—

Macb. Had I three ears, I'd hear thee.

App. Be bloody, bold,
And resolute: laugh to scorn the power of man,
For none of woman born shall harm Macbeth.

[Descends.]

Macb. Then live, Macduff; What need I fear
of thee?
But yet I'll make assurance double sure
And take a bond of fate: thou shalt not live;
That I may tell pale-hearted fear, it lies,
And sleep in spite of thunder.—What is this,

Thunder.—An APPARITION of a Child Crowned, with a Tree in his Hand, rises.

That rises like the issue of a king;
And wears upon his baby brow the round
And top of sovereignty? **

All. Listen, but speak not.

App. Be lion-mettled, proud; and take no care

* Frothy.

† Laid flat by wind or rain.

‡ Tumble.

§ Seeds which have begun to sprout. | Adroitly.
¶ Touched on a passion as a harper touches a string.

 The round is that part of a crown which encircles
the head: the top is the ornament which rises above
it.

Who chafes, who frets, or where conspirers are:
Macbeth shall never vanquish'd be, until
Great Birnam wood to high Dunsinane hill
Shall come against him. [Descends.]

Macb. That will never be;
Who can impress the forest; * bid the tree
Unfix his earth-bound root? sweet bodement! †
good!

Rebellious head, rise never, till the wood
Of Birnam rise, and our high plac'd Macbeth
Shall live the lease of nature, pay his breath
To time and mortal custom.—Yet my heart Throbs to know one thing; Tell me, (if your
art

Can tell so much,) shall Banquo's issue ever
Reign in this kingdom?

All. Seek to know no more.

Macb. I will be satisfied: deny me this,
And an eternal curse fall on you! Let me
know:—

Why sinks that cauldron? and what noise † is this? [Hautboys.]

1 Witch. Show! 2 Witch. Show! 3 Witch.
Show!

All. Show his eyes, and grieve his heart;
Come like shadows, so depart.

Eight Kings appear, and pass over the Stage in order; the last with a Glass in his hand; BANQUO following.

Macb. Thou art too like the spirit of Banquo;
down!

Thy crown does sear mine eye-balls:—And thy hair,

Thou other gold-bound brow, is like the first:—
A third is like the former:—Filthy hags!

Why do you show me this?—A fourth?—Start,
eyes!

What! will the line stretch out to the crack of
doom? ‡

Another yet?—A seventh?—I'll see no more:—
And yet the eighth appears, who bears a glass,
Which shows me many more; and some I see,
That two-fold balls and treble scepters carry:
Horrible sight!—Ay, now, I see 'tis true;
For the blood-bolter'd § Banquo smiles upon
me,

And points at them for his.—What, is this so?

1 Witch. Ay, Sir, all this is so:—But why Stands Macbeth thus amazedly?—

Come, sisters, cheer we up his spirits, |
And show the best of our delights;
I'll charm the air to give a sound,
While you perform the antique round:

That this great king may kindly say,
Our duties did his welcome pay.

[Music. The WITCHES dance, and vanish.]

Macb. Where are they? Gone?—Let this pernicious hour

Stand aye accursed in the calendar!—
Come in, without there!

Enter LENOX.

Len. What's your grace's will?

Macb. Saw you the weird sisters?

Len. No, my lord.

Macb. Came they not by you?

Len. No, indeed, my lord.

Macb. Infected be the air whereon they ride;
And damn'd all those that trust them!—I did
bear

The galloping of horse: Who was't came by?

Len. 'Tis two or three, my lord, that bring you word,

Macduff is fled to England.

Macb. Fled to England?

Len. Ay, my good lord.

Macb. Time, thou anticipat'st ¶ my dread exploits:

* Who can command the forest to serve him like a soldier impressed.

† Music.

‡ The dissolution of nature.

§ Besmeared with blood.

| I. e. Spirits.

¶ Preventest, by taking away the opportunity.

The flighty purpose never is o'ertook,
Unless the deed go with it: From this moment,
The very firstlings of my heart shall be
The firstlings of my hand. And even now
To crown my thoughts with acts, be it thought and done:

The castle of Macduff I will surprise;
Seize upon Fife; give to the edge o'the sword
His wife, his babes, and all unfortunate souls
That trace his line. No boasting like a fool;
This deed I'll do, before this purpose cool:
But no more sights!—Where are these gentle-
men?

Come, bring me where they are.

[Exeunt.]

SCENE II.—Fife.—A Room in MACDUFF'S
Castle.

Enter Lady MACDUFF, her SON, and ROSS.

L. Macd. What had he done, to make him fly the land?

Rosse. You must have patience, madam.

L. Macd. He had none:

His flight was madness: When our actions do
not,

Our fears do make us traitors.†

Rosse. You know not,
Whether it was his wisdom, or his fear.

L. Macd. Wisdom! to leave his wife, to leave his babes,

His mansion, and his titles, in a place
From whence himself does fly? He loves us
not;

He wants the natural touch:‡ for the poor wren
The most diminutive of birds, will fight, §

Her young ones in her nest, against the owl.

All is the fear, and nothing is the love;

As little is the wisdom, where the flight

So runs against all reason.

Rosse. My dearest coz,
I pray you, school yourself: But, for your husband,

He is noble, wise, judicious, and best knows
The fits o'the season. I dare not speak much further:

But cruel are the times, when we are traitors,
And do not know ourselves; when we hold rumour

From what we fear, yet know not what we
fear;

But float upon a wild and violent sea,
Each way, and move.—I take my leave of you:
Shall not be long but I'll be here again:

Things at the worst will cease, or else climb upward

To what they were before.—My pretty cousin,
Blessing upon you!

L. Macd. Father'd he is, and yet he's fatherless.

Rosse. I am so much a fool, should I stay
longer,

It would be my disgrace, and your discomfort:
I take my leave at once. [Exit ROSSE.]

L. Macd. Sirrah,‡ your father's dead;
And what will you do now? How will you live?

Son. As birds do, mother.

L. Macd. What, with worms and flies?

Son. With what I get, I mean; and so do
they.

L. Macd. Poor bird! thou'd'st never fear the net, nor line,
The pit-fall nor the gin.

Son. Why should I, mother? Poor birds they are not set for.

My father is not dead, for all your saying.

L. Macd. Yes, he is dead; how wilt thou do for a father?

Son. Nay, how wilt you do for a husband?

L. Macd. Why, I can buy me twenty at any market.

Son. Then you'll buy 'em to sell again.

L. Macd. Thou speak'st with all thy wit;
and yet I faith,

With wit enough for thee.

Son. Was my father a traitor, mother?

L. Macd. Ay, that he was.

Son. What is a traitor?

L. Macd. Why, one that swears and lies.

Son. And be all traitors, that do so?

L. Macd. Every one that does so, is a traitor, and must be hanged.

Son. And must they all be hanged, that swear and lie?

L. Macd. Every one.

Son. Who must hang them?

L. Macd. Why, the honest men.

Son. Then the liars and swearers are fools:
for there are liars and swearers enough to beat the honest men, and hang up them.

L. Macd. Now, God help thee, poor monkey!
But how wilt thou do for a father?

Son. If he were dead, you'd weep for him:
if you would not, it were a good sign that I should quickly have a new father.

L. Macd. Poor prattler! how thou talk'st.

Enter a MESSENGER.

Mess. Bless you, fair dame! I am not to you
known,

Though in your state of honour I am perfect.†
I doubt some danger does approach you nearly:

If you would take a homely man's advice,

Be not found here; hence, with your little ones.

To fright you thus, methinks, I am too savage;
To do worse to you, were fell cruelty,

Which is too nigh your person. Heaven preserve you!

I dare abide no longer. [Exit MESSENGER.]

L. Macd. Whither should I fly?

I have done no harm. But I remember now
I am in this earthly world; where, to do harm,

Is often laudable; to do good, sometime,
Accounted dangerous folly: Why then, alas!

Do I put up that womanly defence,
To say I have done no harm?—What are these faces?

Enter MURDERERS.

Mur. Where is your husband?

L. Macd. I hope in no place so unsanctified,
Where such as thou may'st find him.

Mur. He's a traitor.

Son. Thou ly'st, thou shag-ear'd villain.

Mur. What, you egg? [Stabbing him.]
Young fry of treachery!

Son. He has killed me, mother;

Rup away, I pray you. [Dies.]
[Exit Lady MACDUFF, crying murder, and pursued by the MURDERERS.]

SCENE III.—England.—A Room in the King's Palace.

Enter MALCOLM and MACDUFF.

Mal. Let us seek out some desolate shade, and there

Weep our sad bosoms empty.

Macd. Let us rather

Hold fast the mortal sword; and, like good
men,

Bestride our downfall'n birthdom:† Each new New widows howl: new orphans cry; new sorrows

Strike heaven on the face, that it resounds

As if it felt with Scotland, and yell'd out

Like syllable of dolour.

Mal. What I believe, I'll wail;

* I am perfectly acquainted with your rank.

† Birthright.

‡ Follow.

† I. e. Our flight is considered as evidence of our treason. ‡ Natural affection. † Fight for. § Sirrah was not, in our author's time, a term of reproach.

What know, believe; and, what I can redress,
As I shall find the time to friend,* I will.
What you have spoke, it may be so; perchance,
This tyrant, whose sole name blisters our
tongues,
Was once thought honest: you have lov'd him
well;

He hath not touch'd you yet. I am young;
but something
You may deserve of him through me; and wisdom

To offer up a weak, poor, innocent lamb,
To appease an angry god.

Macd. I am not treacherous.

Mal. But Macbeth is.

A good and virtuous nature may recoil,
In an imperial charge.† But 'crave your pardon;

That which you are, my thoughts cannot trans-
pose:

Angels are bright still, though the brightest fell;
Though all things foul would wear the brows of
grace,

Yet grace must still look so.

Macd. I have lost my hopes.

Mal. Perchance, even there, where I did find my doubts.

Why in that rawness left you wife and child, (Those precious motives, those strong knots of love,)

Without leave taking?—I pray you,
Let not my jealousies be your dishonours,
But mine own safeties:—You may be rightly just,

Whatever I shall think.

Macd. Bleed, bleed, poor country!
Great tyranny, lay thou thy basis sure,
For goodness dares not check thee! wear thou thy wrongs,

Thy title is affect'd!‡—Fare thee well, lord:
I would not be the villain that thou think'st
For the whole space that's in the tyrant's grasp,

And the rich east to boot.

Mal. Be not offended:

I speak not as in an absolute fear of you.
I think, our country sinks beneath the yoke;
It weeps, it bleeds; and each new day a gash is added to her wounds: I think, withal,
There would be hands uplifted in my right;
And here, from gracious England, have I offer
Of goodly thousands: But, for all this,
When I shall tread upon the tyrant's head,
Or wear it on my sword, yet my poor country
Shall have more vices than it had before;
More suffer, and more sundry ways than ever,
By him that shall succeed.

Macb. What should he be?

Mal. It is myself I mean: in whom I know
All the particulars of vice so grafted,
That, when they shall be open'd, black Macbeth
Will seem as pure as snow; and the poor state
Esteem him as a lamb, being compar'd
With my confineless harms.

Macd. Not in the legions
Of horrid hell, can come a devil more damn'd
In evils to top Macbeth.

Mal. I grant him bloody,
Luxurious, § avaricious, false, deceitful,
Sudden, ¶ malicious, smacking of every sin
That has a name: But there's no bottom, none,
In my voluptuousness: your wives, your daughters,

Your matrons, and your maids, could not fill up
The cistern of my lust; and my desire
All continent impediments would o'er-bear,
That did oppose my will: Better Macbeth,
Than such a one to reign.

Macd. Boundless intemperance

* Befriend.

† I. e. A good mind may recede from goodness in the execution of a royal commission.

‡ Legally settled by those who had the final adjudication.

§ Lascivious.

¶ Passionate.

In nature is a tyranny; it hath been
The untimely emptying of the happy throne,
And fall of many kings. But fear not yet
To take upon you what is yours: you may Convey your pleasures in a spacious plenty,
And yet seem cold, the time you may so hoodwink.

We have willing dames enough; there cannot be
That vulture in you to devour so many,
As will to greatness dedicate themselves,
Finding it so inclin'd.

Mal. With this, there grows,
In my most ill-compos'd affection, such
A stanchless avarice, that, were I king,
I should cut off the nobles for their lands:
Desire his jewels, and this other's house:
And my more-having would be as a sauce
To make me hunger more; that I should forge
Quarrels unjust against the good, and loyal,
Destroying them for wealth.

Macd. This avarice
Sticks deeper; grows with more pernicious root
Than summer-seeding lust: and it hath been
The sword of our slain kings: Yet do not fear;
Scotland hath foysons* to fill up your will,
Of your mere own: All these are portable,†
With other graces weigh'd.

Mal. But I have none: The king-becoming graces,

As justice, verity, temperance, stableness,
Bounty, perseverance, mercy, lowliness,
Devotion, patience, courage, fortitude,
I have no relish of them; but abound
In the division of each several crime,
Acting it many ways. Nay, had I power, I should

Pour the sweet milk of concord into hell,
Uproar the universal peace, confound
All unity on earth.

Macd. O Scotland! Scotland!

Mal. If such a one be fit to govern, speak:
I am as I have spoken.

Macd. Fit to govern!

No, not to live.—O nation miserable,
With an untitled tyrant bloody-scepter'd,
When shalt thou see thy wholesome days again?
Since that the truest issue of thy throne
By his own interdiction stands accurs'd,
And does blaspheme his breed?—Thy royal
father.

Was a most sainted king; the queen, that bore
thee

Often upon her knees than on her feet,
Died every day she lived. Fare thee well!
These evils thou repeat'st upon thyself,
Have banish'd me from Scotland.—O my
breast,

Thy hope ends here!

Mal. Macduff, this noble passion,
Child of integrity, hath from my soul
Wip'd the black scruples, reconcil'd my thoughts
To thy good truth and honour. Devilish Macbeth

By many of these trains hath sought to win me
Into his power; and modest wisdom plucks me
From over-credulous haste: ‡ But God above
Deal between thee and me! for even now
I put myself to thy direction, and Unspeak mine own detraction: here abjure
The taints and blames I laid upon myself,
For strangers to my nature. I am yet
Unknown to woman; never was forsworn;
Scarcely have coveted what was mine own;
At no time broke my faith; would not betray
The devil to his fellow; and delight
No less in truth than life: my first false speaking

Was this upon myself: What I am truly,
Is thine and my poor country's, to command
Whither, indeed, before thy here-approach,
Old Siward, with ten thousand warlike men,
All ready at a point, was setting forth:

* Plenty.

† May be endured.

‡ Over-hasty credulity.

Now we'll together: And the chance of goodness

Be like our warranted quarrel! Why are you silent?

Macd. Such welcome and unwelcome things at once,
'Tis hard to reconcile.

Enter a Doctor.

Mal. Well; more anon.—Comes the king forth, I pray you?

Doct. Ay, Sir: there are a crew of wretched souls,

That stay his cure: their malady convinces *
The great assay of art: but, at his touch,
Such sanctity hath heaven given his hand,
They presently amend.

Mal. I thank you, doctor. [Exit Doctor.]

Macd. What is the disease he means?

Mal. 'Tis call'd the evil:
A most miraculous work in this good king;
Which often, since my here-remain in England,
I have seen him do. How he solicits heaven,
Himself best knows: but strangely-visited people,
All swoln and ulcerous, pitiful to the eye,
The mere despair of surgery, he cures;
Hanging a golden stamp † about their necks,
Put on with holy prayers: and 'tis spoken,
To the succeeding royalty he leaves
The healing benediction. With this strange virtue,
He hath a heavenly gift of prophecy;
And sundry blessings hang about his throne,
That speak him full of grace.

Enter Rosse.

Macd. See, who comes here?

Mal. My countryman; but yet I know him not.

Macd. My ever-gentle cousin, welcome hither.

Mal. I know him now: Good God, betimes remove
The means that make us strangers!

Rosse. Sir, Amen.

Macd. Stands Scotland where it did?

Rosse. Alas, poor country;
Almost afraid to know itself! It cannot Be call'd our mother, but our grave: where nothing,
But who knows nothing, is once seen to smile;
Where sighs and groans, and shrieks that rend
the air,
Are made, not mark'd; where violent sorrow
seems

A modern ecstasy; ‡ the dead man's knell
Is there scarce ask'd, for who; and good men's Expire before the flowers in their caps, ¶ lives,
Dying, or ere they sicken.

Macd. O relation,
Too nice, and yet too true!

Mal. What is the newest grief?

Rosse. That of an hour's age doth hiss the speaker;
Each minute tremors a new one.

Macd. How does my wife?

Rosse. Why, well.

Macd. And all my children?

Rosse. Well too.

Macd. The tyrant has not batter'd at their peace?

Rosse. No; they were well at peace, when I did leave them.

Macd. Be not a niggard of your speech; How goes it?

Rosse. When I came hither to transport the tidings,
Which I have heavily borne, there ran a rumour
Of many worthy fellows that were out;
Which was to my belief witness'd the rather,

For that I saw the tyrant's power a-foot:
Now is the time of help; your eye in Scotland
Would create soldiers, make our women fight,
To doff * their dire distresses.

Mal. Be it their comfort,
We are coming thither; gracious England hath
Lent us good Siward and ten thousand men;
An older and a better soldier none
That Christendom gives out.

Rosse. 'Would I could answer
This comfort with the like! But I have words,
That would be howl'd out in the desert air,
Where hearing should not latch † them.

Macd. What concern they?
The general cause? or is it a fee-grief, ‡
Due to some single breast?

Rosse. No mind, that's honest,
But in it shares some woe; though the main part
Pertains to you alone.

Macd. If it be mine,
Keep it not from me, quickly let me have it.

Rosse. Let not your ears despise my tongue
for ever, ¶
Which shall possess them with the heaviest
That ever yet they heard.

Macd. Humph! I guess at it.

Rosse. Your castle is surpriz'd: your wife,
and babes,
Savagely slaughter'd: to relate the manner,
Were, on the quarry § of these murder'd deer,
To add the death of you.

Mal. Merciful heaven!—
What, man! ne'er pull your hat upon your brows;
Give sorrow words: the grief, that does not
speak,
Whispers the o'er-fraught heart, and bids it break.

Macd. My children too?

Rosse. Wife, children, servants, all
That could be found.

Macd. And I must be from thence!
My wife kill'd too?

Rosse. I have said.

Mal. Be comforted;
Let's make us medicines of our great revenge,
To cure this deadly grief,

Macd. He has no children.—All my pretty
ones?

Did you say, all?—O hell-kite!—All?
What, all my pretty chickens, and their dam,
At one fell swoop?

Mal. Dispute it like a man.

Macd. I shall do so;
But I must also feel it as a man:
I cannot but remember such things were,
That were not precious to me.—Did heaven
look on,

And would not take their part? Sinful Macduff,
They were all struck for thee! naught that I am,
Not for their own demerits, but for mine,
Fell slaughter on their souls: Heaven rest them
now!

Mal. Be this the whetstone of your sword:
let grief ¶
Convert to anger; blunt not the heart, enrage

Macd. O I could play the woman with mine
eyes,

And braggart with my tongue!—But, gentle
heaven,

Cut short all intermission; § front to front,
Bring thou this fiend of Scotland and myself;
Within my sword's length set him; if he 'scape,
Heaven forgive him too!

Mal. This tune goes manly.
Come, go we to the king; our power is ready;
Our lack is nothing but our leave: Macbeth
Is ripe for shaking, and the powers above Put on their instruments. Receive what cheer you may;

The night is long, that never finds the day.
[Exeunt.]

* Overpowers, subdues.

† A compliment to the Stuarts, who touched for the evil.

‡ Common distress of mind.

‡ A grief that has a single owner.

§ The game after it is killed.

¶ All pause.

ACT V.

SCENE I.—Dunsinane.—A Room in the Castle.

Enter a DOCTOR of Physic, and a waiting GENTLEWOMAN.

Doct. I have two nights watched with you, but can perceive no truth in your report. When was it she last walked?

Gent. Since his majesty went into the field, I have seen her rise from her bed, throw her night-gown upon her, unlock her closet, take forth paper, fold it, write upon it, read it, afterwards seal it, and again return to bed; yet all this while in a most fast sleep.

Doct. A great perturbation in nature! to receive at once the benefit of sleep, and do the effects of watching.—In this slumbry agitation, besides her walking, and other actual performances, what, at any time, have you heard her say?

Gent. That, Sir, which I will not report after her.

Doct. You may, to me; and 'tis most meet you should.

Gent. Neither to you, nor any one; having no witness to confirm my speech.

Enter Lady MACBETH, with a Taper.

Lo you, here she comes! This is her very guise; and, upon my life, fast asleep. Observe her; stand close.

Doct. How came she by that light?

Gent. Why, it stood by her: she has light by her continually; 'tis her command.

Doct. You see, her eyes are open.

Gent. Ay, but their sense is shut.

Doct. What is it she does now? Look, how she rubs her hands.

Gent. It is an accustomed action with her, to seem thus washing her hands; I have known her continue in this a quarter of an hour.

Lady M. Yet here's a spot.

Doct. Hark, she speaks: I will set down what comes from her, to satisfy my remembrance the more strongly.

Lady M. Out, damned spot! out, I say!—One; Two; Why, then 'tis time to do't:—Hell is murky!—Fie, my lord, fie! a soldier, and afeard! What need we fear who knows it, when none can call our power to account!—Yet who would have thought the old man to have had so much blood in him?

Doct. Do you mark that?

Lady M. The thane of Fife had a wife; Where is she now?—What, will these hands ne'er be clean?—No more o'that, my lord, no more o'that: you mar all with this starting.

Doct. Go to, go to; you have known what you should not.

Gent. She has spoke what she should not, I am sure of that: Heaven knows what she has known.

Lady M. Here's the smell of the blood still: all the perfumes of Arabia will not sweeten this little hand. Oh! oh! oh!

Doct. What a sight is there! The heart is sorely charged.

Gent. I would not have such a heart in my bosom, for the dignity of the whole body.

Doct. Well, well, well,—

Gent. 'Pray God, it be, Sir.

Doct. This disease is beyond my practice: Yet I have known those which have walked in their sleep, who have died holily in their beds.

Lady M. Wash your hands, put on your night gown; look not so pale:—I tell you yet again Banquo's buried; he cannot come out of his grave.

Doct. Even so!

Lady M. To bed, to bed; there's knocking at the gate. Come, come, come, come, give me your hand; What's done, cannot be undone: To bed, to bed, to bed. [Exit Lady MACBETH.]

* Dark.

Doct. Will she go now to bed?

Gent. Directly.

Doct. Foul whisperings are abroad: Unnatural deeds

Do breed unnatural troubles: Infected minds To their deaf pillows will discharge their secrets.

More needs she the divine, than the physician.—

God, God, forgive us all! Look after her; Remove from her the means of all annoyance, And still keep eyes upon her:—So, good night: My mind she has mated,* and mated my sight:

I think, but dare not speak.

Gent. Good night, good doctor. [Exeunt.]

SCENE II.—The Country near Dunsinane.

Enter with Drum and Colours, MENTETH, CATHNESS, ANGUS, LENOX, and Soldiers.

Ment. The English power is near, led on by Malcolm,

His uncle Siward, and the good Macduff. Revenges burn in them: for their dear causes Would, to the bleeding, and the grim alarm, Excite the mortified man.†

Ang. Near Birnam wood

Shall we well meet them; that way are they coming.

Cath. Who knows, if Donalbain be with his brother?

Len. For certain, Sir, he is not: I have a file

Of all the gentry; there is Siward's son, And many unrough youths, but even now Protest their first of manhood.

Ment. What does the tyrant?

Cath. Great Dunsinane he strongly fortifies: Some say, he's mad; others, that lesser harm him,

Do call it valiant fury: but, for certain, He cannot buckle his distemper'd cause Within the belt of rule.

Ang. Now does he feel

His secret murders sticking on his hands: Now minutely revolts upbraid his faith-breach; Those he commands, move only in command, Nothing in love: now does he feel the title Hang loose about him, like a giant's robe Upon a dwarfish thief.

Ment. Who then shall blame

His pester'd senses to recoil and start, When all that is within him does condemn itself, for being there?

Cath. Well, march we on,

To give obedience where 'tis truly ow'd: Meet we the medic'n of the sickly weal; And with him pour we, in our country's purge, Each drop of us.

Len. Or so much as it needs,

To dew the sovereign flower, and drown the weeds.

Make we our march towards Birnam.

[Exeunt, marching.]

SCENE III.—Dunsinane.—A Room in the Castle.

Enter MACBETH, DOCTOR, and ATTENDANTS.

Macb. Bring me no more reports; let them fly all;

Till Birnam wood remove to Dunsinane, I cannot taint with fear. What's the boy Malcolm?

Was he not born of woman? The spirits that All mortal consequences, pronounc'd me thus: Fear not, Macbeth; no man, that's born of woman,

* Confounded.
† Unbearded.

† A religious; and ascetic.
‡ The physician.

Shall e'er have power on thee.—Then fly
false thanes,
And mingle with the English epicures :
The mind I sway by, and the heart I bear, Shall never sag* with doubt, nor shake with
fear.

Enter a SERVANT.

The devil damn thee black, thou cream-fac'd loon !†

Where got'st thou that goose look ?

Serv. There is ten thousand—

Macb. Geese, villain !

Serv. Soldiers, Sir.

Macb. Go, prick thy face, and over-red thy
fear,

Thou lily-liver'd boy. What soldiers, patch ?‡
Death of thy soul ! those linen cheeks of thine
Are counsellors to fear. What soldiers, whey-
face ?

Serv. The English force, so please you.

Macb. Take thy face hence.—Seyton !—I am sick at heart,

When I behold—Seyton, I say !—This push
Will cheer me ever, or dissent me now.

I have liv'd long enough : my way of life

Is fall'n into the sear,§ the yellow leaf :

And that which should accompany old age,
As honour, love, obedience, troops of friends,

I must not look to have ; but, in their stead,
Curses, not loud but deep, mouth-honour,
breath,

Which the poor heart would fain deny, but dare not.

Seyton !—

Enter SEYTON.

Sey. What is your gracious pleasure ?

Macb. What news more ?

Sey. All is confirm'd, my lord, which was reported.

Macb. I'll fight, till from my bones my flesh be hack'd.

Give me my armour.

Sey. 'Tis not needed yet.

Macb. I'll put it on.

Send out more horses, skirr|| the country round ;

Hang those that talk of fear.—Give me mine
armour.—

How does your patient, doctor ?

Doct. Not so sick, my lord,
As she is troubled with thick-coming fancies,
That keep her from her rest.

Macb. Cure her of that :

Canst thou not minister to a mind diseas'd ;
Pluck from the memory a rooted sorrow ;
Raze out the written troubles of the brain ;
And, with some sweet oblivious antidote,
Cleanse the stuff'd bosom of that perilous stuff,
Which weighs upon the heart ?

Doct. Therein the patient
Must minister to himself.

Macb. Throw physic to the dogs, I'll none of
it.—

Come, put mine armour on ; give me my staff :—

Seyton, send out.—Doctor, the thanes fly from
me :—

Come, Sir, despatch :—If thou could'st, doctor, cast

The water of my land, find her disease,
And purge it to a sound and pristine health,
I would applaud thee to the very echo,
That should applaud again.—Pull't off, I say.—
What rhubarb, scenna ; or what purgative drug,
Would scour these English hence ;—Hearest thou of them ?

Doct. Ay, my good lord ; your royal preparation
Makes us hear something.

Macb. Bring it after me.—

I will not be afraid of death and banes,
Till Birnam forest come to Dunsinane.

[Exit. Doct.] Were I from Dunsinane away and clear,

Profit again should hardly draw me here. [Exit.]

SCENE IV.—Country near Dunsinane : A
Wood in view.

Enter, with Drum and Colours, MALCOLM, old SIWARD and his SON, MACDUFF, MEN-TETH, CATHNESS, ANGUS, LENOX, ROSS, and Soldiers, marching.

Mal. Cousins, I hope, the days are near at
hand

That chambers will be safe.

Ment. We doubt it nothing.

Sir. What wood is this before us ?

Ment. The wood of Birnam.

Mal. Let every soldier hew him down a bough,
And bear't before him ; thereby shall we sur-
row

The numbers of our host, and make discovery
Err in report of us.

Sold. It shall be done.

Sir. We learn no other, but the confident tyrant

Keeps still in Dunsinane, and will endure
Our settling down before't.

Mal. 'Tis his main hope :

For where there is advantage to be given,
Both more and less* have given him the revolt ;

And none serve with him, but constrained
things,

Whose hearts are absent too.

Macd. Let our just censures
Attend the true event, and put we on Industrious soldiery.

Sir. The time approaches,
That will with due decision make us know
What we shall say we have, and what we owe,
Thoughts speculative their unsure hopes relate ;
But certain issue strokes must arbitrate :†
Towards which, advance the war.

[Exeunt, marching.]

SCENE V.—Dunsinane. Within the Castle.

Enter, with Drums and Colours, MACBETH, SEYTON, and Soldiers.

Macb. Hang out our banners on the outward
walls ;

The cry is still, They come : Our castle's
strength

Will laugh a siege to scorn : here let them lie,
Till famine and the ague eat them up :

Were they not forc'd with those that should be
ours,

We might have met them dareful, beard to
beard,

And beat them backward home. What is that noise ? [A cry within, of Women.]

Sey. It is the cry of women, my good lord.

Macb. I have almost forgot the taste of fears :
The time has been, my senses would have cool'd

To hear a night-shriek ; and my fell ‡ of hair
Would at a dismal treatise rouse, and stir
As life were in't : I have supp'd full with horrors ;

Direness, familiar to my slaught'rous thoughts, Cannot once start me.—Wherefore was that cry ?

Sey. The queen, my lord, is dead.

Macb. She should have died hereafter ;
There would have been a time for such a word.—
To-morrow, and to-morrow, and to-morrow,
Creeps in this petty pace from day to day,

† Base fellow.
‡ Dry.

To the last syllable of recorded time ;
And all our yesterdays have lighted fools
The way to dusty death. Out, out, brief candle !
Life's but a walking shadow ; a poor player,
That struts and frets his hour upon the stage,
And then is heard no more : it is a tale
Told by an idiot, full of sound and fury, Signifying nothing.—

Enter a MESSENGER.

Thou com'st to use thy tongue ; thy story quickly.

Mess. Gracious my lord,
I shall report that which I say I saw,
But know not how to do it.

Macb. Well, say, Sir.

Mess. As I did stand my watch upon the
hill,
I look'd toward Birnam, and anon, methought,
The wood began to move.

Macb. Liar and slave ! [Striking him.]

Mess. Let me endure your wrath, if't be not
so :
Within this three mile may you see it coming ;
I say, a moving grove.

Macb. If thou speak'st false,
Upon the next tree shalt thou hang alive,
Till famine cling * thee : if thy speech be sooth,
I care not if thou dost for me as much.—
I pull in resolution ; and begin
To doubt the equivocation of the fiend,

That lies like truth : Fear not, till Birnam wood

*Do come to Dunsinane ;—and now a wood Comes toward Dunsinane.—Arm, arm, and
out !—*

If this, which he avouches, does appear,
There is nor flying hence, nor tarrying here,
I 'gin to be a-weary of the sun,
And wish the estate o'the world were now undone.— [wrack !]

Ring the alarm bell :—Blow, wind ! come,
At least we'll die with harness † on our back.
[Exeunt.]

SCENE VI.—The same.—A Plain before the Castle.

Enter, with Drums and Colours, MALCOLM, old SIWARD, MACDUFF, &c. and their Army, with Boughs.

Mal. Now near enough ; your leavy screens throw down,
And show like those you are :—You, worthy
uncle,
Shall, with my cousin, your right-noble son,
Lead our first battle : worthy Macduff, and we,
Shall, take upon us what else remains to do,
According to our order.

Siw. Fare you well.—
Do we but find the tyrant's power to-night,
Let us be beaten, if we cannot fight.

Macd. Make all our trumpets speak ; give them all breath,
Those clamorous harbingers of blood and death.
[Exeunt. Alarums continued.]

SCENE VII.—The same.—Another Part of the Plain.

Enter MACBETH.

Macb. They have tied me to a stake : I cannot fly :
But, bear-like, I must fight the course.—What's he,
That was not born of woman ? Such a one
Am I to fear, or none.

Enter young SIWARD.

Yo. Siw. What is thy name ?

Macb. Thou'lt be afraid to hear it.

Yo. Siw. No ; though thou call'st thyself a hotter name
Than any is in hell.

Macb. My name's Macbeth.

Yo. Siw. The devil himself could not pronounce a title
More hateful to mine ear.

Macb. No, nor more fearful.

Yo. Siw. Thou liest, abhorred tyrant ; with my sword
I'll prove the lie thou speak'st.

[They fight, and young SIWARD is slain.]

Macb. Thou wast born of woman.—
But swords I smile at, weapons laugh to scorn,
Brandish'd by man that's of a woman born.
[Exit.]

Alarums. Enter MACDUFF.

Macd. That way the noise is :—Tyrant, show thy face :
If thou be'st slain, and with no stroke of mine,
My wife and children's ghost will haunt me
still.

I cannot strike at wretched kernes, whose arms
Are hir'd to bear their slaves ; either thou, Macbeth,

Or else my sword, with an unhatter'd edge,
I sheathe again undecided. There thou should'st be ;

By this great clatter, one of greatest note
Seems bruid : * Let me find him, fortune !
And more I beg not. [Exit. Alarm.]

Enter MALCOLM and SIWARD.

Siw. This way, my lord ;—The castle's gently render'd :
The tyrant's people on both sides do fight ;
The noble thanes do bravely in the war ;
The day almost itself professes your's,
And little is to do.

Mal. We have met with foes
That strike beside us.

Siw. Enter, Sir, the castle.
[Exeunt. Alarm.]

Re-enter MACBETH.

Macb. Why should I play the Roman fool, and die [gasps]
On mine own sword ? whilst I see lives, the
Do better upon them.

Re-enter MACDUFF.

Macd. Turn, hell-hound, turn.

Macb. Of all men else I have avoided thee :
But get thee back, my soul is too much charg'd
With blood of thine already.

Macd. I have no words,
My voice is in my sword ; thou bloodier villain
Than terms can give thee out ! [They fight.]

Macb. Thou lovest labour :
As easy may'st thou the intrenchant air †
With thy keen sword impress, as make me bleed :

Let fall thy blade on vulnerable crests ;
I bear a charmed life, which must not yield
To one of woman born.

Macd. Despair thy charm ;
And let the angel, whom thou still hast serv'd,
Tell thee, Macduff was from his mother's womb
Untimely ripp'd.

Macb. Accursed be that tongue that tells me
so,
For it hath cow'd my better part of man !
And be these juggling fiends no more believ'd,
That palter ‡ with us in a double sense ;
That keep the word of promise to our ear,
And break it to our hope.—I'll not fight with
thee.

Macd. Then yield thee, coward,
And live to be the show and gaze o'the time.
We'll have thee, as our rarer monsters are,
Painted upon a pole ; and underwrit,
Here may you see the tyrant.

Macb. I'll not yield,

And to be baited with the rabble's curse.

And thou oppos'd, being of no woman born,

I throw my warlike shield: lay on, Macduff;
And damn'd be he that first cries, Hold, enough.
[Exeunt, fighting.]

Retreat. Flourish. Re-enter, with Drum and Colours, MALCOLM, old SIWARD, ROSSE, LIXOX, ANGUS, CATHNESS, MENTETH, and Soldiers

Mal. I would the friends we miss were safe arriv'd.

Sir. Some must go off: and yet, by these I see,

So great a day as this is cheaply bought.

Mal. Macduff is missing, and your noble son.

Rosse. Your son, my lord, has paid a soldier's debt:

He only liv'd but till he was a man;
The which no sooner had his prowess confirm'd
In the unshrinking station where he fought,
But like a man he died.

Sir. Then he is dead?

Rosse. Ay, and brought off the field: your cause of sorrow

Must not be measur'd by his worth, for then
It hath no end.

Sir. Had he his hurts before?

Rosse. Ay, on the front.

Sir. Why then, God's soldier be he!

Had I as many sons as I have hairs,
I would not wish them to a fairer death:
And so his knell is knoll'd.

Mal. He's worth more sorrow,
And that I'll spend for him.

Sir. He's worth no more;
They say, he parted well, and paid his score:
So, God be with him!—Here comes newer comfort.

Re-enter MACDUFF, with MACBETH'S Head on a Pole.

Macd. Hail, king! for so thou art: Behold, where stands

The usurper's cursed head: the time is free:
I see thee compass'd with thy kingdom's pearl,[†]
That speak my salutation in their minds;
Whose voices I desire aloud with mine,—
Hail, king of Scotland!

All. King of Scotland, hail! [Flourish.]

Mal. We shall not spend a large expense of time,

Before we reckon with your several loves,
And make us even with you. My thanes and kinsmen,

Henceforth be earls, the first that ever Scotland
In such an honour nam'd. What's more to do,
Which would be planted newly with the time,—
As calling home our exil'd friends abroad;
That fled the snares of watchful tyranny;
Producing forth the cruel ministers
Of this dead butcher, and his fiend-like queen;
Who, as 'tis thought, by self and violent
hands

Took off her life;—This, and what needful else
That calls upon us, by the grace of Grace,
We will perform in measure, time, and place:
So thanks to all at once, and to each one,
Whom we invite to see us crown'd at Scone.

[Flourish. Exeunt.]

KING JOHN.

LITERARY AND HISTORICAL NOTICE.

THIS play was probably written in the year 1595. The action comprehends some of the principal events which occurred from the 34th year of King John's life to the time of his demise; or, during his short reign of seven-teen years. Shakspeare has in some respects closely adhered to the old historians and chroniclers; but the Duke of Austria was not accessory to the death of Richard Cœur-de-lion; neither was John himself poisoned by a monk. However the gross licentiousness of the latter—his utter disregard of even the appearances of religion—and his habitual ridicule of the church, might favour such a supposition, it is certain that he died partly of grief, and partly of chagrin, at Newark. These incongruities, with the outline of Faulconbridge's character, our poet very likely derived from some previous dramatic production. With respect to the unfortunate Arthur, when he first fell into the power of his uncle, he was confined in the castle of Falaise, and the perfidious monarch endeavoured in vain to procure his assassination. He was afterwards conducted to the castle of Rouen, where John resided, and never afterwards heard of. The manner of his death is uncertain: but it is generally believed that the barbarous tyrant stabbed him with his own hand. Dr. Johnson says of this tragedy: "Though not written with the utmost power of Shakspeare, it is varied with a very pleasing interchange of incidents and characters: the lady's grief is very affecting; and the character of the Bastard contains that mixture of greatness and levity, which this author delighted to exhibit." The latter is, indeed, as odd a personage as any author ever drew; and his language is as peculiar as his ideas; but the scene in which John so darkly proposed to Hubert the murder of his innocent nephew, is beyond the commendation of criticism. Art could add little to its perfection; no change in dramatic taste can injure it; and time itself can subtract nothing from its beauties.——Colly Cibber altered this drama, though not for the best.

ACT I.

SCENE I.—Northampton.—A Room of State in the Palace.

Enter KING JOHN, Queen ELINOR, PEMBROKE, ESSEX, SALISBURY, and others, with CHATILLON.

K. John. Now, say, Chatillon, what would France with us?

Chat. Thus, after greeting, speaks the king of France,
In my behaviour,* to the majesty,
The borrow'd majesty of England here.

El. A strange beginning;—borrow'd majesty!

* In the manner I now do.

K. John. Silence, good mother; hear the embassy.

Chat. Philip of France, in right and true be-
Of thy deceased brother Geoffrey's son, [half
Arthur Plantagenet, lays most lawful claim
To this fair island, and the territories;
To Ireland, Poictiers, Anjou, Touraine, Maine;
Desiring thee to lay aside the sword,
Which sways usurpingly these several titles;
And put the same into young Arthur's hand,
Thy nephew, and right royal sovereign.

K. John. What follows, if we disallow of this?

Chat. The proud control of fierce and bloody war,

To enforce these rights so forcibly withheld.

K. John. Here have we war for war, and blood for blood,

Controlment for controlment: so answer France.

King John.

And ——— but, if not, then know,
The peril of our curses light on thee;
Heavy, as thou shalt not shake them off,
I, in despair, die under their black weight.

Isabel. But where I be as true begot, or no,
That still I lay upon my mother's head;
But that I am as well begot, my liege,
Compare our faces, and be judge yourself.

Act I. Scene I.

Bar. Well, whiles I am a beggar, I will call,
If any, there is no sin, but to be rich;
If being rich, my virtue then shall be,
I say,—there is no vice, but beggary.

Act II. Scene II.

Const. My grief's so great,
That no supporter but the huge firm earth
Can hold it up; here I and sorrow sit;
Here is my throne, bid kings come bow to it.

Act III. Scene I.

K. John. The tackle of my heart is crack'd and burn'd;
And all the shrouds wherewith my life should sail
Are turned to one thread, one little hair.

Act IV. Scene I.

Act V. Scene VII.

Chat. Then take my king's defiance from my mouth,
The furthest limit of my embassy.

K. John. Bear mine to him and so depart in peace:

Be thou as lightning in the eyes of France;
For ere thou canst report I will be there,
The thunder of my cannon shall be heard:
So, hence! Be thou the trumpet of our wrath,
And sullen presage of your own decay.—
An honourable conduct let him have:—
Pembroke, look to't: Farewell, Chatillon.

[Exeunt CHATILLON and PEMBROKE.]

Eli. What now, my son? have I not ever said,
How that ambitious Constance would not cease,
Till she had kindled France, and all the world,
Upon the right and party of her son?
This might have been prevented, and made whole,

With very easy arguments of love;
Which now the manage^o of two kingdoms must
With fearful bloody issue arbitrate.

K. John. Our strong possession, and our right for us.

Eli. Your strong possession, much more than your right;
Or else it must go wrong with you and me:
So much my conscience whispers in your ear;
Which none but heaven, and you and I, shall hear.

Enter the Sheriff of Northamptonshire, who whispers Essex.

Essex. My liege, here is the strangest controversy,
Come from the country to be judg'd by you,
That ere I heard: Shall I produce the men?

K. John. Let them approach.—
[Exit Sheriff.]
Our abbies, and our priories, shall pay

Re-enter Sheriff, with ROBERT FAULCONBRIDGE, and PHILIP, his bastard Brother.
This expedition's charge.—What men are you?

Bast. Your faithful subject I, a gentleman,
Born in Northamptonshire; and eldest son,
As I suppose, to Robert Faulconbridge;
A soldier, by the honour-giving hand
Of Cœur-de-lion knighted in the field.

K. John. What art thou?
Rob. The son and heir to that same Faulconbridge.

K. John. Is that the elder, and art thou the heir?
You came not of one mother then, it seems.

Bast. Most certain of one mother, mighty king,
That is well known; and, as I think, one father:

But, for the certain knowledge of that truth,
I put you o'er to heaven and to my mother:
Of that I doubt, as all men's children may.

Eli. Out on thee, rude man! thou dost shame thy mother,
And wound her honour with this diffidence.

Bast. I, madam? no, I have no reason for it;
That is my brother's plea, and none of mine;
The which if he can prove, 'a pops me out
At least from fair five hundred pound a year:
Heaven guard my mother's honour and my land!

K. John. A good blunt fellow:—Why, being younger born,
Dost he lay claim to thine inheritance?

Bast. I know not why, except to get the land!

But once he slander'd me with bastardy
But whe'r † I be as true-begot, or no,
That still I lay upon my mother's head;
But, that I am as well-begot, my liege,

^o Conduct, administration.
† Whether.

(Fair fall the bones that took the pains for me!)
Compare our faces, and be judge yourself.
If old Sir Robert did beget us both,
And were our father, and his son like him;—
O old Sir Robert, father, on my knee
I give heaven thanks, I was not like to thee.

K. John. Why, what a mad-cap hath heaven lent us here!

Eli. He hath a trick^o of Cœur-de-lion's face,
The accent of his tongue affecteth him:
Do you not read some tokens of my son
In the large composition of this man?

K. John. Mine eye hath well examined his parts,
And finds them perfect Richard.—Sirrah,
What doth move you to claim your brother's land?

Bast. Because he hath a half-face, like my father;
With that half-face would he have all my land:
A half-faced groat five hundred pounds a year!

Rob. My gracious liege, when that my father liv'd,
Your brother did employ my father much;—

Bast. Well, Sir, by this you cannot get my land;
Your tale must be, how he employ'd my mother,

Rob. And once despatch'd him in an embassy
To Germany, there, with the emperor,
To treat of high affairs touching that time:
The advantage of his absence took the king,
And in the mean time sojourn'd at my father's;
Where how he did prevail, I shame to speak:
But truth is truth; large lengths of seas and Between my father and my mother lay, [shores
(As I have heard my father speak himself,)]

When this same lusty gentleman was got.
Upon his death-bed he by will bequeath'd
His lands to me; and took it, on his death,
That this, my mother's son, was none of his;
And if he were, he came into the world
Full fourteen weeks before the course of time.
Then, good my liege, let me have what is mine,
My father's land, as was my father's will.

K. John. Sirrah, your brother is legitimate;
Your father's wife did after wedlock bear him;
And, if she did play false, the fault was her's;
Which fault lies on the hazards of all husbands
That marry wives. Tell me, how if my brother
Who, as you say, took pains to get this son,
Had of your father claim'd this son for his?
In sooth, good friend, your father might have kept

This calf, bred from his cow, from all the world;
In sooth he might: then, if he were my brother's,
[father,

My brother might not claim him: nor your
Being none of his, refuse him: This concludes,—

My mother's son did get your father's heir;
Your father's heir must have your father's land.

Rob. Shall then my father's will be of no force,

To dispossess that child which is not his?

Bast. Of no more force to dispossess me, Sir,

Than was his will to get me, as I think.

Eli. Whether hadst thou rather be a Faulconbridge,

And like thy brother, to enjoy thy land;
Or the reputed son of Cœur-de-lion,
Lord of thy presence,† and no land beside?

Bast. Madam, an if my brother had my shape,
And I had his, Sir Robert his, like him;
And if my legs were two such riding-rods,
My arms such eel-skins stuff'd; my face so thin,

^o Trace.

† Dignity of appearance.

That in my ear I durst not stick a rose,
Lest men should say, Look, where three-farthings goes!

And, to his shape, were heir to all this land,
'Would I might never stir from off this place,
I'd give it every foot to have this face;
I would not be Sir Noh* in any case.

Ell. I like thee well; Wilt thou forsake thy
fortune,
Bequeath thy land to him, and follow me?
I am a soldier and now bound to France.

Bast. Brother, take you my land, I'll take my chance:

Your face hath got five hundred pounds a year;
Yet sell your face for fivepence, and 'tis dear.—
Madam, I'll follow you unto the death.

Ell. Nay, I would have you go before me thither. [way.

Bast. Our country manners give our betters
K. John. What is thy name?

Bast. Phillip, my liege; so is my name begun;
Phillip, good old Sir Robert's wife's eldest son.

K. John. from henceforth bear his name whose form thou bear'st:

Kneel thou down Phillip, but arise more great:
Arise Sir Richard and Plantagenet!—

Bast. Brother, by the mother's side, give me your hand;

My father gave me honour, your's gave land:
Now blessed be the hour, by night or day,
When I was got, Sir Robert was away.

Ell. The very spirit of Plantagenet!—
I am thy grandame, Richard; call me so.

Bast. Madam, by chance, but not by truth:
What though?

Something about, a little from the right,
In at the window, or else o'er the hatch:
Who dares not stir by day, must walk by night;
And have is have, however men do catch;
Near or far off, well won is still well shot;
And I am I, how'er I was begot.

K. John. Go, Faulconbridge; now hast thou thy desire,

A landless knight makes thee a landed squire.—
Come, madam, and come, Richard; we must speed

For France, for France; for it is more than
need.

Bast. Brother, adieu; good fortune come to
thee!

For thou wast got i'the way of honesty.

[Exeunt all but the BASTARD.

A foot of honour better than I was;
But many a foot of land the worse.

Well, now can I make any Joan a lady:—

Good den† Sir Richard,—God-a-mercy, fellow;—

And if his name be George, I'll call him Peter:
For new-made honour doth forget men's names;
'Tis too respective, and too sociable,

For your conversion.‡ Now, your traveller,—
He and his tooth-pick at my worship's mess;

And when my knightly stomach is suffic'd,
Why then I suck my teeth, and catechise
My picked man of countries: §—My dear Sir,
(Thus leaning on mine elbows, I begu,) I shall beseech you—That is question now;

And then comes answer like an ABC-book:
O Sir, says answer, at your best command;

At your employment; at your service, Sir:—
No, Sir, says question, I, sweet Sir, at your's:

And so, ere answer knows what question would,
(Saving in dialogue of compliment;
And talking of the Alps and Appenines,
The Pyrenean, and the river Po,)

It draws toward supper in conclusion so.
But this is worshipful society,

And fits the mounting spirit, like myself:
For he is but a hastyd to the time,

That doth not smack of observation;
(And so am I, whether I smack, or no;)

And not alone in habit and device,

* Robert.

† Good evening.

§ Change

Exterior form, outward accoutrement;
But from the inward motion to deliver
Sweet, sweet, sweet poison for the age's tooth:
Which, though I will not practise to deceive,
Yet, to avoid deceit, I mean to learn;
For it shall strew the footsteps of my rising.—
But who comes in such haste, in riding robes?
What woman-post is this? hath she no bus-
band,
That will take pains to blow a horn before her?

Enter Lady FAULCONBRIDGE and JAMES GURNEY.

O me! it is my mother:—How now, good lady?
What brings you here to court so hastily?

Lady F. Where is that slave, thy brother?
where is he?

That holds in chase mine honour up and down?
Bast. My brother Robert? old Sir Robert's
son?

Colbrand the giant, that same mighty man?
Is it Sir Robert's son, that you seek so?

Lady F. Sir Robert's son! Aye, thou sur-verend boy, Robert?

Sir Robert's son: Why scorn'st thou at Sir
He is Sir Robert's son; and so art thou.

Bast. James Gurney, wilt thou give us leave
a while?

Gur. Good leave, good Phillip.

Bast. Phillip!—sparrow!—James,
There's toy's abroad; * anon I'll tell thee more.
[Exit GURNEY.

Madam, I was not old Sir Robert's son;
Sir Robert might have eat his part in me
Upon Good-friday, and ne'er broke his fast:
Sir Robert could do well: Marry, (to confess!)
Could he get me? Sir Robert could not do it;
We know his handy-work;—Therefore, good
mother,

To whom am I beholden for these limbs?
Sir Robert never help to make this leg.

Lady F. Hast thou conspired with thy brother too, [honour?

That for thine own gain should'st defend mine
What means this scorn, thou most untoward knave?

Bast. Knight, knight, good mother,—Bast-liscolike:†

What! I am dubb'd; I have it on my shoulder.
But, mother, I am not Sir Robert's son;
I have disclaim'd Sir Robert and my land;
Legitimation, name, and all is gone:

Then, good my mother, let me know my father:
Some proper man, I hope: Who was it, mother?

Lady F. Hast thou denied thyself to Faul-conbridge?

Bast. As faithfully as I deny the devil.

Lady F. King Richard Cœur-de-lion was thy
father;

By long and vehement suit I was seduc'd
To make room for him in my husband's bed:—
Heaven lay not my transgression to my charge!
Thou art the issue of my dear offence,
Which was so strongly urg'd, past my defence.

Bast. Now, by this light, were I to get again,
Madam, I would not wish a better father,
Some sins do bear their privilege on earth,
And so doth your's; your fault was not your
folly:

Need must you lay your heart at his dispose,— Subjected tribute to commanding love,—
Against whose fury and unmatched force
The aweless lion, could not wage the fight,
Nor keep his princely heart from Richard's
hand.

He that perforce robs lions of their hearts,
May easily win a woman's. Ay, my mother,
With all my heart I thank thee for my father!
Who lives and dares but say thou didst not
well,

When I was got, I'll send his soul to hell.

* Idle reports. † A satire upon a character is an old drama called Soliman and Perseda.

Come, lady, I will show thee to my kin ;
 And they shall say, when Richard was begot,
 If thou hadst said him nay, it had been sin :
 Who says it was, he lies ; I say, 'twas not.
 [Exeunt.]

ACT II.

SCENE I.—France.—Before the Walls of Angiers.

Enter, on one side, the ARCHDUKE of Austria, and Forces ; on the other, PHILIP, King of France, and Forces ; LEWIS, CONSTANCE, ARTHUR, and Attendants.

Lew. Before Angiers well met, brave Austria.—

Arthur, that great fore-runner of thy blood,
 Richard, that robb'd the lion of his heart,
 And fought the holy wars in Palestine,
 By this brave duke came early to his grave : *
 And, for amends to his posterity,
 At our importance hither is he come,
 To spread his colours, boy, in thy behalf ;
 And to rebuke the usurpation
 Of thy unnatural uncle, English John :
 Embrace him, love him, give him welcome
 hither.

Arth. God shall forgive you Cœur-de-lion's death,
 The rather, that you give his offspring life,
 Shadowing their right under your wings of war :

I give you welcome with a powerless hand,
 But with a heart full of unstained love :
 Welcome before the gates of Angiers, duke.

Lew. A noble boy ! Who would not do thee right ?

Aust. Upon thy cheek lay I this zealous kiss,
 As seal to this indenture of my love ;
 That to my home I will no more return,
 Till Angiers, and the right thou hast in France,
 Together with that pale, that white-fac'd shore,
 Whose foot spurs back the ocean's roaring tides,

And coops from other lands her islanders,
 Even till that England, hedg'd in with the main,
 That water-walled bulwark, still secure
 And confident from foreign purposes,
 Even till that utmost corner of the west
 Salute thee for her king : till then, fair boy,
 Will I not think of home, but follow arms.

Const. O take his mother's thanks, a widow's
 thanks,
 Till your strong hand shall help to give him
 strength,

To make a more requital to your love.

Aust. The peace of heaven is their's, that lift their swords
 In such a just and charitable war.

K. Phil. Well then, to work ; our cannon shall be bent

Against the brows of this resisting town.—
 Call for our chiefest men of discipline,
 To call the plots of best advantages.
 We'll lay before this town our royal bones,
 Wade to the market-place in Frenchmen's
 blood,

But we will make it subject to this boy.

Const. Stay for an answer to your embassy,
 Lest unadvis'd you stain your swords with
 blood :

My lord Chatillon may from England bring That right in peace, which here we urge in war ;

And then we shall repent each drop of blood,
 That but rash haste so indirectly shed.

Enter CHATILLON.

K. Phil. A wonder, lady !—lo, upon thy wish
 Our messenger Chatillon is arriv'd.—
 What England says, say briefly, gentle lord,
 We coldly pause for thee ; Chatillon, speak.

Chat. Then turn your forces from this petty siege,

And stir them up against a mightier task.
 England, impatient of your just demands,
 Hath put himself in arms ; the adverse winds,
 Whose leisure I have staid, have given him
 time

To land his legions all as soon as I :
 His marches are expedient * to this town,
 His forces strong, his soldiers confident.
 With him along is come the mother-queen,
 An Até, stirring him to blood and strife ;
 With her her niece, the lady Blanch of Spain ;
 With them a bastard of the king deceas'd ;
 And all the unsettled humours of the land,—
 Rash, inconsiderate, fiery voluntaries,
 With ladies' faces, and fierce dragons' spleens,—
 Have sold their fortunes at their native homes,
 Bearing their birthrights proudly on their backs
 To make a hazard of new fortunes here,
 In brief, a braver choice of dauntless spirits,
 Than now the English bottoms have waft o'er,
 Did never float upon the swelling tide,
 To do offence and scath in Christendom.
 The interruption of their charlish drums

[Drums beat.]
 Cuts off more circumstance : they are at hand,
 To parly or to fight ; therefore, prepare.

K. Phil. How much unlook'd for is this expedition !

Aust. By how much unexpected, by so much
 We must awake endeavour for defence ;
 For courage mounteth with occasion :
 Let them be welcome then, we are prepar'd.

Enter King JOHN, ELINOR, BLANCH, the BASTARD, PEMBROKE, and Forces.

K. John. Peace be to France : If France in peace permit

Our just and lineal entrance to our own !
 If not, bleed France, and peace ascend to heaven !

Whiles we, God's wrathful agent, do correct
 Their proud contempt that beat his peace to heaven.

K. Phil. Peace be to England ; if that war return

From France to England, there to live in peace !
 England we love ; and, for that England's sake,
 With burden of our armour here we sweat :
 This toil of our's should be a work of thine ;
 But thou from loving England art so far,
 That thou has under-wrought† his lawful king
 Cut off the sequence of posterity,
 Outfaced infant state, and done a rape
 Upon the maiden virtue of the crown.
 Look here upon thy brother Geoffrey's face ;—
 These eyes, these brows, were moulded out of his :

This little abstract doth contain that large,
 Which died in Geoffrey ; and the hand of time
 Shall draw this brief into as huge a volume.
 That Geoffrey was thy elder brother born,
 And this his son ; England was Geoffrey's right,
 And this is Geoffrey's : In the name of God,
 How comes it then, that thou art call'd a king,
 When living blood doth in these temples beat,
 Which owe the crown that thou o'er-masterest ?

K. John. From whom hast thou this great commission, France,
 To draw my answer from thy articles ?

K. Phil. From that supernal judge, that stirs good thoughts

In any breast of strong authority,
 To look into the blots and stains of right.
 That judge hath made me guardian to this boy :
 Under whose warrant, I impeach thy wrong ;
 And, by whose help, I mean to chastise it.

* The Duke of Austria died some time before Richard Cœur-de-lion.

* Immediate.

† Undermined.

K. John. Alack, thou dost usurp authority.

K. Phil. Excuse; it is to beat usurping down.

Eli. Who is it, thou dost call usurper, France?

Const. Let me make answer;—thy usurping son.

Eli. Out, insolent! thy bastard shall be king;

That thou may'st be a queen, and check the world!

Const. My bed was ever to thy son as true,
As thine was to thy husband: and this boy
Liker in feature to his father Geoffrey,
Than thou and John in manners; being as like,
As rain to water, or devil to his dam.
My boy a bastard! By my soul, I think
His father never was so true begot;
It cannot be, an if thou wert his mother.

Eli. There's a good mother, boy, that blots thy father.

Const. There's a good grandam, boy, that would blot thee.

Aust. Peace!

Bast. Hear the crier.

Aust. What the devil art thou?

Bast. One that will play the devil, Sir, with you,

An 'a may catch your hide and you alone.
You are the hare of whom the proverb goes,
Whose valour plucks dead lions by the beard;
I'll smoke your skin-coat,* an I catch you right;

Sirrah, look to't; I'faith, I will, I'faith.

Blanch. O well did he become that lion's robe,

That did disrobe the lion of that robe!

Bast. It lies as sightly on the back of him,
As great Alcides' shoes upon an ass:—
But, ass, I'll take that burden from your back;
Or lay on that, shall make your shoulders crack.

Aust. What cracker is this same, that deafs our ears
With this abundance of superfluous breath?

K. Phil. Lewis, determine what we shall do straight.

Lew. Women and fools, break off your conference.—

King John, this is the very sum of all,—
England, and Ireland, Anjou, Touraine, Maine,
In right of Arthur do I claim of thee:
Wilt thou resign them, and lay down thy arms?

K. John. My life as soon:—I do defy thee, France.

Arthur of Bretagne, yield thee to my hand;
And, out of my dear love, I'll give thee more
Than e'er the coward hand of France can win:
Submit thee, boy.

Eli. Come to thy grandam, child;

Const. Do, child, go to it' grandam, child;
Give grandam kingdom, and it' grandam will Give it a plum, a cherry, and a fig:
There's a good grandam.

Arth. Good my mother, peace!
I would that I were low laid in my grave;
I am not worth this coil that's made for me.

Eli. His mother shames him so, poor boy, he weeps.

Const. Now shame upon you, whe'r † she does,
or no!
His grandam's wrongs, and not his mother's shames,
Draw those heaven-moving pearls from his poor
eyes,

Which heaven shall take in nature of a fee;
Ay, with these crystal beads heaven shall be brib'd

To do him justice, and revenge on you.

Eli. Thou monstrous slanderer of heaven and earth!

Const. Thou monstrous injurer of heaven and earth!

Call not me slanderer; thou, and thine usurp
The dominations, royalties, and rights,
Of this oppressed boy: This is thy eldest son's
son,

Infornate in nothing but in thee;
Thy sins are visited in this poor child;
The canon of the law is laid on him,
Being but the second generation
Removed from thy sin-conceiving womb.

K. John. Bedlam, have done.

Const. I have but this to say,—
That he's not only plagued for her sin,
But God hath made her sin and her the plague
On this removed issue, plagu'd for her,
And with her plague, her sin; his injury
Her injury,—the beadle to her sin;
All punish'd in the person of this child,
And all for her; A plague upon her!

Eli. Thou unadvised scold, I can produce
A will, that bars the title of thy son.

Const. Ay, who doubts that? a will! a wicked
will;

A woman's will; a canker'd grandam's will!

K. Phil. Peace, lady; pause, or be more temperate:

It ill beseems this presence, to cry aim*
To these ill-tuned repetitions.—
Some trumpet summon hither to the walls
These men of Angiers; let us hear them
speak,
Whose title they admit, Arthur's or John's.

Trumpets sound. Enter CITIZENS upon the walls.

1 Cit. Who is it, that hath warn'd us to the walls?

K. Phil. 'Tis France, for England.

K. John. England, for itself:

You men of Angiers, and my loving subjects,—

K. Phil. You loving men of Angiers, Arthur's subjects,

Our trumpet call'd you to this gentle parle.†

K. John. For our advantage;—Therefore, hear us first.—

These flags of France, that are advanced here
Before the eye and prospect of your town,
Have hither march'd to your endamagement:
The cannons have their bowels full of wrath;
And ready mounted are they, to spit forth
Their iron indignation 'gainst your walls:
All preparation for a bloody siege,
And merciless proceeding by these French,
Confront your city's eyes, your winking gates;
And, but for our approach, those sleeping stones,

That as a waist do girdle you about,
By the compulsion of their ordnance,
By this time from their fixed beds of lime
Had been dishabited, and wide havoc made
For bloody power to rush upon your peace.
But, on the sight of us, your lawful king,—
Who painfully, with much expedient march,
Have brought a countercheck before your gates,
To save unscratch'd your city's threaten'd
cheeks,—

Behold, the French, amaz'd, vouchsafe a parle:
And now, instead of bullets wrapp'd in fire,
To make a shaking fever in your walls,
They shoot but calm words, folded up in
smoke,

To make a faithless error in your ears:
Which trust accordingly, kind citizens,
And let us in, your king; whose labour'd spirits,
Forwearied ‡ in this action of swift speed,
Crave harbourage within your city walls.

K. Phil. When I have said, make answer to us both.

Lo, in this right hand, whose protection
Is most divinely vow'd upon the right
Of him it holds, stands young Plantagenet
Son to the elder brother of this man,
And king o'er him, and all that he enjoys:

* Austria wears a lion's skin.

† Whether.

* To encourage † Conference.

‡ Worn out.

For this down-trodden equity, we tread
In warlike march these greens before your town;

Being no further enemy to you,
Than the constraint of hospitable zeal,
In the relief of this oppressed child,
Religiously provokes. Be pleased then
To pay that duty, which you truly owe,
To him that owes* it; namely this young
prince:

And then our arms, like to a muzzled bear,
Save in aspect, have all offence seal'd up;
Our cannons' malice vainly shall be spent
Against the invulnerable clouds of heaven;
And, with a blessed and unvex'd retire,
With unhack'd swords, and helmets all un-
bruise'd,

We will bear home that lusty blood again,
Which here we came to sport against your town,
And leave your children, wives, and you, in peace.

But if you fondly pass our proffer'd offer,
'Tis not the roundure† of your old fac'd walls
Can hide you from our messengers of war;
Though all these English, and their discipline,
Were harbour'd in their rude circumference.
Then, tell us, shall your city call us lord,
In that behalf which we have challeng'd it?
Or shall we give the signal to our rage,
And stalk in blood to our possession?

1 Clk. In brief, we are the king of England's subjects;

For him, and in his right, we hold this town.

K. John. Acknowledge then the king, and let me in.

1 Clk. That can we not: but he that proves
the king,
To him will we prove loyal; till that time,
Have we rammed up our gates against the
world.

K. John. Doth not the crown of England prove the king?
And, if not that, I bring you witnesses,
Twice fifteen thousand hearts of England's breed,—

Bast. Bastards, and else.

K. John. To verify our title with their lives.

K. Phi. As many, and as well born bloods as these,—

Bast. Some bastards too.

K. Phi. Stand in his face, to contradict his claim.

1 Clk. Till you compound whose right is worthiest,
We, for the worthiest, hold the right from
both.

K. John. Then God forgive the sin of all those souls,
That to their everlasting residence,
Before the dew of evening fall, shall fleet,
In dreadful trial of our kingdom's king!

K. Phi. Amen, Amen!—Mount, chevaliers! to arms!

Bast. St. George,—that swing'd the dragon, and e'er since,
Sits on his horseback at mine hostess' door,
Teach us some fence!—Sirrah, were I at home,
At your den, sirrah, [To AUSTRIA.] with your lioness,

I'd set an ox-head to your lion's hide,
And make a monster of you.

Aust. Peace; no more.

Bast. O tremble; for you hear the lion roar.

K. John. Up higher to the plain; where we'll set forth,
In best appointment, all our regiments.

Bast. Speed then, to take advantage of the field.

K. Phi. It shall be so:—[To Lewis.] and at the other hill

Command the rest to stand.—God and our right!
[Exeunt.]

SCENE II.—The same.

Alarums and Excursions; then a Retreat.
Enter a French HERALD, with trumpets,
to the gates.

F. Her. You men of Angiers, open wide your
gates,
And let young Arthur, duke of Bretagne, in:
Who, by the hand of France, this day hath made Much work for tears in many an English mother,
Whose sons lie scatter'd on the bleeding ground:
Many a widow's husband grovelling lies,
Coldly embracing the discolour'd earth;
And victory, with little loss, doth play
Upon the dancing banners of the French;
Who are at hand, triumphantly display'd,
To enter conquerors, and to proclaim
Arthur of Bretagne, England's king, and your's.

Enter an English HERALD, with trumpets.

E. Her. Rejoice, you men of Angiers, ring your bells!
King John, your king and England's doth approach,
Commander of this hot malicious day!
Their armours, that march'd hence so silver-
bright,
Hither return all gilt with Frenchmen's blood.
There stuck no plume in any English crest,
That is removed by a staff of France;
Our colours do return in those same hands
That did display them when we first march'd
forth;

And, like a jolly troop of huntsmen, come
Our lusty English, all with purpled hands,
Died in the dying slaughter of their foes:
Open your gates, and give the victors way.

Clk. Heralds, from off our towers we might behold,
From first to last, the onset and retire
Of both your armies; whose equality
By our best eyes cannot be censured:
Blood hath bought blood, and blows have an-swer'd blows;
Strength match'd with strength, and power confronted power:
Both are alike: and both alike we like.
One must prove greatest; while they weigh so
even,
We hold our town for neither; yet for both.

Enter, at one side, King JOHN, with his power, ELINOR, BLANCH, and the BASTARD; at the other, King PHILIP, LEWIS, AUSTRIA, and Forces.

K. John. France hast thou yet more blood to cast away?
Say, shall the current of our right run on?
Whose passage, vex'd with thy impediment,
Shall leave his native channel, and o'er-swell
With course disturb'd even thy confining shores;
Unless thou let his silver water keep
A peaceful progress in the ocean.

K. Phi. England, thou hast not sav'd one drop of blood,
In this hot trial, more than we of France;
Rather, lost more: And by this hand I swear,
That sways the earth this climate overlooks.—
Before we will lay down our just-borne arms
We'll put thee down, 'gainst whom these arms
we bear,
Or add a royal number to the dead;
Gracing the scroll, that tells of this war's loss,
With slaughter coupled to the name of kings.

Bast. Ha, majesty! how high thy glory towers,
When the rich blood of kings is set on fire!
O now doth death line his dead chaps with
steel;
The swords of soldiers are his teeth, his fangs;
And now he feasts, mounting the flesh of men,
In undetermin'd differences of kings.—

Why stand these royal fronts amazed thus ?
Cry, havoc, kings ! back to the stained field,
You equal potents, fiery-kindled spirits !
Then let confusion of one part confirm
The other's peace ; till then, blows, blood, and
death !

K. John. Whose party do the townsmen yet admit ?

K. Phil. Speak, citizens, for England ; who's your king ?

1 Cit. The king of England, when we know
the king.

K. Phil. Know him in us, that here hold up his right.

K. John. In us, that are our own great deputy,
And bear possession of our person here ;
Lord of our presence, Angiers, and of you.

1 Cit. A greater power than we, denies all
this ;

And, till it be undoubted, we do lock
Our former scruple in our strong-barr'd gates :
King'd of our fears ; until our fears, resolv'd,
Be by some certain king purg'd and depos'd.

Bast. By heaven, these scroyles of Angiers flout you, kings ;

And stand securely on their battlements,
As in a theatre, whence they gape and point
At your industrious scenes and acts of death.
Your royal presences be rul'd by me ;

Do like the mutines of Jerusalem,
Be friends a while, and both conjointly bend
Your sharpest deeds of malice on this town :
By east and west let France and England
mount

Their battering cannon, charged to the mouths ;
Till their soul-fearing clamours have brawl'd
down

The flinty ribs of this contemptuous city :
I'd play incessantly upon these jades,
Even till unfenced desolation
Leave them as naked as the vulgar air.
That done, discover your united strengths,
And part your mingled colours once again ;
Turn face to face, and bloody point to point :
Then, in a moment, fortune shall cull forth
Out of one side her happy minion ;
To whom in favour she shall give the day,
And kiss him with a glorious victory.
How like you this wild counsel, mighty states ?
Smacks it not something of the policy ?

K. John. Now, by the sky that hangs above
our heads,
I like it well ;—France, shall we knit our
powers,

And lay this Angiers even with the ground ;
Then, after, fight who shall be king of it ?

Bast. An if thou hast the mettle of a king,— Being wrong'd, as we are, by this peevish
town,—

Turn thou the mouth of thy artillery,
As we will our's, against these sancy walls :
And when that we have dash'd them to the
ground,

Why, then defy each other ; and, pell-mell,
Make work upon ourselves, for heaven, or hell.

K. Phil. Let it be so :—Say, where will you assault ?

K. John. We from the west will send destruction
into this city's bosom.

Aust. I from the north.

K. Phil. Our thunder from the south,
Shall rain their drift of bullets on this town.

Bast. O prudent discipline ! From north to south :
Austria and France shoot in each other's mouth :

[Aside.
I'll stir them to it :—Come, away, away !

1 Cit. Hear us, great kings : vouchsafe a while to stay,
And I shall show you peace, and fair-faced league ;
